'Mrs. X' case put on hold by court

The Iowa Supreme Court extended the stay order Monday that prevents potential bone marrow donor "Mrs. from being informed of the existence of a leukemia victim in need of transplant.

William Head, a 26-year-old leukemia victim, filed a petition for mandatory injunction in February to force the UI Hospitals to reveal Mrs. X's name or to send a letter telling her f his existence.

Head contacted the only four United States hospitals that maintain substantial bone marrow donor identity banks, and the UI Hospitals was the only one that had a match - Mrs. X.

Although Mrs. X received a form letter asking if she would like to participate in the bone marrow program, she refused. A court document filed by Head's attorney, Tom Riley, suggests that if Mrs. X were told of Head's situation, she would be more inclined to participate.

If Head, a Louisiana State University student, does not receive the transplant within three weeks, doctors say he will die in six months.

The order rendered by the Iowa-Supreme Court Monday accomplished three things, said Bill Roach, the administrator for the state attorney general's office. The court agreed to hear the appeal of the trial court ruling, it continued the stay order blocking the lower court's ruling, and it set a deadline for submission of additional

'Today's ruling was essentially on the questions of whether or not the court would accept an appeal, and whether or not it would continue the stay. It was not really on the basic legal arguments involved," Roach

Paul Wieck, executive assistant to Chief Justice Ward Reynoldson, said the court decided to continue the stay until further order. Written appeals called an "appendix of supplemental briefs" must be filed with the court by next Monday, he said.

Three election complaints are filed

By Kristine Stemper

Campaign literature for today's UI student elections spread rampantly around campus Monday as candidates finished up their two-week campaigns with last minute politicking.

Ethical factors in this year's campaign have "been a lot better than last year so far," according to Eric Casper, chairman of the UI Elections Board. Only three complaints have been received.

The most recent complaint was filed Monday by the Progressives '83 against the Student Reform Party for "distributing leaflets filled with lies and half-truths intended to deceive student voters."

Among the "errors" included in SRP literature, according to the complaint, is that every full-time UI student

Student elections

'pays $100 above and beyond tuition money which goes for the funding of various organizations." Actually, student fees are part of tuition.

ALSO, THE STUDENTS for Traditional American Freedoms is listed as being among four student groups that "pocketed almost $3,000 of mandatory student fees." Actually, STAF refused to accept any of the money it was allocated by the senate.

'Evidently STAF is included to show that SRP is equally hostile to groups of the left and right," the complaint

It also lists SRP leaflets and advertisements in The Daily Iowan as claiming that the Budget Protocol Act, through which the funding of student groups is determined, "is being disregarded."

Another problem noted that goes against campaign policy is the gluing of leaflets onto the doors of UI buildings. But no one knows which campaigners are doing this.

'I don't know how we're going to find out" who is responsible, Casper said Monday, but if they are found and had run in the elections, "they're in serious risk" of being disqualified or losing their $25 bond fee.

THE THIRD COMPLAINT concerned the residency of Tony Almquist, former member of the SRP, has been resolved. Almquist is running as an independent for an at-large seat.

At Wednesday night's elections board meeting, the candidates will be officially announced and all complaints will be dealt with.

"Last year a lot of the worst complaints occurred on election day" when people realized they were losing, Casper said. All complaints must be handed in by 5 p.m. Wednesday.

Independent candidate Pedro C. Emmanuelli was originally a member of the SRP slate, but has since withdrawn from the slate. "When I read the platform .. . I got disappointed because it was so radical right," he said Monday.

For students with financial problems, Ennanuelli suggests establishing a "financial-aid fund," according to his campaign literature, so loans can be made at the interest rate of 2 percent. The fund could be developed by holding a lottery.

OPEC cuts oil prices to $29 a barrel

LONDON (UPI) - The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries agreed Monday for the first time in its 23-year history to slash the price of its oil — to $29 a barrel — in hopes of averting a global price war.

The agreement, which came after 12 days of meetings with cartel members, also imposed a limit on production by each of the cartel's 13 members and capped OPEC's total daily output to no more than 17.5 million barrels for the rest of 1983.

Mexico, the largest oil exporter to the United States, immediately fell in line and reduced the price of its highgrade oil $3.50 to $29 a barrel, retroactive to Feb. 1, and promised to keep exports to 1.5 million barrels a day.

A HEAVIER-GRADE crude that costs more money to refine will sell for $23 a barrel — for a new average price of $26, Mexican President Miguel de la Madrid announced.

OPEC Secretary-General Marc Nguema said the $5 cut in the $34 base price applied to only 12 of the 13 members. Iran refused to agree immediately to cut its price but accepted the production quota - under which Iran doubled its daily output to 2.4 million barrels.

Mallam Yahaya Dikko, oil minister of Nigeria and the current OPEC president, said Iran had agreed not to sell oil for less than $29.

'I have the strong feeling that this will really work out and OPEC will be in the driver's seat," said Sheikh Ahmed Zaki Yamani of Saudi Arabia.

On Page 5A:

OPEC's price cut will reduce the U.S. inflation rate by 1 percent this year, spur economic growth and save the average U.S. household $85 a year in energy bills, analysts

Yamani admitted, however, the agreement could collapse and spark a new threat of a global price war if non-OPEC member Britain cut prices or if desperate nations in the cartel undermine the quotas to attract buyers in a glutted market.

BRITAIN, THE FIFTH largest oil producer, triggered the crisis within OPEC when it cut the cost of its North Sea crude $3 a barrel to $30.50. Renegade OPEC member Nigeria followed suit and has vowed to meet any price cut by a non-OPEC nation.

Sheikh Ali Khalifa al Sabah, the Kuwait oil minister, said the individual production quotas ranged from Gabon's 150,000 barrels a day to Iran's 2.4 million.

Saudi Arabia, which already has cut its output from a high of 11 million barrels daily to less than 3.5 million, will act as a "swing producer," adjusting its output if demand stays belows the 17.5 million barrel a day

The compromise marked the first time Saudi Arabia has submitted its production levels to the control of

Cheaper air fares arrive for vacation

Special to The Daily Iowan

UI students are benefiting from airline fare wars and will be flying to Florida this spring vacation at the cheapest rates in years.

Discount fares are being offered on flights between Midwest cities such as Chicago and Des Moines. However, there is less competition between airlines in smaller cities, resulting in comparably higher fares on flights departing from the Cedar Rapids Municipal Airport.

The number of miles in a journey has little impact on air fares, and competitive pricing is confined to flights originating from large metropolitan airports.

