Members of the Iowa Legislature and the state Board of Regents may have questions about the vast financial gains of successful UI coaches, but neither body will limit the flow of those funds, members predicted Monday. Several copyright stories in The Daily Iowan Monday uncovered numerous lucrative business deals, investments and private contributions to R. Luther Olson, former UI men's basketball coach.

Olson cashed in on media contracts, private

"gifts" and private investment opportunities that were afforded him during his nine years as the Hawkeyes' head coach.

Included in the monetary resources available to Olson was the "Lute Olson Children's Education Trust Fund," and a basketball camp, which netted about $71,000 last year.

The trust was established by UI fans when Olson was offered the head coaching position at the University of Southern California. It was intended to offset the costs of educating Olson's five children and contributors pledged $100 per year for six years to the fund, according to a local contributor.

"FRANKLY, I THINK the coach would be embarrassed that he couldn't pay his own kids' way through college," Rep. Minnette Doderer, D-Iowa City, said. "Based on what you've said, I think it definitely ought to be looked into.

"I hope they don't make the same deal for the new coach.

But Doderer said the legislature will probably take no action to limit the flow of private funds to coaches of major sports at the regents universities, because the authority should remain in the hands of the institutions.

"The university ought to control it and I think it should be made public so the public" can comment on the contributions, Doderer said

Jean Lloyd-Jones, D-Iowa City, agreed. "You can't protect individuals. They are free to give what ever they have to give. I suppose if people can take up a collection to give someone an artificial heart, they can take up a collection to put a coach's kids through college.'

University officials and the state Board of Regents are in charge of academics and athletics at the three state universities and legislators are "not competent or sufficiently knowledgeable to make decisions about curriculum .... I don't think the legislature should get involved," Lloyd-Jones said.

UI faculty salaries rise; may be 'curse' By Mary Tabor

Although UI faculty salaries rose to fifth place in the Big Ten conference standings for the 1982-83 school year, UI professors say this distinction is not a blessing and may in fact be a curse.

"I would hate to have a legislator see this and think faculty salaries are something to cheer about," said David Cater, UI chemistry professor and president of the local American Association of University Professors. The average UI faculty salary -$32,600 - was topped by Michigan, Northwestern, Illinois and Wisconsin Universities, according to figures obtained by the Iowa City Press-Citizen from an AAUP survey.

In the same survey, the UI sunk to last place two years ago and seventh place last year compared to other conference universities.

This comparison to other Big Ten schools is a bit deceptive, UI professors say, because the COALINGA, Calif. (UPI) - A major earthquake devastated Coalinga Monday, collapsing downtown buildings, starting raging fires and trapping scores of people in falling debris.

Spokesman Craig Reed at a disaster center in Fresno said 50 people were injured in the oil and farming community in the western San Joaquin Valley. He said fatalies were feared and as many as 150 structures were burned or flattened.

More injury victims were reported in Avenal, a second hard hit community near the center of the quake 5 miles east of Coalinga.

Midwestern states — in which they are located - are experiencing just as severe financial straits as Iowa.

"WE JUST SANK a little less than the rest of the Big Ten, as far as I'm concerned," UI English Professor Wayne Franklin said Monday

Faculty Senate President Peg Burke said UI faculty salaries show an increase only when compared to more economically troubled industrial states such as Ohio and parts of Michigan, but they are not keeping up with inflation.

"We must compare with more than just the Big Ten," she said, because when the UI recruits new faculty it goes to regions of the country where faculties get paid much more.

One way to remedy the declining buying power of faculty salaries is to cut programs and departments and thereby retain a few high salaries. Cater said this has been implemented at the University of Michigan. Michigan and Northwestern University share the conference lead with average faculty salaries of $34,700. "Evanston is a rather different situation," Richard Remington, UI vice president for academic affairs, said about the Chicago suburb which is the home of Northwestern University.

NORTHWESTERN IS the only private university in the Big Ten and is "by far smaller" than the other nine. "A comparison there is not apt," he Doctors aboard military helicopters were followed into the stricken town by more than 200 law enforcement officials.

Wooden structures not aflame stood at crazy angles with their foundations twisted under them.

DISASTER OFFICIALS said 15 separate fires were burning in the town, and other "wild fires" flared in petroleum fields outside the city. The smell of oil was heavy in the air and a black cloud of smoke covered the city.

A two-story building collapsed, the Coalinga Inn was destroyed and a Rexall drug store was leveled, all in the center of town where falling bricks on restored buildings trapped some of the injured, disaster officials said. Dormitories were ordered evacuated at Westhills College in Coalinga

"You can't believe the fires down here," said a helicopter pilot who flew over the scene. "The downtown section is finished. Flames are 40 to 50 feet high. It looks like a real disaster." The number of injured at Avenal, where a snapped gas line was reported burning, was not immediately known. Reports from the community said the streets were littered with broken glass.

"All utilities are out in Coalinga. There are collapsed buildings and people are trapped," Charlotte Button of the State Emergency Services Department said in Sacramento. She said the quake struck at 6:42 p.m. Iowa time and was followed by aftershocks for 10 minutes. She said one major fire and 15 smaller fires were burning in the city of 6,500 on the western edge of the San Joaquin Valley 50 miles southwest of Fresno.

