Unions not benefitting from UI building

ssociate Professor at istrict Court Judge ed or Stolen?"

By Mike Heffern Staff Writer Although contractors are breaking new ground with construction projects in the Iowa City area, members of local trade unions are not reaping the benefits of the latest wave of prosperity. According to Tom Verry, union representative for Carpenter's Local Union No. 1260, unemployment for the 800 carpenters in the union is about 70 percent. One of the reasons for the increased unemployment - even while increased construction is providing more jobs - is because of a state-wide trend away from the use of union labor by contractors that favor an "open shop" policy for hiring workers.

Dick Johnson, general manager and executive vice president for Story Construction Co., the firm building the UI Communications Facility, said about two-thirds of the contractors in Iowa are now under either an open shop or a "merit" shop policy. Open shop is a policy by which contractors do not knowingly employ union workers, Johnson said. In contrast, a merit shop policy means the contractors will use both union and non-union labor.

"WE USE THE merit shop a lot more now," Johnson said by telephone from his Ames office, "but when we first started out we used union. With the merit shop you use not all union or non-union, you pay for the standard and it's a mixture. We believe in paying a person based on individual productivity.

In the 10 years of Story Construction's existence, Johnson said the use of open and merit shop policies rather than hiring strictly union workers has grown considerably in his firm and in others. "It isn't just the money," Johnson said. "There are a lot of Iowa City's Morning Newspaper

Middle East peace plan dealt blow

AMMAN, Jordan (UPI) - In a crip pling blow to President Reagan's Middle East peace plan, Jordan said Sunday that King Hussein could not negotiate with Israel on behalf of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

We leave it to the PLO and Palestinian people to choose the ways and means for the salvation of themselves and their land and for the realization of their declared aims in the manner they see fit," the Jordanian Cabinet, chaired by Hussein, said in a statement issued after a five-hour meeting.

'We in Jordan, having refused from the beginning to negotiate on behalf of the Palestinians, will neither act separately or in lieu of anybody in any Middle East peace negotiations."

The statement said a tentative agreement between Hussein and Arafat last week on a response to the Reagan plan collapsed after Arafat consulted other guerrilla leaders.

The United States had urged Hussein to enter talks with Israel on the basis of the Reagan plan, which calls for a Palestinian entity on the Israelioccupied West Bank under Jordanian administration.

IN WASHINGTON, Reagan blamed 'some radical elements" of the PLO for Hussein's refusal to enter negotiations with Israel and said the development was an "impediment in our search for peace."

But Reagan insisted his initiative was not dead and said he had spoken with Hussein and Saudi Arabia's King Fahd and expected to be in contact with other Arab leaders later in the day in an effort to prevent a loss of momentum in the U.S. search for peace.

In Jerusalem, Israeli officials said in Portugal of Issam Sartawi, a leading PLO moderate, apparently by a radical Palestinian faction.

The other was the collapse in Amman of a deal in which PLO chairman Yasser Arafat had reportedly agreed with King Hussein to a Middle East peace move that at least partly included the Reagan initiative.

The developments illustrated two common Palestinian traits: factionalism and indecisiveness.

The problems have always limited the PLO, but they are even more dangerous to the Palestinian cause now that its guerrillas have lost their base in Lebanon Sartawi was a foreign affairs advisor to Arafat and roving envoy who represented the Palestinian cause in European capitals. At the Communications Facility worksite the labor is all non-union. Workers do not receive the benefits that union workers would have and they are paid about $4 an hour less for their work. According to Verry, the communications building project is one of the first in recent years to go with an open shop policy at the university.

But UI Facilities Planning and Utilization Director Richard Gibson said that isn't so. Although the "vast majority" of the labor used to build the Carver-Hawkeye Sports Arena was union. Gibson said the $2 million addition to the UI Alumni Center is also being built with non-union labor.

Bus drivers want city council to limit traffic flow near mall

By Ken Harris Special to The Daily Iowan

The downtown bus interchange on Washington Street is overcrowded and dangerous, according to the bus drivers who use it, and they are asking the Iowa City Council to limit traffic in the area to buses and pedestrians only.

In a 35-signature petition to the council, the drivers state, "We need to limit the access to Washington Street between Clinton Street and Capitol Street to the three transit systems (Iowa City, Coralville and Cambus) and pedestrians."

Cars and bicycles now have legal access through the bus interchange, but the bus drivers would like to see that ended. Arlo Fry, a senior bus driver, said with the combination of buses, autos, bicycles, pedestrians and blindspots it is "a no-win situation."

He said the concern of the bus drivers is "safety, and the inconvenience of trying to get the buses in and out while competing with other traffic."

Phil Nychay, president of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees local 183, which represents the transit workers, said support for the petition is "nearly 100 percent" among the drivers.

"IT'S NOT AN unreasonable request," he said. "All See Buses, page 6

"bestiality," he said.

Should senate give booty to the beasts?

"It's my understanding that they (BAC) are just trying to push the system (of funding groups) to the limits," Frei said. "What they're doing is completely legal under the rules; it's just not in good taste. It shows the lengths that certain of the 'new right' will go to."

Under the current senate constitution, the group should be recognized and funded, according to senate member Bruce Hagemann.

"They would be considered an expression group" under the new senate funding criteria, he said, and "the senate would have to fund them unless they can find some other technicality not to."

The new senate budgeting criteria classifies groups as either "expression" or "service" and funds them accordingly.

"I THINK WHAT they're trying to do is make the senate's budget procedures look ridiculous," Hagemann said. 'Clearly this is a humorous attempt." Senate Vice President Michelle Martinez said, "We have not seen their recognition form as of yet.

BAC turned in a budget request form, but they cannot receive money until recognized by the senate. To be recognized, a group must have its constitution in the senate office for at least one week before recognition. To be eligible for spring funding, groups must be recognized no later than this Thursday's meeting. BAC will not meet this deadline because its constitution was not in the senate office a week in advance.

However, BAC members did bring their constitution into the UI Office of Campus Programs and Student Activities three to four weeks ago, Kirkpatrick said. But so far, they have gotten nowhere.

"I DON'T KNOW why nothing came of it," he said of the group's constitution, "but something's wrong here." The idea for BAC developed about four or five weeks ago, Kirkpatrick said. "Mostly we were just having a conversation about it ... and thought See Funding, page 6

IRA claims Ulster bombings

BELFAST, Northern Ireland - A bomb destroyed a gasoline station near the military garrison town of Omagh Sunday, a day after Irish nationalists vowed to extend their terrorist campaign to civilian targets in the area. One fireman was slightly injured fighting a blaze from the explosion, but there were no other casualties in the blast that occurred shortly after midnight.

The Irish Republican Army claimed responsibility, police said. The IRA Saturday carried out a bomb attack in Omagh that killed one British soldier and badly maimed his colleague.

Britons mourn war deaths

STANLEY, Falkland Islands - As bagpipes wheezed a mournful hymn over the moors of the Falkland Islands, grieving relatives dedicated a memorial Sunday to the British servicemen killed during the war with Argentina last year.

The Rt. Rev. Stuart Snell, bishop to her majesty's forces, spoke of the sad 8,000-mile pilgrimage 541 adults and children made to visit the battlegrounds of their loved ones and dedicate memorials to the 255 men who died during the 74-day Falklands war.

