Some are 'nervous' about UI law funds

by Mary Taylor

Strong support for funding the new law being considered in the Iowa City Council continued Monday as committee member Larry Kulis and a number of the group's constituents were present when the council met. Earlier this month, the committee concluded its study of the proposed increases in city tax rates to fund the law, and the council is expected to vote on the proposal this week.

In the wake of the resolution, community members expressed their support for the law, saying it was crucial to the city’s future. Speakers praised the council’s efforts to address the issue, and noted the importance of funding the law in order to ensure its success.

Panel rejects El Salvador aid package

WASHINGTON (AP) - The House Foreign Affairs Committee Tuesday narrowly rejected an administration request for $2 million in additional military assistance for El Salvador, a key action in Reagan's goal to ensure that all Central American aid is approved.

Three Republicans joined the majority in voting to reject the additional military assistance for El Salvador, a key aid recipient. The legislation would have provided $2 million in military aid and $60 million in economic aid to that country.

Rep. Michael Barnes, D-Md., who chairs the House committee, said the bill did not provide enough support for El Salvador to ensure that all aid was approved.

Barnes said he supported the administration's request for additional military assistance for El Salvador and $60 million in economic aid for the country.

In a statement released Tuesday, Barnes said he supported the administration's request for additional military assistance for El Salvador and $60 million in economic aid for the country.

State vs. Two Cats: Can they hold their tails high?

By Mark Leonard

The latest in a series of protests against the proposed state law that would ban the use of animals in the Iowa City Code-pertaining to the display of animals - has been a question of whether the law is constitutional.

The issue has been contentious and has sparked debate among animal advocates and animal rights groups. The law is currently being examined by the Iowa City City Council, which will decide whether to approve it.

Kaplan touts test-prep program

By Business Johnson

Stanley H. Kaplan, the man whose name and business appear on college entrance tests, today defended the tests and said he expected further growth in the school he co-founded with his late wife.

The founder of the 132-school Kaplan Educational Center disclosed his Iowa City and Des Moines locations sprouted in the United States.

"I have always been a believer in the test-preparation program," Kaplan said of his 2,000 employees who run the school and its affiliated companies.

UI's computer plan miff s local business

The UI's decision to start a program placing faculty and staff members in "a couple of local computer businesses" is antagonizing some local businesses.

"That's the $150 million program that the University of Iowa funded," said a software developer in Iowa City, "and they didn't even ask us."

"I don't think that UI should be offering incentives to a business that is not open to all," the developer said. "The university is doing something that should be the job of the local computer capital system."

The developer, who asked not to be identified, said that the UI's action is "a real slap in the face." He added that the UI should have consulted with local businesses before implementing the program.

In a statement, the University of Iowa explained that the program is intended to provide opportunities for faculty and staff to work in local businesses and to help bridge the gap between academia and industry.

A spokesperson for the University of Iowa said that the program is designed to "support the local economy and provide a valuable educational experience for our faculty and staff." The spokesperson added that the university will work with local businesses to ensure that the program is beneficial to both parties.

In a separate statement, the software developer said that he was "disappointed" with the university's decision and that he believed that the program would do more harm than good.

"I think they're making a mistake," the developer said. "If the university wants to help the local economy, they should work with local businesses to create opportunities for their faculty and staff."

Ten and Anna Dun apply for University Family Housing in October last year and were not put on a waiting list and told they might be able to move in about by April.

On Jan. 17th, two days after their wedding, someone contacted them offering them a couple of furnished apartments. The Duns were given two days to claim the apartments, which was before being allowed to do so. In the words of the UI's "counselling," the couple was "let down by the UI.

"We were told that the couple was allowed to plead guilty to conspiracy to commit espionage," said UI President Larson. "However, the university decided to continue with the case and not to pursue any further action."

"We believe that the couple was unfairly treated," Larson said. "However, we feel that we made the right decision in continuing with the case."

In a statement, the University of Iowa said that the couple's case was "a difficult one" and that the university "spent considerable time and resources in investigating the situation." The university added that the couple was "given a fair chance to plead guilty and were not forced to make any decision."

A spokesperson for the University of Iowa said that the university would continue to "investigate the situation and take all necessary action."

The University of Iowa has been under pressure to make changes to the university's policies on sexual misconduct and confidentiality. In recent years, the university has faced several lawsuits and complaints regarding these issues.

In a statement, the University of Iowa said that it "remains committed to providing a safe and respectful environment for all students, faculty, and staff." The university added that it "will continue to work to improve the university's policies and procedures on sexual misconduct and confidentiality."

Married housing demand rises

By Susan Anderson

"These right now are some of the most cherished friendships we'll ever have," says resident Susan Anderson.

Johnson said the idea is a fairly moderate one that will be considered by the UI. The Duns will still have available for family housing, and the demand for apartments is increasing. The UI's Office of Housing for five years, and the most ex­ pensive two-bedroom is $500 per month and the most ex­ pensive one-bedroom is $400 per month. These rates are a result of the UI's actions.

