Raveling to be named new Iowa coach

By Melissa Isaacson
Assistant Sports Editor

The Iowa basketball program has a new leader. George Raveling, who just completed his 11th year as head coach at Washington State, will be named Iowa's new head coach today at an 11 a.m. news conference.

Raveling arrived in Iowa City by private jet at 11:30 p.m. Monday. He brought with him his assistant coach, Ron Righter. Raveling's top assistant, Len Stevens, is expected to be named today as Washington State's new head coach after a strong recommendation by Raveling.

Raveling was met by Iowa Athletic Director Bump Elliott and was hustled away from the Iowa City airport. He would not talk to reporters.

RAVELING SAID HE would wait to talk with Iowa's assistants before mak-

Highlights

- Raveling will receive about $200,000, including benefits at Iowa. He received a raise at Washington State April 1, bringing his base salary to $53,500. Contrary to earlier reports, he had four years remaining on a five-year contract.
- Iowa Assistant Coach Jim Rosborough, who hoped to replace Lute Olson, indicated he won't join Olson at Arizona; but other Iowa assistants, Ken Burmeister and Scott Thompson, are planning on going to Tucson.
- Raveling was contacted about the Iowa job six days ago (the day after Olson left for Arizona) by a former Iowa coach. He would not reveal by whom, but said it was neither Sharm Scheuerman nor Oregon State's Ralph Miller.

ing any decision about his coaching staff.

Having never stepped foot in Iowa City before Monday night, Raveling said it is a compliment to the Iowa program that he accepted the job under those conditions.

While everyone was searching for "official word" Monday, only Raveling was able to provide one: "When you get an opportunity like this with a top 20 team, it's like Reagan asking you to be a member of his cabinet. You just don't say 'no.'"

Raveling was reportedly offered a five-year contract by Iowa and said Monday night it is a "safe" estimate that he would receive close to $200,000, including benefits, at Iowa. He received a raise at Washington State effective April 1, bringing his base salary to $53,500. Contrary to earlier reports, he had four years remaining on a five-year contract.

As speculation ended Monday on who would fill Lute Olson's vacancy, so ended the hopes of Iowa Assistant Coach Jim Rosborough, who had been making a strong push for the head position.

ROSBOROUGH WAS "still wondering and waiting" Monday afternoon. "I've been here for nine years and I'm very loyal to this program," Rosborough said before he knew he had not gotten the job. "I've been through everything with Coach Olson to get the program to this point and I'd like to stay."

Rosborough indicated he would not join Olson at Arizona, but that the other Iowa assistants, Ken Burmeister and Scott Thompson, were planning on going to Tucson.

Raveling has been quoted on several occasions as saying: "When I quit coaching basketball at WSU, I'll quit coaching basketball," and even admitted Monday night that just last week, he told the president of Washington State that he would be there as long as the president was.

Raveling had been offered several head coaching positions in recent years, but when it came to Iowa, he explained: "In the past, at best, it would have been a lateral move but this was an opportunity for me to secure my future."

"I talked to as many basketball people as I could before making this decision," Raveling said, naming Indiana Coach Bobby Knight, Missouri's Norm Stewart, Western Kentucky's Clem Haskins and Arkansas' Eddie Sutton among others. "All those persons told

Recruits will play for Olson's successor

By Steve Riley
Staff Writer

It appears that all three of Iowa's basketball recruits, and current Hawkeye Brad Lohaus, will indeed play for Lute Olson's successor, George Raveling.

When Olson resigned last Tuesday, uncertainty filled the air. People were wondering about the basketball future of almost everyone involved with Iowa — especially Lohaus, who was considering following Olson to his native state.

But Lohaus cleared the air a bit Monday night. "I'm pretty sure I'm staying now," said the 7-foot freshman. "It's almost 90 percent certain." He said he was recruited by Raveling in high school. "I considered Washington State pretty heavily, but they weren't one of my final choices or anything."

The recruits — Johnny Fort from Gary, Ind., Dave Snedeker from Springfield, Ill., and Robert Ursery from St. Louis — are even more certain of honoring their national letters of intent. "Since I signed a contract, I'm not going to turn back on it," Ursery said.

IT APPEARS THAT none of the recruits were contacted by Iowa officials to inform them of their decision. Fort admitted that the first he had heard of Raveling going to Iowa was Monday evening. "I've been out playing ball, and my sister told me about it 20 minutes ago," Fort said.

"I knew this morning," Ursery said Monday. "I heard it from a guy who runs a recruiting service here (in Missouri), and he heard it from an assistant coach at Kansas State."

None of the recruits who signed with the Hawkeyes last November knew much about the former Washington

State coach or his style. "I just wanted to know who they were looking at," Fort said. "Does he like to run? I'm afraid of a slow-down game." Fort also wanted to know if Raveling was black. "Most black coaches like to run."

All that Ursery knows about Raveling is that "he's a nice guy."

SNEDEKER, WHO WAS in Germany for a high school all-star game, could not be reached. But his prep coach, Gary Dorr, said he uses some of Raveling's practice drills.

"His forte is rebounding; he's got a couple of books out that I've read," Dorr said. "We do some rebounding drills that I've learned in some of his clinics. Since the inside game is his strong point, I'm sure he'll be great with (Michael) Payne and (Greg) Stokes. Dave should benefit from his coaching."

When Olson resigned, none of the recruits were affected to the point of considering not playing at Iowa. "I wasn't affected," Fort said. "I just had to respect what Coach Olson had to do. We talked about it for awhile, and there were no hard feelings. He was just a part of my decision to come to Iowa."

Ursery said he is looking forward to talking to the new coach. "I'm hoping he'll contact me to let me know what he's going to do with me."

All three players are involved in the thick of the high school all-star game season. While Snedeker is playing in Germany, Ursery is preparing to tangle in the Missouri all-star game and Fort has his choice of four nationally prestigious games.

'Nominal effect' of divestiture law seen

By Mary Tabor
Staff Writer

Protesting the government policy of apartheid, Sen. Thomas Mann, D-Des Moines, introduced a bill in the Iowa Legislature that would require the state Board of Regents to clear its portfolio of nearly $1 million now invested in corporations doing business in or with South Africa.

Mann said the bill addresses the basic policy question, "should money owned by the public be utilized to invest in a government that pursues a clear policy of racial discrimination?"

But what effect the bill, which has already been passed by the Senate Commerce and Education committees, will actually have on the regents institutions is being questioned by university and board officials.

"I suspect it would have a nominal effect," R. Wayne Richey, regents executive secretary, said Monday. If there is any stock in such companies held directly by the institutions, "I doubt if it would be very much."

The UI would have to divest about $553,000 presently held in stocks with connections to South Africa, according to Mann, the legislature's only black member.

BECAUSE REGENTS institutions are restricted from investing in anything but U.S. government securities, Board President S.J. Brownlee said, these investments could come only from contributions made to the state universities.

Shuttle flies smoothly; starts complex testing

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — Space shuttle Challenger, performing like a veteran in orbit after a flawless first launch, started Monday night to deploy the most complex and costly switchboard satellite ever built.

Astronauts Paul Weitz, Karol Bobko, Story Musgrave and Donald Peterson began the deployment procedures at 9 p.m. Iowa time despite guidance system problems in the space tug rocket attached to the big communications satellite.

Looking out the shuttle's rear window, Musgrave raised the 2½-ton satellite and its 16-ton space tug rocket to a 29-degree angle in Challenger's open cargo bay for a final check-out before the midnight orbital launch.

Mission Control told the astronauts two of the space tug's five gyroscopes apparently had failed, and Musgrave noted "we can't get along with three."

Engineers hoped a special series of radio signals, sent up from the ground, would get the two balky gyroscopes running. But a mission control spokesman said the satellite would be flightworthy even if the ground signal failed to do its job.

ALTHOUGH CHALLENGER was already showing a bit of wear, the new freighter's first hours in orbit proved its space worthiness.

Deployment of the $100 million communications satellite was critical to the future of the shuttle program.

The satellite was designed to forge half of a revolutionary new link between astronauts in space and controllers on the ground. Another like it, scheduled for launch by Challenger in August, will be needed to complete the link.

The demanding check-out measures, coupled with the rigors of a mid-day blast off from the Florida spaceport, left Weitz and his crew with the busiest workday ever faced by men in orbit.

Despite the heavy workload, Weitz beamed a special telecast earthward to show Mission Control how two pieces of Challenger's white thermal insulation — part of the ship's protection against the searing heat of re-entry — had peeled loose during blast-off and were sticking out like open jacket pocket flaps.

Flight Director Jay Green said preliminary analysis showed the loss of the two pieces of insulation on Challenger's tail section — each about 6 inches square and an inch thick — should pose no problem during the ship's return to Earth Saturday.

UI's Brisben to quit information office

By Kirk Brown
Staff Writer

Joseph Brisben, associate director of the UI Office of Public Information, announced Monday he will resign from his post to pursue a career in private business.

When informed of the decision, UI President James O. Freedman said he was sorry to see Brisben leave. "I will miss Joe very much. In the year I've been here I became very fond of him and also developed respect for him as a professional."

Brisben said he will begin "a new career" with an investments firm, Securities Corporation of Iowa, beginning May 23. "I have always enjoyed following investments on the stock market so a couple years ago I decided to read some books and magazines on the subject," Brisben said.

Besides his interest in the stock market Brisben also cited a desire for financial security as a reason for his career change. "It is conceivable in the future that I could have four kids in college at once."

Dwight Jensen, director of OPI, reacted to Brisben's announcement by saying "I am very sorry to see him leave the staff."

JENSEN SAID BRISBEN had discussed his decision with him at length. "He told me he was sure about his decision and I wished him the very, very best."

Brisben said he has worked in college public relations for 15 years, including 18 months as acting director of OPI.

He said he made the decision to change careers almost two years ago when Jensen was selected rather than 200,000 face starvation

MANILA, Philippines — An estimated 200,000 people face the threat of starvation in the drought-stricken southern Philippine province of Misamis Oriental, Misamis Oriental Gov. Homobono Adaza said Monday. Adaza was one of a 10-member provincial assembly that unanimously passed a resolution Monday calling on President Ferdinand Marcos to declare a "state of calamity" in the region.

Marcos has refused to declare an emergency in the region, citing reports from government agriculture experts that there were sufficient food stocks to prevent starvation.

Gulf oil slick clean-up failing

ABU DHABI, United Arab Emirates — Persian Gulf states failed Monday to adopt a joint effort to stem the flow of an oil slick — already twice the size of Connecticut — from reaching their shores and vital desalination plants.

The price of a quart and a half of drinking water soared to $6 in Qatar, approximately five times its normal price. Dead fish and other marine life already have begun washing up on the arid coasts of gulf nations.

Easter nuke protests end

Police with riot gear and dogs blocked 14,500 demonstrators outside a U.S. airbase in West Berlin Monday at the close of four days of Easter anti-nuclear protests that drew hundreds of thousands of people across Europe.

Organizers estimated that 785,000 protesters took part in 90 demonstrations during the Easter weekend in West Germany and in Britain demonstrators said the protests drew 150,000 opponents of the missile deployment.

