Stroll in space is set for today

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — Today's spacewalk from the shuttle Challenger the first for America in nine years - is a key rehearsal for next year's daring attempt to put a crippled sun-watching satellite back in business.

Eager to perform the 31/2-hour space jaunt with mission specialist Donald Peterson, astronaut Story Musgrave completed early checks of a spare suit and began a full spacesuit checkout several hours ahead of schedule Wednesday.

"Everything on that (backup) suit looks good," said Flight Director Randy Stone.

The astronauts hope to avoid the spacesuit failures that prevented astronauts Joe Allen and Bill Lenoir from performing the first shuttle spacewalk during the fifth mission in Novem-

On that flight, a tiny magnetic sensor in the fan motor of Allen's $2 million suit failed and a regulator malfunctioned in

SPACE agency investigators blamed both problems on contractors' mistakes, but officials said extensive corrections were made and preflight testing was doubled to prevent a repeat of the spacesuit troubles.

The third spacesuit upper section was installed on board the Challenger just in case.

The two spacewalkers plan to tether themselves to the edge of the 60-foot-long cargo bay of the Challenger, stroll up and down the bay and perform simple tasks at a work station to see how well the suits function.

Stone said there is a chance Musgrave and Peterson will drift over the rear of the Challenger to inspect some torn insulation on the edge of the shuttle's twin maneuvering engine covers.

The shuttle spacewalk is a key prelude to the 13th shuttle mission scheduled for April 1984, in which astronauts will walk in space to rescue the failing $75 million Solar Maximum Satellite.

THE 21/2-TON satellite began wobbling in orbit five months after it was launched on Valentine's Day 1980. The satellite, designed to gather information about solar flares and other activity on the sun, lost four of its seven instruments because a fuse burned out.

"It was originally orbiting about 310 miles out and now it's down to about a 270-mile orbit," said NASA spokesman James Elliott.

Musgrave was instrumental in the development of the spacesuit and the spacewalk program -"extravehicular activity" in space agency jargon.

"I know every thread, every joint, every fan, every bearing,' Musgrave said in an earlier interview. "I'm intuitively confident it is going to happen and that counts for something."

The last American spacewalk was conducted from the Skylab space station Feb. 3, 1974.

City is angry over transit funding

By Mark Leonard

In Texas, politicians think big and lobby hard. Some of that lobbying might cost the Iowa City/Coralville area 10 buses because of a shift in federal funds.

One project up for funding consideration is Houston's $1.6 billion, 18-mile rapid rail system, which is projected to be operational by 1987. In addition, Houston authorities hope to quadruple their fleet of 430 buses in the next 10 to

'How they can even go and ask for something like this boggles the mind," Councilor John Balmer said Wednesday. "It's incredible."

In a recent memo to the 'city, Transportation Planner John Lundell said the regional office of the Urban Mass Transportation Administration has informed him no more funds will be available for the Iowa City area.

IOWA CITY OFFICIALS had hoped money would be available in President Reagan's budget for six new buses. Also, Coralville and Cambus were in line to receive two each as part of a federal government picking up 75 percent of the tab.

Then came the news of the federal priorities shift.

"I cannot tell you how mad that makes me," Mayor Mary Neuhauser said at Monday's council meeting. "It makes me furious. We've gotten a bad deal from this whole thing.'

Balmer said the situation is serious for the city. "It's always been a source of real irritation for me that small efficient systems like we have get the short end of the stick.

"We really need to have those vehi-

"I guess power talks and big cities talk," he said. "We have to continually fight this '

LUNDELL SAID Wednesday, however, Iowa City should not give up hope quite yet. "They're warning us, but I'm confident UMPTA will look out for us and come through.' Iowa City's project is the first or second priority in UMPTA's Midwest submit its application in June as plan-

"Then if any additional funds 'trickle down' our project will be ready to move ahead," he said.

One of the reasons Iowa City might lose its money, Lundell said, is that Congress wrote language into the bill which earmarked funds for specific projects like the one in Houston.

Councilor John McDonald said the loss of funds would cast a cloudy future on transportation in Iowa City. "Obviously if it comes to pass, it would

Regent says faculty pay raise not likely

UI faculty and non-organized staff salary increases may become another casualty of the state's sorry economic outlook, if Gov. Terry Branstad ignores recommendations made by the state Board of Regents.

Board President S.J. Brownlee said he is not optimistic about the chance for salary increases for regent employees after hearing the governor's suggestion that state employee wages freeze for the first year of the bien-

"We feel regents staff members need those adjustments. However, the recent decline in state revenues makes us realize the governor is in a very difficult spot," he said.

The regents suggested a 2.5 percent increase in merit adjustments and fringe benefits plus an unstated hike comparable to that given elementary and secondary public school teachers during the first year of this biennium, Brownlee said Wednesday.

He said an additional 7 percent increase was requested for the second year of the biennium. "Those (increases) we thought reflected what was suggested to us by the university presidents and constituent organizations of faculty and staff members."

THE REGENTS WILL pass these salary need assessments on to Branstad, who is expected to deliver his own recommendations to the legislature soon, according to Mary Jo Small, UI assistant vice president for

Brownlee met with employee representatives from the three state universities in March to hear why they were convinced salary increases were Senate's Legislative Relations Committee, said the absence of an increase would be "demoralizing to the

She said she didn't know what the governor would recommend but hopes he will keep in mind the raises occurring in teacher salaries in grades kindergarten through 12.

"We're all a part of the same statesupported school system," Burke said, stressing the denial of equal benefits to post-secondary educators puts them in a "frustrating situation."

UI STAFF COUNCIL President Howard Mayer echoed the worry that a rejection of the regents requests would

He said, "It is important for the university to be able to provide raises on a regular basis.'

The institutional vitality fund, a regent budget priority that now faces tough opposition in the Iowa Legislature, would be used to keep faculty salaries competitive in the marketplace. Mayer said this fund takes on a new importance when raises are in question.

If Branstad proposes more funding for salaries of UI faculty and staff members, it is then up to the legislature to amend and approve the salary bill.

But Small said this could go down until the last days of this legislative

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Interior Secretary James Watt, setting off controversy in the top ranks of the Reagan administration, Wednesday banned rock music from groups such as the Beach Boys from Washington's annual July 4 celebration. The Interior Department announced

Las Vegas entertainer Wayne Newton instead will be the star attraction at this year's celebration on the Mall that traditionally attracts hundreds of thousands of fans.

Before coming to the UI as an assistant professor in the School of Journalism and Mass Communications. Carolyn Dyer spearheaded her own researching campaign to seek the costs of freedom of the press in the United States.

While a newspaper reporter in Wisconsin, Dyer studied two underground newspapers. While she studied the Madison area newspapers she became "aware of them being treated differently than ordinary daily agencies, she said.

She compiled evidence of cases in which police officers harassed people newspaper workers in the area did not expect to receive the same treatment.

Dyer gave an example of a University of Wisconsin rule that prohibited the solicitation of goods without an authorized license. "The people hawking underground newspapers were present U.S. Supreme Court as antikicked off (campus) or arrested and the ones with the dailies were not."

THE LEGAL and Ethical Issues in Communication teacher defined freedom of the press as the right to publish without governmental approval and to circulate without a license. She newspapers' by law enforcement also added the media should have the right to criticize the government.

In the Soviet Union, Dyer pointed out, the media knows its limitations involved in underground newspapers. and the government will not have to

It became evident to her that daily censor if the press does not exceed its limits

> A "general assumption" exists in the Soviet Union as to what is appropriate and what is not, she said. According to Dyer, present-day journalists and news media consider the press. She said the court is "restrictive" toward the press.

One example of the Supreme Court exhibiting this attitude is a ruling that excludes the press and public from some pre-trial hearings.

Another example of the anti-press attitude is the issue of whether a complainant in a libel case can ask the defendant how a story was put together. Dyer said this is a "new restriction getting into the mind of CONCERNING THE credibility of The Daily Iowan, Dyer said its peers might consider it a "little bit less than an ordinary daily newspaper." She said this is because people know it is compiled and put out by students.

'The reverse of that is people tend to believe particular things in it — so you can't win either way," Dyer said.

