Senator stresses strong action is needed for economic survival

By Tom Buckingham Staff Writer

Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-South Carolina, the latest Democrat to enter the 1984 presidential race, told a group of UI students Thursday in plain Dixie the United States must rely on strong government action if it is to achieve 'economic survival" in the world economy Hollings, a senator since 1966 and the Democratic leader in the Senate Budget Committee, will officially declare his candidacy April 18.

Hollings say U.S. emphasis on free trade is not working in a world where most countries protect and subsidize their national industries.

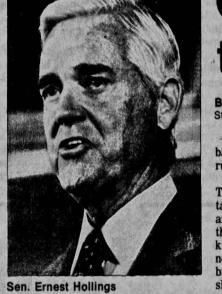

"We live today in an international competition and the fact of the matter is we're non-participants down on the field of play. We're up in the stands mumbling 'free trade' and they're clobbering us down on the field.

"We still have the highest skills, still the best technology, still the most productive workers," Hollings said.

About 60 people gathered in the UI But "the only way to get in the game College of Law student lounge to hear and compete is with our government."

> HOLLINGS CITED the governmental programs enacted during the 1930s as proof that governmental intervention in the economy can have a positive impact. Sen. Ernest "Fritz" Hollings is not bashful to say what he has in mind in running for president.

In an interview with The Daily Iowan Thursday, Hollings said: "I'd like to take this defunct federal government and show 'em how to run it. It's not that difficult. It's not easy - I'm not kidding myself - but like Jack Kennedy, he brought in the best and the brightest, set them at a round table, slammed the door and they all went to work. And that's what we need in the national government is for us to simmer down, get control of ourselves, then work to become a true competitor."

Entering the race less than a year before the start of primary elections, Hollings is a late starter compared with the rest of the Democratic candidates. What he has lost to his opponents in time though, Hollings believes he makes up for in ability.

China halts exchanges with U.S.

PEKING (UPI) - China suspended all official cultural and sports exchanges with the United States Thursday to protest Washington's decision to grant political asylum to Chinese tennis player Hu Na. A Western diplomat called the suspension a "ma-jor step backwards" in Sino-U.S. rela-

Communist Party chief Hu Yaobang later blasted the United States as a "hegemonistic" power interfering in China's internal affairs.

Although China cut back on U.S. imports in a trade dispute earlier this year, it was the first time since the normalization of relations in 1979 - after a 30-year break - that China has canceled an existing agreement with the United States.

The retaliation was announced less than 24 hours after China, acting with noon in a previously scheduled Oval Office ceremony.

Earlier Zhang called the decision to grant asylum to Hu "connived, deliberate, a provocation."

In another sign of China's displeasure, Communist Party chief Hu delivered a strong personal attack on the United States.

Hu told a visiting Swedish Communist Party delegation the United States acted toward China like a "hegemonistic" power which "persisted in its arms sales to Taiwan, connived in the enticement and coercion of Chinese athletes and students in collusion with Taiwan agents and even granted "political asylum" (to Hu Na).

"These are all acts of interfering in China's internal affairs," he said.

Revolution orients speaker's life

By Mary Tabor

From her childhood amidst the Russian Revolution to her presence at the birth of the free speech movement in Berkeley, Calif., during the 1960s, Raya Dunayevskaya has experienced revolution.

The subtle wrinkles around her eyes and faintness of her voice belie the potency of the Marxist humanism she espoused before a crowd of about 150 people on the UI campus Thursday

Her lecture in Iowa City is part of a national tour honoring the Karl Marx Centenary, the anniversary of his death in 1883. "The Marxist legacy is not a mere heirloom," she said, "but a live body of perspectives.' Dunayevskaya, described as a philosopher, political analyst and women's liberationist, served as secretary for Leon Trotsky during his exile in Mexico and has written several influential books on Marxism.

Marx rejected not only the profit motive, but also what he called "vulgar communism," an equally detestable form of property ownership insisted on the emancipation of women "before, during and after" the social revolution. Her commitment to equality long predates today's women's movement.

For too long, she says, revolutionists have promoted their own cause and promised women that they come next. 'This is wrong because you deprive yourself of the wisdom we women have," Dunayevskaya jokes.

But, she pointed out, "Marx showed there was never a revolution that was not also a women's revolution."

As an example, she noted that beside the anti-slavery movement of the American 1860s arose the first women's rights convention in Seneca Falls.

Women met there who were tired of making sandwiches for the underground railroads. They asked why they couldn't participate in their own revolution. "They were asking questions and getting answers way, way above what we are doing now," Dunayevskaya told the crowd.

One of these women, Sojourner Truth, "who was not exactly popular, especially with white men," once told a group of priests because Jesus was a fire in Dunayevskaya. She said she the son of God and Mary, man had nothing to do with it, Dunayevskaya said.

> WHAT MARX OPENED UP in feminist freedom expanded everywhere, she said. "It was a new world.'

Dunayevskaya noted that intelligent women like Sojourner Truth were said to have "a masculine mind." She commented, "You guys really did something to put your sex organs in your brain.'

Another female revolutionist Dunayevskaya has featured in her writing is Rosa Luxemburg, who helped lead the left-wing Socialist Party in Poland during the 1905 Russian Revolution.

Luxemburg rejected the idea that this was the last of the great revolutions, maintaining it was the first of the 20th century revolutions, her biographer said.

But Luxemburg came to recognize male chauvinism in the Socialist Party and made this the new thrust of her revolution. According to Dunayevskaya, "the greatness of today's women's movement can't compare to her revolutionary zeal."

unusual speed, lodged an extremely bitter protest with the United States over Monday's decision to grant political asylum to Hu, who defected last July during a tennis tournament in Santa Clara, Calif.

At the State Department, spokesman John Hughes said: "The United States government regrets this unilateral decision by the Chinese side and considers it to be an overreaction and inappropirate."

A WESTERN DIPLOMAT called it 'the first concrete, major step backwards in Sino-American relations.

There was no indication the issue was brought up when China's new ambassador, Zhang Wenjin, presented his credentials to Reagan Thursday after-contacts under a two-year-old cultural exchange agreement was announced by the Ministry of Culture, which accused the United States of purposely manufacturing "a serious political in-cident" to set back Sino-U.S. relations.

A SIMILAR MOVE was later announced by the Sports Federation, which said the granting of asylum to its star tennis player had "impaired the normal atmosphere in sports exchanges between China and the U.S."

The canceled events included a summer tour by the Julliard String Quartet, an exhibition of paintings from the Brooklyn Museum, a U.S. film week, trips by journalists and an exchange of visits by the directors of Peking Radio and the Voice of America.

UI commuters face possible rate hike

By Mike Heffern Staff Writer

A recommendation brought before the UI Parking and Transportation Committee at a meeting Thursday would re-designate the Kinnick Stadium and Harrison Street parking lots and would change where faculty, staff and students park their cars used to commute to campus.

According to Casey Mahon, UI associte vice president for finance, if the recommendation is approved, it would change the parking lots from the present "commuter and storage" designation to a "faculty-staff reserved" designation.

The new commuter and storage parking would then be located at the two new parking lots adjacent to the Carver-Hawkeye Sports Arena; commuters would take the Cambus to the UI Hospitals or to campus from there.

UI faculty, staff and students who now park at the Kinnick and Harrison Street lots would be given priority parking at the new lots, Mahon said. The $3 per month charge would remain the same for those who already have parking under the commuter system, she said.

BUT THE COST of parking at the Kinnick and Harrison Street lots would increase $7 - from $3 to $10 - for any commuters who did not chose to switch See Parking, page 6

WHEN HITLER came to power in his native Germany, Wilke found that his own style conflicted with Nazi ideology about art, so in 1938 he left for New York. In 1943 he became a U.S. citizen and spent the duration of World War II in the Army. He came to the UI in 1945, when he

After his first period in Iowa City, Wilke spent several years teaching in colleges throughout the Midwest with time out for study in Rome. Eventually he settled in New York City, where he maintained a studio. It was there that Frank Seiberling, former head of the School of Art and Art History, ap-proached him seeking a director for the new UI Art Museum. "When he described the position, I told him it sounded so good that I might apply," Wilke said.