OTHER FIRES were "burning wild" through the area's petroleum fields. Cracks in the earth from the quake were emitting clouds of hissing steam from the earth at several locations in and around the town.

Worst hit in the center of Coalinga were a series of newly-restored brick buildings. One two-story building collapsed, witnesses at the scene said. A hospital in the city buckled and partially came down. There were conflicting reports whether it had been abandoned. Button said it was still occupied and patients and staff were

Lobbyist urges nuke freeze, disarmament

By Mary Tabor

The future that President Reagan is gearing up for, complete with laser weapons deployed in outer space, doesn't appeal very much to 80-yearold lobbyist Raymond Wilson.

And it is not because Wilson has a desire to hang on to the past. "I think we need to paint the possibilites of the world we want," the founder of the Friends Committee on National Legislation said Monday.

Wilson, a Morning Sun, Iowa, native, is still actively lobbying in Washington, D.C. He was in Iowa City Sunday and Monday while making a swing through his home state as part of a series of study trips he plans to take around the country.

Backed by Quakers, his peace lobby spends about $500,000 a year to push for a future that begins with a freeze on the Moackly Resolution which would nuclear weapons, followed by a reduc-insist that there be at least a year of nuclear weapons, followed by a reduction in arms and then total disarmament

BUT HE SAID his group has no delusions about how long it will take to achieve this through the political process.

'We've tried to take a realistic view of what's going on. I said to the committee when we started (in 1943) we ought not to expect too many successes in 10 years if we were working on the kind of legislation we ought to be working on," Wilson said.

The emphasis of Wilson's lobbying efforts now is the deweaponization of outer space. He advocates using outer space for all kinds of communication between nations, including crop and weather reports, but shuns the idea of deploying weapons there.

"What we're trying to do is to pass serious negotiation before any testing of these weapons in outer space,' Wilson said.

On the other side of the issue, "Reagan says let's take 20, 30, 40 years and maybe sometime we'll be able to shoot down the Russian weapons after they've shot them at us, which the space experts say is fantasy.

'They say if you have war in space it will probably be on earth. It's not a substitute or an alternative," Wilson said.

DAMASCUS, Syria - Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat accused Secretary of State George Shultz of using his shuttle mission in the Middle East to promote "imperialist schemes" against the Arab world, it was reported Monday.

Arafat, whose remarks in Damascus were transmitted by the Palestinian news agency WAFA, also said Palestinian fighters in Lebanon would join Syrian forces to confront any Israeli attack. This chart shows the increase in building permits for apartments issued from Jan. 1 to April 30 this year, compared with the same time period last year. It also shows that, despite the increase in units to be built, the reported cost of construction rose only slightly, because of competition among contractors.

Permits for building take dramatic jump

By Jeff Eichenbaum Staff Writer

The number of permits issued for Iowa City apartment construction in April soared to almost three times the number of building permits issued in April 1982, according to figures released Monday

The Iowa City building inspectors' monthly report for April shows increases in multi-residential buildings as compared with a year ago, proving the local construction boom is still going strong.

Builders got the green light in April as 16 multi-unit permits were issued and reported construction costs were $2.8 million for 144 new units, according to the building report.

During April, 1982, six multi-unit permits were issued with reported costs running about $1.3 million.

From January 1, 1983, to April 30, 1983, a total of 36 multi-unit building permits were issued that would provide 409 units. The reported cost of the construction was about $7.6 million struction opportunities.

"The availability of money coupled with demand (for apartments)," Johnson said, is part of the reason for the building surge. "Developers are following the at-titude of the business climate and in general, they're more optimistic than they were a year ago." BUT JOHNSON SAID he feels the developers are taking risks. "They've gone crazy before and gotten hurt; they may be overbuilding."

Johnson said because Iowa City is expanding, "Local contractors are trying to get apartments ready for people who will move there - people can't afford houses like they use to."

"The country's in a recession and we're experiencing a (construction) boom," said Michael Kucharzak, director of housing and inspection services in Iowa City. A similar growth in construction is occuring in Coralville,

Apartment building has been on the decline in the past few years, Johnson said, and now "contractors need to build to make money," so many are building for just a few dollars over their costs.

Orientation services hopes to ease students into college

By Sarah Stewart taff Writer

It's common for incoming students to get the feeling that they're lost in the crowd. As the UI's Orientation Services prepare to meet another group of newcomers this summer, they hope to provide students with a smoother transition to life on campus. Emil Rinderspacher, director of Orientation Services at the UI, remembers his freshman orientation in the 1960s. "There were about 600 of us, we met in a room and this dean up at the front of the room took three hours to supposedly tell us everything we needed to know about the UI. What a terrible experience," he said.

The UI's orientation staff does things differently now. Their summer orientation sessions are organized so that "rookies" tour the university in small groups, with guides from their own peer group to answer any questions they might have.

ACCORDING TO Rinderspacher, student advisers have been more successful for orientation because "They're more responsive. Other students seem to feel more comfortable asking them questions than they would if they were talking to some ad-ministrator," he said.