Dissidents kill Parliamentarian

HARARE, Zimbabwe — A gang of about 22 dissidents shot and killed Paul Savage, 60, a white member of Zimbabwe's parliament who represented former Prime Minister Ian Smith's Republican Front Party in the Senate, in a raid Sunday on his ranch in southern Matabeleland province, official sources said Monday.

Savage's daughter, Colleen, 20, and a British guest were also killed and Savage's wife, Betty, was injured in the attack. One of the dissidents also was reported killed in wild shooting at the ranch.

Abuse trial delayed pending evaluation

By Suzanne Johnson
Staff Writer

A man accused of raping a Coralville woman last November while threatening her with a knife has been sent to the Oakdale Medical Facility for psychiatric evaluation.

Robert F. Bakker, 32, also known as Dr. Bill M. Doreal, is accused of attacking a woman from behind while she was walking on First Ave., Coralville. His trial was scheduled to begin Monday for second-degree sexual abuse.

According to Johnson County District Court documents, the victim identified Bakker in a photographic line-up hours after the assault took place.

Bakker's attorney, Douglas Olson presented an oral motion to suspend the trial proceedings Monday and the court was informed that a question had arisen concerning Bakker's competency to stand trial.

Courts

Dr. Vernon P. Varner, an Iowa City psychiatrist, testified he is uncertain whether Bakker could assist his attorney in his own defense. To assure him a fair trial, Bakker will undergo evaluation at state expense, the documents state.

An 18-year-old Illinois woman was charged with prostitution after she was accused of approaching a man Sunday morning at a Tiffin rest area with the offer of sexual intercourse. Angeliqe Epps, the woman suspected of offering her services, was also charged with third-degree theft, and is suspected of stealing $133 from her customer's wallet.

Paul Blackshire, 47, of Indiana, was also charged with prostitution for accepting Epps' offer for $20.

Blackshire is being held on $1,100 bail, and Epps' bail is set at $2,200.

A rural Iowa City man suspected of raping a 16-year-old North Liberty girl as he took her home from a party, was arrested Sunday.

Roger W. Clark, 21, faces a third-degree sexual abuse charge and is being held on $11,000, court records show.

Clark is accused of raping the girl in his car after dropping off another passenger. According to the complaint physical evidence on the victim shows a struggle took place. She fled from the car to a nearby North Liberty residence to call for help, the document states.

A woman who slipped on a free meat sample at a Hy-Vee Food Store April 4, 1981, filed a $25,000 suit against the store Monday. Anne Kain states in the petition Hy-Vee, 501 Hollywood Blvd., was negligent for not discovering the piece of meat on the floor.

An Iowa City woman was charged Sunday with carrying weapons after police found two hunting knives in her car when they stopped her for operating while intoxicated.

Nancy L. Squier, 44, of Baculis Mobile Home Park, was arrested after police found two hunting knives with blades measuring 3 3/4 and 3 1/2 inches in the glove compartment of her car.

Daniel G. Buser was charged with assault without intent Friday night when police responded to a call for assistance at Mumm's Saloon and Eatery.

The complaint states Buser and another man had an argument, after which the other man confronted Buser in the restroom. Buser then hit the man, who lost a tooth, court records state.

Students can benefit from credit

By Dan Hauser
Staff Writer

In an atmosphere that can prove to be financially stressful, UI students may turn to credit cards to help with monthly bills and various payments. Dave Wooldrik, manager of the Iowa City Credit Bureau, said for students it is not "any harder than anyone else to get" credit.

The application process for a credit card is the same as a non-student, Wooldrik said. The main qualification for someone applying for credit is whether the applicant has a fixed income.

"If there's no income, then there is probably no credit card," Wooldrik said. He pointed out various local department stores will let the student,

"get one as long as you don't have bad credit."

According to Darryl Thorpe, new accounts manager of Younkers in Des Moines said, "We use a variety of qualifications. It's a combination of things." He said, Younkers puts a stress on the applications being complete.

THORPE SAID there are a few negative factors the company looks for in an application. If the applicant has an income of $500 or less a month or if the applicant doesn't use a bank, then he or she will probably be rejected.

Barry Bauman, vice president for lending for the UI Credit Union, said students are not eligible to apply for a loan at the credit union unless they work at least 20 hours a week or are employed by the UI as a resident assistant or a teaching assistant.

"It is very important for anyone to establish credit. Without it it sometimes gets difficult," Bauman said.

Wooldrik said seniors of undergraduate and graduate schools are "targets" for the solicitation of credit card companies.

"We put a lot of strength in upper graduate students," Thorpe said. He said most of the credit cards distributed by Younkers would go to juniors or seniors and would not be available to most freshmen because they are usually dependent on their parent's income.

THORPE SAID his company likes to have students as credit card holders because they constitute "a majority of our customers in Iowa City."

One advantage of possessing a credit card, Wooldrik said is they are fairly easy to budget. "You know how much money you have." He said they also are advantageous when it becomes hard to get a check cashed.

A disadvantage, Wooldrik cited, when a student "doesn't know how to handle them." He said a student may have more than one credit card, which creates a problem when they add up and the student "has a tremendous debt on their hands."

Wooldrik advises students who have credit cards to "have as few as possible and to use them in emergencies." He said a credit card can also be useful for a student who travels.

Riverfest to offer more than ever

By Sarah Stewart
Special to The Daily Iowan

The UI's fifth annual Riverfest is scheduled for the week of April 17-24 and organizers for the event say this year's schedule offers more activities than ever before.

Although many of the past years' events will be repeated, several new ones have been added to the celebration. One of the biggest changes in the program will be more emphasis on the UI's educational side.

"See the Campus" tours will be offered throughout the week, taking groups to places of interest such as the UI Art Museum, the Main Library's Map Room and Chemistry-Botany Building's glass-blowing department.

"We're working a lot to make this something for both the university and the surrounding community, to give people a chance to see what goes on," Amy Carlson, Riverfest publicity chairman, said Sunday.

Each day of the week will offer several activities, including programs in the Union's Wheelroom every night. Wheelroom activities include a Three-Cent Poetry-Comedy night, a Trivia Game Show and an Air Guitar Contest sponsored by KKRQ Radio.

THE FESTIVITIES will begin with a Kickoff Surprise Afternoon on the 17th, when Captain Riverfest will arrive at the Pentacrest to preside over the revelry. From then on, most events will take place on or around the river's banks, including an outdoor movie, intramural sports, contests, food and lots of music.

Another addition to the fest will be the Brown Bag Lunch. Musicians will play on the Wheelroom patio for anyone lunching on the riverbanks Wednesday through Friday.

This year's guest speaker will be Doug Adams, author of The Hitchhiker's Guide to the Galaxy. Adams will speak at the Union Thursday night and there will be a faculty tea after the speech.

Intramurals will also play a part in the celebration this year, with softball, canoeing, pool, bowling and racquetball scheduled throughout the week. The River Run will return, along with a one-mile Fun Run and the Mini-Olympics, at which eight-member teams can participate.

APPLICATIONS FOR intramurals will be available at the intramural office and River Run applications can be picked up at United Federal Savings and various Iowa City sports stores.

Thursday "The Duane and Floppy Show," complete with clowns and balloons, will invade the Pentacrest and Friday the Scottish Highlanders will perform there.

Scheduled social events include the Thursday night Pub Crawl, which will be led by Captain Riverfest himself. Riverfest badges and t-shirts will entitle crawlers to bar specials downtown and an after-hours party in the Wheelroom, featuring the band Fly by Night. Friday's Casino Night will have a western theme, with music performed by the Echo Mountain Boys.

Saturday's events include a Music Tent, a Folk Music Tent, the Student Activities Fair and a Pignic dinner of porkburgers. Food concessions will be sponsored by various UI student groups, and will include ethnic foods prepared by international students. Five bands will be playing on the Pentacrest, featuring Spooner.

Rain contingency plans have been made in case April showers force the festivities indoors, so few events will be cancelled. The Riverfest Commission is expecting 15,000 people this year, and, according to Carlson, "The show goes on, no matter what."

Guided fantasy is key to D & D

By Sarah Stewart
Special to The Daily Iowan

You are a lawful good Cleric, sixth level, with 64 hits, an intelligence quotient of 15 and you are about to battle a dragon on your way to rescuing the princess. So goes a day in the world of Dungeons and Dragons.

Anyone in the Union at the right time, especially Saturdays, has probably seen a "D and D" game in progress. The players sit with pencil and graph paper poised, waiting for their Dungeonmaster to give them their instructions from behind his screen.

These people are not playing an ordinary game; they are indulging in a sophisticated system of fantasy role-playing that takes quite a bit of study to master.

"WHAT A LOT of people like about the game is that it gives you a chance to go back in time, and through your character, you can compare what you'd do in real life," Dennis Wiese, a UI junior said. Wiese and a group of his friends meet once a week for sessions of the game, which frequently last up to 12 hours.

D and D was developed in the early 1970s by Gary Gygax, who was interested in literature such as J.R.R. Tolkien's Lord of the Rings series, R.E. Howard's Conan the Barbarian series and Fritz Leiber's Gray Mouser series.

Gygax and two of his friends took the characters and adventure concepts from those stories and, employing probability and information matrices, developed a game in which players can develop their own characters and venture with them through medieval times.

The game started becoming popular in the mid-70s and has become more sophisticated since then. Gygax and his associates now manage TSR, a multi-million dollar operation that prints materials for D and D, along with several other role-playing games. There is even a monthly magazine for D and D enthusiasts.

THE GAME IS popular among students in Iowa City. The beginning player can learn the game by reading the basic handbook, but the best way to learn is by playing with experienced players.

Before beginning the game, each player gets a character with six basic attributes: strength, wisdom, intelligence, constitution, dexterity and charisma. Players roll a die to determine each attribute. The higher the numbers, the stronger the character is in each area. When the player has determined these attributes, along with the character's race and occupation, the character is complete and the game can begin.

The game itself is played on modules, or maps, which can be purchased at hobby shops or designed by the Dungeonmaster. The Dungeonmaster is the only one who sees the module, and he or she directs the players as they go through the adventure. Objectives for each round of the game range from slaying dragons to rapping and pillaging nearby hamlets. The characters can move from module to module indefinitely, since there are whole "worlds" of maps available, but most players only have time enough to play a few rounds at each sitting.

AS EACH CHARACTER encounters various dangers and opportunities, the outcome is determined by entering the characters' numerical quotients into the handbook's matrices. The farther each character gets in the game, the higher the level it attains and the stronger it becomes.

Clay Chase, a sophomore at Regina High School, enjoys this aspect of the game most. "It's great to start out with a little, wimpy guy and bring him up to be a powerful person," Chase said.

Playing with the same character for a long time can lead to problems, however. Wiese said he's seen people actually cry when characters they've had for a long time die. "After you've had it for as long as a few years, the character is a part of you. You know him, you can talk about him like he's a good friend," he said. He doesn't feel quite that sentimental, though. In his group, "we figure, so they die? You just roll up another."

D and D players can develop their own variations on the rules. According to Wiese, most groups play in their own style, which makes for more interesting play. This flexibility, along with the skill required and, of course, the fantasy of the adventures have made D and D popular enough that there are now national tournaments, D and D clubs and the concept of role playing games is still expanding.

