Landslide buries Ecuadorans

QUITO, Ecuador — A landslide on a major highway buried four cars and three buses filled with people going to work Wednesday. Twenty bodies were recovered but officials said as many as 100 people may have been buried under tons of mud and rock.

The disaster occurred on the Pan American Highway in Cunchi, 250 miles south of Quito. A rescue spokesman said rescue squads had been summoned from Quito to help with the massive operation, which was hindered by rising waters from the Pincay River that runs parallel to the highway. Rescue efforts were suspended at night because of darkness and were set to resume at daybreak.

Sub hunt on in Norway

STAVANGER, Norway — A Norwegian corvette, airplanes and two submarines hunted Wednesday for a trespassing foreign submarine sighted off Norway's west coast just 30 miles south of the center of Norway's naval defense, officials said.

The report came after Swedish Prime Minister Olof Palme warned Moscow his country would attack any foreign submarine caught trespassing near its naval defenses — as Soviet subs repeatedly did last winter, according to a Swedish presidential panel.

Trudeau to meet with Reagan

WASHINGTON — Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau arrived Wednesday for two days of talks with President Reagan and other U.S. officials on ways major industrialized nations can sustain the delicate recovery of the world economy.

Trudeau met with Vice President George Bush Wednesday and is scheduled to confer with Reagan today in preparation for the annual summit meeting of leaders of the seven most industrialized democracies May 28-30 at Williamsburg, Va., May 28-30.

Space superiority disputed

WASHINGTON — The Soviet Union is the leader in developing a satellite killer as part of a military program for space, despite denials by Soviet leader Yuri Andropov, a State Department spokesman said Wednesday.

In his reply earlier Wednesday to American scientists and public officials who expressed concern about military use of space in identical telegrams to the Soviet leader and President Reagan, Andropov said the Soviet Union does not wish to be drawn into an arms race in space.

Baker: We'll retain tax cut

WASHINGTON — Senate Republican leaders predicted Wednesday they will preserve President Reagan's 10 percent income tax cut scheduled for July 1, despite a deep rift within their ranks.

City

City decides against pursuing injunction

By Mark Leonard
Staff Writer

At least for now, the Iowa City Council will not seek a court injunction or try to acquire the property of a residential development near the Iowa City Airport.

The Federal Aviation Administration notified the city two weeks ago that unless construction on the development were stopped, the city would be in danger of losing nearly $2 million in federal aid. The FAA says the development is dangerous because it lies in the airport's clear zone, a safety area beyond the runway.

City Attorney Robert Jansen reported Wednesday that the council decided in a closed session Tuesday night, "not to actively pursue" an injunction or property acquisition.

Councilor John McDonald said purchasing the property might cost the city $1 million. "We're talking about an awful lot of money and the city just doesn't have it."

Councilor John Balmer added, "In no way would we be able to justify the cost. It's really too exorbitant for the city to even consider."

As for obtaining a court injunction, McDonald said, "We really didn't think we'd get very far with that and we don't really have any legal ground to stand on."

"It's all a real mess."

AT THE TIME the city was notified of the FAA's displeasure with the development, Jansen told council members the city could not legally stop the construction because the council had already approved the development plans.

William Sueppel, attorney for property owner Kenneth Ranshaw, said the foundation of the structure is in place and construction crews will be pouring concrete this week.

Sueppel said he would not speculate on what might have happened had the city gone ahead to seek a court injunction.

Instead of trying to obtain that injunction or purchase the land, the city will try to "establish closer contact" and send documentation to FAA officials in Kansas City stating what the city has done near the airport and what is planned for the future.

The FAA must be convinced the city has good intentions by June 30, or nearly $300,000 in funds could be lost for this summer.

Along with the documentation, a letter from Mayor Mary Neuhouser will accompany the package. A resolution stating the city's support for the airport and a copy of the city's proposed zoning ordinance may also be included.

"Hopefully, we'll be able to show them we support our airport and that these things won't happen in the future," McDonald said.

"I think we have the means of persuading them," Balmer said. "We'll be doing everything we can."

Jansen said discussion of the situation has been tentatively scheduled for next Monday.

$1 million in returns in

DES MOINES (UPI) — State Director of Revenue Gerald Bair announced Wednesday that the Iowa Department of Revenue has received about 1.1 million state individual income tax returns for 1982.

Bair said an additional 100,000 Iowans are expected to file their 1982 Iowa income tax returns this year.

Few appear at radical meeting

By Tom Buckingham
Staff Writer

A socialist organizer tried to convince the three people who attended her speech Monday night that radicalism is stronger now than it was during the turbulent days of the 1960s.

Penny Schantz, national youth organizer for the Democratic Socialists of America, said radicals should not be discouraged by their small numbers.

"We have an advantage compared to the 60s," Schantz said. "The movement is less fragmented now."

"A small group even can do a hell of a lot. I don't think we're going to have hundreds of thousands of socialists over the next decade but I don't think that means things can't get better."

The Democratic Socialists of America is a group that works within the Democratic Party for socialist goals. The group currently claims a national membership of 2,000 students in its "youth section."

A "different type of person" is joining the socialist movement than was the case in the 1960s, Schantz said. The economic and social circumstances at the time allowed many people who were not dedicated to social change to join the socialist movement, she said.

People joining now realize "the revolution isn't coming tomorrow at 9 a.m." Schantz said. Instead a socialist today knows "you're in it for the long haul."

THE GROUP HOPES to unite radical groups on both a local and national basis, Schantz said.

On a national basis, socialists are gaining strength because they are registering more voters and more "respectable" people are joining, such as Ed Asner, Schantz said.

Students involved in single-issue groups need to unite in a diverse movement to bring about change because they cannot "confront corporate America alone," Schantz said.

Citing the nuclear freeze movement as an example, Schantz said single-issue politics elicits only a shallow response from voters. The freeze movement is "1,000 miles wide and an inch deep. You can't win on a single issue."

The first order of business for any budding radical student organization is to recruit the 100 people out of 25,000 on campus who will work hard for the cause, Schantz said.

Kim Jones, who plans to organize the UI chapter of the DSA Youth Section said he plans to work with organizations concerned with rent control and "jobs with peace" to build support. "We've just started to show ourselves on campus," he said.

Membership is expected to grow

By Tom Buckingham
Staff Writer

The local organizer for the Democratic Socialists of America said Tuesday he was neither surprised nor discouraged by the small turn-out at the group's meeting Monday.

Kim Jones said he knew the group would "start out small. With exams coming up it's kind of a bad time of year."

Although the group is just getting off the ground, Jones said he thinks student support for the group will grow.

The key to DSA's success will be in filling the void for a "serious, sober group" left by other campus radical organizations, Jones said.

"I think this campus needs a group like us. There are other radical groups on campus but their tactics and strategy are different than ours."

Jones said the DSA will play a different role than such groups as New Wave. Referring to New Wave's "Sieg Heiling" by Phyllis Schlafly, Jones said, "They sometimes do things with a dramatic flair that I don't go along with."

THOUGH THERE ARE Marxists in the group, Jones said they will need to downplay ideology to gain members. "We're not very explicit about it. I don't consider myself a Marxist. Ideology isn't important, it's getting things done."

"Getting things done" means giving members something constructive to do, Jones said. Some projects he has in mind include registering voters and working with local nuclear freeze groups.

DSA members must work hard now because 1983 "is 1959" as DSA leader Michael Harrington has said. Harrington meant there is a similarity between 1983 and 1959 — the last year before the social changes of the 1960s began, Jones said.

Whether apathy on campus is temporary or permanent, Jones acknowledged it is real. "I do see apathy. We're not talking about a majority movement even in the next 10 years."

Right to Life's funding in doubt

By Kristine Stemper
Staff Writer

Members of several UI student groups will hold out their hands tonight while the UI Student Senate divvies up approximately $160,000 in mandatory student fees to fund them, but once again Right to Life may end up with empty pockets.

Right to Life has been denied funds twice in the past, once in the spring of 1981, which led members to file a complaint with the UI Human Rights Committee, and again in the spring of 1982.

Sen. Bruce Hagemann, the original proposer opposing funding the group in 1981, said at that time few senators were overwhelmingly opposed to funding Right to Life. But that few wound up to be a majority after a long discussion.

"The first year that we denied funding to Right to Life, I didn't think we had a chance" to get zero funding passed.

But because they were successful in 1981, Hagemann said he has to try again. "I think they're still a real danger."

IN ORDER to receive funding an "organization's programs must be in accordance with the educational objectives" of the UI, according to an amendment added to the senate's Budget Protocol Act last week.

The UI's objectives, Hagemann said, are "to educate all eligible students, and that includes women. One of the impacts of Right to Life would be to enforce pregnancy, which would prevent women from an education in many cases."

Judy Reed, educational chair of Right to Life, said, "What does that have to do with the definition of education? The main emphasis of our group (is to) educate students so they can make an educated choice. Our projects are good, we keep our noses clean."

"I don't know what they're so scared of," she said of senators who may try to stand in the way of funding for the group. "I was under the understanding that most of this was cleared up."

Hagemann said the UI administration has influenced the senate through the Human Rights Committee by "urging us to adopt those things" passed down by the committee. "My feeling is perhaps that the university has a different interest in the matter than the students; their interest is to avoid controversy."

"I DON'T THINK" student senate should be neutral when it comes to student interests," he said.

Sen. Mike Price said, "I'm not sure that the Budget Protocol Act" will allow for denying the group funds. "When it comes to vote, I'll either have to abstain or vote against funding them."

Sen. Patty Maher, who was the senate president one time the group was not funded, said, "I haven't heard anything that's a neutral argument." The Human Rights Committee's decision requires the senate to use "neutral criteria" in the budgeting process.

"I think they'll be funded," Maher said. The group requested $1,898 from the senate and has been recommended by the budgeting committee to receive $1,097. The final decisions will be made tonight.

Parachuters jump for the fun of it

By Dan Hauser
Staff Writer

They fly through the air with the greatest of ease. It's the landing part they have to worry about.

The UI Parachuters team has been meeting on weekends since 1971 to jump from high-wing Cessna planes, Joe White, one of the team's instructors said Tuesday.

White said there are about 150 members, but only 15 to 50 make jumps in one day. The team has grown steadily over the past years, White said. But there has not been a great increase in membership because the number of jumpers must correspond with the available facilities.

If the weather permits, the group meets at the Marion airport and jumps every weekend between late March and early November. White said the team has jumped during the winter, but it "gets brutal in the winter months."

Before the plane leaves the ground, White said, the instructors check two requirements: the surface winds cannot exceed 10 mph and there must be three miles visibility.

AFTER THE airplane has climbed to a height of 3,000 to 3,200 feet the parachuters are ready to jump.

Angie Reents, who made her debut jump April 24, said the feeling of falling is "hard to compare to anything. It's the most fantastic thing in the world."

A week-long course is given before any student goes up in a plane, White said. The students must attend classes Monday through Friday night and complete a 12-page essay test.

During this course, the beginners learn everything there is to know about jumping, White said, to minimize problems while in the plane.

Costs of the first parachuting excursion, according to Reents, are well worth it. The total cost for rental and classes for the first jump is $85, White said. "They get cheaper the more you jump," he added. After a person is experienced, White said, the cost of the jumps could go as low as $3.

White said the airplanes can hold up to three students plus an instructor and pilot and the students jump two or three times a day.

BECAUSE OF the excitement of the jump and waiting to go up in the plane, the students usually get tired after three jumps, White said.

Steve Rosenbaum, who also made his first jump April 24, said the instruction for the class is "perfect." He said he was most nervous when he was up in the plane waiting to jump.

After the training, White said, there is no risk involved because the students learn the ability to land and control their jumps.

White called the parachuter team a "legitimate kind of recreational activity. It's for people who have the desire to do something different and new. World-wide, it's a popular sport."

Folk named outstanding teacher for contributions to university

By Dan Hauser
Staff Writer

UI Physiology Professor G. Edgar Folk Jr. has been named recipient of this year's UI Teacher of the Year Award, given at the 66th Annual Hancher-Finkbine banquet April 26 at the Union.

The honor, named after former UI Dean of Students M. L. Huit, is awarded each year to the faculty member "who best characterizes Dean Huit's contribution to the university and community life," said physiology secretary Jane Zeman, reading from the award certificate.

Zeman said the certificate also states the recipient of the award takes the "job of teaching as an inspiration rather than just a job."

"I can't tell you how surprised I was," Folk said. "I just couldn't believe it." The professor said he had made plans to go elsewhere Tuesday night, but was informed about the honor a week in advance and cancelled his plans.

Generally the award is given to someone in liberal arts or the humanities, Zeman said. "It's not usual to get one out of the science department."