He did and became the first director, organizing and developing the university's art collection. When asked about his term as director of the museum, Wilke replied that he had done "that sort of thing before" at a small college in Michigan. He said he "had a lot of ideas" and that being director of a museum was just an extension of his own catholic tastes in collecting.

COLLECTING, HE feels, forms a sort of biography: "It reflects a per-son's interests." Wilke's own broadranging collection, which includes art from Africa, Oceania, the Middle East, the Orient and the American Southwest, will be featured during April at the Cedar Rapids Museum of Art.

In addition to collecting art, for several years Wilke has kept a journal in which he includes everything from copies of personal correspondence and finances to sketches of his acquisitions. He expresses his thoughts on his own work, on his techniques as an artist and on his reaction to the works he adds to his collection.

Astronauts walk in space

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — Two Challenger astronauts successfully completed America's first spacewalk in nine years Thursday. Mission specialists Story Musgrave and Donald Peterson spent about 3 hours and 40 minutes in the vacuum of space — the last major assignment for the Challenger's maiden flight.

The key accomplishment of the walk was to prove the new $2 million spacesuits designed to let future shuttle crews do repair work in space have been cured of problems that caused them to fail during their debut on the last shuttle mission five months ago.

U.S. to deliver arms faster

BANGKOK, Thailand — The United States pledged Thursday to speed up arms deliveries to Thailand, whose troops exchanged fire with Vietnamese units pressing a week-old offensive along the Cambodian border.

Visiting U.S. Assistant Secretary of State Paul Wolfowitz said he conferred with Thai Prime Minister Gen. Prem Tinsulanonda and promised "expedited deliveries" of American weapons to meet the Vietnamese threat on Thailand's eastern border with Cambodia.

The Daily Iowan will correct unfair or inaccurate stories or headlines. If a report is wrong or misleading, call the DI at 353-6210. A correction or clarification will be published in this column.

In a story called "Press rights concern professor" (DI, April 7), UI assistant Professor Carolyn Dyer was incorrectly quoted. She actually said that although many journalists believe the U.S. Supreme Court has restricted freedom of the press in recent decisions, a study of the facts shows that perception to be incorrect. Because of that error, the story reported that the court is "restrictive" toward the press, which is opposite of Dyer's point.

Also, in a story called "Retirement home appeals ruling on tax exemption" (DI, April 1) it was incorrectly reported that Oaknoll Retirement Home would not refund money it has collected from residents to pay property taxes. Robert N. Downer, Oaknoll's attorney, actually said that any excess of the amounts collected for taxes, over the taxes that would have to be paid, plus interest, would be refunded to the residents. The DI regrets the errors.

Council split on special hearing issue

By Mark Leonard Staff Writer

City

Iowa City Councilor Kate Dickson says "good old boy" politics do not have a place in city government.

In a special session Thursday, the council decided to renew the liquor license for the owners of Towncrest Inn, although some members argued strongly that special hearings should not be held for bar owners who are late in renewing their licenses.

"For us to be flexible is one thing," Dickson said of the council's past policy to allow special hearings on a case-by-case basis, "but on the other hand, I don't want to fall in the trap of good old boy politics." This statement drew a harsh response from

Councilor John Balmer. "I don't think we've had good old boy politics here," he said. "I think it makes a difference when you know someone in the community and know their reputation."

BALMER NOTED, however, that he did not know Bill or Nancy Marakos, owners of Towncrest Inn, but knew of their reputation in town.

"In this particular instance, knowing the people and knowing the circumstances, I'm willing to consider this," he said.

Towncrest Inn's application for liquor renewal had been approved and sent on to the Iowa Beer and Liquor Control Commission, but a snag in the paperwork developed that caused the owners to miss putting the renewal matter on the council's March 29 agenda.

Because the license runs out Saturday at midnight, a special hearing was necessary to discuss the matter. The council's next formal meeting is scheduled for Tuesday night. If the council had deferred the matter until then, the owners estimated they might lose $500 in revenue.

Councilor David Perret argued the city has specific regulations about deadlines for liquor license renewals and should follow them. "I think we would be unfair to applicants that have not protested to have special hearings for others.

"I HAVE SOME troubles as to whether we can disregard requirements in the code," he continued. "The duty and burden should fall on the applicant to see that everything is in order."

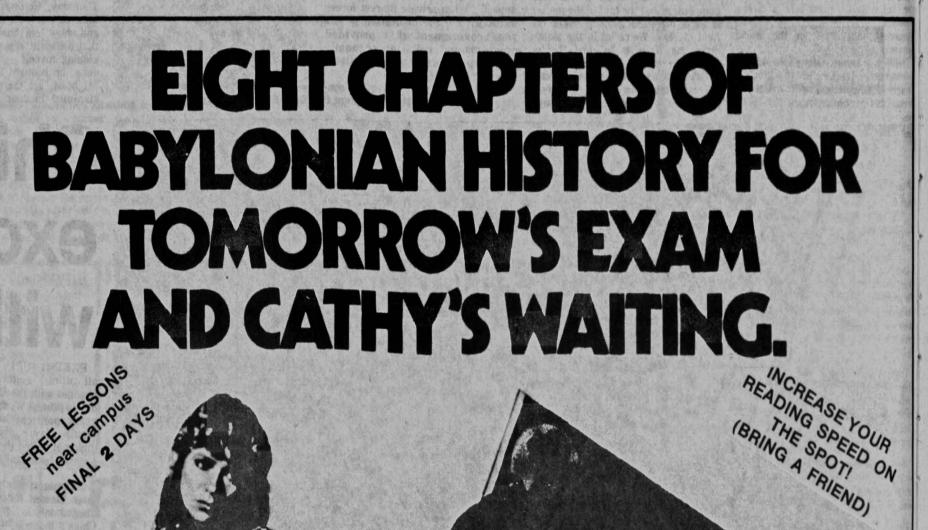

Councilor John McDonald disagreed with Perret. "I don't believe local government should be that inflexible that we can't try and help people solve their problems. We have a duty to help as much as we can." Councilor Larry Lynch added, "The issuel

— do we show compassion, or say, 'This is the rule?' I think our job is to serve the public."

When it came to a vote, Perret voted not to renew the license, while Dickson, McDonald Balmer, Lynch and Councilor Clemens Er dahl voted in favor of the motion. Mayor Mary Neuhauser, who voiced her opposition to holding special hearings at Monday's council meeting, was absent from the hearing.

At next Monday's informal meeting, the council will set a date to discuss the issue of special hearings.

As a result of the incident, the city will no longer notify Iowa City liquor license holders that their deadline for renewal is coming up. Iowa's Beer and Liquor Control Commission already notifies persons of the upcoming deadline 60 days in advance.

UI senior Maggie Little

By Sarah Stewart Special to The Daily Iowan

Maggie Little, a UI senior, has received more publicity than she bargained for as the UI's first Rhodes Scholar in 15 years, but she doesn't feel the experience has changed her in other people's eyes.

Little is one of 32 American students who were awarded the scholarship this December and the first female Rhodes Scholar from the state of Iowa. She and her fellow scholars will go to England this summer to study for two years at Oxford University, where she hopes to earn her doctorate in philosophy.

"I was really surprised at how much recognition I received. I got so many congratulatory calls and letters, so many from people I've never even met before. People were really nice and generous," Little said.

HOWEVER, THE congratulations weren't all they were cracked up to be. "It's certainly not something I'd want all the time," Little said. "It got to be so that the only thing people would talk to me about was the Rhodes, and sometimes (in conversation) it's time to move on to other things."

Little doesn't feel that receiving the

"It got to be so that the only thing people would talk to me about was the Rhodes," Maggie Little says, "and sometimes it's time to move on to other things."

award has affected the way friends and associates regard her. For instance, she just completed a term on the UI Student Senate and she doesn't feel anyone there treated her differently after she won the scholarship. 'How would they be different? Would they be deferent?" she asked. Then she laughed, "Nobody on Student Senate is deferent."

According to Little, receiving the award has increased her self-confidence. Although she had always been competent in academics. she explained, "I had the tendency to denigrate my abilities, like I'd look at something I'd done and say, 'This could be better.' Sometimes that can be detrimental.' Now, she said, "I still get under-confident, I still worry about my abilities, but it (the scholarship) helps.

