Ul athletics become big business

Investigation reveals Olson trust fund, business deals

Student Publications Inc.

R. Luther Olson, former head coach of the UI men's basketball program, may have traded in his black and gold for blue and red, but he apparently took a great deal of Iowa green with him to the Arizona sun.

Olson's pocket carried green garnered not only from his basketball triumphs, but from his private enterprises, which also proved lucrative.

See editorial. ... Page 7A.

The "business" of college athletics is a complicated web of financial support. And while the UI establishes networks to solicit private funds for its athletic programs, sometimes those networks offer an open invitation to UI coaches to enhance their personal Numerous business deals and private contributions to Olson were found as a result of a four-week investigation by The Daily Iowan.

Olson provides one example of college coaches' ability to tap tremendous amounts of private resources. Media contracts, private "gifts" and investment opportunities are a few of the financial rewards for a successful

IN THE NINE YEARS Olson served as the UI's head basketball coach, he amassed a small empire including a luxurious house on Lake Macbride; a highly profitable basketball camp; an interest in a condominium project; and an interest in the land and building housing The Time Out Restaurant/Coaches Corner Lounge, which is less than one-fourth mile from the new Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

Efforts to reach Olson by the DI proved unsuccessful as of press time. Olson had not returned any phone calls. One of Olson's monetary resources was a private trust fund known as the "Lute Olson Children's Education Trust Fund." The fund was created for Olson shortly after he was offered the head coaching position at the University of Southern California in 1979, according to interviews with fund contributors

The fund was established by

Hawkeye fans to help offset the cost of costs," said Bud Callahan, head of the educating his five children because one of the perks out there (USC) was that his children would not have to pay tuition," a local contributor said. Contributors to the fund pledged $100 per year for six years, and those who did not get in on the ground floor paid $120 for five years. In other words, each contributor to the fund pledged a total of $600.

IN 1979, FANS and supporters "were very interested in seeing that he stay here. They put together a fund to defray their (Olsons') educational However, Dr. Fred E. and Dorothy Carpenter Jr., long-time Hawk buffs and personal friends of the Olsons, said the plan to set up the fund was made after Olson decided to remain as the UI basketball coach.

"He had already made that decision to not go and it was the feeling of these people that since he had given up all those things that this was the least they could do for them," Dorothy Carpenter said during an interview at her New-See Funds, page 6

Olson still may profit from local ventures

Investing in real estate and business opportunities has become more commonplace for UI athletic department personnel, who tap a statewide network of boosters for help in shrewd money-making business investments.

One of the most visible, and perhaps shrewdest, of these is Robert Luther Olson, former Iowa basketball coach, who still figures to profit from several lucrative business investments in the Iowa City area from his Arizona

Attempts by phone or through friends to reach Olson for comment have failed. He did not return any messages left for him.

In Olson's case, by using a job offer from Southern California in 1979 as a springboard for personal gain, he jumped at several opportunities to supplement his income from the UI, which stood at $58,500 when he left on March

Olson and his wife, Roberta, visited the Southern California campus on Feb. 19, 1979. On Feb. 27, the UI Board in Control of Athletics passed a resolution saying, "The director of athletics ... will recommend to the board an extension of his (Olson's) contract with mutually acceptable salary and other benefits and conditions.'

ON MARCH 2, Olson announced, citing personal and family reasons, that he would stay at Iowa.

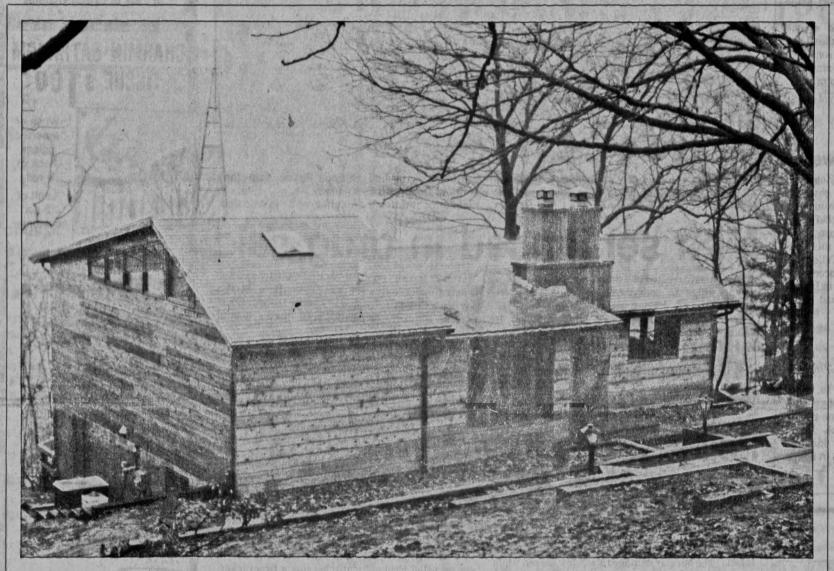

From that point on, Olson's investments and business ventures mushroomed, including:

• The property and building of the Time Out Resturant/Coaches Corner Lounge, located about a quarter mile from the Carver-Hawkeye Arena. Olson is a part-owner.

• The highly-profitable Lute Olson Hawkeye Basketball Camp Inc., which attracted more than 1,300 participants for a four-week period last year. Based on UI Business Office records, the camp turned a profit of about $71,000 in

• Former ownership of land in Manville Heights on which a condominium

Lute Olson's house (top photo) is nestled near the shore of Lake Macbride in the private cottage area. Iowa City realtor Steve Richardson says he's preparing to put the house on the market. Olson has a part interest in the Time Out Restaurant/Coaches Corner Lounge (bottom photo), along with the UI team physician, a UI trainer and Illowa Associates, the real estate firm of Sharm Scheuerman and Richardson.

Hawk fan 'network' floods UI with funds

They are the prince consorts within academic empires. Surrounded by klieg lights and adoring fans, today's athletic coaches provide the grist and the bait, in the marketplace of highstakes college athletics and the funding of those ventures. Winning on the basketball court or gridiron often increases a university's stock in that marketplace of private

With all its winning teams, the UI is by no means unique in this respect. The introduction of successful athletic programs has meant a boom in contributions to the fund-raising arm of the university. In its 27-year history, the UI Foundation has gone from a small-time operation to more than a $22 million annual business - that business is finding Hawkeye fans and making them monetary Hawkeye supporters.

FOR CONTRIBUTORS, hefty donations to the Athletic Department can mean more than the tax write-offs that automatically result with charitable contributions.

"Look, the only reason you give money to the (UI) Foundation is to get tickets and seating for football and basketball. It's a charitable contribution. It's a tax write-off and a lot of those people are in the 50 percent tax bracket," one local banker said.

The network includes about 52 Iowa car dealers who contribute cars to the UI Athletic Department for a year and later sell the cars as demonstration models. Nearly every employee of the Athletic Department staff is provided with one of these cars.

The network also includes the "I-Clubs," comprised of supporters who donate $25 or more to Hawkeye athletics. More than 9,000 Hawkeye fans were members of the I-Club in 1981 and the program has grown each

Also in 1981 there were 427 "Golden Hawks" - people who contribute $1,000 or more annually - by 1983 there are more than 500 "Golden Hawks.

In addition, in 1981, the I-Club had See Athletics, page 6

Poland's police, protestors clash Inside during May Day demonstrations

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) - Riot clashes between police and police firing tear gas, water cannons and brandishing clubs broke up antiovernment protests Sunday by some 100,000 Solidarity supporters in several cities across Poland

"This must be the first time a socialist police force broke up a workers' demonstration on May Day," said one young Solidarity supporter

Police fired at least one stream of ue-dyed water through the front doors of Warsaw's St. John's Cathedral, where mass was going on at the time, and in Gdansk, they fired tear gas at more than 40,000 Solidarity apporters shouting: "We want a free

Polish television showed pictures of demonstrators in Warsaw, Wroclaw, Szczecin and Nowa Huta, and reported there were disruptions in 20 cities or towns nationwide.

It estimated the total number of antigovernment demonstrators was only 40,000, however, compared to the 61/2 million it claimed participated in government rallies and parades.

Cardinal Jozef Glemp, Poland's higest ranking clergyman, delivered one of his strongest statements in support of Solidarity at a mass in the church of St. Joseph the Worker in the Polish suburb of Ursus.

"THE IDEALS WHICH are contained in the great outburst of August 1980 (when Solidarity was established) cannot perish," Glemp told an enthusiastic congregation of union sup-

In Warsaw, helmeted police charged crowds waving Solidarity banners just a few blocks from the government's official May Day parade, where Communist Party leader Wojciech Jaruzelski declared Poland was "on the path toward normalization."

The 59-year-old general offered "the real possibility ... if the calm consolidates," of lifting the remainder of martial law measures he imposed December 1981.

Police boomed through their loudspeakers: "Disperse or we'll start shooting (tear gas). You are in danger if you don't disperse.

'No-smoking' rule is suspended by city

By Mark Leonard

Under pressure from city employees and labor unions, City Manager Neal Berlin Friday suspended a city hiring clause that required police and fire employees to agree not to smoke on and off the job "The real point is how we deal with the health issue rather than just the smoking problem," Berlin said Sunday. "I think we'll be able to come to an agreement."

Berlin said the "wellness" program is necessary to protect the city from a section in the Iowa Code that states all city employees' heart and lung-related diseases are presumed to be caused by their employment with the city.

City officials hope these new "wellness" measures will lower pensions the city pays out. "We're trying to save the taxpayer some money,' Iowa City Human Relations Director Anne Carroll said last week.

She added that studies indicate that smoking does contribute to heart and lung problems.

Berlin said he will be trying to schedule a meeting with fire and police representatives within the next week so the city "might attempt to satisfactorily resolve their concerns."