AT HARVARD University, Folk earned his B.A., M.A. and Ph.D. in biology. After completing his education at Harvard he took a job in Maine at Bowdoin College and taught there for six years.

In 1953, he came to teach in the UI Physiology Department. He said while at the UI he has been "lucky" to be able to work with students in his field of work.

In the past 17 years Folk has taken students with him on his summer expeditions in the Arctic. In these expeditions Folk and his students study Arctic animals and how they are suited with their environment.

Zeman, who seemed equally pleased with the award, said, "It's good to know excellence in teaching is sometimes recognized."

Local man reports an assault

Patrick K. Horner, 704 12th St., West Des Moines, reported to Iowa City police early Wednesday that he was assaulted, was bleeding and that his $200 portable cassette had been stolen after a man attacked him near Burlington and Clinton Streets.

The attacker was described as a black male, tall and thin, wearing a light blue jacket. The assailant fled west on Burlington Street, but police were unable to locate him.

Police beat

Gilbert St., was broken into Wednesday at about 2 a.m. by a burglar who threw a concrete block through the front door glass and then entered the shop, according to police.

The burglar reached the cash register but "apparently dropped scattering change, and then left in a hurry." Police dusted for fingerprints. Nothing was reported missing.

Nuclear energy disagreement still fuels debate

By Mary Tabor
Staff Writer

The debate over nuclear power in Iowa seems to have subsided since the accident at Three Mile Island, but neither pro-nuclear nor anti-nuclear supporters are ready to claim a victory from the silence.

Presently more than 72 nuclear power plants operate across the country; about 30 are in some stage of construction. But no new ones have been ordered.

The only such plant in Iowa is located near Palo, about 30 miles north of Iowa City. In operation since 1974, Duane Arnold Energy Center produces 40 percent of the electricity Iowa Electric Light and Power Company supplies to the state, according to Horace Webb, the company's vice president for corporate affairs.

Nuclear power probably won't play much of a role in the near future on a state or national level, he said.

"Those who oppose using our nuclear energy resources have won the latest round in the battle for continued development," Webb said Wednesday.

IT WILL TAKE a major crisis before the "hysteria and fear will disappear," he said. "We will mark time in the industry until called upon."

Yet, on the other side, a local environmentalist group member said this advantage could shift back to "the very entrenched industry" at any time. "There's a lot of big corporations and big money behind it. There's lots of people with vested interests in keeping nuclear power alive," said Joel Score, member of Free Environment.

Score referred to an article in the May 1983 issue of Mother Jones magazine that said, "anyone who thinks nuclear power is dead is misreading the handwriting on the wall."

About 7 percent of all energy consumed in Iowa is supplied by nuclear power plants in or near the state, said Dick Vohs, information director for the state Energy Policy Council.

"I think it is very likely it will increase a bit over the next 50 years, but not over the next 20," he said.

THINKING BACK to the early 1970s when nuclear power plants started sprouting up across the country, Vohs said, "At one point we thought we wouldn't even have to meter it."

But with stepped-up conservation methods and more efficient industrial use of energy, demand fell. The recession also cut into the market of nuclear energy plants, he said. "We now have the capacity to generate 40 percent more energy than we need," Vohs said, including all sources.

Even if the market were available for increased nuclear power production, the official statement of the Energy Policy Commission presents two critical problems that must first be solved.

The first is a permanent means to store radioactive waste; the second is a practical, safe method for reprocessing spent fuel rods.

High level radioactive waste from the Duane Arnold plant is stored on site in a spent fuel pool. Storage space for these solid fuel rods can probably be stretched beyond the year 2000, Webb said.

HE SAID the Nuclear Waste Policy Act signed into law Jan. 6 provides for identification of off-site spots where spent fuel can be stored. None are being suggested for Iowa.

UI Nuclear Physics Professor Richard Carlson said the types of radiation left after energy-producing nuclear fission vary enormously, but "the danger is never different."

The radiation will gradually die away, he said. "If it takes a million years it doesn't matter, 100 years or it does."

The nuclear waste, clad in stainless steel, if exposed to running water could eventually begin to leak, Carlson said. "If you do it sloppily, it certainly could be dangerous."

Donald Spencer, UI associate professor of energy engineering, agreed. "It's a problem of waste management, basically."

The nuclear power plants responsible for this waste are running "ridiculous danger" of contamination of the state, he said.

Although he doesn't discount nuclear energy completely, he said it must be viewed within the big energy dilemma

Local roundup

New IDs to be issued

Those little plastic cards each UI student carries around to verify his or her name and identification number will soon be turning into gold.

New gold identification cards with black trim will be issued to all UI students free of charge by next November, UI Registrar Jerald Dallam said Wednesday.

The new IDs will feature an encoded magnetic strip across the back of the card. When proper equipment is installed in places such as the Union, UI Libraries and Residence Hall Food Services these cards can automatically connect with data processing to determine if the student is currently registered.

Dallam said if a card is lost the coding can simply be changed so no one else can charge goods with that card.

"These will be very cost effective in the future," Dallam said. He predicts the cards could be used instead of keys to dormitory rooms or for access to parking lots.

Rodeo to feature bucking buses?

The UI's Cambus drivers will have the opportunity to test their ability at manipulating their buses through an obstacle course at the first Cambus Rodeo.

"It's basically to test their driving ability with a little bit of fun," Jim Brimrey, Cambus personnel supervisor, said Wednesday.

The obstacle course will include testing the drivers' stopping, turning and backing up abilities. "We're just trying to encourage better driving skills, safety and accident prevention."

Approximately 26 drivers will participate in the Cambus Rodeo at 11 a.m. April 30 at the Johnson County Fairgrounds. The event is open to the public.

Strolling for dollars

Saturday morning hundreds of Iowa City youths will get out of bed, slip on their walking shoes and head for Southeast Junior High School. Their mission is to walk 30 kilometers to raise money for Project Concern, a non-profit health care training and development organization.

"Last year we had about 400 walkers who raised about $14,000," said Belinda Stewart, director for the walk. This will be the eighth year the walk has been sponsored by the Iowa City Jaycees.

Local organizations could also benefit financially from the walk, said David Kelch, operations chairman. "You can earmark 20 percent of the funds you raise to a share group."

"This means groups can get back 20 percent of the money their walkers raise for Project Concern to use for some projects of their own," Stewart said.

About 10 Iowa City church and youth groups will participate in the event as sharing groups, she said.

Registration for the walk begins at 7 a.m. Saturday, but sponsor sheets must be filled before registration.

If it rains, a rain route that is shorter will be used, Kelch said. "We give

Bike auction scheduled

Ever want to purchase a "hot" bike at a reasonable cost without the risk of being caught for owning stolen property? Well, Iowa City is the right place. This Sunday the Iowa City police department will hold a bicycle auction in Chauncey Swan parking lot across from the police department on Washington Street.

The bike auction begins at noon. Iowa City Police Chief Harvey Miller said, "At last count, over 200 bikes" would be available for sale. The profit made from the auction will go into the city's general fund.

Before the auction, beginning at 10:30 a.m., a bicycle inspection will be held.

Anyone who has lost a bicycle or had one stolen should check with the police department before May 1 to be sure the bike isn't one of the many up for sale.

Council inundated with paper

When you report on the city of Iowa City for a newspaper, one thing you can count on is picking up the "council packet," which is pages upon pages of information, minutes of meetings and correspondence with the city.

The size of last week's packet sent council members covering back to their homes with more than a just some light reading to do before going to sleep.

City Manager Neal Berlin said Wednesday 24,000 pages were printed last week costing the city nearly $1,000.

"As far as we know, it's a record," Berlin said.

Councilor John McDonald said he was "shocked" when he saw the enormous pile of papers at his home. "I saw it sitting there and thought, 'You've got to be kidding.'"

In his eight years on the council, John Balmer said he thought he had seen it all until last Friday. "I was flabbergasted. What a thing to come home to for the weekend."

County vacancies announced

The Johnson County Board of Supervisors is taking applications to fill vacancies on the following county boards and commissions: The Mayor's Youth Employment Board has two three-year terms open, beginning in May; the Johnson County Broadband Telecommunications Commission has one three-year term beginning in June; the Title V Nutrition Advisory Board has two one-year terms beginning in June; the Commission of Veteran's Affairs has one three-year term beginning in June. Applications are available in the Board of Supervisors' Office, Room 238 of the Federal Building.

Local roundup, compiled by The Daily Iowan staff, is a weekly briefing of local news events and happenings.

NORML director predicts marijuana legalization

By Robyn Griggs
Staff Writer

It will be a good four or five years until marijuana is legalized in the United States, but economic reasons will eventually bring this about, George Farnham, national director of the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws, said Wednesday night.

Farnham told about 300 UI students that marijuana has been cultivated in the United States since the colonial period. "There are rumors that George Washington grew acres and acres of hemp. Some think that's an indication that he really was the first head of our country."

Laws restricting the use of marijuana did not come into being in the United States until the 1920's, and they were the result of racist attitudes, he said. "At that time only Mexican-Americans and blacks were using marijuana. Social and economic problems were blamed on marijuana because the whites were not using it."

THE UNITED STATES itself grew a "tremendous amount" of marijuana for fiber during wartime, Farnham said, and "much of what is growing wildly in the Midwest today is left over from World War II crops."

The 1960s saw an explosion of marijuana use among two very different groups of people. College-age people began using it "as a protest against the Vietnam War," and, "ironically, many soldiers smoked their first joint in Vietnam," because of the availability of it there.

NORML was founded in 1970, at which time marijuana possession was a felony in every state. In 1973 the group began lobbying for decriminalization of marijuana, meaning an offender would receive a civil citation but no criminal record.

The goal of NORML is to remove marijuana from the criminal system and find means for growing and marketing it, Farnham said.

Eleven states have now decriminalized the drug, but the remaining 39, including Iowa, have laws making possession a misdemeanor.

"The cost is estimated at over $4 billion in 1983 to try to enforce marijuana laws ... President Reagan is spending several million dollars on drug enforcement, and there is more and more drug use than when he took office," Farnham said.

THE QUESTION of money is what will eventually prompt a government decision to legalize the drug, he added.

"What we're seeing in the 1980's is more and more state legislators starting to see the economic side of the issue."

"There's a tremendous crunch in the states about how to get money. Legislators who never even considered marijuana decriminalization bills are now supporting marijuana legalization bills for economic reasons."

Farnham cited an example of a bill that has been proposed in Pennsylvania that would allow for the cultivation of marijuana for people who obtain a license from the state.

The marijuana would be sold to the state, which would put an excise tax on it and market it. Farnham said 60 percent of the state budget deficit could be eliminated with this plan.

In addition, if the federal government legalized marijuana, over 300,000 jobs would be created, he said, and the several thousands that are now selling it illegally would be "brought from underground," adding these tax dollars to the economy.

Another reason economics is an important issue in the reform of marijuana laws is the "increasing domestic marijuana market."

Farnham said in the "last six years there has been a complete transformation of the marijuana market," largely due to the government's use of paraquat to spray marijuana plants in Mexico in 1978.

"THEY THOUGHT IT (the spraying of paraquat) would have the impact that marijuana users would quit smoking marijuana because the government was trying to poison them," he said. "Instead, they began to smoke domestic marijuana."

NORML estimates marijuana is the third largest crop in the country today, with yields valued at $10.4 million, he said. One concern that has slowed legalization attempts is the health risk associated with marijuana use, but Farnham said most users are "not going to face any serious health problems ... The most serious health problem is probably lung damage."

"People are talking about all the horrors of marijuana, but I don't take the government too seriously when they say marijuana is a health issue," he said, because of cuts in research efforts into the hazards of the drug.

"I think we're only going to see legalization of marijuana after a complete education campaign is completed in this country. There's so much misinformation," he said.

"It will be a long, slow process toward reform. It will probably be another five or ten years at least before we see marijuana regulated and taxed."

Reaction

Md., chairman of the House appropriations subcommittee that cut Reagan's $60 million aid request in half Wednesday was doubtful about a quick turnaround. Asked about Lott's prediction that Congress would act swiftly, Long shook his head and said, "I don't see it. I don't see it."

Chairman Michael Barnes, D-Md., of the House Foreign Affairs Western Hemisphere subcommittee said he was "very pleased by the general thrust and tone" of the speech. But Barnes said it is regrettable that Reagan focused so much on the military situation in the region.

IF ALL THE guerrillas in El Salvador were killed "the problems of El Salvador would not be solved," he said.

Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., welcomed the decision to appoint a special envoy, but said he is "deeply concerned that the president's overall policy is a prescription for wider war." "No more American military aid should go to El Salvador unless that government agrees to enter unconditional negotiations," Kennedy said.

