City schools garner good marks from officials

By Susan E. Fisher

The bad marks the nation's schools received this week on a report from the National Commission on Excellence in Education should not be taken as a reflection of the Iowa City school system, district of-

According to the report, "the educational foundations of our society are presently being eroded by a rising tide of mediocrity that threatens our very future as a nation and as a

Guerin Thompson, executive director of curriculum, said the public should inform themselves on the local situation before descending upon their own school system.

In fact, Thompson said the local school district is far from flunking. "In Iowa City nearly every measure we have indicates that we have a very superior school district." In the last five years, Iowa City high school students average in the top 10 percent of the state in Iowa Tests of Educational Development. Also, Iowa City students have continued to exceed state and national averages on the ACT college entrance test.

THE EDUCATION commission's attack on a decline in education was expected, Guerin said. He said the district has been aware of the movement toward "excellence in education" and has been working toward increasing the quality of education for some time.

For example, he said, the commission's recommendation that schools increase graduation requirements has been an aim of recent school system objectives.

According to guidelines set last year, Iowa City high school graduates must take four years of language arts, three years of social science, two years of science and two years of math during four years of high school.

Although this falls short of the report's recommendation for four years of English, three years of math, science and social studies and one and one-half years of comupdated requirements fit the needs of Iowa City students

"Iowa City isn't going to see much change based on that report mainly because we have a lot of students who are alert to going on to college and the requirements have been fairly good," Thompson said.

According to Frank Carthey, a counselor at City High School, many students want to take what has been called the "new basics" See Education, page 6

Myers upset over bill's impasse

By Mike Heffern

Johnson County Supervisor Richard Myers accused state Rep. Mike Connolly, D-Dubuque, Thursday of being "bought" by the Iowa beer and liquor industry because Connolly "doesn't have the courage" to bring the Substance Abuse Funding Bill to a vote in he House, Myers said

"The liquor industry has Mr. Connolly so tied down that he doesn't have courage to bring it to a vote, Myers said during a formal meeting of e Board of Supervisors.

His remarks came as the board was discussing the cost to the county of rehabilitating alcoholics and others treated for alcohol-related problems at

Iowa counties no longer want to help pay the costs incurred by individuals seeking help for alcohol-related disabilities at state mental health institutions, but the Iowa beer and liquor industry doesn't want to bear the costs

CONNOLLY STRONGLY denied Myers's allegations. In a phone interview from the State House, Connolly said, "He (Myers) went after me today. He said I was bought by the liquor industry and I think that is a very, very cheap shot.'

Though Connolly said he had spoken with Myers in Des Moines recently about the bill, "We left on friendly terms." Connolly said Myers was "shooting from the hip" and was unaware that measures were being taken to get the bill ready for a vote. The Substance Abuse Funding Bill is now in a finance subcommittee of the House. It would shift the costs for county substance abuse treatment programs from the state's taxpayers to beer distributors and bar owners. The bill would put a $1 tax on a keg of beer and a 2 percent tax on the purchase price of alcoholic beverages.

That possibility has merchants involved in liquor sales lobbying against

Under the present law, Iowa counties pay 25 percent of the total costs incurred by their residents who are given treatment at state mental health facilities. The rest of the costs are paid by the state, which means the total costs are funded by property taxpayers See Supervisors, page 6

Union questions city jurisdiction to implement no-smoking clause

By Karen Herzog

The city's jurisdiction to impose a iring and promotion clause ordering owa City police officers and firefighters to "maintain physical itness" is being challenged.

"We're hoping it doesn't go outside the city," Mike Goldberg, president of he Iowa City police union, said. "The legal system is a last resort."

City administrators added the clause to labor contracts earlier this month because they say it will save taxpayers money if fewer disability pensions are paid to employees who suffer from ailments caused or aggravated by smoking or obesity.

Of the seven firefighters and five police officers now receiving disability pensions, two cases have been linked to smoking, Iowa City Treasurer Nancy Heaton said.

The clause is an attempt to protect the city from a section in the Iowa Code that states all heart- and lungrelated diseases should be presumed to be caused by on-the-job causes, Heaton

BUT BY ADDING the clause without consulting members of the police and firefighter board of trustees, the city "overstepped its boundaries," Goldberg said.

The board of trustees grants pensions, he said. "The city administration has no control over it."

Both the city and officers contribute to the fund, which has a combined coffer for both departments of nearly $5 million, according to Heaton. The board of trustees that has jurisdiction over the fund is comprised of 12 members - the city attorney, city treasurer, fire and police chiefs, two firefighters, two police officers and four citizens who do not hold any other public office.

New employees and those seeking promotions must sign a legally binding contract stating they will not smoke on or off the job and will "maintain physical fitness standards." The standards have not yet been determined.

Because the clause will be enforced while firefighters and police officers are members of the bargaining unit, it should have been discussed with the union, Goldberg said.

special envoy WASHINGTON (UPI) - President Reagan Thursday named former Sen. Richard Stone, a conservative Democrat with past ties to Guatemala's rightist government, as his special envoy to Central America. The White House said Stone will have the rank of ambassador-at-large and work to carry out the objectives of a policy under sharp attack on Capitol Reagan and Stone both predicted a tral America, because of his work in 1981 and 1982 as a registered lobbyist for the Guatemalan government. But Reagan told reporters, "It just adds to the experience he's had down there and the job he can do."

Reagan announced in his address on Central America to Congress Wednes day night he would name the envoy, but held off naming Stone for a day while background checks were made and Congress consulted.

HE AGREED to appoint a presidential envoy in response to pressure from Rep. Clarence Long, D-Md., chairman of the House appropriations subcommittee considering his request for additional military assistance for El Salvador. Long declined Thursday to say if he liked the choice.

"I simply laid down the qualifications. The president has got the responsibility. He has to have the man he can be comfortable with, and my feeling is we're going the performance fairly on how it works out." the lawmaker said.

Sen. Charles Mathias, R-Md., a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said the panel will decide whether to recommend Stone's confirmation by the full Senate only after a complete "inventory of all his baggage." This will include Stone's employment by Guatemala and whether his "philosophy is broad enough" to deal with all parties in Central America, Mathias said.

"The fact that he is a former member of the Senate will not protect him," Mathias said.

Stone's nomination could stir controversy in the Senate because of his work for the Guatemalan government and outspoken criticism of the revolutionary Sandinista regime in Nicaragua and other leftist movements in the region.

HOWEVER, STONE predicted 'strong and supportive" confirmation by the Senate, adding: "I need a strong, supportive vote to do a job as difficult as this. It isn't going to be easy.' Stone said he will use the policy framework set forth by Reagan Wednesday night to work with the nations of the region "to move our difficulties and their difficulties to the conference

In response to suggestions he might be mistrusted by leftist forces because of his past alignment with the political right in Central America, Stone said, "I don't think this is a matter of personalities."

Stone, 54, was a member of the U.S. delegation that monitored the March 1982 elections in El Salvador and was in that country again in late February to hold secret negotiations that resulted in an agreement with the government to hold elections by the end of this

El Salvador aid may buy larger army

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (UPI) - President Alvaro Magana predicted Thursday that El Salvador, ravaged by war with leftist guerrillas, would be able to stand on its own feet - without U.S. aid — within three years.

A Western military observer, meanwhile, said that if Congress approves $30 million in additional aid recommended Tuesday by the House Appropriations Subcommittee, the United States intends to finance a 7,000man expansion of the Salvadoran army this year.

The observer said if the American plan succeeds it would take "about two years to push these guys (leftist guerrillas) back into their redoubts," saying guerrilla combat strength remains at about 6,000.

With the expansion, the Salvadoran army at the end of 1983 would be larger than the 25,000-man Nicaraguan army that President Reagan, in a speech to Congress Wednesday, called the largest armed force in Central America.

The military observer said the United States intends to finance the deployment of 7,000 troops, including some 4,000 to be "combat trained" with the "hope to better than double the combat-level of the army.'

SEVEN BATTALIONS would be trained, including a 1,000-man 'immediate-reaction' battalion to complement the three that have already been trained by the United States, and six new "hunter" battalions of 350 men, the observer said.

In a news conference, President Magana, who will be replaced in elections scheduled for this December, told reporters it was "very difficult to say how long it (U.S. aid) will be needed.'

"But I can say this. I am sure it is not going to be needed for another three years," Magana said, referring to U.S. economic and military aid over the past three years that has pumped about $1 billion into El Salvador.

In an earlier interview published in the San Salvador newspaper La Prensa Grafica, Salvadoran President Alvaro Magana said "with sufficient military aid, we would now be finished with this

Unsolved robberies frustrate city police

By Jeff Eichenbaum

Several cases remain unsolved from the rash of robberies that have plagued Iowa City in the last several months. according to the recently released police department monthly report for March.

Two of the seven robberies committed in February and March have been solved, police records state. And the police say they believe three of the robberies have been the efforts of the same individual.

Police Chief Harvey Miller said, 'The robberies don't appear to constitute a danger to the public," and there is "no real indication that the robbers would have used their

"I don't think there are marauders running around," Miller said.

