Ul tenure probe reveals no wrongdoing

Rochelle Bozman

After a five-month investigation into leged ethics violations in the UI natomy Department, the department ead and an assistant professor have been cleared of any wrongdoing.

Areport, dated April 19, to UI Presint James O. Freedman states that no further investigation is necessary into charges of conflict of interest in the real estate dealings of UI Anatomy Department Head Terrence H. Williams or into the "extensive and unauthorized borrowing of information from a student's examination paper" by Williams and Assistant Professor Asa Black.

The investigation report, compiled by Richard Remington, UI vice president for academic affairs, states "there is no reason to believe that a conflict of interest has existed among members of the Department of Anatomy as a consequence of their

U.S. peace mission is risky diplomacy

TEL AVIV, Israel (UPI) Secretary of State George Shultz is putting U.S. diplomacy to a critical test with a risky shuttle trip to the Midde East aimed at removing Israeli troops from Lebanon.

It is Shultz's first trip to the region since he took over from Alexander Haig, who resigned 10 months ago as smeli troops were besieging West Beirut. Israeli soldiers, while out of the capital, are still in Lebanon.

Talks on removing those troops as well as 40,000 Syrian and 10,000 Palestinian soldiers have been going on between Lebanon and Israel for four months - with little prospect of a breakthrough.

Republican leaders seek budget increasing spending for defense

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Senate Republican leaders, rejecting the 1984 spending plan adopted by their own budget committee, sought Monday to draft a substitute that would increase defense spending more, but raise taxes

Senate Republican leader Howard Baker told reporters that Budget Committee chairman Pete Domenici, R-N.M., will try to increase defense spending for 1984 by 7.5 percent from the 5 percent rate called for in the committee-approved blueprint.

In addition, Baker said the Republican leadership will attempt to significantly scale back the $30 billion in new tax revenue that is recommended in the committee budget.

When pressed, Baker said he thought $10 billion in new taxes would be 'significant.

"I would like to be able to see us put together a (budget) package that would have wide Republican support," Baker said.

The full Senate will probably begin the budget debate either Friday or Monday, May 2, Baker said. Baker and Domenici planned to meet privately Tuesday to discuss the substitute budget package.

"THE WHITE HOUSE will not be there tomorrow," Baker said, "It's essentially a Senate matter and I'll keep the administration posted.'

Domenici's committee voted 13-4, with Domenici and three others defecting, for Democratic budget plan that would increase defense spending 5 percent, spend about $9 billion more on non-defense domestic programs than President Reagan wants, and raise $30 billion in taxes — threatening the July income tax cut.

Domenici has indicated that he voted for the Democratic plan because the 12 Republicans on the panel were sharply divided over taxes and, faced with the possibility of a stalemate, the chairman wanted to get a budget resolution to the full Senate for debate.

The annual study, conducted by the Council for Financial Aid to Education, states that in 1981-82, the UI received $20,119,929. Although that is about $2 million shy of the previous year's total, it is still an estimated $2 million above 1979-80 contributions.

Well leaks 500 barrels daily

MEXICO CITY - Some 100 Mexican technicians worked Monday to cap an oil well leaking more than 500 barrels of crude a day near Mexico's southern border with Guatemala, officials said.

A spokesman for Petroleos Mexicanos, the state-run oil monopoly, said the oil well began leaking late Saturday when a Pemex technician tried to change the control valves in a routine operation to increase the well's production.

Brazil frees Libyan planes

MANAUS, Brazil - Authorities unloaded a final giant crate of military hardware from a grounded Libyan jet Monday and said the plane and three others were free to leave Brazil. The Brazilian government said it would allow the Libyan planes to leave "to any destination" and said it would return the weapons cargo to Libya later and by another means of transport.

The planes — three Soviet-built Ilyushin jets and a U.S.-made Hercules - were detained last week when it was discovered during a refueling stop that they were carrying arms to Nicaragua. Libya had said they were carrying medical supplies.

Retirees owed $1.2 billion

WASHINGTON - The Social Security Administration owes more than $1 billion to 1.4 million retirees who continue working part time, a government study said Monday.

The General Accounting Office said 86 percent of the cases reviewed by government auditors for 1979-80 disclosed underpayments totaling $1.2 billion owed about 1.4 million retirees. No figures were available after 1980. The report said the average underpayment to single persons totaled $575. Those with families got $633 less than they should have.

Denver EPA chief resigns

WASHINGTON - Steven Durham, chief of EPA's Denver regional office and a close friend of Anne Burford, resigned Monday in the face of sweeping allegations that he reversed staff environmental findings and failed to push for Superfund cleanups.

A coalition of citizen and environmental groups had called a news conference in Denver for today to lambast Durham's "disastrous record" as regional administrator. They alleged he loaded his staff with political appointees, shuffled veteran scientists out of key jobs and stalled enforcement actions.

Council considers injunction to stop building near airport

By Mark Leonard

In a last-ditch effort to save nearly $2 million in federal grant money, the Iowa City Council might have to obtain an injunction to stop construction of a residential development near the Iowa City Airport.

The city is also contemplating purchasing the land from the owner to satisfy the Federal Aviation Administration. Two weeks ago, the FAA informed the city that if construction of the residential development is allowed to go on as planned. Iowa City could lose $2 million in federal funding. The FAA objects to the development because it lies in the airport's clear zone, a safety area set up just beyond the runway.

city as Airport Commission member Russ Schmeiser told the council Monday that Kenneth Ranshaw's development will be "in place in about SCHMEISER AND Airport Manager Fred Zehr were in Kansas City Monday morning talking to FAA officials about the situation.

"They (FAA officials) have the feeling that for a number of years the city of Iowa City has not shown support for its airport," Schmeiser said. "They'd be opposed to dollars coming to the city if we did not show support for it.'

Schmeiser said FAA officials would like the council to pass a resolution stating its support for the airport and submit plans to the FAA showing the city will protect its investment.

The council is on a tight time schedule to convince the FAA of its good intentions toward the airport. Iowa City was to receive nearly $300,000 this summer for renovations at the airport. The city, Schmeiser said, must convince the FAA of its support by June 30 to stay in the running for those funds. Council members are contemplating purchasing the property from the owner. If the city decides to pursue this route, some of the money used to purchase the land might be reimbursed by the FAA.

"What I want to know is, is it going to cost more money to satisfy them (FAA) than we'll get from the grant?" Mayor Mary Neuhauser asked.

'FRANKLY I AM not ready to say at this time that we'll give the airport everything they want. We've got a lot of other worthy projects to fund,"

Another option before the city is obtaining a court injunction to stop construction at the site. Because the council had approved of the development plans, city "cannot legally" halt the construction. FAA officials have said the development is listed as uncompatible with a 1964 agreement with the city which limits what the land can be used for. Any development, either residential or commercial would be unacceptable because it would house a large concentration of people. In other action, the council toured the city by bus

Bill helps hospital finish projects

By Robyn Griggs

Iowa City Veterans Administration Hospital will be able to complete two improvement projects earlier than expected because of funds it will receive from the federal jobs bill. The hospital found out Monday it will receive about $319,000 of the money Reagan allocated to VA hospitals across the nation.

The money was "very equally distributed," according to John Hickman, hospital director. "A lot of it is based on the indications as to unemployment problems in various communities I think, by and large, Iowa distribution is very good.'

The funds will be utilized primarily for two projects, which Hickman said eventually would have been completed without the federal money. "This just simply helps us enormously in that we are able to do these now."

ROOF REPAIR AND replacement for the main structure of the building will take about half of the funds. The second half will pay for renovation of patient wards, including sink replacements, shower repair and decorative updating.

Work on these projects will begin as soon as the bidding process is complete, Hickman said.

The number of jobs created will depend "largely on the contractor" who submits the winning bid, he said, but still, "this should put a number of people to

UI students are hearing the call of he dollar and are moving into academic majors that will help them find immediate opportunities for financial success after graduation.

Nationally, the number of business. science and engineering majors has grown substantially, but numbers have decreased in the social sciences and letters, according to a 1981 study by the National Center for Education

However, Howard Laster, dean of the UI College of Liberal Arts, said "the more traditional departments are still thriving" at the UI.