Rep. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, said he did not accept Reagan's proposals. What is needed, he said, is "negotiation."

"All this is is a blueprint for more military adventurism. It is a road to more suffering by the Salvadoran people. It is a road to nowhere," Harkin said.

In the official Democratic response broadcast immediately after Reagan's speech, Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., called Reagan's plea for increased military aid "a formula for failure."

DODD SAID the administration fundamentally misunderstands the causes of the conflict in Central America. "Unless the region's poverty, hunger and injustices are cured "that region will continue to seethe with revolution — with or without the Soviets," he said.

But Sen. Charles Mathias, R-Md., called it "a forceful speech. I think it's the right way to go."

Chairman Charles Percy, R-Ill., of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee said, "I thought the speech was logical and I think it appealed to the American people."

Sen. Alan Cranston of California, a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, said he thought Reagan's speech is "not going to serve the cause of stability in Central America." "We need not fear a domino consequence from whatever occurs in Central America."

"Unless the government of El Salvador shapes up," Cranston said, by improving its human rights record, "there is no way to prop up that government. We are pouring money down a rat hole."

Smoking

Iowa City's has surfaced in California, Jansen said. "Somewhere there may be cases where people have challenged the no-smoking ban in public places."

City staff members are also unclear on how many present or prospective employees will be told to kick the habit. But it is clear that current policy dictates reprimands for officers who smoke.

New employees must sign a legally-binding contract that states they will not smoke. If they are caught smoking, "disciplinary action will be taken, just like with any other problem," Berlin said.

"We have the hope that if someone signs something and pledges their word, they will abide by it," Carroll said.

While Carroll "would prefer not to" disclose how city administrators plan to police the policy, she said, "There are ways of enforcing it."

IOWA CITY Police Chief Harvey Miller disagrees. "The city can tell me what to do when I'm on duty, but they can't run my life for me when I'm off duty."

Miller said he does not "have any deep feelings about the policy," but he does smoke. While he said the new rule does not directly affect him, "it affects everyone to some extent with the breakdown it creates in the department itself."

Iowa City Mayor Mary Neuhouser said, "I frankly hope the city does not go along with the policy at this time. I didn't even know it was coming." She said she hopes the matter can be resolved without bringing it before the council.

City administrators say the policy was drawn up with a number of goals in mind. One goal is to help policemen and firefighters maintain good physical condition, for their own safety and to perform their duties.

But Mike Goldberg, president of the Iowa City police union, said, "Physical fitness standards have not even been created."

Neuhouser said Berlin did not anticipate "so much flap." "In Iowa City you never know," Berlin said.

"We see it as a condition of their employment," Carroll said. "We have other restrictions." Those include regulating where employees live and prohibiting "off-duty jobs."

BUT THE NO-SMOKING policy brings a number of issues to the surface, said Nathan Hopkins, president of the Iowa City Association of Professional Firefighters Local 610.

"Is smoking more harmful than going to a fire?" Hopkins asked. "We breathe in more harmful stuff at a fire than we do when we sit around at the station and smoke a cigarette."

Carroll pointed out firefighters wear respirators at a fire.

"If you can find any scientific evidence one way or another, I'd sure be interested," Berlin said.

Another loophole in the policy is that it does not restrict officers from chewing tobacco, Hopkins said. "It's kinda hokey. They don't want you to smoke, but you can chew tobacco. It has nicotine in it, too."

Hopkins is skeptical of the no-smoking contract officers must sign to comply with regulations. "It looks like they want people to sign a blank piece of paper and then they'll fill in the rest later. Next they'll tell us we can't drink or swear."

The city administration's decision to implement the policy seemed "hasty," Hopkins said. "They'll probably repent at leisure."

Drug case nets prison sentence

By Suzanne Johnson
Staff Writer

A man arrested during a drug raid last October was sentenced to 10 years in prison Wednesday.

Michael R. Zeadow, 30, pleaded guilty Feb. 22 to delivery of a controlled substance, according to Johnson County District Court records. He was arrested Oct. 26, 1982, for delivering cocaine to an undercover police officer.

Reasons given by District Judge Paul J. Kilburg for the penalty were Zeadow's age, past criminal record, the involvement of a "dangerous drug" and the need to protect society.

Zeadow is ordered to pay $325 in restitution to Johnson County and Iowa City for the "buy money" used by the undercover police officer who bought cocaine from Zeadow.

Is the will there?

In words as doom-filled as President Ronald Reagan's when he talks about the Soviet Union, the National Commission on Excellence in Education has issued a report on the quality of education in America. "The educational foundations of our society are presently being eroded by a rising tide of mediocrity that threatens our very future as a nation and a people," the report says.

To combat this mediocre educational system — one which would be considered "an act of war" if imposed by an outside power — the commission recommends a number of specific, important changes:

- The school day and the school year should both be lengthened.
- A change in the curriculum — a requirement of four years of English, three years each of math, science and social studies and one-half year of computer science — should be implemented at the high school level; college-bound students would add two years of foreign language.
- Colleges should raise their entrance requirements.
- Teachers should assign more homework.
- Teachers should be paid more, get 11-month contracts, and be evaluated in order to weed out inferior teachers.
- Citizens should provide more financial support in order to carry out the reforms, and parents should demand more from their children.

The commission's recommendations are right. The United States has "unilaterally disarmed" its education system, and the solutions offered are clear and needed. But there are some implications of this call to arms that are disquieting, and there is little room for optimism that what is called for will be achieved.

The commission itself has fallen into a trap that has plagued public education in this country almost since its inception — that of viewing education mainly as a means to an end. The public schools have been used for pragmatic ends that are not directly related to the goal of "educating" a person. In the last century the schools were used to Americanize the immigrants. Then they were used to produce good industrial workers: punctual, reliable, honest. Later they were used to produce "well-rounded individuals," with life-adjustment courses, cooking courses, bachelor-living courses and so on.

Most recently, when the Soviet Union put Sputnik into orbit, the schools were used to produce scientists to combat the Russian threat. Now this new commission wishes to use the schools to produce the new technocrats to beat the Japanese competition. This is a laudable, even necessary, aim, but it should not be the major end of education. We do not need men and women who know how to build bigger, better, faster things but who know nothing about the culture of the human race and the needs of the human spirit. They would build us a cold and dangerous world.

Furthermore, there are real problems with implementing the commission's suggestions. President Reagan has already tried to skew the findings to fit his ideology, linking the report to his program of tuition tax credits, vouchers, educational savings accounts, voluntary school prayer, abolition of the Department of Education, and parental not governmental control of education — none of which were in the task force's report. And many of the commission's recommendations could not be successfully implemented under Reagan's program.

The key to the success of the recommendations is more money. Schools could alter their curriculum to match their requirements, but without good teachers students could take 10 years of each subject without benefit. The commission noted that the quality of teachers has been declining, and that higher pay was critical if that decline were to be halted. And although smaller classes are important for better instruction, schools all over the country have been laying off teachers.

Colleges continue to emphasize publish or perish, while devaluing teaching skills. Teachers continue to be afraid of demanding high quality work and giving low grades when they don't get it. In fact, a few years ago a school in the suburbs of Washington, D.C. fired a teacher under parental pressure, because the teacher was too hard and the parents feared bad grades would keep their children out of college.

Moreover, the commission itself said the responsibility for implementing and funding their recommendations should rest on local and state authorities. Yet recent studies indicate that most states have had to reduce services and raise taxes to cover even that reduced level. Is it realistic to expect them to increase taxes further?

Moreover, in any such race to improvement funded at the state and local level, some will be left at the gate. Even with the will, some states will simply not be able to afford increased spending. High unemployment has escalated demands on the treasury and reduced revenue drastically. All citizens should be given a chance at a better education, and it is likely that only the federal government can afford the necessary expenditures.

The commission has called on Americans to make a sacrifice to improve education. The need is there. The funding is there — at the federal level. All that is in doubt is whether the will is there.

SCOPE looks toward the future

This is the third of a three-part series on the Student Commission on Programming and Entertainment.

By Jeff Conner

THE FUTURE of SCOPE looks quite good: We finally have the use of a competitive facility; we finally feel we have our internal problems worked out; and we are working on a number of possibilities for the summer and fall. We could do as many as eight to 10 events in the arena in the next year, as well as some in Hancher and the Union. However, we are still encountering a number of external problems — most centering around restrictions on our use of the arena.

Recently we were contacted about doing two possible arena events in mid-May, but we were refused permission to use it when school was not in session. Two reasons were given were 1) that an event held then would not benefit our primary audience, students, and 2) that any such event would lose money like the Grateful Dead did. Neither of these arguments is valid.

First, a recent SCOPE survey showed that between 56 and 91 percent of the students here might attend a concert when school was not in session. This makes sense when we consider that it is common for people to drive across the state to see their favorite rock act. It would make even more sense if they were driving to a city in which they lived for most of the year.

SECOND, TO SAY that the Grateful Dead lost money and thus all concerts produced when school is out will lose money is an oversimplification. Our research indicates that the Grateful Dead would have lost money no matter when they were produced.

The number of students able to attend is a factor to consider, but only as it relates to the drawing power of the act. To say that no act will do well when school is out would be the same as saying all acts will do well when school is in session — we know that is not true. Equally important as the number of students available is the percentage likely to attend. Though it would be more difficult for an act to make money, it would not be impossible if it had sufficient drawing power.

Further, if we had been allowed to produce the event, we would have used an outside promoter; thus even if it did not do well, we would have been insured against loss. In addition, any event that benefits the program as a whole will benefit all students in the long run. The money generated from those events would have gone to pay off our deficit, to sponsor other events in Hancher and the Union, and to assist the UI Student Senate in supporting student services.

HOWEVER, THE WORST part of this restriction is the damage it does to our overall strategy. As explained earlier, access to most major acts is now controlled by independent promoters. Our strategy to this point has been to target certain promoters with whom to develop "preferred" relationships. The problem is that, in developing these relationships, we are competing with other organizations that are willing to work year-round. We give the impression of being "fair weather friends," willing to cooperate only when it is convenient for us.

SCOPE occupies a unique position in the state. The UI is the only major university in the state where students are given the primary responsibility for promoting events that are of primary interest to students. This approach offers advantages.

Guest opinion

First, it allows students more input in selecting events. Second, it gives these students practical experience that will benefit them in the pursuit of a career. Third, it establishes a system whereby a portion of the revenue gained from events primarily of interest to students can be returned to those students in the form of student services.

OVERALL, WE FEEL this system is ideal, with one major drawback. SCOPE is required to work within a double standard. We are required to work under restrictions and limitations that our staff counterparts in Ames and Cedar Falls are not. This is especially ironic considering their facilities are not directly controlled by the university administrations, whereas ours is. This being the case, one would think those in charge of our arena would be more sympathetic to the needs of students and eager to bring concerts to the facility.

One example of the double standard is the already mentioned restriction on scheduling during the times when school is out, which damages our ability to work with outside promoters. This restriction does not apply to our counterparts at the other regents' schools.

Another example of the double standard is the lack of a stated policy giving concert events scheduling priority over non-events, such as athletic practice. This also damages our efforts to develop relationships with promoters and reduces our flexibility in scheduling. Flexibility is essential, since a number of acts are only available on certain dates; unless our facility is available then, the act will go elsewhere. Making our use of the building contingent upon practice schedules may reduce the number of available dates by more than one hundred during the winter months. This, more than anything else, threatens SCOPE's capability to establish a successful program.

THIS WAS illustrated during the attempts to reschedule the Neil Young concert. We were offered March 8 as an alternative date, but were forced to turn it down. The reason, as arena manager Del Gehrke explained following the cancellation, was a conflict with the practice schedule of the men's basketball team. (As it turns out, this may have been irrelevant. Young cancelled the rest of his tour anyway — although some agents feel that if Young had had a March 8 date he would have continued the tour, because he would not have had time to return home between dates.)

But because of existing policies, we were forced to turn away more than 13,000 ticket holders, rather than having 15 basketball players moved to another gym floor. In the words of one promoter, "We could have rented them a high school to practice in."

A concert by Warren Zevon last October was SCOPE's only event last year, but the commission plans to schedule more frequent concerts in the future.

There are a number of facilities on this campus suitable for basketball practice — there is only one suitable for major concerts. So it would seem obvious that concerts should have priority over non-events such as practice. Students donated more than $6 million toward the building of the arena — considerably more than any other element of the UI, including the athletics departments. Therefore, students' needs should not be considered subordinate to those of the athletic department. This is another example of the double standard — a restriction we as students are forced to work under that our counterparts in Ames and Cedar Falls are not. We have the only university facility in Iowa where concert events are not given priority.