In addition, he said, police report statistics that may indicate a substantial increase in the number of complaints in the "criminal categories," can't be taken at surface value.

HE SAID THIS is because the 'criminal category," which includes burglary, larceny, vandalism and robbery, does not show "the difference between what people call in (to request police or report incidents) and what really happens.'

In the "criminal categories," 37 cases of burglary were reported in March, seven cases more than in February. The number of reported larcenies jumped by 40 from 144 in February to 184 in March. Vandalism cases went up by 46 to 138 in March as compared with the 92 reported cases in

According to the monthly report, citizen-generated requests increased the total number of March complaints to 2,647 - 251 more than the 2,396 reported in February

Of the criminal categories increased, the one that is perhaps the most serious and frightening for individuals is armed robbery. In the armed robbery at a Paul Revere's Pizza, a 16-year-old male was apprehended, and at a 7-Eleven Food cording to Sgt. Craig E. Lihs of the Iowa City police.

AS TO THE young age of the armed robbers, Lihs said, "We (Iowans) may be hicks but we know about guns."

Iowa City detectives believe robberies at Baskin Robbins, Payless Shoes Source and the Stop Gap may be "perpetrated by the same person,"

"We keep thinking he's going to slip up but you never know in the detective bureau," he said."He (the robber) might anger somebody or boast about them (the robberies) and we'll hear about it."

Iowa City Detective William Kidwell said it is important for people with information of any kind about the robberies to contact police. "The person (committing the robberies) has a gun and somebody could get hurt." He added, "In four or five robberies, I can't believe there weren't more wit-

Detectives must withhold information about the crimes, according to the Kidwell. "If we would tell you that a store has $1,000 taken, they would be robbed once a week ... but none of the places have had a whole lot taken."

THE IOWA CITY robber may not fit the public stereotype of a criminal, Kidwell said. He described the typical Iowa City robber as "16 to 25 years old and robs a gas station for money to buy drugs, pay rent or buy groceries."

Although, Kidwell said, Iowa City

doesn't have many armed robberies, a case that occurred a few years ago is especially memorable to the police.

Kidwell and Lihs recalled the time when a suspect "wearing an orange wig and a green jumpsuit" held up the First National Bank. Lihs said the robber "got a small amount of money and then melted into the crowd. He was never caught." But there is no effective prevention for these crimes, Lihs said. "If somebody's going to do it, then they're going to do it."

According to the police sergeant, the best deterrents used by local stores are good alarm systems and keeping small amounts of cash on hand.

Students rally against role of UI in military research

By Robyn Griggs

A live band, students dressed in masks and military attire, and several hundred interested observers filled the Pentacrest Thursday, for a New Wave "die-in" to protest the UI's involvement in military research.

Several speakers from various UI organizations aired their views among cheers from the crowd, despite hecklers to the right of the stage.

Kit Bonson, a member of the Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament, said the rally, was necessary "because the administration claims no responsibility for what's going on here.'

A succession of speakers critical of Reagan, the UI administration, and the draft followed.

"There's something you need to know," John Wilder, a 20-year-veteran of the disarmament movement, told the crowd. "Nuclear war is closer to us today than it ever has been.

"THE ONLY WAY it can be stopped is through demonstrations like this. Do not underestimate your Clay Ordna, a member of Students for the Coalition Against Registration for the Draft, said: "We need to take care of all these problems right now. We are being robbed of education money, and where the money going? To defense.

The major issue of the New Wave demonstration is the UI's participation in military research.

"There's been a phenomenal rise in defense ' John Riley, New Wave member, said. "The University of Iowa is producing research for the Pentagon. We're proposing to stop doing this research. We want the University to be part of the solution, not the problem.'

Following his speech, Riley urged the crowd to participate in the "die-in" on one of three levels. Students could "die" outside Jessup Hall or on the first floor outside of the administrators' offices or 'just come over and show support' for the

About 100 to 120 students took part in the demonstration by dropping to the ground for five minutes, which John Stonebarger, New Wave member, said "is an indication that the student body and student population is willing to take a stand, and are informed enough to take a stand - something the faculty and administration should be aware of."

New Wave members met Thursday with D.C. Spriestersbach, vice president for educational development and research, Philip Hubbard, vice president for student services, and UI President James O. Freedman to express their concern over UI military research and present a list of demands.

COLFAX, Iowa (UPI) — Representatives from 30 religious and peace groups recently gathered in a former monastery to plot a strategy for using the Iowa caucuses to catapult nuclear disarmament to the top of the national agenda.

"If people see little old Iowa, which they may consider to be conservative, and they see (Iowans) are active in arms issues, they might think, 'Maybe I should get involved,' " said Jane Shey, a Catholic eader from Algona.

She attended a disarmament seminar at Colfax, a town of about 3,000 people, which was sponsored by the Stanley Foundation - a Muscatine-based, private group.

Leaders said the purpose of the conference was to seize the new momentum of peace activists which has been spurred by the nuclear freeze proposal. Leaders hope to channel that energy into emphasiz-ing nuclear disarmament in the 1984 Iowa presiden-

"The nuclear freeze movement has breathed new life into the peace movement," said Bill Basinger, vice president of Stop the Arms Race Political Action Committee. "It's attracting Middle America back into the peace movement."

LEADERS OF peace groups report that conversations over the potential of nuclear holocaust and solutions for limiting the arms race are surfacing more frequently at feed stores, church sewing circles and other community gatherings.

Representatives who attended the three-day seminar say the conference was a major step in coordinating a short-term, statewide strategy to promote disarmament.

'For some time now there have been encouraging signs that U.S. citizens are awakening to the threat of nuclear holocaust," said C. Maxwell Stanley, whose foundation sponsored the conference.

While many of the religious groups are restricted from political involvement due to their tax exempt status, the coalition hopes to make up for its lack of funds with a grassroots effort.

The coalition hopes to develop a questionnaire to be presented to all presidential candidates that will differentiate their positions on arms control and become a measure by which they can be "pinned down" throughout the campaign.

Block grant funds could be used to develop shelter for homeless

By Mark Leonard

An emergency shelter for the homeless may be developed in Iowa City with the help of a portion of the $295,000 in Community Development Block Grant funds that the city received earlier this month, according to Mayor Mary Neuhauser.

Neuhauser would like to develop the shelter, which she has been working on with Johnson County Supervisor Don Sehr and Ecumenical Council representatives, late this year, she said.

"It's something I've been interested in for a long time," Neuhauser said. "We really need a shelter for transients who cannot afford to stay in a hotel."

Neuhauser said the city would probably purchase a building near the downtown area for the shelter. Earlier this month, the city was informed it will receive an additional $295,000 in CDBG funds this year.

"It's in the planning stages right now, but we hope that the university and Veteran's Hospital will also play some kind of role in the shelter," Neuhauser said.

PAT GILROY, coordinator of emergency services and Crisis Center food bank program, said approximately 75 percent of transients seeking aid in Iowa City are visiting friends or relatives, or seeking treatment at the hospitals.

'Many of them come here and there's no place for them to sleep, they can't take a shower and they have nothing to eat," Gilroy said. "And we just can't take care of a whole lot of people."

One of the biggest problems the Crisis Center has come up against is handling the overflow from Veteran's Hospital. "A great number of people that go there

096 210 000 Mthds Res Nursing 1 3 9:00-12:00

Gilroy said. "I think a house like that would be good for Iowa City."

WHETHER IT IS an emergency shelter. or a Catholic Worker House, Gilroy said something is needed. "I'm open to any good plan. It would be terrific if we could get anything.'

She said transients are sent to hotels in the Iowa City area and the Crisis Center does not get a break on hotel rates, so an emergency shelter could be cost effective

Mary Ann Volm, director of United Way of Johnson County, said the lack of an emergency shelter "is a real problem identified at least a dozen years ago."

She said Iowa City "attracts a transient population," because of its location to Interstate 80, the UI and because of the state's high unemployment.

"I'M VERY OPTIMISTIC it will go through this time," Volm said. "It looks like we've got a lot of local support and there seems to be some money floating around out there.'

Iowa City Council approval will be needed before the shelter can receive CDBG funds. Many council members, including John Balmer, want to see part of the money go toward solving flooding problems in the Rundell Street area. Balmer said, however, there appears to be enough money to fund both projects if the council chooses to do so.

"It looks like we're going to have enough money to go around on this," he said.

A meeting is scheduled next Monday between city, county and church organizations to discuss plans for the shelter.

Chilling tails of dead pets

The freezer in Dot Stout's garage isn't filled with your average hamburger, steaks and produce. She has people's dead pets in it.

Stout and her husband Frank own and operate the Garden of Love Pet Memorial Park in Micanopy, Florida. Stout picks up customer's deceased pets and keeps them in the freezer until time for burial. Then she sprinkles embalming powder on them and the deceased can be viewed before the funeral.

Stout says she believes pet cemeteries like the Garden of Love exist because people love their pets so much. "They can do things for people that people can't do for people," she said.