Another change from past orientation techniques is dividing them into small groups, so that they might feel more comfortable about developing friendships there.

'They made us play this stupid name game; I had to sit there and try to remember every single per-son's name. I think they should cut out bullshit like that," freshman Chuck Hoscheit said. He added he wished the program would have provided more time for one-on-one contact between students and their student advisers.

"As a freshman, you've got so many questions to ask," Hoscheit said. "I wish I could have gotten a chance to ask some."

THOUGH STUDENTS have some complaints, many say they feel the program is very successful.

Freshman Susie Jones said, "Since I came more toward the end of the summer, I had trouble getting into almost all my classes. They (the student advisers) did a really good job, I thought, in helping us schedule.'

Student advisers go through two months of training for the program, complete with a 400-page training manual. Although they can't possibly know the answers to every question a student might have, they are trained to know the UI well enough to at least find someone who does.

The UI's orientation program is much like its ad-visers in that it can't provide all of the information an incoming student may want. Consequently, the staff here have chosen to concentrate their program primarily on academics, along with the more practical aspects of life on campus, such as doing laundry in the dorms.

According to Rinderspacher, the program's ul-timate goal is for the student to be comfortable with the new environment so he or she can make the most of it. According to him, "A good start is the most important thing in the world."

Voxman is honored The American Bandmasters Association has awarded the 1983 Edwin Franko Goldman Citation to the former director of the UI School of Music. Himie Voxman was awarded the honor for his 'conspicuous service in the interests of bands and band music in America.' Voxman, a Centerville native, is the 24th recipient of the award. He was director of the UI School of Music from 1964 to 1980.

Classes at UI offered

One-week college-level courses for people 60 years or older will be offered by the UI beginning May 29. This makes the seventh year the program has been offered. It has attracted more than 6,000 people

She said the program will be offered on 23 Iowa campuses around the state and has more than 100 courses, including jazz, writing, botany and computers. The classes are taught by full-time college faculty members, Houston said.

Phillip Jones, associate dean of student services, said large enrollments have been a trend over the last few summers. "That has been the pattern over the past several sum-mers. Students have tended to be on campus for longer periods of time.'

While UI administrators are hopeful they can handle the large enrollment, the school's summer budget could be strained.

UI students thirsty for hard liquor or wine, but with no transportation to the out-of-the-way Iowa Liquor Stores in Iowa City, may soon have the opportunity to purchase their alcohol at a state-run store within walking distance of campus.

Iowa City is among the first six Iowa towns slated to receive a "mini" liquor store, according to George Price, deputy director of the Iowa Beer and for a

Liquor Control Department. If the Iowa Legislature approves

funding for the stores, one could open in or near the downtown area by late summer or early fall, Price said Monday.

Funding for the stores is included in a $19 million appropriations bill that won unanimous Senate approval April 28 and is expected to come before the House in coming weeks. Price said key legislators favor the bill and believe it will be signed by the governor.

IOWA CITY, Altoona, Pleasant Hill, Norwalk, Center Point and Eldridge were selected to carry the initial ministores. The stores will stock only the fastest selling liquors and wines and will be dependent on walk-in customers and high volume sales, Price said.

The reason Iowa City was selected is because the store there is the second busiest in the state and it really isn't as well located as we'd like," Price said. 'We want to get the mini-store in closer to more foot traffic, maybe even in the downtown area."

Iowa City area - one at 1922 Keokuk St. near K-Mart and one in Lantern Park in Coralville. Iowa City had a downtown liquor store located between College and Burlington Streets on Linn Street that closed in 1971 during urban renewal.

There are two liquor stores in the shown interest in submitting bids. The state is looking for a building in the 1,500 to 2,500 square foot range, he said

> "Iowa City is different from most metropolitan areas because most existing businesses are successful and there isn't a lot of retail space available," Fine said. "Price, rental rate, terms of the lease and energy considerations as well as location are important. Ideally, the location will be downtown or to the north-northeast of downtown.'

James Tucker, owner of Tuck's Place, 201 N. Linn, met with Fine last Wednesday to discuss that location. "I thought this would be an ideal place for it," Tucker said. Bill Mihalopoulos, owner of the Best Steak House, 127 Iowa Ave., has also shown interest. Price said he hopes the six ministores will have average annual sales of about $300,000, but the Iowa City store should do much better. Jay Kinney, manager of the Iowa City liquor store, said sales there exceeded $3 million last year.

ferent style, somewhat contemporary," Sofranko said. He will offer customers a variety of table settings, including high-backed booths and up-holstered tables and chairs. Sofranko said the restaurant's decor will coincide with the building's contemporary appearance. The building, which was designed by the local architectural firm Hansen Lind Meyer, will feature an aluminum front with blue-tinted glass.

"THE DESIGN strives to synthesize the older style of the block with contemporary architecture," William Nusser Jr., director of marketing and advertising for WGN Companies, said. Nusser Sr. said he is concerned with the possibility that the block will burn again. The WGN Companies Building is being constructed without "any flam-mable structural materials," he said.