At the end of Iosbaker's speech, a new motion was brought to the senate floor to reconsider the resolution, and a second vote, failing 12-11, was taken.

Sen. Bob Rafferty spoke out against approval of the resolution. "Do we have the right to restrict what our peers can and cannot learn?" he asked. "We are setting a dangerous precedent" if the resolution is approved.

The resolution stems from a referendum for halting UI weapons research that students voted on during the March 15 student elections, where 52 percent voted to discontinue DOD, weapons-systems research and 47 percent voted to keep it. "New Wave did have a great campaign," Rafferty said. The group collected more than 2,000 signatures before the elections and leafleted students to vote no on the referendum.

Sen. Jeff Winick said, "I think it is a mistake to tell teachers who come to Iowa that they can't research what is their specialty. I'm not convinced that this (resolution) even addresses the issue.'

Other senators, though, debated hotly that the DOD-sponsored research must stop.

Sen. Mike Price ran with Progressives '83, the winning senate election slate, because of the slate's promise to support the end of weapons-systems research at the UI.

"This (referendum) was passed by a majority of the students in the election" and it should be passed," he said.

PRICE GAVE THE research of Josef Mengele, the Nazi war criminal who conducted tests on changing people's eye color by injecting dye into their eyes, as an example of what unlimited freedom to research can result in.

A co-sponsor of the resolution, Sen. Joel Mintzer, said, "It just so happens that a group (New Wave) got out there to tell people what the issue is," and that is why students voted to end military research.

Iosbaker called the senate's move hypocritical and said senators are not keeping their campaign promises.

"This is a complete denial" of what Progressives '83 said they would do if elected, he said. "This vote tonight will hurt the senate. (They have) just angered and insulted the peace movement on campus."

In other business, a compromise resolution was passed Thursday concerning the last bit of work in allocating the mandatory student fees. It shows a willingness of the senate to compromise with the UI Collegiate Associations Council in dividing up the fees.

THE RESOLUTION states they are "in favor of the Union renovation" and voted to divide up the last $1.72 of mandatory student fees accordingly: 10 cents of each UI student's tuition per semester to the Union renovation project, $1.12 per semester to establish a faculty vitality, or endowment, fund and 50 cents to help the United Students of Iowa, a new student organization, get on its feet.

A fourth senate executive position, executive associate, was also created Thursday. The appointee will be in charge of appointments to and coordination of senate committees and commissions.

Jury rules Grant is guilty in UI Homecoming incident

By Suzanne Johnson Staff Writer

Joseph W. Grant, the man arrested at the UI Homecoming parade after police saw him dancing around Democratic gubernatorial candidate Roxanne Conlin's float, was found guilty Friday of interference with official acts.

After one and a half days of testimony, the jury reached the guilty verdict in less than 10 minutes. Grant, the Iowa Socialist Party's 1978 gubernatorial candidate, was arrested Oct. 1, 1982, after police responded to a complaint that Grant had threatened someone.

IOWA CITY POLICE Officer Gerry Knock said he found Grant carrying a placard and "dancing around the float of Roxanne Conlin.

Knock testified during the trial that Grant had turned away twice after identification was requested. attempting to strike Knock the second time. This prompted the officer to take Grant to the ground, where he was held until another officer arrived to handcuff the 52-year-old.

Grant's evidence included color photographs of cuts on his wrists and bruises on his arms, Johnson County Magistrate Court records show. During opening arguments, he said tight handcuffs caused him to suffer permanent nerve damage to his wrists.

Grant also said police gave him a witness statement supporting his accusation of police brutality. However, the statement, made by a UI pharmacology professor, was not admitted as evidence.

Grant said of the verdict, "I can't believe it." He said he will appeal the decision and continue to act as his own counsel.

The Iowa Code requires police officers to witness offenders committing misdemeanors in order to arrest them, Grant said, and Knock did not see him threaten anvone Sentencing is scheduled for April 25. Grant will defend himself in another jury trial April 28 for disorderly conduct, another charge stemming from the homecoming parade incident.

tion for damages he suffered when he was arrested Jan. 7 by Coralville police officers for a moving traffic violation.

According to the document, Coralville police 'unlawfully arrested, searched and forcibly handcuffed (LaGrange), and falsely imprisoned (LaGrange), without the privilege of a telephone call, for a period of three hours.'

LaGrange states in the suit the arrest warrant was void because the Henry County Clerk of Court was ordered to recall the warrant Nov. 3, 1981, after LaGrange paid his traffic fine and appeared in court.

DES MOINES - The Daily Iowan won nine awards - including two first-place honors - at the Iowa Newspaper Association's annual convention here Friday

The contest was the first since the state's two press associations, the Iowa Daily Press Association and the Iowa Press Association, merged to form the INA, a collection of daily and weekly Iowa newspapers

The Quad City Times, of Davenport, was named the Iowa Newspaper of the Year.

Bill Paxson, DI photography editor, received firstplace honors in sports photography for his shot of a soccer player. The judges said this of the photo: "Great emotion, captures pure feeling, super shot, and gives good feeling for soccer and intensity of game.

Also, the newspaper won a first-place award for general excellence in typography. The judges said the layout of the paper is sharp and clean "with a good mix of type and headline faces. Makeup on

The newspaper also won these awards:

• Coverage of education - second place, for overall coverage of issues and trends in education. • Community service - second place, for its coverage of urban renewal in Iowa City and a special "Downtown" section that was published in June and August.

• Contemporary affairs analysis - third place, for encouraging discussion on the local level of current social and environmental problems.

 Master columnist — second place to DI columnist Hoyt Olsen.

• Best editorial page - second place, based on content and attractiveness of the editorial page.

University Editor: Arms race can only bring war

By Dan Hauser Staff Writer

In a speech concerning the world's population and the the jeopardy it is in, political activist and senior editor of Progressive magazine Sidney Lens gave his views on the cost of the arms race in the first of three programs Sunday at Old Brick.

What at first was billed to be a debate between Lens and Dr. Michael Balch, UI associate professor in economics, turned out to be a speech by Lens after it was announced Balch was sick and unable to attend.

As Lens began, he told the large group he regretted Balch's absence because he enjoyed debating over the issue in such an atmosphere.

Lens said out of the arms race come three peculiar phenomena: the rampant growth of technology, the growth of an arms-research constituency, and the adoption of anti-communist views by many Americans.

'Our scientists are trying to figure out what the Soviets are doing," Lens said concerning the technology growth.

IN UNIVERSITIES where academic liberalism usually dominates and discourages funding of the arms race, the government's increased military spending is being strengthened by weapons research programs, Lens said.

Lens also said the "artificial hysteria" of anti-communism in the United States is a growing phenomenon. Many people are con-sumed with the idea that the Soviet Union wants to destroy the United States. Lens said five words are on the minds of people who are paranoid about the Russians: "'We can't trust the Russians.' We can't even trust our own government. The Russians can't be trusted, but why should we be suprised?" About midway through his lecture, Lens addressed the people who handed out leaflets that he said identified him as a communist. He said people can not chase the truth away by putting titles like "communist" on others and "the people who do ought to be ashamed of hemselves." is not stopped "we will all be shadows Throughout his speech Lens on the block." themselves.

Sidney Lens

emphasized the jeopardy the human race faces. "War is certain to kill the human species." He quoted General Douglas MacArthur saying nuclear war is "double suicide"

118

Lens said that according to the Canadian Army Journal, all but 10 military buildups throughout history have ended in war.