A FINAL EXAMPLE of the double standard is the minors' rule, which up until two years ago prohibited those under the age of 18 from attending major concerts at the UI. Although this was a Board of Regents rule, it applied only to the UI, and not to any other regents' institution. Though the policy was suspended two years ago, it could conceivably be reviewed and reinstated — this would result in the end of SCOPE, and of major concerts on this campus. Though we try to program events of primary interest to students, no act will consent to play in a building where any portion of its potential audience is prohibited from attending. Though SCOPE is a student group, in order to develop a program of the quality of those at other universities in Iowa, we need to be allowed the same latitude in programming as our counterparts. No matter what, we feel our program will be more successful in the future than it has been in the past, but the degree of success and the quality of the overall program will depend on the understanding and cooperation we receive from the staff and administration. It could mean the difference between four major concerts next year and 10.

WE ASK that the administration make more effort to understand the needs of our program, and to realize the damage that certain restrictions and policies are doing to our efforts. We ask them to grant us the same rights and latitude that those programming on other campuses receive. We ask the Student Senate and The Daily Iowan — and the student population as a whole — to support us and make that support known.

In the last eight months, SCOPE has made significant progress in establishing credibility and designing a program that will finally work for this campus. With the cooperation of the administration, and the support of our audience, we hope to present the most successful concert series ever.

Conner is director of SCOPE.

De facto genocide

To the editor:
 "Without Jewish rule between the Jordan and the sea, Palestinians will have neither existence nor security... dispersal of the Palestinian population is therefore a domestic strategic aim of the highest order."

Hebrew document released by the World Zionist Organization, February 1982.

The recent mass gas poisoning of over 1,000 Palestinian schoolgirls (March 28 to April 3) marks a sharp and dangerous escalation in the ongoing Israeli-Zionist scheme to uproot the remaining 2 million indigenous Palestinian people (45 percent of the Palestinian nation) still living in their homeland, Palestine. Palestinian doctors are worried that the noxious gas may have the effect of sterilization of young women due to the fact that the victims were all girls under 16.

This heinous crime, perpetrated by armed Israeli colonialist settlers, clearly has the support of the Israeli occupying army and government. To cover up the crime, the Israeli government has ludicrously dismissed the mass poisonings as "a case of mass hysteria," and Israeli authorities have been preventing and/or censoring information on the poisoning. On April 4, Israeli authorities arrested two Israeli employees of a CBS news crew in the West Bank, and have accused both NBC and CBS of "staging the scenes of sickbed girls." Both networks have denied the allegations, calling them "outrageous."

The incident is in line with Zionist racist logic of "no existence or security" for Palestinians in Palestine. From the 1948 Deir Yassin massacre to the 1956 Kfar Kassem massacre to the 1982 massacres at Sabra and Chatila, Zionist policies have aimed to bring about a forced exodus of all Palestinians from Palestine — 55 percent of all land and 65 percent of all water resources in the Palestinian West Bank and Gaza have been expropriated by the occupying Israelis.

Palestinian universities are being systematically closed and hundreds of students and children have been shot in the last few years. The popularly-elected mayors of Nablus and Ramallah were maimed by Israeli terrorist bombings and most other West Bank mayors have been deported or deposed.

Since 1967, a quarter of the West Bank and Gaza Strip population, 250,000 people were imprisoned at one time or another. In response to an Israeli army commander on what to do with all the protesters being arrested, Ariel Sharon answered, "Tear their balls off." (Israeli Ha'aretz, Dec. 19, 1982.)

But Palestine is our homeland and we will not leave. Extinction in gas chambers is not the only way to commit genocide. By expropriating our land and water resources, erasing our culture and history, by attempting to destroy our leadership, the PLO, the Zionists are seeking to bring about the uprooting and dispersal of our people and de facto genocide.

Gutless wonders

To the editor:

For the past three weeks, large numbers of heterosexual men and women — many UI students, some members of Students for Traditional American Freedoms — have been frequenting an Iowa City gay bar. They come not to dance, talk with friends and have a good time, but to ogle, make fun of, and verbally and physically harass the gay clientele. Because there has been no actual physical fighting in the bar, gay patrons have had no legal recourse in the situation, and have simply been putting up with this adolescent bullshit. Many are beginning to fear violent attacks from some of the straight men who have been hanging out.

As a member of the UI community, I find it appalling and shameful that so many UI students are choosing to spend their time making life miserable for those they consider so fearfully different from themselves. I hope in the future they will spend as much time dealing with whatever fears and insecurities about gay people they have that drives them to such childish activity.

Of course, learning to confront one's own fears and accept others takes a lot more guts than engaging in harassment. These gutless wonders haven't done much to increase my faith in the maturity and open-mindedness of the people on this campus.

Genetic jesting

To the editor:

There is just one little thing that your resident oracle, T. Johnson, overlooked concerning the Back Doors: we are living in the Age of Clones. Reagan is a clone of Nixon. The economy is a clone of the Great Depression. The East-West situation is a clone of the Cold War. The Arts/Entertainment section of the DI is a clone of Rolling Stone. So it is only appropriate to see a clone of the Doors. After all, El Salvador may become a clone of Vietnam. I'm not cloning around, either.

Shultz, Begin initiate peace talks

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Secretary of State George Shultz opened talks with Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin Wednesday on Middle East peace and was read a list of unsettled issues so long it could not be finished in a three-hour session.

Shultz, who arrived in Jerusalem from Egypt on a mission to salvage President Reagan's Middle East peace plan, said he would remain in the area "as long as necessary" to achieve troop withdrawals.

"Our immediate task is to bring peace to Lebanon, restoring Lebanese sovereignty, withdrawing all foreign forces from Lebanon and ensuring peace and security on your northern border," Shultz said.

Shultz, at a dinner in his honor hosted by Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir, also urged the Israelis to follow a biblical adage in its withdrawal talks with Lebanon.

"As the Bible tells us, to everything there is a season. There is a time to debate and there is a time to decide. Now is the time to decide," Shultz said.

IN BEIRUT, extraordinary security measures were taken by U.S. Marines — on patrol at the airport, the coastal road nearby and the city proper — in advance of Shultz' visit today — 10 days after the U.S. embassy was blown up, killing 61 people.

The Israelis read a list of unsettled issues to Shultz so long Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir was not able to finish it in a three-hour session at the Foreign Ministry.

The airing of problems was completed later at a meeting between Shultz, Begin and Defense Minister Moshe Arens.

Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin and U.S. Secretary of State George Shultz face each other Wednesday as new top-level peace talks get underway in Jerusalem.

According to Israeli and American officials, Begin spent most of the 90-minute meeting on what he described as the growing threat to Israeli and American interests posed by the flow of Soviet advisers and sophisticated military equipment into Syria.

Israel and Syria have accused each other for months of planning to start a war in the eastern Lebanese valley.

Begin, according to an American official, did not directly connect the question of troop withdrawals with the presence of the Soviet advisers in the Middle East.

Shultz was to leave for Beirut Thursday for talks with Lebanese officials.

A U.S. official said Shultz finished the first day of talks Israel with a "good feeling" and Israel's list of problems "was not unexpected."

An Israeli official said, "We want iron-clad security guarantees because our northern border is vital."

Aboard his plane to Israel, Shultz told reporters that many of the details had been settled and — holding his thumb and forefinger about an inch apart — said, "There is only so much to go."

Marines fire shots in Lebanese incident

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — U.S. Marines fired three shots to halt a speeding car approaching their position near the shattered U.S. Embassy Thursday, wounding one of two young men in the vehicle, Lebanese soldiers at the site said.

It was the first time any member of the Marine contingent to the multinational peacekeeping force in Beirut had shot at or wounded a Lebanese citizen.

Marines at the site — outside the British embassy and a half-mile west of the U.S. Embassy along the coastal road — declined to comment.

Cpl. Donald Herrick, a duty officer at the Marine headquarters, said he had not yet received a report of the incident but added it would be investigated.

After the U.S. Embassy was bombed 10 days ago, killing 61 people, Lebanese soldiers halted all traffic along the road and increased security measures. Over the weekend, French soldiers in the multinational force shot and killed a motorist who plowed through one of their checkpoints in Beirut.

The American troops had taken up positions on the road Wednesday night, apparently in preparation for the visit of Secretary of State George Shultz to Beirut.

SECURITY MEASURES were extremely tight for the trip: A machine gun and two armored personnel carriers have been placed in front of the U.S. Embassy.

The green Mercedes plowed into barbed-wire and a concrete traffic-control bunker in the road, halting the vehicle only 100 feet from a Marine armored-personnel carrier.

Lebanese soldiers swarmed around the vehicle after the 2:15 a.m. shooting and ordered the two men out of the car.

The Lebanese searched the car for explosives but nothing was found. The soldiers questioned the two men beside a military tent. The soldiers said the two men in the car apparently were drunk.

"I don't know what I was doing here," the passenger said as he limped out of the car, apparently from a bullet wound in the leg or foot.

The driver emerged slowly and was searched. He was not wounded.

There were at least three shots fired at the car; one pierced the windshield and a second broke the car's headlight.

Lebanese soldiers manning a road block beside the Americans said the Marines had fired the shots.

Hawks extend streak to 5 games

By Jill Hokinson
Staff Writer

WEST BRANCH, Iowa — The Iowa softball team is on a roll, winning its last five games including two games Wednesday against Drake, 3-2 and 4-2.

Strong pitching by Julie Kratoska held the Bulldogs to only three hits in the first game and freshman standout Diane Reynolds gave up only two hits in the second game.

Iowa Coach Ginny Parrish is optimistic that the Hawks, now 14-9 overall, can defeat Big Ten rival Northwestern today at Evanston.

"If we play like this against Northwestern, we will be in real good shape," Parrish said. "The games against Drake are a real good tune-up for the Northwestern games."

THE FIRST GAME was scoreless until the third inning when the Bulldogs' first baseman Dawn Wunkes doubled to center field, driving in teammates Laura Leonard and Renee Randall, Drake's only two runs of the game.

Drake pitcher Mary Thompson held the Hawkeyes scoreless going into the seventh inning, but the Hawkeyes rallied with five hits to win, 3-2.

Second baseman Diane Jircitano led off the seventh inning with a single to center field. Melanie Ruth then hit a double down the third baseline, advancing Jircitano to third. A single by left fielder Chris Tomek scored Jircitano and Ruth.

Liz Ryan followed with a double to right field and Linda Barnes singled to drive in Tomek for the winning run.

"I WAS A LITTLE bit nervous in the first game," Parrish said. "We were hitting well, but they just weren't falling in."

"I knew after we scored the first run that we were going to win because the momentum was there. I knew the same thing would happen in the second game because we were in a groove."

Both teams came out strong in the second game with the Bulldogs taking a 2-1 lead after two innings of play.

But in the bottom of the third inning, the game was interrupted when Drake's second baseman Jayne Cawley was injured on a collision with Iowa baserunner Alice Darland. After a one-hour delay — both the West Branch volunteer fire department and an ambulance had to be called — she was taken to the UI hospitals. Cawley was thought to have a slight back injury.

THE DELAY SEEMED to work to the Hawkeyes' advantage. Ryan singled to center field, advanced to second and scored on hits by Barnes and Nicola, tying the game at 2-2.

And in the fourth inning, Tomek smacked a home run over the right field fence bringing in Theresa Wise and giving the Hawkeyes a two-run lead for the win.

"Offensively, we were producing and we came through with the runs needed to win," Parrish said.

"The defense was a lot tougher," she said. "It was much better tonight (than Tuesday night against Bradley)."

After its double-header at Northwestern, Iowa meets Michigan State this weekend for two double-headers at the West Branch High School diamond.

Iowa split is dull-day afternoon

By Mike Condon
Staff Writer

Two weeks ago, a baseball double-header between Iowa and Iowa State was canceled due to inclement weather in Ames. Wednesday's twin-bill in Iowa City was played but the way both teams performed, it should have been canceled due to boredom.

By the way, the two squads each gained a victory. The Hawkeyes literally gave away the first game as Iowa State took advantage of five Iowa errors to win, 10-4. But the Cyclones returned the favor in the second game, committing five errors themselves as the Hawks won, 10-1.

"THE LORD GIVETH and the Lord taketh away," said Iowa State Coach Larry Corrigan of his teams' effort. "We did some positive things in the first game. We got our running game going and really put the pressure on them."

The pressure paid off in the second inning for the Cyclones. Iowa starting pitcher Bob Holpuch retired the first two batters in the inning. After walking Todd Raabe, Holpuch induced Scott Kickbush to hit a grounder to Hawkeye shortstop Jim Drahozal. But Drahozal fumbled the ball and everybody was safe.