In 1979, Sofranko started the Cafe Deluxe restaurant in Decorah, and sold it two years later. He moved to Boulder, Colo., where he worked in a number of restaurants in varying capacities.

"Students really work well in a restaurant," Sofranko said. "Quite a bit" of his staff will be comprised of students; 30 to 50 people will be hired, he said. Sofranko said he hopes to open the restaurant by mid-fall, in time to greet students returning to school. Nusser Sr. said he anticipates the building's construction will be completed by Oct.

The chairman of the UI Lecture Committee says the poor publicity the group has received as a result of its cosponsorship of the Phyllis Schlafly lecture is unwarranted

Kurt Rosencrants, a UI senior who stepped in as lecture committee chairman at the beginning of the second semester, said he would handle the Schlafly affair differently if given another chance.

"Originally the lecture committee was going to co-sponsor the event with STAF but it was understood they were going to handle most of the arrangements," Rosencrasts said.

But Rosencrants said STAF President Jerry Taylor handled the planning of the event poorly and the lecture committee was forced to straighten things out:

"With Jerry Taylor in charge, it soon became apparent that things were very disorganized and it became necessary for us to become more involved than had been planned."

ROSENCRANTS SAID he would have rather seen the Schlafly lecture set up in a debate format.

"I would have liked to seen it as a debate with Schlafly giving a speech and then had at least one person with an opposing view give a rebuttal," Rosencrants sàid. "I feel there would have been a lot less hostility from the audience that way.'

Another part of Schlafly's visit Rosencrants said he would have avoided is the scheduling of the press conference at the Women's Resource and Activity Center which he labeled "a publicity stunt"

Rosencrants, refused to comment on how much money the lecture committee had spent on the Schlafly lecture, saying "it's a lot less than most people would think." However, Tom Fesenmeyer, who acts as an adviser to the committee, said the group spent "about $1,250" on her visit.

With the exception of what he ter-med as the "Schlafly flap," Rosen-crants said he believed the lecture committee had given the UI students

"more than their money's worth" in the second semester.

"THIS SEMESTER we sponsored or co-sponsored 14 different speakers which is more than usually come here in an entire year," Rosencrants said. He mentioned Edmund Muskie, Dan Pastorini, John Stockwell, William Taylor and Robert Musil as among the more successful and notable speakers that spoke here during the past semester.

'The committee tried to line up a diverse selection of speakers and 1 think we were very successful in doing so," Rosencrants said.

He pointed to "the first discussion of the nuclear build-down proposal outside of Washington" as one of the highlights of the semester.

In looking toward next year, Rosencrants said no firm commitments have yet been made, but a list of possible speakers include former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, Tom Brokaw, Vincent Price and Kurt Vonnegut. Rosencrants also said the hosting of an important debate on nuclear arms control that would "attract Time, Newsweek and all three networks" is being studied by the committee. Rosencrants said the future attraction of important lecturers to the UI will depend on how much the committee can expand its budget.

"I FEEL WE use our money more wisely than any other group on campus, but we still have too small of a budget," Rosencrants complained. 'We have a budget of about $38,000 and at Iowa State the lecture committee has a budget of between $56,000 and $60,000."

However, Fesenmeyer said, next year the committee will receive a substantially larger budget. "This year the lecture committee received 50 cents per student each semester in mandatory student fees and next year it will receive 75 cents for each student every semester."

Rosencrants said the raise wouldn't be large enough. "I don't want to sound cheap or anything, but that is not going to be enough money.'

Fair rent coalition elects officers; seeks 2,500 voters to sign petition

By Allen Seidner Staff Writer

Metro

The Iowa City Fair Rent Coalition formally organized Tuesday night, by electing two of the group's founding members as its officers.

After lengthy discussion, the group decided it needed a person to take charge of its meetings and work with the governmental units.

"The government we'll be dealing with ... doesn't understand decentralized groups," Don Doumakes, 27, said. He then ran unopposed and was elected the coalition's chairman.

Coalition member Joe Marron proposed "that candidates for public office refrain from running for a coalition office." He was referring to Jim Schwab, a member of the Citizen Party who may run for a position on the Iowa City Council next fall.

SCHWAB SAID he is "about 95 percent sure" he will announce his candidacy for councilman sometime this summer. When Esmail Bonakdarian suggested he serve as the coalition's treasurer until announcing his candidacy, Schwab accepted the nomination and was elected the group's treasurer.

The group spent a good part of the 90minute meeting deciding the length of time that should be spent on collecting signatures, and how to inform the other coalition members of the next meeting.

After some discussion, Doumakes said there was "a consensus that we want to finish the petitioning by next week."

The coalition is trying to gather the signatures of 2,500 Iowa City voters - the number needed to put the measure before the Iowa City Council.

Doumakes said it is important for both the petitioner and the person signing the petition be registered to vote. Coalition members will be armed with voter registration cards to sign up any petition supporters who are not registered voters.

NEWLY-ELECTED CHAIRMAN Doumakes said. "I think we will" have 2,500 signatures on the rent control petition by next week's meeting. "If people want to work hard enough on it, it can be done."