THE UNITED STATES came close to nuclear war 17 times between the years of 1950 and 1975, Lens said. Five of the close encounters have been accidental and nine have almost been limited nuclear wars.

In 1969, then-President Richard Nixon had a secret plan for ending the Vietnam war that Lens said was a "madman theory."

Lens said the plan involved Secretary of State Henry Kissinger visiting the Soviet Union and China and informing them that if they did not stop the fighting, Nixon - the "madman" - would attack with nuclear weapons.

The plan was never carried out because Nixon felt he had lost control of the American people, Lens said. In Hiroshima, there is a block outside one of its museums. On the block is the shadow of a man who was killed in the bombing of that city by the United States. Lens said if the arms race policy a contractor will use toward labor, Gibson noted, because they have to accept the lowest bid regardless.

Bill Gerhard, union representative for Laborers' Local Union No. 1238, said unemployment in his union is about the same. "Any time you have a high overall unemployment rate the open shop policy expands," Gerhard said, "That's because they've got workers willing to work for a lot less." Gerhard said the trend toward open shop is unfortunate because "those people (non-union workers) are earning wages that we earned 12 to 15 years ago. I've had workers come in here saying they can't make ends meet on what they're making" from non-union wages. Verry and Gerhard said job opportunities offered by open shop contractors do not lure workers out of their union, which is another reason unemployment within the union is so high. They said open shop contractors could expect difficulty in using inexperienced workers. "We don't need the delayed projects and cost overruns caused by unskilled labor," Verry said.

Jordan still believes the Reagan plan contains positive elements, the Cabinet statement said.

THE PLO opposed the Reagan plan because it did not call for a Palestinian state

In Albufeira, Portugal, a gunman firing at point blank range assassinated Palestinian leader Issam Sartawi, who had called for talks with Israel, as he stood in the lobby of a hotel hosting a conference of world socialist leaders. Sartawi, 48, a U.S.-trained cardiologist and PLO roving ambassador in Europe, was hit by at least two bullets in the head and died instantly, police said.

Palestinian faction claimed responsibility for killing Sawtari, who it said was a "criminal" who had sold out to

This overheated factionalism is connected to the other chief Palestinian problem, an inability to take bold political moves. Hussein met with Arafat last week, Hussein and Arafat wrote a draft agreement, which according to Jordanian and PLO sources, contained a positive reference to Reagan's peace plan and called for joint Jordanian-PLO action.

But even as the two leaders met, other Palestinian leaders began arriv-

Reagan plan. The dissenters said Arafat should demand a Palestinian state rather than settle for Reagan's proposal for an Palestinian entity linked to Jordan.

Then Arafat went to Kuwait for meetings with other Palestinian commanders, who apparently also gave him the thumbs down on the Jordanian option.

So in order to preserve Palestinian unity, and a bloody factional war, Arafat apparently told Hussein their earlier agreement was off.

For the past 15 years, Arafat has preserved his own leadership and PLO unity through similar moves.

After the convention, Perret was named to a steering committee to the National League of Cities on energy, environmental and natural resources issues. Ineffectual resolutions

Many UI students are truly concerned about many serious issues, and that's good. Unfortunately, the students' voice of concern is often channeled through a particularly ineffectual mode of expression: UI Student Senate resolutions.

It is distressing that the senate spends so much of its time and energy preparing, debating and voting on these resolutions. The latest example occurred at last week's senate meeting, when senators spent more than two hours debating a resolution that urged the UI administration not to accept grants for weaponsrelated research. The resolution was debated, voted down, reconsidered, debated some more, then voted down again.

The senate, though, could be forgiven for taking itself and the power of its resolutions so seriously. Much harder to understand are others who, apparently believing something really is at stake in these votes, work themselves up to strong outpourings of emotion over the results. Members of the student group New Wave fumed at the senate's rejection of the resolution. One of them declared the vote an "insult" and told the senate, "You've broken any unity between you and the peace movement here on campus."

That's ridiculous. For one thing, the hard work New Wave has done in educating the university community about peace issues was not in any way negated by the senate's vote. For another thing, there is still much positive sentiment on the senate in regard to peace issues, particularly the proposed nuclear freeze and the unconscionably high military budget - there is still much room for cooperation between the senate and student groups concerned with such affairs.

But beyond that, senate resolutions don't amount to much anyway. If they really expressed the senate's resolve to take positive action, and thereby served to guide the senate's future activities, they would have some value. But as it is, no one ever reads them, no one follows up on them and they gather dust.

Senators should stop fooling themselves into thinking they are doing something important when they debate such resolutions.

Hidden agendas

You will be honest, you will be honest. The chances are growing that that little, unheard voice is neither your superego nor your mother. It's a subliminal message hidden in the Muzak at the store

Behavioral Engineering Corp. of New Orleans produces and leases recordings with such messages encoded. You can't "hear" the message with your ears, but supposedly your unconcious does. There is debate over the effectiveness of the subliminal messages. One supermarket chain supposedly saw its losses from damage and theft drop from $50,000 to $15,000 in six months, but Richard Straub, assistant professor of psychology at the University of Michigan, doubts that there is an unconscious and that if there is if it can be affected enough to alter behavior. But there is no doubt that such efforts at behavior control are immoral and probably unconstitutional. The Federal Communications Commission forbids the broadcast of subliminal messages because they are held to be deceptive. But such messages are far more than that. They are an attempt to invade and control our thoughts and actions, without our knowledge or consent. It is the essence of totalitarianism because it attempts to control behavior by control or manipulation of thought. Congress should make such practices illegal. In some ways the privacy of the mind is the most precious right of all.

Over-population will ruin planet

By Brad Meyers

'N A WORLD where most of the major problems stem from an over-abundance of human beings, the continued support of child bearing is ludicrous

We have a life boat floating through space with limited resources, clean air, clean water, and livable land. There are at least five billion human beings spread thickly about the crust of the Earth. Five billion people struggling for ever-dwindling supplies of metals, fossil fuels, space, clean water, and food. Five billion persons causing more pollution, more crowding, more children - always, more children.

The reaction of a population is the same whether it's rats, hairy apes, or hairless apes. When you crowd rats they kill and eat each other. Hairy apes pick up the nearest weapon and beat each other. We go to war for "Lebensraum," living room; we rob and kill members of the same culture. We use crowding as an excuse to rob, kill, and otherwise harass persons who are different.

Numbers can be used to defend or attack any position. I use these for reference only. If we are to have a breeding population of humans (a breeding population being one large enough to keep the species from becoming extinct) on this badly mauled planet we must reduce the population numbers greatly. IF WE FAIL to reduce the population numbers we will poison or bomb ourselves to the point where a breeding population does not exist. We will become extinct as a species. The present reality of children dying in the street gutters will spread from India and Africa to Cedar Rapids, Dallas, and Chicago. Those who survive will not be able to utilize their full potentials due to having been deprived of the basics of life as children and adults. I will use the United States of North America as an example of what can and must be done. In this country the bearing another mouth has reached the point of mania. We give tax cuts, and other incentives, to people to have another child. We make the non-fertile pay for the schooling and care for the children of the fertile. We allow religious dogma to become the law of the land. Everything in our culture seems to be aimed towards showing how nice it is to produce another baby. The first step should be the removal of governmental incentives to bear children. Tax breaks for children must be removed. Under the present system the government tells us that it is okay to give birth to more than a replacement number of children. Every child reduces your tax burden but increases that of those around you. The mother pays less income tax, but her neighbor must pay more school tax even though he/she may not have children or sends those she/he does have to private school.