WHEN ASKED if all the controversy around the program surprised him, he replied, "Sometimes that happens." Nathan Hopkins, president of the See Smoking, page 6

Briefly

Italian leader resigns

ROME - Prime Minister Amintore Fanfani Friday submitted his resignation to President Sandro Pertini, signalling the collapse of Italy's 43rd government since World War II. Fanfani, 75, went to Pertini's Quirinale Palace residence to submit his resignation after an emergency Cabinet meeting.

Fanfani's government was forced to resign after the Socialist party led by Bettino Craxi withdrew its support from the four-party coalition. Other members of the coalition were Fanfani's Christian Democrats, the Social Democratic and Liberal parties.

Rebel ambush kills 13

MANAGUA, Nicaragua - A band of rightist rebels ambushed and killed 13 civilians, including a West German doctor and three Nicaraguan nurses, the Foreign Ministry said

A government communique broadcast on the national Brotherhood of the Workers Network said the rebel attack took place at dawn Saturday in Zompopera, about 10 miles southwest of Wiwili, in Jinotega province.

Crash victims' bodies found

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. - Navy divers crawling through silt as thick as pudding recovered eight more bodies Sunday from the St. Johns River where 14 people died in the fiery crash of a Navy C-131 transport plane Saturday.

Divers, hampered by mud and strong currents, have now recovered 12 bodies from the worst military disaster in Jacksonville's history. The search for the remaining two victims was called off just before 2 p.m. Iowa time when the currents in the chilly river became too strong

Adviser's holdings reviewed

WASHINGTON - The White House is reviewing financial holdings that physicist Edward Teller, an unofficial presidential science adviser, has in a small firm that could benefit from President Reagan's proposal for a space-age defense against nuclear missiles.

At issue are 40,000 shares of stock Teller was given in 1980 when he agreed to become a director of Helionetics, a firm based in Irvine, Calif., that specializes in lasers and other advanced technology.

A UI student reported to UI Campus Security Sunday his men's gold Seiko quartz watch, valued at $250, was stolen.

The student put the watch around his wallet and left both items in the grass while he was playing frisbee at UI Lot 8, southwest of Daum Residence Hall. The wallet, which contained $40, was not taken.

Richard E. Cristante, 0140 Slater Residence Hall, was arrested Friday for discharging a firecracker, according to campus security.

Cristante reportedly threw a firecracker out of his room in front of a maid. A campus security officer said there has been a problem with people lighting fireworks — treated as a serious misdemeanor and setting off smoke detectors.

Next fall will mark the first year United Students of Iowa, an organization binding the three state un-iversities, will have both a Legislative Assembly and a Board of Directors meeting regularly.

Applications for positions on the Legislative Assembly were due last Friday, but Ann Richards, USI board member, said students can ask for late applications from the UI Student Associations office.

"We are getting response," she said, but added there are 12 positions to fill and the group does not want to discourage interested students.

The objectives of USI are to educate students in the political and governmental processes, to increase awareness and interest in the governmental decision-making process and to guarantee equal access to higher education "regardless of age, sex, race, socioeconomic status, national origin or RICHARDS SAID the group wants to "organize students to communicate with one another better from university to university, ourselves and the administration, and ourselves and the legislature.

'Next year we will be working with things like voter registration and 'get out the vote' campaigns. The idea is to get students active, whether in student, federal, or state government.

"A lot of times people feel the campus is for professors or the administration," Richards said. 'It's not. We want students to be part of the decision-making process on campus. We want to give some contribution and tell how we feel.'

The number of USI board members from each institution is directly proportional to the number of undergraduate students enrolled there, with one seat for every 1,000 students. The UI will have 15 seats.

Gusting winds and thundershowers drove many lowa City residents to pursue indoor recreation Sunday, and Des Moines weather officials called it "a aste of what's to come.'

With low temperatures of about 47 degrees and winds of up to 40 mph, one of the day's biggest victims was the sixth annual Old Capitol Criterium bike

"Citizens are a little more shy about coming out in his weather, and I don't blame them," Carol Casey, Criterium promoter, said.

Besides a decrease in the number of spectators, everal riders traveled to Iowa City but didn't paricipate in the race, including Minnesota's Flanders others, winners from previous years. Cold temperatures had a lot to do with this, but the blasts of wind coming up the Jefferson Street hill and more than one accident on slippery pavement were probably the most discouraging factors.

SOME IOWA CITY movie theaters benefited from the gloom, however, reporting more patrons than usual. Bill Smith, assistant manager of Campus Theaters, said this isn't unusual on "days like this" when the weather gets so bad that people don't even know if they want to go outside their houses."

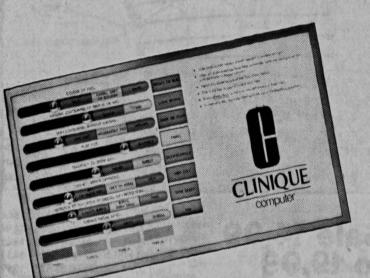

Gary Schmale, meteorologist at the Des Moines Weather Center, said the midwest can expect more of the same because this is typically the thundershower season. A more positive note was that May is a transitional month. "It'll be getting more

New funding rule is tested as senate allocates fees

By Kristine Stemper

UI student organizations and commissions had their last chance to plead for money last Thursday as the UI Student Senate tried out its new budgeting process, allocating $162,627.61 in mandatory student

Most people representing the groups were pleased with the amount the senate's Budgeting and Auditing Committee recommended for them; only a few of the groups asked for more - and only a few of the groups were held in question by senators.

Right to Life, which has been denied funds from the senate twice in the past, was given $1,097.14 after a motion was made to zero-fund the group.

Sen. Bruce Hagemann made the motion saying Right to Life's programs do not fit with the UI's educational objectives, something the senate's budgeting act requires.

But Sen. Bob Rafferty said one of the stipulations in the act is that the senate cannot judge a group's programs by its ideology.

ALL PROGRAMS for which groups request funding are designated as either "expression" or "service," and funded according to what the budget act allows. Because all of Right to Life's programs were deemed "expression" by the senate, its ideology could not be considered.

Students for Traditional American Freedoms, whose members filed a complaint against the senate last semester for funding discrimination, received

The funding for the Student Coalition Against Registration and the Draft was increased by $790.18, SCARD's orientation program was changed from "expression" to "service," and then increased, because senators felt the program was used to educate students of draft age about their options in this area. The group's counseling program, recommended for zero-funding by the budget committee, was given $565.18.

Beastiality at College and Muscular Dystrophy were the only organizations the senate voted not to

Scott Kirkpatrick, BAC president, said, "I've come here on behalf of the BAC to claim victory.' He added that the way his group was treated should be applied "to every group and not just a select KIRKPATRICK WENT on to scold senators for the way the funding procedure was handled, but his speech was ruled "not germane" by senate President Tom Drew.

The MD organization was not funded because several senators felt it would be similar to making a contribution to a charity. Others said the group did not need funds because it could get seed money for their programs from the national MD association. It was moved by Rafferty that the El Salvador

Solidarity Committee not be given any of the recommended $1.828.58. "Indirectly, it is a donation," he said, adding that the senate had just set a precedent with MD in this area for not funding charities. But Sen. Mike Price said, "The El Salvador committee does not have a national organization to fund it (as MD does). The U.S. isn't responsible for MD, but it is responsible for the murder of young children in El Salvador." The Black Student Union was given $1,423.80 more than it was originally recommended to receive because the senate decided one of its programs, a survival conference, was a "service" rather than 'expression" program. This gave senators the option of funding it at a higher level.

Sen. Dana Anderson said, "I think we have to look at what we did do. We gutted the Budget Protocol Act. We're just going to throw it away when it doesn't fit what we need.'

But Sen. Jeff Winick disagreed: "I don't think we've gutted this thing. I think we did a fine job."

Shultz unfazed after rocket attack hits neighborhood where he slept

Secretary of State George Shultz escaped injury Sunday when two rockets hit the grounds of the U.S. ambassador's home outside Beirut, one exploding just 100 yards from where Shultz was sleeping.

U.S. officials downplayed suggestions Shultz had been the target of an assassination attempt and local newspapers reported fighting between rival Lebanese militias in the area at the time the rockets slammed into the grounds of the residence in suburban Yarze.

No group claimed responsibility for the incident, which came 13 days after the U.S. Embassy in Beirut was blown up by un-

Burghardt said the rockets "flew over the top of the residence," making a noise that sounded "like a freight train." He said one of the rockets exploded about 100 yards from the embassy residence. It carved a crater in the ground but caused no other damage, he said.

THE SECOND ROCKET failed to explode but skipped over the ground and caused minor damage to a neighboring house, but no injuries were reported.

Shultz said he was awakened when the 6foot Chinese-made Katyusha rockets landed on the grounds of Ambassador Robert Dillon's residence at 1:30 a.m., but fell

Shultz, appearing totally unfazed by the incident, said he didn't know "if somebody was intending to send a message."

Burghardt said the rockets could have caused considerable damage and injuries had they crashed into the building.

Maj. Fred Lash, the Marine spokesman in Beirut, said there was no evidence that the residence was a target.

"WHERE IT CAME from, we are not sure," Lash said. "Why it landed nearby we are not sure. But we know that rounds are fired every night in the hills surrounding the area (by private militias). There is nothing strange about that."

Of the 10 people interviewed by The Daily Iowan who expressed knowledge of the trust fund, no one could provide information on the fund's actual number of contributors or whether any money remains in the fund for educating Olson's children.

JIM GORDON, OF the Hills Bank & Trust Co., oversees the fund. He could not confirm the amount of money in the fund, the amount of money that has passed through the fund since its inception, or what will happen to the trust now that Olson has left town.

'That's a very confidential matter. It's a private trust," Gordon said. "It would be violating the confidentiality of the trust.

"One reason that people establish a trust is so that things can be kept secret," he said.

John Hughes, president of Hills Bank and brother of Johnson County Sheriff and Johnson County I-Club President Gary Hughes, said the fund has been administered by his bank since it was established. John Hughes said he could not confirm the size of the trust, or what will happen to the fund since Olson took the head coaching position at the University of Arizona.