Nursing conference open to all UI students

Any students interested in nursing as a profession are invited to attend a conference sponsored by the Association of Nursing Students and Sigma Theta Tau on Wednesday.

The conference, "Images of Nursing: Reflections of the Past, Visions for the Future," will be held in the Main Lounge of the Union from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. It is free to all students.

Kathy Johnson, UI nursing student, said it "should be an interesting day for anyone who wants to attend." She stressed that it is open to "anybody who might be interested in nursing as a student."

Genroe Alfano, a nurse from the Loeber Center in New York and author of

The All RN Staff, will be the featured speaker. Other nursing leaders will also speak at the conference.

Registration for the conference begins at 8:00 a.m. in the Union.

Phone customers given more options

By Allen Seidner
Staff Writer

After nine years in court, the breakup of American Telephone & Telegraph is underway, offering telephone customers some new choices and causing them some confusion as well.

Telephone customers will have "more options on types of service, (and the) ability to do installation work," Ed Mattix, manager of media relations for Northwestern Bell Telephone Co., said. Federal regulations have permitted consumers to purchase their own phones since 1968, and an increasing number of local residents have discovered the advantages to owning their own phones. The monthly fees charged for leased phones — currently $1.25 to $4 per phone — can exceed the purchase price of a phone in one year.

Northwestern Bell customers now have the option of continuing to lease their phones, or purchasing them at prices below those Bell charges for new phones. About 1 percent of Bell customers have exercised their option to purchase the phones they use, Mattix said.

"BY LATE SPRING," telephone customers will be permitted to install telephone wiring inside their homes, Mattix said. The customer's desire to hold down maintenance and installation costs stems from "a real do-it-yourself type of flavor in our society," he said.

AT&T, which had been a regulated monopoly, will no longer be protected from companies that want to compete for a share of the telephone equipment and long-distance calling markets. Only the local operating companies — like Northwestern Bell — will remain regulated and protected from competition.

As part of an agreement reached with the U.S. Department of Justice, AT&T must divest itself of the 22 local operating companies. To participate in an increasingly competitive telecommunications industry, it has formed a new subsidiary called American Bell Inc., which will market new residential and business communications equipment.

Consumers will be able to purchase phone equipment from the new subsidiary, or from a number of retail stores which are entering the market. Hank Miguel, who was a Northwestern Bell employee for six years, opened the Iowa City Telephone Company, 122 S. Dubuque St., in October, 1981. "I'm selling more telephones every quarter," he said.

Sarah Carter, assistant manager of the Iowa City Telephone Co., Monday. The firm sells communications equipment for residential and business customers who wish to purchase their own telephone.

OTHER RETAILERS like Sears, Radio Shack, and World Radio are selling telephones, too — and at attractive prices.

Bargain-spotting consumers can purchase a standard rotary dial telephone for around $20, and a Princess style push-button model for around $60. There are even models selling for under $15 — deemed "throw away" models because of their short life.

Consumers can recoup the cost of purchasing a phone in a matter of months by avoiding rental fees charged on phones leased from the phone company.

Miguel is quick to point out "a lot of people are making junk phones," and consumers must beware of equipment sold without a repair agreement. Bell will charge a minimum of $26 to repair a phone it sells. "Our maximum repair charge for the rest of the year will be $12," Miguel said.

Saudi program in need of host families

By Ho Wah Foon
Staff Writer

Not contented just with importing Western technical expertise to explore its oil-rich fields, Saudi Arabia is now hoping to learn about sports and recreational activities — in Iowa.

A recreational training project jointly funded by the Saudi government and the University of Iowa affiliate of the Council of International Programs to begin Monday April 11 will aim at developing the professional capability of 10 selected Saudi employees.

The one-year program is an intensive two-pronged training scheme aimed to build up the theoretical and practical experience of its participants. They range in age from 29 to 43 and are employed in youth sports programs in positions ranging from management and administration to direct services.

Theoretical training entails intensive classroom exercise in management, program development, supervision and the use of computers in sports and recreation, while practical and field experience is built up through working with the Young Men's Christian Association and recreational societies.

PROJECT DIRECTOR James Whitsitt said during their stay here, the Saudis will get a taste of the American way of life. Each participant will stay with an American family and will attend a city council meeting, a court trial and visit the state capital.

"We are interested in introducing them to activities which are more than just sports and cultural, and which may interest them," he said.

But the project, which is jointly conducted by the UI School of Social Work and the Department of Recreation may encounter difficulties in getting host families to accommodate the Saudis for their first four to eight weeks here. The response so far, according to Whitsitt, has been "slow."

If enough families can not be found to house the visitors, the program organizers will "probably look for temporary housing in a hotel and then look for apartments," Whitsitt said. He said the opportunity to live with families is a very important part of the program. "I hope very much we'll be able to place them."

HE SAID AN AMERICAN family who participates in the program is not expected to be a tour guide. Organized tours will be conducted by the social work and recreation departments.

"All they need to do is to do the sort of things they usually do," Whitsitt said. After the initial four to eight weeks the participants will stay in local apartments.

One of the families that have signed up to participate in the program is that of Bill

Stewart, who is the chairman of the Council of International Programs.

Stewart said: "It is nice to meet people from other countries and learn about their way of life. This has been the interest of the family for a long time."

He said he has been involved in programs such as this one for the past five years. He said he believes he could help the Saudis learn more about the American culture and how it operates.

Asked if the Saudi trainees will be able to apply the skills they learn here back home, Stewart said, "The basic skills will be very similar in technique, though because of the cultural difference they have to adapt to the American way."

The Saudi trainees confirmed Monday the delegation led by Ali Saleh AlMasser will arrive on Saturday. A group of 10 is coming to the UI and another group is going to Iowa State University.

Zoning plan draws protest

By Mark Leonard
Staff Writer

The Iowa City Council once again heard from disgruntled neighbors on the planned zoning of 521 Kirkwood Ave. at its informal meeting Monday night.

The lot is scheduled to be zoned from commercial to RNC-20, a zone which would allow an apartment complex.

One of the owners of the property, Dr. Larry Rigler, said he envisions a 56-unit building, but added the complex would be "top quality" and would pose no parking problems to the neighborhood.

David Doerring, 1016 Diana, said the apartments would create a parking problem for the neighborhood and also create additional traffic problems on Kirkwood Avenue. "We're also talking about how this would affect the quality of life here," he said.

COUNCILOR LARRY LYNCH said "It's an unusual situation. When I grew up there were horses there ... it was just a big park. It really doesn't have this history of high density or commercial development."

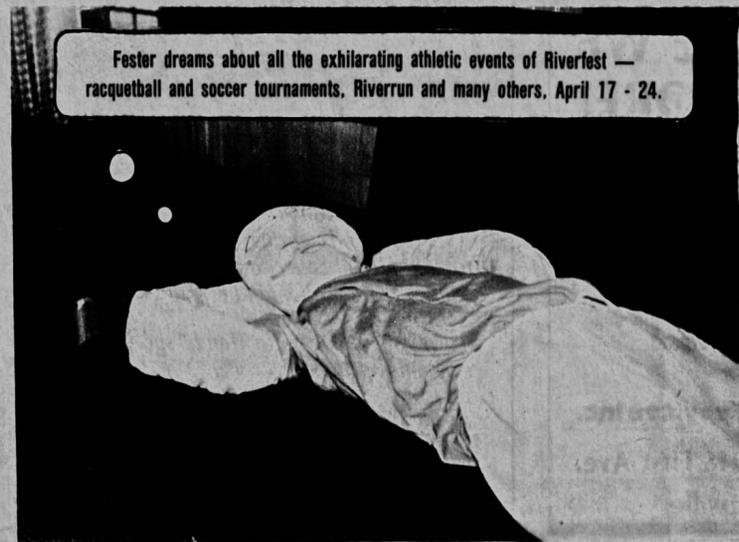

Mayor Mary Neuhauser said the city is in a tough position when asked for rezonings. "We want to preserve neighborhoods, but we are being pressed by the expansion of the university and people have nowhere to go. 'Whatever it's going to be zoned, it's not going to be as nice as it is now.'"

In other business, Councilor John Balmer said the council might want to consider housing as a possible alternative for Elm Grove Park, which is currently up for sale by the city for commercial development.

"Quite honestly we are losing housing to Coralville and outlying areas ... I think we are being asked to provide housing and this might be an area to seriously consider," he said.

The only "offer" received by the city for the property has been from the Iowa National Guard, which asked the city to donate the land to them. The city is hoping to receive $200,000 for the land.

IN OTHER BUSINESS, Engineer Robert C. Henely from the Iowa Department of Transportation told councilors that hopefully within the next 10 years Highway 1 will be widened further to become a four-lane facility.

Experts look into Arab illnesses

TEL AVIV, Israel (UPI) — Two American medical experts searched for clues Monday to the mysterious illnesses of 800 West Bank Arab schoolgirls and Israeli officials stopped an American television crew from filming victims.

Israeli officials also detained an unspecified number of Palestinians in the city of Nablus on the Israeli-occupied West Bank, charging them with spreading rumors that the city's water supply had been poisoned.

Two epidemic specialists from the U.S. Disease Control Center in Atlanta began their investigation at a hospital in Tulkarm where some of the 400 girls stricken Sunday are being treated, Israeli Radio said.

The U.S. experts had been invited to corroborate the findings of Israeli health officials that the apparent poisonings have no organic explanation and are actually part of an "organized fraud" or "mass hysteria."

AN URGENT, CLOSED-DOOR meeting of the United Nations Security Council to consider the mysterious disease was called at the request of Arab nations. Iraqi Ambassador Riyadh Al-Qaysi said "these poisonings were not coincidental" but he fell short of accusing Israel of responsibility as the PLO has done.

Al-Qaysi said the disease was caused by "a yellow substance containing sulphur concentrates which emitted poisonous gases with dangerous physical and psychological consequences."

Israeli officials have said the yellow substance that had been found on curtains in the Jenin area was pollen from pine trees in school yards.

U.N. spokesman Joe Sills told reporters two experts from the World Health Organization were sent to the West Bank to investigate the illnesses.

"American medical personnel will hopefully be able to develop an antidote which could then be used for treatment of the other victims in the West Bank," said Jawad George, executive director of the group.

disease that had earlier affected 400 Arab schoolgirls in Jenin from March 21 to 31 was reported in Hebron area villages.

Approximately 400 more girls between the ages of 10 and 16 reported feeling nausea, dizziness and headaches and were sent to hospitals in Hebron, Nablus and Tulkarm.

Authorities detained a CBS camera crew and confiscated the crew's film, claiming they had staged poisoning scenes in Nablus hospital.

CBS producer Warren Lewis emphatically denied the charges. He said the crew "was filming in the hospital in Nablus with the permission of the hospital director, when the police came and arrested them."

Members of a family in Popayan, Colombia collect their possessions Sunday after their home was destroyed by an earthquake. The quake hit the city Thursday and left at least 250 people dead, 1,500 injured and 100,000 left homeless.

Quake in Colombia leads to profiteering

POPAYAN, Colombia (UPI) — Civic leaders warned Monday that profiteers were selling international relief supplies in earthquake ravaged Popayan and warned that riots could erupt among thousands of homeless people in the city.