LITTLE FEELS SHE owes much of her accomplishment to her philosophy professors here, some of whom wrote letters of recom-mendation to the scholarship committee on her behalf. Their support was important because, she said, "There's nobody whose assessment of my intellectual ability respect more."

Although some feel the UI places much more importance on athletics than academics, Little said the UI administration was very generous in congratulating her. There was even a dinner given in her honor, hosted by President James O. Freedman. "They didn't even have Union food; I was impressed. Seriously, though, I really think they do place a lot of importance on academics."

The Rhodes Scholar's concerns are not purely academic. Since she'll be graduating in May, Little has a busy schedule. In her spare time, she said, "The only thing I want to do is stop thinking; philosophy takes so much of it. I'll cook, read junk novels, anything just so I don't have to think."

Peace vigil focuses on nuclear weapons

By Dan Hauser Staff Writer

Despite the chilly April wind and overcast skies Thursday, about 30 people joined members of the Ecumenical Consultation in the first peace vigil in a week of 15-minute peace vigils on the corner of Washington and Clinton streets.

The purpose of the vigils is to "express our concern" on the issue of a nuclear freeze, said Bob Welsh, a minister from the First Christian Church of Iowa City and leader of the church's peace committee.

According to a newsletter compiled by Tom Fate, a UI student and member of the Wesley Foundation, the purpose of the vigil is two-fold:

First, to let the citizens of Iowa City and other peace organizations know what is going on with the nuclear freeze movement. And second, to help tie together the peace community in Iowa City to create a sense of unity.

"I HOPE the crowds increase," Welsh said as he handed out leaflets that urge citizens and students to sign a petition to give Congress an idea of now many people in Iowa City favor a marked the volunteer participants in the vigil, handing out pamphlets with Welsh, was volunteer Penny Amick.

Amick, who is one of about seven people involved in the First Christian Church's peace committee, said, "I don't think the government knows how many people are for the freeze. Whether the response is good or not, I think it's (the vigil) important.

Fate said the Ecumenical Consultation chose the vigil site because it was a busy place at noon and a number of people would see the volunteers. He said the place was used for protests during the Vietnam War.

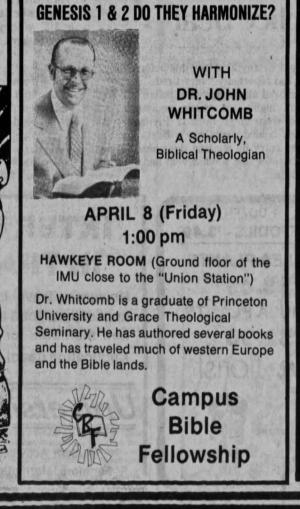

TO HELP SPREAD the word of their peace campaign, the Ecumenical Consultation is sponsoring a worship service at the Carver-Hawkeye Arena, April 17. Fate said the group is expecting about 10,000 people for the service.

"Having religious organizations involved is a key to getting the snowball rolling," Fate said. "People respect doctors and ministers." He said it is "significant that churches get involved."

This summer or fall, Fate plans to rganize a nuclear fu which people declare their houses free

Jim Ballard works in a roachinfested office. But he's not about to complain to the Board of Health. Ballard, an urban entomologist at the University of Nebraska at Lincoln, is a research assistant trying to help landlords control the pests by evaluating roach controls.

He breeds the roaches and tests their insecticide resistance. And he knows that not all cockroaches are created equal. "The German cockroach is the number-one urban pest," he says. They have a high resistance to insecticides, reproduce rapidly and exhibit large variations in behavior.

In contrast, "Oriental roaches are big, so people respond quickly to them. A couple of good stomps and it's all over for the Orientals." They also have a low resistance to pesticides. "You can show them the can and they die.' Ballard says people can do three things to help control roaches - use decent sanitation methods, be conscious of roaches and not expect chemicals to do the housekeeping for them. He tries to keep his roaches healthy by feeding them dog food and keeping the lids off their cans. The lids can cause heat and humidity to build up in the cans, which is unhealthy for the roaches. -From the Daily Nebraskan.

Rube rerun

Tony Frissora's Slo-Mo-Flow-Pro won the Rube Goldberg contest at Purdue University recently for filling a paper cup with water.

The device was required by contest regulations to fill a 12-ounce paper cup more than halfway, but not to overflowing. The cup had to be removable and without handles. It also had to be filled from a refillable tank in a cycle that took less that five minutes and could be repeated.

Frissora's design used such items as a hair dryer, a microphone, a toaster to burn toast to set off a smoke alarm, a rubber ball, a tennis racquet and more.

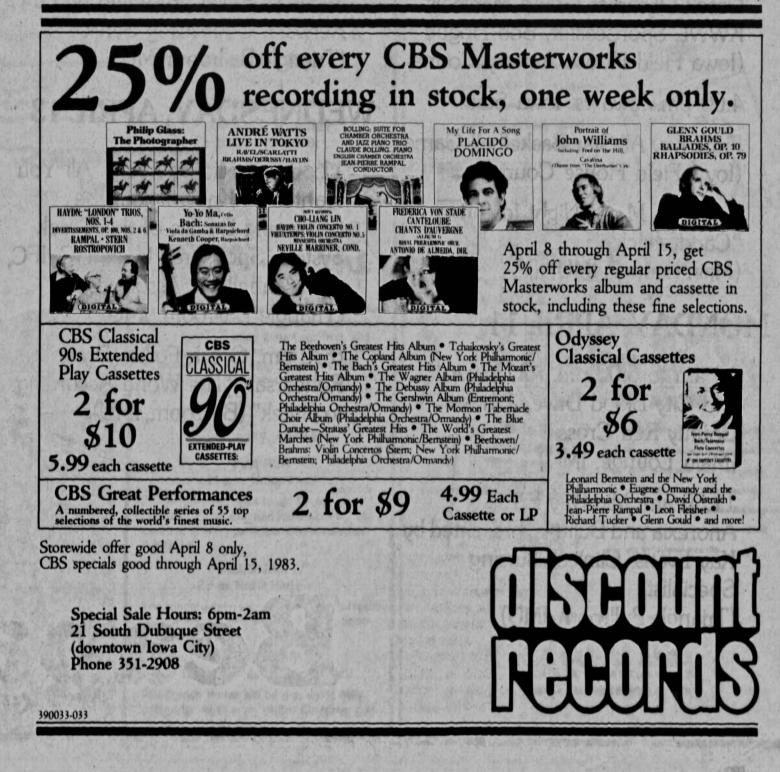

Entries were judged for effectiveness, originality, intrigue and complexity by two engineering professors in conjunction with National Engineering Week at Purdue. -From The Purdue Exponent.

Iowa farmers illustrate basic losses

DES MOINES (UPI) - Peter Brent and Tony Bos say they've lost their shorts to hard times and they want other farmers feeling the cool draft of the economic recession to let the White House know of their plight. Brent, of Menlo, and Bos, of Tracy, say they want to bury the White House in undershorts and began a cross-country trip of protest to Washington Wednesday riding an old tractor towing a manure spreader. Farmers will be asked to support the pair during their 36-day trek by throwing un-dershorts into the weathered outhouse they are towing in the manure spreader. Barring that, they want farmers to mail their undershorts to the White House.

"Maybe we'll bury the White House in shorts; that will get them to thinking," Brent said.

THE FARMERS BEGAn their protest on the west steps of the State Capitol following a rally sponsored by the Farm Unity Coalition. a radical farm organization that is helping sponsor the trip.

The pair said they also will depend on donations from sympathizers along the way to pay for the trip.

Both men claim to be victims of the recession. Bo's cattle herd was repossessed last year and he had to move off his farm in October. Brent, who holds a Farmers Home Administration loan, fell behind in his payments and this week declared bankruptcy.

The old tractor they are driving to Washington sports a sign on the front that says "We are coming."

On the side of the manure spreader, another sign says, "If your debts are free and clear, you can stand right up and cheer; but if you're like us you've lost your rear, so toss your shorts right in here."

A huge roll of paper with a lengthy list of signatures adorns the side of the outhouse.