Bump Elliott, UI athletic director, said he was aware of the fund when it was first established, but that he currently knows little about the fund. "I don't even know much about that, other than I know that it was done legally."

ELLIOTT SAID HE checked with the NCAA at the fund's inception to make sure it would not be in violation of NCAA regulations, but since that time he has not dealt with the fund.

"I don't know how much money was spent," he said. "No money went to anything other than the education of Lute's children."

The Carpenters contributed to the fund, but said they were not sure how it will be handled, or if any money remains.

"If their kids weren't in college anymore it would go back to the program or a scholarship fund or something," Dorothy Carpenter said. "I'm sure that these things are worked out when they are begun. It's pretty spelled out.

"I'm sure that there was some kind of legal arrangement that provided that it would go back to the basketball program or something," she said. "It wasn't Lute and Bobbi's, in other words.

Anthony Helling, manager of the Newton Inn and a fund contributor, said, "I don't know if the funds are still going to their education or not."

John Koza, vice President of Iowa State Bank & Trust Co., said he does not really care what happens to the money he donated to the fund. "I was happy to assist while Lute was here because I thought he was a good coach, but I have no desire to have anything to do with it now."

SINCE HE LEFT the UI, Olson would not benefit from the fund, Elliott said. "Any money that was not spent on education would in turn be given, if there was any remaining money, would go to the foundation - the University (UI) Foundation and not to any participants to the fund. I was aware of that because of NCAA involvement."

But Darrell Wyrick, director of the UI Foundation, said he heard of the fund when it was initially set up but he doesn't know anyone involved in it, how many people were involved or what will happen to the fund now.

"I can remember some people who might have been involved, but I'm sure they wouldn't appreciate me giving you their names as being involved in this," Wyrick said.

If the trust is to be turned over to the foundation, Wyrick has not been told about it. "I don't know if there is any money left in the fund and I don't know anything about where the money goes

"It has not come here. There was probably a designation of what would happen to the fund if Lute left, but I don't know what that instrument said. I don't know if there is anything left," Wyrick said.

There is probably very little money, if any, left in the fund, according to Fred Carpenter. "The fund was always in the red. I would say there probably isn't any fund left."

Funds from the trust were directed by Olson after a local businessman who was responsible for setting up the fund relenquished the task, Fred Carpenter said. "I think Lute took over.

"Wasn't it Lute who actually directed the fund after that?" Carpenter asked his wife during the DI interview. 'Well, he was in charge' of the banking transactions with the fund, he said.

WYRICK SAID THE money in the Lute Olson Children's Education Trust Fund can not go through the foundation because it is a gift to an individual rather than a donation to a charitable organization.

Because contributing to the the trust fund would be classified as a gift to an individual, the donation would not be tax-deductable. But according to several local contributors, a contribution to the Lute Olson Children's Education Trust Fund was not money

One local contributor said supporters of the fund got nothing, except increased priority for athletic tickets and seating for their donations.

"It is not being run right through the foundation, but it was credited to their priority (for athletic seating). It was unofficially credited as a contribution to the university," he said.

The contributor said, "I'm sure" the foundation knew about the fund and increased the donor's seating priority for the new arena, as well as other athletic programs.

WYRICK AND UI officials deny the UI Foundation had anything to do with the fund, or used the contributions as a basis for ticket allocations.

"In fact, when the allocation of seats in the arena was made, it was made strictly on a formula set forth in the campaign documents. And I know that to be a fact," said Casey Mahon, UI associate vice president for finance.

When asked whether contributors to the Lute Olson Children's Education Trust Fund were mistaken in their belief they would receive a higher priority for their contributions, Mahon said: "They must be. Do you think otherwise? Have Darrell (Wyrick) or Bump (Elliott) indicated that the case is other than what I'm saying?"

The formula for ticket allocations in the new arena takes into consideration the length of time a person has been a season ticket holder, the amount of money donated to the Hawkeye Arena/Recreation Campaign and the annual contribution to the UI Foundation for athletics.

"I KNOW THAT THE formulas were applied because we had to handle the complaints about the tickets," Mahon

"And to the extent that someone complained, because they had given money and they had not received either the tickets they wanted or the seats they wanted, in each case, Darrell and Bump offered to have their entire donation refunded, because we did not want anyone to feel that they had been misled in giving to this pro-

Wyrick said: "Nobody who was involved in the seating of the new Arena knew about the fund (the Lute Olson thing is that the people who are supporting that fund were probably the largest foundation supporters.

'So in effect these people probably got very good seats, but they got it on the same criteria used for everybody

Randall Bezanson, UI vice president for finance and professor of law, said he was unaware of the fund's existence, but he is not surprised by it.

"I'M NOT FAMILIAR with that arrangement. To the extent there are extra-institutional arrangements that have been made I think you have to look at that on two different levels."

First, it must be determined whether the fund conforms with NCAA rules and second, it must be determined that the UI still controls the athletic program and the coach.

"The institution has to look at informal extra-institutional arrangements and the effects on the institution that's not to say the rules aren't important, but the institution has to be concerned about control of the program and whether the outside arrangements affect that control," Bezanson said.

Outside funding available to coaches is not a problem at the UI, Bezanson said, because the UI is open with the contracts and salaries of the coaches.

"ALL THE DETAILS that relate to coaches contracts are all open — they always have been and always will be. We are not about to engage in something that we are going to be embarrassed about and the greatest assurance of that is to have the arrangements tested by the light of Observed Mahon: "You know, we know how much he makes, we pay his salary, we have the summer camps, but that's all open and handled in a normal accounting fashion.

"Beyond that, the university has no involvement and we've announced the existence of those camps - Lute's

UI men's Athletic Director Bump Elliott said he was unaware Olson had invested in the Time Out Restaurant/Coaches Corner Lounge.

The basketball camp

Olson's rights to the highlysuccessful summer basketball sports camp first surfaced when he, along with wife Roberta, incorporated the enterprise on April 21, 1980, according to Johnson County courthouse records. R. Luther Olson is listed as president, Roberta Olson as secretary.

'We felt if Olson would go there (Southern California), he would have that opportunity (to make money off the camp)," Elliott said. "We explored the sports camp possibility as one way of keeping him.

The profit of $71,000 is developed from a summary of expenses provided by the UI business office. There were 1.366 participants in last year's camp, and all but 36 were classified as residents, who stayed in UI housing. Residents paid $175 per week, commuters $145.

The money from the camp went to the UI Foundation, which was billed by the UI Business Office for expenses.

"Now, the basketball camp - the foundation is an agent of that camp," Elliott said. "Agent meaning the money comes in and goes out of there.

According to Johnson County Courthouse records, Lute Olson Enterprises Corp. purchased land in Manville Heights on Sept. 15, 1981, for $92,500. Mahon also said she knew nothing of the fund, but the fact that it exists does not present a serious concern about the basketball program's integrity.

connection to the university. "Such funds, as I understand, and I

while coaching at the UI — "through his own making," Elliott said. "From the material point of view I think he was certainly comfortable here. "The thing that is important to remember is that those things, he worked hard through his career to build, whatever they are, because they are all his own making.'

Trans National Inc., according to President and Chief Operating Officer John Benn, offers "off-season opportunities to coaches to join our nationwide insurance operation."

In a Super Shoot-Out II program, dated April 6, 1983, a Trans-National advertisment billed its services as providing help in: "Insurance and Annuities, Individual Retirment Accounts, Keogh Plans, Business Insurance, Pensions, Estate Planning, and Disability Income." Also listed were services to establish a "Free Enterprise Trust."

In the same ad, Sharm Scheuerman is listed as a "consulant."

According to Benn, Olson, along with University of Alabama-Birmingham Coach Gene Bartow and newly named Iowa Coach George Raveling, are stockholders in the corporation. The three coaches are also members of an advisory board.

"These guys are not selling at all," Benn said. "These guys are purely investers."

Benn was asked what qualifications the coaches had to serve on the advisory board. "We haven't had our first advisory board meeting yet, so if you come back a year from now, I might be able to tell you."

What are the chances of getting all three together for an advisory board meeting? "Truthfully, our chances would be no different than a stockholders' meeting," Benn said,
"Not everyone shows up."

ALTHOUGH UI Foundation fundraising has increased with Hawkeye popularity, UI officials have not lost their "concern with conducting ourselves properly" in the search for these funds. Bezanson said.

"I don't think we've changed our basic principles in terms of raising funds primarily for programs at the university," he said. The UI Foundation's intense fund that adamantly," he said. UI President James O. Freedman said although contributions to athletics generated by any other program, athletic contributors often help academic programs as well. "Many of the people who give to the foundation regularly give to the academic programs," as well as athletics.

'Greater sums of money come into always a good deal of enthusiasm for athletics," Freedman said. "I BELIEVE ... that those who give to athletics often then would come to us in other areas of the university."

It is no surprise to administrators that coaches easily raise private funds, while UI faculty members have not been able to secure an institutional vitality fund for the improvement of faculty salaries. "When you ask does it surprise me. I guess I would have to say it does not, because this is the pattern by which coaches are wooed by universities all over the country," Freedman said. "I regret that we don't have the same kind of support for the activities of the faculty.' But Freedman said there should be no question about the UI's commitment to academic excellence despite the large amounts money people contribute to athletics. "The primary reason people are here is for the academics not the athletics ... I think no one should be in doubt that once a university loses its academic strength, a university is not worth having," Freedman said. "I could not state more clearly that this university is about educating students in academic programs."

Loot, loot, loot

How 'bout those Hawk fans? Some of them'll paint themselves black-and-gold, or spend their last dollar on an NCAA ticket - or find themselves getting screwed by a system that's ruled by the other type of Hawk fan, the big contributor who suddenly gets interested when the team gets hot.