'What we're experiencing is the increased interest in those employment-oriented fields," Laster said. "But very few departments are suffering at

JULIET KAUFMANN, director of the Undergraduate Advising Center, said she has seen a large increase in the number of pre-computer science and pre-business majors over the last two or three years.

"I think it's a motivational factor for both students and parents who want students to be financially independent when they graduate. Some parents are eager to recommend to their sons or daughters that they major in an area is much greater," said Tom Bullington where a good paying job will be easy to of Job Services of Iowa, adding this is Because of the trend, Ernest Zuber, assistant dean in the UI College of Business Administration, said enrollment numbers in the business college have been "a continual problem for the last 10 years.'

He said there are more than 5,000 students in pre-business because "kids do want jobs when they graduate. They're not trying to learn how to live

"I THINK there's no doubt that the computer age is here, and probably the availability of jobs here and elsewhere most evident in "all fields of computers.'

Richard Lloyd-Jones, chairman of the UI English Department, said job opportunities "depend on how you define job, and the skills required to hold a job."

An English major can "turn out to be a solid basis for most employment," Lloyd-Jones said.

"It may be harder for a liberal arts student to get entry level jobs, but businesses say they value the skills taught in liberal arts as they move up in the business world," Kaufmann

THIS IS WHY, Kaufmann said, the advising center encourages students whose major interest lies in the liberal arts area to pursue it. "College is a period of four years where students have a relatively large amount of leisure to take courses because they

'Students sometimes feel they have to take only courses that lead to an occupation, but the advising center advises them to take courses not just for their major."

For this reason, several students are choosing to major in a more specialized area and minor in a

"One thing that has been happening students are staying in the traditional majors and getting a minor in other areas or vice versa," Laster said.

'This way, a student isn't sort of deserting an intellectually exciting field," Laster said. "Ideally, we would like a situation where students could choose their majors on the basis of excitement, interest and competence in

THIS INTEREST could also be a factor in the success of a student not only after graduation but during his or her academic career.

Laster added, "Thirty years down the road, I don't think it will matter" what one's degree is in.

The possible creation of an Iowa High Technology Commission given power to "promote, develop and coordinate education and research development programs" has the state Board of Regents scurrying to protect its territorial rights.

A bill to appropriate $2 million for a new commission to strengthen advanced technology in the state has been approved by the Iowa House of Representatives and is awaiting consideration in the Senate Appropriations Committee.

Although high technology was a priority in the regents budget requests presented to Gov. Terry Branstad this fall, the shift of such funding to a separate commission has disturbed the

'There's a chance this thing could develop into a serious problem of governance."

The bill's sponsor, Rep. Richard Groth, D-Albert City, disagreed with the regents assessments. "I don't think there's an overlap."

HE SAID THE commission would stress "untapped" potential for high technology and development that has commercial feasibility, as opposed to the "pure research" performed at the state universities.

But agricultural research at Iowa State University and medical research at the UI are areas "where the state can be in the forefront of high technology, Groth said. The board endorses the concept, but finds it hard to support the bill until the language is cleaned up. "We'd like to Board President S.J. Brownlee said, have our cake and eat it too," Brownlee said.

The push to help Iowa's high technology capabilities compete with those in Sunbelt states could instead foster competition between the commission and the regents, skeptics say.

The language in the bill is a little unfortunate," R. Wayne Richey, regents executive secretary, said Monday. "It appears to give the high technology commission transcedence to the Board of Regents."

TO AVOID AN overlap in the functions of the two state bodies, the regents are proposing to substitute the words "encourage and support" education and research, in the place of "promote, develop and coordinate" as the first duty of the new commission. UI President James O. Freedman also expressed concern about "overlapping jurisdictions." He said, "The regents may have one set of priorities and the high technology commission may have a different set. I want to be sure the responsibilities are different in a way to promote cooperation, rather than competition." "I appreciate the concern Brownlee and the others had about what it could develop into," Regent Art Neu said, "but the considerable support (in the Iowa Legislature) behind high tech offers us little chance to get modifica-

"In these last hours of the session we might do more damage than good. The legislators may think we're nitpicking: most don't understand the nuances of running a university," he said.

THE BILL HAD no problems passing the House, according to Dennis Nagel, UI director of state relations. "One legislator said voting against it would be like voting against motherhood. Everybody is eager in Iowa to secure that high technology question.'

When the pervasive notion of Iowa's weakness in advanced technology started to build, former Gov. Robert Ray formed the Governor's Task Force on High Technology. Branstad carried on the idea and appointed both Freedman and Iowa State University President Robert Parks.

The more-than-20-member task force would be trimmed to seven representatives under the new legislation. The regents would select one member. The Senate and House would both send one member to serve. The remaining four spots would be filled by

Petty thefts increase, but officials say victims can guard themselves

By Jeff Eichenbaum

Stealing purses, wallets and other items worth less than $50 constitutes petty or fifth-degree theft, and it happens every day in Iowa City. According to law enforcement officials, the crimes are "unnecessary and could be prevented."

"We get them (thefts) everyday," said Richard Gordon, a lieutenant with 15 years of experience at UI Campus Security. Although theft figures aren't always accurate because many people won't report small losses. Gordon said he thinks the number of Iowa City thefts is on the in-

"Students or anyone that sees an opporunity are not afraid to pick up a purse and valk off with it," Gordon said.

Detective William Kidwell, of the Iowa City police, said, "Those petty thefts enerally lead to bigger crimes. If a person teals a wallet or purse and uses a check or D, then it's false use of a financial instru-

Many of the thefts, Gordon said, "are one by people who are good at it, and I call n professionals — because that's how make their living. They wait around ildings and places for people to leave uff around. Professional thieves will keep ecks and IDs, while opportunists usually ist keep cash and throw everything else

FOR EXAMPLE, Gordon said, a man who is accused of stealing a purse recently and was caught trying to use a UI student ID at the Union Bookstore "is a

"He came to town three or four weeks ago. He's been seen sleeping around at different buildings because he has no apartment. He needs funds, so he steals to Both opportunist and professional thieves need three things to be successful: "Ability, will and opportunity" - which means, in terms of prevention, "you can't cut their hands off, but you can take away

"People have to become more concerned about the problem and not leave their things laying around." A woman studying at the library last semester asked a man sitting at the table with her (whom she didn't know) to watch her things while she went to the bathroom. When she came back, "he and the stuff were gone," Gordon

OTHER THEFTS occur because people simply leave their belongings laying around unguarded, Gordon said. "Now, I wouldn't leave a $20 bill on the sidewalk and expect it to be there when I came

People carry too much money with them, Gordon said. A man taking a shower at the Fieldhouse last year left $500 to $600 in a locker — when he returned, it was missing. When property is stolen, it should be reported right away, Gordon said. "The longer it takes to report it, the harder it is to verify the claim.'

Kidwell said "Most of us could avoid these thefts if we set our mind to it." If people became more "cognizant" and cut down on invitations to theft, Kidwell said, "we could reduce these types of crimes by 60 percent.

"When 25,000 people (are) together in any one location like the (at UI), you're going to have some criminals.'

Student thieves make their moves in the downtown bars, Kidwell said, while bars in Coralville and outlying areas harbor more local resident thieves.

In regard to whether men or women commit more thefts, Kidwell said, "Crime doesn't know anything about sex.

"IF A GIRL'S wallet is stolen, a man can't go and forge the girl's name on a check," Kidwell said.

Both men said they feel the punishment for petty theft often isn't 'severe enough. Gordon said the courts should "go light" on first-time offenders, but when the person gets "picked up a week later and a week after that, the courts should go heavier on

'The penalty, as described by law, is quite adequate," Kidwell said. "But there are times that I personally believe the courts are too lenient, but that is their prerogative and their job, not mine."

"We're not recommending it become a acation destination," said Tom Davidson, New York travel researcher. "It's not going to pull people away from Las Vegas or California, but Iowa can be attractive to those looking for rest, relaxation and a break away from the routine."