"You can't blame them. Some people haven't eaten a proper meal nor slept in a shelter for four days," said Victoria Monroy, a member of a community board in Pubenza, a sector of the city leveled by Thursday's quake.

President Belisario Betancur met with his cabinet in Bogota to discuss measures to halt the profiteering and begin the orderly distribution of tons of food, blankets and tents to victims of the earthquake.

Popayan civic leaders said distribution of relief supplies from the United States, Canada, Venezuela and Korea was snarled by disorganization, hoarding and profiteering.

"MANY THINGS SENT here to be distributed free to persons in need are being sold instead," said Monsignor Abraham Gaitan Mahecha, director of the Bishop's vocational fund here, after touring the city Sunday.

"Business concerns are speculating in the prices of merchandise and hoarding articles of prime necessity," Gaitan Mahecha charged.

Looting was reported in the city during the weekend, and refugees, charging they were being forced to pay $11 for a tent, pounded on the doors of a Popayan police station Sunday to demand relief supplies.

A foul stench and swarms of mosquitoes settled over Popayan after rains Sunday turned the dust of the ruined city into mud. Water and power were still out of service.

MUCH OF THE mountain city was leveled by the earthquake with churches, museums, government buildings and an estimated 6,000 homes destroyed in 18 seconds. Officials say 250 people were killed, more than 1,200 injured and 100,000 left homeless by the quake.

Senator Victor Mosquera of Popayan warned the situation was getting out of control.

"The people are complaining because they are in anguish," Mosquera said. "The authorities have to be tolerant with such reactions produced by such misfortune."

Betancur, who toured the stricken city Sunday, said his cabinet reviewed plans to rebuild the 447-year-old city, located 225 miles southwest of Bogota in the Colombian Andes.

Popayan's Mayor Luis Guillermo Mosquera said it would cost between $100 million and $400 million to rebuild the city, whose now gutted colonial-era churches, monasteries, and museums were renowned in Colombia.

Thailand bombs Vietnamese troops

ARANYAPRATHET, Thailand (UPI) — Thai warplanes Monday bombed and strafed Vietnamese forces who seized a strip of Thai territory in their burgeoning offensive against Cambodian guerrillas.

The air strikes — a major escalation of the five-day-old conflict along the Thai-Cambodia border — came hours after the Vietnamese captured the headquarters of a Cambodian guerrilla group.

Monday's air strikes, which failed to dislodge the Vietnamese, marked the first time Thailand has deployed its modern U.S.-built F-5E's in combat. It was also the first time Thai warplanes were used along the border since a Vietnamese incursion into Thailand in June 1980.

AFTER RELENTLESS artillery and tank strikes, Vietnamese troops on the Cambodian side of the border overran the headquarters of the guerrilla group headed by Prince Norodom Sihanouk, the deposed Cambodian ruler.

Sihanouk is the nominal president of a U.N. recognized coalition "government" set up in "liberated" areas of Cambodia to spearhead a struggle against 180,000 occupying Vietnamese troops and the Vietnamese-installed government in Phnom Penh, the capital.

In Washington, the State Department said it is concerned about "the escalating level of violence" and "is consulting with the Thai government" on possible U.S. military assistance.

Thai military officers and Western relief workers said two U.S.-made Thai Air Force F-5E jet fighters bombed and strafed the Vietnamese positions near Phnom Phra, about 120 miles east of the Thai capital of Bangkok.

The Vietnamese responded with anti-aircraft and machine gunfire but failed to hit the planes, the sources said.

BY LATE MONDAY, about 150 Vietnamese troops were reported to be still holding the narrow patch of Thai territory less than one mile west of Phnom Chat, the Khmer Rouge stronghold in Cambodia overrun Thursday.

Shortly before the Thai air strikes, Vietnamese gunners sent rounds of artillery as deep as three miles into Thailand, hitting a school and a market, military sources said.

Western relief officials said 25,000 civilian residents of O-Smach crossed into Thailand to escape Monday's heavy fighting, raising the number of Cambodians who fled to Thailand since Thursday to 45,000.

Guerrillas seize Salvador towns

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (UPI) — Leftist guerrillas captured three strategic towns Monday near the provincial capital of San Vicente in all-night fighting, routing 125 soldiers in one, army officers said.

Military officials stationed in San Vicente, 25 miles east of San Salvador, said rebels late Sunday stormed the towns of Tepetitán, Verapaz and Guadalupe and took the towns in combat that went on all night.

The three towns are located on a narrow road 3 to 10 miles west of San Vicente, the officials said.

About 300 soldiers from the Fifth Infantry Brigade based in the city had been dispatched to drive off the guerrillas from the three hamlets, an officer said.

The towns hold strategic value because of their proximity to San Vicente, a city of 60,000, and the Pan American Highway, which lies just 2 miles north of Tepetitán.

Rebels have used Chichontepec volcano, which dominates the surrounding area, as a base of operations in the region for the past three years.

MILITARY OFFICIALS said they had no figures on casualties in the attacks, but 125 soldiers caught in the fighting were all based in Verapaz, located midway between the other two towns.

Telephone communications were cut off, they said.

One commander in San Vicente said he could confirm Verapaz remained in rebel hands late Monday morning, though he had no word on what was happening in Tepetitán or Guadalupe.

In other guerrilla action, officials at the Mujucja agrarian reform cooperative just north of San Salvador at Ayutuxtepeque said rebels destroyed several pieces of heavy farm equipment with a dozen bombs late Saturday.

Rebels also fired on installations of the state electricity company in Ayutuxtepeque with automatic weapons during the weekend, power company officials said.

Rebels toppled high voltage power transmission towers and blacked out the eastern 40 percent of the country late Sunday, power company officials said.

Government troops mounted a 2,000-man counteroffensive on rebel positions north of San Francisco Gotera, capital of Morazan province, 72 miles northeast of San Salvador, during the weekend.

On Monday communications to Gotera were cut and no information concerning the operation's progress was available.

CAC, senate disagree on funding

By Kristine Stemper
Staff Writer

Tom Palmer and Sharon McMulin were elected president and vice president of the UI Collegiate Associations Council by unanimous consent at the Monday night meeting.

The new executives, running in an uncontested election, will take over the office on May 15, after the terms of current President Karol Sole and vice president Ken Albrecht are completed.

"I appreciate their confidence in me," Palmer said after the meeting, "and I look forward to the next year. We want to see an active CAC."

Palmer and McMulin also hope to establish better rapport with the UI Student Senate. "I look forward to working with senate," Palmer said. "I want to have as much cooperation as possible."

But during the CAC meeting the flames flew because of a visit from senate President Tom Drew to discuss a possible compromise on funding the renovation of the Union.

"THE SENTIMENT of the senate is that we can not give money to the Union" renovation, Drew said. The senate is not against the project, he added, but would like to postpone it for one year in order to establish a faculty vitality fund or endowment fund for UI faculty.

During a joint meeting between the CAC and the senate a few months ago both agreed to give $1.62 out of each student's tuition per semester to the Union renovation and 10 cents of it to the vitality fund.

Since that time the senate re-voted to give the entire $1.72 per student to the vitality fund, and as a compromise, the CAC re-voted giving 40 cents to the vitality fund, 52 cents to the Union and 80 cents to the United Students of Iowa, a new student organization.

But Deb Beyer, CAC representative from the UI Associated of Nursing Students, said "the vitality fund isn't really in the realm of student activities." Giving the fund money from mandatory student fees would be a "token gesture" that may take money away from the funding of student groups and activities, suggesting student activities have more money than they need to function.

DREW SAID, "It is true that the money is a token gesture, obviously.

We could put the whole $1.72 into there (the fund) and it's still not going to raise any salaries."

But he suggested the senators may be unwilling to accept giving any money to the Union project.

Sole said, "I think you have just reached your answer; senate is not offering a compromise." Palmer added, "there has to be a compromise. You simply won't get that (zero funding for the Union) through this body."

Drew told CAC members he would lobby the senators before the April 11 joint meeting between the student governing bodies to work toward a compromise. The outcome of the meeting will be a recommendation to the state Board of Regents which will have the last say on how mandatory student fees should be spent.

Lindquist computer equipment is missing

By Jeff Eichenbaum
Staff Writer

David Thomas, a UI assistant professor, reported to UI Campus Security Monday that $1,400 in computer equipment is missing from Lindquist Center.

Between March 10 and 31, an Apple II computer keyboard, valued at $1,000 was stolen from Room 378 at Lindquist, according to campus security reports.

Thomas also reported that an Apple II Disc Drive was stolen from Room 229 at Lindquist between March 18 and 21. The Disc Drive is valued at $400.

Nancy Spalj, 14 Glendale Ct., reported to Iowa City police Monday that a $200 to $300 trumpet was taken from the Band Room at Southeast Junior High School sometime during spring break.

Milton Eichacker, 926 A Westhampton Village, Coralville, reported to police his black Ford was vandalized while the car was parked in the alley behind the Deadwood bar. The roof of the car was "deeply scratched" and the left side panel had been kicked. Damage was estimated at $200.

Jennifer Wimpey, 308 1/2 E. Burlington St., discovered her two "Royal Sound" stereo speakers were missing Monday morning from her yellow Fiat X-19. According to police reports, the speakers were unscrewed and removed sometime Sunday night.

The stereo speakers are valued at $200.

Tom Muller, 1350 Burry Dr., reported to police Monday morning that six shirts were taken from his car, which was parked in the "lot behind Seiferts downtown." The shirts are valued at $120.

A 14-year-old Vietnamese boy tried to start a fire at the Group Home, 524 Ronalds St., according to police. The boy, who is a resident at Group Home, left on a bicycle before police arrived.

me I would be a fool not to take the job. The only negative thing anyone could come up with was that the weather wasn't that great."

RAVELING SAID HE was contacted about the Iowa job six days ago (the day after Olson left for Arizona) by a former Iowa coach. He would not reveal who it was, but did say that it was neither Sharm Scheuerman nor Oregon State's Ralph Miller.

The 45-year-old Raveling received a bachelor's degree in Economics from Villanova and was once a marketing analyst for Sunoco. He was an assistant at Villanova and served for three years as an assistant at Maryland under Lefty Driesell.

cuit, Raveling has a reputation of being quite animated on the sideline, known even to go down on bended knee to plead his case with referees.

Raveling has a record of 167-136 in his 11 years at Washington State, going to the NCAA tournament twice in the last three years and finishing runner-up to UCLA in the Pacific Ten Conference, after being picked to finish fifth in a pre-season coaches poll. The Cougars finished at 23-7 overall this season and Raveling has been named the assistant coach for the 1984 Olympics under Knight.

APPARENTLY, RAVELING DID not make his final decision until late Monday afternoon. Earlier in the day, he told the Spokane Chronicle: "Yes, they (Washington State) asked me to stay, but it isn't a question of them wanting to match Iowa's offer. It's a question of whether I think it's best for me professionally."

Among the Hawkeyes, Steve Carfino was one of the few who had ever met Raveling. "He recruited me out of high school," Carfino said. "He seemed like a real nice guy."