Everyone knows it takes more than mere loyalty to follow the Hawks on anything but the Iowa Television Network - when they're doing well, anyway. It takes dollars - the more the better. Donations to the Athletic Department will buy you the best seats, being on the legislature will help you get a ticket when they're all sold. And it probably didn't hurt to make a donation to the Lute Olson Children's Education Trust Fund.

There's no proof that contributors to the private trust fund, set up by former head basketball coach Lute Olson, had an edge over others, but at least one such contributor suggested to The Daily Iowan that "it was unofficially credited as a contribution to the university," and that donors' seating priority was increased.

UI officials have denied this, and there is no evidence that the contributor quoted was correct. The mystery is why some contributors to the fund thought they were gaining priority, and, perhaps more to the point, why did they contribute to the fund at all, if they were not expecting to gain anything from it? Donations to the fund, a private trust, were not tax-deductible.

Explanation such as one contributor's that "this was the least they could do for them (the Olsons)" seem just a little odd. The suggestion is that the Olsons had foregone a potentially profitable move to California, and that supporters wanted to express their appreciation by helping to defray educational costs for the couple's five children. This brings to mind an image of the Olson kids as poor waifs whose parents could barely afford to educate them on their meager income - a somewhat incongruous idea, to

So maybe the contributors thought they were going to get something out of it — exactly what and from whom is unknown. What is known is that the trust fund was not widely publicized; UI officials are vague about it, and because of the way it was set up, details are impossible to find out. As an official of the bank that oversees the trust put it, "One reason that people establish a trust is so that things can be kept secret." And few people seem particularly proud of their association with the fund; UI Foundation director Darrell Wyrick said, "I can remember some people who might have been involved, but I'm sure they wouldn't appreciate me giving you their names as being involved in ... this." Well put.

The DI's investigations have in no way suggested that Lute Olson and his many business partners were involved in anything illegal while he was UI head basketball coach. But questions arise that transcend the details of the UI and Olson to encompass the role of sport in any major academic institution. The fact is that Olson, like coaches in other universities, was able to make a small fortune out of his position, and that contributors, caught up in the Iowa City mania that surrounds sport, were prepared to help pay for his children's education.

Quite apart from the fund, Olson's many activities were extremely lucrative. His summer basketball camps turned a huge profit, from which the $1,000 a week rent he paid the UI for facilities was easy to find. His income from TV shows, personal appearances and so on, was huge. His assistants rode around in cars that were renewed annually by Iowa dealers. And so it goes

Contrast the position of academics. True, there are a very few who make money from best-selling textbooks, TV appearances and jobs as consultants and "experts." But the reality for most is a fairly comfortable salary and facilities to carry out research. And if they do discover something marketable, too bad — their work is the "intellectual property" of the university. So why are things so different for the athletic "faculty?"

The answer, of course, is that if coaches were not free to pursue their own free enterprises as they choose, they would go elsewhere, so universities essentially compete against each other to offer the stars the best inducements. It would take a move by every major university in the land to stop this - to in effect make successful coaches' products the "intellectual property" of their employers. A move like that seems, at the very least, unlikely.

For universities are simply part of the wider culture — and that culture consistently places sport above almost anything else. In spite of the protestations of UI President James O. Freedman and others that, of course, academic achievement is the center of a university's mission, the reality seems constantly to contradict this. So little has been known about the entrepreneurial success of Lute Olson and his ilk because so few people around here really care - as long as we have a winning team. And others firmly believe that a winning sports coach is worth literally anything.

It's a truism that athletics is big business, in which personal fortunes can be made. Universities, on the other hand, are built on values other than the ammassing of such fortunes — or so we are told. Does it matter that such incompatible value systems continue to coexist in one institution, and that one system totally overshadows the other? Obviously not, or else those successobsessed Hawk fans, whether rich or poor, would do something to derail the whole crazy gravy train.

'Gandhi' chokes voice of reality

By Monish Chatterjee

THE WAKE of the success of Richard Attenborough's film on Mahatma Gandhi, it is imperative from an Indian standpoint to caution Western audiences against the hazards of leaning on British and European sources for historical

For the Indian people it is a bitter experience that even today, nearly four decades after the end of British colonialism in India, the history of their long struggle for freedom continues to be written, directly or indirectly, by the British. The seat of government in free India, for the most part, has been in the hands of the Congress party, the leadership of which had been hand-picked by the British for

The thrust of Indian history -British style - has been the portrayal of the movements launched by the Indian National Congress under the leadership of such men as Mohandas Gandhi and Jawaharlal Nehru. This piece of history projects the image of endless negotiations, frustrating stalemates, and protracted dialogues between the pacifist Congress leaders and the magnanimous I-am-eager-tolisten-if-you-come-to-the-table British bureaucracy. It is replete with details of British actions, always with good intentions and in the best interests of the Indian people. The voice of reality which often unveils the true and shocking aspects of imperial and colonial rule - has been choked with meticulous care. Attenborough's work, intentionally or not, fits admirably into

THIS ARTICLE is not intended to belittle the impact of Gandhi on the Indian struggle, and the universality of his teachings. I have great admiration for Gandhi, and I feel as awed by his lifelong sacrifices as anyone else. If the story of his life gives a fresh impetus to this violent and selfish world to re-evaluate its philosophy of aggression and force, and teaches it restraint, compassion and love for fellow men then Attenborough deserves kudos for striving for a truly noble cause.

But, tragically, since a biography of Gandhi entails a significant chapter in the history of the Indian freedom deliberate suppression of facts is an affront to the memories of the supreme sacrifices of thousands of patriotic Indians held sacred in the hearts of millions in India to this day. The inevitable result is a sense of betrayal and bitterness that eventually turns towards Gandhi himself.

To illustrate how the British version of Indian history tends to deemphasize certain events while overemphasizing others, let me pick some episodes from Gandhi, the motion picture. In the sequence on the ruthless massacre of unarmed men, women and children at Amritsar (popularly know as Jalianwallabagh to Indians), the film shows a mourning Gandhi standing at the site of the killings.

BUT WHEN THIS gruesome incident actually occurred, no leader of the Congress party uttered a word of protest to the British authorities. In fact, it was Rabindranath Tagore, the celebrated poet, who took upon himself the burden of demonstrating, through a letter to the King of England, the repugnance felt by Indians toward British rule. In that famous letter. Tagore also announced he was relinquishing the knighthood bestowed on him by the king — a highly symbolic

In addition to ignoring this, the film fails to mention that Gen. O'Dyer, the perpetrator of the massacre, was actually welcomed back in England and fervently congratulated by some women's societies there. This pattern of English behavior, of course, dates back to the beginning of their occupation in India. It follows in the rich movement, any misrepresentation or tradition of the likes of Robert Clive, Warren Hastings (who was, fortunately, impeached in the British parliament, thanks to the great Sir Edmund Burke), Lord Macaulay and Lord Dalhousie (whose infamous Doctrine of Lapse helped expand the British Empire throughout India).

> ANOTHER ASPECT the film ignores, as is common to most currently available literature, is the role of the militant and extremist leadership in India's freedom struggle. To me, of all the distortions perpetrated by the British and some Indian historians and politicians, this is the unkindest cut of

> The real history of India's long war of independence is a history of oppression, manipulations and treachery that is unsurpassed almost anywhere. The British divide-and-rule policy, which disintegrated India's social fabric: the many ghastly famines artificially created by them in areas where they faced the greatest troubles (notably Bengal), and the systematic crippling of Indian trade and commerce by them - were responsible for the many militant and nationalist movements that occurred over the years. The Battle of Plassey and the Sepoy Mutiny have more significance than the British would have us believe.

As much as Gandhi and his nonviolent methods embodied the activities of the Congress from the early 1920s, there were several other movements, led by prominent Indian leaders, that contributed immensely to the cause of freedom for India. Many of these leaders were originally members of the Congress themselves (Subhash Chandra Bose, for example, was twice elected President of the Congress party, the second time despite great opposition from Gandhi), and some remained members while differing sharply with the platforms adopted by the party.

THERE WAS Lokmanya Tilak, who once stood before an English magistrate and said, "Freedom is my birthright and I shall have it." There was Surendranath Banerjee (also known as Surrender-not Banerjee in some circles for his courage and astuteness), whose response to the notorious settlement for the partition of Bengal was, "I shall unsettle the settlement." There was C.R. Das, the eminent lawyer and philanthropist, who initiated the concept of Swaraj (self-rule) for India - a concept Gandhi used later on.

And there was Subhash Chandra Bose, the firebrand patriot and uncompromising dreamer who was one of India's most charismatic leaders, the story of whose life is every bit as incredible as Gandhi's. His dynamic leadership led to the formation of the Azad Hind Fauj and its female counterpart, the Jhansi Rani Bahini. It is a shame that the lives and teachings of these men are not given their rightful place beside those of Gandhi and

Many organizations, besides the Congress, were actively involved in the freedom movement. Some of these, like the Swarajya Party, the Kirti Kissan Party, the Bengal Volunteers, and the Anusilan Samiti were more radical in their views and methods than the Congress.

HOWEVER, THE ULTIMATE objective of all was complete freedom for a unified India. As early as 1905, it was through the concerted protests and rallies organized by such groups that an impending partitioning of Bengal, courtesy of Lord Curzon, was averted. The turmoil caused by that movement left the British so insecure that they hastily transferred their Capital from Calcutta to Delhi. When Gandhi launched his famous Noncooperation Movement, thousands of inspired young men and women gave up lucrative careers to participate. When Gandhi retracted the movement just as it was reaching its peak, many were left bewildered and shocked.

The British dealt the final coup de grace when India was partitioned, in exchange for freedom, in 1947. The violence that followed was a direct consequence of that. To many Indians, the freedom achieved was a far cry from the spirit of the struggle that preceded it, and Gandhi, the architect of that freedom, made many enemies who blamed him for having compromised the integrity of the move-

SINCE THEN, history has been carefully written though colored subjectivity, and the works and words of India's greatest visionaries have been cast into oblivion. One must wonder if history should remain the slanted perspective of a few for all posterity, or if some day the Garibaldis of the world will be resurrected and reinstated to full glory and honor.