Private investigators' lives lack glamour of TV heroes

By Jeff Eichenbaum

The colorful life of a private investigator as portrayed on television loses much of the gloss when translated into a "real-life" situation and transported from Hollywood to Iowa City. According to detectives in Iowa City and Cedar Rapids, what is shown on television is a far cry from the life of an Iowa private investigator. While it is true that investigators must be licensed with the state, that is where the similarity between working private detectives and the cool Jim

Rockford ends, said John Phipps, a private detective in the Iowa City office of the international Wackenhut Corporation

Phipps said he doesn't watch many of the detective shows on television because the current shows "take things too far" and tend to "glamorize the business quite a bit.

THE KINDS OF relationships dramatized between plice and detectives would not occur in real life because "you need to cooperate with law enforcement agencies - you can't have them mad at you or breathing down your neck - you won't get anything

The Wackenhut Corporation specializes in Demuth, who has been a detective for 20 years, said his job isn't like the often exciting portrayal of TV detectives.

> 'I'M AN EXPERT in digging up information We know where to find things that other people could find if they knew where to look I have many contacts and I can even gain info cops can't get.

A specialist in liability and workmen's compensa-tion claims, Demuth said he has been retained in cases of personal injury by insurance companies and attorneys who want to monitor the injured person to see how badly they're hurt or to make sure the claim is legitimate.

'We can be of immense help to a law firm by doing leg work for them," Demuth said. It can save them time and money Mike Kelly, of Kelly Security Services in Cedar Rapids, said their investigating "is done low profile," and that his investigators are "primarily supplied to insurance companies, attorneys and corporations.

A detective of 19 years' experience, Kelly said his company often deals with " ... a host of new security problems created by the influx of computers ... and new technology. Because of the tremendous size of the corporation, Phipps said, "We can do everything - handle the simple cases to the complex from local leg work for an attorney to major white collar crimes," which may take years to investigate.

In big cases such as corporate fraud, Phipps said his company has a separate division, which is headed by former FBI Director Clarence Kelley.

Varying concepts of law debated

By Robyn Griggs Staff Writer

Differing and sometimes heated views of law and how it affects citizens' lives were examined Thursday night at a symposium, "Law and Power," sponsored by the Iowa Humanities Board and the UI College of Business Administration.

Nancy Hauserman, UI professor of business and moderator for the symposium, said the basic question to be answered was "whether or not law creates power or whether power creates law.

Derek Willard, professor of dentistry, answered the questions in terms of the law's power to contribute to selfknowledge.

"Knowledge of the law has always held a certain promise and threat to us," he said. "In life we can see where knowledge of law can help people in their search for goals to set, yet also ignorance of it can lead to a tragic end. "It is frequently argued that if you don't have knowledge of the law, you won't have power over life.' However, he added, those who have knowledge of the law can still have "uncertainty, feelings of powerlessness and helplessness, in spite of all this knowledge, or perhaps because of it."

The question of an individual's right to interpret the law was a subject of controversy among some of the panel members.

BARRY MATSUMOTO, professor of law, said the "open-textured, indeterminate nature of the language" in the U.S. Constitution "means that interpretation must exercise discretion. It must be understood as an exercise of power by interpretation."

He said it is not enough for a judge to make a decision based on his own beliefs or values. Evidence in traditions or society must back it up. However, Frances Zollers of the have an "incredibly exciting" power to 'exercise (their) will any way (they) please" within the U.S. legal system, because of their right to decide "not guilty" as a juror.

Because the "jury is the judge of facts," Zollers said, "you can take this power and decide (a case) according to your own will If you think what's going on is not right, nothing can be done to you, nothing can be done to change the verdict."

But Arthur Woolfe, a professor of business at Michigan State University, said this power can be "illusionary" because it allows the continuance of a 'relatively ineffectual" system.

Woolfe said the U.S. legal system commits a "major conceptual error" by "treating large corporations as individual human beings in most ways."

LARGELY BECAUSE of this, he said, major corporations are able to get away with several illegal or unethical acts - those inside do not feel responsible for their corporation's ac-

That is a "curious coincidence," ac-

"Today, we have a form of institutional power based on structure, mass and inertia. This is created by law, and this needs to change We should not focus on institutional behavior. We should alter the internal environment of institutions, so people inside can see and hear what they are doing to others," he said. "One thing comes through loud and clear," said Victoria Powell, UI professor of business. "The law is a statement of values.

"Very often the law is a restating of set values we would end up with on our own. But sometimes the law intrudes on this selection of moral duty to oneself, and when it does this, it does so in a spotty, inconsistent and ineffectual way.' Powell said very often the individual in this situation may feel threatened or powerless. The solution, she said, is to 'retain power and autonomy in oneself, even if he or she feels powerless in the formal legal system."

they fought so hard to keep parking out of the contract (negotiated last fall), in my opinion, is because they knew they were going to have to pay for those new lots" and the administration didn't want the union contract to keep them from raising the parking rates. The new parking lots were financed from money gained through parking lot fees, not from money that was used to build the arena, Winter said.

Director of Parking William Binney said the reason for the change is that 'the function of the lot has changed from its former designation as a commuter lot.'

The fiasco that occurred at the Environmental Protection Agency is a product of the Reagan philosophy, Hollings said. "They have conducted that administration like a bunch of Katzenjammer kids."

"ALL WE NEED is a changed attitude in the White House and State Department to put American government on the side of American businessmen offshore. Because offshore today there is no such thing as the free market. It is government-to-

Some analysts have expressed fears

Hollings, however, said such fears are unfounded. "There's no chance of a Smoot-Hawley, or the 'Ivory Tower' think-tank boys running around and the multi-national corporations giving us that bunk while we're going to hell in a handbasket."

"You're looking at a presidential candidate who wants to compete. I know we can do a better job in Washington. They're doing a lousy job all around.

"IF WE DON'T bring those deficits down, American industry is not going to get back into the game and we just can't afford this kind of nonsense.

The government must have the capacity to control itself, Hollings said. Under Reagan, who pledged during the 1980 campaign to reduce government spending, "we are spending like there is no tommorrow.'

Hollings has recommended enacting a freeze on all federal programs in or-followed, he said The president's formula, which proposes using increased revenues from decreased taxes to increase defense expenditures, is unsound, Hollings said. If students don't believe it, he said, "write that down on your exam paper and see what grade you get."

Reagan is spending huge amounts of money for defense and for interest on the increased deficits, Hollings said. "Ronald Reagan is the biggest spender to ever hit the nation's capital. He has, and is putting into place, a $100 billion spending program. And for what? Nothing. Your generation is going to pay for it. My crowd's going to retire."

Senate committee defies Reagan's defense plans

WASHINGTON (UPI) - In a stinging rebuke, the Republican-led Senate Budget Committee defied President Reagan and voted 17-4 Thursday to cut in half his proposed 10 percent defense spending increase for 1984.

The committee approved a bipar-tisan compromise plan that contains $267 billion for defense spending authority in fiscal 1984, which begins Oct. 1, and calls for spending $1.68 trillion over the next five years. That is a 5 percent "real" increase, after adjusting for inflation, next year.

The president had asked for $280 billion in spending authority in 1984 and $1.8 trillion over five years. vote Spending authority allows the Pentagon to enter into long-term contracts and spend money over several years. The committee plan also calls for $241.4 billion in outlays, money to be spent only in the 1984 fiscal year. That is $3.3 billion less than Reagan's request and an 8.3 percent "real" increase over this year's level. Yet, over the five-year period, the average growth rate in outlays is still about 5 percent.

The president's defense budget request was defeated on a separate 19-2

THE DEMOCRATIC-dominated House last month approved a 1984 budget resolution that contains only a 4 percent increase for defense. Once the Senate passes the budget, it and the House will have to reconcile their differences.

Immediately after the Senate committee vote, chairman Pete Domenici, R-N.M., leveled a blistering attack against Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and others in the administration who refused to scale back jority of the committee will find a way the request for a 10 percent increase.

"Had the secretary of defense and his associates seen fit to listen to what this committee told them ... the lesson they learned is they could have presented us with a package of reductions and may have gotten them approved," Domenici said. "I think it is incredulous that we cannot defend this country without 10 percent."

At the White House, presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said, "We are deeply disappointed and hope a mato reconsider their action.'

