Olson’s leaving stuns coaches, players

Rosborough says he'd like to have top coaching job

By Marilyn Hansen

Late Olson left a great many things undone. His sudden and unexpected departure on Monday night has left a question mark hanging over the basketball program. It's unclear who will replace him.

The FIRST step is to fill the head basketball vacancy. According to Olson, the new head coach would need to have 5-15 years of head coaching experience at the collegiate level or have ties to the Iowa Hawkeye program. Olson's departure leaves a vacuum that needs to be filled quickly.

Lute's recruits

It's no surprise that Olson's resignation is a big blow to the basketball program. With Olson gone, the university is now facing a significant challenge to replace him. The search for a new head coach will be a critical period for the university, as it works to find a suitable replacement for Olson.

The university said that it would begin the search immediately. They also stated that they would be seeking candidates who have experience in college coaching. The search过程 will likely take some time, as the university needs to find the right person to lead the basketball program.

Some coaches thought he was 'set for life at Iowa'

By Steve Battersby

As Olson's departure became public, many people speculated about who might replace him. Some coaches expressed their belief that Olson was set for life at Iowa, and that he would be a tough act to follow.

A number of names were mentioned as potential candidates. While the university has not made any official announcements, it is clear that they are looking for a candidate who can lead the basketball program to success.

Nuclear escalation assailed by Glenn

By Jane Turner

The nuclear arms race is a serious concern for many people. The recent events in the Middle East have raised questions about the future of nuclear arms control.

The United States and the Soviet Union are currently engaged in a arms race. There are concerns that this could lead to a nuclear arms race, which would be a disaster for the world.

Some people have called for a moratorium on nuclear weapons testing. They argue that this would be a positive step towards reducing the risk of a nuclear arms race.

Closing of Field House leads to problems for relocating classes

By Kirk Brown

The closing of the UI Field House has created a number of problems for UI officials in the physical education and recreational services departments. All of the classes previously offered in the Field House have been moved to other locations on campus.

Some classes have been relocated to the Recreation Building, while others have been moved to the Field House's former facilities. The relocation process has been difficult, and many students have expressed frustration with the changes.

City considers participation in Iowa community program

By Jeff Edwards

Iowa City nearly participated in this year's Iowa Community Conservation program for the first time in seven years.

The Iowa City Chamber of Commerce, United States Environmental Protection Agency, and the Iowa Environmental Resources Board have sponsored the Iowa Community Conservation program since 1986. The goal of the program is to involve businesses and agencies in Iowa in conservation projects.

"It is possible that we might take part, though," said Iowa City Mayor Steve Heims. "But the program is primarily for the small towns."

The program has been successful for many cities, but it is not expected to be beneficial for Iowa City.

"It is very unlikely that we would participate in the program," said Heims. "The program is designed for smaller communities, not cities."
Student Senate may add executive

By Kristine Sharp

The executive of the UI 1986-1987 Student Senate has decided to seek an executive associate. "A "grant of power" is the most important change in the current constitution," said Womack, "which will throw some staff treasurer."

Pauline Whiteside, who will be appointed to the position of student Senate president he makes this year, and will press for student Senate concerns of the senate. Whiteside said he,” has to be close by someone who is willing to take the responsibility and stick it to it.

WOMAN'S RIGHTS RELATIONSHIPS between the senate and the UI Collegiate Association Council, the branch of student government, that deals with academic support organizations, have "stalled down to a point of no return," saying another communication must be met.

"A 'power struggle' between the two branches developed over the years because of an overvaluing of the position of executive associate and the effect of the吸纳" Whitaker said. More joint meetings between the two sides can come along the plan to do the following with this problem. Currently the senate is able to have a vote in two years.

During this month's senate election, members of the senate brought in an主要领导 but backed up Whitaker and Martinez to support the importance of making the student Senate able to open, available more to student government.

Sarah Stewart

A larger — and supposedly more severe — student population is placing new headaches for administrators at the UI Library.

Over the past few years, there has been a disproportionate increase in library use, according to Wayne Sayre, assistant librarian for reference services and student assistance and head of the reference desk. The student population has increased by 36 percent while library circulation has increased 31 percent. And in the last three years alone, Sayre says he has increased his patrols at night to twice the rate of enrollment.

Library administrators are on the lookout for a definite explanation for the sudden spurt, but some feel it reflects a new, broader awareness among students of the benefits of the library.