Value of homemaking To the editor:

The discussions of free speech and audience etiquette generated by Phyllis Schlafly's visit to the UI have been interesting and valuable. However they simply miss the most important point raised by her speech, namely, what value and status are we going to give homemaking and

The most important, difficult and rewarding task in society is helping young children develop healthy and distinctive personalities that will enable them to lead happy, productive and fulfilling lives. That this task is not accorded the appropriate status by our society is an inexcusable flaw.

Enter the people who treat this cultural myopia as an accurate assessment and make it the basis of a political program to "liberate" women from the "drudgery" and "impotence" of being "only" a housewife so they can find fulfillment in a "real job" outside the home. Instead of working to correct a fundamental misconception, they aggravate the problem by further eroding the status of homemakers with

It is very difficult to criticize this movement without drawing charges of sexism or even, incredibly, racism (see recent DI letters sections).

However, until the public discussion explicitly affirms the importance of homemaking and childrearing, includes the duties of men in this area (making their role more like the traditional female role, not the reverse) and begins using the word "responsibilities" at least as much as the word "rights," the voice of criticism must continue to be heard.

Acidic interference

The United States and Canada signed a memorandum in 1980 indicating the intention of both governments to negotiate a cooperative agreement on air pollution. This is because emissions from one location may travel hundreds of miles and across national borders to pollute another area. Controversy arises because it is sometimes hard to specify exactly who is responsible for the pollution. Industry gains from pollution, with lower costs of production, at the expense of life

Acid rain is not a severe problem in Iowa because our soils act as a buffer and we are not surrounded by industry.

fish populations becase of the acidity. Many feel that the U.S. is directly responsible for this because of our high sulfur oxide and nitrogen oxide emissions in the Northeast. In September 1981 the National

Academny of Science issued a statement about acid rain which concluded that the "picture is disturbing enough to merit prompt tightening of restrictions on atmospheric emissions from fossil

Recently Canada produced two films on acid rain: Acid Rain: Requiem or Recovery and Acid from Heaven. The U.S. justice department labeled the films "government propaganda." The films were ordered to be registered under the foreign agents registration act. This requires the film to open with a warning of nonapproval by the government and a mandatory registration of everyone viewing them.

The Canadian Environment Minister, John Roberts, condemned the actions as "extraordinary interference with the freedom of speech." I tend to agree! I feel the U.S. government should not try to deter the public from becoming informed on this environmental hazard.

The environmental consequences of pollution must be known by the public. The Administration wants to relax air pollution standards. We must express

However, 144 Canadian lakes have lost our concern to our elected officials and tell them that we do not want less restrictive air pollution regulations. Peggy Voelker

Power to kill

To the editor:

I read with sadness and disgust the story of the killing of Randy Harrison's dog Katsic (DI, March 11). It reminds me of a similar occurrence here in Ashville, N.C. last fall when a black bear wandered into town from the Blue Ridge Parkway near here. The poor creature was only looking for food and wasn't endangering anyone. Was he tranquilized and returned to the woods? No, he was killed by a stupid cop with a gun. It scares the hell out of me to think that the police in this country have power to kill when unprovoked and without just cause. When five-year-old kids are killed in California and when dogs and bears are killed indiscriminately by the "servants of the people" I have to say, maybe George Orwell was right.

Randy, money will not bring back your friend Katsic or her pups, but I hope you win this battle. Maybe then the gunslingers will be less likely to shoot first. James Lee Howes Ashville, N.C.

It didn't take too long to figure out the outcome of Saturday's Iowa spring football game, as the first unit, dubbed the black shirts, rolled to a 51-14 victory over the white shirts.

An estimated crowd of 22,500 took advantage of the sunny afternoon to catch a few rays, drink a little and watch some fancy moves displayed by the Hawkeye gridders.

Just as sure as the spring game is annual, Iowa Coach Hayden Fry was again complaining that the crowd estimate was too low. "It was pretty obvious that the guy who made the attendance guess had a pretty good time last night," Fry said in a post-game interview.

THOUGH THE ACTUAL numbers in the stands may be in doubt, there is little doubt to the numbers of yards the Hawkeye offenses rolled up. The two teams combined for a total of 798 yards in the game that was divided into four, 10-minute quarters.

Much of that came off the arms of quarterbacks Chuck Long and Tom

"All of our quarterbacks had good days," Fry said. "Grogan had an especially great day. He and Chuck are so close and I certainly feel much better about the quarterback situation this year than I did last."

Long said he has been satisfied with his progress this spring. "I felt I did a pretty good job this spring," the 6-foot-4 junior-to-be said. "The things that I wanted to work on were strength and quickness in releasing the ball and I think I have picked up some strength in throwing the long ball."

could that MEAN that big gain passes will become an increased danger to opposing defenses this fall? "I felt that I could throw the long ball last year, but I was really just looking to pick up some additional upper body strength," Long said. "We do have some excellent receivers coming back—it should be an interesting fall."

Grogan also can throw the long ball, he picked up touchdowns of 43 and 41 yards during Saturday's game.

Long said he is feeling a bit more comfortable heading into fall practices this time around.

"I FEEL A LOT more confident now than I did last year at this time," he said. "This time last year I felt pretty good, but you never really know what is going to happen when fall comes around."

Fry said he is pretty confident about a kick-off man. "We settled one question for sure today. John Roehlk will be our kick-off man," he said after witnessing the senior from Durant, Iowa, Hinz gave a lot of the credit for his victory to Skunk River Cyclists (SRC) teammate Mark Frise. He said that as soon as he started to take the lead Frise (who finished second) provided some crucial blocking for Hinz.

"IT (RACING) IS a team sport, Mark fell down (while blocking) and worked pretty hard to still finish second," Hinz added.

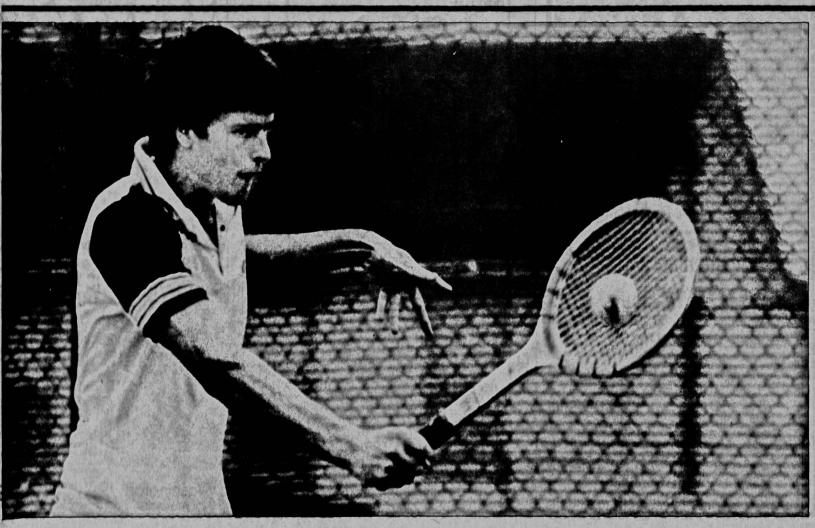

Although Hinz took up racing only three years ago he has some big plans for his future. "Next weekend I am going to a qualifying race in Kansas City for the National Sports Festival," said Hinz. He added that, "if I make the Festival I will have a good chance of being selected for the junior world's team that is going to New Zealand."

Hawks find solace in lopsided setback

It's not often a tennis coach can look at a pair of dual meets and be happier with the play of his squad in a losing effort than a winning one but, that is how Iowa's Steve Houghton accessed last weekend's meets with Michigan and Michigan State.

The Wolverines, winners of the last 15 Big Ten titles, defeated the Hawks, 7-2, on Friday on the Kinnick Stadium Courts. Michigan State ended its Big Ten schedule with an 0-9 mark after Iowa's 6-3 win on Saturday. The Hawkeyes end their regular at 12-12 overall, 3-6 in the Big Ten.

lowa's Mike Inman eyes the ball as it makes contact with his racquet during his match with Michigan's Mark Mees Friday. Inman, the Hawkeyes' No.1 singles player, lost in three sets to Mees, 6-1, 5-7, 6-2.

Michigan's experience showed in Friday's match. Five of the six singles matches went to three sets but whenever there was a key point to be had, it seemed to go to Coach Brian Eisner's squad.

THE WOLVERINES TOOK four of the five three setters — only No. 6 player John Willard was able to break through for the Hawks. The junior from Detroit continues to play well, winning singles and doubles in both matches.

"I was very happy with the way we played against (Michigan)," Houghton said. "Last year we lost to them 9-0 and didn't even come close to winning a set. the way the guys played really showed how far our program has come."

The depth of the Hawkeyes was apparent against Michigan State. Although Mike Inman and Rob Moellering lost at Nos. 1 and 2, the lower four players all came through with wins, the biggest being freshman

"IT WAS pretty nice of (Fry) to say that I've got a new job," Roehlk said. "I kicked off in high school all years but I didn't pursue it much here until they asked me during the winter. I used to hit it consistently within the five and I'm about 50 pounds heavier now, so I am much stronger now which is a plus.'

Most aspects of the game seemed to please Fry. "I was extremely pleased with the ballgame," Fry said. "The fact that we just had one penalty indicates that our youngsters were concentrating. We accomplished what we needed to accomplish, realizing that 24 players were out with injuries."

The punting of Tom Nichol will remain a concern to Fry heading into fall practice. "Our punting has been that way all spring," he said. "At times it has been outstanding and at other times it has been inconsistent.'

OFFENSIVELY, Eddie Phillips led the black shirts with 84 yards in 11 carries and Granger carried for 68 vards. The white shirts were led by Treye Jackson, who netted 25 yards rushing.