SCHOOL TAXES are a prime example of taxation without representation. If you don't use the service you should not have to pay for it.

Instead of reducing taxes the fertile must pay more. Let's say that a couple (male-female, female-female, malemale) who has no children would recieve a tax credit of $5,000. The first child would reduce that tax credit to zero, since we are trying to reduce the number of people. The second child would cost $3,500 in taxes that could not be reduced in any way. There would be no applicable deductions. The third child would be $7,000, and each child beyond that would be double the cost of the last child. Until the tax burden for 10 children born after the effective date of the law would be $896,000.

The sterilization of a parent would automatically reduce the tax burden by $5,000; with both parents being sterile the tax credit would be worth $10,000. This would also be true for those who did not desire to have children. A couple that was childless, and in which both partners were surgically sterilized, would have a tax credit of $15,000. If the couple had no earned income, their yearly tax refund would be $15,000

Sterilizations should be free, as should all methods of birth control.

FOR THOSE WHO feel that they must "go forth and multiply" because their religion states that they must, I would suggest that this is simply a form of slow-acting species suicide. If their religion ordered that all persons 50 years of age be beheaded on the village square, would they also follow that? What practical difference is there?

In the matter of aid for other nations, we must aid only those nations that are actively reducing their population numbers. If a "friendly" nation is not reducing its population, it is not frien-

As a species we are dying, slowly and surely. Unless we commit mass suicide with nuclear weapons, we will slowly strangle in the effluent of too many human beings. The last human will strangle in the poisons, and the only witnesses will be the cockroach and the shark. We humans have no natural controls on our populations and will kill ourselves. Unless we destroy all of the life on the planet first.

Laxalt: Reagan will run in 1984

Ruling will help NPR

The Federal Communications Commission deserves credit for its approval of new rules relating to the radio industry. Passed last Thursday by a 6-0 vote, the new regulations allow FM radio stations to use their facilities to transmit data such as electronic mail, and to offer paging services, competing directly with phone companies and other communications concerns.

The new activities will be carried out through the use of subchannels - the unused portions of conventional FM signals. Main signal capacity is not exhausted through transmission of a single message, so use of subchannels permits the simultaneous broadcast of alternate information, thus utilizing the whole of the signal's capability.

The regulations are especially important for the noncommercial FM industry, which sought the new authority as a way to make up for decreasing financial support from the federal government. (KUNI public radio in Cedar Falls, for example, has lost more than $30,000 in funding for this fiscal year.)

A National Public Radio official called the commission's action the "first essential steps toward financial security." NPR in particular has shown a strong interest in developing a nationwide paging system - linked via satellite - that would enable a subscriber to be reached anywhere in the country where a participating station was located. Other services would run the gamut from sports scores and stock quotations to Muzak background music and transmission of digital data between computers for government and private industry.

But the FCC action is indeed only a first step; private contributions remain a vital part of public radio financing. NPR's News and Information Fund and its Arts and Performance Fund, both of which rely on private constributions, will take on an increasingly important role in public radio financing as federal support is cut back. To continue its quality programming, and to help take advantage of the FCC ruling, public radio needs our backing.

"Polls are a factor, but they're not conclusive," said Laxalt, one of the president's closest friends. "Despite the fact that President Reagan has taken extremely strong positions, many of them controversial, he maintains a level in most polls that I see somewhere in the 40-percent-plus range. That to me is remarkably strong

"When I read a poll and see that John Glenn or Fritz (former Vice President Walter) Mondale is beating him at this point, that to me means very little, because the media haven't had an opportunity to focus on the warts, so to speak, of (Reagan's) supposed opponents.'

IN PREDICTING that Reagan will run and win, Laxalt said the president can overcome the economic woes of his first two years in office because "we think this economy has turned around. We're seeing the first healthy signs .... We now have a very sound and stable inflation rate .... Interest rates have come down dramatically since we came into this situation."

Asked how candidate Reagan expects to get the votes of Americans who have lost their homes, farms or jobs when the election may take place with joblessness still close to 10 percent, Laxalt said he believes Reagan can convince the people that he is not to blame

The senator admitted to expressing unhappiness that the White House was so slow to understand the impact of high unemployment. He said that on the day of President Reagan's State of the Union address he spoke to White House aides about the dramatic situation of 12,000 people standing in line during a cold night in Minneapolis to apply for 200 jobs.

"This suffering is just one more example of how serious that situation is out there," Laxalt said. "And while we talk about a long-term economic recovery, something has to be done at an interval basis, because we have too many people out there who want to work and simply cannot find employment.

HE SAID THE jobs bill will help some, but that what the nation needs is hurt farmers." a 2-point drop in the interest rates.

'We have this economy close to the goal line," said Laxalt, an ardent football fan. He foresees victory "if we can get a little more relief in these interest rates" - relief that Laxalt thinks is coming.

I pointed out that Reagan won the election in 1980 with the support of labor union members, farmers, women who usually vote Democratic, and that they are now angry with this administration. How does Reagan, or Laxalt, expect to win them back?

'The blue-collar worker is disenchanted, understandably," Laxalt replied, "because losing your job will leave you disenchanted quicker than anything I know of." But, he said, Reagan will win back blue-collar voters as the economy improves and the president re-emphasizes "the social issues.'

The Republican general chairman then volunteered the observation that, "One of the problems we have is a perception, which I think is wrong, that somehow the Republican Party is made up of the country-club types, living in their ivory towers, driving around in their limousines, not caring for the working stiff."

1 ASKED LAXALT if this "perception" was not more properly called a mountainous obstacle, since a prominent poll showed that "82 percent of Americans think the Reagan administration has helped the rich, while 75 percent think Reagan has hurt the poor, and even 60 percent say he has hurt middle-income people ... and that 74 percent say he has helped big business while 61 percent say he has

"These perceptions have been created, rightly or wrongly," Laxalt said, "and it is part of our job to dispel that perception, because it is harmful to us as a party. Laxalt admitted that he is troubled that former GOP chairman Bill Brock worked so hard to draw blacks and other minorities into the party, only to face a situation where, in 1984, 95 percent of blacks will be hostile to the GOP.

"There's a perception among far too many blacks in this country that Republicans are enemies," Laxalt said. "We're going to have to reach out, to involve blacks, to induce them to run for office and make them feel included.

"We're going to work actively prior to the next election with all minority groups. That is a deficiency within our party structure, and certainly working with blacks will be a very high priority.'

LAXALT SAID that he and other leaders in the Republican National Committee had concluded that the party "has grown a bit flabby," relying too much "on the media and fancy advertising and computer runs." He said he intends to concentrate on "grassroots activity" and on dealing with the problems cited above.

If President Reagan embraces Laxalt's optimism about winning back the jobless, the middle class, women, some blacks, he probably will run again. The question is whether even Reagan shares the optimism of his friend.

'Jobs With Peace' week reflects new grass-roots labor movement

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The peace movement unveiled a new grass-roots campaign Friday seeking to link the Pentagon budget directly to the nation's economic ills and proposing military spending cuts to pay for programs creating jobs.