Davidson earlier this year developed a five-year tourism promotion campaign for lowa that would reel in nearly $160 million from out-of-staters by 1988

The plan was designed to provide background for the Iowa Legislature and the tourism industry. Davidson said success would be built on promoting the strengths of friendly people and traditional values. That promotion could cost $1.5 million each year. BUT BEFORE IOWA becomes a firstrate spot for relaxation, its self-image must be polished, according to Alan Rossmann, owner of Meacham Travel Service in Iowa City. He said Iowa has too many "second-rate 'Ma and Pa' restaurants." They should be replaced by finer restaurants.

Clean air and country living might appeal to people from Chicago or Philadelphia, Rossmann said. "People go to Australia to stay on a sheep farm. I don't know how wide an appeal there would be to stay on a farm in Iowa. Iowa will not become a tourist attraction overnight, according to Larry Chegwidden, manager of Travel Services Inc. in Coralville. He said Iowa could make more waves in the tourism industry if it had beaches, mountains or casinos. "It's a nice place to get away to," Chegwidden said. "I think there are a lot of travelers who go through Iowa and never stop. If we can just talk people into staying for an extra day on their way through " Rep. Richard Varn, D-Solon, Monday said the Iowa House of Representatives Natural Resources Appropriations Sub-committee has increased its recommendation for the travel and tourism budget by $202,000 for fiscal 1984. That tipped the subcommittee's budget for travel and tourism to more than $600,000, he said. IOWA NOW SPENDS about $378,000 annually to promote tourism. That budget ranks 48th out of 49 states (Nevada did not report), according to Douglas Frechtling, director of the United States Travel Data Center in Washington, D.C.

"Iowa does not devote anywhere near the resources to promote the state as a tourist do," Frechtling said.

Travel expenditures in Iowa grew about 4 percent in 1981, which was about half the national growth rate, Frechtling said. For every $31,000 travelers spend in the state, one job can be supported, he said.

Travelers spent $1.6 billion in Iowa in 1981, Frechtling said. That figure includes travel for business, pleasure and family reasons by both residents and non-residents of the state. Their spending directly supported 51,500 jobs and contributed nearly $70 million to state and local tax revenue.

Frechtling said he has never been to Iowa, but he pictures it as a center for "outdoor recreation."

ROSSMANN SAID it would be difficult for the state to compete nationally as a recreation center. Boating resorts might be one addition that could keep people who like to fish out-of-state testing Iowa waters.

If Indianola's balloon races and The Des Moines Register's Annual Great Bike Ride Across Iowa received more promotion nationwide, they might attract tourists into the state, Rossmann said. 'We need to accentuate the positive and eliminate the negative," Varn said. "We need to raise the visibility of existing tourist attractions." The 50 percent increase in the legislature's recommended travel and tourism budget indicates a growing awareness of Iowa's needs, he said.

Employees learn how to keep fit

By Ken Harris Special to The Daily Iowan

If the overall health and well-being of city employees can be improved, then their productivity and working morale will increase.

That is the philosophy of a voluntary 'wellness" program offered to Iowa City employees through the Johnson County Health Department.

Iowa City Personnel Director Anne Carroll said 125 city employees have taken advantage of the program. It is financed by a Federal Risk Reduction Grant, and Carroll said the only cost borne by the city is employee time. So far about 300 hours of employee time have been invested in the program, she

The program is open to all city employees, but Carroll said the majority of participants hold administrative jobs. The wellness program gives employees "the opportunity on city time to see how fit they are," she said.

Sher Hawn, a Johnson County health educator who developed the program, said its purpose is "to get people to take a look at their lifestyle and to make changes in their lifestyle which will make them more healthy."

THE TERM WELLNESS implies "there's much more to health than the absence of disease," Hawn said. A wellness program considers elements such as physical fitness, diet, weight control, smoking, drinking and safety awareness. "It looks at all these things and sees how they all relate," she said.

Hawn attributes the program's existence "to the fact that health insurance costs keep rising. Everyone is looking for a way to stop the spiraling health care costs changes when employees do participate" in wellness programs.

Hawn said the wellness program has been available to county employees since the summer of 1981, but did not start in Iowa City until last November.

The program began with "an orientation session for employees, during which they could find out about fitness and wellness," Carroll said. Interested employees were then given an initial assessment of their physical fitness.

THE INITIAL TEST included oneminute exercise tests, flexibility and body composition tests and blood pressure checks. The results were compared to national averages, and "we were able to tell the employees actually how fit they were," Carroll Employees then took lifestyle tests and met with counselors to determine how they could fit excercise into their schedules, Carroll said.

Beyond this, Carroll said, "the individual is responsible for making their own changes. We just provide them with the services and the opportunity to participate." She said employees are reassessed every six to eight weeks for development.

"If people are in better shape, they won't take as much sick leave." Carroll said. "From the morale point of view, it's been a real benefit." She said it has made her job as personnel director easier because it has "boosted employee morale."

Hawn said the wellness movement is "nothing new," but it has gained public attention in the last five years. Many corporations offer wellness or fitness programs, but Hawn said she hasn't heard of any other local governments that offer the program.

Paul Poulsen, owner of Senor Pablo's restaurant, denied accusations made against him in a fraud and embezzlement suit in an official answer filed Monday, and brought a countersuit against the plaintiffs.

A suit was filed last week in Johnson County District Court by William E. and Mary M. Grell, of North Liberty, accusing Poulsen of failing to keep his part of a contractual agreement.

The Grells and Poulsen formed an oral agreement April 15, 1982, requiring Poulsen to pay William Grell $200 per week in return for management of Poulsen's company by the Grells, the suit states.

In addition, court documents state, Poulsen promised to make William Grell an equal partner and owner of the company, Old Capitol Distributors. In their suit, the Grells accuse Poulsen of forcing William Grell out of the company and of "looting the Gifts to colleges rise over $4 billion

NEW YORK (UPI) - Corporate giving to the nation's colleges rose 25 percent to $976 million in 1981-82, approaching the billion mark for the first time, a survey by the Council for Financial Aid to Education showed Total gifts to the schools from all sources rose 15 percent to a record $4.8 billion, said John R. Haire, council president.

That was $630 million more than the previous year's record $4.23 billion.

The top three universities to benefit were Harvard, $181 million; Yale, $82.1 million; Stanford, $76.9 million.

The survey of 1,101 schools showed alumni giving topped the billion-dollar mark for the first time, pushing to $1.2 billion, a rise of 18 percent over 1980-81 giving.

Others among the top 10 on the receiving end included University of California at Los Angeles, $63 million; Washington University, $57.2 million; University of Southern California, $56.5 million; University of Minnesota, $54.8 million; Cornell University, $50.9 million; Columbia University, $50.6 million; and Princeton University, $47.3 million.

Democrats make plans for a 'casino night'

By Suzanne Johnson Staff Writer

Iowa City residents will be able to drink free beer, win raffle items and bid for an autographed photograph of Paul Newman Saturday at Casino Night, a fund-raiser for the Johnson County Democratic Party.

The fundraising project, which begins at 6 p.m., was the main topic of discussion at the party's Monday night

Chairman Jeffrey Cox emphasized that the success of Casino Night rests heavily on members' willingness to use the telephone. Cox encouraged all in attendance to call Johnson County residents and remind them of the fund-property with Assistant Professor something better than this," she said Jean Jew, who was granted tenure during the time of the transaction, and Associate Professor Paul Heidger, who was promoted during the time.

Remington and Hines agree, though, that the faculty members' joint involvement in business deals does not imply a conflict of interest.

"However, a profitable relationship between a department chairman and a non-tenured faculty member deserves special consideration in view of the chairman's responsibility for evaluating the work of such colleagues," the report states.

"While Dr. Williams perhaps was insensitive in entering into real estate partnership which created an appearance of conflict, his prompt action to divest himself of joint ownership was appropriate and should settle the issue," it states.

BUT OLESON IS not entirely satisfied with the report. "I know these guys investigating this aren't the FBI. but I thought they could come up with of the investigation, though she added, "I'm pleased with the result. ... The reasoning does not please me as Williams did not divest himself of the property he held with Jew when he became aware of the problem, according to Oleson. "It came up in the John Oaks hearing (one of three tenure disputes filed in the Anatomy Department in the last three years).