"I think it's predictable they'll turn it (rent control legislation) down,' Doumakes said. "(Mayor) Mary Neuhauser is on record as being against it and (Councilman) John Balmer is adamantly opposed to it.

"Because conservatives and moderates like Neuhauser control the council, it's difficult to do something progressive in this town using the city council," Doumakes said.

Although only 15 people attended Tuesday night's meeting at the Public Library, Jim Schwab said it would be "skeptical to say that attendance at meetings shows the potential of our group."

In attempt to soothe feelings with the Federal Aviation Administration, the city will be sending material to FAA officials in the next week to convince them that Iowa City supports its airport.

City Attorney Robert Jansen told the Iowa City Council Monday that he, along with Airport Manager Fred Zehr, city Planning and Program Development Director Don Schmeiser and County Planner Jud TePaske, have developed several recommendations to try to save nearly $2 million in federal grants.

FAA officials told the city two weeks ago that unless the city stopped construction on a residential development near the Iowa City Airport, its funding would be in danger. Of immediate concern to city officials is nearly $300,000 in grants the airport was to get this summer.

Jansen said the council is "not seriously looking" at obtaining a court injunction to stop construction on the project, or considering purchasing the property.

THE CITY IS hoping to "persuade the FAA to be assured that the city and Airport Commission will be in compliance in the future," Jansen said.

The city, Jansen said, should adopt a resolution indicating its support for the airport and amend the airport's overlay zone to restrict residential developments in the airport's clear zone. He also suggested sending a document stating the mayor of Iowa City and chair of the Airport Commission will review airport plans every year. Jansen said the city should also get a clearer picture of what kind of developments the FAA objects to. "We have been unable to find them in any clear statement so far.'

He added that the city should check building permits issued to developments near the airport to make sure everything is in compliance with FAA regulations.

The council agreed to Jansen's suggestions and will be adopting a resolution stating its support of the airport next Tuesday.

The UI Collegiate Associations Council allocated approximately $160,000 to UI student organizations at their Monday night meeting.

Only representatives from a few student groups attended the meeting to request more funding than the CAC's Budget and Auditing Committee had recommended they receive.

The CAC members allocated more than $38,000 to themselves, and approximately $28,000 was given to the various UI college organizations, members of which make up the CAC.

In other business, the new CAC executives - President Tom Palmer and Vice President Sharon McMulin - who will begin their terms in the summer session, nominated their treasurer and executive associate. Jeff Devitt, CAC treasurer for the past term, was elected to continue in his position through the summer.

HOWEVER, Sue Droessler. CAC executive associate for the past term, was nominated but was not elected by CAC members. Karol Sole, who finishes her term as CAC president this semester, was nominated and elected after Droessler was defeated.

Members were unhappy with Droessler's performance as CAC executive associate and wanted to see a new person in the position.

Oglevie jury starts deliberation

DAVENPORT, Iowa (UPI) - Andrew Jon Oglevie stood calmly beside his chair Monday, watching an eightwoman, four-man jury file into its chambers to decide whether Oglevie was the hitman in a 1979 murder-forprofit scheme.

Oglevie, 25, of Rockford, Ill., was charged with first-degree murder in the shotgun slaying of Ady F. Jensen, 39, at the West Branch, Iowa, farmhouse of Jensen's parents on April 14, 1979.

Assistant Iowa Attorney General James Ramey told jury members in closing arguments that their verdict would depend solely upon whether they believed the prosecution's key witnesses - Jensen's wife and her two friends.

Jeanne Jensen and Robert and Judy Kern, who are all serving various Scalise said in a voice that alternated between whispers and fire-andbrimstone Ramey attacked the alibi that Oglevie's family members have provided during the 9-day-old trial. Two brothers testified Oglevie was at a tire store they worked in at almost precisely the time of the murder.

motivation of brotherly love, family love. Baby brother is on trial ... I think any of us would be tempted to recall to our brother's advantage. Scalise tried to raise the possibility that Bob Kern and two other men -State Rep. Phillip Brammer and Marine recruiter Ed Sewell - had the motive and opportunity to kill Jensen.

EVIDENCE PRESENTED during the trial showed Jeanne Jensen had been having an affair with Brammer a month before the murder and Brammer encouraged Bob Kern to write out a $50,000 insurance policy for Ady Jen-

Kern and Mrs. Jensen applied for the policy about a week before Jensen was killed. Ed Sewell reportedly forged Jensen's signature on the application

"He's the fellow who never appeared here to tell us where he was," Scalise said of Brammer, who was elected to the Iowa legislature in 1982. "And he's the one who ultimately gets the girl (Mrs. Jensen).'

Ramey told the jury that Brammer and Sewell may not be "innocent little lambs" in this case. But he said the jury's sole duty was to decide the guilt or innocence of Oglevie - not anyone else

"There may or may not be other juries in the future," he said. "That is not the question ... He (Scalise) is blowing smoke. It's a big, smoke screen defense."

"I think as long as it's not detrimental to the university or the state, and it doesn't sound like this is, I would see no harm to it," Richey said. "If it aided in keeping a person of talent, which I think Lute Olson is ... that would be fine," Richey said. Doderer said while she believes the

"Maybe the NCAA regulations ought to be looked at. If you can't buy kids, you shouldn't be able to buy coaches anymore either," Doderer said.