Service fraternity regroups

A student group that fell extinct in the turmoil of the 1970s is attempting to make a recovery on the UI campus. Alpha Phi Omega, a national service fraternity founded on the ideals of Boy Scouting, was established at the UI in the mid-1930s. Leaders of the group are now seeking faculty and staff members to serve as advisers as the group recharters its Omicron chapter.

According to David Airy, leader of the fraternity, the group is required by its national headquarters to have three advisers affiliated with the UI. "It is the goal of the new Omicron chapter to go beyond their suggested number of advisers and try to involve as many people as possible," Airy told the UI Faculty Council Tuesday.

'The purpose of the group is to assemble college students in a national service fraternity in the fellowship of the principles of the Boy Scouts of America as embodied in its Scout Oath and Law, to develop leadership, promote friendship, provide service to humanity; and to further the freedom that is our national, educational and intellectual heritage," the group's Alpha Phi Omega is presently active on more than 350 campuses with a membership of 160,000 people.

Officials unsure of city funds

The new jobs bill passed by Congress and approved by President Reagan has local authorities wondering if any of that money will drift down to Iowa

'That's what we'd like to know." City Manager Neal Berlin said Although Berlin is still hopeful that Iowa City will get some money, he said, "It doesn't look like any quantities of money necessary for the sewer treatment plant will be available.'

But the way the federal government operates, you can never tell. Terry Mikelsen, press secretary for Rep. Copper Evans, R-Iowa, said his office 'still hasn't gotten any word yet where the money is going Mikelson added that he expects Evans' office to be flooded with such information from various federal departments within the next couple of weeks.

Acting head of pharmacology named

While a nationwide hunt is being conducted to find a replacement for J. P. Long, former head of the College of Medicine, Gerald Gebhart has assumed the position of acting departmental head.

Gebhart, now a UI pharmacology professor, said it is hard to follow Long, who has been "an outstanding leader of the department for over 10 vears.

Gebhart is not a newcomer to the Iowa City campus. He earned his M.A. and Ph.D. from the UI and joined the UI College of Medicine faculty in 1973. Though he said. "I hope this appointment will not significantly affect my research and instruction activities," Gebhart acknowledged, "I'm gratified and pleased the dean asked me to do this.

Video group hypes activities

Student Video Producers provide the opportunity - you make the experience. "We need people," said Tim Webb, SVP executive director, to help out with the many new projects underway.

This month the group will be covering Riverfest, which includes such events as the air guitar contest, and videotaping the Iowa Shakespeare Festival plays. "Since only being a year old, we've come a long way," Webb said.

But the student commission needs help from interested people in order to make their projects more successful. Talent is needed in art, graphics, public relations, portable recording and office management. SVP member Dave Gebhard tried to use some of the office's luxuries to tempt more people to join the group. We have our own Mr. Coffee ... we like to show it off. Here's our Christmas tree that we haven't taken down yet," he said while producing a well-filled coat rack from the corner of the office. "We have two clocks that don't work, (and) could you mention that we're all out of scotch tape?" To top it off, Webb challenges any other student group to play SVP members in the Riverfest softball tournament. "We will take any of them on, play better than any of them and

Macbride renovation continues

Construction is under way in the second of a three-phase project to renovate Macbride Hall. George Schrimper, UI director of the Museum of Natural History, said Wednesday.

Schrimper said the project consists of "reallocations of space" and involves the Anthropology and Home Economics Departments, and the Museum of Natural History.

Construction is presently taking place in the Home Economics Department, which is receiving a new food laboratory, Schrimper said.

The third phase in construction will involve the museum. Schrimper said it will receive 6,000 square feet on the second floor for the new Iowa Hall

Taped information available over phone

Students who have questions about some aspect of the UI have a new source to check with just one phone call in the new Campus Information Center's Taped Information Service.

The service is a free information and referral source that offers a collection of pre-recorded messages with current information on "topics of widespread

Mary Burmeister, project coordinator, described the service as a 'phenomenon that has been developed in the past couple of years across the

She said it is a necessary service at the UI because "we see it as making information available to the UI population beyond 8 to 5 office hours It almost doubles the time frame in which this information is available to everyone.

The system will be watched carefully throughout the rest of the year, evaluated, and updated next fall, Burmeister said.

Experts: U.S. leftists lack base

American political culture virtually assures that leftist political parties' dreams of one day enjoying significant support will remain just that dreams, according to two UI

The United States has no tradition of embracing socialistic values, said Allen Megill, UI associate professor of history. Rather, traditional American political philosophy is rooted in the concept of liberal individualism that emerged during the 18th century.

That philosophy has become entrenched over the years because many large social groups were never forced economic success has proven that the American way is the best way, Megill

Societal conditions that have led to the emergence of strong socialist movements in other countries throughout the world, never really existed in the United States, said Jae-On Kim, professor of sociology.

CLASSISM, ONE of the foundations upon which Marxist thought is based, has never really existed in America, Kim said. The openness of the political system has also blunted any impetus toward adopting socialism, because Americans believe that the nation's to resort to revolution because they could not vote.

Most of the ideas leftist parties had to offer that the public liked, such as the establishment of a social security system, were simply enacted by the Republican and Democratic parties. In doing so, the two main parties stole the socialists' thunder, said Jim Schwab, founder of the Citizen's Party of Iowa.

Schwab, who describes his party as being "left of center," said the electoral system in the United States is biased against minor parties.

Parties are awarded seats in government according to whether they win the election, not by the percentage of the vote they receive, as in many

Schwab said, is that third parties "are stymied by the political system."

LEFTIST PARTIES tend to be their own worst enemies though, Schwab said. They narrow their voter base by trying to be ideologically "pure," and often are centered around personalities rather than issues, such as Teddy Roosevelt's "Bull Moose" Party in 1912 and George Wallace's American

The net result is neither Kim or Schwab would advise people to hold their breath waiting for the emergence of a strong leftist party.

The conference is an annual event in which the scholars hear and discuss a variety of papers and participate in a series of small seminars that bring together specialists in various fields, according to Alan Spritzer, UI professor of history.

FACULTY MEMBERS of the host institution are usually elected officers organization's president. UI professor of history Ralph Giesey will serve as vice president.

The conference will include two luncheons, a banquet, a buffet reception featuring scenes from French opera presented by the UI School of Music, and a special film presentation.

In adddition, a special display of French Works of Art on Paper from the UI Museum Collection will be on display in the Carver Gallery in the Museum of Art during the event.

Francois Furet, president of the Ecole des Hautes Etudes en Sciences Sociales, will speak Friday. Mona Ouzouf, also from the institution, will speak Saturday afternoon.

Registration and meal tickets are available at the Center for Conferences and Institutes. They can also be obtained at the Union Friday.

Writing in Red Star, Kulikov warned the planned deployment of 572 U.S. Pershing-2 and cruise missiles in Europe would "undermine international stability and encourage still more the aggressive aspirations of the Military court trial begins for Polish union activists

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) - Nine members of the Solidarity underground accused of trying to organize a factory workers' revolt against martial law went on trial Wednesday before a military court.

No details of the charges against the eight men and one woman were available. But Solidarity sources said the case was the latest in a series of setbacks that has rocked the underground leadership of the banned trade union.

The sources reported Solidarity activists were finding it increasingly difficult to continue their clandestine activities, organize protests and distribute information bulletins.

Solidarity's former national leader, Lech Walesa, was unavailable for comment on the latest developments affecting the union underground. A spokesman said Walesa was waiting for authorities in Gdansk to assign him a job at the Lenin Shipyard, where Solidarity was born in August 1980.

THE WARSAW MILITARY court where the nine members of the Solidarity Inter-Factory Workers' Committee were on trial was sealed off by police and closed to Western reporters. Court spokesmen said only that proceedings had begun and would resume

Official Polish news media said the defendants were members of a much larger group that tried to organize workers at 63 factories in the Warsaw area to boycott the new state-controlled unions and rise up against the military regime.

Zolnierz Wolnosci, the military newspaper, said the group in custody — the nine people on trial, plus 12 others awaiting court action - was led by Zbigniew Bujak, the fugitive former leader of Solidarity's Warsaw branch.

"Bujak and the other leaders of the temporary (underground) leadership have come to the conclusion now that their appeal to the workers not to join the new unions was an error," one Solidarity source

"They could have had their own people in the new unions. Now it is too late to reverse their position."

SINCE ENTERING into operation Jan. 1, the new state-organized unions so far have enrolled about 1.2 million members.