For example, the cheapest fare on a 235-mile flight from Cedar Rapids to Chicago on Mississippi Valley Airlines is $64 each way. Once in Chicago, the 1,215-mile flight to Tampa, Fla., costs as little as $87 each way aboard United Airlines.

IN ORDER TO take advantage of discount air fares "a lot of (UI students) are going to Chicago, and some leave from Des Moines," Alan Rossmann, of Meacham Travel Service, said. By tradition, college students have flocked to the sunny skies and sandy beaches of the South and West for spring vacation, but local travel agencies are booking reser-See Fares, page 8

Compromise splits Central school between city, board — if approved

By Mark Leonard

A solution to the ownership question of Central Junior High School may finally be in the works - if a new plan meets the approval of both Iowa City and the school

The site might be divided into three areas, Mayor Mary Neuhauser said at an informal Iowa City Council meeting Monday. The southeast corner of the property would be bid by the city for congregate housing. If no one bids for the property, the "school board could take it over," she said.

The west side of the site could be bid jointly with the school district if City Attorney Robert Jansen and School Board Attorney John Cruise can reach agreement. The area would be designated for parking.

Neuhauser said the school building itself would be left for use by the school district.

LYNNE CANNON, president of the school district's board of directors, said in a memo to the council the school board might reconsider selling Sabin School to the county in order to move its offices to Central Junior High.

At various points over the last several months the ownership question has almost landed in the courts. Councilor Larry Lynch said this plan might prevent that "The general idea is excellent ... if it will get us out of this.'

Before the city can determine how the site will be used, Jansen said the council will "need to determine the market value of the property, based on an appraisal." Also, Neuhauser said, the council would

A resolution will be placed on the council's March 29 formal meeting agenda to make the appointment official. Karr would replace Abbie Stolfus, who was city clerk for 12 years before retiring in January.

At tonight's formal meeting an amendment will be made concerning the suspension of licenses issued to taxi drivers. Originally, the proposal called for the city manager to give a driver 30 days notice of a license suspension. The amendment will lessen that notice period to seven days.

led Branstad to fabricate adviser

sion time," Gov. Terry Branstad said Monday when he admitted that he and a friend used a fictitious professor's name to change courses when they attended the UI in the 1960s.

The confession followed reports that university officials have seen an increase in the number of students who have forged registration

'I'll put it this way, I never forged a name, but a friend of mine and I did invent a few names," Branstad said. "There never has been a professor named Chester B Dingleberry at the University of Iowa, but he served as adviser to me and someone else."

'Forgery is serious, I don't want to down the governor said, "but I also recognize there are certain perfunctory requirements that students have time to time found ways" to get around.

In his own case, the governor said he decided to use the fictitious name after a disillusioning experience at the start of his freshman year. He said he visited the university before the first semester to meet with his

HE THOUGHT he was going to meet privately with the adviser, but instead he met with the adviser's assistant - and 100 other students. The adviser was in Europe.

When most of the freshmen told the assistant they had pre-registered, he told them they could leave the meeting. The use of the fictitious name was "kind of a protest to the adviser system," Branstad said. A UI official was reported to have said that 40 to 50 students have admitted forging professors' or advisers' names to add or drop courses. The forgeries were discovered during spot checks made by the registrar's office. The spot checks were made after a blatant forgery was discovered

Change of class Professor examines limits of free press

By Robyn Griggs

Freedom of the press may not be as free as it appears.

Carolyn Dyer, assistant professor of journalism, will examine the inconsistencies within this principle Wednesday night at 8 in Room 304 of the English-Philosophy Building. She will focus on "the relationship between the cost of going to court and its impact on the kind of First Amendment laws that get made.

"If it is expensive to go to court, which it is, those that can afford the expense determine what kind of issue the court deals with.

"On the other side, it's possible to use the cost of litigation to threaten and harass those that can't afford to pay," Dyer said.

DYER BECAME interested in the effects of free press laws on different types of publications when she covered an obscenity case against an underground newspaper while she was working for an "ordinary" newspaper.

"The material that was supposed to be obscene was a political cartoon .... I became interested because if the cartoon had been in my newspaper there wouldn't have been any case. It was part of an effort to shut the newspaper that "may focus more on political" and are "out of the political mainstream," Dyer said, may be forced to be more careful because of the impact of litiga-

Dyer will include a number of research projects she has done both independently and as part of a larger project she worked on with Assistant Professor John Soloski, on financing media litigation.

With the recent cancellation of the Neil Young concert, members of the the Student Commission on Programming and Entertainment are left in a period of "waiting", SCOPE Director Jeff Conner said Monday

Conner said the SCOPE program is in debt $20,000 after last year's unsuccessful Grateful Dead concert held at the Field House. He said the 1981 concert turned out to be "very disnot sell as many tickets as they needed invested in the March 6 concert. to in order to make a profit.

Since then we have taken over through independent promoters," Conner said, because most of the top drawing artists work through these promoters. This platform guarantees SCOPE to be reimbursed if the concert falls through as happened with Neil

"The actual profit is a lot less than it would imply."

Board may not rehire 22 teachers

By Susan E. Fisher

Twenty-two Iowa City school district teachers are being told they may lose their jobs at the end of this school year.

District officials sent layoff notices to the teachers last week. And, according to Assistant Superintendent Al Azinger, the probability that these teachers will be recalled is less likely than in previous

"There's just not the flexibility for recall that we've had in the past," Azinger said. In recent years, most teachers who received layoff notices in the spring were recalled to teach in the fall. A major reason that made this possible, Azinger said, was because most of those employees were elementary teachers and could easily be placed into a variety of positions vacated by teachers who had resigned or were taking leave.

This year, however, most of the notified eachers are secondary school instructors. The three teachers who work at the elementary level are not regular classroom teachers.

IT WILL BE more difficult to recall these teachers because they, unlike elementary classroom teachers, are certified to teach a specific subject.

"If a language arts teacher gets reduced and an opening comes up later ... in order for that secondary level teacher to be recalled, the opening would have to be in language arts. If it's at the elementary level and you've reduced a first grade teacher, and the resignation comes in at fifth grade level, you can still call that per-

Most of the layoffs are a result of enrollment declines and the corresponding shutdown of Central Junior High School. Also, Azinger said, there are a number of reductions that occur each year to accommodate for people returning from a leave of ab-

Major layoff proceedings began in the school district two years ago. In spring 1981, 53 teachers were notified they could lose their jobs for the 1981-82 school year. Last year, 25 teachers were given notices. However, teacher resignations and leave requests allowed the district to recall all but two of those teachers receiving notices.