A proposal by Senate Armed Services Committee Chairman John Tower of Texas to increase defense spending by 8 percent a year was also defeated, 14-7.

SEN. LAWTON CHILES of Florida, the ranking Democrat on the panel, said he thought the Senate-House conference committee would probably settle on a 5 percent increase.

"Why not try the experts first?"

"I think there's a 5 percent over there (in the House) as strong as ow here," Chiles said.

Republican Sens. Orrin Hatch of Utah, John Tower of Texas, Steve Symms of Idaho and Charles Grassley of Iowa opposed the compromise.

The president requested $244.7 billion for defense spending in 1984, about $30 billion more than this year's level.

Reagan, under pressure from Senat Republicans to come up with lower defense numbers, offered Tuesday to lower his original proposal to an increase of about 9 percent.

Stringer soared off to Cheyney State where, "I was hired, first of all, as a teacher. There was no mention in my contract of me actually coaching basketball. According to Stringer, the commit-ment by the Lady Wolves' fans helped produce a winner at the small eastern school. "This may not sound like much to you, but we got and average of 2,500-3,000 fans to a typical game," she said. That's surprising considering Cheyney State has an enrollment of 1,800 students. Birdie binge puts Palmer 1 shot back

AUGUSTA, Ga. (UPI) Resurrecting his loyal legion from past battles as he embarked on a late birdie binge, Arnold Palmer brought back misty memories Thursday when he shot a four-under-par 68 to stand only a shot behind co-leaders Jack Renner, Ray Floyd and Gil Morgan after the opening round of the Masters.

"Damn right," the 53-year-old legend said emphatically when asked if he still can win, adding later, "I never completely gave up. I always felt I would get things going again." Finishing in the twilight, Morgan enjoyed a bogey-free round to join the three-way deadlock for first at fiveunder 67. Morgan is the only two-time winner on the tour this year, taking the first two events at Tucson and Los Angeles

Defending champion Craig Stadler overcame two early bogeys to produce four consecutive birdies starting on the 12th to finish at 69, where he was tied with Bruce Lietzke. Tom Watson, a two-time Masters titlist, headed a group at 70 that also included 1979 champion Fuzzy Zoeller, Keith Fergus, Scott Simpson, Payne Stewart, Calvin Peete, Nick Faldo and Isao Aoki.

lowa anxious for home opener

By Steve Riley Staff Writer

Iowa's baseball players are getting impatient. And with blustery, wet weather playing havoc with the schedule, it's hard to blame them. "Our players are getting very impatient," admitted Coach Duane Banks. "Workouts are going very well, but we need to play soon."

Wednesday's scheduled double-header with William Penn at the Iowa diamond was postponed and rescheduled for April 11. Thursday's doubleheader with Loras was also called off and probably won't be rescheduled this season. Instead, the Hawks plan to play a double-header against Wisconsin-Platteville today, which - if the weather holds out - will be Iowa's home opener.

IF YOU'RE CONFUSED, don't worry. So is Banks. His squad was supposed to play six games in Columbia, Mo., last weekend, but all were washed out. "We had an excellent spring trip to Hawaii, but if we don't get outside soon and get some games in, it'll be like starting over again," he said swept the series, outscoring Iowa, 30-5, in four games.

"We've got to play somebody," Banks said. "If we go into Big Ten without getting a game in we're in trouble

Also scheduled next week is the big doubleheader against Iowa State in Ames. The Cyclones visit Iowa City for a twinbill on April 27. Last year, the in-state rivals split the four-game series.

IF IOWA DOES play today, this is Banks' tentative starting line-up:

Pitcher - Jeff Ott and Mike Darby; catcher -Jeff Gurtcheff or Brian Charipar; first base -

Jeff Nielsen; second base - Brian Charipar; shortstop - Jim Drahozal; third base - Nick Fegen or Rick Jennings; outfield - Banks said all six of his outfielders - Craig Conti, Tom Snowberger, Tim Davis, Rob Eddie, Brian Snader and Tim Gassman - will see considerable action. Hitting hasn't been much of a problem for the team so far. The Hawkeyes are swinging the bats at a .264 pace. The pitching game, however, is the weak spot in the early season. The 4.78 team earned run average isn't worrying Banks though.

"WHEN YOU PLAY the kind of competition we have this early in the year, you're ERA is bound to be up a little," he said. "It's no worse than it's been after other spring breaks."

Seeing former Hawkeye Jeff Jones start opening day in right field for the Cincinnati Reds was a delight to Banks. "Isn't that great? They gave Jeff the opportunity and he made the most of it. We're really happy about that."

Another former Hawks' future looks less promising. Pitcher Mike Boddicker was sent down to Rochester, the Baltimore Orioles' triple-A farm club, late in spring training. "Mike sprained an ankle pretty bad in Florida," Banks said. "I think he'll be brought up in a couple of months. He'll have to or be traded."

Five-time champion Jack Nicklaus was at 73.

IT HAS BEEN 10 years since Palmer last won a PGA event - although he demonstrated his capability by holding the lead with nine holes to play in the Los Angeles Open in January - and 19 years since he won the last of his four Masters crowns.

As usual, Palmer had a large gallery start out with him at Augusta National, and although some of his followers slacked off following his only bogey on the 10th hole, the gallery grew to a size reminiscent of his old "Arnie's Army" as he rolled in birdie putts of 20, five and three feet on the 14th, 15th and 16th holes.

"They don't want to see me playing RENNER, FLEXING the muscles he never before had, sandwiched a pair of eagles around a birdie on the back nine for his 67, while Floyd, who tied the Masters record of 271 when he won in 1976, had four birdies coming home. Renner, who admitted that "at one time I thought it a little far-fetched for me to think I could win this tournament," got his eagles on the par-five holes of the back side, sinking putts of 45 feet on the 465-yard 13th and 25 feet on the 500-yard 15th. In between, he sank an eight-foot birdie putt on No. 14.

"I'm still maturing physically and getting stronger every year," said Renner, a six-footer weighing only 145 pounds. "I'm hitting my drives farther and there's no question this has helped my game. Whatever happens the rest of this week, I've put this in the bank for the rest of my life. I know I can shoot 67 here."

Palmer had a string of three consecutive birdies before a thunderstorm caused a 55-minute delay just as he finished the 16th hole

"After those three birdies I wanted to keep going," he said, "but I don't feel it broke my momentum."

Palmer credited a suggestion from Tom Watson two days ago with making a big difference in his game.

"I was on the tee and he was watching me a bit," Palmer said. "I started talking to him about my legs and my movement. Watson said something about my hip movement and suggested I set them up differently."

Pastorini turns drinking fumbles into good advice

By Robert Ryser aff Write

After being arrested for drunken driving several years ago, former pro quarterback Dan Pastorini said he has made a major change in his life. Instead of passing a football, Pastorini is handing off information on drinking and drug abuse to teenagers.

Pastorini spoke to UI students in the Union Wednesday night in an attempt to explain why alcohol is the most abused drug in the United States.

"I'll admit I abused (alcohol)." Pastorini said. "I was real bad. It came to my realization when I got busted for drunken driving and was sitting across the cell from some guy lying in his own puke. I looked at him and I saw myself and I said that isn't PASTORINI SAID he wasted a great deal of time and money on alcohol, but now claims that he has no desire to "get a high" anymore.

"I want to enjoy things from a clear

"I'm not saying that my parents didn't raise me right," Pastorini said, "I'm just saying that sometimes they attended to their business before raising their children."

perspective now," he said. Sometimes it feels like you're in a fog and nobody can really see you because you are invisible. The only people you can see are invisible just like you."

Although Pastorini claims he no longer has the desire to drink, he admits to having an occasional beer or

"I'm not saying that everybody shouldn't drink," he said, "I just think they should know why they are doing

Pastorini gave many reasons why he became a "victim of the drug," but the most curious one was the recollection of his early childhood.

"I'M NOT SAYING that my parents didn't raise me right, I'm just saying that sometimes they attended to their business before raising their children. "I have seven-year old daughter, and

I'm not going to raise her to be com-petitive like I was. I've played competitive sports since I was eight and 've been on my own since I was 13." Pastorini also pointed his finger at the advertising industry, blaming them for the drinking problem in the United States. He cited the two popular jingles, "Now, it's Miller time," and This Bud's for you" as two prime examples of the way advertisers "pound it into your brain to drink."