After making the decision, which he called the toughest of his life, Raveling tried to explain, saying: "It's like driving a Volkswagen and winning a Cadillac. You don't trade back for the Volkswagen."

Divestiture

"Over the past number of years the university, when it is given stock in corporations in the U.S. which are involved in South Africa, takes part in shareholder resolutions directed toward the management of the company," said Randall Bezonson, UI vice president for finance.

In the belief more could be accomplished in confronting the South African abuse of human rights by withdrawing all investments, rather than through the shareholders' votes, Mann said, "We want to encourage companies to reexamine investments in South Africa. These are not stable investments. The whole country is subject to unrest."

He described the situation there as 4 million whites controlling 86 percent of the land area and denying 26 million blacks all personal freedom. "Soon that sleeping giant will arise and overthrow the minority government and those investments will be lost," Mann said.

RICHEY SAID THE ramifications of the bill for the regents institutions would be "more psychological than real."

He said the regents have not taken a specific position on the moral question of supporting the apartheid practices in South Africa.

Under the proposed restrictions, if stocks were given to the regents institutions, "we would have to dispose of those stocks pretty fast I suppose. I don't think it would preclude accepting the gift," Richey said.

The present policy at the UI is to hold or dispose of the South African investments "in terms of economic judgment," Bezonson said.

"If the company is not responsibly addressing human rights, it would not be prudent from our point of view to continue the investment," he said.

Brisben

him as the permanent director for the OPI.

"When Mr. Jensen was selected as the new director I decided that I had come to a crossroads in my life and that I should examine what I really wanted to do."

Brisben said although he applied for the director's post he has no hard feelings about not getting the job. "I would have liked to have the job but I am glad to know that I am the benchmark against what the other candidates were measured... I have no animosity at all."

In fact Brisben said one of the reasons he remained on the job for two years as associate director was to help Jensen become more comfortable with the position.

"THE REASON I took two years to make a move was a courtesy to him," Brisben said. "I wanted to make sure he was well established and things were running rather smoothly before I left."

Jensen said Brisben's decision to remain on the staff made his transition into the job much easier. "He was a tremendous help in helping me become acquainted with and learning the rudiments of the job."

Brisben has been responsible for handling a wide variety of duties at the UI, ranging from handling press releases and publicity for the UI to overseeing a number of publications and productions, including FYI, a weekly UI faculty and staff publication, and public service messages broadcast during televised UI athletic events.

He has also worked with OPI in "lobbying in the state legislature and a variety of other special events."

Brisben, who has worked at the UI since 1977, worked at the University of Chicago and Drake University prior to coming here. He received a bachelor of arts degree in English from UC and his master's degree from Drake. He has also worked at the Chicago Tribune.

UI rights panel mulls complaint over funding

The UI Human Rights Committee, a group designed to enforce UI policy on human rights, met in a closed session Monday to discuss a recent complaint, and candidates for the Philip G. Hubbard Human Rights Award.

The Students For Traditional American Freedoms have registered a complaint with the committee concerning the Student Senate's funding of their group.

David Curry, chair of the committee, said the complaint concerns "the level of funding that they received." The committee has not come up with a decision on the complaint and will meet only in closed session on the issue.

In addition, the committee members ranked 15 candidates are being considered for the Philip G. Hubbard award. Curry said they "made prioritization," but a final decision has not been reached on this issue.

Nowhere to hide

Very soon now, the name of former Iowa Coach Lute Olson will fade entirely from the pages of newspapers across the state. And oddly enough, Olson would probably be glad to hear that.

Over the last several seasons, as many members of the media know, Olson had become increasingly defensive, impatient and hard to deal with. Obviously, several reporters were more than aware of that fact, because just days after he left they unleashed their anti-Lute editorials. This was all fine and well although it probably would have had more meaning before he left.

But Olson never would have stood for anything negative. In a state with no professional sports franchises such as Iowa, Olson had the media firmly in his grasp. If he wanted to alienate one reporter for writing something he didn't like, he had the leverage to do it. And when it came right down to it, no one wanted to be alienated.

Olson created the monster that he fled. He enjoyed the control he held over the press, but not the negative consequences of being the center of its attention.

Olson said he and his family simply wanted to return to the West, and his wife, Bobbi, although claiming she still "loved Iowa," admitted on several occasions that the constant attention was beginning to get on her nerves. And one can't help but think back to when the Olsons first came to Iowa City. In 1980, Douglas S. Looney of Sports Illustrated wrote that no sooner had Bobbi and Lute stepped off the plane when Bobbi "took one glance at the scenery and whimpered 'Lute, write to me.'" Next stop was the Field House. "Bobbi was truly panicky and said 'Now, this isn't funny. Where do we really play?'"

So now, it's off to the sunny skies of Arizona for Lute and his family, off to Tucson where people may not be so enamored of Olson's charm. But if indeed the Arizona fans do catch on eventually, Lute may have to find a new job again. Either that or retire, because not even Tucson is big enough to hide in.

A fowl solution

Many Americans seem to view the "environment" as something distant and mysterious. When the environment falls apart — as it did, for example, at Love Canal — the tendency seems to view such disasters as something that only happens to the other guy. No other explanation seems possible for the apathy of a large segment of the American public towards environmental issues.

But the Reagan administration's lax attitude toward clean air, acid rain, and toxic dumping — an attitude that clearly emphasizes an immediate profit margin above long-range health concerns — must inevitably reach into every home.

Even, as it soon may, into many kitchens and dining rooms in the form of tainted meat. Whereas once upon a time meat inspectors had sufficient time to make the USDA seal of approval meaningful, now the Reagan administration is increasing their workload so extensively that more time may be spent stamping meat than inspecting it.

This unfortunate shift actually started during the Carter administration, when the rate poultry carcasses passed through an inspection line increased from 45 to 70 birds per minute. But when present proposals go into effect, the rate will increase an additional 50 percent to 105 per minute. Similar increases are being made in cattle inspection.

Meanwhile meat inspector openings are being left vacant in spite of a General Accounting Office study that cited understaffing as a major reason that violations such as dirty equipment and — ough — rodent infestation were found in one-fourth of the slaughterhouses inspected in 1981.

The administration's response to criticism has been swift and sure: a former regulation that chronic violators' names be made public has been abolished.

So the next chicken you eat may be more fowl than you suspect.

Loyal opposition

Johnson County has the reputation of being a liberal (read Democratic Party) stronghold. Any area such as Iowa City that contains a high concentration of college students and young professionals is bound to have a larger than average population of adherents to the Democratic Party philosophy.

The facts in Johnson County bear this out. The most recent figures for the county indicate the majority of voters are registered Democrats. Almost as many voters are registered with neither party, but election officials say traditionally most of these "no-party" voters end up voting mostly Democratic in this county.

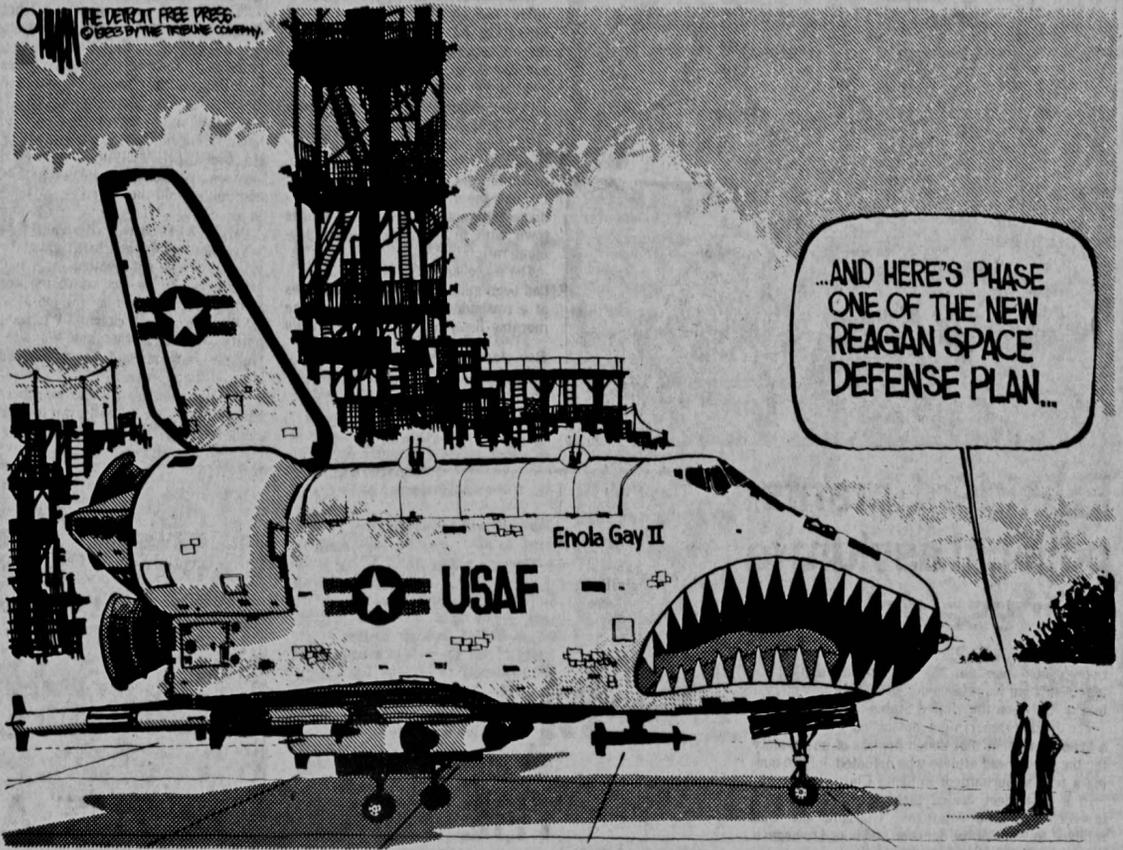

The share of voters registered Republican in this county is slightly more than 20 percent, a paltry figure compared to the Democrats' and independents' combined total of about 80 percent. The Republicans hold no seats on the Johnson County Board of Supervisors, and only two elective county positions.

Yet the local Republican Party is undaunted. Johnson County Republican Party Co-Chair Donald Johnson says being statistically outnumbered "means you have to strive harder." Leaders say enthusiasm in the party is stimulating greater voter involvement in the local GOP, and in elections in general. Last year, voting in the county for 3rd District Republican candidate Cooper Evans far outpaced the actual number of registered Republicans.

An enlightened electorate is our best hope for producing effective government. In our basically two-party political system, the "loyal opposition" is essential to provoking the voters' consideration of a wide range of contemporary issues.

The local Republican Party has stimulated interest and participation in the democratic process. It should be commended for the beachheads it has established in the always uphill battle against voter apathy.

Is racism poisoning politics?

Carl T. Rowan

RACISM IS, in many ways, like Legionnaire's Disease or heroin addiction: No one wants to believe that it can happen to them. But the affliction comes on so insidiously that it consumes the whole person, destroying reason even where vital self-interest is involved. For some, it is incurable short of death.

In Chicago, and to a lesser degree in Philadelphia, we are seeing how deep and toxic are the wellsprings of racism in American politics.