IN ADDITION to declining enrollment, Azinger said the number of layoff notices are affected by an Iowa Supreme Court ruling against the use of "provisional" contracts. The provisional contracts had allowed the district to hire substitutes for teachers on one-year leaves of absense. Since the ruling, the district has to go through a termination process even if a teacher agrees to a one-year contract.

Although budget consideration are always a part of the layoffs, Azinger said, this year's layoffs notices are not a direct result of budget trimming.

"It's not last year when we really had to save so many dollars and have selective cuts from the budget and we had some termination as a result of that."

After a teacher receives a termination notice, each individual has five days to request a hearing before the school board. According to state regulations, the hearing must be 10 to 20 days after the hearing request is accepted, unless both the teacher and the board agree to waive that rule.

Because the school district's layoff policy follows a "last hired, first fired" guideline, younger teachers are the ones most affected by the layoffs, according to Mary Mascher, president of the teachers u-

She said, "It's really discouraging for teachers who are new and are just starting out to have to worry about whether they are going to have a job or not next fall."

Oil price decrease could trim 1% from inflation rate, spur economy

NEW YORK (UPI) - OPEC's $5-abarrel oil price cut will reduce the U.S. inflation rate by 1 percent this year, spur economic growth and save the average U.S. household $85 a year in energy bills, analysts said Monday.

Americans could find gasoline and homeheating oil prices dropping by another 2.3 cents-a-gallon, but analysts believe at least $4 of OPEC's price rollback already had been anticipated by the recent fall in retail

Each $1-a-barrel decline in world oil prices theoretically works out to a savings of 2.3 cents-a-gallon on petroleum product prices if passed on to the consumer. A barrel contains 42 gallons.

But Edwin Rothschild, director of the Washington-based Citizens-Labor Energy Coalition consumer group, was doubtful that the U.S. motorist or homeowner would receive any direct price break from OPEC.

"Despite the OPEC price cut, Atlantic Richfield Co. and several other major oil companies have raised their wholesale gasoline prices within the past week because they're trying to increase their profit margins," he said.

ANALYSTS ALSO said the 5 cent-agallon increase in the federal gasoline tax that takes effect April 1 could nullify any OPEC price relief at the pump.

Since the U.S. economy will be a clear beneficiary of declining oil prices, the consumer still stands to gain indirectly from lower costs for food, clothing, transportation and higher disposable income, according to Data Resources Inc.

The Lexington, Mass., economic forecasting firm calculated that the $5 drop in world oil prices will trim the Consumer Price Index by 1 percent and boost real GNP by 0.8 percent by the end of 1983.

The United States will save about $9 billion on its annual oil import bill and improve its trade balance, the firm said.

It pointed out that the 15 percent decline in OPEC's oil prices will drive down prices for competitive fuels - coal, natural gas and electricity through fuel adjustment savings. Overall U.S. energy prices should fall by 6.5 percent this year alone.

DRI ESTIMATED total U.S. energy expenditures will drop by $7.2 billion in 1983 and pare the average American household's energy bill by $85 a year.

The OPEC reduction should lift Americans' real disposable income by 0.9 percent this year and increase consumer spending on automobiles, appliances, home furnishings, new houses, travel and recrea-

Analysts said airlines, automakers, chemical companies, electric utilities and the travel industry will be undisputed winners in the oil price decline.

But banks that lend to oil exploration firms and have loans outstanding to indebted oil-exporting nations, such as Mexico and Venezuela, could be in for rough sledding along with domestic natural gas and coal producers, they said.

Israel, U.S. target Mideast issues

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Israeli Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir said Monday his talks with President Reagan and Secretary of State George Shultz have vielded "much more understanding" - but no accord - on Israel's withdrawal from Lebanon.

The diplomat maintained his government's view that Israeli forces must stay in Lebanon for some time in order to assure the nation does not again become a refuge for terrorists.

Shamir insisted the meetings in Washington, the highest level U.S.-Israeli talks since the Jewish state invaded Lebanon last June, have not been negotiations on withdrawal, but rather discussions "about our positions on southern foreign minister and the president.

SPEAKING TO reporters at the State Department, Shamir said he and the Americans had discussed at length "many volatile problems related to our mutual relations - relations between Israel and the United States.'

U.S. officials have expressed impatience with the stalled talks on withdrawal of Israeli, Syrian and Palestinian forces from Lebanon, and Reagan has complained the Israeli presence is hampering progress toward an overall Middle East settlement.

Reagan also has insisted the withdrawal of foreign troops is essential to restoring the Beirut government's authority. The government of Menachem Begin said the last summer's invasion was necessary to root out Palestine Liberation Organization forces that used Lebanon as a sanctuary. "I must say these were conversations between the United States and Israel and not negotiations," Shamir said. "I have not negotiatied all the details because that was left to negotiations in the area" reference to Israeli-Lebanese talks being overseen by special U.S. envoy Philip

"WE HAVE DISCUSSED more the principles and in our discussions about the principles there was achieved a great understanding between us and the United States," he said.

'The United States has promised to guarantee Israel's security after withdrawal of its troops," he said.

Lebanese Foreign Minister Elie Salem, after his second meeting with Shultz, told reporters Monday, "We made a great deal of progress" and Israel, Lebanon and the United States are all anxious for peace.

Student Reform Party

An open letter to the students of the University of Iowa:

We, of the Student Reform Party, have adopted the following as the platform on which we are running in the 1983 University of Iowa Student Senate Elections on Tuesday, March 15,

I. ELIMINATION OF PUBLIC FUNDING OF POLITICAL GROUPS

Radical political organizations, representing both the extreme liberal and extreme conservative ideologies, have previously survived on the mandatory student fees paid by every University of Iowa student. These organizations do not represent all the students

The Budget Protocol Act of the University of Iowa Student Senate clearly states that political groups are not to receive mandatory student fees. This act is being disregarded through the funding of such organizations as New Wave (an extreme liberal political organization) and S.T.A.F. (an extreme conser-

We, of the Student Reform Party, would more clearly delineate what a political organization is, in order to channel funds currently being used for political purposes back to organizations that benefit the entire

In order to provide an opportunity for campus political organizations to receive funding from students who choose to fund them, we propose placing the names of these organizations on University Optional Fee Cards. Six mailings of Optional Fee Cards, with the University billings, would provide adequate space to rotate both current recipients of optional fee and the political groups.