Activists in more than 120 communities will mark "Jobs With Peace" week April 10-16, Reps. Don Edwards, D-Calif., and Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., told a news conference.

n D m M th

> ov fr ha wl

The new movement — sometimes dubbed "son of the (nuclear) freeze" — showed signs of early strength at Saturday's Democratic state convention in Massachusetts where labor and peace forces pressed a "jobs, justice and peace" resolution as an alternative to endorsing any of the current presidential candidates. "Jobs" got 884 votes, or 25.6 percent, to come in second behind Mondale's 29.3 percent, and ahead of all the other presidential candidates.

"WHETHER IT'S layoffs in Lansing or potholes in Portland, people are beginning to connect the massive military buildup now under way with the quality of their lives," said Jonathan King, coordinator of Jobs for Peace.

Edwards, primary sponsor of a freezelike "jobs with peace" resolution in the House, said there is a "growing feeling among many Americans that entirely too much money is being spent on unnecessary and wasteful military projects, to the detriment of domestic industries."

The non-binding resolution calls for a "significant reduction" in the amount of money being spent on nuclear weapons, foreign military aid and "unneeded" military programs and a redirection of this money to promote jobs in more socially productive domestic industries.

A major emphasis of the movement will be an effort to rebut Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger's contention that military spending creates jobs.

Dr. Gordon Adams of the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities said Weinberger's argument that every cut in military spending will mean the loss of 35,000 jobs was a "blatant effort to make workers hostage to the military buildup."

SCHROEDER SAID the impact of the movement could already be felt in the growing consensus against the "boondoggle" MX missile system. She said reports that President Reagan's arms advisers have concluded the MX could not be made invulnerable shows "good sense."

"No one wants to leave the country insecure," she said. "But we can go completely off the cliff as we have done in buying every new (military) gadget that comes along."

King said grassroots activities during the week will include budget hearings, religious services, tax day demonstrations and other activities in such large cities as Baltimore, Denver, Cleveland, New York, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, Atlanta, Los Angeles, St. Louis, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, Detroit, Seattle, Cincinnati, Chicago and New Orleans.

AUGUSTA, Ga. (UPI) - On appearance alone, Craig Stadler and Ray Floyd look anything but co-leaders of the Masters with only one round to Stadler, the defending champion, grumped and groaned his way to Sunday's low round, a three-under-par 69 that left him at six-under 210, where he was tied for the third round lead with Floyd, co-holder of the tournament record. Floyd had a 71.

Neither Stadler, though, who was a little harsh on his clubs during the round, nor Floyd, a touch annoved with his performance, seemed overly pleased with themselves and their onestroke advantage over Spaniard Seve

Ballesteros Two-time Masters champion Tom Watson, scoring well although he claims he's still not satisfied with the way he's playing, had a second successive 71 and Jodie Mudd a 72 to tie for fourth place at 212.

"I GET A LITTLE more disgusted at myself when I'm playing well and don't make the shots I thought I should," said Stadler, who capped his brilliant round on a windy afternoon with a 30foot birdie putt on the 17th hole. "I look a lot worse than I am."

Floyd, who tied the Masters record of 271 when he won in 1976, wasn't satisfied with his round because he felt he missed too many putts.

"I didn't get the most out of my round," he explained. "There were times when I should have done better than I did. I missed an easy birdie putt on the second, I had a poor explosion on the fourth and that's not like me. I missed makeable putts on the seventh and ninth, three-putted on the 10th and also had makeable putts on the 13th and 14th.

Stadler is attempting to become only the second player along with Jack Nicklaus to make a successful defense of the Masters.

"IT PROBABLY MAKES it a lot easier going in knowing I've been in this situation before," he said. "I know I've won here before and that I can win on this golf course. It puts good thoughts in your head.

"I can't expect Craig to play badly Monday and I won't go out and play Stadler either. There are a lot of other golfers who can still win this tournament.

Ballesteros, the 1979 champion, sank a 15-foot birdie putt on No. 18 for a 73 that left him alone in third place at 211. "I played very well but my putting wasn't as good as it usually is, except for the last hole," he said.

Mudd, at the age of 19, was low amateur in the Masters last year and has been a professional for less than a year. Unlike some of the other leaders, his thoughts were all positive.

"LAST YEAR, I had no intention of winning, I wasn't even thinking about it," Mudd said. "I just wanted to be low amateur and to make the top 24. Now I am trying to win. It doesn't intimidate me. I've had a good week and I know I can beat these guys."

Attorney questions credibility of Schlichter in gambling trial

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI) - A defense attorney involved in a gambling case in which Baltimore Colts' quarterback Art Schlichter is a material witness says a pattern of "extensive gambling" will be used to attack the quarterback's credibility, it was reported Sunday.

Howard Cardin, a Baltimore lawyer representing Samuel R. Alascia of Cantonsville, a suburb of Baltimore, told the Columbus Dispatch that he is investigating the gambling background of the former Ohio State All-America football star.

Alascia, an operator of a meat distribution business, is one of four Maryland men indicted Thursday by a federal grand jury in Columbus in a gambling conspiracy. The indictments, none of which named Schlichter, were handed up based on information given the FBI by the Colts' back-up quarterback. COURT DOCUMENTS show that Schlichter lost nearly $400,000 to Baltimore area bookies.

It has been reported that Schlichter went to the FBI after the bookies threatened to charge him $10,000 weekly interest on his debts and inform the Colts of his gambling activities.

"It has been brought forward that Schlichter is involved in other gambling," Cardin told the Dispatch. "More extensive gambling has not yet been brought out. Schlichter is not a credible witness.

"SCHLICHTER IS saying this is the man (Alascia) with whom he placed his bets. Why would he say that, I do not know.

Arch-rival lowa State is ahead for anxious, but inactive Hawks

By Thomas W. Jargo Staff Write

It is vitally important for an inactive Iowa baseball team to get out and play this week, whether its wins or loses according to Coach Duane Banks.

The Hawkeyes, who have been rained out of 13 games this season, will play four-consecutive double-headers this week before opening the Big Ten season against Illinois on Saturday.

Iowa will play William Penn today on the Iowa baseball diamond, and then travel to Cedar Falls and Ames for contests with Northern Iowa and Iowa State on Tuesday and Wednesday, respectively. The regularly-scheduled double-header with Grandview yestertime, and will be played here on Thurs- runs on the day. day.

"IT'S SO IMPORTANT that we play before we play Illinois," Banks said. "We're going to be in good shape if we play. We'll be competitive, and play well - whether or not that's good enough to win. We're anxious to play, and that's all we can ask."

The Hawkeyes were able to open their home season last Friday with a double-header sweep over Wisconsin-Platteville, 9-3 and 13-1. Iowa hitters showed limited ill-effects by the twoweek drought of inactivity, pounding the Pioneer pitchers for 24 hits - including four by shortstop Jim Drahozal. Drahozal had a home run

POMMEL HORSE specialist Bob Leverence posted a 9.65 score in the preliminaries and freshman Stu Breitenstine scored a 9.55 on the floor exercise, missing the finals by fivehundredths of a point. Both gymnasts finished in 11th place.