No. 9 hitter Steve Padgett then hit a grounder that second baseman Kevin Olinger threw to second for a force out, but Kickbush beat the throw and the bases were loaded.

Enter lead-off hitter Bob Mancuso. The Cyclone shortstop hit Holpuch's first pitch over the left-field fence for his first homer of the year.

"HE'S NOT A home run hitter," Corrigan said. "But he has been playing very well lately and has been doing a lot of positive things for us both at bat and in the field."

After the homer, the Iowa defense let down again. After singles by Jim Walewander and Reggie Hastings, Drahozal made his second error of the inning, allowing Walewander and Hastings to score and increasing the lead to 6-0.

Banks voiced concern over the left side of his infield. "We've made 26 errors this season on the left side of our infield alone," Banks said. "Jimmy (Drahozal) has had problems at times with the mental part of the game. We just have to shake him once in a while to get him going. But he has a tremendous amount of ability and he gives a good effort. He's our shortstop and we'll live or die with him there."

IOWA CLOSED THE score to 7-4 in the fifth after a Brian Charipar RBI-single, but Iowa State clinched the victory with a three-run seventh inning, the key hit being a two-run triple by catcher Corky Summers.

Cyclone Corky Summers drops the ball as Iowa first baseman Jeff Nielsen (34) heads for the plate on a hit-and-run in the fifth inning of the first game of Wednesday's double header. Nielsen scored on Summers' error. The Hawks drew a split, losing the first game, 10-4, and winning the nightcap, 10-1.

In the second game, the Cyclones broke on top in the third inning as Jon Meier doubled to left and scored on Kickbush's RBI single. Iowa State went on to load the bases with only one caught Kickbush before he could touch the plate.

Iowa came back to tie the score in the fourth as Craig Conti walked and stole second. Cyclone pitcher Nick Zumsande's wild pick-off attempt let Conti advance to third, where he scored on a Davis ground out.

THE HAWKS TOOK the lead for good in the fifth. After reliever Mark Danker retired the first two hitters in the inning, freshman Tom Snowberger doubled to left and Drahozal tripled him home. Gurtcheff then doubled in Drahozal to put Iowa ahead, 3-1. In the sixth, four Iowa State errors combined with four consecutive walks and four Iowa hits, put the game out of the Cyclones' reach. With a 10-1 lead, all that was required of Hawkeye pitcher Mike Tschida was to retire the Cyclones in the seventh, which he did.

"We just broke down defensively in the sixth," Corrigan said. "There were a couple times we should have been in the dugout instead of giving them another chance."

Banks was just happy to have the win. "I didn't think Tschida really pitched that well," he said. "I told him after the game that he must have done it with mirrors."

Gervin, Spurs bury the Nuggets

United Press International

Johnny Moore collected 26 points and an NBA playoff-record 20 assists and George Gervin added a game-high 30 points Wednesday night to lead the San Antonio Spurs to a 126-109 victory over the Denver Nuggets and a two-game lead in their NBA Western Conference semifinal series.

Mike Mitchell added 27 points and Edgar Jones had 19 to help San Antonio to a 2-0 lead in the best-of-seven series.

Kiki Vandeweghe and Mike Evans led Denver with 22 points each and Dan Issel, who went out with an injured knee early in the third quarter, added 21.

ISSEL'S KNEE WAS diagnosed as a strained tendon. Denver forward Alex English, the league's regular-season scoring champion, missed the game because of a left ankle sprain suffered in the third quarter of Tuesday night's 152-133 Nuggets loss.

Gervin scored seven points during a 17-2 San Antonio spree midway through the second quarter to give the Spurs a 60-51 edge, and they held on for a 70-63 halftime lead. Moore hit for 20 and Mitchell had 19 in the first half.

Bucks 116, Celtics 95

Sidney Moncrief scored 22 points to lead six teammates in double figures as the Milwaukee Bucks shocked the Boston Celtics with an overpowering second half Wednesday night for a 116-95 victory in their NBA playoff opener.

Game two in the best-of-seven Eastern Conference semifinal series will be played Friday night in Boston.

IT WAS THE worst home playoff defeat for the Celtics since April 13, 1972, when they lost 116-94 to the New York Knicks.

Milwaukee, which has won only one playoff series since 1974, outclassed the Celtics in the second half. Moncrief had 15 of his points in the half while Bob Lanier, who finished with 21, added five.

Marques Johnson had 17 for the Bucks while Junior Bridgeman had 14, Brian Winters 13 and Paul Pressey 10. Nate Archibald led the Celtics with 23 points while Robert Parish added 20 and Larry Bird 17.

Milwaukee, playing without the injured Dave Cowens, expanded the lead as high as 106-83 with 4:12 to play, even though Boston Coach Bill Fitch reinserted his starting line-up with seven minutes remaining and Boston trailing by 21 points.

76ers 98, Knicks 91

Moses Malone and Maurice Cheeks ignited a third-quarter spurt that rallied Philadelphia from a 20-point deficit Wednesday night and led the 76ers to a 98-91 victory over the New York Knicks and a 2-0 advantage in their NBA playoff series.

THE BEST-OF-seven Eastern Conference semifinal matchup moves to New York for games three and four Saturday and Sunday.

Ryan whiffs No. 3,509, nabs record

MONTREAL (UPI) — The Ryan Express reached stop No. 3,509 a little less rapidly than it had arrived at some previous milestones, but it was in control all the same.

Houston Astros fireballer Nolan Ryan became baseball's all-time strikeout king Wednesday, fanning five Montreal Expos to break Walter (Big Train) Johnson's 56-year-old record of 3,508. His fifth strikeout came with one out in the eighth inning against pinch hitter Brad Mills.

Mills, like so many before him in Ryan's 15-year major-league career, looked at a back-wrenching curve on a 1-and-2 pitch and plate umpire Bob Engel made a dramatic punch at the air to crown the historic strike.

"I AM RELIEVED to get it over with. I am very satisfied," said Ryan, who defeated the Expos 4-2 to gain his 207th career victory against 187 losses. He was lifted for a pinch hitter after the eighth. Frank LaCorte got a save.

"I look at records as a gauge to judge people's accomplishments," he said. "I'm not really record-oriented. If I have the opportunity to break any, I feel fortunate and blessed."

A crowd of 19,309 broke into thunderous cheer and remained standing and cheering for about five minutes as catcher Alan Ashby handed the ball to the Astros' dugout and the Astros on the playing field gathered around the pitcher.

"It was a curveball," Ryan said. "It was a good breaking ball that hit the plate. I never knew 15 strikeouts would be so hard to come by."

Black Hawks refuel for Oilers

CHICAGO (UPI) — The Chicago Black Hawks, trailing 2-0 in their best-of-seven Stanley Cup semifinal series against the Edmonton Oilers, returned home Wednesday, weary from a disappointing road trip.

Coach Orval Tessier said his team will have to regroup before Sunday night's game at the Chicago Stadium if the Black Hawks have even a prayer of winning the Campbell Conference series.

The Black Hawks suffered an embarrassing loss Tuesday night as the Oilers skated to an 8-2 victory. The first game of the series at Edmonton wasn't much better, as the Black Hawks suffered an 8-4 defeat.

"WHEN A TEAM plays like we played, we'd give nobody trouble, including Hartford," Tessier said after Tuesday night's game. "Pretty tough to play anybody with 2½ defensemen and one line. We had five or six hockey players tonight. The rest gave up."

The Black Hawks' fans have not given up, however. Sunday and Tuesday's upcoming games are already sold out. More than 17,000 fans have purchased tickets to watch Chicago's most successful team this season.

"I think they'll come back," said Pauline Capocchia, a longtime member of the Black Hawks Standby Fan Club, which has been in existence about 30 years.

"They're just not playing their game like we know they can play it," Capocchia said. "Some of them weren't skating or checking (in Tuesday's game) like we know they can."

THE BLACK HAWKS will try and get into their old form when they practice on Thursday and Friday, the team spokesman said.

"We can't lose any more games," the spokesman said. "This is it." The Boston Bruins are hoping a third-period show of life in their opening loss to New York will carry over into game two Thursday night against the Islanders.

The Bruins cut a 4-0 deficit in half in the third period before losing 5-2 in Tuesday night's opener of the best-of-seven Stanley Cup playoff series. The Islanders quickly choked off the attempted rally, but not before it gave the Bruins some confidence in trying to even the Wales Conference final.

"WE COULD HAVE rolled over but we came back and showed them something for the next game," said Boston's center Barry Pederson, who had a goal and an assist. "Hopefully, it will carry over to Thursday."

The Bruins are already classifying game two in the "must win" category, for they have absolutely no desire to travel to the Nassau County Coliseum

NFL teams expect few problems in signing picks

NEW YORK (UPI) — Although the big fish may have gotten away, Tuesday's NFL draft figures to help several struggling clubs wiggle into the playoff pond.

Stanford's All-American quarterback John Elway continues to use the New York Yankees as a wedge against the Baltimore Colts, who selected him with the first pick in the draft, but other teams expect minimal problems signing their top choices.

If the Colts do manage to corral their reluctant first-round pick, Baltimore's draft would be considered the league's most productive. Elway would do wonders for the NFL's 27th-ranked offense and Baltimore also nabbed two intriguing defensive prospects in Arizona State linebacker Vernon Maxwell and defensive tackle George Achica of Southern California.

NFL COMMISSIONER Pete Rozelle, frustrated by Elway's decision not to play with Baltimore, says he's willing to step in and help the Colts in any way he can.

"I'm hopeful it will still work out," said Rozelle after Elway announced Tuesday he had reached an agreement in principle to play baseball for the New York Yankees rather than throw a football for the Colts.

"If they (Colts) asked me," Rozelle said, "I would certainly try to see if something could be worked out. But I'm sure they will be hearing directly from clubs now."

ELWAY, THE MULTI-talented passing sensation, who was the No. 1 selection in Tuesday's draft, has said on numerous occasions he would refuse to play for the Colts if he was drafted by them. Last-minute negotiations with the San Diego Chargers and the Los Angeles Raiders proved futile and the Colts were left with no choice but to take Elway.

"It's a very sensitive situation," says Rozelle. "Baltimore is in a difficult position. They have to show their fans some improvement and when they couldn't come up with a deal, they felt they had no alternative but to take Elway."

Rozelle, who says he has been in touch with the Colts almost daily and that he met with Elway's agent, Marvin Demoff, prior to the draft, remains optimistic progress can be made.

"IT'S NOT OVER," says Rozelle. "I'll take patience. What we have to do is avoid inflammatory statements." Rozelle said he figured only the Chargers were in the running for Elway.

"San Diego was the only club that could have given Baltimore anything right now," said the commissioner. "The Raiders couldn't give Baltimore what they needed at present. The Colts wanted draft picks. (Baltimore) Coach Frank Kush wants to build from the draft."

Rozelle is still counting on Elway playing in the NFL next fall.

"I can't see the Yankees making a strong financial deal to have him play in the minors for two years and then let him have the option to play football without going to the majors," Rozelle said. "Realistically, it's not practical for them to pay him big money and not have him come to the Yankees."

MEANWHILE, IN OTHER draft action, the Chicago Bears, Buffalo Bills and Los Angeles Rams helped themselves considerably in hopes of earning a post-season spot while the San Diego Chargers — perennial playoff disappointments — also appear much stronger in pursuit of their first Super Bowl berth.

Chicago Coach Mike Ditka says the Bears' top three picks have excellent chances to earn starting spots, claiming Pittsburgh tackle Jimbo Covert, Tennessee wide receiver Willie Gault and defensive back Michael Richardson of Arizona State will fill some of the team's most pressing needs.

"We are looking at three potential starters next year," Ditka said. "We did what we wanted to do and (the draft) came about just about as we had planned."

GAULT, WHO ALSO returns kicks, caught 50 passes for 668 yards and four TDs with Tennessee as a senior.

"He has one thing you can't coach, great speed," says Ditka, who likened Gault to former Dallas star Bob Hayes and current All-Pro James Lofton of Green Bay. "Some may doubt him ... but they'll doubt him only once."

The Bills, who folded last season as the passing game collapsed in December, grabbed off the best tight end available, Notre Dame's Tony Hunter, and highly regarded Miami (Fla.) quarterback Jim Kelly with their two opening-round picks. Worried about the status of often-injured linebacker Shane Nelson, the Bills landed rangy West Virginia linebacker Darryl Talley on their next pick.

"WE COULDN'T BE happier," says new Buffalo Coach Kay Stephenson. "If you told us the morning before the draft that we would have a shot at Hunter and Kelly, we would have been ecstatic."

The Rams traded up with Houston over the weekend for the right to pick second instead of third and new Los Angeles Coach John Robinson got his man in Southern Methodist's All-American back Eric Dickerson.