"We've been studying the issue for several years," said Johnson. "We've carefully considered the facts and the options available. We will not move forward with the UI's actions."

"We are acting in the best interest of our students and the university," Johnson said. "We are doing everything possible to ensure that students have the best possible living situation."

Envoys Habb in cited as attack's target

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) - The bombs that killed at least 38 people - including a CIA analyst and seven other Americans - were delivered Tuesday by President Reagan.

The panel assembled by Reagan after the American analyst and seven other Americans were killed at least 10,000 PLO forces in Beirut, the State Department official said the attack was an attempt to assassinate U.S. Ambassador Robert Draper, winning a small, single-warhead missile, and continued to recommend development of a missile in closely spaced silos.

The report, issued by the Senate's Joint Committee on Foreign Relations, said the report would be given to a vote.

In addition, the House and Senate would have to approve the new law. The House and Senate would also have to come out of the embassy portico.

Before the session got under way, House Speaker Thomas Foley, a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination who has endorsed the government's finding in separate votes, and said he will move quickly to get it to a vote.

THE REPORT will be given to a vote.

House leaders differ on fate of MX

WASHINGTON (UPI) - A victory for the bulwark of the Senate's Joint Foreign Relations Committee ended Tuesday by delay for four years the battle over a bill to authorize the MX missile.

Sen. Bob Kasten, R-Wis., author of an amendment to suspend the MX program, said the Senate had agreed to suspend the bill to allow time to consider a defense appropriation.

Kasten said the MX would not be built until 1985, after the defense budget and the president's budget are considered.

To the report, Sen. Joe Biden, D-Del., said the report was "a grave blow to the MX program, the MX program as it was described by the president in his 1980 campaign," and would make it easier to get the bill through the Senate.

Buffalo will ignore Flames for game 5 against Oilers

EDMONTON, Alberta (UPI) - In Game 5 of their Norris Division semifinal series Thursday night, the Buffalo Sabres will pay no attention to the Calgary Flames. The Sabres today offered no reason why they felt it necessary to play the Flames at all.

NHL playoffs

EDMONTON, Alberta (UPI) - The Sabres announced they would not play the Flames in Game 5 of their Norris Division semifinal series Thursday night. The Sabres said they were "in fact, not playing at all" and would not be appearing in the game.

Blues move nearly certain

ST. LOUIS (UPI) - The St. Louis Blues will have to wait just a bit longer to conclude their successful season. The Blues announced today that they will not play in the Stanley Cup playoffs until the Norris Division semifinal series between the New York Islanders and the New York Rangers is completed.

Leaves move nearly certain

ERIE, Pa. (AP) - The leaves are expected to move nearly certain throughout the region, with the exception of the Erie area, where they may be delayed.

Wilke combines eras and style

By Barbara Richardson

ARTSPECTIVE: An exhibition at the University of Iowa Museum of Art, Ulfric Wilke’s works are as singular and unique as the artist himself. His creative process is a blend of abstraction and figurative painting, with a strong sense of humor and wit. His work ranges from figurative to abstract, and he uses a variety of media including ink, acrylic, and mixed media.

Some of the early abstract paintings in the exhibition were created in the 1920s, while others date from the 1960s and 1970s. The show covers works as diverse as medieval Europe and modern North American. The artist’s early work includes a number of paintings and drawings, as well as some sculpture. His later works are more nearly led by the artist’s own voice and vision.

Some of the recent works in the exhibition are abstract, featuring patterns in the iron railings, and a painting of a group of three trucks along with a delicate ray of view of two “bicycles” incorporating the brilliance and curves of the signs. A late series of engravings in animal shapes, “Mice in the Bottles,” represents the artist’s own collection of items such as mugs, cups, and other objects.

Some of the works reveal a variety of styles, including a more monumental approach to composition. The show includes works from 1927 to the present, and the themes it presents—such as realist to abstraction and figurative to abstract—are made evident by the range of media and techniques employed.

The museum has organized the several sections according to some of Wilke’s different creative approaches, with a resulting effect like flashbacks in the gallery. Though it is in some ways a linear experience, the show has the sense of one form growing out of another. The works themselves move from one to another.

Poets hold 'shoot-out' at the lambic Corral

KEEPSAKE, Iowa City — The Iowa Society of Poetry Festival has come to town, and one of its events will be a poetry shoot-out:

"Shall I compare thee to a summer's day?"

"No, said the poet."

"Shall I compare thee to a winter's night?"

"No, said another poet."

"Shall I compare thee to a trash can on a windy day?"

"No, said a third poet."

The festival continues with a poetry slam featuring the most daring, unconventional and expressively non-noble poets. The competition is open to all, and poets are encouraged to bring their own weapons. The winner will receive a trophy and the chance to compete against the world's best poets in a future event.

‘Dancing Bear’ by James Countryman's

WHALE JAMIE CHURCH'S MESSIE-MAKER, the first American novel about an African-American woman, is a moving story of love and struggle. The novel is set in the late 19th century and explores the lives of two women who are forced to confront their identities and adapt to society. The novel is a powerful story of resilience and hope.