II. SUPPORT FOR THE CURRENT IOWA CITY ZONING ORDINANCES

With projected enrollment forecast to go to 30,000 or beyond next year, an adequate supply of housing must be available for the students. Current zoning areas near campus allow developers to build apartments and apartment complexes in residential areas, "Downzoning" (reducing the maximum number of occupants per lot) would prevent developers from providing an adequate supply of housing for students. They would be forced to build smaller apartments, which they would reject as an uneconomical investment. "Rent control" would also force investors and developers away from the lowa City area for exactly

The Student Reform Party opposes downzoning and rent control, and supports both the maintenance of current zoning ordinances, and seeking of additional housing by the University. In the past, the University has not met the challenge to provide an adequate supply of housing for students. The recent purchase of the Mayflower was merely the transfer of an almost wholly student-occupied, "off-campus" dwelling to an "on-campus" dwelling.

We wish to encourage the local developers and investors to supply housing for students. It is our goal to increase the supply of housing to meet the coming need for housing more than 30,000 students

Police reported that at least one motorist was injured and two cars suffered damage from rocks thrown by elusive youths on the same streets that officers in riot gear had to clear with tear gas less than 24 hours earlier.

The violence began Sunday night when bout 500 youths dancing in Liberty City's African Park had stoned officers who were dispatched to ask them to turn down the loud music. A smaller crowd later looted and burned stores in the area.

Police established a field headquarters Monday night and assembled units in case the violence spread.

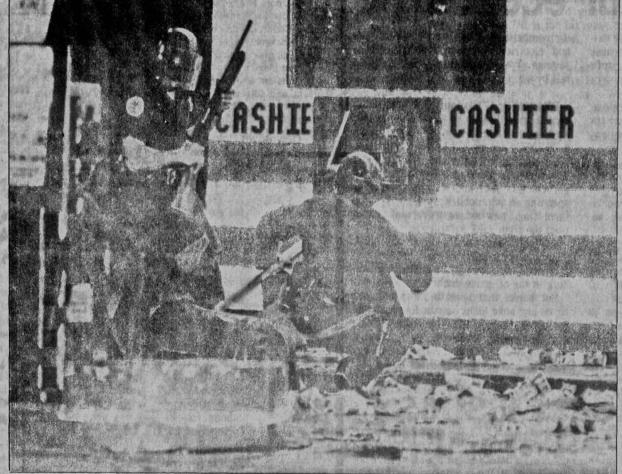

"The incidents are sporadic. There have been quite a few reports of rock and bottle throwing. The units have been checking out each and every one of the reports," said officer Stephanie

"WHEN THE UNITS have responded, they basically have not found any groups of people committing the crimes. What they have found is some debris in the road indicating that something had been going on."

Earlier Monday black community leaders said the open-air disco party where the violence started had been sponsored by drug peddlers in search of new business, and warned that the city's black ghettos were a "powder keg" that could explode any time.

Gunfire from a semi-automatic rifle rang out repeatedly during the fracas and more than 40 riot-equipped policemen used tear gas to disperse the crowd. No one was hit by the gunfire. During the height of the melee, police cordoned off a 40-block area.

Reagan backs Reed amid charges

WASHINGTON (UPI) - President Reagan reaffirmed his confidence in national security consultant Thomas Reed Monday, and a top aide arranged to meet soon with a congressman who is seeking documents regarding Reed's past stock dealings.

A White House spokesman said national security adviser William Clark is expected to talk later this week with Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., chairman of a House subcommittee that oversees the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Michael Barrett Jr., chief counsel for the subcommittee, said a meeting is being arranged and noted the panel has been investigating the matter for a couple of weeks.

"Here you have a substantial securities fraud case, and the man has a high security clearance," Barrett said. "We want to know a little about that, the why and wherefore."

Reed, a former Air Force secretary, signed a consent decree with the Securities and Exchange Commission

Choice is yours

Student Senate elections are being held today - if past elections are any indicator, either apathy or ignorance will prevent a large number of students from taking part. Apathy is hard to cure, but

This year in particular, the most cursory examination exposes the slates' fundamentally different approaches to issues and their contrasting philosophies about the role of the senate itself. Two important campaign issues — housing and allocation of mandatory student fees - highlight these differences most dramatically.

The various slates have offered alternatives to solve the housing problem that all recognize, including pressing for more dorms, encouraging cooperative housing schemes, advocating rent control and relying on supply and demand. Finding housing is a problem that almost all UI students have to face some time or other; while it is unrealistic to suppose that the Student Senate can achieve anything dramatic in this area, it is important that students understand the differences between the slates' strategies, and vote for the one they see as most beneficial.

The slates have also expressed very different views on the allocation of mandatory student fees, one of the main tasks the senate has to perform. The slate that forms a majority will have $140,000 of your money to allocate - again, it's important to understand the different approaches and make your choice

So far, this year's campaign has proved more interesting than usual, essentially because of the clear-cut choices it has presented. All students should take the time to make an informed choice, and articulate that choice by voting today.

Can we trust them?

The allocation of mandatory student fees has become a central campaign issue in today's UI Student Senate elections. Specifically, the Student Reform Party has explained that, if elected, it would amend the Budget Protocol Act to redefine

Throughout the campaign, the SRP has refused to disclose the new "definition," making it impossible to evaluate its promises to make the allocation process fairer. When invited to share the definition with the DI Editorial Board Thursday, presidential candidate Douglas Napier declined — discussion of the definition was thus impossible in our endorsement.

Late Sunday afternoon, Napier and campaign manager Kevin Ross approached the DI with a "deal" - we could see the definition, on condition that, before seeing it, we agreed to print it in full, with a letter from them. When this was turned down, the definition was made available to our news staff and, since it is so crucial to the SRP's policies, we felt a comment was necessary.

The proposed amendment to the Budget Protocol Act first defines a political group as one that "works toward the election or defeat of any particular candidate or candidates in the pursuit of public office," just as the act does now.

An important clause follows. "Any group which works toward the advocation or dissemination of any particular moral or ethical ideologies shall be considered a political group." This is the clause that would effectively exclude such groups as the Gay People's Union and Lesbian Alliance — and virtually any other group SRP

For rather than clarifying the definition of "political," SRP's statement instead extends it so it could be used to exclude any kind of organization. Homecoming, for example, could certainly be viewed as advocating an ethical "ideology" - yet it is cited by SRP as a perfect example of a non-ideological, majoritysupported event, essentially because its "ideology" is compatible

SRP is aware of the problem. In another clause, the definition flatly states, "Student Senate shall not be considered a political group." This kind of tortured logic is necessary, because otherwise the senate meets all the criteria to be denied funding.