"It may have been prompt, but it wasn't at his own initiative," Oleson

Remington said he stands by the investigation. "That would be pretty hard to comment on. The man divested himself of the property right away; what can I say?

Oleson was also disappointed at Hines' findings in the plagiarism

"Dr. Williams did not participate directly in the preparation of the grant application," Hines said in the report. He only allowed his name to be used to help Black secure a grant.

Because of the nature of the information taken from UI student Dennis Healy's exam paper, no harm was done to Healy, according to John Eckstein, dean of the UI College of Medicine.

'The sections of the grant applications and Healy's review that are similar describe or paraphrase the literature without critical analysis of the science involved," Eckstein's report states.

Black, who was listed as the principal investigator in a similar grant application under another category, was also cleared in the investigation, but Hines said if there is any fault to be found, it rests with Black.

"If the matter is to be pursued further, department and college officials are aware of the allegations and are in the best position to decide the difficult questions relating to the circumstances under which the contents of Mr. Healy's student exam found their way into Dr. Black's grant proposals and the ethical implication to be drawn from these facts," he said.

BUT OLESON SAID Healy had two Ph.D. advisers who could have been responsible for the material taken from his exam. Jew and Black were Healy's advisers, and both of the instructors' names appear on the research grant application, Oleson

Hines said in the report that he is unclear on who was responsible for securing Healy's permission to use the material taken from his paper.

"Dr. Black said that his failure personally to seek Dr. Healy's permission was due to his belief that someone else had undertaken to do so on his behalf." Hines said.

"I received conflicting information on this point, and am in no position to resolve the conflict."

The interest in contributing sparked at that time made the public aware that other colleges and universities statewide could receive such donations.

Compensation is due

Hearings in the U.S. House of Representatives are scheduled this week to discuss a bill that would compensate Vietnam veterans with illnesses that may be linked to agent orange. So far the Veterans Administration has refused to pay any compensation, although it has begun treating some conditions that may have been caused agent orange. Veterans have claimed a variety of personal illnesses and some birth defects in children of veterans have also been blamed on the chemical.

The government asserts there is no proof that agent orange, a toxic herbicide used to defoliate the forests of Vietnam, has caused any long-term health problems. There is however, ample evidence that the herbicide's key ingredient, dioxin, is dangerous. It was after all the finding of dioxin, in levels 20 times smaller, in the area of Times Beach, Mo. that led the government to evacuate and buy out that town. Surely if smaller doses are harmful to those citizens, the larger levels were harmful to those exposed in

Why the VA has refused is unclear. Cost may be a factor. Costs of providing compensation could be fairly high. And the VA is now facing increasing medical costs for another group of veterans: those from World War II. There are, in fact, efforts to limit care to service-related illnesses. It may also be that the government fears claims from the Vietnamese, who also suffered heavily from the chemical. If it admits that agent orange has caused long-term health problems, it would be guilty of chemical warfare in Vietnam - something it surely would not like to admit.

Whatever the reasons for the hesitation, they are insufficient. Dioxin is dangerous — the government's response to Times Beach confirms that. The United States did use agent orange in Vietnam - no one denies that. The government should bow gracefully and concentrate on working out reasonable compensation for those veterans who deserve it.

Some are more equal?

One of the great things about our American democratic system is the theory of the common man. After all, this is the land of "one man — one vote" and "equal protection under the law," where "any citizen may grow up to be president."

Here the president himself is subject to, not superior to, the laws of the land, in theory a common man (or woman) like yourself. And like you — assuming you were employed gainfully during 1982 - he had to contend with the headache of paying federal income taxes by the April 15 deadline. So, as a public reminder to Iowans that the president is just another one of us, here are the figures on Ronald Reagan's taxes, as published by The Los Angeles Times:

• Earned Income:

$200,000: Presidential salary

24,769: Pension as former Governor of California

247,061: Interest income

476,080: Long term capital gain for sale of house

3,600: Rents received

920: Film residuals • Deductions included:

$125,000: Exemption on sale of a taxpayer's principal dwelling

49,187: State and local taxes paid

95,799: Agents fees and sale expenses on house sale

184,120: Invested in property before sale 16,578: Paid in interest on note

3.887: Interest paid to three insurance companies for loans on policies 15,563: Cash contributions

36,172: Payments to law firm - partly for preparing his tax

President Reagan's adjusted income was $741,253. He paid $292,616 in taxes. $168,034 had been withheld; the balance of $124,582 was paid by check.

Surely it's that kind of equal citizenship responsibility that makes America great.

SCOPE scans for new quality

This is the first part of a three-part series on the Student Commission on Programming and Entertainment.

By Jeff Conner

LMOST THREE years ago in May 1980, by an action of the UI Student Senate, the Hancher Entertainment Commission was dissolved and replaced by the Student Commission on Programming and Entertainment. This action resulted both from the discovery that HEC was more than $20,000 in debt and also from accusations that HEC had lost touch with its audience and programmed more on the basis of personal taste than on audience interest.

Less than two-and-a-half years later, in August 1982, SCOPE found itself in almost exactly the same position, practically destroyed by the very problems it was formed to solve. This was despite the fact that throughout its first two years, a few SCOPE members continually proposed to the commission and to the UI Student Senate regulations that might have prevented the recurrence of these problems. They felt it was the lack of specific regulations and guidelines on commission activity that had led to the failure of HEC and that, without such guidelines, SCOPE was likely to meet the same fate. Though these arguments weren't taken seriously by either the senate or the commission as a whole, their validity was proven by the 1981-82 season and the Greatful Dead concert last August.

LAST SEPTEMBER an almost totally new group of commissioners sat down to try and pick up the pieces. Many people thought SCOPE should be abolished and replaced, as HEC had been, but the senate finally realized that the solution to the problem wasn't to fire everyone once every two or three years, but to establish some regulations and guidelines to keep the same mistakes from reoccurring.

Last fall, The Daily Iowan noted that SCOPE's debt was not totally the fault of present SCOPE members, but was the result of the Greatful Dead concert last August. Of the 11 commission members at the time of the DI series, eight had not been selected for their first term until September. The three incumbent members had all voted against the Greatful Dead, and favored gulations that would have prevented such shows from taking place.

The rebuilding process began in September, and though it has not been senate in the support of student ser- play in facilities that would not seat reflected by the number of events produced, or by the coverage received from the DI, SCOPE has taken a number of positive steps since then. Much effort has been made to lay a foundation on which to build a program we feel will be both profitable and will satisfy the musical tastes of our

THE FIRST STEP was to examine the problems of the past in order to determine exactly what happened and why, and to take action that would prevent the same mistakes from reoc-

So SCOPE developed, for the first time, comprehensive and specific criteria for the selection of acts. This involved a formula based on audience interest (as documented by audience research), the estimated expense of the event, and the financial position of the organization as a whole. If an act does not meet the criteria, it will not be produced.

This approach accomplishes four major goals:

1. It eliminates any element of personal taste or personal intuition of SCOPE members from the decision to produce an event;

2. It puts the burden of proof against the event. In the past, an event has often been considered to be a good idea until there was reason to believe otherwise. Often, this proof didn't come until the night of the show, when it became obvious how much money

3. It virtually guarantees that once the commission is out of debt, it will never go into debt again. Because of the new regulations, when the commission is in debt or is considering an event that could put it in debt, it cannot consider an event that involves any financial risks without the consent of the Office of Campus Programs and the senate executive committee.

4. It redefines SCOPE as a profitmaking organization. In the past, SCOPE has been considered a nonprofit service organization. The service defined was to provide entertainment for students. With the opening of the Hawkeve-Carver Arena, SCOPE standards for promotion and tenure. 3. What some faculty members and administrators seem to fail to understand or don't want to admit is that the peer group (and/or DEO and/or Dean) can, for a variety of reasons, fail to thoroughly and impartially review all the evidence and/or make a reasonable recommendation based on that evidence. When this occurs and the candidate is denied promotion and tenure, a grievance would clearly seem to be justified, and a timely and fair resolution of the matter would seem to be in the best interests of everyone concerned. The FDP were established to handle just such circumstances.