The Rams also added speedy wide receiver Henry Ellard and the nation's premier college kicker, Washington's Chuck Nelson.

Hawks face blinding speed at Drake

By Steve Riley
Staff Writer

Whoosh!
That's the sound made by — as Gordon Beecham puts it — "four fast people who get their (baton) handoffs down." In other words, the sound of a good 4 x 100-meter relay.

Beecham is the leadoff man on Iowa's 4 x 100-meter relay, one that is ranked fourth in a blistering Drake Relays field this year. The Beecham-Terrence Duckett-Victor Greer-Jeff Patrick quartet has run a school-record 39.9 seconds (hand-timed) this season.

Drake's No. 1 and No. 2 ranked teams — Alabama and Georgia — are the only teams to beat the Hawkeyes this season. They did so at the Dogwood Relays in Knoxville, Tenn., three weekends ago. Alabama ran 39.6 to win it, and Georgia ran 39.9, to beat Iowa, which was also at 39.9. Texas Christian has run the third-fastest time.

ALABAMA IS THE logical favorite. The Crimson Tide has gone 39.4 this season, which is the time they recorded in winning last year's Drake Relays. If the 4 x 100 winner was determined strictly by raw speed, no one would touch the Tide. After all, they have the No. 2 and No. 8 sprinters in the world — Calvin Smith and Emmitt King. Drake's record, 39.31, is in danger.

"Their weak spot is their anchor man, who is an intermediate hurdler," said Olympic Sprint Coach Mel Rosen of Auburn. Rosen's team has chased both Alabama and Georgia a lot this season. "But they usually have such a tremendous lead when they get to him, it's all over. Calvin Smith runs the third leg, and he's simply the best curve runner in America."

BUT BLINDING SPEED isn't everything. When human beings are moving at over 25 mph, the slightest foul-up — such as a bad handoff — can leave the relay out of reach. This concerns Iowa Coach Ted Wheeler. "When you're within .6 seconds of a team like Alabama, it all depends on what you do with the stick," he said.

The Hawkeyes haven't had ideal handoffs all season, except at Dogwood. Against Wisconsin last weekend in Iowa City, the relay clicked until the final handoff — Greer to Patrick — when it was slowed up. Greer was caught in the shoulder by a flying Leroy Dixon elbow, but wasn't hurt seriously.

THE FASTEST MAN on Iowa's relay hasn't been determined yet. An argument could be made for Patrick, the freshman who has clocked 10.47 for 100 meters. Or Greer, who beat Patrick last weekend with his 100 victory. Or even Duckett, the owner of a 46.74, 400 meters.

But Beecham, who has the fastest start of the four, probably has the answer. "There's no telling," he said, which can also be said of the Hawks' chances this weekend.

The Daily Iowan/Bill Paxson

Iowa's Victor Greer (right) grabs his shoulder as he hands off to teammate Jeff Patrick during the 4 x 100-meter relay in last weekend's dual meet against Wisconsin in Iowa City. Greer was reacting to being hit on the shoulder by the Badger's Leroy Dixon. The Badgers edged the Hawkeyes, 78-67. Iowa's speedy relay team will be among a the premier events at the Drake Relays.

Hawk notes

Tonight's basketball banquet may receive a surprise visit from former Iowa Coach Lute Olson and his wife Bobbi, but don't attend on that account alone because it's a maybe with a capital M.

"We would like to come," Olson said Wednesday, "but it all depends on the situation here. We're sort of in limbo because we may have to attend a fundraising thing. We have plans to come but we have alternate plans as well."

Olson said he has been encouraged to come back to Iowa City by George Raveling as well as many Hawkeye fans.

"THE BIGGEST thing was that Coach Raveling called and extended an invitation," Olson said. "He encouraged us to come if we can do it." Asked if he thought his presence might create an awkward situation, Olson said: "Coach Raveling and I have known each other for a long time so I don't think it would be uncomfortable."

"We've heard from a lot of people. We've heard from a large number of well-wishers," and after a short pause, Olson added: "...and from a few other types also."

IOWA'S JILL DAVENPORT finished third in the Drake heptathlon Wednesday. Jill Lancaster and Renee Nickles of the powerful Team Kangaroos, comprised of Oklahoma graduates, finish No. 1 and No. 2, respectively.

Productivity is up for first quarter

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Productivity advanced during the first three months of 1983 in all parts of the economy and real hourly compensation for workers made its biggest jump since 1976, the Labor Department reported Wednesday.

Productivity in the business sector increased at a 2.2 percent annual rate from January through March, the Bureau of Labor Statistics said. It was the first time since the third quarter of 1981 that productivity, output and hours all gained.

Seasonally adjusted data for the first three months of the year also showed productivity advancing at a 7.1 percent annual rate in the manufacturing sector, as output increased 10.3 percent and hours rose 3 percent, following six consecutive quarters of declines.

First quarter data for other parts of the economy showed advances of 4.8 percent in the non-farm business sector, 8.4 percent in durable goods manufacturing, and 5.5 percent in non-durable goods manufacturing.

"The productivity improvement is good news," said Jerry Jasinowski, chief economist for the National Association of Manufacturers. "It reflects both the increased output due to the recovery and the fact that output is rising more rapidly than employment."

JASINOWSKI SAID efficiencies achieved by businesses during the recession "will be a major factor in holding down wage costs and inflation this year."

Hourly compensation, which includes employer expenditures for wages and salaries as well as payments for Social Security, private pension and health plans and other fringe benefits, increased only 4.7 percent during the first quarter, the smallest rise since the fourth quarter of 1971.

But the bureau said real hourly compensation, which includes an adjustment for changes in the Consumer Price Index, increased 5.1 percent, the largest quarterly increase since the beginning of 1976.

It was caused in large part by the fact that the Consumer Price Index for All Urban Consumers declined in the first quarter, the first quarterly drop in that measure since 1961.

In the business sector, the broadest measured by the bureau, the 2.2 percent first-quarter advance was smaller than the 2.6 percent rate in the final quarter of 1982, but reflected gains of 4.6 percent in output and 2.3 percent in hours.

The first quarter increase in output was the largest since the 7.9 percent increase during the first quarter of 1981.

Jobless health care aid opposed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The administration, believing the "great majority" of jobless workers do not lack health insurance, opposes new federal funding to help them unless it comes from new taxes, budget director David Stockman said Wednesday.

Stockman said the administration estimates only 2.1 million Americans lack medical care out of the 10.5 million unemployed in the first three months of this year. The Congressional Budget Office recently put the figure at 10.7 million workers and family members, perhaps half of them workers.

"The great majority of the unemployed are not being denied care," Stockman testified during a Senate Finance Committee hearing. "The problem is not as large as is commonly perceived."

Stockman said most jobless workers are unemployed less than six months and can switch to a family member's insurance or go on Medicaid, the government health program for the poor. He said many employers offer extended insurance coverage to laid-off workers, and said hospitals and doctors are providing discount care in some states.

THE ADMINISTRATION wants to let states use social services block grant money to provide coverage and will back changes in the law to let laid-off workers switch to a family member's coverage or buy extended coverage on his own, Stockman said.

But he insisted any extra funding for block grants must be "pay-as-you-go" and come from tightening the administration's proposed limit on tax-free employer-paid health insurance. Requiring workers to pay income taxes on family coverage above $160 a month, instead of the $175 proposed in the president's budget, would raise $500 million in 1984.

Congress is considering several plans to appropriate billions for a program. Senate Finance Chairman Robert Dole, D-Kan., is sponsoring a $1.5 billion two-year program of grants to states. House health subcommittee chairman Henry Waxman, D-Calif., is proposing a $2.7 billion program.

"We're not certain our proposal is the only option," Dole said as the hearing began. He later told Stockman the committee agrees with his opposition to a new federal entitlement program.

Stockman termed the new program "totally unacceptable," partly because it would quickly grow out of bounds by allowing anyone to sign up who met certain qualifications.

Feinstein retains office as attempted recall fails

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Mayor Dianne Feinstein said Wednesday her smashing victory over an attempted recall was "wide, deep and significant" and ensured her re-election in November.

"I'm sure someone will file to run against me," the smiling mayor said. "But I think anyone who does is going to get creamed."

She easily survived the recall vote Tuesday, obtaining 127,043 votes in her favor against 29,269 for throwing her out of office, with all but about 5,000 votes counted.

Savoring the 80-percent win, Feinstein cleared her official calendar Wednesday to tour neighborhoods and thank her army of volunteers, precinct workers and supporters.

Although the trouncing of recall foes led by gun advocates, renter organizations and homosexual factions thrust her further into the national political limelight, Feinstein said her only ambition was to continue as San Francisco's "on hands, seven-days-a-week" mayor.

"I'm not a candidate for national office," she said.

The victory, she said, was a clear indication that San Francisco, which hosts the Democratic National Convention in 1984, is an "island of sanity" that has a strong mayor and a viable form of government.

A man in Brussels, Belgium, raises his fist as other demonstrators protest unemployment Wednesday outside a European Parliament meeting.

Europeans troubled about unemployment

BRUSSELS, Belgium (UPI) — Members of the European Parliament said Wednesday the Common Market must create at least a million jobs a year to stem the economic tides that have already left 12 million Europeans jobless and pose a threat to democracy.

In a special two-day meeting, the European Parliament focused on a resolution to adopt a pact under which governments and industries in the 10-nation Common Market could agree on a joint course of action.

Outside the parliament buildings, a handful of unemployed people carried placards denouncing the job shortage and lobbied parliamentarians as they entered.

Parliament member Eustratios Papaefstratiou of Greece said Europe spent $60 billion last year to help its unemployed, at least a quarter of whom are under the age of 25.

"Young people are suffering disproportionately and there is a danger they will lose their trust in society and become prone to extremist forms of propaganda," he said.

He urged the creation of at least 1 million new jobs a year, but said such a program would only halt new unemployment in EEC countries and not put the 12,194,800 currently unemployed back to work.

GEORGES DEBUNNE, president of the European Trade Union Congress, warned the crisis had brought the Common Market nations — some of the richest in the world — to the brink of a socioeconomic crisis similar to the one that heralded the Nazi rise to power in the 1930s.

Parliament member Fred Catherwood of Britain said employment had become an international problem that could only be corrected through international action.

"The world is looking to us. Our trade is 50 percent greater than that of the United States. Our industrial output is greater too. Unless we act there is little hope for the Third World ... We need to create conditions of stability so that firms will invest, and to do it in conjunction with the U.S. and Japan," he said.

The European Parliament, an advisory branch of the Common Market, is a 434-member house with headquarters in Strasbourg, France. It advises the European Commission, the Common Market's executive steering body.

Members of the Common Market are Belgium, France, West Germany, Luxembourg, Italy, the Netherlands, Britain, Ireland, Denmark and Greece.

Poland charges U.S. with hostile activities

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) — The Polish government charged Wednesday the United States has tried to incite unrest during planned May Day celebrations and demanded the closure of a U.S. Embassy library open to Polish citizens.

The Foreign Ministry called in Charge D'Affaires Herbert Wilgis, the highest-ranking American diplomat in Poland, to receive a toughly worded protest note that "demanded a stop be put to these activities aimed against Poland," Polish television reported.

Wilgis said he told his Polish counterpart the charges were unfounded.

As a consequence of America's "unlawful hostile activities" towards Poland, the PAP news agency said, government officials demanded immediate closure of a library at the U.S. Embassy.

American officials confirmed that subject was discussed, but had no further comment.

The U.S. library offers American books, films and television programs to Polish citizens. PAP said it has been breaking "international law and custom" by distributing material "slandering the Polish Peoples' Republic."

THE POLISH PROTEST, the latest in a series of such accusations against the United States, appeared to be aimed at stories in Western news media reporting preparations for anti-government protests the underground Solidarity has called for May 1, International Worker's Day.

Citing news reports by the Voice of America and Radio Free Europe, the television report said, "The Polish-language broadcasts beamed by these radio stations have a slanderous character as a rule, aiming at destabilization of the situation in Poland by instigating social unrest and street riots. "They very often contain the direct instructions for the destructive elements in their fight against the constitutional system in Poland."

The government's message coincided with former labor leader Lech Walesa's return to work at the Lenin Shipyard after winning his first grievance session with the yard's management over seniority rights.

Walesa refused to say whether he would join the unofficial May Day parade, but sources close to him said he planned to stay at home Sunday.

ALL MAJOR newspapers published full-page texts of a speech by Deputy Premier Mieczyslaw Rakowski denouncing calls for protests as "Solidarity's last chance" — part of a "totally insane" plan to create new unrest in Poland.