The government hopes they will replace the independent Solidarity union, which grew to include about 10 million members before Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski banned it and declared martial law Dec.

13, 1981. Martial law was relaxed last December, but since then the authorities have stepped up their attempts to wipe out remnants of the Solidarity underground carrying out a series of highly publicized arrests of former union members.

The Warsaw newspaper Express Wieczorny Wednesday emphasized the Solidarity connections of four men arrested for blackmarket sales of automobiles.

Chicago mayoral race consultants squabble

CHICAGO (UPI) - Media consultants shaping the campaigns of black Democrat Harold Washington and white Republican Bernard Epton traded barbs Wednesday.

John Deardourff, Epton's nationally known media powerhouse, gave a screening of Epton's upcoming radio and television commercials for the news media

After four of the TV commercials had been screened, Bill Zimmerman, media consultant for Washington, stood up after being unnoticed in the crowd and charged Deardourff with running "the most racist campaign" he could remember.

"I think what you've done is a disgrace," Zimmerman said. "You've run one of the most racist campaigns since (Alabama Gov. George C.) Wallace ran in 1968. It's been irresponsible, considering the racial tensions in this

"dead wrong," then leveled charges of his own, saying Washington's camp "has made an effort to focus the campaign on race.'

Councilor Larry Lynch said the city must begin to look at alternatives. "We're going to have to either reduce service or come up with those funds or we're going to be short.

"It's getting to be kind of frustrating because we've come so far," he said. Councilor David Perret said he blamed Reagan for targeting some of the 5-cent-a-gallon gas tax for mass transportation and then diverting those funds to large cities, and especially

League of Women Voters will examine weapons issue

By Ho Wah Foon

The Johnson County League of Women Voters will take its first step toward a complete review of nuclear weapons in a meeting tonight on arms control and national security.

The meeting at Trinity Episcopal Church initiates the group's consideration of a resolution to study the nuclear weapons issue. The resolution was endorsed at the national convention of all the leagues in the United States last year.

'This is the beginning of our study and it could take two years," league President Naomi Novick said Wednesday

She said that after the league studies and debates arms control and nuclear weapons it will present its findings, based on a consensus of opinions from its members, to its headquarters in Washington, D.C.. The national body will then lobby its position to

THE ISSUE IS being addressed by this nonpartisan civic group, which seeks to examine public issues at all levels, because "almost every day we hear or read about national security in one way or

Issues the local league members will discuss are: what level of importance the U.S. government should give to each listed objective of arms control negotiations to reduce the risk of war; which types of negotiations are most appropriate for achieving each objective; and what criteria should be used to evaluate arms control proposals, negotiations and

League treasurer Gina McGee said this issue deals with the way public money is being spent and is therefore of concern to the group. "Although we are non-partisan, we are an informed citizen group concerned about public policy.' BECAUSE OF THE league's serious attitude in studying issues from all angles, and then acting on them, it has earned the respect of all political parties, Novick said. The impartial image the league has built up through years of championing the public's cause has enabled it to organize forums for candidates of differing political affiliations in the belief the public can then better decide for whom they would vote.

Although it started off in 1920 as an offshoot of a women's organization to fight for the voting rights of women, the league no longer champions women's issues exclusively. Informing and educating the public is the group's primary concern.

With local elections coming this fall, the group will push for voter registration and sponsor meetings and debates as a means to show "all sides of election issues." McGee said.

"We will keep people who are eligible to vote informed. We will also tell them to use their votes wisely," she added.

IN THE PAST, the league has studied the budget for city schools, city plans and renewal programs and has made recommendations based on 'relatively neutral review.'

We provide a public forum for issues we support," Novick said.

The league has been successful in many of its undertakings locally. For example, it helped convince the Iowa City Council to build a new library two

But at the state and national levels their work can be more difficult. The national League of Women Voters failed to sway legislators to enact the Equal Rights Amendments at both the national and state levels. The amendment would prohibit discrimination on the basis of sex.

Despite the setback, Novick said, "Work on the amendments continues. We will not give up."

One hand gives ...

UI officials and the state Board of Regents are again being forced to answer the question, how do you plan your budget when the state may at any time take back part of what it's given you?

This happened three years ago and it is happening again this year. A shortfall of about $70 million in the state's revenues means the board must revert $6.3 million, or about 2 percent, of its allocated budget. The UI's portion of that will be $2.5 million. Actually the regents' institutions are getting off easy — the overall reduction in the state's budget is about 4.7 percent. Moreover, the UI has been prepared for this eventuality since last September, when former Gov. Robert Ray negotioated the possible reduction. Nevertheless, the fact that institutions must be prepared to render back unto Ceasar what Ceasar has already rendered unto them plays hell with planning even a status quo budget, let alone one that would allow for expansion and improvement.

Whether the state can be said to be at fault for this situation is debatable. For while it might be argued that the state comptroller's office made overly-optimistic revenue projections, the partisan nature of such criticism is obvious. Would a comptroller's office under a Democratic governor have made more "realistic" estimates? Weather forecasts seem more reliable than long-term economic predictions, and it is doubtful that a Republican administration would consciously have saddled itself with erroneous revenue projections on which to base the state budget.

In any case, the shortfall is there, and the sluggishness of the state's economy may mean expectations for revenues in the coming year will also have to be lowered. With next year's regents' budget already being described as "very conservative," and with prospects for the desperately-needed faculty vitality fund poor, further reversions to the state treasury could seriously cripple the UI's ability to maintain its educational standards.

It is one thing for the regents' institutions to have to plan for an inadequate budget, but it is unconscionable to disrupt them further with the threat of more reversions. Gov. Branstad, his administration and the Iowa Legislature must be prepared to guarantee the integrity of the regents' budget in the future, even if it means raising taxes.

Principle reigns

Sports played such an important role in developing closer ties between the United States and China after years of mutual distrust and hostility that the term "ping pong diplomacy" was coined to describe early negotiations between the two superpowers. Athletic and cultural exchanges became a symbol of the new friendship created by President Nixon's historic trip to China.

Recently, though, that friendship has taken a backward turn and a sports-related event now promises to increase recently renewed tensions.

After a considerable wait, Chinese tennis star Hu Na has been granted political asylum in the United States. Her defection last July was international news; her status as a major sports hero made that defection particularly embarrassing to China's Communist Party leadership.

The Chinese accused the United States of coercing Hu's decision and asked repeatedly that she be returned. While that possibility was never considered at the State Department, consideration was given to allowing Hu to remain in the United States under some legal grounds other than political amnesty, which carries with it the implication that an individual faces a substantiated danger from the government of his or her homeland.

For Hu Na, that danger clearly existed. Having refused to join the Communist Party, she received a letter from a top party official calling for her to "improve on your political outlook and commit yourself to a deeper socialistic attitude" and to "support" party leadership. The tone of the letter was threatening. Subsequently, on the trip to a tennis tournament in California, she was berated by her coach for refusing to be a proper "model" for the party. The Bureau of East Asian Affairs at the State Department argued that granting Hu asylum could jeopardize U.S.-Chinese relations. Certainly the decision will lead to a sharp cutback in sports and cultural exchanges.

But the decision to grant Hu amnesty reflects favorably on the assumption that principle should take precedence over politics. It is to be hoped that the State Department will continue this stance and grant asylum to all individuals who meet the legal requirements, rather than basing its decisions haphazardly on the state of current U.S. relations with their home countries, whether allies or foes.

EPA—just the tip of the iceberg

OR MANY, scandal and nousecleaning at the Environmental Protection Agency might seem enough to set an administration listing dangerously toward business interests back on an even keel

Any number of "Sons of EPA" sequels, however, may soon be released, exposing trails of conflict and malfeasance as unconscionable as those at the traumatized agency. One can only wonder if the Democrats are waiting for a "smoking shredder" or a telltale appointments calendar before screening other horror stories.

So far, the heat has been on William D. Ruckelshaus to convince everyone that past ties with Weyerhauser Co., for whom he recently served as general counsel, won't influence his stewardship of the EPA. The Weyerhauser connection deserves the scrutiny that it's receiving: Despite Ruckelshaus' record of integrity as inaugural EPA administrator and onetime deputy attorney general, his former employer is a major polluter in an industry widely subject to federal environmental law. The Anne Burford era at EPA proved, if nothing else, that such connections cannot be ignored in a pro-business administration.