4. A majority of us in the senate apparently felt that the deleted second sentence in the first paragraph of section 20.264 IV D 2 was both unnecessary and introduced a serious logical flaw in the FDP. This flaw arises whenever there is a legitimate faculty grievance. In such circumstances, there is an initial disagreement betweeen the grievant and the peer group (and/or DEO possibilities.

In the wake of the Neil Young cancellation, SCOPE is now trying to establish a new era of quality programming.

BECAUSE SO MUCH of the actselection process is based on the use of accurate audience research, the methods of research also needed to be reevaluated. Though the first director of SCOPE was selected on a platform of doing massive student surveys and giving the audience what they wanted to hear, the research done in past years has been token and seldom used.

The primary reason is that the surveys were not designed in such a way as to make them of any value. The survey was a simple one. It basically asked respondents to rank the 10 acts they would most like to see in order of preference. There were problems with

First, the ranking was in no way subject to availability (just because 80 percent of the respondents state they want to see a particular artist does not mean that the organization has any chance of obtaining that artist). We even received some responses naming artists who were dead, or groups that plans to provide an additional service had broken up, not to mention many - to generate revenue to assist the acts who were simply too popular to

30,000 to 40,000

Second, it did not give any useful quantitative measure that could easily be translated into projected ticket sales. The acts were ranked against each other without considering the drawing potential of each act individually.

THE NEW SURVEYS are equally simple, but a lot more valuable. We compile a list of all artists who might potentially be available to us, and ask which of those the respondents would attend. The percentage of positive responses is multiplied by the number of students; after figuring in a reasonable margin of error, an estimation of student ticket sales can be

Because it is impossible to predict all possible acts for an entire year, and because musical tastes can vary dramatically within a few months, the original annual survey is supplemented by a series of monthly telephone surveys to check the accuracy of the original, and to add any additional

By James G. Andrews

OT LONG AGO The Daily Iowan printed a guest opinion by Professor Paul M. Heidger Jr. in which he expressed his views concerning recent changes in the Faculty Dispute Procedures adopted by the Faculty Senate. I would like to make four points, responding briefly to him and to those others who share his views.

1. The FDP were established to provide an internal peer mechanism for resolving disputes between faculty members in a fair and timely manner. Those of us who have agreed to serve on the Faculty Judicial Commission as panel members in grievance cases have done so because we believe it is important to maintain this system of conflict resolution, and we are willing to give up some of our precious time to see that it is available when the need

2. Although one may disagree with the wisdom of the senate's actions in amending the FDP, I think it is a opinion serious mistake to contend that the senate failed to address the central issue underlying the whole debate. In my judgment, the senate strongly reaffirmed the principle that, on the issue of qualifications for promotion and tenure, the faculty peer group's stan-dards must predomiate over all other standards (provided, of course, that they are consistent with universitywide standards). The amended second paragraph in section 20.264 IV D 2 of the FDP addresses precisely this ONE CAN ARGUE, I think convincingly, that by deleting the second sentence in the first paragraph of this section ("Essentially, if reasonable persons could disagree ...") the senate did nothing to detract from the preeminence of the faculty peer group's ment between the panel and the peer group (et.al.).

SINCE ALL of these people are presumably "reasonable," the deleted sentence would seem to apply and require that, despite the legitimacy of the grievant's case, the peer group's opinion and recommendation should prevail no matter how poorly informed they might be or how biased and/or irrational their view. The senate, in its wisdom, therefore decided to eliminate this sentence and not substitute any of the alternatives proposed.

Let me close by commending the central administration for coming to the senate and making their arguments for particular substantive changes in the FDP. Only by following that process will it be possible for us to work together to improve the FDP and strengthen faculty governance here at

Apartheid investments

To the editor:

The statements made by UI officials, about the "nominal effects" of a divestiture law, (DI, April 5) frame them as perfect examples for sociologist Dr. William Ryan's book, Blaming the Victim. The central theme of Ryan's book is that "blaming the victim" is the rationalization process utilized by visceral racists when confronted with minority problems and the poor. Three objectives of this process are:

1) to shift responsibility for the wrong, 2) to minimize the impact of that wrong, and 3) to appear genuinely concerned about the situation.

When Iowa Sen. Thomas Mann, D-Des Moines, called for the UI to relinquish $553,000 in South African investments, state Board of Regents Executive Secretary R. Wayne Richey, regents President S.J. Brownlee and UI Vice President for Finance Randall Bezanson concertedly tried to rationalze Mann's bill into irrelevance. Richey gives a sour grapes argument, saying the institution's actual losses would be insignificant and have only psychological effects; Bezanson assures us the regents accept only "gifts" from "responsible" companies "in terms of economic judgment;" while Brownlee muddles the issue with the legality of regents institutions investing in anything but U.S. government securities.

I won't go so far as to call these men racists; however, I do feel they are To the editor: responding viscerally. They have tactfully overlooked the point that no true and sincere American should desire to in any way support the apartheid government of South Africa, or any other inhumane system.

Yes, Mr. Richey and gentlemen, perhaps the bill's effects may be "more psychological than real." But the impact of those effects, coming from such prestigious institutions, would make a very real and significant statement to other Americans.

Can you not, gentlemen, say something more positive — even on your own behalf? Don't you feel that to not recognize the true import of Mann's bill, is to deny the responsibilities of your posts and as educators?

But then you're not really educators, are you? You are businessmen and administrators. Ward Grant

So what's next?

I'm confused. I thought Ronald Reagan was elected to get government off our back. Yet his administration, through whatever mechanism available, has proceeded to implement policies that bring government into the middle of the most intimate and personal areas of each of our lives.

Between the doctor and his/her patient he has brought the "Baby Doe" regulation. Between the daughter and her parents he has brought the "squeal law." Between a woman and her conscience he has brought the "prolife" amendment. Now he adds the relationship between adult children and their sick parents by somehow reinterpreting congressional intent of the Medicaid law.

While there may be those who view these efforts as an "appealing change," it is clear to this reader that they are reprehensible intrustions into personal relationships and blatant attempts to legislate morality. What is

Rep. Clarence Long, D-Md., says El Salvador needs to improve what he called a "wet noodle" army and drive leftist guerrillas to the bargaining table. Long finished a two-day visit to El Salvador Monday.

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (UPI) Powerful House subcommittee chairman Clarence D. Long said Monday El Salvador must strengthen its "wet noodle" army if it hopes to force leftist rebels to the negotiating table. The Maryland Democrat heads the House Appropriations subcommittee that is considering President Reagan's request for $60 million in military aid to El Salvador.

Long made a two-day swing through the country and met with U.S. Embassy and Salvadoran government officials before returning to Washington immediately following a news con-

"I don't think the guerrillas will ever come to a conference table or make an agreement until they feel that they are not winning in the field," he said.

THE CONGRESSMAN said he supported the Reagan administration's position that the left should not be brought into negotiations on El Salvador's future.

But he advocated talks headed by a "super ambassador who will bring the left into the electoral process," someone "of the stature of Sol Linowitz or Philip Habib.'

He added Magana was "most receptive" to the idea of a special envoy. "If we vote any money tomorrow, it will be a result of written agreements from the administration" to appoint the envoy, Long said.

The Salvadoran guerrillas have refused to participate in elections, claiming their candidates would be assassinated by rightist "death squads." They have called instead for negotiations with the government without prior conditions.

On his return to Andrews Air Force Base outside Washington, Long said he was encouraged during his "brief but productive visit" that the government planned to curb human rights abuses.

The Los Angeles Lakers are trouble nough under the best conditions. And ese are hardly ideal circumstances or the Portland Trail Blazers. "We didn't really have time to prepare," said Portland guard Jim Paxson. "We weren't physically tired, but we weren't mentally prepared for the Lakers. We'll be a lot better prepared Tuesday night."

Having upset the Seattle SuperSonics in two games in the opening mini-series, the Trail Blazers were thrust into the next round against the nding champions and dropped a 118-97 decision Sunday.