A pet burial can cost from $15 to $450 at the Garden of Love. Stout offers a country burial for $15 to $35. Pets are buried behind the cemetery in unmarked plots and there are no visiting privileges. For $50 to $75 pets can be buried in a cardboard box or blanket in the Baron Memorial Gardens section of the Garden of Love. Graves in that section are unmarked, but the interred are remembered by bronze plaques attached to a nearby brick wall. A funeral in the formal gardens, complete with crepe-lined casket and marble marker, can cost up

Students party with storybook characters

More than 200 college students dressed as their favorite childhood storybook characters attended the Storie Booke Balle in Lincoln, Neb., last

The Balle is a biannual event sponsored by the Alpha Tau Omega fraternity at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln. The Balle is thrown every other year because of the time and expense necessary to prepare the event.

'The main thing to make it special is the length we go to for this. You're really back in a storybook land," according to one of the fraternity's social chairman, Kif Ward. He estimated that this year's Balle cost more than $3,000.

One of the unique traditions of the Balle is that ballgoers must descend a slide to enter the ballroom. "I remember one year we had an All-America football center dressed as Ghandi, and he brought a goat with him on a tether," recalled alumnus W. Joyce Ayres. "He slid down the slide and landed on the poor goat.

Human error ranks a 'B'

Imagine doing well in a zoology class all quarter, acing the final and then seeing a "B" appear on the final grade list.

Such a thing happened to students enrolled in a section of Zoology 335 during winter quarter at Ohio State University. When grades were posted, they were one-half to a full letter grade lower than they should have been.

Abbot S. Gaunt, an OSU zoology professor and the course instructor, said the error resulted from incorrectly recopying the grades. "We had the grades calculated right all along. It was a matter of typing in the wrong column into the computer," he should have checked it again. -From The Lantern.

Official says lowa will kick off race

DES MOINES (UPI) - The Democratic National Committee chair Thursday repeated assurances that Iowa will retain its first-in-the-nation precinct caucuses to kickoff the 1984 presidential races.

But Charles Manatt, a native of Audubon, was noncommital about whether the caucuses were popular only because they attract the attention of the national media. He also sidestepped questions about the party's chances for success if the economy improves shortly before the election.

"Iowa's long-term caucus system will be able to be the first system to pick the delegates in the process in 1984," Manatt said. "So long as I'm the national chairman, Iowa will be the first system within our process to pick delegates Iowa precinct caucuses have been set for Feb. 27, 1984, and officials have been vying to keep it ahead of other states who have early delegate selection processes. The National Committee granted New Hampshire permission to hold its event in early

Job hunting can be costly

By Dan Hauser

When it comes time to search for a full-time occupation not only must UI students face the mental anguish of searching, but also the financial hassles.

Of all the expenses associated with finding a job which can include resumes, copying, phone calls, a new suit and a new hair style - traveling usually adds up to the largest cost said Tom Bullington, manager of the Iowa City Job Service.

This high price of traveling to interviews could be deleted if the employer decides to pick up the tab for the cost of the trip to the prospective employee, Bullington said.

"Some types of jobs advance the airfare and hotel expense," Bullington said. Sometimes the job-seeker will be reimbursed upon his or her hiring and other times they will not, he said.

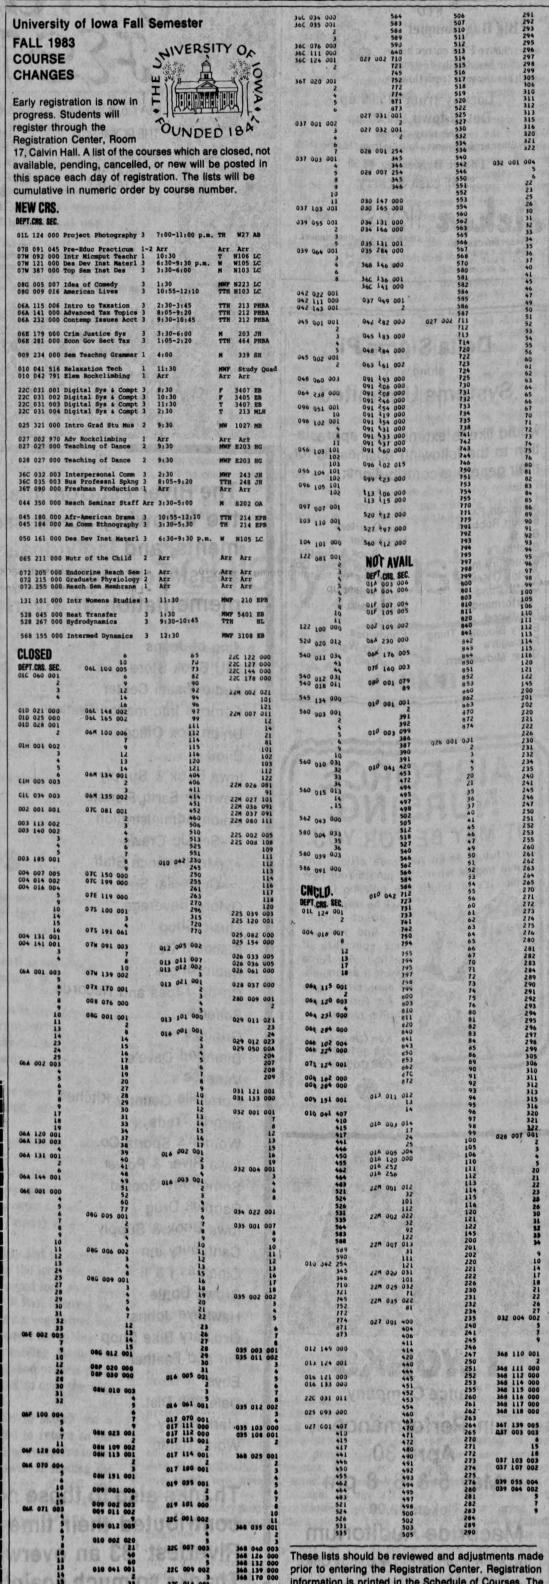

"If they are interested enough, they will pay for the trip," Bullington said. Some employers will be willing to pay if they find someone who has the type of degree they are looking for.

NO UNUSUAL INCREASE in students looking for full-time job has been recorded by the Iowa City Job Service over the past few years, Bullington said. Most searching is done by students looking for parttime summer jobs.

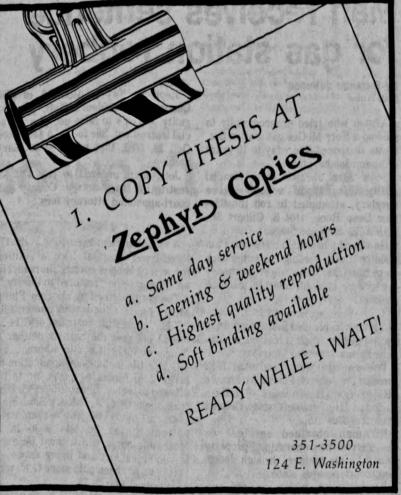

A number of students do their job-hunting by themselves, Bullington said. He advises students to use the full number of services available to them.

Bob Peterson, an employee of Technigraphics Inc., said over the years the typesetting buisness has picked up. An average one-page resume will run between $17 and $20 for typesetting depending on the complexity of the work.

Man receives sentence for gas station robbery

By Suzanne Johnson

A man who tried unsuccessfully to hold up a Kerr-McGee gas station Oct. 6 was sentenced Thursday to 10 years in prison for burglary.

Scott Alan Jackson, who pleaded guilty Jan. 27 to second-degree burglary, attempted to rob the Sav-Mor Deep Rock, 1104 S. Gilbert St., with a .22 caliber handgun.

He zipped gas station attendant Paul Swinton into a sleeping bag in the back store room, but failed to get any money because he couldn't operate the cash register.

A man who pleaded guilty April 26 to second-degree theft received a fiveyear prison sentence Thursday.
The charge was filed April 22

Kirkman obtained services or transferred the ownership of property owned by his mother, through deception, court records state.

His activities, which involved services or property valued from $500 to $5,000, occurred during the period of Feb. 16 through March 4.

Kirkman is ordered to pay $948 in restitution to his mother and $150 to Johnson County for court-appointed attorney fees.

A mental patient in custody at the UI Psychiatric Hospital filed a petition for writ of habeus corpus Thursday, in an attempt to be "restored to liberty."
The petition, filed by attorney Philip

Mears for his client using the initials "G.E.," states the restraint of G.E. is illegal because the man is neither a danger to himself nor to others.

G.E.'s file includes an application to proceed in forma pauperis, or to be allowed to waive filing fees, which Dis-trict Judge Paul J. Kilburg denied.

An affidavit by the psychiatric patient states he has $600 in a Muscatine bank, which must be used for child support and living expenses that have not been paid since G.E. was hospitalized March 28

A hearing, sought by G.E. to determine the legality of his restraint, has been ordered by Kilburg. The hearing's purpose is to determine whether G.E. would be released, Mears said.

"A hole in the Iowa Code" exists, Mears said, because although the code stipulates that court proceedings for the commitment of psychiatric patients are closed, there are no provisions to close hearings which involve challenges by writs of habeus corpus.