Imagine old people in the white redoubts of northwest Chicago booing their best friend in Congress, Rep. Claude Pepper, because he asked them to vote for another established friend of the aged, his colleague, Rep. Harold Washington, the Democratic nominee for mayor.

Who would believe that in these days of professions of love for Jesus and his teachings of justice, whites in this same area would virtually force Washington and former Vice President Walter Mondale to leave a Catholic church?

Senators John Glenn, Alan Cranston, Teddy Kennedy and other prominent Democrats have had to run a gauntlet of hostile whites as they have said to Chicagoans, in so many words: "Forget that Harold Washington is black. Look through his skin and see a Democrat who cares about babies having proper nutrition, husbands of middle-class families having jobs, aged people spending their twilight years in dignity, with adequate food, shelter, health care."

BUT THE GERMS of racism are lodged deep inside the craniums of a lot of Chicagoans who two months ago were calling the Republican candidate, Bernard Epton, "a joke," "a flake," but who are now in the streets shouting for Epton's election.

The poison of racism has so addled some brains that their owners no longer can think rationally about what is good for their city, their children, their party, their country. Dancing through their skulls, night and day, are the devilish words: "I don't want a nigger for mayor."

The tragedy in Chicago is that people educated and sophisticated enough not to listen to the devil — people who would take umbrage at any suggestion that they have caught the disease of racism — have an excuse for their behavior that some will find plausible.

"I would never vote for a man who went years without filing an income tax return," says one business executive.

"Washington once misused the money of his legal clients, and he's been in jail; I can't vote for him for mayor," says another citizen.

A lot of the people claiming that they will reject Washington for his past misdeeds would go out tomorrow, given the chance, and vote for Richard Nixon, the most disgraced of all our presidents.

PHILADELPHIA'S former mayor and prince of meanness, Frank L. Rizzo, must be turning snow-white with envy over the success Epton seems to be having in riding the issue of race in Chicago. Rizzo, who is contesting a black man, W. Wilson Goode, for the Democratic nomination for mayor, has tried all sorts of tricks to make race the dominant issue in Philadelphia. "I wish we both were Indians," Rizzo says heavily, trying to make race dominant while pretending he wants no race issue.

In desperation, Democratic candidate Rizzo endorsed Chicago Republican Epton — but on the grounds that electing Washington would be the equivalent of digging up old Chicago mobster Al Capone and making him mayor.

That comparison can only remind Philadelphia Democrats of what an inflammatory, destructively small-minded man Rizzo is.

This would be an idyllic society politically if we always got to choose among candidates who never have stumbled, let alone fallen, who have been forever wise and eternally moral, and whose halos attest to their purity. Unfortunately, politicians turn out to be people — people who cheat on their exams, taxes, wives, employees. People who cheat others in "insider" stock deals, or take campaign payoffs, or outright bribes. Some never get caught. Some get caught, confess and never pay a price. Some get caught even in minor wrongdoing and pay a heavy price.

The people of Chicago will have to pause sometime before their April 12 election and ask themselves: "Am I imposing a new standard on Harold Washington? Among all the politicians I have voted for, is he more or less honest, more or less able, more or less likely to serve this city well than they?" Those able to face up to this kind of comparison honestly will know whether or not that disease called racism has sneaked up on them.

Give him evidence

To the editor:

This is in response to Douglas Napier's guest opinion, "Is Resurrection a historical fact?" (DI, Feb. 24). I do not wish to dispute or attest to the occurrence of the resurrection but merely to criticize the lack of supporting factual evidence, which seems all too common in trying to prove the accuracy of the Bible and its recorded historical events.

Napier states (without reference) that Christ's body was wrapped in "approximately 100 pounds" of cloth and myrrh. In looking through the Bible I seem unable to find any indication of physical quantities (feet of cloth, volume or weight of myrrh) that could be used to arrive at this figure, not to mention "one and one half to two tons" for the weight of the tomb-closing stone. The article then says "probably four to 16" Roman guards were posted at the tomb's entrance. Was that a customary number for tomb-guarding?

Napier offers conjectures as to what certain groups of people would have done under hypothetical circumstances, trying to make them sound factual, once again without support.

Then he asserts that Luke "would have understood the human impossibility of reviving from the grave," and comment on his being a "first-rank historian" and "a physician." I won't debate any of this, but let's put it in context. I would bet you could have stumped Luke with concepts such as projection and biophysics. Was he familiar with Newtonian mechanics?

One more straw (this is the kicker): "Other evidence provided for the case for the resurrection is myriad. Great scholars have attested to its viability." Is this intended to wrap it up for me?

Once again, I do not wish to prove or disprove. I ask only to be treated as a person with some semblance of intelligence. Please don't tell me what to believe, simply give me the facts and/or their sources and let me decide for myself.

I would like to add that I will believe in the resurrection due to my Christian background until the time it is either proved or disproved scientifically.

I hope that I am not alone in doubting that Christianity will fall if the resurrection is proved false. It is a fragile concept that rests in balance on the basis of a single happening. Christianity is by no means a fragile concept.

'Evil' is as does

To the editor:

I agree with Derek Maurer that widespread ignorance of the theories of Karl Marx is not to be applauded, but this is no grounds for dismissing Marxism's opponents as narrow or fearful of "new ideas" (DI, March 16).

President Reagan's observations (though not Maurer's caricature of them) concerning the superpowers seem perfectly reasonable to me. He certainly understands their "political natures" better than anyone who thinks that the U.S. is the place to look for a "conspiracy of silence."

While Maurer apparently objects to the phrase "evil Soviet empire," "evil" strikes me as a suitable epithet for a regime that has, according to conservative estimates, murdered 21 million of its own citizens (which is 24 times the total American war losses since 1776). Where ignorant fear (as opposed to informed revulsion) of Marxism does exist, it is understandable. One need not know the theories of Marx to be familiar with the crimes that have been committed in his name, and the real or potential victims of those crimes may be forgiven for not caring whether Marx himself would have approved.

Frank Jaeckle

Deadlines

To the editor:

Ever since the Grateful Dead concert last summer, we've been hearing again and again that it was a "disaster." Now, Jeff Connor of the Student Committee On Programming and Entertainment tells us that "We could have lost just as much money with the Grateful Dead at the arena" (DI, March 15). Enough is enough.

First of all, I'd like to commend SCOPE for its public-spirited gesture. The August concert was one of the best I've been to. I was up in front, though, and from the evidence, I could hear what they were doing better than the band could.

Second, if you want to make money with a concert in a college town, don't hold it between semesters.

Third, if the Des Moines Civic Center Auditorium can fill up with deadheads at $15 a seat, it seems reasonable that a well-timed concert in Iowa City could do as well.

And finally, always remember to speak well of the Dead.

Jackson directs march for jobs

ANDERSON, Ind. (UPI) — The Rev. Jesse Jackson, national president of Operation PUSH, led thousands of marchers through the streets of Anderson Monday in a rally to protest record unemployment and commemorate the 15th anniversary of the assassination of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr.

Chanting "We want jobs," and singing "We Shall Overcome," the marchers slowly wound their way through the streets of the central Indiana community, a General Motors town with a 16.5 percent unemployment rate.

The marchers, mostly young blacks, had been gathering under cloudy skies at a westside park since early in the morning listening to a tape of King's speeches.

Rev. Jesse Jackson: "Babies don't cry black, hunger does not feel Hispanic, agony does not feel white."

"This time 15 years ago, the prophet of this nation, the prophet of the 20th century, Martin Luther King Jr., was crucified," Jackson told the group as they finished the three-mile walk and gathered in a downtown park.

"He was assassinated. He didn't die like a rabbit running, but faced reality. He faced evil and never bowed," Jackson, flanked by security guards and police, told the crowd.

"WE HAVE OUR civil rights, now we're fighting for our silver rights," he yelled. "We're not fighting for social generosity, we're not marching for welfare, we're marching for jobs."

"We don't want charity. We want parity. We don't want aid. We want trade," Jackson said as the crowd shouted its approval.

Jackson said he and the marchers had gathered "in a small town to send a big message."

"There is a lot of pain, there is massive unemployment," he said, adding the problem of unemployment has no color barriers.

"Babies don't cry black, hunger does not feel Hispanic, agony does not feel white," he said. "Color the problem need."

Jackson, who stopped short of declaring himself a presidential candidate in 1984, blasted President Reagan for wanting to "buy laser beams to fight a big Russian bear when we have babies dying of hunger."

"Don't starve us to fight the bear," he said as the crowd applauded.

When asked if he had aspirations toward the presidency, Jackson said he had not yet made that decision, but he called onto the speakers platform a man holding a sign saying "Jesse Jackson for President."

"MY NAME IS Walt Pearson of Noblesville and I'll be 71 years old soon," said the white supporter as he climbed up on the stage. "I've worked all my life and no white president has ever truly represented me and I think I might get represented if we had a black president."

Jackson was introduced to the crowd as the man chosen by King to "lead the fight" for blacks and other minorities.

"Dr. King knew we would need a leader like the Rev. Jesse Jackson," said Addie Wyatt, international vice president of the Food and Commercial Workers Union. "I know if that Dr. King were here today, he'd say to each and every one of you, 'My children, we have not overcome.'"

"I have had the opportunity to walk and talk and pray with Dr. Martin Luther King and I had no idea that in 1983 we would still be looking for jobs, justice and peace," Wyatt said.

Hundreds in the crowd of marchers were holding yellow signs calling for "jobs, justice and peace."

President grants political asylum to Chinese defector

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Reagan administration granted political asylum Monday to Chinese tennis star Hu Na, whose defection last July caused tension between the United States and China.

The Justice Department announced the decision in a brief statement that ended months of uncertainty for the 19-year-old athlete who defected July 20 during a tennis tournament in Santa Clara, Calif.

In a statement issued through her Washington lawyer, Terrence Adamson, Hu said she was relieved to learn of the decision and hoped to begin a "more normal life in this country."

Hu, who has been living with Chinese families in the San Francisco area, said she now hopes to learn English, seek an education and compete in amateur and collegiate tennis.

Her eight-month stay in the United States has created a strain in Washington's relations with Peking, which demanded her return.

THE STATE DEPARTMENT said the Chinese Embassy in Washington was notified of the decision to grant Hu asylum. "We won't speak about the Chinese reaction," a spokesman said.

A Chinese Foreign Ministry spokesman promised recently that if she returned to China, Hu would not be prosecuted and would be sent soon to play in a tournament in Switzerland.

"It has been a difficult eight months," Hu said in her statement. "Until two weeks ago, I chose to remain publicly silent and in seclusion because I did not wish to create any further complications for either government."

But she said she decided to discuss her reasons for defecting because of questions raised publicly by her "former government."

In a televised interview last week, Hu said she decided to defect because she was asked to join the Chinese Communist Party and feared getting involved in party faction battles.

"I felt that for my personal security I would want to stay in the United States," she said.

IN HER STATEMENT, Hu said her decision not to return to China was related to "special facts concerning me personally."

Her family also had appealed to her to return home in letters made public by the Chinese. One letter said her mother was in failing health.

"If my family in China can hear my words, I hope they know that I still love them and miss them dearly," she said. "No one in China knew that I would take the action I felt I had to take last July, and I hope they understand my personal agony in making such a choice to leave my homeland."