The black shirts, who led the game 27-7 at halftime, had a pair of players leading the team in tackles. Mike Hooks and Mike Stoops each had six solo tackles. Ron Fisher led the white shirts with eight tackles. Phillips said preparing for a spring game just isn't quite the same as readying for fall competition. "I don't know if you can get excited about this game," he said, "but you can get ready

The feeling of most players seemed to be summed up best by Long, who said he can't wait for fall practice, but is glad spring drills are over. "I probably won't pick up a football for about a month," he said. "Right now, I'm just concentrating on my classes and finals.

"I'll be going home for the summer (to Wheaton, Ill.)," Long said. "I've got some buddies I'll throw to. When you go home you get so bored you get yourself psyched up and you're ready to come back."

Golfers' talents finally surface

SHOP

Finally this season, the Iowa men's golf team has something to show for their talent - a first-place finish in the Drake Relays Invitational, Thursday and Friday in Des Moines

"Boy, they really went lights out in that first round," Iowa Coach Chuck Zwiener said. "They've been playing below their abilities lately, and I think they decided they were ready to play. We were three strokes under par as a team (in the first round) on one of the toughest golf courses in Iowa"

The Hawkeyes led second-place Iowa State by nine strokes and increased their lead to 18 stokes after the second that's what they did.' One individual who had his share of fun during the tourney was Eugene Elliott, who finished first in the invite, shooting a 74, 74, 73 and 74 for a 295

"(Elliott) really had his game going," Zwiener said. "He hit the ball very well and he putted well, too. He's been playing up and down this season, but he was consistent. He didn't have a really spectacular round, and he didn't have a bad one either.'

"I hadn't played in good weather," Elliott said. "In Florida, I putted well, but so far this spring (Drake) was the

Up and down lowa hits eighth in league

By Thomas W. Jargo Staff Writer

The Iowa women's golf team just can't seem to maintain any sort of consistency, according to Coach Diane Thomason.

The Hawkeyes players continued to play very inconsistent golf from one round to the next as they ended the regular season last Friday and Saturday, finishing eighth in the Big Ten golf championships in Champaign, Ill.

The Ohio State Buckeyes remained the class team in the conference, rolling to a 41-stroke victory over secondplace Indiana in the two-day, 54-hole tournament. Defending conference champion Michigan State placed third.

THE BUCKEYES CARDED a team total 898 over Illinois' par-76 Savoy Orange Golf Course. It was the fifthstraight team title this spring for Ohio State, which broke the 900-plateau for the second week in a row. (The Buckeyes carded an 898 one week ago o win the Iowa Invitational on Iowa got off on the wrong foot Friday of the day to shoot 322. Saturday, the Hawkeyes ended the tournament, carding a 328.

DURING THE SECOND round, Iowa's Cookie Rosine and Mary Baecke both shot sub-80 rounds, and Mary Kramer entered the clubhouse with an 81. But the Hawks had to include Lynn Tauke's 85, to just miss breaking the elusive 320 barrier. In fact. Iowa had to include a relativelyhigh 85 to the team score in each

"The 322 was a good day," Thomason said, "The other two (rounds) were not acceptable, because going into the last round of play, we were in a good position. We could have picked up some ground, if we had just stayed steady at

lowa finds fortune in upset win

Cathy Ballard, Iowa's women's tennis coach, has said to her squad all season that if they continued to work hard, good things would start coming their way.

The "good things" came in the form of an upset over highly-regarded Michigan, 5-4, in the Recreation Building. However, Iowa was not as fortunate on Saturday, losing to Michigan State, 7-2, on the Kinnick Stadium Courts.

It has not been a good year for Ballard and her squad. Six 5-4 losses combined with a number of injuries has left the Hawks record at 7-15, 2-7 in the Big Ten. But Sunday's win has the Hawks believing they can make a good showing at this weekend's Big Ten Championship meet in Chicago.

"THIS WAS A gratifying win," Ballard said. "From the beginning, this team has paid its dues. The kids have lost a number of close matches this season but have continued to work hard. I told them if they continued to work things would eventually turn sets, Loetscher, using a powerful backhand shot, jumped out to a 3-0 lead in the third set and hung on to win, 6-4. But her biggest performance was to come in the doubles with partner Angela Jones.

Although each Iowa player broke into the win column against Michigan, the star of the meet had to be junior Sara Loetscher. After going through a tough season of coming out on the short end of close matches, Loetscher finally got the breaks in her upset over Michigan's Mary MacTaggart, an all-Big Ten selection last season.

The Iowa duo jumped out quickly, grabbing the first set, 6-3, as both ones and Loetscher played flawlessly at the net. But Michigan's team of MacTaggart and Stephanie Lightvoet fought back to take the second set, 6-4.

In the third set, with the dual match score standing at 4-4, MacTaggart and Lightvoet appeared to have the match lowa women's tennis results

Loetscher then held her serve in the 11th game and the pressure fell on Lightvoet to put the match into a tiebreaker. But the No. 1 Michigan player couldn't hold her serve. Match point came quickly for the Hawks as Jones put away a cross-court volley to give Iowa the match.

"WE CAME OUT with much more intensity today," Loetscher said. "This win today showed us that we are capable of playing well at Big Ten's. We just need to have everyone playing well at the same time.'

Michigan Coach Oliver Owens was shocked by the result. "I sure didn't come down here expecting to lose," he said. "Their kids played real well and just wanted it a little more.'

On Saturday, Michigan State used four singles wins and two doubles wins to garner their victory. Coach Bob Rutz was happy with the way his squad performed.

"The keys for us were at the top of our line-up," he said. "Iowa started out strong but we got back into the matches and came out on top. (Iowa) has the potential to do well in Chicago but we'll have to wait and see.'

Dunn signs initial gymnastics recruit

By Steve Batterson

It may not have come as soon as he would have liked, but Iowa men's Gymnastics Coach Tom Dunn signed his first recruit late Thursday night.

Lenny Lucarello of North Babylon, N.Y., on Long Island, signed a national letter of intent to compete for Iowa around midnight Thursday. "He's a power gymnast, similiar to (current Hawkeye gymnast) Stu Breitenstine," Dunn said.

"Floor exercise and vaulting are his best events and his high bar is very good, also. He may be a little weak on the pommel horse and the parallel bars but he is a fairly good gymnast on the rings."

LUCARELLO, WHO HAS been a member of Junior National Team. was a junior national champion on the vault and is the defending allaround champion at the Empire State Games. The games are competition among nearly 5,000 athletes held each summer in New York. Lucarello also holds the scoring record at that meet.

A high school All-American gymnast, Lucarello also visited Louisiana State, Michigan State, Temple and Nebraska before Recruiting

This past weekend, he competed in the Shower of Stars meet in Pennsylvania. The meet, sponsored by the Parkettes Gymnastics Club, attracted many top gymnasts, including several Olympians.

Lucarello will become the third member of the Junior National Team to attend Iowa, Breitenstine and Hawkeye Dan Bachman were the first two, arriving on the UI campus last fall.

DUNN SAID he has decided to split the remaining scholarship he has available this season and the Hawkeyes are currently looking at two gymnasts, Alan Powers of Miamisburg, Ohio, and Tom Auer of Racine, Wis.

Powers, a former Ohio state champion, has limited his choices to Iowa and Brigham Young and Auer, a former Wisconsin state champion who visited the UI this weekend, will likely choose between Northern Illinois, Wisconsin, Michigan State and the Hawkeyes.

The Iowa baseball team split a fourgame series with Wisconsin in Madison, Wis., last weekend and fell back into second place in the Big Ten West Division.

The Hawkeyes won the opening game of the series Saturday, 11-9, behind Kevin Oliger's wind-aided three-run home run in the seventh inning, but Wisconsin took the nightcap, 1-0, as Badger pitcher Mike Verkuilen tossed a four-hitter. With the wind continuing to blow out Sunday, it was a slugfest between the two schools as Iowa won the first game, 11-9, and the Badgers taking the second contest, 12-8.

THE HAWKEYES are now 5-3 in conference play and two games behind

Gophers take lead series with defending champion Illinois. Northwestern, idle from conference play last weekend, is in third place at 4-4, followed by the Badgers at 5-7 and Illinois in the cellar with a 3-9

> Wisconsin Coach Tom Meyer said he wasn't pleased with the series split. "You don't go anywhere with a split." he said. "We got one one good pitching performance (Verkuilen), and it just happens to be at the same time as (Iowa's Jeff) Ott pitches well. It's fortunate our guy pitched a little better.

"It was an unbelievable series. I think the pitching in this league is the weakest it has been in years. The reason for that is the two-week lull because of the weather when we all came back from spring trips. It reflects the most on the pitching staff."

Celtics face sweep; Portland stays alive

The Milwaukee Bucks are one game away from sweeping a legend.

After Sidney Moncrief scored 26 points and Marques Johnson added 22 Sunday to help Milwaukee to a 107-99 victory over Boston, the Bucks had a surprising 3-0 stranglehold over the Celtics in their Eastern Conference semifinal series. The Bucks can wrap up the series with a victory in game four Monday night

The winner of the series will face Philadelphia in the Eastern finals.

The Bucks entered the fourth quarter with an 83-81 lead and the teams traded baskets until they were tied at 87-87, when Johnson converted a three-point play to put Milwaukee ahead for good at 90-87.

Moncrief then hit another jumper to put the Bucks up by five points. When the Celtics' Larry Bird hit a jumper to cut the lead to three points, Johnson responded with another jumper.

MILWAUKEE HAD three other players in double figures. Junior Bridgeman had 19, Brian Winters had 16 and Harvey Catchings chipped in with 10. Boston was led by Bird with 21.

The Celtics closed to within 94-93 when Nate Archibald scored on a rebound off Robert Parish's missed shot. But on the next trip down the floor, Brian Winters hit a baseline jumper as the 24-second clock expired and he was fouled on the play. He converted the free throw for a 97-93 lead.