"THE CITY IS circumventing the union," he said. The labor contract that is negotiated through collective bargaining states there should be "no private agreements between officers and supervisors contrary to the terms in this agreement." The labor contract does not say an employee must "maintain physical fitness standards." City officials say they may establish hiring guidelines without the unions' intervention.

The union's public employment relations act determines which topics should be part of collective bargaining. Health, safety and evaluations of employees are discussed during negotiations, Goldberg said.

But City Attorney Robert Jansen said the city does not believe that agreement is applicable in this case. "It is not an issue for bargaining."

Iowa City Human Relations Director Anne Carroll said the bargaining issue may not be clear-cut in the legal system. "There is little Iowa recedence.

If employees do not meet the 'physical fitness standards," they may be removed, demoted or suspended arbitrarily, according to the contract language. Under a civil service clause in the Iowa Code, employees can only be removed, demoted or suspended "for neglect of duty, disobedience, misconduct or failure to properly perform his

ACCORDING TO Carroll, "a number of these would be applicable" if an employee did not "maintain physical fitness standards" or was caught smoking.

City Manager Neal Berlin said, "Our goal is the same: to maintain good physical condition. I don't think anything can be accomplished by debating this in the newspapers."

Berlin said he received legal advice before instituting the clause.

"Don't they have better things to do with their time and resources than to worry about this?" Goldberg asked.

"Our senior citizens are in their 40s," he said. Seven of the 38 police union members are under 40, and the oldest is 47. "We don't have anybody

CONNOLLY SAID he is in favor of the tax relief that the bill would provide for property taxpayers, but he is against taxing beer and liquor sales as a means of allowing that relief. Bar owners and beer distributors in Dubuque "and all along the river" have told Connolly and other state representatives that any additional tax on the price of beer would hurt their Beacause it is in a borderline county, Dubuque already loses business to East Dubuque, Ill., because the nickelper-can deposit on all beverages in Iowa is not assessed in Illinois, Connolly said. "We have a lot of people going to Illinois to buy their liquor, beer and cigarettes. Our state liquor stores are losing revenue," Connolly said. He said, however, that he voted for the 5cent deposit. But according to Myers, the bill is being delayed because Connolly is putting the needs of the bar owners and beer distributors before the needs of individuals who need the changes and the property tax relief the bill would provide.

Under the current law, state mental health facilities "can keep county resilong as they want to and then charge the county willy-nilly," Myers said. When they are "dried out," he said, they are released without having received counseling for their

"THE WORST PART about it is not the costs," Myers said, "but that it's not doing the individual any good." The Substance Abuse Funding Bill would target more money for local programs, reducing the demand for state institutional programs. According to the County Auditors Office, $92,400 is being spent in this fiscal year for substance abuse programs administered by the Mid-east Council on Chemical Abuse. The county also paid $7,890 for county residents who spent time in state mental health insitutions.

Connolly said Thursday afternoon that a compromise on the bill had been reached that would take $5 million from the military credit fund. That fund is using only $3 million of the $8 million budgeted as tax credits for Iowa's veterans. Under the new amendment, the bill implies that substance abuse programs at the local level should be funded by the state.

One of the problems with the bill was that Gov. Terry Branstad is opposed to dents (being treated for alcoholism) as laws that earmark money in any

For example, he said, although computer classes are not required, City High School has had to more than double the computer class sections offered to keep up with increasing student de-

YET, THE ATTACK on the mass of schools will affect the school system 'psychologically," according to Lynne Cannon, president of the school board. She said the national study may encourage teachers to be more rigorous with classroom studies.

'For example, if we don't need to add more language arts, maybe we'll need to make our language arts courses more in-depth and more challenging," she said.

It is the students on the lower end of the academic spectrum that will be most affected by the thrust of the education commission's report, according to Thompson.

This is because college-bound students, about 65 percent of the senior class according to a 1982 report, often exceed the requirements in an effort to prepare for higher education, he said.

And it is the least academically-oriented students that may be harmed by the commission's call for tougher standards, said Bill Lyons, language arts curriculum coordinator.

"I WORRY SOME that schools will begin switching back to what is a more college preparation and not offering courses for students who are not going to college," Lyons said.

"I think there's value in keeping all students in school even though the courses they are taking are not as rigorous as the commission would like," he said.

Thompson said he hopes the commission's attack against a "cafeteria-style curriculum" will not deter the Iowa City school system's effort to incorporate the needs of a wider spectrum of students.

He said, "The criticism is that you lay out the smorgasbord and sometimes people choose unwisely. But certainly a part of an education is helping people choose wisely."

What do they fear?

Sunday, May 1,1983 Iowa City,14,

A report has come in to this newspaper, via the letters section, that a few Iowa City men and women have, in past weeks, engaged in some distressingly loathsome behavior: frequenting a bar popular with homosexuals to verbally harass and ogle its patrons.

You would expect, in an academic community, there would be enough respect for common tolerance that a minority could live without fear of public abuse. Apparently not, if our letter writer's assessment of the situation is a correct one. Well, immature conduct usually fades at the onset of logical thinking, so it is with logic we will proceed with these folks.

Argument: The victims of your jeering behave differently than you and we will assume that is the basis for your taunts. For human beings, sexual behavior is a major determinant of lifestyle. The teachings of Sigmund Freud aside, other human characteristics are just as important in determining the way we act: choice of employment, housing, recreation, and so on. If you must believe homosexuality is a sickness, that there is Something Wrong With Them, your feelings probably won't be changed by an editorial in The Daily Iowan - but would you hurl insults at a plumber because you believe in carpentry? Would you ostracize a coin collector because you collect stamps? If you applied the same principle you use to justify baiting homosexuals to all aspects of your life, if you acted consistently, you would end up ridiculing everyone. End of argument.

This approach assumes the troublemakers have proceeded with a small fault of logic, a fault easily corrected with a few minutes of counseling. There is a more depressing scenario. These people could be taking out their self-image problems on a minority. If that's the case, the gay community can only hope one of the aggressors goes too far, is apprehended by proper authorities, and protection is provided.

The rest of us, as heterosexuals, can only hope that justifiablyangered gays do not begin harassing us at our own drinking establishments.

Can Project Green return life to defoliated roadsides?

Life in the ditches

Roadside weed control is not generally the sort of issue that makes or breaks county political careers, or that captures and enlivens the public imagination. But the way in which counties handle their state-mandated responsibility to control weeds affects a great many people and reflects, as well as anything can, the level of ecological enlightenment prevailing in a county's governing structure.

The Johnson County Board of Supervisors is in the process of overhauling its roadside weed control program, having decided two weeks ago not to renew the contract of the company that for the past few years has sprayed the county's ditches with herbicide. The board decided in principle several weeks ago to develop a program that would deemphasize the use of herbicide, possibly by incorporating mowing and burning into the weed crew's repertoire of control methods.

But now a Cornell College biology professor and a representative of Project Green, a private group that concerns itself with civic beautification, have proposed that the county look into seeding roadside ditches with prairie grass. Though Supervisor Dennis Langenberg and board Chairman Donald Sehr expressed reservations about the idea at Tuesday's informal board meeting, further study is warranted.

The immediate advantages of seeding as opposed to spraying are primarily aesthetic and ecological, but in the long run may also be economic. Ditches that have been sprayed look as if the vegetation in them had been poisoned, which it has. Seeding the ditches would not only fill them with green, living vegetation, but eliminate the need for herbicides and provide cover for wildlife as well. And although the start-up cost of seeding would be significantly higher than spraying, well established prairie grass would develop its own resistance to weeds, and so over the long term reduce the cost of weed control. The supervisors have asked Project Green to sketch out a specific program for county weed control and to return to the board with a proposal. We hope the board will be receptive to the idea, and willing to try at least a pilot program. If seeding the county's ditches can reduce chemical pollution of soil and groundwater while providing a habitat for small animals and birds, it should be done. If it can also save money in the long run, so much the better.

I can understand it I suppose - why, after all, clutter up the edit page with the opinions of strange fellows in oddly padded clothing when one could address airport bonding and zoning ordinances, topics that are on everybody's lips. Well. I don't read lips (and anyone who tries to read mine is in for trouble), so I'm going to press on and mirthfully muse about this John Elway character.

That island of sanctuary for the hypertrophic, the National Football League, recently made young master Elway their first draft pick through the auspices of their franchise ("franchise" is the term used when a team is too awful to be called a "team") in Baltimore. Le jeune Elway had previously informed the Colts of Baltimore that he wanted nothing to do with them, with Baltimore, or with the East Coast as a whole. The Colts, being loathe to take no for a no, drafted him anyway. "Avaunt, rogues!" spake the talented child, "The New York Yankees would have me else, and have me they shall. Maybe." Ah, to be young, gifted and jock, and have such opportunities before you!

NOW, LET'S EXAMINE Elway's pique in a bit more detail. First, he said he wouldn't play on the East Coast. So where do the New York Yankees play, Utah? Of course, he wouldn't start in the big leagues right away, but rather at a farm team, such as Columbus, Oh. Now, I've been in both Baltimore and Columbus, and in my opinion there's not much to choose between them. Baltimore is grimier and they eat more crustaceans there than in Columbus, but beyond that the distinctions blur. Maybe the grime caused that. It could be Elway simply doesn't want to hobnob with people who not only eat crustaceans, but look forward to it. Who could blame him for that?