Game two of the Western Conference semifinal series is Tuesday night in Los Angeles with the San Antonio Spurs and Denver Nuggets opening their best-of-seven semifinal series in San Antonio the same night.

IN THE EAST, the Philadelphia 76ers, leading their semifinal series 1-0, are home against the New York Knicks in game two Wednesday night. Also that night, the Milwaukee Bucks and Boston Celtics inaugurate their

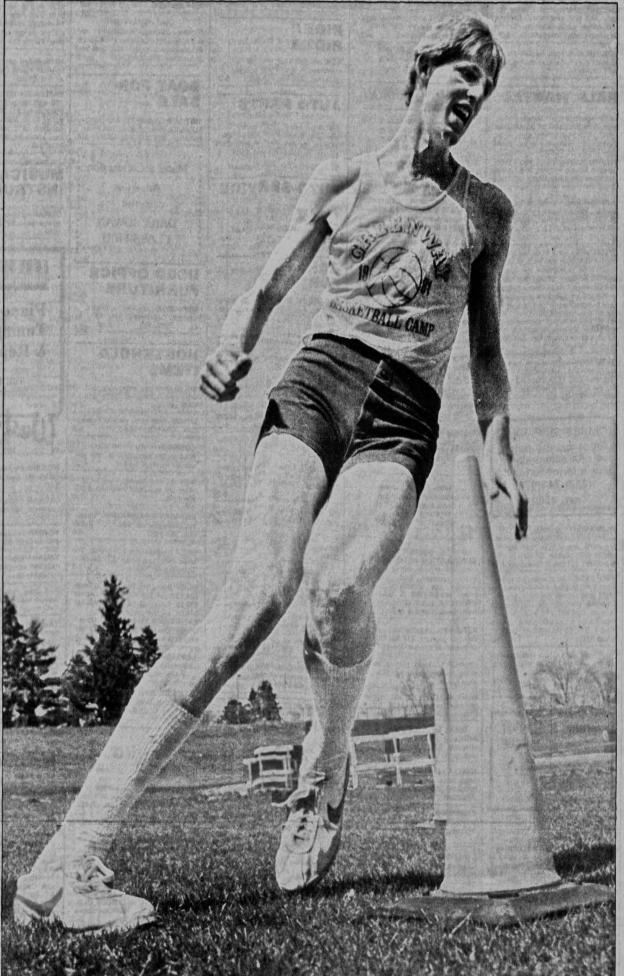

The Trail Blazers may need more than mental preparation for the Lakers. For there is the vexing combination of Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Magic Johnson. Abdul-Jabbar finished with 32 points in game one and Johnson delivered 19 points and 18 assists.

"At this time of year I get away from everybody and just concentrate on basketball," Johnson said. "I suspend myself in another world."

THE LAKERS ARE without injured forward James Worthy for the playoffs and may not have Bob McAdoo healed

"Right now there are a lot of teams out there gunning for us," said Lakers team really don't think they are getting the respect they deserve. The injuries we've had have weakened us, but we still have the team to win this

Denver defeated the Phoenix Suns 117-112 in overtime Sunday to win its mini-series in three games. Mike Evans, a 6-foot-1 guard who joined the club in January, hit a three-pointer in the closing seconds of regulation to force overtime and then scored 4 points in 21 seconds during the extra

Bruins take a whack at dynasty

The Boston Bruins try to disrupt a dynasty and the Chicago Black Hawks seek to lasso a legend Tuesday in Stanley Cup semifinal series.

The Bruins had little time to savor their 3-2 overtime triumph over Buffalo Sunday night in game seven before thoughts turned to the Prince of Wales Conference final series against the New York Islanders, who have won three straight Stanley Cups. The Islanders will open game one in Boston Garden Tuesday night — marking the first time since 1980 they've started a playoff series on the road.

says forward Butch Goring, an instrumental figure in the Islanders' sixgame triumph over the New York Rangers in the Patrick Division finals.

"I THINK THE Bruins deserve to be there. They have to be exhausted. I know I would be if I played four games in six nights and had to play in a seventh game. I'm just glad we had some time off."

The Bruins are making their first appearance in the Stanley Cup semifinals since 1979 and it took Brad Park's slapshot past Buffalo goalie Bob Sauve early in overtime to prolong Boston's

'Brad's our man," says Boston's high-scoring forward Barry Pederson. "He calms us down, he fires us up. He's got the experience and that's what you need - it couldn't have happened to a nicer guy.

Park's second goal of the game, at 1:52 of overtime, capped a Boston comeback from a 2-0 deficit.

The Black Hawks seemed ill prepared for Wayne Gretzky and the Edmonton Oilers Sunday night in game one of the Campbell Conference final series. Gretzky notched five points in Edmonton's 8-4 romp at the Northlands Coliseum and Chicago was second period.

"I know the guys have been saying they've been weak in the second period - I don't see the second period as being a problem anymore." says Oiler rookie Ray Cote, who held Black Hawks' star center Denis Savard without a shot on goal, although Savard did contribute three assists.

"The manner in which the team played in the second period was disappointing," understates Chicago Coach Orval Tessier. "We did not work very hard at the start of the second period. They put out the tempo and we didn't

Roby, Bortz looking for 'right' team

By Thomas W. Jargo

The chances of former Iowa grid stars Reggie Roby and Mark Bortz having a successful pro career hinge on whether or not the "right" team selects them in today's NFL draft.

Joe Stein, a sportswriter for the San Diego Tribune who specializes in covering the yearly selection process, believes Roby and Bortz could become coveted newcomers to professional football ranks provided they are taken by clubs which are conducive to their

Roby, the nation's leading punter the past two years, must be "fortunate enough to be drafted by a team committed to working with him," Stein

"ROBY HAS GREAT potential, but he doesn't have the skills of a punter down pat. He's inconsistent with his kicks. He doesn't have a good hang time, and he outkicks his coverage. He has a lot to learn to develop those Stein said Roby can learn to be a great punter, but it will take time possibly two or three years. "A coach can't expect him to come in right away and do the job," he said. "A coach has to sit him down a few years and groom him. He has to be patient with him and bring him along.

After setting the NCAA single-season punting average of 49.8 yards in 1981, Roby was touted as possibly being the third kicker in NFL history to be drafted in the first round.

Roby no longer believes he is a legitimate No. 1 pick. "I don't think so," he said. "There are a lot of teams that need an established defense, and the chances of a punter going that high aren't likely.

"I HAVE NO IDEA when I'm going. I'd be happy to be picked in the first two rounds, but I would guess the fourth or fifth round.'

Stein said the interest in Roby has dropped by NFL clubs because of his tendency to outkick his coverage with his line drive punts, but he is "certainly a fourth or fifth-round pick."

Bortz, a defensive lineman from Pardeeville, Wis., has "dropped on the lists" of pro clubs because he is not a "strong pass rusher," Stein said. "He is somewhat of an inactive tackle. He compares a little to (John) Harty," a former Hawkeye lineman who is currently playing with San Francisco.

"Scouts say he is a longshot, because he is not very quick," Stein said. "Again, it depends on if the right club chooses him. If a club has a couple good pass rushers and needs someone to stay back and block the hole to stop the run, they may take a chance on Bortz in the lower rounds."

Elway tops bountiful draft crop

NEW YORK (UPI) - John Elway is the crown jewel in a glittering field for Tuesday's NFL draft, with the San Diego Chargers and Houston Oilers poised to bring home the most booty.

One of the most attractive fields of collegians in recent years is available to the NFL's 28 clubs and the draft will begin at 7 a.m. at a midtown hotel with the Baltimore Colts holding the first pick. Elway, the All-America quarterback from Stanford who also excels in baseball, is the premier athlete on virtually every scout's board and will be the first player chosen.

But by whom? The Colts would love to have the record-setting passer, but Elway has indicated a strong preference to play for a West Coast team and the Colts have been informed he may pursue a professional baseball career if drafted by Baltimore. IF THE COLTS decide to trade the first pick, the Chargers and the Los Angeles Raiders are the most likely candidates for a deal. San Diego has three selections in the opening round and the Chargers have yet to come to terms with free agent All-Pro quarterback Dan Fouts.