Steve Troester finished in 32nd place on the horizontal bar, dispite posting a 9.5 score and pommel horse specialist

None of the four Hawkeye gymnasts Joe Leo had a few problems and had to settle with a 9.05 score, good for 42nd place.

Dunn said that Leverence "did a good routine - it was probably one of his best. It looked like he would make it into finals until the last rotation and after that it took a 9.75 to make finals. Joe had a real clean first half and then he fell off, but he came back nicely after that."

"Steve did a good routine," Dunn said, "but it probably wasn't his best either. It probably would have been scored higher later in the meet.'

"My goal was to go out and hit my set." Troester said. "That's what I did. I didn't have enough time to get nervous, but it probably hurt me in terms of score. The judges loosened up quite a bit later on."

With the exception of Troester, the other three gymnasts will return next season and Dunn said the meet should give them incentive to return to nationals. "It was a real good experience for them," he said. "The competition this year was tough and I think that not having our team there hurt the guys who did qualify."

Last-place finish a first for Thomason

By Thomas W. Jargo and Robert Ryser Staff Writers

For the first time in her 10 years as the Iowa's women's golf coach, Diane Thomason saw her team finish last in a tournament.

Thomason attributes the poor performance at the Southern Illinois/Kentucky Dam Village Invitational in Gilbertsville, Ky., last weekend to inexperience and the lack of practice time.

'We're a young team," Thomason said. "We did not adjust too well out on the course. When your use to hitting a five iron and you have to drop back to a three iron, it's hard making the adjustment."

KENTUCKY TOOK the team title of the nine-team tourney with a two-round total of 621 on the par-74 Kentucky Dam State Park

Missouri teammates Lori Kline and Michelle Jordan tied for medalist honors with one-over-par 149's. However, Kline won the title outright after a playoff. Iowa's low scorer for the tournament was senior Theresa Ehrhart, who carded rounds of 84 and 83 for a 167 total

"We didn't have anyone shoot in the 70's." Thomason said. "You have to have people shoot in the 70's to win.

Nothing could go right for the Hawkeyes in this tournament, according to Thomason. "It rained the whole time, and we weren't able to get any roll," she said. "This group is not very long off the tee, so we need a lot of roll.

The Hawkeyes' percentage of getting "up and down" in two strokes around the greens was only in the mid-20's. "It should be around 50 percent," Thomason said. "Our short game is hurting us.

"We had to use long irons and fairway woods to hit to the greens, and it's hard to be very accurate. The greens are very large, and we were putting badly."

Men's golf

The Iowa men's golf team now has a better understanding of what they have to do be sucessful this season, after finishing in fifthplace at the Illini Invitational last weekend.

"We haven't been out since spring break, and it showed," Zwiener said. "We weren't consistent around the greens, and now the players know exactly what they have to do. They know where they stand."

ZWIENER SAID before the invitational that the Hawkeyes' short game might suffer at the invitational due to inactivity, and that was the case. Zwiener said the team would work a great deal on their short game this week once Finkbine golf course was ready to re-open

"It (Finkbine) is pretty wet right now," he said. "It should be open sometime at the end of the week.

Senior Gary Claypool lead the Hawkeyes with scores of 78, 75 and 76. Senior Mike Hasley turned in an impressive performance, according to Zwiener, scoring 78, 79 and 75. Eugene Elliott "putted poorly," according to Zwiener, turning in 78, 77 and 77. Freshman Guy Boros had a good first round, but the rest of his play was typical of the Hawkeyes' weekend performance - inconsistent. Boros shot 74, 80 and 82.

The Hawkeyes are scheduled to host the Iowa Collegiate Invitational in Iowa City on Tuesday.

Iowa's track sprinters looked eye-to-eye with some world class crews last weekend at the Dogwood Relays in Knoxville, Tenn.

The Hawkeye 4 x 100 meter relay sped to third in a loaded field that included many sprint-rich southern schools.

The Gordon Beecham-Terrence Duckett-Victor Greer-Jeff Patrick quartet recorded a hand time of 39.9 seconds, being nicked out of second place by Georgia, which also ran 39.9. Alabama won the race in 39.6.

The Hawkeyes' 39.9, when converted to fully automatic time, is 40.14 - a new school record. "When you're that close to great teams, you know you've run a remarkable said Coach Ted Wheeler. "A 39.6 race." would win the national meet any other year."

ASSISTANT COACH Mike Gilbert accompanied the relay members. "The handoffs were good except for the third (Greer to Patrick)," Gilbert said. "Jeff had to kind of weave to avoid a piece of the outside curb that was sticking out. But other than that, everything went great."

The third-place finish seems more remarkable considering Iowa accomplished it in the ninth lane - the outside and least desirable lane.

The Hawks' fought the ninth-lane nemesis in a few other sprint events. Duckett grabbed sixth in the invitational 400 meters in 47.17 from that lane. Indiana's Sunder Nix blazed to a win in that race in 45.1.

Women's track

The Iowa women's team enjoyed similar success at the six-team. Westerwind Invitational in Macomb, Ill., last weekend. The Hawkeyes won the meet "convincingly," as Coach Jerry Hassard called it, by 22 points over Western Illinois.

"I'm very encouraged with the way the meet turned out," Hassard said. "I'm proud of the way the whole team persevered." Hassard cited some good times that were clocked in the windy, rainy, cold weather. Among them was freshman Vivien McKenzie's 11.6 for 100 meters. "She easily handled some of her Big Ten rivals from Illinois.

POSSIBLY THE MOST impressive victory was turned in by senior Mary Knoblauch in the 400 meters. In breaking the tape, she beat the defending Big Ten champion, Rolanda Conda from Illinois. "It wasn't really that close," Hassard said.

Another target of the coach's praise was distance runner Maribeth See, who took third in the 3,000 and fifth in the 1,500.

Inconsistent play dooms Hawks

Inconsistent play, along with a few injured players, was enough to keep the Iowa women's tennis from victory on last weekend's road trip to Minnesota and Wisconsin.

The Gophers, behind the strong play of sophomore Kathleen Heckman - a 6-2, 6-1 victor over Iowa's Angela Jones, subdued the Hawks, 6-3, on Fri-Wisconsin sent Iowa home with a 7-2 defeat.

Once again, injuries may have been the difference. Freshman Rachel of Iowa's last four matches. Another freshman, Martine Guerin, was to return to the Hawkeye line-up this weekend but a recurring shoulder injury acted up during a team workout in Minneapolis, so she spent the weekend #### on the sidelines.

IOWA COACH Cathy Ballard says Guerin's condition is up in the air. She will be examined today and the extent of her injury should then be known. But McClelland is expected to return to the line-up this weekend.

As for those Iowa players who played, junior Sara Loetscher continued her mastery over Minnesota's Claudia Brisk. Loetscher, who has day. Saturday was much the same as never lost to Brisk in collegiate competition, extended her streak with a 6-7-6 win.

The Hawkeyes' Mallory Coleman defeated Cathie Wadden in two sets. McClelland was left in Iowa City to After winning the first set in a rest a sore elbow that has kept her out tiebreaker, Coleman came on to capture the second set 6-2.

singles for the Hawkeyes.

The Hawks were to host Northwestern on Tuesday, but the match has been rescheduled for April 19 because Wildcat Coach Sandy Stap does not want to travel to meet a team with all of Iowa's injuries. Purdue and Illinois will be in Iowa City for duals on Friday and Saturday.