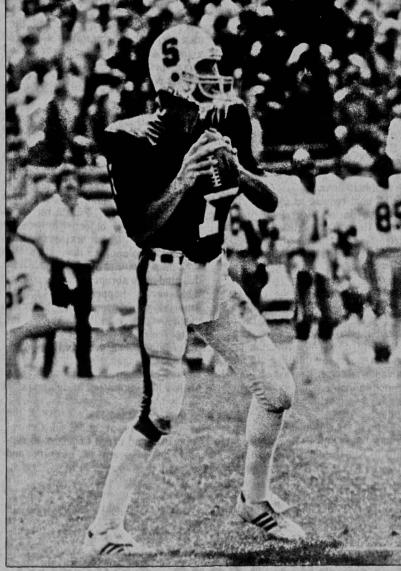

Perhaps another factor in the Boy Wonder's reluctance is that New York would pay him about as much to play in Michael Humes the minor leagues as Baltimore would pay him to play in Baltimore. No one really knows how much the Yankees are offering Elway, but it is rumored to be in the hundreds of thousands of dollars. I used to watch minor league baseball in Burlington, Iowa, and I don't think the whole stadium there was worth in the hundreds of thousands of dollars. Maybe Elway thinks it better to reign in Columbus than rule in ANOTHER ISSUE could be the reputation of the Baltimore coach, Frank Kush. Kush is currently being sued by a former player at his last stop while college coaching, Arizona State, for punching him. You can't blame someone for not wanting to play for a coach who thinks the best way to teach you a particular play is to engrave it on your nose with his knuckles. Perhaps Elway should pause and reflect on who he'd be playing for at New York -Billy "Iron Fist" Martin, who hasn't knocked out one of his own players since he managed the Twins years ago, being too busy practicing on other people. But the way the Yankees are playing this year, who knows what Billy might do, the scamp.

Or it might just boil down to something as simple as not wanting to be a "Colt." While some people think horses are pretty — like some people think tattoos of snakes are attractive - colts are not pretty; rather, they are clumsy, ugly and fall down a lot. That pretty much describes the Baltimore team, and Elway is justified in wanting

Schlafly's just a diverting actress

By Dan Campion

HANGING, Dr. Johnson said, wonderfully concentrates the mind. So does Macbeth. And so, apparently, to move from the shocking and sublime to the merely ridiculous, does a lecture by Phyllis Schlafly.

I wanted to ask Schlafly the right question during the inquisition that followed her lecture, but it didn't occur to me at the time. Maybe my mind was too concentrated. But seeing some acting during the Shakespeare festival stimulated the proper, although belated, question: Does Schlafly belong to Actor's Equity?

One-half of her professional life she spends as a professional patriot, whipping up and sustaining a brand of xenophobic and woman-scorning zealotry that deserves to have passed away with our more Falstaffian presidents. The other half she spends as a professional pariah, performing to college audiences that anyone knows beforehand will be hostile.

In the former capacity Schlafly functions as a theatrical revivalist, awakening adulatory audiences to the good old days in the manner of Elvis or forrison impersonators (she impersonates a fancifully-remembered "Good Woman"). The only differences are that Schlafly's friendly audiences consist of people who enjoy thinking of themselves as an "Eagle Forum," and her act is taken seriously. Eagles, by the way, never hold "forums." Sparrows do, and vultures.

IN THE LATTER capacity, Schlafly has an infallible, almost uncanny, facility for extracting a frenzied, hysterical and rude response from her college audiences.

Much has been made of her "disgraceful" reception by rowdy vulgarians here, but it seems to me that those indefatigable letter-writers who deplore the hecklers, and the hecklers themselves, both miss the essence of Schlafly's performance. Her career is based on the simple premise that life's a stage, and any publicity is good publicity. It worked for Joan of Arc, for P.T. Barnum. It works for Reagan and it even worked — up to a point - for Mark Twain's Duke and King. So why not for Phyllis?

The truly striking thing about the tistic maneuver, and it plays upon the was that she had almost nothing to say about the announced subject of her lecture. She spoke for only 35 minutes, slim pickings on "The Role of Woman in the Eighties," and she mostly rambled pompously, the way some actresses will do, on her background, previous credits, children, and other self-aggrandizing but non-germane tidbits. It was weird, like hearing Shelly Winters lecture on "Nabokov and Sociobiology."

POLITENESS HAS LIMITS, as Schlafly is well aware. And it was evident from the moment she entered the hall that she conceived her role as that of deliberately lowering the threshold of impatience in her audience. She feigned surprise at the inevitable demonstrations, sighed and condescended, grinned and blinked; in short, "worked the crowd" with a vaudevillian repertoire of baiting tactics. In olden times, audiences would have responded to such transparency with "Get the hook!" Schlafly relies on the pandemonium her histrionics are designed to elicit. She would have been stumped to fill out an honest hour without intensive audience participation. Inviting outrage is the oldest attention-getting ar- Comedy."

weekday matinee Schlafly starred in ancient need for a scapegoat, which Schlafly willingly becomes, in a ritual reenacted on campus after campus.

Traditionally, after the scapegoat is driven away, with much rejoicing, everyone has to feel guilty about it for a while, however vapid and vicious the entertaining old goat has been. The chorus of expiatory letters to the DI fulfills this part of the ritual.

IT IS A PHASE I wish we could have avoided. Because, like Twain's King and Duke, Schlafly is, of course, not a real actor. Since neither her ideas nor her dramaturgy are any better than the Duke of Bilgewater's, my reckoning is that she deserves a roughly equivalent fate. Sad to say, in this degenerate age we do not tar and feather our impostors and humbugs, we elect and pay them.

So I hope, after all, Schlafly is a member of the actor's union, or will consider joining. Perhaps if she came out of the closet as an Equity actress we could say "Finis" to the whole preposterous controversy that results from mistaking her diverting act for solemn sincerity.

'Obnoxious' reporters

To the editor:

The visit March 31 by Equal Rights Amendment opponent and conservative leader Phyllis Schlafly was marked by some of the most obnoxious and inexcusable behavior I have seen since the 1960s.

During her lecture I expected Nazi salutes, hissing, disrupting remarks, and so forth. But during the press conference, which was supposed to be restricted to professional media people, I expected professional

I attended the press conference as a professional free-lance writer and representative of a small press organization. I expected tight security but did not have to present my press card as identification at the door. A man simply took down my name and organization and let me through. I wonder how many people were allowed into the press conference without prior

Less than half of the "reporters" at the conference were from the professional press. I don't mind nonprofessional and/or para-professional people attending the press conference as long as they conduct themselves in a professional manner. Instead many of them argued with Schlafly, jeered, hissed, belched, and generally made it difficult for the professional press to ask questions. I find no excuse for such behavior by people who call themselves journalists.

I am personally opposed to Schafly's views. I am active in the support for the ERA, nuclear disarmament, and anti-Reagan campaigns. But when I am in the role of a journalist my job is not to express and argue my point-ofview. My job is to get the story by asking questions and probing for the truth behind the answers.

Schafly's irritation at the unprofessional manner of some of the 'reporters' was only noticeable a couple of times. Unfortunately she did not handle the answering of the questions with the same shrewd candor. Although Schafly avoided answering some questions adequately she still has a right to expect profesionalism among the "press."

I am ashamed of all those so-called "reporters" who lack the maturity to conduct themselves professionally. Maybe they are just too scared to listen to opposing viewpoints? John Wilder

Doors (Arts and Entertainment, April) would seem to vindicate James Watt's theory of rock and roll were one able to take the article tongue-incheek. I don't question Johnson's taste (I myself am not a fan of rock music) but I do question his sensibility. Violence as advocated by Johnson is not an appropriate response to music of any kind, however disagreeble that music might be. To suggest hurling grenades into the crowd and then to descirbe with relish the imagined consequences - all because one is displeased with a performance, or in Johnson's case, with the idea of a performance — strikes me as frightening and sad.

You, the editors, do your colleague a disservice in that you are condoning his twisted fantasies by printing them, and by ignoring what his writing reveals so clearly: he needs help. If I am mistaken and Johnson is sound of mind and is attempting a witty response to Watt, then you still are doing your reporter a disservice. He should be taken aside and told kindly, gently and very firmly that his writing is not at all amusing.

Wrong to break law

To the editor:

After reading Sandi Wisenberg's column (DI, April 6), I could not make heads or tails out of it. Someone who illegally enters a closed military base is breaking the law and should be punished. Someone who destroys government property is breaking the law and should be punished. It was very ignorant of her to condone these illegal activities.

If Frank and Bill and John are prepared to break the law, they should be prepared to face the consequences. If you don't punish people when they break the law, no one will obey it and everyone will lose repect for it. If Bill really thought that "none of them really belonged there" maybe he should think back to when they defaced government property and ask himself why they broke the law in the first

'My own judgment is that there were sufficient votes on our side to pass the bill out," Chairman Edward the committee debated a final draft of the bill in a closed meeting.