UNFORTUNATELY, Ruckelshaus'

Take the Occupational Health and Safety Administration, for example. Its chief, Thorne G. Auchter, a Florida construction company scion and former Reagan campaign soldier, has overseen one of the more thorough counterrevolutions to date. According to a study released Monday by nine national environmental organizations, Aucher's OSHA has ignored both recommendations and evidence for tighter rules on benzene, asbestos and other carcinogens; it has also cut proposed fines by 70 percent and the number of workers protected under OSHA standards by half.

Perhaps not so surprising to Sewergate addicts, OSHA policy now requires that proposed federal safety tandards be submitted to industry for comment (John W. Hernandez, a New Mexico sewage specialist, resigned as acting EPA administrator March 25 partly as a result of a controversy over his extending the same privilege to Dow Chemical Co.). As Rep. David Obey, D-Wis., told the House recently, 'It is the same pattern of bias in the area of working health that EPA has demonstrated in the area of public

FOR MINERS, Obey's words ring with a deeper resonance, Reagan's man at the Mine Health and Safety Administration, Ford Barney Ford, once told subordinates shortly after a major mining accident, "We are servants of the people who supported us." To wit, he has cut back inspections and proposed that manufacturers of minin equipment be allowed to certify the safety of their own products - this despite a 14 percent increase in mining deaths between 1980 and 1981.

Meanwhile, back on the environmental front, U.S. Forest Service chief John Crowell seems a shoo-in to take the Rita Lavelle Memorial Prize. According to the environmental coalition, an Alaska sawmill owned by Crowell's former employer, a major wood products firm, was recently allowed to buy timber from the government at a

It's imprecise to label such cases as manifestations of a Reagan-style "corporate-government partership." It's better to call them collusive, and dangerous to think them anomalous.

Said the Wilderness Society's executive director, William A. Turnage, We are witnessing the destruction or diminution of (environmental agencies), the undermining of the integrity of the career civil service, the subversion of the legitimate budget process, the wholesale disregard of the law and the public trust."

WHEN AND HOW the Democrats (and surely some Republicans) will respond to this pattern is uncertain. So far, Obey is one of the few to treat another agency with the scrutiny ac-Auchter's appointments records, if only to demonstrate OSHA's business

For now, however, lawmakers choose to see only the tip of the iceberg. If they take a closer look soon, they'll find that other agencies have become the neutralized, compromised and demoralized outfit that is Reagan's

Ul Press deserves public praise

By Dean Rathje

INCE THE beginning of this school year, I have been privileged to sit on the University of Iowa Press Editorial Review Board, I say privileged, although the duty has been somewhat tedious, especially for one not used to long meetings and the assiduous application of the intelligence to a practical situation. A university press is a strange combination of ideals and finances. On one hand, it is responsible to the Graduate College, which supplies part of its funding, and has to account for the money it spends. On the other hand it is responsible to its imprint, which states that it will publish "significant scholarly and creative work" (the creative part having been added at a later date.)

For those of you who are not aware that the University of Iowa Press exists, or are ignorant of what it does, I must inform you that it is a little tugboat in the world of publishing. The bigger university presses in this country publish 40 or 50 titles a year. We publish only four or five. (You must excuse the "we" - I worked there for a year as editorial assistant and general 'go-fer" and cannot help but think of myself as a part of it, albeit a little part.) Our backlist is not as impressive as some, either, but we are alive, and university publishing arm. President that's what counts.

BUT GREAT CHANGES are underway. John Simmons - founder and director, and a gentleman in every sense of the word — is planning to retire in the next few years, as is Shirley Boyce, the sales and promotion manager. Art Pflughaupt, the erudite and personable editor, is also advancing in years. Since these three are the only permanent staff members, it is obvious that some changes will have to

Fortunately, there is considerable interest in retaining a press on this campus. UI vice president for educational development and research D.C. Spriestersbach has been quite generous with the press and has acted as a sort of godfather to it. The Editorial Review Board members, from the various academic departments (forgive me if I do not have space to mention them all by name) have worked diligently, early and late, to make some sort of provision for the continued existence and growth of our

James O. Freedman, bringing university publishing experience from Pennsylvania, has shared his wisdom and insight with the Review Board.

To the end of investigating possible avenues for expansion, we invited the director of the Indiana University Press, John Gallman, to speak to us earlier this year. Gallman, an energetic entrepreneur and outspoken publisher, gave us some idea of what would be required by way of personnel, financial support, and publishing strategy in order for us to grow from a small, dependent university press into a medium-sized, independent one.

THE CURRENT OPINION, if I discern correctly, seems to be that we should place increased emphasis upon acquisitions, increase our output by four or five times over a reasonable period of five years or so, phase in a new and larger staff, and possibly let out our fulfillment duties to a professional distributor. All of these changes have been carefully considered, yet nothing definite has been proposed as yet.

The Review Board, which normally meets only several times a year to approve or disapprove requests for publication and subvention, has been meeting every several weeks, in both open and executive sessions, to discuss the proposed changes. It should be said to the board's credit that good sense and good will have predominated over rancor and bickering.

Now we stand at a crossroads. If the University of Iowa Press is to take a leap up in size, it will require financial support in excess of what it is now receiving. However, after the initial period of expansion, it should begin to operate roughly on a break-even basis. If the tentative plans become crystallized, there will be a nationwide search for new personnel, especially an acquisitions editor. There should also be an increased emphasis on rapport between the UI faculty and the Press - something which, to my mind, has been notably lacking these past years.

THIS IS NOT to blame, however. John Simmons has made the Press his life, and it is to his credit that he has kept it going all these years. Credit goes also to Norman Sage, former managing editor and another gentleman of the highest order. Art and Shirley and the support staff have also been tireless in their efforts to make this a good, even excellent, press.

Let us hope that, as the years pass, we find ourselves, as members of the university community and of the state of Iowa, still possessed of a University of Iowa Press of which we can be

Shabby treatment

To the editor: Whatever happened to the institution of a controlled and open forum? My concern stems from the Phyllis Schlafly incident and the verbal abuse she received during her speaking engagement on campus. Although I am not in agreement with her views I do believe that those who attended had the right to hear her out and judge for themselves the validity of her argument. This basic right, however, was violated, in extreme bad taste, I might add, by groups of hecklers chanting and threatening Schlafly.

Displays of this type of rudeness only accomplish negative results. In the future, speakers will refuse to schedule appearances here, thus depriving this academic community of the chance to develop their own opinions. It also resulted in publicly humiliating many ERA backers, who were embarrassed by the tactless and crude manner in which a minority of their association conducted themselves. As both citizens and students we have an obligation to respect the freedom of others to speak, even when in disagreement with their views. To me, it seems ironic that a group that professes to promote equal rights would violate such a basic right as this.

Officials repeat: Atomic tests had negligible effect

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Veterans Administration and Pentagon officials reiterated Wednesday that nuclear test blasts and the military occupation of atomic-bombed Japanese cities had negligible health effects on servicemen.

Veterans groups disputed the claim before the Senate Veterans Affairs Committee and pressed their efforts to win monetary claims and better medical treatment from the VA.

An estimated 220,000 GIs were present at the 235 nuclear tests from 1945-1962 and in Hiroshima and Nagasaki after U.S. atomic bombs destroyed the Japanese cities.

Statistically, only 11 among the 220,000 could be expected to die from cancer as a result of the minimal radiation they were exposed to, said Lt. Gen. Harry Griffith, head of the Defense Nuclear Agency.

HE SAID PRELIMINARY indications of a National Academy of Sciences study show "the incidence of mortality by cause is no different than that experienced by the general population," meaning that no more than the expected number of cancer deaths occurred than would have in a similar population sample.

Almost all the servicemen's exposure in Japan was less than allowed under current federal guidelines for people who work with nuclear materials.

An agency fact sheet published two years ago on the 25th anniversary of the Japanese blasts said, "All distinguished"... groups of scientists whose views are regarded as authoritative in the field ... agree that the health risk from a dose such as this is negligible — so small statistically that it cannot be expressed in meaningful terms."

The only statistical variation, he said, was the identification of four leukemia cases more than normal among troops who were at the Nevada test sites.

DR. D. EARL BROWN, the VA's deputy chief medical director, said his agency has allowed 29 out of more than 2,000 disability or death claims.