Men's tennis

"We were due for a bad weekend." Iowa Coach Steve Houghton's words summed up the play of his squad last weekend. Ohio State defeated the Indiana, the last-place team in the Big Ten last season, trounced the Hawks 8-season. I thought we played fairly well at Ohio State, but I was disappointed at our showing against Indiana. They shouldn't be beating us that badly.'

THE BOTTOM OF the Iowa line-up continued to shine for Houghton against the Buckeyes. Juniors Cary Vorheis and John Willard posted the only Hawk wins in the dual loss. Willard's 13-3 record is tops on the team with Vorheis right behind at 12-4.

But as well as the pair played at Ohio State, they could not have played any worse against Indiana. "Willard didn't play well at all at Indiana," Houghton weekend. Ohio State defeated the Hawks, 7-2, in Columbus on Friday and Indiana the leat black the Bian State of the season. Vorheis really could have played a whole lot better also."

> Iowa will host Drake at 1:30 p.m., on Wednesday at the Kinnick Stadium Courts. If poor weather persists the match will be moved to the Recreation Building.

Raveling exempted from Cougar clause

PULLMAN, Wash. (UPI) - Though he had just negotiated a new five-year contract, George Raveling was simply released from his obligation as Washington State University basketball coach

A special "buy-back" clause placed in all new Washington State athletic contracts to make sure coaches fulfill their original commitment to the school was not included.

"We just flat released him," said Cougar Sports Information Director Rod Commons. "That buy-back clause we have in all contracts is just for the first three years.

"A guy like George had been here long enough to fulfill his initial commitment," Commons said.

Sportsbriefs

Baton twirling lessons

AT THE TIME of his departure, Raveling was working under a fiveyear contract signed in January of this year, maintaining his base salary at $48,000 a year. The new agreement replaced a five-year contract negotiated in 1980.

Washington State instituted the buyback clause after going through four football coaches in as many years in the mid-1970s.

The first coach required to buy back the remainder of his contract was Warren Powers, who left the Pullman campus after one season to become the new head football coach at the University of Missouri, Powers was replaced in 1978 by Jim Walden, who still holds the job.

person theatrical shows con-Cerns biographical context: Does presenting in theatrical form selected works of an individual writer (Mark Twain, Will Rogers, Oscar Wilde, Gertrude Stein, et al., et al.) actually show the life of that writer to the audience, or is it merely a frivolous exercise in storytelling?

While critics of the form (and there are quite a few) usually find the latter to be true, William Windom's judicious selection from and well-staged presentation of the short stories and fables of James Thurber proved that at least his Thurber I, seen at Hancher Auditorium last Friday, can provide an un-derstanding of the character behind the stage - only a desk, its chair, a typewriter and a stool occupied the space — Windom introduced the crowd to a man whose middle-aged befuddlement presented itself in his dress; illfitting brown pants, a blue shirt and a bluer vest, loafers and socks so red they could stop traffic on I-80.

Windom went on to welcome us to the world of this apparent wastrel through intricately crafted stories that showed off the more important aspects of his personality: his disdain for traveling ("A Note at the End"), his fondness for playing with language and languages ("There's No Place Like Home"), his troubles with women and the institution of marriage ("My Rules for a Happy Marriage"), his misanthropy ("Interview With a Lemm-

IN BETWEEN stories, Windom/Thurber presented several of his better known fables ("The Bear Who Let It Alone," "The Moth and the Star," "The Fox and the Crow") to provide brief comic interludes - as if anything could be more humorous than what he was already doing.

The key to a performance like this is timing, the ability to slow down for the punchlines and, at the same time, to keep the show moving and the audience interested. And Windom's timing throughout was almost flawless - he worked the audience as if they were watching a Vegas lounge act. Only during "A Note At the End" (the first piece, of course) and "Teacher's Pet," which was a too-lengthy substitute for "Evening's at Seven," did people seem

It was an imaginative and exciting bit of theater.

All told, William Windom's Thurber I gave the audience a renewed appreciation of one of America's finest, funniest writers, as well as the simple joy, in this age of immersion in visual media from print to film to video to MTV and beyond, of seeing and hearing stories told, and told well.

Iowa By Paul P. Soucek with se Staff Writer the Do

WRITE AS a faithful and realistic native Iowan - funk music is a rare commodity here (or anywhere in the Great Plains, for that matter). Iowans tend to confuse "funk" with a miracle corn hybrid that grows twice as fast and is twice as resistant to rootworm.

Funk is first of all the musical groove dug out by James Brown, Sly Stone and Jimi Hendrix. If you were to throw it onto the R & B spectrum, it would fall at the opposite end of the pseudo-Eurodisco we think is synonymous with "dance loor."

More than that, however, funk is a faith, and when Funk Lord George Clinton visits Davenport's Col Ballroom on Tuesday, funk will be described in a way we can't hope to render into words.

("not just knee deep, she was totally deep when she did the freak with me"), CLINTON'S FUNK ROOTS can be

Entertainment today

"Dr. Funkenstein" Clinton has achieved success with a unified sound and with a simple philosophy: have sense of rhythm, will funk.

BUT THAT philosophy goes beyond music. The Funk Lord has created a funktionary packed with names, musical numbers and methods of uniting the groove. His "Atomic Dog" is currently a chart-busting single, and his recent Computer Games has taken a surprising ride up the charts as well. At long last, it would seem that funk is a hit.

If all this sounds bizarre - well, some of it is and some of it isn't. Bizarre are Clinton's wild stage-sets, costumes and eccentric personnel. Normal is the foot-tapping and attraction to the dance floor that almost all of us have.

This is the impulse that Clinton searches for. Funk or walk, says Clinton, advising that all dull people need to "search for the funk with a dynamite flashlight."

There's only one game in town tonight, and it's called Oscars. Pour the drinks, pop the popcorn and join hosts Walter Matthau, Liza Minnelli, Dudley Moore and Richard Pryor as they hand out the statues to Tinseltown's biggest heroes. We can but hope Bette Midler returns to really get the party going. The stars pull up at 8 p.m. KCRG-9.

Full-time Position in Advertising Typesetting & Paste-Up

Person will set type using a video display terminal and phototypesetters, prepare graphic material, and paste-up ads for a daily newspaper. Also, limited machine maintenence is required.

Activities are coordinated with fellow typesetters, day manager, production superintendent, and advertising salespersons.

Requirements include good typing skill, ability to meet a daily deadline. Weighing heavily in applicant's favor would be knowledge of type, graphics, design and layout, photomechanical technique, electronics, computers.

As tonight's blazing entrance of the brightest stars in Hollywood into the Dorothy Chandler Pavilion nears, the DI's Fearsome Foursome of Film and resident Fearsome Foursome of Film and resident 455, Ext. 4 prognosticator Rex the Greek have somewhat bloodily gone over the entries in the DI Oscar contest and come up with their own predictions and comments.

As always, the critical consensus leaves

 Best Actress. Mervl Streep in a walk. The readers say so; the critics agree. No one even had any smart remarks, though Rex the Greek feels sentimentally drawn toward Debra Winger because she's the only brunette nominated. We suspect there are other reasons as well.

 Best Supporting Actor. The fans are going with Lou Gossett for his portrayal of one bad mother in An Officer and a Gentleman, though James Mason, Robert Preston and John Lithgow have all attracted a good amount of support.