Boland said the vote was delayed until next week, however, at the request of Republican members. Once the bill is approved, he said, the full House will hold a closed session to consider its recommendations.

"It would require us to desist from operations inside Nicaragua within 45 days," House Democratic leader Jim Wright of Texas said following committee debate on a final draft of the

BUT BOLAND said the bill would provide $30 million in aid to nations in the region to help them block the flow of arms to insurgents.

The bill does not affect the president's request for military aid for El Salvador. Reagan has asked for $110 million in addition to the $26.5 million already approved for this year and $86 million in 1984.

A House subcommittee Tuesday cut in half the $60 million Reagan sought to shift to El Salvador from military aid already approved for other countries, and the House Foreign Affairs Committee voted April 19 to deny Reagan the other $50 million he sought in new appropriations.

> "I WOULD EXPECT there would be a long and lengthy and very profitable secret session for the members of the House. The members are entitled to know why we proceeded in this direction and we will try to give the answers in the secret session," he said.

Rep. Bill Young, R-Fla., a member of the committee, objected to the bill but indicated he expects the Democrats to approve it.

"I think it's a mistake to rush into this kind of an abrupt change of policy. Whatever is happening in Central America is happening with pretty much knowledge on the part of the intelligence committee," he said.

Young and Wright both said they do not think Reagan's speech to a joint session of Congress Wednesday night caused the committee to delay action on the bill.

Reagan warned the security of the hemisphere is at stake in Central American and urged Congress to support his program of military and economic aid to nations in the region.

Wright said the bill would require the administration "to cease providing the financial support for any military or paramilitary operation in one-fourth of all children in the United States now live in near-poverty households, many of them with divorced or single parents, Congressional Budget Office Director Alice Rivlin said Thursday.

Expert: More children are living in poverty

Assistant Athletic Director Larry Bruner said proceeds from the 1981 spring game netted $10,000-$11,000 for the women's athletic department.

Bruner said Iowa Coach Hayden Fry decided not to charge at the gate this year. "I think it was mainly because of the number of injured players," he said. "I think that because they may not play a full game, Hayden didn't feel it would be right to charge the fans an admission fee."

THAT DECISION is labeled "fair" by Grant. "I believe that if he feels it is unwise from a safety standpoint to have a full game," she said, "then I feel it is just.'

On the field, the Hawkeyes will give fans their first peek at what has been going on behind Fry's closed practice gate this spring and there will be a few new faces on the Kinnick Stadium turf when kickoff rolls around at 1 p.m.

That is largely due to a rash of injuries, according to Fry, that has sidelined 24 gridders for all or part of the month-long spring practice ses-

Olson steals the show at cage dinner

By Melissa Isaacson sistant Sports Editor

If there was any question about whether Iowa fans harbored any negative feelings about former Hawkeye coach Lute Olson, it was answered by one segment of those fans at the team banquet Thursday night at the Highlander.

In somewhat of a surprise move, Olson and his wife Bobbi flew in from Tuscon, Ariz., Thursday to attend the banquet.

There was some speculation about what kind of reception Olson would receive after abruptly quitting as Iowa coach on March 28 to become the head basketball coach at Arizona.

BUT NO SOONER had Iowa Athletic Director Bump Elliott stepped to the podium and uttered Olson's name did the approximately 700 Iowa fans brake into a standing ovation, some even chanting, 'Lute, Lute, Lute.' Not to be accused of favoritism. however, the crowd erupted into an even louder ovation when new Iowa Coach George Raveling's name was mentioned. But curiously, the rest of the evening was on the anticlimactic side. Neither Olson or Raveling was willing to take center stage. Even Raveling, known for his flamboyant speaking style limited his comments to a few formal statements. 'I'm extremely honored to sit at the head table next to Lute Olson and his staff," Raveling said. "I want to thank you for leaving the cupboard's filled, and I'd just like to say to Coach Olson and his players and staff at Arizona that our prayers and best wishes go

"I'VE ALWAYS SAT in envy of him in a corner of the Northwest wondering how he could accomplish as much as he could," he said. "Filling his shoes will be a difficult task but I look forward to it very much.'

Olson's actions were limited to a few brief comments and the presentation of a portion of the player awards. "It's been a great experience for us these last nine years," Olson said.

"Bump did a great job in terms of the people he brought in here and allowing us the opportunity to do our job."

Wildcats stay alive in Big Ten with 'critical' sweep over lowa

By Jill Hokinson Staff Writer

It was a due or die situation for Northwestern Thursday when it entertained the Iowa softball team in Evanston, Ill. The Wildcats, currently in third place in the Big Ten, needed the wins to stay in the running for first place with Indiana and Michigan State.

"These were critical games for us if we want to stay in the Big Ten race," said Northwestern Coach Sharon Drysdale. "We couldn't afford to lose

After a shakey start by pitcher Ellen O'Keefe, the Wildcats battled back in the fifth inning with strong pitching by relief pitcher Andrea Amborski to win the first game, 7-3 and then took the second game, 3-0.

O'Keefe, usually a relief pitcher, started the first game for Northwestern.

"O'KEEFE IS a different kind of pitcher from our other pitchers and we wanted to give her some work."

The Hawkeyes got their first run in the first inning when Chris Tomek singled and was sacrificed to second by Diane Jircitano. Linda Barnes doubled, scoring Tomek.

According to Drysdale, Iowa errors helped keep Northwestern in the first game. "Iowa had some fielding and throwing errors that left the door open for us to get back in the game," she said. "Then we got the hitting going late in the first game and it carried over into the second game.'

Time running out for golfers

By Thomas W. Jargo Staff Writer

As far as Diane Thomason, the Iowa women's golf coach, is concerned, the season is ending too soon.

The youthful Hawkeyes close out an inconsistent spring season this weekend when they travel to Champaign, Ill., for the Big Ten golf championships, and it has come at the wrong time for Thomason.

"I really wish we had more tournaments," Thomason said. "I think we're on the incline up. I think we're sort of peaking and finally getting things together. I've accomplished a lot this week working with the kids, and I wish we had more time to play.'

Michigan State returns to defend its title, but Ohio State is the team to beat in the 54-hole tournament, Thomason said.

THE BUCKEYES, led by last year's conference champ Cathy Kratzert, have won four-straight team titles this season, including the Iowa Invitational last weekend on Finkbine Golf Course

Iowa's Cookie Rosine had a good tournament last weekend, carding three-consecutive rounds under 80. She has started to put her game together, according to Thomason. "If things go right for Cookie, she could challenge for the title," Thomason said. "But she has to play her season's best.'

Joining Rosine on the trip to Champaign will be sophomores Amy Bubon and Mary Kramer. Senior Therese Ehrhart rounds out the squad.

"I FEEL PRETTY GOOD about this team," Thomason said. "We don't have quite the experience, but I think they'll do well. Cookie is hyped up after a good finish last week. Amy is determined to play better. She was upset with her 89 (last weekend). And to be honest, I think Lynn was looking ahead."

But Thomason is also being realistic about the meet, taking a "who can we beat" approach. "I like to think we can beat Purdue and Illinois," she said. "Illinois will be tough though. I think the course will be an equalizing factor. I'm sure Ohio State and Michigan State will play it well, but the rest of us are even. We'd like to finish on a positive note."

Men's squad tries to tame rugged Wolves

By Mike Condon

Iowa men's tennis Coach Steve Houghton finds his team in a familiar heavy underdog role when it hosts defending Big Ten champion Michigan today at 2:30 p.m. on the Kinnick Stadium Courts.

In fact, the Wolverines have won the last 15 conference titles dating back to 1967 when Michigan State won the crown. The Spartans will be Iowa's foe on Saturday at 1:30 p.m. in the final match of the regular season.

Michigan Coach Brian Eisner's squad is once again favored to capture the Big Ten title next weekend at Madison, Wis. The Wolverines lost 1982 singles champion Michael Leach to graduation but the rest of the squad is in tact. Senior Mark Mees will be at No. 1 for Healthy Hawks

INDIANA UPSET the Wolverines last weekend and Houghton believes this may be the year Michigan drops from the top spot. "I don't think they are as strong as they have been in the past," he said. "There have been other years when coaches thought they had what it took to beat them but they always found a way to win. If Minnesota can get all their players healthy for the Big Ten meet, I think they have enough to take Michigan."

The Michigan State meet might be the only conference dual Iowa goes in as a heavy favorite. Coach Stan Drobac's squad has yet to win a Big Ten meet this season but says the real season is completed in three days.

"The whole season is that Big Ten meet," Drobac said. "Even though our guys haven't been winning, they've made me proud by the way they have continued to work. They haven't quit all year and I hope it will pay off at the conference meet.'

Sophomore Joe O'Brien is Michigan State's top player followed by 1982 all-Big Ten selection Steve Yourimoto.

face Michigan, Michigan State

By Mike Condon

Iowa's tennis Coach Cathy Ballard will be glad to find out that her squad is not the only Big Ten team encountering injury problems this season.

Michigan State has had four different players miss matches so far this spring. But both Ballard and Spartan Coach Earl Rutz bring healthy squads to Sunday's dual meet scheduled for 9 a.m. on the Kinnick Stadium Courts.