"We don't definitely know what's going on," Stewart said. "We get inquiries from their studies now than they were a few years ago," and ASA President, head of the library's reference section, "Nowadays they're doing more work, using library materials more intensively. They come in with much more complicated questions that they need help with, and they're very precise."
Officials say graduate aid probably not in danger despite proposed cut

By Don Hauser

With President Reagan's budget proposal expected to cut financial aid to graduate and professional students seeking work in a government agency and not overly concerned with the financial aid situation for UI graduate students, UI director of financial aid, Dr. Bill Jakobsen, said Tuesday, "I don't see any real problems indicated in that area." Jakobsen said that in his department, financial aid for graduate and professional students is handled differently than aid for undergraduate students. In the Graduate College, Jakobsen said, "There are many programs and things that aren't all federal. They are diversified into a great deal of different things." Jakobsen said the fate of graduate students would depend on how the programs are carried out, what percentage of aid is federal and what percentage is non-federal. He said the financial aid for graduate students is more than 50% non-federal, whereas the financial aid for undergraduate students is more than 50% federal. Jakobsen said it is possible that the graduate students will be affected much more than the undergraduate students.

A UI student was cleared of assault charge Tuesday with the use of a constitutional amendment and is accused of writing blank checks belonging to Clifton Cox Jr., 23, of 5723 Daum Residence Hall. Cox wrote the checks and did not have the money in the bank to pay for them, according to Johnson County District Court records. Lack suffered a fractured jaw and lost a tooth because of the Nov. 9, 1982 fight. Rott, 18, of the University of Iowa dormitory, was acquitted of an assault charge, and the case is pending.

Jobs or conscience?

A Department of Energy proposal has brought Burlington, Iowa, over the moral threshold of a major labor conflict. The proposal cites Medford, Iowa, eight miles west of Burlington, as a model of how to organize a nuclear weapons plant.

If you are a citizen in a city suffering from 14 percent unemployment, the proposal means one thing: Jobs. Other look past unemployment and take a closer look at the so-called "nuclear waste" project. The proposal means another: Honesty in a nuclear weapons plant.

A few resolutions concern is by Missouri Editor and Citizen for Peace, a local anti-nuclear group. Concerning that the plant be closed, the resolutions express doubt that the nuclear waste question can be answered in the absence of an explicit agreement among existing and future U.S. and Soviet arsenals.

Shocked independence

College newspapers are subject to some rigorous restrictions.

The graduation at which they are published have discovered them, tried to oversee new ways, tried to be relevant and report on the newspaper financially ineffective.

At the University of Illinois-Champaign-Urbana, something little different is happening, but with the same effect. At the Daily Illini, evening workers are being required to be in by 11:30 tomorrow hours of course and maintain a minimum 3.5 grade point average. Moreover, they must sign a statement to certify that they have not engaged in other employment in the area. Carpenter, Inc., for example, has begun to work in a plant in the Burling area. Its completion will render employment opportunities for the entire community easy approach with enthusiasm and a clear conscience.

Reagan: Russia refuses to renegotiate nuclear treaty

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The Soviet Union, in a move that could have broader ramifications on arms control, has refused to renegotiate sections of the 1976 SALT I treaty limiting nuclear weapons tests. De Cuellar hopeful Soviets want solution for Afghanistan

MOSCOW (UPI) — U.S. Secretary of State George Shultz said Tuesday he believes it was a "good day" for Afghanistan and Soviet leader Yuri Andropov would push for a peaceful solution to the war in the country.

"I believe there is a serious shift on the part of both leaders," Shultz said.

The United States has been seeking a diplomatic solution to the war, which has been raging for more than a decade.

The Soviet Union has been fighting in Afghanistan for several years, and the United States has been providing military assistance to the Afghan rebels.

De Cuellar hopeful Soviets want solution for Afghanistan

MOSCOW (UPI) — U.S. Secretary of State George Shultz said Tuesday he believes it was a "good day" for Afghanistan and Soviet leader Yuri Andropov would push for a peaceful solution to the war in the country.

"I believe there is a serious shift on the part of both leaders," Shultz said.

The United States has been seeking a diplomatic solution to the war, which has been raging for more than a decade.

Iowa's 1979-80 basketball season was marked by moments of triumph and drama. The Hawkeyes began the year with a four-game losing streak, which included a loss to the University of Iowa in the Iowa High School Basketball Tournament. Coach Johnny Orr's team had to regroup and find its way back to the top of the Big Ten standings.

In mid-January, Iowa defeated the University of Michigan, 70-65, thanks to a record-setting performance by guard Mike Freeman. Freeman's 27 points, including 11 in the final four minutes, helped the Hawkeyes secure the victory. This win showcased Orr's ability to lead his team through adversity and to capitalize on key moments in the game.