The Raiders, whose owner Al Davis is a proponent of the bigplay offense, are rumored to have offered the Colts several top draft choices in 1983 and 1984 along with back-up quarterback Marc Wilson for the rights to the No. 1 pick.

UNITRINI

Elway, who completed more passes (774) than anyone in major college history, could be selected by the Raiders and groomed behind veteran quarterback Jim Plunkett.

THE OILERS DON'T pick until the ninth spot in the first round, but Houston traded shrewdly over the weekend and now has eight of the first 88 choices in a bountiful crop.

"I don't think the Oilers have ever been in a position to help the team with so many picks," says Houston Coach Ed Biles. "Now we have to make sure we draft the right players."

Before last weekend, the Oilers had the overall No. 2 choice, but they dealt that pick to the Los Angeles Rams for the Rams' No. 3 overall choice, a fourth-round pick this year and a fourth-round pick next year.

Mol jumps from old Army barracks to NCAA status

The Daily Iowan/Bill Paxsor

lowa high jumper Mary Mol:

"Last year I was intimidated, but this year I know I can compete. I'm more confident this year and reaching 6-0 has a lot to do with it. I knew that someday I could reach 6-0 and now that I have, I know I can overcome other Special to The Daily Iowan

After living in a converted Army barracks for a half semester, Mary Mol decided that was enough. That, along with her desire to receive a better education and pursue her life-long love of track, prompted the sophomore on the Iowa women's track team to transfer to the UI during the Christmas break of last year.

Mol had been attending tiny Crowder Junior College in Neosho, Mo., on a basketball scholarship. The school campus was at one time an Army base and Mol said the dorm she lived in was a mile from campus and had once been used as barracks.

When Mol chose to attend Crowder she said the main reason for doing so was that it was close to her home in Jenks, Okla.

SHE WAS ALSO under the impression that she would be able to continue her successful high jumping career (she was a three-time state champ in Iowa and runner up her senior year in Oklahoma) at Crowder, along with competing on the basketball squad.

Upon her arrival, Mol discovered that she would be the only one competing in track at the school and she would have a personal coach, but that most of her workouts would be on her own. She decided early on that she only wanted to be at the college for a year and said as the semester progressed she wanted to leave sooner.

Mol contacted Iowa Coach Jerry Hassard over the Christmas break and after a week she was already competing in the high jump for the Hawkeyes. After only five weeks she was competing on a Big Ten and national level.

MOL SET a school record with a 5foot-10 jump at the Big Ten indoors, where she finished second. She also placed ninth in the national AIAW indoor meet last season. Hassard said these early results showed "the great ability, determination and courage that Mary has, she did very well in a short time.'

Hassard also called it a "gamble" to get Mol ready so quickly for competition. The gamble paid off during the in- a personal best jump of 6-0. door season but it hurt her outdoor Mol developed a stress fracture in her ankle during the spring of last year, she missed almost all of the outdoor season and was in a cast until June. The ankle has basically healed, but Mol still has it taped and must avoid high-stress workouts.

ALTHOUGH THE stress fracture may have slowed Mol down a bit, it hasn't been evident in her performances this year. At the Big Ten indoor meet she once again finished a close second to Michigan's Joanna Bullard, who also finished ahead of Mol in last year's indoor meet. But at the NCAA national indoor meet in front of a national television audience and crowd of 15,000 in the Silverdome, Mol placed second and finally topped

According to Iowa assistant Coach Mike Strong, who coaches the field events, the NCAA competitors were much tougher than at last year's national meet. Mol rose to the occasion by breaking her own Iowa record with Strong credits two factors to Mol's improvement this year. First, she is mentally prepared better and second, her run to the bar is much improved over last season.

STRONG ADDS: "Since Christmas her training has been superb, she has done it all herself."

Reaching 6-0 was a milestone that Mol had been trying to attain throughout her career, and she feels that hitting that goal has really helped her confidence.

"Last year I was intimidated, but this year I know I can compete," Mol said. "I'm more confident this year and reaching 6-0 has a lot to do with it. I knew that someday I could reach 6-0 and now that I have, I know I can overcome other barriers." Hassard already feels that Mol is the best women's high jumper to ever attend Iowa. "She competes well and has the physical stature of a national-class high jumper," Hassard said. "It's only a matter of time on her way to higher heights.'

With strong defensive play, the Iowa City women's rugby team defeated Madison, 8-0 and Steven's Point, 12-0, last weekend at the Hawkeye Drive Field.

The game was scoreless until the end of the second half when Sarah Lussman and Jean O'Leary scored two tries for Iowa City.

IOWA CITY'S VICTORY in the second game came over a rather inexperienced Steven's Point team. "They had a lot of brand new faces allowing us to control the game," Anderson said.

Brenda Weir scored the only try in the first half and Robin Walenta and Sue Chase added two more tries in the second half.

The Iowa City Women's Rugby Club hosts the Midwest Collegiate Tournament this weekend at the Recreation Field. Games will begin Saturday at 10 a.m. and the championship will be at approximately 2:30 p.m. Sunday. Eight teams from Missouri, Ohio, Illinois, Michigan and Wisconsin will compete in the two-day tournament.

Anderson predicts big things from the Iowa City club because of its strong forward pack and backline, which is the "strongest ever" in three

"We should be up there in the top three spots," Anderson said.

THE IOWA LACROSSE CLUB won two of three games last weekend, beating Drake, 17-4, and Twin Cities, 17-8. Iowa lost to Wisconsin, the club's biggest rival, 14-10.

'We just didn't execute very well against Wisconsin," said club spokesman Prescott Ellwood. "They were up for the game and we played poorly." According to Ellwood, the lacrosse team's win against the Twin Cities on Sunday was one of the team's best played games all season. The Iowa Lacrosse Club, with a 7-4 record, travels to Champaign, Ill., this weekend to play Illinois and Ball State. "We should win both of the games in Champaign," Ellwood said.

terested in both Roby and Bortz.

"We're not real high on Roby because we drafted a punter last year who we hope to have around for a long time," Kschubach said. "We are very interested in Bortz. I can say somewhere along the draft, we'll consider him."

Two other Hawkeye longshots in the draft are offensive tackle Brett Miller and defensive back Bobby Stoops. Miller, who played just one year on Iowa's offensive line, won't speculate on his chances in the draft. "I'm a little anxious waiting for it to happen," he said.

Stein has heard little on Miller, saying he has "great ability that somebody needs to refine. Somebody will take a chance on him in the lower

Reed's 'Legendary Hearts' is no silly love song

T IS SOMETIMES stylish for a critic to pan the work of an established artist for the sake of drawing attention to his own. Lou Reed is a likely target for such an at-

After last year's The Blue Mask, which received unending praise (five stars in the ever-eroding Rolling Stone; an 'A-Minus' in the Village Voice), Reed became particularly vulnerable to the slings and arrows of outraged writers, and the recent release of Legendary Hearts (RCA) afforded a major opportunity for such 'criticism.'

But — alas — it will not follow. Initial contact with Reed here, as ever, is difficult: his quavering baritone half-narrating/half-singing is abrasive, and his guitar work endlessly and seemingly intentionally - borders on being out of tune. But persistent listeners will find themselves adapting to his minimalist, poetic style and paying attention to the substance of the work. The shifted focus is denegrating tales of lower-Manhattan lifestyles Reed presented as premier art-rocker and member of the Velvet Underground in the late 1960s, his subjects are now approached in a more satirical and highly intelligent manner.

The songs on Legendary Hearts are a curious combination of private concerns and public commentary. The first and title cut finds Reed addressing a topic that has begun to dominate his work - love (the album is again dedicated to his wife, Sylvia). After recognizing the illusion of mediahyped, "legendary" love, Reed resolves that to make love stay in the real world requires only hard work. It wasn't easy - even for Romeo. 'Legendary Hearts' is more than a silly love song In "Don't Talk To Me About Work." a classic study of a businessman's paranoia. Reed traces the steps of a droid-like executive who is unable even to walk the streets free from the fear of ringing telephones and workaday pressures. Atypically, it sports a lively, nearly-danceable beat.