The Hawkeyes host Michigan on Saturday at 9 a.m., and although the matches this weekend will be Iowa's first outside of the Recreation Building, it marks the final regular season competition for the Hawks. The Big Ten meet will be held next weekend in Chicago.

"Our kids our excited about getting to play outside," Ballard said. "We've spent a lot of time in the Rec Building so it will be nice to get out and play in a different environment."

RUTZ IS ALSO looking forward to the match but for different reasons. "We're finally beginning to look healthy," he said. "We've had so many different players miss matches that it has been hard to stay consistent."

The Spartans are led by senior Monte Geddes. She has played most of the season at No. 1 but Rutz said he wasn't sure who his top player would be for the match with the Hawkeyes. Michigan State first plays at Northwestern on Saturday and Rutz will base his Sunday line-up on his teams' performance in Chicago.

Michigan is coming off a 6-3 win over Ohio State last weekend. Iowa lost a close 5-4 decision to the Buckeyes earlier in the season. The Wolverines will be without No. 1 player Mary Ann Kremer who is out with a leg injury.

(Michigan) will still be tough without Kremer in the line-up,' Ballard said. "They play very consistently up and down their line-up and we'll have to play very well to keep up with them.

Hawkeyes scattered among 'name brand' Drake field

By Steve Riley

Now that Chris Davenport has matched Iowa's best place ever in the Drake Relays, finishing third in the heptathlon, it is up to the Hawkeyes' other 11 entrants to follow her lead.

Davenport finished behind Jill Lancaster and Renee Nickles, both of the Team Kangaroos track club, with her 5,300-point total. She had competed in the seven-event competition only once before tallying 5,157 points.

The 12 total competitors is Iowa's most ever. Leading the contingent are two flyers - Elaine Jones and Vivien McKenzie - in the 100-meter dash. Iowa Coach Jerry Hassard said he feels "very fortunate" to have two of the eight runners in the fast

The Hawkeyes also have two, Nan Doak and Jenny Spangler, in a "name brand" 5,000-meter group. Heading that field is the second-ranked 5,000 runner in the nation (behind Mary Decker Tabb), Maggie

"IT'S PROBABLY one of the best groups they've ever assembled for the 5,000," Hassard said. "I'm hoping for this kind of field to bring down the times of our two runners.'

A possible underdog in the sprint medley relay (100, 100, 200, 400) is the Hawkeye quartet. Natalie Spinks to Mary Knoblauch to Vivien McKenzie to Elaine Jones should be competitive, but will have to start fast to beat Nebraska's foursome, anchored by Merlene Ottey.

Iowa will also be represented at Drake by Mary Mol in the high jump, who Hassard says will "have her work cut out for her" to reach the heights of NCAA indoor champ Disa Gisladottir of Alabama. Mol was runner-up at the national indoor meet at 6feet, but Gisladottir has soared 6-3.

Additionally, the Hawks will run a 4 x 100-meter relay and Davenport in the 400 hurdles. Hawkeyes in throwing events will be: Terri Soldan in the javelin and discus, Kathy Gillespie in the javelin and Gail Smith in the discus and shot put.

Performance shows quartet has potential

By John Voland

EDNESDAY EVENING'S recital by England's Endellion Quartet illustrated very well the strengths and weaknesses of the new crop of chamber ensembles I have heard here and elsewhere: technical mastery, practically spotless ensemble, polished if not beautiful tone, very serious (read: unsmiling) commitment and almost slavish devotion to the printed note.

Mozart's G major quartet (K. 387) benefited the most (or, rather, was hurt the least) from this treatment. The opening Allegro was polished and elegant, rather like Dresden china; though the sforzandi were overplayed, the movement was clean and linear.

The Menuetto that followed was also very neatly done — a trifle lacking in playfulness, perhaps, but then they emphasized the chromaticism — as was the Andante, which featured a nicely played first solo that resembled a tune from the composer's Fifth Violin Concerto. The fugal finale featured some passionate scraping at the expense of the integrity of the movements form (exciting listening,

THAT MYSTERIOUS microtonalist. Anton Webern, was represented on the Endellions' program by his epochal Five Pieces for String Quartet (Op. 5, 1909), in which his implosion of melody and pointillistic construction first came before the public. This is frankly difficult music - extremely condensed and almost grotesquely expressive but Webern's importance to contemporary composers as a model for making such utterances carry real emotional and communicative impact cannot be underestimated.

Grotesqueries and all were rendered by the Endellions with utter faithfulness, but by dwelling on each phrase as if they were anthropologists poring over the Dead Sea Scrolls they only exaggerated the fragmentary nature of the pieces and dampened their cumulative impact.

bearably sad, still utterances, but the Endellions streched them into melodramas. The motion they imparted to the faster sections helped considerably, but again the line (I use the term advisedly) almost always threatened to disintegrate.

AFTER INTERMISSION things improved, with the precision and excellent cooperation of the Endellions coming to the forefront in the mammoth Op. 131 quartet of Beethoven, but again the too-loving detail and momentary absorptions dragged out the seven sections to what seemed like undue lengths, and it threatened to dissect wholly Beethoven's carefully constructed constrasts between Olympian wit and very human sorrow.

The playing was quite good throughout, however, and many nuances quite naturally emerged from the microscopic attention being given to them. The quicksilver Presto section emerged especially well-crafted, with the interplay between cellist David Waterman and first violinist Andrew Watkinson very fine. The three slowish sections (two Adagios and an Andante ma non troppo) were ruminative to a fault but featured lovely work by violist Garfield Jackson.

And so it went - admittedly superb musicianship wedded to a pedantic structural outlook that made the former seem almost useless. It may have something to do with the decidedly scholastic circumstances many young players find themselves in - there being little alternative for newly-formed chamber groups save attachment to a scholastic institution - and the sometimes dusty performance practice that results therefrom. The exceptions to this are notable — I remember well the West Coast debut of the Tokyo Quartet, as fresh and exciting as could be - but unfortunately the Endellions, superb players though they are, are merely the epitome of the conservatorial mindset

TV experts ask FCC to expand kids' shows

WASHINGTON (UPI) - A broad lineup ranging from "Captain Kangaroo" to the producer of "Romper Room" Thursday urged the Federal Communications specifically asked to establish an advisory board that could make sweeping recommendations, such as creating tax incentives for improvements The National Education Association and a former FCC of-

Bob Keeshan, who for 28 years has helped raise America's young as TV's "Captain Kangaroo," represents, in part, the changing times. His once daily show was moved to weekends last year to make way for expanded news programs.

"Broadcasters can still seize the initiative and dedicate at least part of their broadcast day ... to panel, which was first suggested excellence in children programming. I sincerely hope they will do so with your encouragement." Keeshan said.

Writer sentenced in drug case

PORTLAND, Maine (UPI) - U.S. District Judge Edward T. Gignoux Thursday sentenced writer Richard L. Stratton to a maximum 15 years in prison for conspiring to smuggle drugs into Maine and Canada.

Gignoux, in imposing sentence, said Stratton was a "major actor" in a large international drug ring and he hoped the sentence would deter others who would import illegal drugs.

Contrasting styles mark 'Blue Thunder' co-stars

By Roxanne T. Mueller Special to The Daily Iowan

LOS ANGELES — It would be difficult to unearth two more dissimilar actors than Roy Scheider and Malcolm McDowell. Calm, staid, compact and careful, Scheider is still Chief Brody of Jaws — hanging back just a little to see what everybody else is doing but giving the impression he'd be perfectly willing to dirty his hands if something needed to Get Done.

McDowell, on the other hand, is sassy, brassy and loud, his facial con-

tours falling into impish crevices and that large, flat nose of his not quite, but almost drawing attention away from those devil-cast blue eyes. His aggressiveness and irreverence are softened only by a steady stream of self-deprecations and wicked oneliners

White and black, good and evil — if not in real life, at least in a movie called Blue Thunder, which has its sneak preview tonight at the Englert. Power-hungry McDowell taunts world-saver Scheider in Columbia's potential blockbuster, a $20 million picture that features a big, black helicopter that acts as voyeur, resident Nazi and gunrunner for anyone who sits at its computer-driven controls.

PART COMIC STRIP and part fable that preaches against the dangers of Big Brotherism (what, again?), Blue Thunder ultimately drops message for muscle: explosions and firepower take precedence over morality lesson 1,983.

McDowell, stuffing grapes into his mouth and chomping heartily, revels in the fact that audiences will hate him from the moment he appears on

"That's mah job," he bellowed. "I didn't have much screen time to create this nahsty fellow," he added, drawing out the "a" in nasty with relish, "so when audiences boo, it feels wonderful."

Scheider, meanwhile, takes turns defending and denigrating his Blue Thunder role as a Vietnam veteran who now works as a helicopter pilot for the Los Angeles Police Department.

"It is a cliche," he said lighting up a Winston he bummed from a reporter, "but like many cliches, it's true. There are a lot of walking wounded in this country, a lot of bitter, unhappy, hostile guys who participated in a war they came home to find out no one cared about, and I think Murphy (his character) is one of these guys. The story allows him to cleanse himself of a lot of that. He takes the copter up (and proceeds to wreak havoc on most of L.A.) to show people how dangerous and lethal it is.