The SRP is peddling its platform with the appeal that "Our money should go to non-political service groups which represent students." It suggests that the majority of students should not pay for groups that represent minorities, except those that "are minority solely because of nationality or interbred race." It is fine that the majority of non-sports participants pay for a minority to play soccer or climb mountains, but not to act as a support group for the gay community. And what about the gay minority - should their fees only go to support majority groups?

Students pay tuition to be exposed to a range of views and ideologies - would it make sense, for example, to say that students' tuition money should not go toward paying faculty whose courses advocate "ideologies" that conflict with their own? Similarly, the mandatory student fees have been used to help fund groups that reflect all opinions. If the redefinition is accepted, students won't get their much-vaunted $100 back; they will just end up funding a much more limited range of groups - those whose ideology is acceptable to SRP.

SRP's statement is detailed, and we urge all students to consider it carefully before voting. SRP has stated that in the past "it has been left open to the members of student senate to make subjective funding decisions based on personal bias." Yet so far, groups representing the whole range of opinion on campus have been funded — surely a healthy situation. If this new definition is ever passed, the way is open to truly "subjective funding

If you trust SRP to make these kinds of subjective decisions for you, vote for its candidates - in our opinion, such trust is misplaced.

Images of love and generosity

By David Wall

HE NUCLEAR arms freeze is back in the public's attention. As I write, supporters and opponents of the freeze are gathering in Washington. I think about my involvement in the movement, and wonder why I am not there,

I think about other rallies, particularly the one held this past summer in New York City. I went to that rally. I walked down the streets of New York City with over half a million other people; I wanted to sing for the joy and cry at the sadness I felt

I went to New York with a group of students from Iowa City - before we left some of us went door-to-door raising money to help defray our costs. What I think about and reflect on now are three homes I visited during my canvassing. Images of those three homes are etched in my mind.

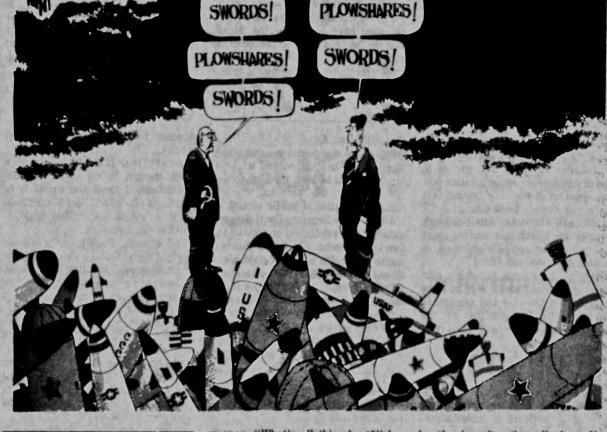

At the first house I pick my way across the screened-in front porch, around a red wagon and over some wooden blocks. In the corner lies a dirty, plastic toy bucket and shovel, standard equipment for any child wanting to play in the dirt or a sandbox. They look well-used.

A MAN ANSWERS the door. Soon his legs are embraced by two small children, one child firmly attached to his right leg, another clinging to his left. I give him my rehearsed speech. Who I am. Who I am representing. Why I am standing at his door asking for money. He reaches into his pocket pulls out a couple of dollars, gives them to me and wishes me luck.

As I turn to walk away he picks up one of the children. She can not find a certain favorite toy, and wants her father to help her find it. I am not sure, but someday I think I might want to be a father. I would like the opportunity.

At the next house a young man, roughly my age, answers the door. I deliver my by now well-rehearsed speech. He listens intently and then explains that he does not live there, he is just staying with his grandmother who has just gotten out of the hospital. He disappears back into the house to talk to her, to see if she would be willing to contribute.

When he returns, he explains that she doesn't think she wants to contribute, but that he would. A couple more dollars are added to my kitty. I ask him about his grandmother. What was she in the hospital for? How she is doing? I tell him I hope she is soon feeling better and leave for the next house on my assigned route.

Guest opinion

the spring of 1981; she was 95 years old. The last time I saw her alive was Christmas 1980, a Christmas I will always remember. She wasn't feeling well then, still recovering from a broken collar-bone she had suffered in a fall the previous August. She fell while she was out doing battle with the weeds that were threatening to overrun her beloved zinnias. I visited her shortly after she fell. I pulled the weeds, dug up her potato crop, trimmed her rose bushes. I think I would like to be a grandfather, work in my garden, and live to be at least 96 years

The final stop is a big house. There is a three-foot-high chain-link fence between me and the front door; the fence continues around the house blocking the driveway leading to the garage. Not an imposing fence, but definitely not friendly. I ring the door bell, stand around a while and then leave behind one of my flyers telling about the rally and head for the next house.

Next house no one's home. As I walk down the sidewalk I spot a man at the on over. "What's all this about?" he asks. I start giving my speech, but I am barely into it when he interrupts me to say, "Yes, yes I know that, I've read your handout, I can read pretty fast. What do you want?" I broach the subject of money and he replies, "How much do you want?" "Whatever you feel like contributing," I reply. We then begin a discussion of how we are going. How far is it? What kind of cars are you driving? What kind of gas mileage do they get? He invites me inside while he looks for his checkbook.

IN THE LIVING room sits his wife. She doesn't look well. Dressed in a house coat and slippers, she sits in a chair by the window. I have the impression that walking is difficult, even painful for her. I try to imagine her ending her days in that chair. She and I talk while he continues to look for his checkbook

We talk a little of politics, but mostly we talk of more important matters. We talk of children and grandchildren. The friend who came to visit last week. The book she has just finished reading. With check in hand I start to leave, thanking them for their generosity. She says she wishes they could go too, but that they are not young any more. I reply that I'll be going in their place, and tell them to look for me on TV. day the day after the rally from New, York. I wanted them to know I'd made it there.

There are many ways to try and convey the senselessness of a nuclear war. One can speak of the billions of dollars spent on armaments that could otherwise be spent feeding, clothing and caring for people. One can talk of the destruction, of leveled, burnt-out cities, a world poisoned by radiation; fallout. Charred bodies, dead bodies, people half alive, the unlucky ones, the survivors.

IN MOST CASES the appeal made to drum up support for nuclear disarma-, ment is one that calls on us to think of and be concerned for the well-being of other people - nameless, faceless people. It is an enormous request to ask, people to put someone else's interests' before their own. We live in a genera-, tion that has been called the "me" generation. Maybe that's why I have, not done more to promote the cause of peace and nuclear disarmament. There is nothing in it for me.