"MAKE UP MIND" begins innocently enough with the artist pattering about the house and trying in vain to decide which colors will best adorn the walls. But by song's end he has become lost in a swell of indecision he then imputes to his lover: "Are you laughing at me in your sleep tonight/Leaving me behind/Why don't you make up your mind?"

The most engaging cut on the record is "Martial Law." Here, against the churning guitar of Robert Quine (best known for his work with Richard Hell), Reed gives us the hilarious duo of "Mr. Ace" and "The Marshal," city cops, who, when summoned to break up a domestic squabble, do so by declaring martial law. As they exit, a final warning: "And if we're called back/I'm gonna knock you flat/And stack you end to end/I came I saw I declared Martial Law/I'm the marshal in this city." The sarcasm is deadly serious.

As always, this year's Reed is as compelled to write about drinking and drugging as he is to partake. Legendary Hearts offers two more examples. "The Last Shot" depicts a pitiful drunk who, despite his coughing up blood and quaaludes, continues toasting, boozing and sinking into oblivion, all the while wondering which one will indeed be his last shot SIDE TWO'S "Bottoming Out" is a seemingly autobiographical account of a suicidal motorcyclist screaming down Route 80 and aiming at every pothole he can find. But even here, Reed leaves no doubt that he is coming back alive: "After all, it wasn't my blood mixed in the dirt that night." Indeed, the protagonist of "Bottoming Out" is the same as that of Reed's anthem to the underworld, "Heroin," except that 1983 has him growing up instead of shooting up.

In short, playing games on the highway is about as dark as Reed gets these days - and that's just fine. While "Pow Wow" and "Home Of The Brave" provide murderous visions of what mother America has become since Columbus "found a cornucopia," Reed seems to be talking about someone else's problems.

HE MAY STILL recognize a hostile world beyond his doorstep, but he ventures into it only as an observer. And if he doesn't like the view he can "Tun" Out The Light" or take the phone from the hook and escape to the sanctity of a "Rooftop Garden," where the most pressing question is: "How's your

But none of this is to imply a cop-out. Reed is settling comfortably into middle age, but not into laziness or mediocrity. Though safely tucked away, he is still making his presence felt by producing thoughtful, perplexing and wonderfully raw rock 'n' roll. Legendary Hearts is a rewarding offering from one of the industry's most intelligent and mature performers. Lou Reed is watching the wheels.

'Bad Boys' highlights savagery of detention center

By Craig Wyrick

ICK ROSENTHAL, with only two films to his credit, is already a strong contender for the George Romero Gross-out Award. But where George stopped with light-hearted head explosions and flesh eating, Rosenthal specializes in a cinema of cruelty where simple acts of violence or, immaturity are turned into pathetic savagery.

Halloween II, with a script by John Carpenter and Debra Hill, was a sadistic exercise in hospital violence. Needles in the eyeball, scalded flesh and burning people could have been a real fun time if Rosenthal wasn't such a heartless technician. The kid who walked mouth was just an added attraction for film he finds himself the king of the hill, top Rosenthal.

With Bad Boys, now playing at the Campus 2, Rosenthal's always-moving camera is let loose inside a Illinois juvenile detention center that makes the Fort Madison State Pen look like a holiday camp. Rosenthal adds explicit nose-picking and spitting to his repertoire of violence to give us a glimpse of the supposedly everyday lives of these juveniles. Sean Penn, the joker of Fast Times at Ridgemont High, plays a youngster with a history of offenses that finally catch up with him, and he finds himself inside the of the heap, A-Number-1.

ENTER A YOUNG, vengeful Puerto Rican teenager, played by Reni Santoni. His younger brother was accidentally killed by Penn's out-of-control car, so he decides to: a) rape Penn's girlfriend, b) kill Penn's girlfriend and c) kill Penn. This guy is what you might call a little hot-headed

By the time the final confrontation takes place, in the classic Western style, Penn will have to witness the inhumanity of the other prisoners toward each other, survive the assaults of the jail bullies and attempt an escape. Typical prison melodrama, but it certainly has its place.

There are definite problems here: a struggle for realism that is never realized Horowitz, acts like he was just released from aspects seem strikingly similar. Film a call for the halt to the arms race.

a Neil Simon movie. He wouldn't last a day in a real prison.

The attempt to make this a social commentary on the state of our teen-agers is a long shot, and ridiculous in this melodramatic setting. Bad Boys is an "adult" drama in kid's clothing. You know who's going to win the final showdown.

America: Hitler to MX, being shown tonight at 7 at the Public Library, is like a good news program in which history is tied to recent news developments.

The film takes a controversial, though not totally unsubstantiated, viewpoint on the recent issues centered around nuclear weapons: America's militarism today is compared to the rise of the Third Reich. rous as that may sound creator Joan Harvey is by no means objective - but then again, how objective is network

Hitler to MX takes a rational "talkingheads" format that doesn't allow the opposition a voice except in damning preselected news articles flashed intermittently on the screen. The best political films are often those that let the opposition bury themselves in their contradictory and short-sighted rhetoric (i.e., Atomic Cafe), so America: Hitler to MX falls short of its goal. Schlafly hecklers take note.

The most interesting fact to emerge from this fact-filled, sometimes slow-moving film is the broad-based support for the freeze movement. Germans and Americans, blacks and Navajos, old and young, hawks and doves

We can't really say anything more about The Seven Samurai than we did yesterday, so we'll repeat that. Akira Kurosawa's film depicts the decline and fall of feudal society in 16th century Japan, as a band of once noble. but now broke and hungry Samurai warriors and a middle-class township unite to fend off annual attacks of bandits. Seven Samurai has spawned numerous imitations, but not one comes close to the spirit and vision of this work. 7 p.m.

PBS' "American Playhouse" tonight presents Arthur Kopit's Wings, the study of an elderly woman who suffers a stroke and has to go through intense therapy to regain her mental and physical abilities. The play is primarily a stream-of-consciousness internal monologue recounting the woman's memories, dreams and fears. Constance Cummings, who won a Tony for her portrayal of the central supervisor who assassinated Mayor George Moscone and gay supervisor Harvey Milk in 1978 and received only seven years in prison on a "diminished capacity" defense (the so-called "Twinkie defense"). 9 p.m., KWWL-7.

Merman update

United Press International says entertainer Ethel Merman, improving daily from brain tumor surgery, has been delighting fellow patients at St. Luke's-Roosevelt Hospital with morning singing sessions.

Merman, 76, was hospitalized April 7, and doctors operated to remove a brain tumor. Her recovery has been going smoothly, but doctors are not sure how long she will remain hospitalized.

"Her speech is improving and she has been increasingly singing," said hospital spokeswoman Bernie Wisnewski. "The nurse can hear her down the hall in the morning. The patients love it.'

The performer, whose voice and comedy antics have delighted audiences for 50 years, was reported in stable condition.

She has also received cards, telegrams and flowers from President Reagan, Bob Hope and Mary Martin.

Endellion String Quartet to perform in Iowa City

Quartet from England will perform at 8 p.m. Wednesday in Clapp Recital Hall.

Their program includes Mozart's String Quartet in G Major, Webern's Five Pieces and String Quartet No. 14 in C sharp minor by Beethoven.

The Quartet - violinists Andrew Watkinson and Louise Williams, violist Garfield Jackson and cellist David Waterman — will appear as part of the Young Concert Series sponsored by Hancher Auditorium. Founded in 1979, the ensemble came to New York in 1981 and won the Young Concert Artists International Auditions.

In its first year of existence, the quartet captured second prize at the

HE ENDELLION String International String Quartet Competition in England. The same year, they won first prize in the British String Quartet Competition in London and received a special award from the Greater London Arts Association.

> Critical notices of the Endellion Quartet have been enthusiastic. The Daily Telegraph of London stated: "They have already achieved a spontaneous rapport giving their playing an exceptionally satisfying unity of conception that never inhibits a refreshingly youthful intensity of ex-