He said because there is no scientific evidence of increased likelihood of birth defects among exposed veterans, legislation to award claims on that basis "would lend an unwarranted appearance that a scientific link is soon to be established and quite possibly would increase the anxiety of parents and parents-to-be."

John Smitherman, the wheelchair-bound president of the National Association of Atomic Veterans, said, "We are being condemned to illness and slow, painful death" by the VA and the Defense Nuclear Agency's resistance to their claims.

Smitherman did not appear as scheduled because of a new medical problem requiring his hospitalization and issued a written statement.

"The inevitable conclusion many atomic veterans have drawn, after years of neglect, misdiagnosis, poor treatment ... and callous stonewalling, is that a government-approved suppression of the facts about the nuclear weapons tests of the Cold War era and its human consequences has been passed from administration to administration," he said.

AUGUSTA, Ga. (UPI) - Two titans of the tour, both hungering to snap out of slumps, and an itty-bitty guy with a big game will be feeling more pressure than most when the annual rite of spring known as the Masters begins Thurs-

For all their past glories, Tom Wat-son and Jack Nicklaus are very much aware that the column under wins remains blank for 1983. Indeed, it's hard for them to forget when they are constantly being queried about their shortcomings

Each has played in only six tournaments this year, and both have four finishes in the top 10. But while Nicklaus claimed the runner-up spot in the Inverrary, Watson's best has been a tie for fifth in the Andy Williams.

IN THEIR EXALTED positions, however, they measure their success on the major championship scale, and in that regard their real seasons begin at Augusta, where Nicklaus holds the record with five titles, the first coming in 1963, and Watson has won twice.

"You can say I'm in a slump if you want," Watson said. "We all have swing problems from time to time and I'm having some problems. But I'm feeling a lot better about my game

"I'll be right in there again. I'm not as concerned about my game as I was a couple of weeks ago. I really wasn't playing that well going into the TPC but I had two good rounds there, and the third round was the best I've played

NICKLAUS, WHO AS is his custom came to Augusta National last week for three days of practice, also says he feels comfortable with his game and he also points to the third round of the Tournament Players Championship two weeks ago, when he shot a 68 for the best score of anyone in the round.

"I've been working very hard on my game," Nicklaus said. "I've been pointing toward the majors, and I feel I'm playing well enough to win. I certainly feel I should be considered among the favorites."

The "little" guy in the Masters pic-ture is Tom Kite, who has a remarkable reputation for falling just short of greatness. His record of consistency at Augusta is as good as anyone's over the last seven years, but he has yet to come away with the winner's Green Jacket. During that span, Kite has finished among the top six all but once, tying for fifth place last year

"THERE HAVE BEEN a number of times I could have won, but just didn't," said the 5-foot-8, 155-pound Texan, winner of the Vardon Trophy for low stroke average the last two years. "If I play well, I can still beat them. I'm not the wimp some people seem to think I am. I hit the ball 255 to 260 yards. I'm not a cripple.

Still, the par-72, 7,040-yard Augusta National is known to favor the long hitters, a typical example being Craig Stadler, last year's winner following a playoff with another big blaster, Dan Pohl. Stadler says his current game is just about on a par with this time last year and that his confidence level jumped considerably after tying for second in last weekend's Greater Greensboro

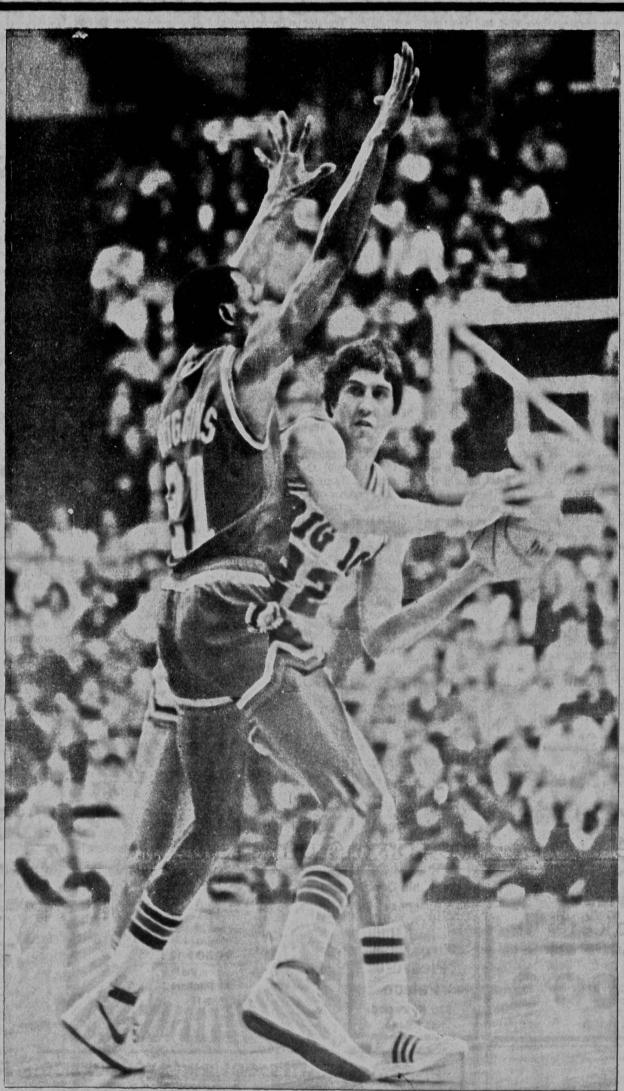

"THERE'S SOMETHING about this golf course that makes me concentrate better and swing well," Stadler said. "I've been hitting the ball a lot better the last couple of weeks and I like my chances here.

Interestingly, Nicklaus in 1966 was the only man ever to make a successful defense of the Masters since the tournament was started in 1934.

"I couldn't tell you any rhyme or reason for it," Stadler said.

Indiana's Randy Wittman is hounded by Florida State's Ten All-Stars, 109-88, thanks in part to the 13-point effort Mitchell Wiggins during the Super Shoot-Out II in Cedar of UCLA's Darren Daye, although eight players finished in Rapids, Wednesday night. The USA All-Stars beat the Big double figures.

By Steve Batterson

CEDAR RAPIDS - With eight players in double figures, a balanced scoring attack led the USA All-Stars to a 109-88 win over the Big Ten's best in the Super Shoot-Out II, Wednesday.

The capacity crowd at the Five Seasons Center knew the game was over when USA coach Billy Packer turned over the helm to new Iowa Coach George Raveling, saying: "I don't want him to lose a game in the state of Iowa. I'm going down and help (Big Ten Coach) Al McGuire. He needs all the help he can get.'

IT WAS RAVELING, who received the biggest reception of the evening. Following a standing ovation, Indiana Coach Bobby Knight, serving as a television commentator, took to the public address system to praise the new Hawkeye mentor.

"You people are welcoming one of the class acts of basketball to the University of Iowa," Knight said. "I'm damn glad Iowa has a coach I'm going to be able to talk to occasionally.'

Raveling told the partisan crowd after a brief statement: "Let's get on with making Hawkeye basketball No. 1 in the nation.

Eleven unanswered points midway through the second half led the USA team to the win, but it was Tennessee's Dale Ellis, scoring 11 points, who was named USA team's Most Valuable

"I'M GLAD TO play someone from outside the SEC," Ellis said. "The play in the Big Ten is a little physical and the officials tend to let them play." UCLA's Darren Daye led the USA team in scoring with 13 points. Ohio State's ageless Granville Waiters, who tied for top scoring honors with Iowa's Bob Hansen, was named the Big Ten MVP. Both players scored 14 points

But the name of the game was fun. Indiana's Ted Kitchel, who missed the last part of the season with a back injury, served as an honorary captain of the Big Ten team and was allowed to attempt two free throws in the second half, making one of two.

"Coach McGuire did his best to get me in," Kitchel said. "But after I stretched out on the first one, I was off-guards and no point guards, so I had able to make the second."

THREE-POINT GOALS kept the Big Ten team in the game during the first half, especially a string of three in a row — two by Indiana's Randy Wittman and one by Ohio State's Larry Huggins - midway through the half.

Iowa's Hansen scored the first three points of the game on a basket and a free throw with 19:32 remaining. But the sharpshooting of the USA squad built up a lead that reached as much as 10 points early in the half.