"He realizes that this is the sort of crap that went on in Vietnam, and it doesn't sit well with him.

"IT'S BASICALLY a hardware picture," Scheider continued. "Blue Thunder will do for helicopters what Jaws did for sharks. The reception for this is going to be very big, but yeah, I would prefer doing the kind, of part I did in All That Jazz — but those kinds of roles don't come along all the time."

In contrast, McDowell offers no apologies for any of his roles, including the deprayed title role in Caligula. "I never regret anything I do," he said, popping the last grape into his mouth, "although Caligula was rather distasteful, wasn't it?"

Best known for punkish, angryyoung-man roles in films like If..., A Clockwork Orange and O Lucky Man!, McDowell figures his reputation is secure.

"I've been very lucky in that those early pictures hold up and play all the time. I think the same thing will happen with Britannia Hospital (the latest of the McDowell-Lindsay Anderson collaborations). Nobody will see it now, but in 10 years' time, boy, they'll be going to see it every Saturday night."

While both actors are conscious of their cinematic images, Scheider lacks the hell-with-it attitude of McDowell and even admits to reading what critics have to say. He was disappointed that his last film, Still of the Night, was panned.

"IT HAS A European feel to it, like a Chabrol film, so I play a man who is essentially a decent type trying to do his job. It was kind of fun for me to play a guy who was not a man of action, a man who perhaps overthinks everything. In a way, he's kind of a dull

"Given that, it burns my ass for the critics to say, 'Oh, Scheider was so dull in this movie.' That's my character! It shakes all my faith in their ability to look at the film and realize what is written and directed and what the character is in the movie. I mean, the guy's practically a mama's boy!"

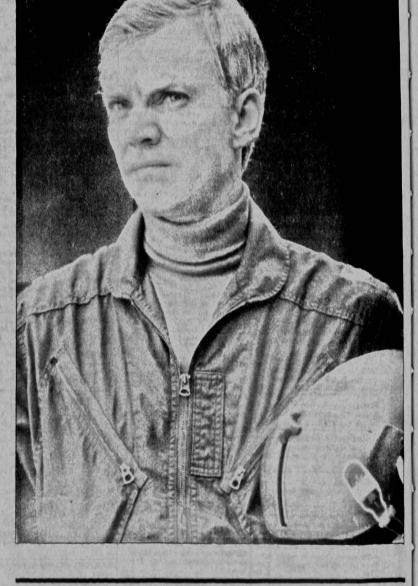

To a degree, Scheider is suffering the pangs of an ironclad image. He'd love to do the romantic comedy roles he used to do. "Comedy is the hardest thing in the world to bring off. It's easy to just stand and look heroic and give off these laconic one-liners, but to really participate in an all-out comedy, you sweat, you really sweat."

If Scheider takes extraordinary pains to get his characters just so, McDowell sometimes plunges headlong into projects he barely comprehends. He recently finished a movie tentatively called Get Crazy which casts him as a rock star.

"I DIDN'T REALLY understand the script when I read it," he said, "and to be perfectly honest, I still don't know what it's about. It's a nice character — I'm great — don't you think I'm sexy? Originally I was offered the part but they wouldn't meet my fee so I said 'sorry darling' and they started shooting with somebody else. I remember throwing the script away and lying on the beach and they called one Saturday morning and said, 'We've made a mistake.' They'd spent $500,000 for one week of something they can't use."

The mercurial McDowell detested America, especially Los Angeles, when he first arrived here for the premiere of A Clockwork Orange. Since then, he's grown to like the country and is now rather critical of his native Britain, especially the British film industry people like Richard Attenborough are touting.

"There IS no British film industry."

"Listen darling, you have to put the money up — you've got to actually take a risk," Malcom McDowell explains, "If you want to get the rewards of this business, but you haven't got the guts, forget it."

he blasted. "It's as simple as that. There are some small-budget, ethnic films that are good — the kind of thing in England what Diner was here — inherently American.

"GANDHI IS NOT an ethnic picture. It's very nice for Gandhi, but the British do not put their money where their mouths are, and then they say, yeah, well, look, we made this and that, but listen darling, you have to put the money up — you've got to actually take a risk If you want to get the rewards of this business, but you haven't got the guts, forget it."

The vehemence with which he's delivered this diatribe slowly ebbs from his face. The glare settles back into a more familiar sneer. He's asked if he would ever work with A Clockwork Orange director Stanley Kubrick again. The sneer is replaced by a snivelly grin.

"On the right part, the right project, if he pays the money," he says. "I'll work for anybody, I'm such a whore."

"The reception for this (new movie) is going to be very big," says Roy Scheider, "but yeah, I would prefer doing the kind of part I did in All

That Jazz - but those kinds of roles don't come along all the time.'

Riders will be kept busy with other races this weekend, too

By Robert Ryser Staff Writer

Although the competition will still be strong for this year's Old Capitol Criterium, the field of riders will not be as competitive as past years. At least that is the opinion of biker Jeff Boyle, who says quality bikers will be spread out at a number of other races around the Midwest this weekend.

"(The Criterium) is always tough," Boyle said. "In the past it has included some of the best riders in the Midwest which sometimes means the best riders in the country.

'But the field might not be as tough (this year). There is a big Pan-Am race in Missouri that will take some good riders away, there is one in Madison that will take some of the Wisconsin riders, and there is one in Cincinnati that will take some Chicago

BOYLE IS KNOWN around bicycle circles as a gutsy and smart rider. "He (Boyle) will finish in the money," said Dan Deprenger, who will race in the veterans division (35 and up) Sunday.

Deprenger explained that a smart rider knows when to exert his energy and when to conserve it by "reading the pack.'

"If a rider see four or five riders break away from the pack, he knows he has to keep up with them," he said. Deprenger said that if the riders who break away have teammates, they and slow down the pace, allowing their teammates to go faster.

"All you can do when they slow down is slow down too," Deprenger said.
Deprenger, who is the Scenery
Superviser for the Iowa Center for the Arts, is also "slowing down." He will not race in the Senior I and II division as he has done in the past, due to an upcoming play he is putting on.

"I've been putting in 15 hours a day for the past two weeks, so I decided not to race Senior I and II. In the vets race, I feel more comfortable."

COMFORTABLE IS AN understatement for Deprenger who won the vets race last year.

"I guess I am the favorite," he said. "It's never easy to win, the top three places are always competitive, but in Seniors I and II, all the money places are tough, and it is tremendously com-

Deprenger said that if Steve Tilford, the 1982 Senior I and II winner from Kansas competes, he will probably win again. Tilford was a member of the national team and was the Kansas State Road Champion in 1981 and 1982.

lowa City race is highly acclaimed

Bicycle racing will once again return to Iowa City this weekend when the sixth annual Old Capitol Criterium is held Sunday.

The Criterium is one of the largest and considered one of the most prestigous races in the Midwest, although it has gone through some changes and improvements since it was first originated by the Sicyclists of Iowa City in October 1976.

The first race was held in downtown Iowa City during the fall of 1977, but the following year it was moved to the Hancher Auditorium parking lot due to street construction that was going on in the

IN 1980 THE RACE was moved back downtown and switched to the spring, giving the organizers more time to publicize the event. The Criterium has been in that format since then.

As many as 250 bicyclists have competed in the race in each of the past few years and over 5,000 spectators were on hand for last year's ex-

This year's field of competitors could be the largest ever. Carol Casey, a member of BIC and chief promoter of the race, said that she sent out 885 brochures to "riders and clubs throughout the Midwest." Last year there were no brochures sent

Casey added that since the race is held in the early part of the year, it gives the Midwest racers "a chance to test their legs, their heart and their bikes." They will also get a chance to test the stiff competition of the racers from the Southern states (mainly from Texas) who may be participating.

Bruce Reynolds, president of the BIC and a racer himself for 12 years, says the race has "built quite a name for itself." Reynolds feels the major attrac-tions of the race are "the prize list, the good crowd and the challenging course.'

THE UNITED STATES Cycling Federation (USCF) sanctions most of the events and provides the $2,000 cash prize list. Awards for the novice winners will be trophies, medals and ribbons.

The course for the Criterium is well suited for both the racers and the crowd. Most of the races will start at the corner of Clinton and Washington Streets. They then circle the Pentacrest, take a left on to Iowa Avenue, a right on to Dubuque Street and then turn back on to Washington Street. Length of the races will vary from two to 30 laps.

There isn't a bad place to watch the race, but most of the action will probably occur at the Washington Street hill, The Jefferson Street hill and the back of

A few new additions have been added for this year's event. The Criterium is now part of a series of races that will be held from April through June. Other races will be held in Dubuque, Burlington, Muscatine, Moline, Ill., and Galesburg, Ill. According to Casey, individuals who participate in each race in the series will have a chance to win money, shirts and a bike frame.

Radio Station KFMH-FM 99, in Muscatine, will be covering the Criterium for the first time. They will provide live updates on the race every 15 minutes and will give complete coverage of the senior men's division I and II races. Reynolds will provide color