Justice Department spokesman Arthur Brill said the Immigration and Naturalization Service did not consider relations with the Chinese government in deciding to grant asylum to Hu. "It's not a factor to be considered under the present law," he said.

Brill said Hu was granted asylum under the Refugee Act of 1980, which provides for asylum in cases where an applicant shows a well-founded fear of persecution due to race, religion, nationality, political opinion or membership in a specific social group.

HU APPLIED FOR political asylum July 26 and the State Department recommended last year that it be granted.

But Commissioner Alan Nelson of the Immigration and Naturalization Service reportedly recommended against asylum because of fears that giving the young athlete asylum would create a precedent.

To date the government reportedly has granted asylum to fewer than a dozen of the more than 1,000 other Chinese citizens seeking to remain in the United States.

Last year's victory mark equaled as Iowa serves 7-2 loss to Irish

By Mike Condon
Staff Writer

Not even the luck of the Irish on an Easter Sunday in South Bend, Ind., could help Notre Dame's tennis team against Iowa. The Hawks posted their eighth victory of the season with a 7-2 win.

The win equaled Iowa's total output of victories for last season and gave the Hawks revenge against the Irish, who pasted Iowa by the same 7-2 score last season.

But last Friday, the Hawks weren't as fortunate as a strong Northwestern team was a 7-2 victor in the Big Ten opener for both squads.

Iowa men's tennis Coach Steve Houghton's pre-meet fear of the top of the Wildcat line-up was realized. Northwestern posted victories at the top four positions while the Hawks picked up their two wins at the No. 5 and No. 6 singles.

"I GUESS THIS meet could be called closer than the score indicated," Houghton said. "Both (Mike) Inman and (Rob) Moellering have been playing well at the top despite a lack of victories. They pushed their opponents over the weekend but came up a little short."

Again it was Iowa's balance that stopped Notre Dame. Although Inman and Moellering dropped their matches, the bottom four players came through with key victories. Houghton was most pleased with the play of his doubles combinations. All three teams dropped the first set of matches, only to rally back to post the wins.

"We played the doubles first against Notre Dame and I was encouraged by the way all the guys came back and adjusted after losing the first sets," Houghton said. "Our doubles teams didn't fare too well at Northwestern and to come back against Notre Dame was a good sign."

Wadkins picks up more than check in five-shot Greensboro Open win

GREENSBORO, N.C. (UPI) — Lanny Wadkins won the $400,000 Greater Greensboro Open Monday to pick up a $72,000 paycheck and a lot of momentum heading into this week's Masters tournament.

"Winning the Masters would mean an awful lot," said Wadkins, the former Wake Forest golfer who birdied five of the last nine holes to shoot a five-under-par 67 and win the rain-delayed GGO by five strokes over Craig Stadler and Denis Watson.

"In past years momentum has carried over," Wadkins said. "I do like the fast greens at Augusta. It's the kind of course that suits my game."

Wadkins began the day Monday in a three-way tie with Stadler and Watson and broke it open on the back nine of the 6,958-yard Forest Oaks Course to finish the tournament at 13-under-par 275 for his 11th career victory.

HE HAD A slim one-stroke advantage over Stadler and Watson at the turn and then turned on a birdie streak, picking up strokes on the 10th, 13th, 15th, 16th, and 17th holes. His birdie on the 15th came from 25 feet away; on the 16th he stroked it in from 30 feet, and on No. 17 he chipped in from 35

Wadkins, who posted rounds of 72, 69, 67, and 67 for 275, finished up the day with a bogey on the 18th when he missed a 12-footer for par. That was his only bogey in the final round.

Islanders not the favorite to dominate NHL playoffs

TORONTO (UPI) — The only sure thing in the first round of the Stanley Cup playoffs, which begin Tuesday night, will be a noticeable shortening of coaches' fingernails.

During the past three campaigns, the New York Islanders have dominated the NHL playoff derby. But this season there are at least four teams that should be considered strong contenders — Boston, Philadelphia, Edmonton and Chicago — and the memory of last year's first-round upsets has even the lower clubs optimistic.

Here is a capsule summary of the first-round showdowns that will take place when the best-of-five division semifinals get underway on eight different fronts:

Prince of Wales Conference

Adams Division

Quebec Nordiques vs. Boston Bruins
The Nordiques outlasted Boston in a seven-game division final in last year's playoffs, but will be hard-pressed to duplicate the feat beginning Tuesday night in Boston. The Bruins, as their record indicates, have been the league's most consistent club and their trademark is a tight, defensive style well suited to post-season competition. The Bruins held a 5-2-1 edge in the season series.

Buffalo Sabres vs. Montreal Canadiens
The question here, in the series which starts Wednesday night in Montreal, is whether Buffalo Coach Scotty Bowman's young team is ready for the pressures of playoff hockey. Bowman, the taskmaster during Montreal's glory years in the 1970s, has emphasized youth with the Sabres and the big payoff may be a few years away. Still, they have played well against the Canadiens, splitting the season series at 3-3-2.

Patrick Division
N.Y. Rangers vs. Philadelphia Flyers
The Flyers, beginning Tuesday night in Philadelphia, should gain a measure of revenge in this first-round rematch from last year. With Bobby Clarke displaying the form which saw him earn the Hart Trophy twice in a row in the 1970s, Philadelphia challenged Boston for first place overall for the bulk of the 1982-83 campaign.

Washington Capitals vs. N.Y. Islanders
Though the three-time defending champion Islanders have been erratic this season, they have been consistently tough on the Capitals. The Isles posted a 4-2-1 record against their first-round opposition and won the last three games in a row against Washington by a 21-6 margin. Most observers think center Bryan Trottier holds the key to the club's playoff success. For the Capitals, Wednesday night's first game in Uniondale, N.Y., will be the first taste of post-season competition in their history.

Clarence Campbell Conference

Norris Division

Toronto Maple Leafs vs. Minnesota North Stars
If the Leafs fared as well against the rest of the league as they have against the North Stars this year, they wouldn't have had to wait until the final week of the season to clinch a playoff berth. Toronto had five wins in eight games against Minnesota. The series starts Wednesday night in Bloomington, Minn.

St. Louis Blues vs. Chicago Black Hawks
Even the possibility of transfer to Saskatchewan hasn't spurred the Blues this season. St. Louis, in possession of third place for most of the campaign, was plagued by inconsistency and were eventually dropped a notch by the Leafs. The Black Hawks, who open at home Wednesday night, were the best club in the league in the early going.

Smythe Division

Winnipeg Jets vs. Edmonton Oilers

All season long the Oilers have had to answer queries about their upset loss at the hands of Los Angeles in the first round last year, and they are eagerly seeking vindication. Winnipeg was the most improved team in the league last season but has done little to enhance its reputation and nearly missed the playoffs. Four Edmonton players — Wayne Gretzky, Mark Messier, Glenn Anderson and Jari Kurri — broke the 40-goal barrier. The series begins Wednesday night in Edmonton, Alberta.

Vancouver Canucks vs. Calgary Flames
If Vancouver Coach Roger Neilson brings out a white towel for this year's playoffs, it may indeed signal surrender. Neilson, who did a magnificent job of coaching the Canucks to the Stanley Cup finals last year, found it difficult this year. The Flames had a 5-2-1 edge against Vancouver this year and have Lanny McDonald, with his 60-plus goals. The series begins Wednesday night in Calgary, Alberta.

Iowa Lacrosse Club battles to 1-2 mark in league tourney

By Jill Hokinson
Staff Writer

The Iowa Lacrosse Club competed in the first Big Ten Lacrosse Tournament at Northwestern University last weekend and finished with a record of 1-2. Iowa's two losses came on Saturday in two back-to-back games against Michigan and Northwestern.

Player/coach Chuck Spielman was pleased with Iowa's effort in the 8-7 loss to Michigan. "It was one of our best games," Spielman said. "We were in the game the whole way, they just had a couple of more umphs than we did. We played so well against Michigan that they are going to invite us up for a tournament next spring."

Ten minutes after the Michigan game, the Hawkeyes faced Northwestern and lost 9-4. Lack of endurance and a poor performance were the reason for the Iowa loss, Spielman said.

Iowa's offensive attack throughout the weekend consisted of Prescott Ellwood, Bill Morris and Jim Palmer. Palmer was also the leading scorer for the three games.

The biggest plus for Iowa in the tournament was the number of experienced players on the team. Many of the players have been playing as a unit for the last two years and know where everyone is going to be on the field, Spielman said.

The lacrosse clubs plays three home games this weekend: Friday, April 8, against Knox College, 7 p.m. at the Rec. Center Fields; Saturday, April 9, against Iowa State, 2 p.m. at the Field House field; and Sunday, April 10 against Lincoln Park, 1 p.m. at Kinnick Stadium. Iowa has beaten all three teams in the past.

Hawk notes

Football

Houston Oilers defensive back Vernon Perry Jr. faced possession of cocaine charges and three misdemeanors Monday stemming from an Easter weekend incident at his lounge, authorities said.

Perry, 29, a member of the Oilers since 1979, was released on bond totaling $5,676 following his arrest during the pre-dawn hours Sunday. Three other people also were arrested and released on bond.

OWNERS OF THE 12 U.S. Football League teams will meet this week in Chicago for a general review of the first five weeks of operation of the league's inaugural season.

Commissioner Chet Simmons said the group, which will begin meeting on Thursday, will also hear a report from the league's expansion committee. "We will discuss expansion plans," Simmons said, "as well as a number of other business and operational subjects which we had planned to review after the first quarter of our season."

THE MANUFACTURER of a helmet a Cranston, Rhode Island, high school football player was wearing when he broke his neck in a 1974 game asked the Rhode Island Supreme Court Monday to overturn a $3.5 million damage award.

The award to Kelly Fiske is believed to be by far the largest ever returned by a jury in Rhode Island. The justices did not immediately rule on the request.

In 1981, a Superior Court jury awarded the $3.5 million to Fiske on grounds that the helmet and face mask that MacGregor Manufacturing Co. produced were dangerously defective and caused the injury that left Fiske paralyzed from the chest down.

Boxing

Light heavyweight boxing champion Michael Spinks, saying he made a mistake he was "not proud of," pleaded guilty Monday to an illegal weapons charge and was fined $1,700 in a Philadelphia court. Under terms of a plea agreement, Spinks, 26, clad in a black tuxedo for his appearance in municipal court, received no prison sentence after pleading guilty to possession of a .45 caliber revolver without a license. "I made a mistake," Spinks said.

Potential seen in Weather Report LP

By Alex Wilding-White
Special to The Daily Iowan

THE SOUND of Weather Report's latest release, Procession, is the sound of a band in transition. With the departure of bassist Jaco Pastorius and drummer Peter Erskine, the band has had not only to regroup but reshape its musical persona. Indeed, the story seems to be whether or not there's life after Jaco.

Pastorius provided the perfect complement to Josef Zawinul's densely textured keyboard work and Wayne Shorter's lucid saxophone playing, as well as being a unique stylist and musician in his own right.

He possessed the rare ability to create a dynamic, distinct voice within the framework of the group's sound, besides being able to hold together the elements of that sound (itself an accomplishment for most bassists). And as co-producer for several of Weather Report's records, he helped to shape the group's music beyond his role as instrumentalist.