But Lloyd-Jones said the issue is one that transcends rules and regulations of Iowa. "It's kind of a larger question for all of society.

"The only virtue that the university has is the winning athletic program, to many of the legislators," Lloyd-Jones said. "If it weren't for the winning football and basketball teams, w wouldn't have gotten as much (funding) as we did out of the legislature.

"It's a fact of life," she said. "They value athletic prowess ... over academic excellence."

mutually verifiable freeze on nuclear weapons is "reasonably hopeful" in the House, but "very, very dim" in the Senate.

Remington also stressed the great time lag inherent in these reports and why the UI's optimism over faculty salary ranking is usually quick to wither.

With the freeze on regents faculty salaries being offered by Gov. Terry Branstad, Remington said any gains made by the UI over the last few years will be "wiped out."

The real problem is that "only the regents university faculties are being asked to live with a zero percent increase" while educators in other sectors, private colleges and community colleges, as well as primary and secondary schools, are getting more money, Remington said.

He charged that the state universities are being saddled with "a disproportionate and unfair sacrifice," by the Iowa legislature.

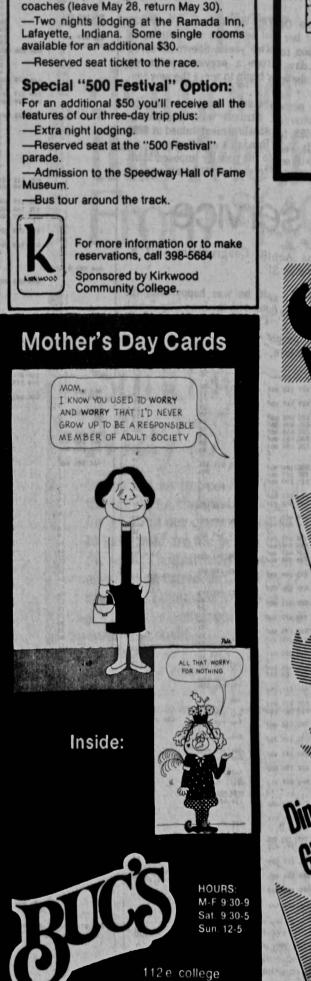

"I'm pleased K-through-12 is doing well. I think that's very appropriate, but our needs are at least as great," said Donald Heistad, UI professor of internal medicine and former faculty senate president. THE PROFESSORS agree that in the face of rising enrollments, inordinate demands are made on the UI faculty. "We are being asked to do more for the same price," Burke said. Cater adds the hardship of run down facilities and equipment the faculty must put up with. "We are being paid less for teaching more with decreasing facilities."

The survey showed the UI in second place for average salaries paid associate professors and in fourth place for average salaries paid assistant professors.

Cater said in many departments in-cluding his own, "salaries for incoming professors are pushed up at the ex-pense of older faculty."

That time again

Since the 1984 general election isn't much more than 500 days away, spring 1983 has naturally been the time of decade for Democratic presidential aspirants officially to announce the intentions that most of the country has been aware of for at least a year. The primary purpose of the "official announcement" seems to be the brief splash of attendant publicity.

This contrasts sharply with the tactic being employed by the Republican incumbent, who has mastered the art of the unofficially announced candidacy. For the past year-and-a-half President Reagan has hinted, often through intermediaries like Nevada Sen. Paul Laxalt, that indeed he either will or will not run for re-election - while the media have given such meaningless speculation as much attention as various Democrats have received for their official declarations.

Current indications are that Reagan will run. His recent direct criticism of Walter Mondale was obviously given because Mondale is the current Democratic front-runner. And last week Reagan made another step toward official candidacy by announcing during an interview with The Houston Post that "if" he chooses to run George Bush will again be his running mate. Bush has never been particularly popular with the most conservative element of the Republican Party, and Reagan has admitted he was reluctant to choose Bush in 1980. That Reagan has made Bush the official vice-presidential candidate even before offering himself as the official presidential candidate suggests a willingness to run on the past record of his administration, rather than blaming scapegoats for his administration's failures while himself accepting all credit for successes. A president is ultimately responsible for the activities of all his appointees. We hope Reagan will keep his team intact for his reelection effort, retaining even such controversial figures as James Watt, so that voters in 1984 will know precisely who controlled the entire record of the last four years - and can accept or reject a repeat performance by Reagan on that informed basis.

N IOWA, this heart-of-America state that is so crucial to America's political primaries process, whites in the audience ask with some anxiety: "What does the election of a black mayor in Chicago mean in terms of future political power?"

They hear the truth. The victory of Harold Washington in one of the most racially-polarized cities in the land will not be lost on blacks in New York, Houston, Detroit, Columbus, Ohio and other cities. Much too late, black Americans have realized that the power of the ballot is infinitely more meaningful to their well-being than formless rhetoric about "black power." So there will be many hundreds of thousands more blacks casting votes for president in 1984 than ever was the case before.

But here in Iowa, where black people are still relatively scarce, a black man raises the question whether the time has come for a black presidential candidate, a black U.S. president like the Rev. Jesse Jackson of Chicago's Operation PUSH.