Cedric Maxwell then hit two foul shots to cut the lead to two, but the Celtics never got any closer. In other series, Philadelphia completed a sweep of New York with a 105-102 triumph, and Portland avoided a sweep with a 108-95 decision over Los

Sweep of Spartans keeps lowa in race

By Jill Hokinson

The Iowa softball team won three crucial games against Michigan State this weekend, 4-1, 1-0 and 4-1 to increase their Big Ten record to 6-5, keeping the Hawkeyes in the conference race.

"We're definitely in the running," said Iowa Coach Ginny Parrish. "A lot of teams are clumped around the middle at the .500 mark and any team can win on any given day.'

Outfielder Chris Tomek said there appears to be no top team in the conference this season. "Michigan State beat Indiana (who was in first place) and we beat Michigan State," she said. "That shows that anyone has the chance to win the conference."

THE THREE WINS against the Spartans was the Hawkeyes' best series of games this season, according the Iowa coach. "I was extremely leased with the team. We had a good lance of offense and defense all ekend," Parrish said.

In the first game, Iowa held Michigan State to four hits and one un, which came in the first inning. The Hawkeyes took the lead in the hird inning by scoring three runs on wo doubles by Liz Ryan and Linda Barnes. Iowa's final run came in the Jircitano and Ryan on second and first. A fly out by Barnes advanced the runners and pinch hitter Teresa Wise was intentionally walked, loading the bases with two outs. Kennett then walked Iowa's Karla Downes, bringing home the winning run.

"The walks cost Michigan State the second game," Parrish said. "Kennett's problem was she put the walks in the wrong places."

IOWA CONTINUED with strong hitting in the third game on Sunday, which was called after six innings of play because of the poor weather. "We hit their pitcher well and didn't have to adjust to her wind up in the second and third games," Parrish said. "Kennett also began to tire by the third game.' The Hawkeyes rallied for three runs in the second inning to take a 3-0 lead and gave up only one run in the third inning to Michigan State. Barnes led off for Iowa in the second inning with a home run. Lisa Nicola reached first base on a Michigan State error. Iowa's Cherie Andersen doubled and Darland was hit by a pitch, loading the bases with two outs. Tomek singled, driving in Nicola and Jircitano walked, scoring Andersen and giving the Hawks a 3-0 lead.

We had a few errors this weekend but they didn't hurt us," Parrish said. "The zero to two errors a game didn't hurt us the way they did against Northwestern last Thursday."

Iowa travels to Cedar Rapids today to play Kirkwood, which is rated fifth in the nation in the NJCAA division.

The deciding point of the USCF Senior Men I and II race came early when Gregory Barkley of Minneapolis fell as the bikers turned east on lowa Avenue from Clinton Street, above. Tim Hinz, foreground, benefited from the ensuing rest of the pack, as they either fell or slowed down to avoid fallen bikers. Hinz took the lead and easily won the race. John Riley, right, rode in one of the more unusual races, which featured recumbent bicycles that have backrests and which the bikers pedal

The race was plagued with bad weather all day, which caused many accidents and forced some racers not to participate. Jeff Boyle, an Iowa City racer who is a Criterium veteran, said he was, "happy I finished and didn't crash," he added that, "there were some good riders on the sidelines."

Bruce Reynolds, who is the President of Bicyclists of Iowa City, estimated that 10-15 racers came to Iowa City for the Men's I&II event but didn't ride due to the inclement weather. Reynolds stated: "There were not as many racers as last year (in the I&II) but the quality was still there."

'Let's Dance' displays yet another side of Bowie

MEDIA manipulator David Bowie star of stage, screen, video, and vinyl, is gearing up for another assault on American popular culture with a new album (Let's Dance), a new movie (The Hunger) and a summer tour.

Bowie was first thrust into mainstream consciousness with his now-legendary Ziggy Stardust tour of 1972, and since then he's undergone more incarnations than Vishnu: spacy Ziggy gave way to glitter rock progenitor Aladin Sane who in turn gave way to the apocalyptic canine of Diamond Dogs who unexpectedly metamorphosed into the chic Sam and Dave imitator of Young Americans and Station to Station.

Brian Eno, Robert Fripp, and various synthesizers guided him through Low, Heroes, Lodger, and

Records

Scary Monsters, while the remainder of his restless energy was consumed in an eclectic array of artsy projects that included salvaging Iggy Pop's recording career, playing The Elephant Man on Boadway, and setting the stylistic standards for nine-tenths of the new British bands.

STILL, EVEN as Bowie was bounding onto the pages of People and into the status of beloved entertainer, his credentials as a rock artist were being questioned. Feelings were that this guy was spreading himself a bit too thin, that although he'd catch fire with a single ever so often ("Heroes"; 'Ashes to Ashes''; the duet with Queen, "Pressure") he'd become too successful a poseur for his own good. More to the point, perhaps, was the Station to Station had gone gold.

Thus, Let's Dance, an accessible collection of limey soulfulness in the manner of Young Americans, has to be seen less as a return to Bowie's presynth roots than as the latest in a series of calculated persona shifts. Everything about the album invites cynicism: the choice of Chic's Nile Rodgers as producer, the 12-inch commercial appeal of the tunes, and the ruthlessly efficient publicity campaign accompanying the record's release (which has landed him on the cover of every periodical this side of Field and CYNICAL OR NOT, however, this is one of Bowie's great albums. Let's Dance gets better with each listening. and Ol' Blue and Green Eyes deserves all the bread he's going to rake in on this one.

"Modern Love," a Bowie tune originally done by Mott the Hoople, opens the album with a spirited rhythm and blues beat that neither Rodgers, Bowie, nor guitarist Steve Ray Vaughn abandons for the next forty minutes.

'China Girl," another tune from Bowie's vaults, this one from Iggy's The Idiot, features Vaughn's lead guitar upfront alongside Bowie's patented phony-sincere vocal. The last of the covers is "Criminal World," a syncopated rocker first done by the otherwise forgettable Metro, a freaky foot-tapper in which "all the girls look like baby-faced boys."

"Ricochet" sounds like something off the Eno-David Byrne collaboration My Life in the Bush of Ghosts, with its mixture of fluid horn charts and "found conversations." "Without You" is in the "Ashes to Ashes" mold, and the album's final tune, "What's My Line," is refreshing precisely because it is such a lightweight throwaway.

People theme, "Putting Out the Fire," that ignites its opening and closing with some fine byplay between a raunchy guitar and a cheap electric organ. It easily supasses the movie soundtrack rendition.

The album's hit title track should have a secure place in the Top 40 well into the summer. "Let's Dance" brings the best elements of the album together. It stands to reason that two studio honchos of the calibre of Rodgers and Bowie could produce a classic dance single seemingly at will, especially when they've put together the best rhythm and blues band that's ever backed Bowie. But what does he mean by "the serious moonlight"?

Any random hour of MTV will dispay about three acts shamelessly derivative of this guy. Let's Dance proves that, if nothing else, David Bowie remains the best of all the Bowie imitators.

'Outsiders' message romanticizes youth

By Roxanne T. Mueller Special to The Daily Iowan

JLL

O HAMMER art out of poetry you've got to start with poetry. Hundreds of thousands of American adolescents think the books of S.E. Hinton are the poetry of life as they know it: alienation, loneliness, meaningless competition, big talk, the pressure of belonging to the right group with maybe a little fun tossed in on the fringe.

If you're talking about adaptation, Francis Coppola's efforts in bringing Hinton's The Outsiders to the screen can't be faulted. He's slavish to the text as far as creating troubled but beatific youth, sensitive to the core: the hero is fascinated with sunsets and Robert Frost; the hero's friend rejects his parents to pay his dying respects to the person who opened his eyes to life beyond the Oklahoma ghetto.

Whatever one thinks of Hinton's books (and there are probably very few people over the age of 20 who have actually read them), they cast a spell over the adolescents at whom they're aimed. When I saw the film a few weeks ago, three junior high boys sat in the row behind me, and as the lights of being blond and wearing white dimmed, one of the boys started chinos. the words echoing verbatim with Coppola's opening montage.

THAT SAYS something about the power of fiction, and more about how young people today yearn to read about and identify with kids who have the same problems and concerns they do. Coppola's cinematic kids may not have started to worry about the Bomb yet, but they're primed, and as soon as Hinton sets her stories in contemporary times instead of a relatively distant decade, those doomsday concerns will be right there at the forefront.

What has been happening with The Outsiders is that while the young have been flocking to it and supporting it, the adult critics have been ridiculing it beyond belief. Really, now - the older types had their Rebel Without a Cause and Woodstock, so why can't today's kids have their Outsiders? Anything beyond the scope of Porky's or Spring Break or Friday the 13th, Part 136 is a hell of a lot better for TV-warped minds than adults can possibly

The Outsiders

Produced by Fred Roos and Gary Frederickson. Written by Kathleen Knutsen Rowel. Directed by Francis Coppola. Rated PG.

Diane Lane Showing at Cinema I.

That isn't to say Coppola is free of fault. The points made in this story of alienated youth are as old as themes pounded home by more literary types like Shakespeare. The greasers, as Coppola's overly frequent use of train whistles emphasize, are from the wrong side of the tracks, coming from families that don't care what the kids do and living lives based on dexterity with switchblades and tough talk.

THE SOCS ARE the society kids the ones whose parents have money and who outwardly subscribe to the Sandra Dee-Troy Donahue philosophy ferences in problems and feelings of the two groups are minimal. This is quite familiar stuff, to be sure -James Dean emoted over similar concerns a generation ago, and that simplistic attitude might be enough to turn off the adult crowd. But if a finger of blame must be pointed, it should be pointed at Hinton, who, in her books, merely disguises cliches with streetsmart talk and brooding, dark heroes.

What Coppola has done is romanticize these youths beyond credibility; they ultimately come off only as the types they are. When Matt Dillon flies off the handle after the death of a friend, you don't empathize with him so much as you disinterestedly watch him go through every tortured contortion used by every tortured method actor since Brando.