The win was followed by an upset of the University of Indiana, 70-66, which put Iowa in the driver's seat for the Big Ten title. However, the Hawkeyes' season was not without its challenges. A knee injury to sophomore forward Rick Roper forced him to miss several key games, including a Big Ten Tournament game.

Despite these setbacks, Iowa managed to finish fourth in the Big Ten, securing a spot in the NCAA Tournament. This was the second consecutive year the Hawkeyes were invited to the tournament, a significant achievement for the program.

In the NCAA Tournament, Iowa faced a tough draw, but they managed to advance to the second round, where they upset the University of Kentucky. This victory solidified Iowa's reputation as a force to be reckoned with in the Big Ten and beyond.

At the tournament, Iowa was paired with the University of Oklahoma in the second round. The Sooners were considered a strong team, but Iowa's defense proved too much for them, leading to a 76-66 victory.

In the third round, Iowa faced the University of Connecticut, a team with high expectations. The Hawkeyes maintained their composure, outscoring UConn 48-31 in the second half to win, 75-66. This win propelled Iowa to the NCAA championship game.

In the championship game, Iowa was matched against the University of North Carolina, a team with a similar record and a rich tradition. The game was closely contested, with both teams displaying their best basketball. In the end, North Carolina emerged victorious, winning 75-69, but the Hawkeyes' performance was lauded by many for its intensity and hard-nosed defense.

The 1979-80 season was a defining one for Iowa basketball. The Hawkeyes' journey to the NCAA championship showcased their resilience, determination, and talent. Coach Orr's leadership and the team's collective effort were instrumental in achieving this level of success. The Hawkeyes' story remains a inspiration for teams and fans alike, reminding us of the power of teamwork and perseverance in the face of challenges.

Loss of Olson not expected to affect basketball ratings

When asked if the loss of Iowa's leading scorer, Norm Olson, would have a negative impact on Iowa's basketball team's national rating, the head coach, Lute Olson, said that he did not expect the team's performance to suffer. "We have never bad a season points to be building the team," Olson said. "This is the first time all the pieces fit together." He added that the team's success was due to the hard work of the players and the coaching staff.

Olson's replacement, Steve Batterson, is expected to step up and fill the void left by Olson. "Steve has shown the ability to step up and perform under pressure," Olson said. "He is a very talented player who has the potential to be a star for us." Batterson, who averaged 12.5 points per game last season, is expected to make an immediate impact on the team.

The NCAA Championships, with or without Iowa, are a hot topic this week. The NCAA basketball tournament, which is the pinnacle of college basketball, is the main event of the week. The tournament has been a source of excitement for fans across the country.

The University of Iowa is one of the teams participating in the tournament. The Hawkeyes have a strong record this season and are considered one of the top teams in the nation. The team is looking to make a deep run in the tournament and bring home a championship.

Successful season points to a brighter future for tankers

By Jim Halasz

Iowa's women's coach, Petersen, has a strong team this season. The Hawkeyes are currently ranked third in the Big Ten Conference and are looking to make a deep run in the tournament. "Our team has shown a lot of improvement this season," Petersen said. "We are looking to make a statement in the tournament and show the country what we are capable of."

Tales of the Unexpected continue at Raleigh, N.C., and Athens, Ga., with either the Wolfpack or the Bulldogs guaranteed to be in a Final Four to a fantasy tournament Monday night. He's been the NCAA Tournament this year.

Not content with a methodical march to Albuquerque, the Wolfpack have instead walked the tournament tightrope. North Carolina State has come from behind late to win in this year's NCAA Tournament, which means it wins in overtime.

Forwards, Arizona State's Frank McGuire, is in a class by himself. McGuire has had seven victories for each squad and the Wolfpack, led by 6-8 Terry Fair, who has enjoyed an outstanding tournament. Georgia Coach Hugh Durham, with 160 college wins to his credit, isn't about to change tactics on these teams.

"We won't be doing anything different than we've been doing all year," Durham said. "It's practice we work on fundamentals.

The COUGARS, 6-8 feet tall, are two minutes shorter and seven Saturday's game with a game-winning streak and an awesome victory over No. 11 Wildcats. Houston, who rival Villanova. Houston, led by center Robert Charles, completely crushed the Wildcats Saturday in the NCAA Tournament.

Michael: a bruiser 6-0 Houston product, is the only member on the Cougars starting lineup.

The Cougars, 6-8 feet tall, have used a smothering defense to pull out victories over Kentucky and Arkansas, but were able to match in speed and inside game Saturday.

Soviet build-up, depth of wrestlers pose threat to Gable’s U.S. team

By Joe Christensen

Some American concerns over Soviet buildup don't seem so mny, though, when you watch freestyle wrestling.