The sizable void Pastorius has left has not easily been filled. Zawinul and Shorter, the group's founders and primary musical voices, remain, but for all the inspired playing that the best tracks on Procession offer, the album sounds empty in places. This Weather

Records

Report seems like more of a backup band, separated from the heart and soul of the music, than the integrated whole it was with Pastorius steering.

IN TRYING TO overcome this loss, Zawinul and Shorter simply do what they do best — play. The title track begins with a slow, drawn out synthesizer line with a sitar-like drone to it, modulations and pitch bends coming on the off beats.

The song proceeds accordingly, with soft-spoken support from new percussionists Omar Hakim and Jose Rossy and sparsely placed bass couplets from Pastorius' replacement, Victor Bailey, until Shorter enters with a piercing, reverberated sax line. The tune slowly builds to a percussive crescendo; then, one by one, the various voices fade until the synthesizer drone, with one last pitch bend, sends it out with the grace Zawinul has always been noted for.

"Two Lines," like the title track, draws its distinct qualities mostly from Zawinul and Shorter. Over a fast, hard pop-style bass line and intricately interwoven percussion, the two construct a complex unison melody line,

What the album does accomplish is to present three new musicians of tremendous potential who have yet to adapt ...

again with the accents on the off beats. Zawinul then lays down dense, understated chords on electric piano while Shorter embarks on a solo using a wide variety of runs, trills and sound effects. Shorter's chops have steadily grown stronger over the years, and he now has the technique to match the style and range of feeling that have marked his playing for years.

NOT SURPRISINGLY, the most noteworthy track on the album is a straight duet between Zawinul and Shorter. A concert improvisation, "The Well" evokes an entrancing effect. Zawinul's layered synthesizer chordings and continuous have an almost orchestral timbre, and Shorter, who starts off the track with some Charlie Parker-like cries on soprano sax, exhibits superb strength of tone throughout.

But the rest of the album doesn't quite live up to the examples mentioned above. While they possess some interesting qualities, none of these tracks maintains any compositional coherency or substance.

"Plaza Real," for instance, mixes some nice turns on concertina and whistling with love ballad melodies reminiscent of singer Charles Aznavour. But the song is generally haphazard in its progression from one theme to the next and lacks a solid harmonic structure to organize its best qualities effectively, as is also the case with "Molasses Run."

"WHERE THE MOON GOES," though organized well, lacks the highlights needed to give the composition anything extra. The electronically treated voices of Manhattan Transfer added here intone uninspired lyrics about travel and do nothing to show off the Transfer's own substantial talent.

What Procession does accomplish is to present three new musicians of tremendous potential who have yet to adapt to Zawinul and Shorter's twelve-year collaboration. With time, Bailey, Hakim and Rossy will jell into a unit capable of contributing the range of expression their predecessors had. If these three stay with the group long enough, Procession may well come to be seen as a stepping stone to a new phase in Weather Report's creative career.

'Barnum' musical shows versatility of Broadway acting, choreography

By Lisa Norton
Special to The Daily Iowan

THE BROADWAY MUSICAL Barnum, which played at Hancher Auditorium last weekend, is a festival of song and dance.

Acrobats, plate balancers, tightrope walkers, trampoline artists, jugglers, clowns and dancers fill the stage from the moment the action begins. There are colors and lights, banners and confetti, costumes to make your eyes pop, something outrageous at every turn. It's the sort of production that P.T. Barnum, the man who believed in miracles and made them happen for people the world over, would have called a show worth seeing.

The play, which takes place between the years 1835 and 1880, is based on the life of Phineas Taylor Barnum, the man who sold the country amusements like General Tom Thumb and "the Swedish Nightingale," Jenny Lind.

The story covers Barnum's purchase of the "American Museum" in New York and stretches to his collaboration with James A. Bailey, with whom he created "The Greatest Show on Earth."

THERE ARE SCENES in which Barnum and his wife Chairy, a proper lady from Connecticut, disagree over his splashy way of living and her love of subtle, subdued life. But one thing they do agree on, as their song together says, is that "I Like Your Style." So they go on together, agreeing to disagree.

Theater

Barnum also presents glimpses of the women's suffrage movement: the appearance of Susan B. Anthony, Barnum's involvement with free-minded Jenny Lind, his campaign for the State Senate. But these are only glimpses, overshadowed by Barnum's greatest love — his desire to "excite the people, stir 'em up, give 'em a glimpse of the miracle." And this he does, over and over, proclaiming: "The colors of my life are reds and golds, sunsets and flames!"

The cast of Saturday night's show was a versatile crew, each playing a number of roles that included singing, dancing, juggling, tumbling, baton twirling and the like.

HARVEY EVANS, who played Barnum, was extraordinary filling the shoes of a singer, dancer, juggler, tightrope walker and clown. Evans had all the energy the role demanded: He can dance; he's mastered the circus skills; he's a dynamic performer. The only problem with his performance was his singing — he got the songs out, but there was nothing special to them.

Karen Trott's (Chairy Barnum) abilities as a singer, however, left nothing to be desired. Her voice was rich and smooth, and her diction was distinct — a pleasure considering that many lyrics slipped away without being understood throughout the evening. The fact that Trott took over the role after arriving here due to the illness of Susan Dawn Carson made her performance all the more remarkable.

POOR ENUNCIATION and sound system problems were the evening's two greatest downfalls. It's important to be able to hear a production, but not to the point at which one's ears buzz from the high decibel level. I wasn't sure if the overpowering sound was part of an effort to recreate the Big Top atmosphere or if the sound technicians just wanted to be sure all the "old geezers" in the balcony got the message. Whatever the reason, it didn't work.

What's more, all these grand efforts to make the words heard were almost useless. Song after song passed without a word being audible. If a person can't understand what's happening onstage, there's little reason to listen. And if one isn't going to listen, there's even less reason to be there.

Still, Barnum was a success despite these problems. Every tune was a pleasure (even if you couldn't understand the words), and the choreography was beautifully festive. The final scene appropriately presented a carnival of glitter and pageantry, as Barnum, a man with dreams, sometimes outlandish ones, who still wanted to show the world his vision, reminds the audience: "There's a sucker born every minute — and I'm the biggest one of all!"

Brawn, macho men resolve nothing amid chase scenes in 'Macon's Run'

By Richard Panek
Staff Writer

IN EDDIE MACON'S RUN, John Schneider and Kirk Douglas star as macho men of different generations. This chase film, now at the Englert, finds the one note that defines each character, then hits it again and again.

The musical metaphor is apt: Both Schneider, as escaped convict Eddie Macon, and Douglas, as the cop who hunts him across Texas, take their character cues from the movie's soundtrack.

Schneider, who stars in TV's "The Dukes of Hazzard," plays Eddie Macon, a macho man for the younger generation. Three times during the movie he sings: "I made a vow to spend my life/To live and love and to care for you/They took me away from my child and wife/For something I did not even do."

Douglas' Carl Marzack is a cop of near psychopathic proportions. The moment he walks on screen, a saxophone and upright bass begin to play, evoking memories of movie tough guys from the 1940s and 1950s.

JEFF KANEW'S direction and script reinforce those simplistic character differences. Macon is tough, sure, but only because life is tough. Marzack, however, is tough because he likes life that way.

As Macon, Schneider jogs and dreams he can fly and leads a sing-a-long with his wife and his son. He's mostly emoter, with just enough brawn to keep him from becoming a caricature.

"If I can't be with you and Bobby," he says to his wife on visiting day at the prison, "I'd just rather not be at all."

As Marzack, Douglas grits his teeth, squints his eyes and does push-ups. He's mostly brawn, with just enough brain to keep him from becoming a caricature.

"Balls spelled backwards," he says in triumph, "is desperation." When Schneider and Douglas finally, inevitably face each other, the moment fizzles. The movie degenerates into a routine car chase, which might satisfy fans of "Dukes," but which for anyone else should seem a cop out.

The ending resolves nothing — neither the characters and their opposite approaches to life, nor the stars and their different styles of acting.

festival continues to unreal, we get to look at both the influences on and the work of the great German director.

In the former category is tonight's Made in U.S.A., a 1966 film by Jean-Luc Godard, who in both content and style offered Fassbinder a wealth of resources from which to draw. This Godard mind bender presents the French director's usual fascination with American film noir and Marxist polemic, with Anna Karina starring as a woman trapped in a maze populated by characters including "Richard Widmark," "Robert McNamara" and "Richard Nixon." 7 p.m.

• Made in U.S.A. led directly to Fassbinder's own The American Soldier, an allegory in which film noir gangsterism and American policy in Vietnam are equated. Fassbinder made the film with his "anti-theater" group, which included Hanna Schygulla, the future star of Marriage of Maria Braun. 8:45 p.m.

Television

The Cold War is back, and CBS has it! Tonight, those ace secret agents we knew and loved so well in the 1960s, Napoleon Solo and Illya Kuryakin, come out of retirement to do battle with the evil minions of THRUSH in "The Return of the Man from U.N.C.L.E." 8 p.m.

Seems that THRUSH is about to blow up the world unless Solo (Robert Vaughn) delivers $350 million to them in three days. But Solo's a boozed-out Vegas sucker now, and partner Kuryakin (David McCallum) is off photographing high-fashion models. Never mind — give them a couple of boss new laser gats, and they're on for the night. Co-starring Patrick Macnee (as the new Mr. Waverly), Gayle Hunnicutt, Keenan Wynn and George Lazenby as James Bond. 8 p.m., KGAN-2; WHBF-4.

• After all the carnage from that battle, you've got to have doctors, and ABC brings us four new medics in a series called "Ryan's Four," which is on opposite: Four interns, chosen properly for demographics, learn about love, lust, life and death on the job in an urban medical center. Tom Skerritt stars as their mentor, a Ryan with no uncertain amount of hope. 8:30 p.m., KCRG-9.

• And on "St. Elsewhere": Cardiologist Craig (William Daniels) shows a little heart himself tonight, as he falls for an attractive surgeon; Chandler (Denzel Washington) is charged with malpractice as his patient dies on the elevator; Morrison's (David Morse) new patient is checking out his insurance policy by drinking himself to death. 9 p.m., KWVL-7.

Oscar ballots

The Night of 1000 Stars is only six days away now, and Fluffy the Wonder Sheep is biting his hooves wondering who's going to walk away with the awards — and with the Di's huge $85 prize package in our Oscar contest. Ballots have to be in by 5 p.m. next Monday; the winner will be announced next Wednesday.

If you want to play the current favorites, you should go with Gandhi, Kingsley, Streep, Gossett, Lange and Attenborough. But if you want the real winners, you'll have to wait until Monday, when the Di's Fearsome Foursome of Film (Craig Wyrick, Richard Panek, Roxanne T. Mueller, Tom Doherty) and resident prognosticator Rex the Greek go on the line. Rex sez: You might be better off on your own.

Art

Two new student displays are being featured this week in the Art Building. David Reed's "Constructions/Topographies" is being exhibited through Saturday at the Eve Dreweilow Gallery; while Barbara Bilyeu's "Vessels" is being shown in the Checkered Space. Admission to both is free.