The critics, however, have their usual namby-pamby 3-2 split, with Richard Panek and Craig Wyrick in the minority with their Preston picks. Roxanne T. Mueller, who seems unable to make up her and Jenniter Warnes' rendition of "U Where We Belong." Tom Doherty wanted to go on record, however, as supporting Missing Persons' "Mental Hopscotch" from Lunch Wagon Girls.

Be advised — he also wanted to give an award for Best Credit to the Roach Wrangler in Creepshow, for Best Line to Arnold Schwarzenegger in Conan the Barbarian ("Conan, what is good?" "To crush your enemies, to see zem driffen before you and to hear ze lamentations of ze vimmen ... ") and for Most Disgusting Theatrical Display to the unicorn light advertisement that precedes movies at the Campus Theater.

Glass carves a new musical niche by drawing on a variety of forms

By John Voland

HILIP GLASS RAISED two questions Thursday night and answered neither fully (it was an evening full of hints): 1) Has he in fact created his own shade in the spectrum of modern musical thought or is it a new mixture? and 2) For what audience is he performing?

The inimitable Robert Christgau of the Village Voice says that "rock ears take to this avant-garde composer because he understands electronic sound in a melodic context and loves rhythm." That's true (and it also goes, to a lesser extent, for modern jazz ears) but the elements are reversed: He understands electronic sound in a rhythmic context and loves melody.

The "increasingly personal" tone of the newer works, heard in the second half, must be the intensifying affection Glass is feeling for melodic "pastels" that steer his mesmerizing repetitions towards pop and away from his academic past.

NEO-MANTOVANI is not around the corner, though; Glass' musics are dense, trying and provocative even though the emotional content has been upped a tad. The contrast between the two halves of the performance underlined the evolution: In the first (a dance from Einstein on the Beach; "Floe" from "Glassworks"; "No. 15" from "Koyaanisqatsi"), the rhythmic element, with its attendant hypnotism, was brought to the fore.

In the second ("Rubric" and "Facades" from "Glassworks" - an album that straddles the older and the newer Glass; "A Gentleman's Honor" and Act III from "The Photographer") a certain plasticity of structure - more riffing and less reiteration - raised the temperature inside Hancher several notches.

Why? Well, certainly the audience was more attuned to the contemporary aspects of Glass' music (the Ensemble was referred to alternately as "kick-ass" and "totally cooking" during intermission), and it reacted more appreciatively when it felt Glass and the group were com-municating to it (as indeed they seemed to be).

ALSO, THE ENSEMBLE played the newer music with much more excitement; the excerpt from "Koyaanisqatsi," for example, felt very much like a runthrough, however accomplished. Whether this communion was coincidental or indicative of the Ensemble's feel for an audience is moot; the fact remains that they played to the audience's awarenesses rather than trying to proselytize.

Back to question one: Well ... maybe. Certainly the borrowings are there; hardly a minute went by but I was reminded of, variously, Joseph Jongen's "Symphonie Conertante" (for organ and orchestra), early Corea, silent film music and Brian Eno.

There are more nods to the latter two than to any other sources; that, combined with Glass' involvement with the groups Polyrock and the Raybeats and his early rejection of the "repressive" atmosphere of Byrne and, to a degree, Laurie Anderson and the "performers."

BUT WAIT A minute - there's more to it. Primo: Although he did in fact reject the "repression," he was trained in that atmosphere, and training of that kind never wholly disappears. Secondo: The stage demeanor of the Ensemble was deadly serious - no smiles, no grimaces. And: There was a reliance on the written score, similar to big bands with their charts but also similar to the orchestra with its parts.

In the final analysis, I believe Glass has carved out a place for himself in the modern scene that is a mixture of many different sources, brewed in Glass' own idiosyncratic cauldron. His music is imaginative, frustrating, boring and transfixing by turns; it precludes labelling. And because it is based on a much wider cultural foundation than fellow eccentrics Harry Partch and Moondog, it is much more popular and will probably be around a while - at least as long as the silkscreening on the T-shirts on sale after the show (cool shirts, too).

NUMBER TWO IS easier now that's been decided (punted?). It's obvious Glass is not really skewing his art toward a particular segment but, true to his "polyculturalism," is allowing any and all comers into his tent. T-shirts, informal stage setting and electric atmosphere were balanced by the builtin distancing of the music and the esoteric allusions that pepper the music itself. Fascinating stuff - and the band was terrifically kick-ass, too.

Russian violinist performs tonight on Hancher stage

MITRY SITKOVETSKY is tired of being called the "heir of Oistrakh," of being expected to play Russian music and of the packaging of artistic endeavor into easily digestible chunks. He'd like to play jazz and is open to any type of music that has something to say to an audience "I want to escape the labels," said the young Rus-

Hancher Auditorium, in a conversation the other day. "There's a place on the modern stage for every kind of music and just because you play classical music is not a reason to refuse to think about anything else.'

Sitkovetsky - "Dima" to friends and admirers is young, talented and already acclaimed as a fine virtuoso ("A great discovery," enthused a Vienna newspaper). He wants more.

HE WANTS TO escape the shackles of a recitalist's nomadic life and stretch out, to try new avenues of approach to his muse. He said with some pride that he is collaborating with jazz pianist Chick Corea ("a fabulous musician") next year on an album. When in Paris or New York to play a recital, he seeks out cabarets and clubs and listens fervently. He grew up hearing contraband copies of the Beatles' early albums and the admiration still lingers.

The classical roots run deep, though. The son of famous pianist and pedagogue Bella Davidovich, Sitkovetsky studied first at the Moscow Conservatory and then, after immigrating to this country in 1977, at the Juilliard School in New York. He took first place in the 1979 Fritz Kreisler competition (the West's answer to the U.S.S.R.'s Tchaikovsky Prize) and a flurry of concert offers followed.

Sitkovetsky does not see himself as a youthful exponent of the Russian school so dominant earlier in this century (Oistrakh, Jascha Heifetz, Mischa Elman, and so on) and resents the implication that because he is Russian he is ipso facto a Russianschool violinist.

"THE OLD RUSSIAN school is really gone now," he said. "Heifetz was the one who changed it. He brought his influence to the U.S.A. and here it blended with the older French school (e.g. Eugene Ysaye) to create a new American school. But this American school is really an international one, because you have players like (Pinchas) Zukerman and (Itzhak) Perlman, who are Israeli, playing in this composite style."

The willingness to experiment with style and genre is another facet of this new school, Sitkovetsky remarked, pointing to Perlman's jazz excursions and Yehudi Menuhin's collaborations with sitarist Ravi Shankar. But the new violinists also have a pedantic streak, he said. "They feel they must play whole sonatas — a whole Beethoven, a whole Brahms and so on — instead of the programs of Kreisleriana and so on which the generation ahead of them played."

ALTHOUGH THREE sonatas (Debussy, Ravel and Tartini) and a fantasy by Wieniawski make up his program this evening, the young violinist said he enjoys playing virtuoso showpieces a la Kreisler. "I think it's a fault of this new seriousness that no one - except Perlman and a couple of others - is playing these pieces. They're really a lot of fun ... there's nothing wrong with showing off a little."

Dmitry Sitkovetsky wants to be thought of as "a violnist. That's it ... no Russian, no American, no this, no that. Just a violinist." Sounds fair to me.