He hears the truth. Snowflakes are doing better in Arkansas in April than Jackson or any other black will do in a presidential race in this society at this time. The issue is not whether "it is time to have a black president"; it is how black people can best use their newly-recognized political power.

JESSE JACKSON clearly wants to be a presidential candidate. So does the District of Columbia's representative in Congress, Walter Fauntroy. So do some other black politicians who have maneuvered to cut the shrewd and hyperactive Jackson off at the pass.

I have weighed the pros and cons for weeks, thinking only in terms of what will best serve the interests of America's blacks and other victims of inequality and oppression. I reached my decision after reading a statement to the press from M. Carl Holman. president of the National Urban Coalition, who struck me as gingerly endorsing a candidacy by Jackson. "Many blacks feel they have not fared too well at the hands of white (Democratic) candidates," Holman writes.

The proposition is granted. But until the Republicans offer an acceptable alternative, or a black candidate has some chance of being elected president, blacks must use their power to ensure that whoever moves into the

As an inspirer of blacks to register and vote, Jackson is peerless and invaluable. As a political candidate, he would be of minimal, even negative

Jackson cannot be unmindful of the fact that Harold Washington, the new mayor of Chicago, felt it necessary to put some distance between himself and the Operation PUSH preacher who stirred uneasiness among whites - or that W. Wilson Goode, the black candidate for mayor of Philadelphia, felt a need to deny that Jackson had come to that city at his invitation. Goode knows that to win he needs white votes, and while he won't be an Uncle Tom he wants nothing incendiary associated with his campaign.

LET ME EMPHASIZE as forcefully as I can that Jackson has been the leader in getting blacks to register and become a powerful political force on behalf of social justice in America. The question is how to use that force most

Is there reason to believe that a black candidate can run the course of the primaries and win so many delegates that he can go to the Democratic convention and "broker" it - literally saying to the white candidates: "Whichever of you signs on the dotted line a pledge to support the black agenda will get my delegates!" Or is it more likely that in key primary states the black candidate will win so many liberal votes that the white candidate who already in his heart supports the black agenda will be wiped out, leaving the Democratic nomination to someone who will treat with benign neglect 27 million black Americans, along with Hispanics, other minorities and women? I have thought hard about these questions. I conclude that Jesse Jackson ought to continue what he is doing so well, and that newly-powerful blacks ought to show their muscle in mainstream politics in 1984.

HERE IN CEDAR FALLS I heard one of Holman's chief arguments: "A black presidential candidate will be able to articulate and put before the nation the black agenda." But Jackson, NAACP Executive Director Ben Hooks, the Congressional Black Caucus and many other blacks have spelled out the miseries, agonies, hopes and needs of blacks and other minorities in every way they can be stated. There is no reason to believe that the Congress, the white power structure, will pay more heed to the advice of Jacksonthe-presidential-candidate than they have to Jackson-the-civil-rights-

Not what it seems

Could it be? Progressive zeal echoing in an unenlightened chamber of the Reagan administration? Had one arrived late to a speech given by Assistant Attorney General William Reynolds at Amherst College Friday, one might have believed it true.

"If history has taught us any lesson at all, it is that the use of race to justify treating individuals differently ... can never be legitimate," said Reynolds, who heads the Justice Department's Civil Rights Division.

Those words would hold a humanitarian ring - until one had heard the purpose for which they were uttered: justification of the administration's opposition to affirmative action policies.

In that light, they become double-edged - on the one side appealing to the most liberal sense of fairness, on the other hacking at the most salient effort in the last decade to right years of discrimination.

"Racial classifications are wrong - morally wrong - and ought not to be tolerated in any form or for any reason," Reynolds urged his audience. He reasoned that the absense of racial quotas in the schoolroom and workforce would make employers "colorblind" an easy assumption for a middle-aged white male who is already holding down a high-paying government job.

What Reynolds does not appear to savvy is how each day Americans prove just how color-conscious they are ... without any help from affirmative action policies.

Within one year, in Iowa alone, Saudi Arabian students have fled a town's "hospitality," people dressed as Ku Klux Klan members have marched under the clear light of the sun, and a man who once published racist jokes has procured a spot on a human rights commission. With blatant incidents occurring at such frequency, what would happen in the much more subtle world of hiring and firing if there were no safeguards?

No, Americans aren't colorblind, and won't become that way in the absense of employment quotas. Reynolds, using words that vibrate with admirable ideals, would give many employers the chance to notice as much color as they so desire.

A friend remembers 'B' Crabbe

By Irwin Levin

ONALD REAGAN has been called a "B" movie star. He was not. Whatever the quality of his movies, most were made at major studios with liberal budgets. A true "B" movie star - probably the best "B" movie star has died at the age of 75. His name was Buster Crabbe and he was my friend. Buster became my friend after I helped arrange for him to take part in the UI's 1973 Homecoming activities. I had the opportunity to introduce him at his talk at the Union and host a reception for him afterwards. We had been corresponding and visiting each other since that time.