"YOUR LEFT BRAIN is what is affected when you drink, it's at that point that your right brain takes over."

Pastorini explained that the left hemisphere of the brain is responsible for the logical and sequential judgement that is vital to functioning in society. He said the right brain emotions, such as dancing and singing, aren't excercised enough in an individual's typical day, so, to compensate, that individual escapes by drink-

'People think all the fun and dancing and joy is in the bottle," he said. "But they don't realize that all that good stuff is within themselves."

PASTORINI SAID that people are afraid to be labeled as weak, so they never admit to themselves that they have a drinking problem.

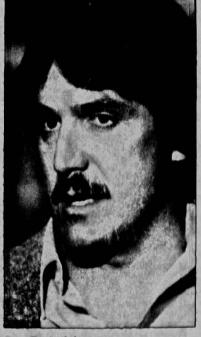

"I'm going to be 34 next month, and I am happy that I got the chance to step outside and take a good look at what I was doing to myself."

Pastorini's reputation was not the best among sportswriters during his active career. In 1980, he pushed Houston Post reporter Dale Robertson through a doorway after a practice. "I'm very happy now," he said.

"There was a lot of competition then. Drinking was sort of like a garbage truck. I had all this garbage, and when I drank, the garbage truck came and took it all away. In the morning when I woke up, the garbage was back, and this time there was more. I was pouring gasoline on the fire and compounding my problems."

Now Pastorini wants to turn his experiences around to help others in similar situations.

"I guarantee that there is a least one person out there with a problem, and if I can save one soul, it's a notch in the right direction."

No one barks at Dogwood field

By Steve Riley

Stan Huntsman of Tennessee, one of the top track coaches in America, has assembled in the 1983 Dogwood Relays field, a meet that will rival even the Texas Relays. Both meets will be contested this weekend.

The Texas Relays, along with the Kansas and Drake Relays, is one of the jewels of track and field's "triple crown." Yet it seems that Dogwood has Texas matched for talent. "I think Dogwood is probably the best collegiate relays crown east of Des Moines," Huntsman said.

"Our meet records here are as good as any relays competition," said Bud Ford, sports information assistant at Tennessee.

A FEW CHOSEN athletes from Iowa help comprise the stacked Dogwood contingent. The Hawkeye 4 x 100-meter relay - Gordon Beecham to Terrence Duckett to Victor Greer to Jeff Patrick should be among the fleetest in a high-quality field. That is, if they get their baton passes down - something they haven't done this season.

The quartet ran a crisp time of 40.22 seconds at the Southern California Invitational two weekends ago, but descriptions of their handoffs range from "terrible" to "not bad." In other words, one gets the feeling that 40.22 could be considerably faster with good passes.

"I know we have the ability," Greer said. "I feel we have a good 39 in us. I just feel the whole team hasn't clicked yet from the gun to the tape."

Iowa Coach Ted Wheeler agrees. "With Gordon Beecham coming on strong as the (leadoff) man, we could run 39.6 at least. The passes have been very good; they just have to execute under pressure.

With several teams already checking in with times in the 39s, the Hawks should have all the pressure they need.

THREE MEMBERS of the relay are also penciled in for open events. Terrence Duckett will chase a field in the invitational 400 meters that looks like a world leader's list in Track and Field News.

"Duckett's got his work cut out for im," Huntsman said. "Leading the him," field is Sunder Nix from Indiana (world indoor record holder) followed by Anthony Blair from Athletic Attic and Charlton Young from Villanova (NCAA indoor champ). Normally speaking, 45.9 or 46.0 will win Dogwood." Duckett has cooked a 46.74.

For freshman Jeff Patrick, the open 200 will be the biggest race of his young career. The field would make track fans cringe - Stanley Floyd, Cliff Wiley, Leroy Dixson, Stanley Blalock and Walter McCoy — but Patrick has proven himself as a "big meet" competitor.

Greer is the first alternate in the 200 race, which to Wheeler, is unbelievable. "Victor has run 21.0 this year, which goes to show you the quality of that field."

Doak returns to line-up for Westerwind meet

By Steve Riley Staff Writer

It is hard to imagine an outdoor track meet in Macomb, Ill., this weekend.

Yet members of the Iowa women's team will find themselves on the Chevron track surface of Western Illinois Saturday for a five-team invitational. The scoring meet features Illinois, Iowa, Northeast Missouri State, Parkland College and Western Illinois.

Iowa's roughest competition should come from Illinois - a team which it handled by 18 points at the Big Ten indoor meet. Western Illinois should throw a few good athletes at the Hawkeyes, but besides that, there isn't much.

The meet marks the return of All-American Nan Doak, who was inactive indoors due to an injury. 'She's probably not in peak condition," said Iowa Coach Jerry Hassard, "but we're using this meet as a training session for Nan. She's coming along very well." Doak will run the 3,000 and 5,000 meters this weekend. HIGH JUMPER Mary Mol, who soared to second-place at the NCAA indoor meet, won't travel to Macomb. Instead, she will workout at home. Distance runner Anne Dobrowolski won't enter battle this weekend due to a slight injury. Two events, the 10,000 meters and heptathlon, will not be contested at WIU. Both are events in which Iowa normally scores heavily.

The Hawkeyes' strongest race could well be the mile relay, composed of Mary Knoblauch, Chris Davenport, Vivien McKenzie and Elaine Jones, although it is a little early to expect it to qualify for the NCAA meet.

Hassard says he's unleashing a "fairly well-balanced attack ... We want to find out where our people are at this young stage of the season.'

The Big Ten season rolls into high gear this weekend for Coach Steve Houghton's Iowa men's tennis squad with rugged meets at Ohio State today and Indiana on Saturday.

The Buckeyes finished fourth in the Big Ten last season. But Coach John Daly's squad lost four-time All-Big Ten selection Ernie Fernandez to graduation and rebuilding is the watchword for Ohio State. "Last year was also a rebuilding year even though we had Fernandez," Daly said. "Now, our overall strength has improved from last season."

The Buckeyes defeated Iowa 5-4 last season in Iowa City, but it was a crippled Hawkeye squad that took the court that day.

THEN NO. 1 PLAYER Dan Rustin was just coming off a back injury and he lost a tough two-set match to Fernandez while John Willard was playing with a couple of nagging injuries at the No. 6 position.

another," Daly said. "We can move the first four around and hopefully that situation will help improve their games.'

INDIANA FINISHED last in the Big Ten championships last year, but second-year Coach Steve Greco is looking to change the image of Hoosier tennis.

"I'm optimistic because we have an exciting group of individuals who are interested in starting a winning tradition here at IU," Greco said. "Our goal is to win the Big Ten - and we'll settle for nothing less." Seniors Bill Funk and Pablo Salas-Schoofield will

The Iowa softball team, 6-3 overall, plays its first Big Ten conference games this weekend against Ohio State, a team they have already defeated twice this season

The Hawkeyes beat the Buckeyes, 8-10 overall and 2-1 in the Big Ten, on their Oklahoma trip, 2-0 and 1-0 in non-conference games. This weekend's games are in Columbus.

"We lost to them all the time last year," said Coach Ginny Parrish, adding that beating Ohio State twice early in the season shows that "the team has improved immensely."

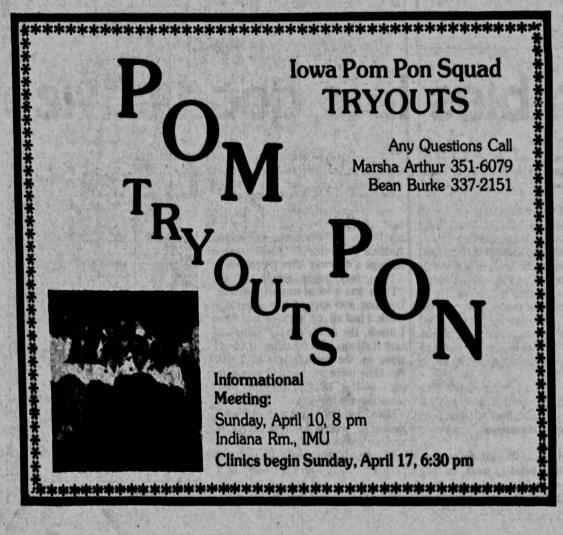

ACCORDING TO Buckeye Coach Diane Thompson, both of the previous meetings between the two teams were "very tight ball games." So it's no surprise that both coaches rate the two teams as evenly matched.