Following the game, the coaches remained in a festive mood. Packer, standing on a chair, told members of the media: "I've played McGuire four times and I'm three and one, except I'm not going to tell you whose got the

"I STILL THINK he got me last year by sandbagging players," Packer said in reference to the 89-85 Big Ten win last year.

Stringer is ready to awake 'sleeping giant'

Newly appointed lowa women's basketball Coach Vivian Stringer plans to bring in four or five recruits this year and called preps in the state "underrated."

By Thomas W. Jargo

When C. Vivian Stringer, the new Iowa women's basketball coach, made her initial visit to the UI campus, she envisioned the Carver-Hawkeye Sports Arena full of screaming fans for games. That's quite a vision because Stringer inherits a sinking program, which won only two Big Ten games and finished 7-20 last year.

But speaking at the first-ever, fullfledged press conference for an Iowa women's athletic coach Wednesday morning, an optimistic Stringer said Iowa is a "sleeping giant" and the only way to a successful program is through pride and commitment.

"We hope to bring (the program) to the levels of national prominence in women's athletics, and certainly on parity with the men's program," Stringer said. "I've always been one to accept a challenge.

STRINGER REPLACES Judy McMullen, who resigned Feb. 3 after four years at the helm of the Hawkeyes. She comes to Iowa after spending the past 11 years as head coach at Cheyney State College in Pennsylvania.

"If you get the impression that I'm a little short on breath, it's because I'm really anxious to get started here at the university," she said. "I can't tell you how much I appreciate the opportunity to expose the talents here at the univer-

Stringer was given the standard oneyear contract, but Iowa Athletic Director Christine Grant has given her the option to make it a multi-year pact. She will receive a base salary of $35,000 yearly, with $20,000 in bonuses from sports camps and personal ap-

STRINGER IS THE third winningest Division 1 coach, compiling a career record of 251-51 at Cheyney State. She has taken her team to four-straight post-season tournaments, including second place in the first-ever NCAA Women's Basketball Championship in 1982. The Lady Wolves went 27-3 this past season, losing in the finals of the East Regional of the NCAA tourney to Penn State.

Stringer sees similarities between the current Iowa program and the one she started at Cheyney State.

"When I first went to Cheyney State, we were a dormant team," she said. "But in a short time, we were able to bring our team to a level of pride and commitment where those athletes understand that we are working together. I would like to bring that same type of philosophy here. One of teaching the learned behavior of winning, because I believe that winning is a learned behavior.

"IT'S BEEN MY impression that there has been somewhat of a negativism here," Stringer said. "So I want to establish a sense of pride in the university and in our athletic program. I want it done in such a manner that coaches throughout the country and high school levels will always want to recognize the university here and what benefits we do for our students.

"I would really like to see the rest of the nation being envious of what the university has to offer. I think you're going to find very positive results, but the grass roots and the ground roots have to be established at the beginning."

Stringer said she has received full support from Iowa Athletic Director Christine Grant and UI President James O. Freedman to set the "grass roots" for a successful program. "I want a feeling of team unity," she said.

'We've got to operate as a family. We've got to have a common goal and certainly the commitment of the university and administration. I've got that commitment."

STRINGER IS A defensivelyoriented coach. Her Cheyney State squad was ranked No. 1 nationally in defense throughout most of last season. Stringer's teams have tried to give fans exciting, but very disciplined, basketball.

"I think you'll find a lot of teams have a great deal of talent, but we're going to find out that those who understand one particular philosophy and one direction are going to be those who come out on top most often. We're going to understand our roles and play for

Stringer has talked to McMullen about the recruiting needs for the Hawkeyes next year. Iowa will attempt to sign four recruits and possibly a fifth. Stringer played the Iowa high school style of six-player basketball for two years and said preps in this state are "underrated" by many coaches.

"SOME COACHES ARE positionplayer coaches," she said. "That is, they recruit according to position. I'm a coach who selects an athlete and believes that I can actually have her play any position. It will be my chance to find the best scholar/athletes."

Grant presented Stringer with ablack blazer in "recognition of excellence and signifying her official welcome to the Iowa family."

"With the impending move to the arena, I predict that we are going to see women's athletics moving into a new era," Grant said. "Helping us to establish this new era is our new basketball coach."

Four Hawks chase gym honors

By Steve Batterson Assistant Sports Editor

The four Iowa gymnasts who qualified for the NCAA Championships are in University Park, Pa., awaiting their chance at becoming All-

Iowa Coach Tom Dunn said all four gymnasts have a good chance of making the finals of the national meet at Penn State which gets underway Friday.

"They are all capable of hitting a 9.69.7 score and that should get them in the finals," Dunn said. "It's a little harder to go as an individual than it is with a team behind you, but I'm sure all of our guys will do well."

MAKING HIS SECOND consecutive trip to the NCAA meet is pommel horse specialist Joe Leo. "I'm really confident," he said. "I've got the ability and all I've got to do is go out and show it."

Leo just missed qualifying for the finals last year, finishing in 14th place with a 9.5 score. "Joe did a real good job last year," Dunn said. "He nailed his routine so I really can't expect him to do any more this year."

The junior from Elmhurst, Ill., will be joined on the pommel horse by teammate Bob Leverence. "My goal this year has been just to throw my sets to the best of my ability," he said. "I really didn't set any goal to make it to nationals. I really don't have any goals as far as placement."

DUNN SAID FRESHMAN Stu Breitenstine, who qualified in the floor exercise, may have the best shot at becoming Iowa's first All-American

"I don't think his event is quite as competitive as the others," Dunn said. "There are lots of guys who can score a 9.8 on the horizontal bar or pommel horse, but on floor exercise there aren't as many.

It won't be Breitenstine's first trip to the national meet though. 'I went in 1975 when it was at Temple," he said. "I know it's a situation where you just don't know what is going to happen. I think I've got a good chance of making the top six if I do my best."

The fourth Hawkeye to qualify is senior Steve Troester on the horizontal bar. A Waterloo native, Dunn said Troester has been a bit of a surprise this season. "He has a good routine, but it's probably not as complicated as some of the other guys," Dunn said. "It's just that he does it so well that he was able to get a bunch of good

TROESTER IS A co-owner of the school record in the event, posting a 9.8 in a meet at Michigan in February. "It was one of my goals, but I don't know whether I expected it or not," Troester said. "It's a good way to close out my college career and I hope I do well."

The individual qualifying round is scheduled for Friday night, with the finals slated for Saturday evening at Penn State.

Shortage of power, but lowa is winner

By Jill Hokinson

The inclement weather that has canceled several softball games in recent weeks even affected the Iowa Hawkeyes inside the UNI Dome, Tuesday.

Due to a power shortage, apparently caused by a snow storm in Cedar Falls, the ninth inning of the first game of a scheduled double-header between Iowa and Northern Iowa was delayed about 30 minutes. When play resumed, the Hawkeyes' Alice Darland scored in the 10th inning, giving Iowa a 2-1 victory.

The second game between the two teams was canceled because of the earlier delay.

THE GAME WAS scoreless until the top of the ninth inning when Iowa outfielder Linda Barnes hit a double with two outs. She scored on Lisa Nicola's single, giving the Hawks a 1-0 lead. Iowa's Christine Tomek popped up for the third out, ending the scoring.

In the bottom of the ninth, the Panthers had the opportunity to win the game. With one out, Laurel Magee doubled followed by Marla Peterson's single. Hawkeye hurler Diane Reynolds then struck out Linda Stone for the second out. but walked Jane Wagner, loading Penny Seidel, up next for the Panthers, had a 2-1 count when the lights went out. According to Iowa Coach Ginny Parrish, the Dome was completely dark. "You couldn't see a thing, and we were only two pitches away from winning the game," Parrish said.

When play resumed, Seidel ripped a single scoring Magee. But Peterson was thrown out at the plate by Tomek to end the threat.

First baseman Cherie Anderson led off for the 10th inning for the Hawks with a single. Parrish substituted Darland for Anderson and she reached second on a sacrifice by catcher Melanie Ruth.

Then with two outs, number nine batter Liz Ryan singled up the middle to score Darland, giving Iowa a 2-1 lead.

Reynolds retired three straight Northern Iowa batters, all on outfield flies, securing the win.

'For having not played a game in a couple of weeks, we played ex-tremely well," Parrish said. "It was an excellent ball game just like out of the book."