Factory directors and government officials in Gdansk called on police to take whatever action they felt necessary to halt demonstrations Sunday in the city where Solidarity was founded, Polish news reports said.

Authorities in Warsaw did not issue such a clear-cut threat. But officials said privately security services would try to block any demonstrations before they could start by blocking access to the Old Town neighborhood that Solidarity's underground bulletins set as the starting point.

A handbill issued by the anti-government Committee for Social Resistance warned would-be demonstrators of "possible interference" Sunday. It advised mingling with Communist Party members heading for the government's official May Day parade, set to begin at about the same time as the underground's demonstration.

Salvadorans condemn plan for American peace envoy

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (UPI) — The powerful Salvadoran Chamber of Commerce condemned Wednesday as "offensive and humiliating" a U.S. plan to send a special envoy to negotiate peace with El Salvador's leftist guerrillas.

The Chamber of Commerce, the largest business association in the country, condemned the proposal just hours before a major speech on Central America by President Reagan to a joint session of Congress.

It is Reagan's position that more American military and economic aid is needed to protect El Salvador from guerrilla insurgents the administration says are armed and financed by the Soviet Union, Nicaragua and Cuba.

The Chamber of Commerce issued a communique Wednesday blasting the suggestion that a special U.S. envoy be named to bring about an accord under which guerrillas could participate in December presidential elections.

The proposal was made by Rep. Clarence Long, D-Md., and accepted by the administration in exchange for winning approval Tuesday from Long's appropriations subcommittee for $30 million in new military aid for El Salvador. But the Chamber of Commerce charged Long wants to appoint a "plenipotentiary agent" in a move that offends El Salvador's "sovereignty and national dignity."

"THE PRETENSIONS of Mr. Clarence Long to name a species of plenipotentiary agent that will come to direct the electoral process in which we are going to decide the future of our country is offensive and humiliating," the communique said.

"El Salvador does not form part of the colonial world of any power and if it needs the help of the government of the United States that is because it is the victim of aggression of nations bent on destroying the democratic system," it said.

Guerrillas, on their clandestine Radio Venceremos, rejected any moves by the United States to negotiate a path for the left to participate in the elections.

"The electoral farce will turn out to be a failure. The military aid will not detain the advance of the force of the people," Venceremos said.

Branstad signs bills aimed at lowering medical costs

DES MOINES (UPI) — Gov. Terry Branstad has signed into law two bills designed to lower health care costs and another measure allowing expanded use of driver's permits for minors traveling between school facilities.

One of the bills will create a health data commission that will collect and compare hospital costs around the state. The bill, which passed 99-0 in the House and 45-1 in the Senate, also changes the board of Blue Cross and Blue Shield to provide for more consumer representation.

The bill was built around recommendations contained in the Governor's Commission on Health Care Costs.

The information compiled by the data commission will be disseminated to help the public make effective decisions. Under the bill, the commission will disband after its work is completed by July 1, 1985.

The other measure concerning health care allows health maintenance organizations to advertise the names of the professionals on the staff.

The governor also signed another bill allowing the use of a minor's school driver's license for travel by the student between enrollment centers. Legislators felt the bill was necessary due to the increased use of shared facilities between school districts, especially in rural areas.

The bill also provides that a person who possessed a minor's school license for the operation of a motorcycle before January 1, 1982, is exempt from completing a motorcycle education course before obtaining a standard operating license.

Girlfriend's testimony closes state's case against Oglevie

DAVENPORT, Iowa (UPI) — Prosecutors put the finishing touches on their case against Andrew Jon Oglevie Wednesday with a former jail inmate testifying he heard Oglevie bragging about the 1979 murder of an Iowa City man.

Oglevie, 25, of Rockford, Ill., is on trial for first-degree murder in the April 14, 1979, shotgun slaying of Ady F. Jensen, 39, at the farmhouse of Jensen's parents near West Branch.

Prosecutors are trying to prove Oglevie was the hitman hired by Jensen's wife, Jeanne, and her two friends, Robert and Judy Kern, in an apparent murder-for-profit scheme.

The state, which presented about a dozen witnesses, rested after brief testimony by Oglevie's girlfriend, Linda Lebre, who said she saw Oglevie in Rockford around 4:30 p.m. on April 14, 1979.

Prosecutors are trying to show Oglevie could have driven from Iowa to Rockford by late afternoon. Jensen's parents testified the killing took place around 10:30 a.m. that day.

OGLEVIE'S DEFENSE, which was scheduled to begin Thursday, is expected to dispute the time element.

Earlier Wednesday, Bobby Joe Meadows, who served time in the Cedar County Jail while Oglevie was awaiting trial, told the jury he wrote his wife a letter after hearing Oglevie talk about the killing.

"He said he waited for the Jensen guy and when he came in, he wasted him," Meadows testified, saying he first became interested in the talk when Oglevie said he had tied up Jensen's elderly parents in a bedroom.

"He said he had them tied up for two days — that's what interested me," Meadows said.

Olga and Ferdinand Jensen have testified an intruder forced his way into their house with a shotgun and tied them up. They said the man killed their son the next morning when he came to their house to do some chores.

Following Meadows' testimony, Iowa law enforcement agent John Judy told the court Oglevie gave several different stories about where he was the night Jensen was killed.

IN ONE INTERVIEW, Oglevie said he was with friends. Later, he said he may have been at home. In a second interview, Judy said, Oglevie commented that "maybe I was, maybe I wasn't" in Iowa the night of the slaying.

Oglevie's attorney, Lawrence Sealise, later asked Judy about a conversation he heard Judy Kern have with her daughter. The agent said Kern said, "Mommy killed Jeanne's husband and they're taking her to jail for it."

District Judge James Kelley, who had excused the jury prior to the controversial questioning, has refused to allow the conversation to be part of the court record on grounds Kern never was asked about the discussion.

Judy and Robert Kern were convicted for their role in the murder and are serving life prison terms. Jeanne Jensen, who pleaded guilty to conspiracy to commit murder and testified against the Kerns, is serving a 10-year term.

Mondale criticizes Reagan

Walter Mondale

DES MOINES (UPI) — Former vice president Walter Mondale Wednesday again charged President Reagan with using the wrong tactics in his Central American policy, particularly in El Salvador and Nicaragua.

"No, I'm not at all satisfied with it," Mondale told a news conference following a 45-minute question-and-answer session with students at Des Moines Roosevelt High School.

"When the administration took office, they perceived the problems to be principally military and only minor politically," he said. "In my view, it's the other way around. It's a political issue."

The Democratic presidential hopeful has been consistently critical of Reagan administration economic and foreign policies in the early stages of his campaign.

Mondale, in the first day of a two-day campaign swing through the state, said the administration has shown poor judgment in dealing with Nicaragua.

"It's been a bad show from the beginning. He's (Reagan) made several mistakes. One was joining up with the Somoza crowd, which has the least popular support there. To identify with that old crew was a serious mistake."

Instead of supporting members of the exiled Somoza group, "we should get political discussions going about a ceasefire and refocus the political problems there," he said.

Violinist chose freedom of jazz

By Jeffrey Miller
Arts/Entertainment Editor

IOWA AUDIENCES will get a chance to hear "the grand old man of European jazz" when Stephane Grappelli, jazz violinist nonpareil, brings his quartet to Hancher Auditorium at 8 p.m. Monday, May 2.

Grappelli, who will be accompanied by guitarists Martin Taylor and Marc Fosset and bassist Patrice Caratini, is known for his inexhaustible talent for creating swinging, elegant improvisations on tunes ranging from old standards to the works of a number of contemporary songwriters.

He has been first-place winner for years in downbeat magazine's jazz violin poll, and his live album with bluegrass/swing/"dawa" mandolinist David Grisman was selected Best Album of 1981 by Frets magazine (Grappelli accompanies Grisman on several cuts of the latter's new album, Dawg Jazz).

Grappelli began his musical career playing for coins in the streets of Paris as a small boy and listening whenever he could to the fascinating new music from America: jazz.

WHEN ASKED BY New York Times critic Robert Palmer why he chose jazz over the more accepted classical violin style, Grappelli responded: "Jazz has everything — classical strains, sentiment, swing, improvisation."

"I would much rather play my own music than be a classical artist and be obliged to play what is written, exactly the way it must be played."

After performing his own music during the late 1920s and early 1930s in Paris clubs, Grappelli joined forces with Gypsy guitarist Django Reinhardt in 1934 to form the nucleus of the legendary Quintet of the Hot Club of Paris.

Though criticized by some for being too "string-heavy" and for having a rhythm section that couldn't keep up with the talents of its two lead instrumentalists, the Quintet of the Hot Club quickly became the most popular jazz group on the continent and the first European jazz group to have any influence on American jazz.

With the onset of World War II, the Quintet broke up, with Grappelli spending most of the war years in England. Many of the recordings made by the Quintet and its members were destroyed by the Nazis when they invaded France — particularly one made by Grappelli, Reinhardt and American violinist Eddie South of Bach's Concerto in D minor that was labeled "degenerate art" by German propaganda officials.

AFTER THE WAR, Grappelli and Reinhardt reunited briefly, but Reinhardt died in 1953, and Grappelli retreated for a time to the safe obscurity of the Paris clubs in which he had started.

But his career took off again in the mid-1960s. Rock and modern jazz music both had begun to evidence a new interest in the use of the violin, and Grappelli's old work began to resurface. Over the late 1960s and the 1970s, Grappelli performed and recorded with musicians including Barney Kessel, Earl Hines, Duke Ellington, Oscar Peterson, Joe Pass, Jean-Luc Ponty, Paul Simon and Yehudi Menuhin.

His recent association with David Grisman on tours, recordings and the "Tonight" show has introduced Grappelli to a whole new generation of admirers.

Although Grappelli is now 75, many critics claim that his playing has never been better. One Houston critic writes: "To miss Stephane Grappelli playing live is not only to miss a magical musical performance; it is, I'm convinced, a matter of missing out on one of life's great joys." It's an assertion with which almost anyone who has ever heard Grappelli would agree.

Tickets for the performance of Stephane Grappelli and his quartet are priced at $9, $6 and $4 ($2 more for non-students) and are available at the Hancher box office.

Guitarist says performing with Grappelli is 'great fun'

By Jeffrey Miller
Arts/Entertainment Editor

EVER SINCE his days performing with Django Reinhardt, jazz violinist Stephane Grappelli has enjoyed working with guitarists. "The guitar really swings," he told the New York Times in 1980. "Since I played with Django, I've found I don't need anything else."

Martin Taylor, a 26-year-old guitarist from Scotland, is helping meet that need on Grappelli's current tour of the United States. Grappelli, Taylor, fellow guitarist Marc Fosset and bassist Patrice Caratini will be performing at Hancher Auditorium next Monday night at 8.

"Playing with Stephane is great fun," Taylor said in a telephone interview from New York. "We get to enjoy ourselves — everybody just leans back and plays what they want."

TAYLOR BEGAN performing with Grappelli in Europe four years ago. But his own musical career goes back 22 years, when he decided to follow in the footsteps of his father, a jazz guitarist in Britain. He began to play professionally in British clubs at the age of 12; by the age of 16, he was performing with the Cunard Line's cruise ship bands.

"The first time I came to America was in 1972, as a member of the orchestra on the Queen Elizabeth," Taylor said. "I stood on a lot of tours through the Caribbean. One time, Count Basie and his band were on board, and I got to play with them. It was a whole lot better than work."

After his tours on the QE, Taylor returned to Europe, where he has worked since with a number of musicians, both American and continental. He has recently formed his own group, which has released an album on Concord and just finished a West Coast tour. "European audiences are more reserved, while people tend to get wilder in America," Taylor said. "We just finished two houses at the Bottom Line (in New York) last night. They were both full, and everyone was going crazy."

TAYLOR'S MAIN musical influences, surprisingly, have been pianists rather than guitarists. "As far as guitar players go, I suppose Wes Montgomery and Jim Hall have been the most important people for me," he said. "But the musicians I've really learned from have been pianists, especially Art Tatum."

"You can do so many things on the guitar that you can on the piano, and I don't know of many guitarists who are exploring that. I think of my guitar as a portable piano."

Touring has become more or less a way of life for Taylor. In the past two weeks he has gone from Seattle to Washington, D.C. to New York, with stops in Pittsburgh, Chicago and "a couple of places in Illinois" yet to come before Iowa City. He has been to Iowa once before with Grappelli, in Decorah two years ago.

"I hope I can see a little bit of Iowa this time," he said. "When you're only in one place for a few hours of time, it's hard, you know. I do remember that it was hot."

"The good thing about going to all these places is that you get to know people everywhere. You're never really without friends, and that makes it all a lot easier."