According to Parrish, hitting the ball has been a problem for several Hawkeye players. "We have a few players who have been in a slump and they are going to have to come through for us," she said. "We are going to need all of their bats to win." Presently, shortstop Lisa Nicola leads the team at the plate with a .391 average and outfielder Linda Barnes has also been hitting the ball well. The Buckeyes' Thompson sees playing at home and having one series of games against Michigan State under their belt as advantageous.

PARRISH AGREES that playing on the Buckeyes' home field will definitely be a plus for Ohio State. "And, they will be out to get us since we have beaten them twice in non-conference games," she said. The lack of playing time in the last two weeks is also a disadvantage for the Hawkeyes. Ohio State played three games against the Spartans last week, losing the first game 6-2 and winning the next two, 2-1 and 5-4. The Hawks have played in only one game since the Sooner Invitational against Northern Iowa, a 2-1 Iowa victory in extra innings Tuesday in Cedar Falls.

Thompson added the Buckeye field should be ready for this weekend's games. "Our field drains well and the maintenance crew has done an excellent job."

Back Doors lead pathetic audience in worship of dead idol, Morrison

By T. Johnson Staff Writer

HE BACK DOORS - a band that tours the country imitating the Doors - had a bad experience in Iowa City Wednesday night. Someone broke the windows out of their van.

Whoever did that should have slashed the van's tires, too. And then thrown fragmentation grenades into the Crow's Nest, where the Back Doors were playing. Picture this: A crowd of beer-swilling youngsters gather to worship a poet-icon long dead. Suddenly a series of loud explosions, some screams, smoke everywhere. Confusion, pandemonium, hysteria.

Ah, Morrison would have loved it, except for all the nastiness and blood involved. He was an anarchist at heart.

IT WOULD have served the crowd right. too. There would have been a few innocent victims, but the vast majority of those maimed would have deserved their scars. They were taking part in a great and appalling American ritual - leering at the dead.

A few people knew what they were watching. The most pathetic of those were the ones too young to remember the Doors, the ones who have transformed themselves - through records, pulp-magazines and an anal-retentive obsession with everything to do with Morrison - into experts on the Lizard King and his era.

But the vast majority of the gathered hipsters knew only as much about the Doors as they could glean from the post-Morrison Greatest Hits album and the posters on the wall outside the Crow's Nest. They were there to see the walking, singing, dry-humping dead singer of pop singles like "Touch Me" and "Hello, I Love You."

And the crowd did just fine with the hits. It may have taken them a while to recognize some, and a few doubtless slid by without any recognition at all. But once the band got as far as the second or third verse, most people had at least a dim idea of what they were listening to. ONE COUPLE was out on the dancefloor doing dips - you know, like in disco - at the start of the second set. They'd work a couple of bars, get confused, stop and then start again.

The Back Doors' attempt to recreate the transcendent experiences of the 1960s for audiences whose dominant mode of conciousness-expansion is Pabst Blue Ribbon was as sad as it was cynical. They did it as well as one could expect, considering how stupid the whole idea is

People will doubtless accuse me of missing the point. I'll get mail calling the Back Doors a "tribute band" and me an ignorant pig. Save your stamps; I have the press kit right here and, yes, it calls the Back Doors a tribute band. But after Elvis impersonators and Beatles impersonators, I've heard every justification for this sort of tomfoolery I care to.

LUNCH SPECIAL

There might be an interesting story in Back Doors' lead singer Jim Hakim, but I'm never going to find it. I'll never ask if he feels himself visited by the ghost of Morrison each night before he takes the stage. I don't care if he's a method actor or idiot savant or some kind of psychotic leftover.

THERE MAY be something missing from people's lives these days, something bands like the Doors once provided. But it is obvious that the Back Doors and bands like them aren't about to provide the key. They'll make their money and go from town to town, their press kit growing fat with accolades from smalltimers and sell-

I just hope they were mad enough about their smashed windshield that they never come back to Iowa City.

Time:

Friday

Berra stories to a minimum. 2:30 p.m., KWWL-7. • Some people like boxing and some people like war movies. We get our visceral kicks from Mickey Spillane, whose maniacally macho Mike Hammer comes to the tube tonight in CBS' "Murder Me, Murder You." Detective Hammer (Stacy Keach) swills booze, spills blood and sprays lead all over the eastern seaboard in this story of pornography, international double-dealing and family treachery. Tanya Roberts, Michelle Phillips and Lisa

Blount are just a few of the delicious dolls hot for Hammer's rod. 8 p.m., KGAN-2; WHBF-4. Speaking of delicious dolls, this week's guest host on "Saturday Night Live" is Joan Rivers - which means that at least the monologue will be funny. If Joe Piscopo can do Ed McMahon again, there might be two funny skits. And if they show the Budweiser commercial with Leon presentation of lower-class working stiffs shoved around and ignored by those with power and wealth is really one of the most adical (and most sympathetic) studies of how society works that American film has created. 7 p.m., Cinemax-13.

Sunday

Malcolm Leo and David Solt, whose "Heroes of Rock and Roll" was the best TV show ever on the subject, went on to put together the theatrical feature This is Elvis. Contoversial for its combination of documentary footage and acting, the Solt-Leo film follows Elvis, and not uncritically, from his days at home in Tupelo to his death at Graceland.

In many ways, it's Elvis' definitive biography - certainly much more so than the sleazy Albert Goldman print bio. The shots of his 1968 Christmas special comeback alone make the film worthwhile. 7 p.m., KWWL-7.

• Speaking of sleazy, NBC grasps at the last straw tonight, as the limited series "Casablanca" begins its run. Yes, it's based on the movie; yes, Sam (Scatman Crothers) plays it again; yes, Bogart's role is played by — David Soul? We'd believe it only if Paul Michael Glaser played lise. The network ordered production on the series was so bad. So why do we get it? Recommended only for Vichy traitors. 9 p.m., KWWL-7. Movies on cable: The Discreet Charm of the Bourgeosie (Delphine Seyrig, Fernando Rey; directed by Luis Bunuel); 7:30 a.m., Cinemax-13. The French Lieutenant's Woman (Meryl Streep, Jeremy Irons); 7 p.m., Cinemax-13. Mephisto; 9 p.m., Cinemax-13. The Twelve Chairs (Dom DeLuise, Frank Langella, directed by Mel Brooks); 11:20 p.m., Cinemax-13

HE TRADITIONAL threeplay Shakespeare festival approach demands a history play, a tragedy, and a comdy. The Iowa Shakespeare festival ives its audience Henry IV Part I, Macbeth, and Measure for Measure. Then director Paul Bettis and his accomplices take this simple arithmetical equation, multiply it times the theory of relativity, and produce a stiflingly uncomic Measure that, particularly during the first act, produced only occasional fitful and emparrassed titters from an audience unsure of its bearings.

What the audience saw was a Measure like a blow below the belt, stunningly imaginative and unexpected, at once so unconventional but so convincing that it took time to suck one's breath in again and appreciate its almost painful pleasures.

The first scene, with its business formality, was placelessly generic, potentially unfolding anywhere. But when the scene ended, bodies hurtled frenetically onstage, silhouetted by partial, shifting backstage lighting filtered through the skeletal outline of Ming Cho Lee's effective bare bones set - to the musical accompaniment of what sounded like the Italian Rennaisance played at one-and-a-half times the normal r.p.m.'s - to exchange the tables and chairs which identified shifting settings.

THE LIGHTS THEN ROSE to reveal a convincing modern East European state in which totalitarian repression and capitalist decadence coexist, a world where love and betrayal are almost casual, where loyalty and affection are both for sale, so that the play's frantic scene changes in the semi-dark become emblematic of the explosive tension underlying the entire society. Even the sideworld of the play was real enough to be distracting. It was impossible at times to pay attention to the dialogue and actions of principal characters when listening figures lurked in the shadowy periphery, prostitutes enticed potential customers, uniformed troopers strutted past, and mysterious transactions were made.