ACCORDING TO Parrish. Reynolds, who bolstered her record to 4-1, pitched a superb game. Reynolds struck out eight and allowed only one walk.

Parrish was pleased with her teams hitting, adding that some of the players had been in a "dry spell" including Ryan, who hit in the winning run

"UNI had a real good team and knew the Dome like the back of their hand," Ryan said. "We knew that the only way to beat them was to play errorless ball."

And the Hawks did just that, committing no errors. The Panthers were also flawless in the

The difference between a fourth and a seventh seed is on the line for the Iowa women's tennis team this weekend as Coach Cathy Ballard's Hawks travel to Minnesota on Friday and then go on to Madison, Wis, to tangle with Wisconsin on Saturday.

These matches are very big for our Big Ten seedings," Ballard said. "We have played very even with Minnesota and Wisconsin in the past and the results of these matches could be the difference in a first or second division seeding."

But if Iowa is to bring back two wins, it will be without the services of Rachel McClelland and Peggy Kubitz. McClelland is still suffering from the effects of tennis elbow while Kubitz is under a student teaching commitment that will make it impossible for her to travel with the team this weekend.

Cubs lose in home opener; only 4,802 show at Wrigley

CHICAGO (UPI) — It appears Steve Rogers and Al Oliver, who dominated the National League in several statistical categories last year, have picked up where they left off."

Rogers, last year's ERA champion, hurled a sixhitter as the Montreal Expos shut out the Chicago Cubs, 3-0, Wednesday in the season opener for both

A crowd of only 4,802 turned out for the home opener after Tuesday's game was rained out. Oliver, who led the league in hitting and shared the RBI crown with Atlanta's Dale Murphy, provided the offensive spark with two homers and all three RBI in going three-for-three.

"SURE, I BELIEVE the momentum can carry over from last year," said Oliver, whose two-run shot in the seventh broke up a scoreless tie. "I had a very good spring and although I don't think this club will need my power with the other guys in the lineup, I think I can provide it when it is needed."

Oliver added a solo homer in the ninth inning. Rogers, who won 19 games last year, struck out six and walked only one in going the distance and duplicating last year's opening shutout victory.

'Actually, I felt a little awkward out there at first," said Rogers, who notched his 33rd career shutout. "I felt like it was my first start in 10 years. They hit some hard but they were right at people with men on base.

The victory marked a successful Montreal debut for manager Bill Virdon, who succeeded Jim Fanning at the Expos' helm.

"THERE REALLY wasn't much to manage," Vir-

Ferguson Jenkins permitted only two hits entering the seventh before Andre Dawson led off with a triple. Oliver followed with his first homer.

"I tried to get Oliver to hit the ball on the ground but he hit a good curveball and it kept on going,"

Rogers allowed only one Cub to reach third, when Jenkins doubled in the fifth and advanced on an infield out by Mel Hall.

A's 5, Indians 3

Shortly after driving his car into a telephone pole, Mike Norris drove the Cleveland Indians crazy.

The brakes on Norris' sports car locked en route to the Oakland Coliseum and, given the choice of going over an embankment or hitting a telephone pole, the pitcher opted for the pole, totally wrecking the car.

BY THE TIME he reached the park, Norris said he was ready to take his turn as the A's starting pitcher. After an examaination by the team doctor, Norris was given the green light.

'Mike was extra effective because he had great velocity," Oakland manager Steve Boros said Wednesday after Norris led the A's to a 5-3 victory over the Indians. "And then he tantalized the Indians with his screwball. Considering the circumstances, it was a pretty gutty performance."

For five innings, Norris allowed the Indians only two hits and two walks, but after he walked leadoff batter Mike Hargrove in the sixth and went to 3-0 on Toby Harrah, Boros lifted him.

TOM BURGMEIER and Dave Beard finished up for Boros' first victory as a big-league manager. Norris was taken to a hospital after leaving the game. X-rays disclosed he suffered a minor back Montreal's Andre Dawson takes a long look at third base during the Expos 3-0 win over the Chicago Cubs on Tuesday. Chicago's Ron Cey awaits a late throw from centerfield. Only 4,802 at Wrigley Field witnessed the season opener.

Piersall booted again in Chicago; Sox owners say he's too critical

CHICAGO (UPI) - Jimmy Piersall, the controversial sports commentator who has been openly critical of the Chicago White Sox, was fired by the team for "vitriolic" attacks against the team's management, Sox officials said Wednesday.

Piersall was dismissed Tuesday as color commentator of Sportsvision, the pay-tv channel originated by Sox President Eddie Einhorn. He will remain as a talk show host of radio station WMAQ, the flagship station for Sox games.

Piersall, a 17-year major league veteran who has had several run-ins with local reporters, team officials and umpires, claimed earlier in the day that Sox officials had not indicated to him any dissatisfaction with his work. In addition, he said the club had not put any restrictions on what he could say about the performance of the club.

But in a telegram sent to Piersall by Einhorn and Sox board chairman Jerry Reinsdorf, the Sox charged that Piersall had he had violated his contract with the club by making personal attacks.

"(There had been) a vitrolic attack on the manager and organization that was totally unwarranted and unprofessional Monday night," the telegram said.

The owners were reportedly upset at Piersall's criticism of Sox Manager Tony LaRussa, who had been at odds with Piersall the past three years.

"You were not hired to be a shill for the White Sox and we explicitly outlined in your contract journalistic license as a commentator and an analsyst," Einhorn and Reinsdorf said. "You were told specifically, however, that personal attacks on members of the organization were represent a non-professionalism that would not be tolerated.

The owners were also angered by comments Piersall allegedly made regarding this winter's deal between the Sox and Chicago Cubs. The letter cited Piersall's comments when he was asked whether the Sox had held "a gun to the head of Dallas Green," Cubs' general manager, in regard to selecting Ferguson Jenkins in the compensation draft.

The letter quoted Piersall as saying "there was no one in the Sox organization smart enough to hold a gun to the head of Dallas Green.'

"For the past three years, we've been trying to channel your enthusiasm and talents so as to be a constructive and professional voice in the Chicago sports community and we paid you a substantial sum to do so," the owners added. "We tried something no other professional franchise has done, pay someone to be a potential critic of its own product.'

Piersall, at a news conference earlier in the day, emphasized he had received backing from the owners about his comments.

"I received assurances from the owners of the White Sox that my performance not only was satisfactory, but excellent," Pier-

T APPEARS THAT stories of "SCTV's" death are greatly exaggerated — at least right now. Though Rolling Stone reported a week ago that NBC had canceled its late-night comedy series (11:30 p.m. Fridays, KWWL-7). Variety this week says the network is keeping its options open. Those options evidently include renewal as is (though TV Guide quotes producer Andrew Alexander as saying this has been ruled out), a time change, a format change and cancellation in favor of an MTV-type video music show (to be produced by "Saturday Night Live's" Dick Ebersol).

Whatever the case, "SCTV" is in serious trouble both in terms of ratings and in terms of creativity - a sad fact, considering that only a year ago the show had managed to attract a vast audience (at least for its time period) with the most sophisticated - and funniest - comment on TV that the medium had produced.

ONE COULD CITE a number of reasons for the decline in "SCTV's" fortunes: a number of production changes in the past year, the fact that NBC has never promoted the show well, the departure of its three most talented players (Rick Moranis, Dave Thomas, Catherine O'Hara).

But two things stand out as most significant: the loss of the show's original focus, and Bob and Doug

Television

MacKenzie.

While the late, unlamented "Fridays" and recent editions of "Saturday Night Live" fell into puerile political 'satire" and stupid skits the sole purpose of which was to set up obvious drug and/or sex punchlines, "SCTV" staked out its territory as television itself, both in content and in form.

The foibles of the crew at the fictional SCTV network flagship - station owner Guy Caballero, station manager Edith Prickley, egomaniacal producer Johnny LaRue, hack comic Bobby Bittman, videophile Jerry Todd, political frother Bill Needle, wasted chanteuse Lola Heatherton and a dozen others — became a more pointed satire of the medium than any of the show's more traditional parodies (as well as those of its competitors).

OVER THE PAST year, however, 'SCTV" has for the most part dispensed with its TV framework to present a mishmash of movie, play, even Vegas show parodies. The talent is still there - veterans John Candy, Joe Flaherty, Eugene Levy, Andrea Martin and newcomer Martin Short put any other comic performers on TV to shame. But that talent has, for whatever reason, been forced to work away from the material and the structure that made them great.