The Iowa Chinese Opera Association tonight presents four one-act traditional Chinese operas. The show includes Pa Wang Pieh Chi (The Warrior and His Girlfriend), Hsiao Fang Niu (The Cowherd and the Village Girl), Feng Hang Hua Ku (The Flower Drum Song) and Wu Kung Yen Chen (A Game for the Palace Ladies). The operas will be presented at 7:30 tonight in Macbride Auditorium.

• Gerhild Krapf Bruse, organist, will present a recital at 8 tonight in Clapp Recital Hall honoring the 150th anniversary of the birth of Johannes Brahms. Aside from Brahms' "Eleven Chorale Preludes for Organ," Bruse will also perform Bach's Prelude and Fugue in E-flat Major. The recital is free and open to the public.

• Faith Productions presents guitarist Phil Keagy in concert with Paul Clark at 7:30 tonight in the Union Main Lounge. Keagy has been around for almost 15 years as one of the least known (due to distribution problems) but most well-received (by those who heard him) rock/folk guitarists. Those we know who have seen him have nothing but praise. Tickets are available at the Union box office.

• He's hot, he's sexy and he's dead. He's the Lizard King, and he's coming to town tonight at the Englert Theater in An Evening With Jim Morrison and the Doors. The evening, sponsored by KKRQ, features "two unforgettable hours of rare and exciting film footage." No doubt we'll see the "Smothers Brothers Comedy Hour" appearances that MTV has been running, as well as the Ed Sullivan shots. And there's also a "complete live Doors concert" with "riot scenes." Try to set the night on fire, Jimbo. 7:30 p.m.

Theater

Today's offerings at the Playwrights Festival include a reading of Greg Linderman's Natural Repose (2:30 p.m.), Lucas-Dodge Room, Union) and a production of Steve Shade's Shibboleths (8 p.m., Old Armory). Linderman's reading is free; there is a $2 admission fee for Shibboleths.

At the Bijou

Mel Gibson is supposed to be the hottest male star in Hollywood right now, and there are several people who'd suggest that he burn a little closer to Iowa City. Mad Max was Gibson's introduction to American audiences. In this first installment of the "Road Warrior" saga, he takes on motorcycle gangs that are stealing everything they can to survive in a post-apocalyptic world.

George Miller's direction isn't quite as powerful as it was in the second film in the series, but Mel is breathtaking as ever.

• Richard Quine's The Solid Gold Cadillac sneaks behind the closed doors of the executive suite to uncover the skulduggery and corruption that goes on there. Entry is provided by Judy Holliday, who plays a not-so-bright, not-so-rich actress determined to take her ten shares of stock and build it into a fortune. The corporate bosses, however, aren't taken with her curiosity about how capitalism really works. Narrated by George Burns; written by Howard Teichmann and George "Ah, desert nights" Kaufman. 8:45 p.m.

Television

John Hillerman dons a double role again tonight on "Magnum, P.I." This time he plays the persnickety Higgins and his half-brother Father Paddy, a priest who is searching for a sacred relic lifted from his church. Guess who gets called in to help? And his little friends Rick and T.C., too. 7 p.m., KGAN-2; WHBF-4.

• Oh frabjous day! Calloo, callay! They chortle in their joy. Tonight's "Hill Street Blues" is a new episode. Benedetto (Dennis Franz) gets to square off against Hill (Michael Warren) and Renko (Charles Haid) again in a drug bust; Frank (Daniel J. Travanti) and Henry (Joe Spano) square off against a full-fledged loon; the station squares off against the department when promissory notes are issued instead of paychecks; Rico (Marco Rodriguez) squares off against the monkey on his back when he decides to go cold turkey.

And Frank and Joyce (Veronica Hamel) return from their honeymoon. Presents? Let's see: a big ducky sponge ... some coconut-flavored lotion ... three bottles of Vitabath. Should be a hot time in the old tub tonight. We like to watch. 9 p.m., KWWL-7.

Production team provides surroundings for 'Faust'

THE AMOUNT of care and patience required of an operatic production is great, and no recent production of the UI Opera Theater has demanded as much of those two qualities as the one being prepared for this weekend — Gounod's Faust.

A complete 16th-century German town is being fashioned by members of the UI Opera and Dance Production Unit, in close association with scenic and costume designer Margaret Wenk and Opera Theater director Beaumont Glass, to frame the action of Gounod's retelling of the infamous Faust legend with an authentic atmosphere.

There's a lot more to being involved in an operatic production than singing or playing, Wenk said. "Working 'behind the scenes' in a show like Faust provides the Opera Theater Workshop students with a perspective of the large scope of opera production." She said students help build sets and props that will later be used during a performance.

The role of the production team in the current performance is to underline the philosophical aspect of the legend, and Wenk said she would do this mostly by insinuation (appropriate enough when one of the main characters is the devil): "What you don't see in solid forms and you do see in hinted forms stimulates the imagination...the subconscious will complete the etching."

An elaborate new curtain, special lighting and effects will underline the concern for magic and the occult that inhabits the tale. Unit members are busily crafting these items for the April 29 premiere, when all the hard work and research done by Unit workers and Workshop students alike will come to fruition.

Designer Margaret Wenk works on her 30-by-60 foot act curtain for the UI Opera Theater production of Charles Gounod's Faust. The opera will be presented in Hancher Auditorium April 29 and May 1.

Artistic interpretations of Shakespeare displayed

By Suzanne Richerson
Staff Writer

SHAKESPEARE'S WORKS have become so much a part of the common heritage of our artistic language that his material has stirred the imagination of many artists as well as musicians and writers. In Scenes from Shakespeare, an exhibit currently on display at the UI Museum of Art, several artists from the 18th through the 20th century interpret the situations depicted in the plays.

The show includes eleven engravings made from the paintings commissioned by Alderman Boydell. His ambitious project, conceived during a dinner party conversation with his nephew and a bookseller friend, began with the publication of a nine-volume set of Shakespeare's works. Paintings done by the great contemporary artists would serve as the basis for illustrations included in the books. The paintings themselves were to hang in a special Shakespeare Gallery in London.

The project, at least for a time, succeeded. The men published the book set, a gallery building was constructed to house the paintings, which then became a popular place for the chic to go in the late 18th century.

A FICKLE PUBLIC lost interest after a few years, however, and by 1805 the paintings fell by lottery to a Mr. Tassie, who auctioned them off to the attics and storage rooms of England and Europe. Many of the paintings were then lost, leaving the engravings in the Boydell collection as the only record of the various artists' works.

The artists include such notables as Robert Smirke, James Northcote, Benjamin West and Anna Maria Angelica Kauffman, (the only woman represented in the show). Historical narrative painting, which was considered the most respectable style during that period, dominates these works. For the most part the scenes are heavy with the modeling of human forms, and include the rich drapery and stylized landscapes that were popular during the time.

John Hoppner's painting of a scene from Cymbeline, for example, features Imogen and her would-be murderer, the heroine's fleshly body in light tones while the disturbed figure and shadowed face of the murderer stands in dark tones beside her. The two figures play out their drama in the midst of a fantasy landscape that could be Italy or England or even New England.

EVEN IN THE paintings with interior settings, the same stylistic characteristics prevail. In James Northcote's illustration from Richard III of the murder of the two children, the innocent shapes of the sleeping children appear as a circle of light surrounded by the heavy, dense shapes of the two assassins. Tonal contrasts necessarily become more prominent in engravings; they also serve as reminders of the loss that Mr. Tassie perpetrated on art viewers when he chose to auction the original paintings of these works.

In addition to the Boydell collection, two other groups of illustrations, which come from the U of I collection, are featured in the exhibit. The first, the Visionen series, includes several lithographs from late 19th-century European artists; the second, a set of drawings done by Oscar Kokoschka, were made when he was 77 years old after he saw a performance of King Lear.

In contrast to the earlier works, these drawings depend on the gestural quality of the line rather than on the narrative aspects of the scene. For example, Hans Freese uses wide lines and curves to portray an emotionally disturbed Ophelia under a willow tree that repeats the undulating movement of her clothing. And in two different interpretations, Alfred Kubin and Rudolf Grossman catch the grotesque innocence of Caliban in The Tempest. Both appear nude, Kubin as a hairy native wearing an amulet while Grossman's figure bulges with abundant flesh.

THE MOST POWERFUL pieces in the show, however, are the several scenes done by Kokoschka of King Lear. In several lithographs he uses swift lines to catch the humility of Edgar as he sits under the sharp angle of a rough shelter, the complex and demonic character of Edmund as he is surrounded by images from his imagination, or the tension of the moment when Lear asks Cordelia to declare her filial affection. The drawings, paradoxically both simple and complex, capture the tragic features of the play.

A pamphlet prepared by Ray Heffner, Miriam Gilbert and Jean Kern locates each scene depicted in the exhibit and explains the significance of the props in the drawings.

Scenes from Shakespeare will continue through May 29.

Festival productions cast spotlight on playwrights' intended messages

By Daniel Gonzalez
Special to The Daily Iowan

TIME, WHICH never seems to be on anyone's side, is especially hard on all those involved in the UI's second annual Playwrights Festival, which is running through Saturday.

The Festival is a presentation of several new plays written by visiting playwrights and by playwrights from the UI Playwrights Workshop. The writers choose directors whose job it is to cast the play and bring it to production in only a few weeks.

"In the Playwrights Festival, the emphasis is on the script," Maureen Reilly, director of The Fencer, said, "on what the playwright was intending to get across."

Reilly experienced particular difficulty with her play, which was presented Monday. Kim Pederson's script underwent two major content changes, one only a week before the show opened. Characters aged from script to script, Reilly said, and due to the time limit, actors had problems learning blocking and lines.

Because of all the changes, The Fencer eventually had to be presented as a staged reading instead of a full-fledged production.

NONETHELESS, REILLY was very pleased with the outcome of the play. "I'd rather give a strong reading than a weak production," she said.

Frances Royster, who is directing tonight's production of Steve Shade's Shibboleths, said that she approaches the Playwrights Festival differently from other directorial assignments.

"I go for the shape of the whole thing," she said. "I work on the basic story and then try to refine it."

Royster explained that with other productions she has directed, she begins with details and builds from there.

"The goal we are all after is to show new work clearly, to create productions that will make the playwright's goals clear," she said.

As Reilly had to do with The Fencer, Royster had to make major changes with Shibboleths. "When you make changes," she said, "they reverberate throughout the play. I just wish my cast could get some sleep."

Frank Bartella, director of the Friday production of Last Site, has also had his share of obstacles to surmount. Bartella and much of his cast have just recently come off the UI's production of Measure for Measure. Other members of the cast have just finished working on the production of 13 Clocks.

BARTELLA AND HIS company have had only two weeks to get their play together. His actors have been staying up most of the night memorizing lines and blocking scenes.

"It (Last Site) will have a lot of improvisational quality" because of the short time limit, Bartella said.

Bartella also noted that because there are so many productions this week, the acting personnel have been "thinned out." As of Monday, he still had not cast one of the minor roles in the play.

Actress Bridget Kelly, who plays an Asian girl in Last Site, said that the Playwrights Festival is demanding on the actors. "I haven't had time to research my character, to know what my character would do in a given day," she said.

Actress Virginia Cook was cast in two plays, Last Site and Mama Weer All Craze Now. "I've been rehearsing two plays," she said. "I go back and forth, from rehearsal to rehearsal. Class work is getting quite difficult."

Last Site writer Shem Bitterman, like other playwrights, has been going to rehearsals to assist the cast in production. Bitterman describes the circumstances of the Playwrights Festival as "difficult."

THEY ARE TRYING "to get as much of the show up in as much time as they can afford," said Bitterman. "I think the actors are doing a good job considering the lead is supposed to be a 60-year-old man and that five of the cast members are supposed to be Asians."

Bitterman also said that the circumstances were a good opportunity for people to understand production. "It's the practical application of one line after another," he said.

Maureen Reilly described the Festival as "...a tremendous experience that you wouldn't learn under ordinary circumstances."

Despite the long hours and exhaustion, a dedicated group of theater people keeps learning and battling time to put on the Playwrights Festival.

Palimony suit settlement expected

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Attorneys for Nick Nolte and his former live-in girlfriend said Wednesday they expected to settle a $4.5 million palimony suit filed by the woman, who claims she shepherded the actor's career only to be kicked out "in the cold."

"I'm optimistic that we'll be able to dispose of this matter soon," Nolte's attorney, Howard Thaler, said during the second day of court-ordered negotiations.

Presiding Superior Court Judge Robert

Johnson, Tuesday ordered attorneys for Nolte, 42, and Eklund, 37, to attempt to resolve the matter without a trial.

Karen Eklund filed the suit three years ago, saying the actor "kicked me out in the cold" after a seven-year relationship.