Except I want to be a father someday; I want to work in my garden when I am 96 years old; I want to experience the warmth and generosity that people, even perfect strangers, have shown to me. I do not want nuclear war.

There's nothing like a good crusade

god. Not that I'm all that concerned about the state of my soul, having been lucky enough to be born without one. Nor does my concern stem from any resentment I feel about continually being beaten over the head with Jesus by those on television, in various train stations and airports and occasionally even on my doorstep who have come to the astounding conclusion that I am even vaguely interested in their religious manias. Nor am I any more resentful of Christian fanatics than of fanatics of any other stripe my circle of close friends includes a streetcorner preacher and a male witch who casts spells with saltshakers, and with my customary evenhandedness I find the one as ineffably silly as the other.

No, my concern about god stems from his attitide about nuclear weapons. If his attitude is being accurately represented by certain of his followers, woe betide us all.

One of these prophets, the redoubtable Phyllis Schlafly, has publically

stated that the atomic bomb was a gift to this nation by a wise and beneficent god. If he gave something like that when he was in a good mood, it's a good thing he wasn't stupid and mean. I think it is also pertinent to point out that she mentioned "a" wise and benificent god, giving no indication as to which one she meant

OF THE LIST of deities I've made who might find nuclear weaponry a fitting present, I've pretty much eliminated Jehovah. He would probably have liked the idea at one time, but that "turn the other cheek" business he's been pushing lately, with whatever limited success, knocks him out of the running. I favor one of the pagan gods who've been crowded out of the marketplace for worshippers the past millenium or two and came up tion and drum up business.

By my reckoning the odds favor Kali, the Hindu Goddess of Destruction who never liked us very much anyway; Shubb the Unspeakable and Gross, an obscure Phoenician demigod given to overcompensating for his unattractive name and weight problem; or Anubis the Egyptian God of the Dead. I make Anubis a slight favorite. He's a real party animal and nuclear annihilation would be his idea of a good time.

Ronald Reagan, theologian that he is, has made his own contribution to the debate. Calling the Soviet Empire the focus of evil in the world, he went on to say that a nuclear arms build-up is the "moral" stance to take when faced with a like build-up by the evil Soviet Emperor. (This harkens back to a Schlafly quote that Satan lives in the Kremlin. Well, maybe he lives in the Kremlin but he works for the phone company.) He didn't exactly say that god went along with this, but the nature of the audience he was address-clergy - gives you the idea he doesn't expect an argument from him.

STATEMENTS LIKE this lead me to conclude that Reagan is even more conservative than people think. It is thought by some he wants to take us back to the 18th century. But his goal is not so puny a temporal regression + he's aiming for the 11th century, when nothing stirred up the blood so much as a good Crusade.

Those were the times of such heroes of the church as Richard the Lion-Hearted, who occasionally cut open women and children in captured infidel cities to see if they might have any jewels or the like sequestered in their inward parts, and Baldwin of Flanders, who oftimes used the heads of captured Saracens as catapult projectiles to rain down on besieged citles since a) he wanted them to surrender because b) he needed fresh ammunition. God liked that as well, every bit as much as the arms race, I imagine. It still sounds like Anubis to me.

To the editor:

I am writing in response to Robert Wesson's guest opinion, "Cuba, Nicaragua must blame themselves" (DI, March 8).

I must admit that I was entertained by his interpretation of events in these two countries. He readily admits that the United States has done everything in its power to destabilize the governments of Cuba and Nicaragua, but then makes an incredible leap in logic by stating that Cuba and Nicaragua are to blame for this harassment. The fact is, the continued harassment of Cuba by the U.S. government has retarded the growth of democracy in that nation

When Fidel Castro came to power he naively believed that the United States would not interfere with the new government of Cuba. He believed that commerce would continue as it had under Batista. But in 1964, with the Organization of American States voted political and commercial sanctions against Cuba. No hemispheric countries were to trade or conduct any other relations with Cuba. Castro had no choice but to turn to Russia in order to export sugar and import vital supplies. In short, these sanctions restricted the growth of democracy in Cuba and turned a potential friend into

As for the Sandinistas, I think that it is too early to predict whether their government will survive. But the continued harassment of Nicaragua by the United States almost certainly guarantees that the democratization of the country will be a slow process.

Apparently Wesson believes that the American government did not harass Cuba and Nicaragua prior to their revolutions because Batista and Somoza were "showing the world that they in fact represented the people, or at least the nonaffluent who are most

United States in the lead, the of the people." If Wesson believes that, then he probably also believes that the United States should increase military aid to El Salvador in order to ensure the continued health of the 'democracy" currently in power in that country

Hmmm To the editor:

In Kirk Brown's story "Arms Debate Cites Support of Freeze" (DI, March 9), he wrote, "Retired Col. William Taylor told an audience of about 200 at the Union 'that anyone can vote for apple pie, motherhood and the nuclear arms freeze ...'" This quote was then featured and attributed to

Taylor on page two of that paper. In reality, what Taylor told the audience was, "Do you know what Randy Forsberg said in this morning's Washington Post? - Quote - 'Anyor can endorse motherhood, apple pie, and a nuclear freeze.' That's exactly what Randy Forsberg, one of the leaders of the nuclear freeze movement, said. And he's darn right."

It took the Johnson County Board of Supervisors just 10 minutes Monday night to approve the county budget for the 1984 fiscal year.

In that time, the supervisors unanimously approved a $17.2 million budget that will raise property taxes and eliminate the county's $188,931 emergency fund. The new budget will raise taxes for rural and urban property owners by 7 percent and 9 percent respectively, the result of an increase in the tax rate and an increase in the assessed value of property taxed.

The elimination of the emergency fund will lower the proposed tax rate, which will lower the total amount of taxes paid by property owners in the county. response to the question of tuition tax

ADMITTING HE HAS never given much thought to the issue, he said, "Personally I think you should have choices in education." But he questions whether tuition tax credits helps to provide those choices. Sister Lois Prebil, principal of Regina High School, said Reagan's program would broaden educational choices. "I see we give an alternative to the public school system.

'In a sense we are saving the taxpayer money." Prebil estimated the annual cost of educating a student in public school is about $2,000 a year. Multiply that by the number of students attending private schools and the result is the amount of money private schools save public institutions, she

Tuition at Regina High School is now about $800, according to Prebil, and the largest tax break Reagan suggests is only $300. "The biggest burden is still on private schools," she said.