And part of that reason is Bob and half-hour, so that the people still there can rebuild the style that made the "SCTV" is in serious show so good without stretching themselves too thin. It would be a shame to lose a program that has done more terms of ratings and and, occasionally, still does more - in in terms of creativity expanding the limits of television than anything else the networks have ever only a year ago the show had managed

The decline and (perhaps) fall of "SCTV" is all the more unsettling when one looks at its NBC sister show, "Saturday Night Live." While hope sprang for a time in the breasts of comedy fans when Dick Ebersol took over, "SNL" this year has turned out to be almost as funny as "Me and the Chimp" and a good deal less brash.

Does anyone really want to see Howard Hesseman moon a picture of Reagan? Doesn't anyone else get tired of seeing Eddie Murphy applauded every time he draws a breath? Can't the writers come up with anything but impersonations for Joe Piscopo to do? And who are those other people up there, anyway?

With but a handful of exceptions the "Death of Buckwheat" skit, the Mery Griffin-Robert Blake selfparody, Piscopo's Phil Donahue routine, the whole Rick Moranis-Dave Thomas show (surprise!) - "SNL" skits this year have been uniformly drab, stilted and moronic. If NBC wants to further the careers of Eddie Murphy and Joe Piscopo, fine, but for "SNL" to exist solely for that purpose is typically ruinous thinking.

Gone are Bob Hope and Johnny Carson as hosts of the movies' big night. Instead viewers will be greeted by a quartet of emcees: Liza Minnelli. Dudley Moore, Richard Pryor and oldtimer Walter Matthau. The presenters represent a genuine youth movement.

Often in the past stars presenting awards were former Oscar winners themselves. Newcomers were skipped over for legendary names and faces. With rare exceptions, TV personalities were ignored altogether.

But Tom Selleck, of TV's "Magnum, P.I.," starred in the movie, High Road To China, and will be on hand to deliver the Oscar to one of the winners.

Eight other up-and-coming performers will make their Oscar show debuts, thanks to recent, successful

Matt Dillon, star of Tex, and Steven Guttenberg, one of the stars of Diner, will be seen by millions of viewers unfamiliar with their movies.

ble, the amplified chamber group led by trend-setting composer Philip Glass, will perform at 8 tonight in Hancher Auditorium.

The concert will be preceded by a discussion led by Donald Martin Jenni, a member of the composition faculty of the UI School of Music, at 7 p.m. in the Hancher Greenroom.

With his elements of jazz, classical, eastern-influenced, pop and rock music, Glass' repetitive, pulsating scores have won him one of the widest and most eclectic followings of any contemporary composer.

His ensemble, an eight-member group featuring electronic keyboards, woodwinds and voice, has been the performing core of Glass' music since 1968, presenting more than 300 concerts in the United States and Europe.

Glass emerged from the academic musical establishment in the mid-1960s after being trained in serialism at the Julliard School of Music. Although he was considered one of the most promising composers in that tradition, Glass found the music he was writing to be sterile and uncommunicative.

IN SEARCH OF a new musical stance that would be personally satisfying and less forbidding to audiences, Glass was influenced by jazz, experimental theater, the repetitive rhythmic patterns of Indian music, new trends in visual art and the rhythms of northern Africa.

In 1967, after months of traveling in Africa and Asia, Glass returned to New York ready to tread a new path. Soon he found himself involved, along with composers such as Steve Reich and Terry Riley, in the new form of "minimalistic" composition.

In 1977, Glass composed North Star for the Holland Festival, and the recording of that work, released on a rock label, far exceeded sales expectations as more and more rock and jazz fans became attracted to his sound.

BUT GLASS' BIGGEST breakthrough came in 1981, with his opera Satyagraha, based upon the experiences of Gandhi in South Africa. Satyagraha was hailed in both the United States and Europe as a landmark achievement, as Glass' score extended his melodic material and added new dynamic variation. The result was a new form of music labeled "maximalism."

The repetitive nature of Glass' music makes unusual demands upon the concentration and commitment of the performers and also requires that audiences be prepared to listen in a new way.

"One does not really listen to a Glass piece in the traditional sense," The Wall Street Journal explained. "One becomes immersed in his sonic weather, swept into an aural kaleidoscope that slowly turns, revolves and develops."

The music of Philip Glass is not an experience to which listeners can be indifferent. Some critics have found it exasperating, even maddening. But those who accept it on its own terms find it sensuous, engrossing, even

Tour brings Thurber sketches to city

William Windom will present his acclaimed one-man show Thurber at 8 p.m. Friday at Hancher Auditorium.

Arts/Entertainment Editor

Your short piece writer's time is not ... Professor Einstein's time. It is his own personal time, circumscribed by the short boundaries of his pain and his embarrassment, in which what happens to his digestion, the rear axle of his car, and the confused flow of his relationships with six or eight persons and two or three buildings is of greater importance than what goes on in the nation or in the universe. (James Thurber, "Preface to a Life.")

HE DIGESTION, rear axle and the confused flow of relationships with people and buildings that made up the life of humorist James Thurber will be presented at 8 p.m. Friday night in Hancher Auditorium, as William Windom's one-man show Thurber comes to Iowa City.

Windom is familiar to TV viewers from dozens of guest roles in series from "Star Trek" to "Dallas" and as the star of several comedy pilots and series. But his greatest achievement in the medium was his role as Thurber alter ego John Monroe in NBC's short-lived "My World and Welcome to It."

'World," produced by Sheldon Leonard ("Dick Van Dyke Show") and Danny Arnold ("Barney Miller") combined situation comedy sketches based on Thurber characters and stories with animation taken from the humorist's New Yorker cartoons to create a thoroughly original and completely engaging

NBC, of course, canceled the show after one year, but not before the series and its star won Emmy awards. After only a frustrating year as Thurber on TV, Windom wanted to explore the writer and character further.

Theater

"My leading lady at the time told me, 'Windom, if you don't do something more, you'll always regret it'," the actor said in a telephone interview from his home in California. "So, based on that, I began to get the rights to the material and put together a

THURBER, WHICH WINDOM has toured since 1972, primarily to college and university campuses, includes several of the humorist's most noted short stories and fables, including "There's No Place Like Home," "My Rules for a Happy Marriage," "The Evening's at Seven" and "The Secret Life of Walter Windom said his material is culled from five hours of available material. "I looked for things that were short, then for things that were funny, that made me laugh, or that touched me in some way.

"One story I wanted to use, 'Whippoorwill,' was a little bit gory, just too sad. But I'd love to find a way to get some of my other favorites - things like 'One Is a Wanderer' and 'Brother Endicott' - into a show."

Once Windom had prepared the material for the show, there was then the matter of standing on stage alone and presenting it to an audience.

'The biggest difficulty of doing a one-man show is conquering your self-consciousness," he said. "I always admired nightclub performers and what they do, but I'm not the kind of person who wears a lampshade at a party.

'You eventually have to take your courage in hand. You've got to realize that the people out there want you to be successful, so you relax and go to work."

THE POPULAR AND critical success of Thurber, which Windom performs almost 50 times a year, attests to the actor's ability to 'go to work." Still, given the changes that have occurred since 1972, one had to wonder if some audiences had reacted unfavorably to the truculence Thurber displays toward women in several of his stories.

'Never," Windom said. "It's not true, first of all. Thurber liked women - he had his problems, sure, but he really liked them. He said: 'I think women are the hope and salvation of the world. I simply believe I should goad them to further effort.' His wife Helen once told me: 'Jamie loved women. It was just that all those nasty drawings and stories were done during his first marriage.' '

After this tour of Thurber, which also takes him to campuses in Michigan, Pennsylvania and Florida (as well as to a chess tournament in New York), Windom will return to California, where "not a damn thing" awaits him. "I'm up for a couple of TV shows," he said, "but there's nothing definite."

Surely, then, he can take solace in the moral of Thurber's "The Shrike and the Chipmunks": "Early to rise and early to bed makes a man healthy, wealthy and dead."

Tickets for William Windom's performance as Thurber are priced at $9.50, $7, $5, $3 and $1 for students ($2 more for nonstudents) and are available at the Hancher box office.