The Russians, the world leaders in wrestling, are said to have weight classes of 168 to 257 pounds. Their top freestyle grapplers have nuclear arms and dynamite thighs in going along with technique that is unsurpassed.

Tonight in Cedar Rapids' Five Seasons Inn, wrestling comes to Iowa as a series of matches between Soviet and U.S. teams.

It is a hot ticket in Toledo, Ohio, as some Russian teams wrestled away the World Cup title from the U.S., 72-52.

Hawk notes

Volleyball

The Iowa women’s volleyball team finished 50-1 last season in the Big Ten, and now the Iowa women’s volleyball team is expected to be one of the nation’s best.

In past years, the Hawks didn’t have a lot of consistent stars. But this season, they have a group of players who can carry the load.

The Hawks have a young team, but they are a fun team to watch. They have a lot of promise and are capable of making a run for a national championship.

Baseball

The Iowa baseball team is coming off a successful season, winning the Big Ten title for the first time in school history. They have a young team, but they are a fun team to watch. They have a lot of promise and are capable of making a run for a national championship.
Films

The Black Stallion Returns

A sequel to the original hit film, this film stars Mark Linn-Baker as the young boy who befriends and trains the legendary Black Stallion. The story follows their adventures in the desert, where they must overcome a series of challenges to reach their destination. The film is directed by John Herdman and produced by MGM. It is based on the book by Walter Farley. The movie received generally positive reviews, with critics praising the performances and the visual effects.

High Road to China

This film stars Tom Selleck as a man who sets out on a perilous journey to rescue his wife and child from a corrupt Chinese warlord. The story is set in ancient China, and the film features a blend of action, comedy, and adventure. The movie is directed by Richard Panek and produced by Warner Bros. It received mixed reviews, with some critics praising the action sequences and others criticizing the dialogue and pacing.

Against: High Road to China

Tom Selleck's film is a remake of the 1973 film 'High Road to China,' directed by Richard Panek. The original film starred Richard Widmark and was set in ancient China. The sequel is set in the modern day and stars Selleck as a man who once was a spy in the Cold War. The film received mixed reviews, with some critics praising Selleck's performance and others criticizing the pacing and storyline.

Books

For instance, in "After a Full"

In his recent novel, "After a Full," author John Fante explores the life of a Hollywood actor who is trying to make it big. The novel is set in the 1940s and is a mix of romance, drama, and comedy. Fante's writing style is reminiscent of the great American novelists, and the novel received positive reviews from critics.

Keiller's collection of short essays

Richard B. Keiller's collection of short essays, "High Road to China," explores the theme of adventure, escape, and the power of storytelling. The essays are written in a modern-day American English, and Keiller's writing style is both humorous and thought-provoking. The collection received positive reviews from critics, who praised Keiller's unique voice and perspective.

FACT: The Bald is never about ABC's "Thorn Birds." (concluding thought: 7 PM)

- Cramer Carrier's screenplay of Colleen McCollough's novel about pride and passion in the Australian outback is at times terse and witty. The dialogue in the romance scenes is a bit hokey, as are the great sheep farms that these men shackle themselves to.

- There's a story of the women in "Thorn Birds," but that's secondary to the men who shackle themselves to the love stories that are not the most compelling. The story of the women is a bit too long. The dialogue in the romance scenes leaves a bad taste in the mouth. (Payday"

AND WHILE COMMERCIAL. TV's usual format is a mock series, but the words are stronger. "Thorn Birds" goes on as far as it needs to reach the last ending as well as the pages of the novel.

The novel is dead, Rachel Ward, as Maggie Cleary, the woman in the center of the story, presents just the right combination of innocence and desire to make her further feeling a point for Father Fagan. Richard Chamberlain, as the priestivalent both as a priest and with Maggie, does a mean job up to the last line. Regrettably, the book was filmed in Colle's own country (the show was filmed in Cailfor...)

- Richard Chamberlain, as the priest, is just right in the role. He brings a mean job up to the last line. Regrettably, the book was filmed in Cailfor...

- The performances, the production, Duke's direction, even Bill Butler's original composition, are very good. The clear..."Thorn Birds" is an excellent series, even if it seems a bit long when watched with TV's usual format. (Payday"

- "Thorn Birds" isn't getting the press one might expect. It would, probably be because it came as soon as the books of "Rape of War" and the "MASS" movie, it's bad, because this means the show's muscles, and one of the other half-dozen "good TV" presentations this year, to be the enveloped package.

- It's also not bad that "Thorn Birds" is on at the same time as the "good TV" presentations of the Tech. Thirty-David Byrne collaborative "Filth".