SHIVE, HOWEVER, maintains tuition tax credits will not expand the alternatives, "but weaken public education, the heart of American society.

In fact, Chambers said he "questions the constitutionality of such a proposal." Because the vast majority of non-public schools in Iowa are church-related, the program would 'not benefit the child, but the church,"

Case said it would benefit the rich over the poor, "the wealthy children would have no need to associate with less wealthy.

He added, "None of the proposals come up with any effective way of settling racial segregation."

Two Hawks take Big Ten honors

CHICAGO (UPI) - Sharpshooting guard Derek Harper, the lone veteran on an Illinois team dominated by underclassmen, heads the 1982-83 United Press International all-Big Ten Conference basketball team announced

Harper, a 6-foot-4 guard, was the only unanimous choice in balloting of conference coaches for the first team. Harper averaged approximately 18 points a game this year.

Iowa center Greg Stokes was named to the second team and forward Bob Hansen was selected to the third team. Joining Harper on the first team were a pair of Indiana seniors, Ted Kitchel and Randy Wittman, Minnesota's 7-foot-3 center Randy Breuer and Purdue's Russell Cross.

KITCHEL AND BREUER were repeaters from last year's first team, while Cross was chosen for the third team last year. Neither Harper or Wittman made any of the first three units last year.

Harper had one streak where he went 19-for-19 from the field in a span that covered one Big Ten game and parts of two others and helped mold Coach Lou Henson's team that relied heavily on freshmen, into a post-season

Kitchel and Breuer missed being unanimous choices by just one vote. Kitchel led the Big Ten in scoring up until the final month of the season when he was sidelined for back

"TED KITCHEL ISN'T the kind of player who can be replaced. He is an oustanding young man who knows his role on this team and filled it," said IU

Bob Hansen

Breuer led the conference in scoring this year with a 21 points-per-game mark and was second in rebounds. Like Harper, he was the lone veteran returning from last year's Big Ten championship squad. Wittman teamed with Kitchel to form the league's top one-two scoring punch for the Big Ten champion Hoosiers. Like Kitchel, he was playing as a fifth-year eligibility senior and helped Indiana stay in the top 10 nationally for most of the year.

Cross, Big Ten Freshman of the Year two years ago, was the Boilermakers' top offensive weapon and was a leader on defense. Cross averaged 18 points and eight rebounds per game and, like Harper, was among the most accurate from the field in the con-

One might think that the NCAA basketball tournament was getting to be old hat for Iowa senior co-captains Bobby Hansen and Mark Gannon, but Lute Olson told members of the media Monday afternoon that when the NCAA berths were announced Sunday, the two Hawkeye veterans let out the biggest yells on the team. "We kept checking the clock (Sun-day)," Olson said. "The kids were getting edgy but shortly after that, Bump (Elliott, Iowa Athletic Director) called and the first two to hear it were Bobby and Mark which was nice. I think their screams were pretty well heard throughout the Lake McBride area (where Olson lives)."

MICHAEL PAYNE WAS also nearby. "A lot of people were out on the patio, but I was inside and I heard the phone ring. Every time it had rung all afternoon, we kept thinking that's got to be it, that's got to be it. When I saw the smile go across coach's face, I knew right then we were in.'

But Monday, with the initial thrill of a fifth-consecutive NCCA berth fading. was get-down-to-business-time for the Hawkeyes.

The Utah State Aggies, 20-8 this year after a 17-4 start, are a well-balanced team (all five starters have averaged in double figures), and known for itsquickness. They have averaged 77.1 points per game offensively while allowing their opponents an average of 71.6 points.

THE AGGIES LOST to the University of Las Vegas (ranked No. 1 at one time this season), by 12 points in overtime after leading the Rebels by 16 in

One interesting note is that Utah City and Thursday in Louisville. State's leading scorer, 6-foot-7 Greg year-old freshman. But according to Olson, probably their most valuable player is 6-7 forward Ron Ence. averaging 13.1 points per game. "He seems to be the guy who really makes them go.

Offensively, the Aggies like to run the motion offense (big in the Big Ten), while defensively, their primarily a man-to-man team.

"They may be forced to zone us because of our size advantage," Olson said, "but if that's not their best defense, they'll be taking a chance."

UTAH STATE FOURTH-vear Coach Rod Tueller agrees with Olson and says the Aggies have faced a height disadvantage before. 'It will be a real challenge for us with their size," Tueller said, "but we have a little bit of quickness and agility and that may help us."

The Hawkeyes' and Aggies' one common opponent is Brigham Young. Iowa beat BYU, 91-80, in Provo while Utah State defeated the Cougars by seven at Provo and 12 at home.

The Aggies' claim to fame is the fact that they've come back from a 4-23 record last season.

"Psychologically, that's a big plus for us," Tueller said. "The kids really believe in themselves. They're almost playing possessed, trying to counteract

According to Olson, the Hawkeyes fortable and I'm making them.'

Ticket information

The Iowa athletic department tentatively announced Monday that there are less than 150 tickets available for Friday night's Iowa-Utah State Mideast Regional basketball game in Louisville.

That total may be deceiving, however, because Louisville fans, in anticipation of the Cardinals playing at home instead of being shipped off to the Mideast Regional in Evansville, Ind., snatched up most of those tickets as soon as the site was announ-

As a result, Louisville scalpers should be out in full force Friday. There were already many calls coming into the classified advertising sections of Iowa newspapers Monday from Cardinal fans wanting to sell their tickets.

Of the approximately 150 tickets already allotted to Iowans, student tickets will be made available by lottery, while the faculty, staff and public tickets will be based on priority. There will be a limit of two tickets per person.

The Iowa athletic department advises those persons who think they have a high priority, to call Iowa Ticket Manager Jean Kupka at 353-4216

OLSON SAID THE Hawks won't change anything - "When you get to a tournament, you don't change the things that got you there" - but the subject of free throw shooting, a downfall of the Hawkeyes for much of the season, was brought up and Olson commented.

"Free throw shooting is confidence," Olson said. "It doesn't do any good to shoot 100 free throws when you're well-rested...We've tried (in' practice) putting kids on the line and if they hit the free throw, they don't run and if they miss it, the whole group runs. You name it, we've given it a

"It's a mental game," said Steve Carfino. "You can talk about making your free throws and try as hard as you can, but things don't always happen the way you plan. It's a strange game.'