The cast created character portraits that matched the seedy naturalism of the setting. Scott Smith's Duke was appropriately enigmatic, his behavior at times suggesting pure benevolence, at other times an insidious pleasure at his ability to manipulate friend and foe while retaining his disguise.

Deborah Bremer's Isabella was particularly effective in the scenes in which her cloying innocence was penetrated by a growing awareness of the worlds's corruption; Michael Keene was exceptional as Lucio, a character unfailingly aware that the world is primarily corrupt, and willing to do his part. "Hail virgin ... if you be," he salutes nun-to-be Isabella, eliciting one of those uncomfortable gusts of laughter from an audience recognizing the serious implications contained even in the play's occasional levity.

DAN KATZ'S portrayal of the pimp Pompey, complete with fur-lined coat, slick hair and blaring tape deck, could easily have descended into some tired television stereotype, but Katz was able to convey a man at once flip and feeling, loathsome yet perversely appealing. Laura Gordon's brief moments as Angelo's discarded fiancee were genuinely poignant, never bathetic. And Brian Poteat's toughguy-with-a-heart-of-gold Provost was straight out of every hardboiled detec-tive movie of the 1930's yet uniquely appropriate to his role.

The play's most difficult role is Angelo, who must shift from icy precision and cold duty to irresistible passion - for a nun - to a final realizationand repentence, while being a believable human being. Somehow Shem Bitterman did it convincingly, presenting an Angelo consistent even in his radical changes.

Measure's best moments - and Scott Smith's, who dominates the stage during the Duke's unveiling - occur in the final scene, which has often been criticized, since guilty characters seem to be rewarded more than punished. Under Bettis' direction, that scene provides a psychological lashing more frightening than the physical violence which has often preceded it a vivid conclusion to a memorable staging.

'Requium' short on drama, commitment

By John Voland Staff Writer

IUSEPPE VERDI was obviously of two minds regarding his Messa da Requiem; on the one hand he wanted to glorify and indeed preserve the memory of his friend, the poet Alessandro Manzoni, by writing a Requiem that was truly liturgical and yet political at the same time.

On the other hand, Verdi was the quintessential man of the theater; everything to which he applied his considerable skills turned out dramatically, compelling in a way unique to him. His Requiem may not be, in Hans von Bulow's words, "an opera in ecclesiastical dress," but it is definitely operatic: Instead of liturgical sections we are given scena.

Either the performers can opt for an all-out blood-and-thunder reading, giving the dramatic a free rein, or they can emphasize the spiritual qualities and let the drama take care of itself. There really is not much middleground to be pursued in this Requiem; commitment is all.

Sadly, the performance of the combined university choruses and orchestra under the direction of Don V Moses heard Wednesday evening at Hancher was neither spiritual or really gripping; instead, a rather halfhearted classicism pervaded the account, to the detriment of the contrasts in the score.

THE "DIES IRAE" section made lots of noise, all right, but I was neither mortified nor thrilled; the lovely Agnus Dei did not flow out serenely but merely continued. And so on.

The vocal quartet, composed of Anne Swedish-Moses (soprano), Jocelyn Reiter (mezzo), Robert Eckert (tenor) and Albert Gammon (bass), was a decidedly mixed bag. Swedish-Moses began very uncertainly, with garbled phrases and a distressingly flat upper register, but went on to contribute a committed, gutsy performance, with some lovely pianissimi (though the flatness remained a problem throughout). Reiter was unfailingly dramatic - a welcome addition - but chose vocal colorings that were consistently covered by the orchestra and/or chorus so that the effect was diminished.

Eckert was musical and committed and his Ingemisco was, in spite of limited vocal resources and a decidedly un-Italian sound, quite wonderful. Bass Gammon had problems of pitch and control throughout the evening and his solos, arguably the most dramatic in the score, were often dramas of completion rather than damnation.

In a score of this magnitude, the conductor's function is one of maintenance as much as interpretation, and on this point Moses was admirable: balances were acceptable and the tempi were safe and sane. But there seemed to be no spark emanating from the podium; could this be the same man who gave us such a wonderful Brahms Requiem not so long ago? Here Moses seemed to merely beat time and I was sad indeed he did not put more of himself into the performance.

THE CHORAL CONTRIBUTION was generally quite good, though I winced at the highly regional syllabilation of the Latin text more than once. The "Sanctus," with its double chorus and high-speed fugue, was a real highlight, and the massed sound was impressive in the "Dies Irae" and the "Libera Me" fugal passages. The orchestra, whose personnel has changed considerably since last I heard them, was also rather uneven, with scratchy strings but good brass (especially in the "Dies Irae") and some pretty woodwind sounds

Fassbinder shows his style in a challenging 'Bolwieser'

By Richard Panek Staff Writer

During a 14-year, 40-film career that ended with his death last June, Fassbinder often combined a blatantly bogus visual style with an antiromantic content. In Bolwieser, which the Bijou is showing Saturday and Sunday as part of its month-long tribute to Fassbinder, he takes that technique to extremes.

Visually, the movie relies on a style so arch that it draws attention to itself. Fassbinder overuses bad symbolism, frames his characters in awkward poses, aims his camera at an endless array of mirrors and windows.

This style is more an affectation of artiness. It's almost a perversion.

LIKE BRECHT before him, Fassbinder deliberately distances his audience. By emphasizing their dramatic devices, they isolate what matter most to him - their stories' politics.

In Bolwieser, as in most Fassbinder films, friendship and love are merely the means toward economic ends.

Here, the petty bureaucrat Xaverl Bolwieser, played by Fassbinder favorite Kurt Raab, finds power in the world of business, in which he is a train-station master. At home, however, his wife, played by Ellisabeth Trissenaar, controls him through flattery, using her beauty and money to blind him to her numerous affairs.

The public and private deceptions of Herr Bolwieser - his wife's and his own - end in justice, of a sort: Fassbinder does punish the guilty, but not always in accordance with the crime

Earlier in his career, Fassbinder would have left his Marxist beliefs on the surface. But by 1977, when he directed Bolwieser for German television, he had begun to integrate his political leanings into his plots.

Still, the story of Bolwieser has its gaps. Fassbinder never explains the wife's motives: She seems to be a Madame Bovary, but does she deceive her husband out of boredom, greed or hatred of herself?

SIMILARLY, THE pace unaccountably quickens toward the end of the film, with some major plot developments getting lost in the rush.

Fassbinder supervised the editing of this short version just before his death, yet some questions do remain. Those questions, however, don't detract from the fact that Bolwieser is an especially challenging addition to the Fassbinder legacy.

planes came — his hopes of towering again above Manhattan deflated by a simple shard of glass.

To the disappointment of hordes of New Yorkers who craned their necks in midtown Manhattan for a peek at the ape, the new Kong - an 84-foot plastic replica - was lowered from the peak of the 102-story building before ever expanding to his full size.

His creator, undaunted, vowed to have him back in shape in two days.

The publicity stunt to mark the 50th anniversary of the famous film was beset by bad luck from the start. And while it may have been the agonizing screams of beautiful Fay Wray that helped polish off the beast in the original film 50 years ago, this time he was done in by a rip in his nylon hide.

KONG'S RETURN to the top of the famous skyscraper was marred from the beginning. The difficulties worsened Thursday morning when workers realized that they had rigged Kong to face the wrong way. "They mispositioned him," said Dan

Wall Street, his chest apparently rubbed up against a shard of broken glass from one of the 22 windows broken in the effort.

The sliver of glass ripped a six-inch gash in his chest. The huge beast slumped, his head peeking around a corner of the building as helicopters hovered around him and the crowds below gaped and pointed - just like in the movies.

But the planned champagne reception went on anyway. As actress Maureen Stapleton read a message from Fay Wray expressing regrets she could not make the event, two antique biplanes buzzed around the Empire State's tower.

The balloon's creator, Robert Vicino, vowed that Kong would be repaired, return to the top before the weekend was over, and remain there for 10 days, towering over New York and glaring at New Jersey with his three-foot long teeth bared in defiance. "He will fulfill his destiny ... the saga continues," Vicino said.