What counts in a movie like this is whether the adolescents who read Hinton are double-crossed. I don't think they are. The Outsiders isn't poetry but then neither is Hinton's brand of

'Warriors' gibes middle-class life

By Roxanne T. Mueller Special to The Daily Iowan

NOUGH TIME has passed since the "revolutionary" days of the 1960s when even the mention of Bobby Seale or the Black Panthers sent shivers down the spines of white Americans that the reforms fought for are now respected (though largely unfulfilled). With the "revolution" now little more than a fading memory in the drug-demented minds of its proponents, the whole idea is ripe for parody.

What's heartening is that the methods militants used, as well as the fervor of their convictions, can be attacked with large measures of humor. Such is the case with Charles Smith's The Silent Warrior, a play presented as the finale to the UI Playwrights Festival last Saturday.

Smith has a refreshingly warped view of middleclass life. His characters are lovable fools who either earnestly believe in fantasies or escape dull reality by cuckolding husbands.

The head of the family in Silent Warrior, Lonnie Witherspoon (Michael E. Brown), is the only one who holds to anything resembling ethics. He intends to expose a crooked politician who defames the memory of his father. His wife Constance (Mary Frances Wheeler), however, thinks Lonnie should instead rub up to the politician for a cushy job.

MEANWHILE, Constance is anything but true to her name. Not only has she been cheating on Lonnie for most of their married life, but she favors one of her children over the other, loving her no-good son Arthur (Keith Jackson) but urging her daughter Gloria (TeAndra Hagens) to consider suicide.

Into this skewed household comes Crunch (Luis A. Sierra), a homeless revolutionary "prince" who's looking for his master. Lonnie calmly ties him to a chair while Gloria, in a rush to meet what she thinks is her destiny with royalty, dyes her black hair blonde so as to better resemble Doris Day.

The parts of The Silent Warrior ultimately turn out to be better than the whole. Arthur, who is the retired master of Crunch's would-be revolutionary force, has given up radicalism because "there wasn't any money in it." Now, his capitalist instincts taking hold, he's willing to sell insurance policies to the oppressed.

Smith emphasizes the unreality of a hostage tied up in the kitchen by turning it into a matter of sitcom normality. The characters go on with their lives, strange as they are, and keep Crunch incapacitated until no-account Arthur can deal with his friend.

CONSTANCE IS certainly the most complex of the characters. An Earth mother gone wild, she calmly carries on love affairs, spouts bits of Biblical advice to anyone within hearing distance ("God takes care of everyone") and proclaims her daughter's ugliness and worthlessness with unconscionable frequency. She's a loopy dame who pays more attention to her looks and spike heels than husband, hearth and home but who keeps up a PTA-style front to the world at

While a more frantic pace is needed to milk the control of characters and method. And for anyone who caught his one-act Jelly Belly Don't Mess with Nobody earlier in the week, Warrior is an astonishing switch. The depressing Jelly Belly world of ghettoes and drugs directly contrasts with Warrior's lightheartedness.

Smith's gift of creating realistic dialogue is much more apparent in Jelly Belly - the occasional stiffness evident in Warrior shows how difficult comedies in general are to write.

By and large, the cast of The Silent Warrior did a good job. While lack of rehearsal time occasionally showed, each actor caught the crazy essence of his or her character, from the silently suffering Lonnie to the owl-eyed Gloria.

The Black Action Theater will repeat the production Thursday through Saturday at the Old Armory

Jazz violinist nonpareil Stephane Grappelli and his quartet (Martin Taylor and Marc Fosset, guitars; Patrice Caratini, bass) visit Hancher Auditorium with Le Jazz Hot at 8 tonight. If you don't have tickets yet, don't hesitate - run over to the Hancher box office this minute and get them. This will likely rank with the Oscar Peterson concert last fall as the premiere Hancher event this year. (Sorry, Chicago Symphony.) • The University Chorale, under the direction of Peter Allen, will give a concert at 5 p.m. this afternoon in Harper Hall. The Chorale will perform works by Schuetz, Weelkes, Gibbons, Brahms, Finzi, Mozart and others. Their concert is free and open

 The University Band and Concert Band of the UI School of Music will present a joint concert at 8 tonight in Clapp Recital Hall. The University Band, under the direction of Timothy Mahr, will perform works by Mahr, Vaughan-Williams, Rossini and Bernstein; the Concert Band, under the direction of Morgan Jones, will perform works by Sousa, Milhaud, Nelhybel and a Broadway medley. The concert is free and open to the public.

• Robert Blanshard, bassist, will give a recital at 7 tonight in Harper Hall. Blanshard will perform works by Galliard, Bottesini, Skorzeny, Ellis and Koussivitzky. His concert is free and open to the public.

At the Bijou

tonight. Orson Welles' Othello, like his Macbeth, is a rarely seen and brilliant adaptation of Shakespeare's play. Welles' production funds dried up before the filming was completed; the editing and the sound are, to put it mildly, bizarre. But that doesn't diminish - indeed, in some respects, it enhances — the power of both the literary and the filmic versions. 7 p.m. • And in what turns out to be a Welles double bill, the maestro of moviemaking plays a Nazi war criminal in The Stranger (no relation to the Albert Camus novel). A likable detective (Edward G. Robinson. cast against type) trails Orson and his terrorized wife (Loretta Young) to a strangely dormant college town, where clocks run backward and pets are mysteriously killed. This is Welles at his most expressive. 8:45 p.m.

Television

Speaking of Shakespeare, PBS tonight presents Richard III, Will's first major success. Ron Cook stars as the villainous Richard, who schemes to steal the crown that rests uneasy on the weary head of Edward IV (Brian Protheroe). Inevitably, he succeeds, but he then finds himself the target of treachery in the War of the Roses. 8 p.m., IPT-12.

• In tonight's conclusion of NBC's "V," the Commies - whoops, we mean the space aliens - have control of the Earth. A band of Americans — whoops, we mean humans - band together for guerrilla warfare against the aliens. May the Force be with us. 8 p.m., KWWL-7.

· "Legs" presents the story of three young dancers trying to live forever as members of the Rockettes — when there's only one spot on the chorus line to fill. Gwen Verdon stars as the choreographer who has to make the choice; John Heard and Sharon Farrell also star. Cinematography by Academy-Award nominee Allen Daviau (E.T.) 8 p.m.,

• The one show we feel bad about not reviewing this year is "Cagney and Lacey." Generally excellent both visually and verbally, with a performance by Tyne Daly (Lacey) that should win an Emmy, "C&L" occasionally comes close to our beloved "Hill Street Blues" in defining what cop shows should be like.

Tonight's episode, written and directed by women, is particularly worthwhile: Cagney and Lacey are assigned to an intradepartmental case in which they have to find a cop who has been beating his wife. Probably the best bet of the night. 9 p.m., KGAN-2; WHBF-4.

• Movie on cable: Martin Scorsese's The Last Waltz is one of the best concert films ever made. A record of The Band's last show, at San Francisco's Winterland, The Last Waltz captures the director's love for the music as much as it does the group's Featuring, among others, Bob Dylan, Joni Mitchell, Emmylou Harris, Ronnie Hawkins, Neil Young, Neil Diamond and, in the film's two most unforgettable segments, Van Morrison and the Staple Singers. And, of course, Garth, Rick, Richard, Levon and Robbie Robertson, the sexiest dude this side of Richard Gere. 8:30 p.m., Cinemax-13.

Blues pioneer Muddy Waters dies

CHICAGO (UPI) - Music lovers around the world Sunday mourned the death of Muddy Waters, who pioneered Chicagostyle blues and became the godfather of rock 'n' roll.

Waters, the King of Chicago Blues, died of a heart attack in his sleep early Saturday. He was 68.

"They've said the blues was sad music." friend and fellow artist B.B. King said. "It's going to be sadder now without Muddy.

"I can say without equivocation that he was one of the great influences on American music," said J.C. Adderly, a former jazz musician and father of Nat Adderly and the late Cannonball Adderly.

Waters was instrumental in shaping rock 'n' roll. His urban blues attracted many young rockers, such as the Rolling Stones. Though Waters never achieved the fame and fortune of some of his young fans, he said he felt no bitterness over the success they achieved, largely based on his music.

"It don't bother me at all when bands like the Rolling Stones make it big," he told the Chicago Tribune in 1981. "The boys were

"THEY PASSED a quarter to me - gave me credit, you know.

Chicago blues artist Junior Wells, who played in Waters' backup band during the 1950s, called Waters "an incredible person. He'll go down as the greatest blues player of all time. The world is going to miss

Waters, the son of a sharecropper, was born McKinley Morganfield on April 4, 1915, in Rolling Fork, Miss. He took on his famous nickname in his childhood, because of his fondness for playing in the creek behind the family farmhouse

He started playing the guitar when he was 20, developing an earthy, emotional style of country blues

"I always wanted to be great," he once said. "I always wanted to be known crosscountry, not like an ordinary person who just lives and dies.'

When he moved from the cotton fields of the Mississippi Delta to the paper mills of Chicago, he overlaid his country style with a polish of city sound and a blast of electric

He bought his first electric guitar in 1944, and shortly afterward was introduced to the Chess brothers, beginning an association that lasted nearly 30 years.

WATERS' FIRST solo recording for the Chess brothers was "I Can't be Satisfied." which convinced the Chess brothers that the brash electric blues could sell. They set up Chess Records in 1950.

Waters led virtually the first electric blues-rock band, drawing talent from figures such as Jimmy Rogers on guitar, Little Walter on harmonica and Waters' half-brother, Otis Spann, on piano.

In the first half of the 1950s, Waters produced a series of passionate recordings. "She Loves Me" topped the rhythm and blues charts in 1952, followed up with classics like "Hoochie Coochie Man," "I Just Wanna Make Love To You" and the blues-rock standard, "Got My Mojo Work-

Waters is survived by his wife, Marva, a son, three daughters, a stepson and several grandchildren and great-grandchildren.