IOWA SHAPED UP in the free throw department Saturday night, particularly Bobby Hansen, who was 8-for-8 against Michigan State in his 25-point career-high performance.

"Right now, Bobby really wants the ball because he knows he's on a roll," Olson said. "He loves competition. The tougher it gets, the better he likes it. But that's what seniors are for.'

"Right now," Hansen said, "I feel confident in what I'm doing, I'm not taking any more shots. I just feel com-

CHICAGO (UPI) - Loyola basket- missioner Wayne Duke no longer is on ball Coach Gene Sullivan, whose 19-10 Ramblers were snubbed by both the NCAA and the NIT for post-season play, Monday called for a complete restructuring of the selection process. Saying "there are just too many vested interests," a subdued Sullivan said his team was "shocked beyond belief" Sunday night when the Midwestern City Conference firstplace finishers did not receive a bid to either tournament.

With spirited play by all teams, the Intramural basketball championships took place in front of a spattering of fans, Sunday night at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

In the women's competition, it was Flash, a team with four former Iowa basketball players, triumphing over the Earth People, 36-29. Leading scorer for the balanced Flash attack was Kris Wistrom with nine points. Earth People's Teresa Wise took game scoring honors with 14 points.

Both teams started in a zone defense with the Earth People taking an early lead with baskets by Linda Barnes and Chris Cochran. But Flash bounced back to tie the game at 15 at half.

DESPITE FULL-COURT pressure by the Earth People, the Flash took a five-point lead after two minutes of play in the second half. With less than three minutes left in the game, Flash maintained its seven-point advantage, securing the victory. "We had better ball control and a lot of balance," Flash player/coach Cindy Johnson said.

Sigma Chi, backed by boisterous fans, narrowly beat the Currency in overtime, 51-44, in the men's finals. Sigma Chi was led by John Halvorsen, who connected for 13 points despite early foul trouble. Currency's Tim Gaffey was the high scorer of the game with 16 points.

With four minutes remaining in the first half and the two teams tied at eight, Sigma Chi's Mark Shenkelberg completed a threepoint play. Sigma Chi turned it into an 17-12 lead at the end of the first half.

BUT CURRENCY rallied in the second half to take a four-point lead with less than three minutes left. Sigma Chi, behind some clutch free throw shooting, managed to tie the game at 38

In overtime, Currency was hurt by the loss of starter Brian Johnson, who fouled out. Free throws and key baskets by A.J.

"I don't think either team played as well as they could, especially shooting wise,' player-captain Shenkelberg said. "We were bigger than they were, but their shooting was better. So we sat back in a two-three (zone) defense and they had to take the outside shot.'

IN THE COED game, the Freeps easily beat Milky Way, 51-29. Leading scorers for the Freeps were Peg Murphy with eight and Doug Melder with seven points.

Milky Way, which included players from both the men's and women's winning teams, were led by Halverson's eight points. Julie Fahl added seven points.

With the Freeps holding an 8-6 lead in the second quarter, the men on the team used a tough man-to-man defense to widen the lead to 24-14.

In the third quarter, the Milky Way women cut the lead to 30-25, but the men's tough defense in the last quarter held Milky Way to only four points for the win.

'Living Dangerously' stages disturbing Third World life

READ the statistics in the newspapers, in magazines and in books most of the world is living in poverty and starvation. When you come to the ads asking for your contributions to save the shriveled figure that bears little resemblance to a human form, you turn the page. If you don't eat all of your dinner, somebody will make a crack about all the starving children in India. You might even feel a lit-

But it's just too hard for us, and perhaps a bit too painful, to imagine all of the horror created by poverty. We don't even try to comprehend it; we merely shut out the misery of others' lives.

Billy, an Indonesian dwarf, has been brought up in this poverty. To him, each drop in the bucket counts: "We must give love to whomever God puts in our paths." Because of his physical appearance, Billy is shut out from much of the love he gives, so he has become a voyeur, following closely with files and photos the lives of those people he loves. One of those people is Australian journalist Guy Hamilton.

We all become kids again in the slums," he tells Hamilton (Mel Gibson) as they walk through streets swarming with deformed humans.

BILLY, WHO ALSO helps foreign correspondents with his photographic skills, becomes Guy's righthand man in The Year of Living Dangerously, now playing at the Cinema I. He gets Guy an interview with the head of the Communist Party (PKI) in Indonesia. He introduces Guy to the beautiful journalist Jill Bryant (Sigourney Weaver), who later becomes Guy's love interest. And he tries to make Guy understand poverty. But soon these three are caught in the swirl of the events of 1965, a dangerous year for those living in Indonesia.

Indonesia had won its independence in 1949, and Sukarno, on the strength of his leadership in the revolution, became the president of the new republic. Despite his support of the PKI, many feared he would allow a number of anti-Communist generals to take control of the government.

When Guy first arrives, a communist revolt is stirring. By the time he leaves, the Communists have been beaten down, the army has taken control, and Sukarno is forced to name an all anti-Communist cabinet. In addition, from 100,000 to 500,000 people

FOR BILLY, the foreign journalists - a group of selfish pleasure-seeking hypocrites — do a poor job of representing any type of reality except the one inside their own heads. Billy wants Guy to go beyond that "objective" journalism, to describe the actual inhumanity of life and the politicial oppression in

The other experienced journalists tell Guy he's just writing drivel, not discussing the reality of the situation. But what is the reality of the situation the political events that surround these people and give some of them hope, or the squalor they live in? Just like the Indonesian shadow puppets that Billy loves to play with, reality is always illusive.

Director Peter Weir has always delicately balanced art, politics and commercialism: The Last Wave, with its eerie spirituality, and Picnic At Hanging Rock, with its dull beauty, had uneven but original constructions, but Gallipoli integrated the style with a powerful story to create his best - and most successful - movie

THE YEAR OF Living Dangerously, written by Weir, David Williamson, and C.J. Koch, doesn't have the power that some of the images suggest, and this may be because of Weir's insistence on a mysterious spirituality that confuses reality. But it is still a disturbing film.

Maybe it's just a coincidence, but suddenly the Third World is being recognized in the commercial cinema. Across from The Year of Living Dangerously at the Cinema II is Costa-Gavras' Missing, the Oscar-nominated film about American military involvement in South America that prompted a State Department disclaimer last spring. And, of course, Richard Attenborough's epic Gandhi, which is dominating the Oscar race, is still playing downtown.

Maybe the time has come for unshirking commercial artists to handle the questions of life beyond Steven Spielberg's comfortable suburbs.