His shared recollections of the Golden Age of Sports - he swam in both the 1928 and 1932 Olympic Games and of the early hectic days of moviemaking are now part of my own memories. They'll stay with me even though it saddens me to know that I won't ever be able to sit again with Buster in his den and add to the stories Buster played Tarzan, Flash Gordon, and Buck Rogers in movie serials and played similar larger-than-life heroes in scores of feature films - all of them made for pre-TV Saturday matinee audiences (but later shown countless times on TV) and all of them made on a shoestring budget. Buster had the physical presence to be believable as comic strip heroes, and when he had the rare chance to deliver meaningful dialogue, he was suprisingly convincing. Buster never got the chance he yearned for to work in serious "A" pic-BUSTER'S LIFE itself reads a bit like a B-movie script. Young man wins Olympic gold medal, signs movie contract, marries college sweetheart. Like many B movies, the ending was rather abrupt but in may respects a happy one. One week before his death, Buster and his wife Virginia celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary. Just five minutes before his death he was on the telephone arranging to appear on an arthritis charity telethon. Physical fitness was a way of life for Buster, and he tried to share it with others through the books he wrote in his later years and his many personal appearances.

On many occasions I tried to convince Buster that he should be proud of his work in B movies. In my own family three generations enjoyed his performances; they were part of our growing up. Astronauts and movie producers like George Lucas readily acknowledge the influence of his work on their own careers. It was part of their growing up too. I'd like to think that Buster eventually got the message and it provided him with gratification and self-fulfillment. So, thanks and goodbye Buster. See you on the late-late show.

Let's be pathetic To the editor:

This letter announces the formation of a new student organization. With luck, we can get together a large enough membership so that we can be recognized by the UI Student Senate. The group, Self-degradation At College, will seek $6.5 billion to be spent organizing asinine student organizations for groups of selfserving college age prepubescents to engage in sick jokes at the expense of the (supposedly) tiny minority that cares about doing useful things with the resources provided by the UI's positive environment. Judging from the level of personal and social maturity shown by a here unnamed student group recently formed, it should be amazingly easy to form groups interested in the suppression of blacks and other non-Caucasion groups, the abuse of women, and certainly - groups dedicated to ignoring the many trifling, unworthy causes such as world poverty, helping people with emotional problems, improving the American education system, and attempting to stave off a nuclear war (to name just a few).

With your help and support, Selfdegradation At College can do all these things and more. Gee, maybe we too can get our pictures on the front page of the DI, so everybody will know just how pathetic we are capable of

Get a job To the editor:

Let March 17 be noted as an unlucky day for the U.S. Senate. On that day, the Senate passed one of the most useless and self-defeating bills ever to reach Capitol Hill, the $5.1 billion jobs bill. Just when things seem to be turning the corner in the economy and heading in a new direction, the dog of America turns around and eats its own vomit. Shall our federal government forever continue to jump at every whim of its "responsible and mature" citizens?

If you really want to show the government who's smart, get your own job! Say, "Sorry, Ronnie, I don't need your money.'

Unless some citizens take counterinitiative measures, two long-run effects will occur: a compounding of the federal deficit and a false sense of job security for many employed. Douglas Offermann

Washington's first council meeting is upstaged by alderman's revolt

CHICAGO (UPI) — The city council, led by Democratic party chief Ed Vrdolyak, revolted against Mayor Harold Washington Monday, using a parliamentary move to restructure - but not reform - the council's power base.

Washington, presiding at his first council meeting, had asked the city's 50 aldermen to consider a plan to restructure the council's committees. Washington moved to adjourn the meeting, buying time to lobby for support.

But once Washington left the podium, followed by his supporters, Vrdolyak took over, calling for a meeting Washington later termed a "rump session.

Council spectators - many of them Washington supporters thronging to see his first council meeting - pounded on the glass in the enclosed second-story gallery, shouting "Support your mayor" as Vrdolyak took over the meeting.

played little part of Washington's proreform campaign, called the roll and reopened the meeting with 29 of the 50 aldermen voting. The group voted unanimously to pass Vrdolyak's restructuring plan.

Washington, who referred to the reconvened meeting as a "rump session," said it was a "nervous reaction" by aldermen who were afraid of the prospects of reform.

Vrdolyak's changes included proposals to create nine new council committees and increase the power of the chairpersons of those committees. The committee chairs are important politically, as Chicago has a weak-mayor, strong-council form of government.

Under his plan, Vrdolyak surrendered some of his own power, giving up his position as chairman of the powerful Building and Zoning committee, which would be split into two separate committees under his plan.

Washington, who had not presented his own plan, later issued a statement blaming the council uprising on "a few aldermen who have long been opposed to reform in city government.'

The mayor, who was sworn in on Friday, said the members had moved "at breakneck speed" to avoid losing their power, "with no regard to prudence." Washington said, "The rump session called after the official adjournment was illegal and actions taken at the session have no official standing whatsoever."

After the votes on Vrdolyak's plans, Alderman Marion Volini - a Washington supporter - returned to the chambers. She said the reconvened session "pit neighborhoods against neighborhoods, race against race. What we are doing today will only compound that."

"The commander-in-chief in Washington's day commanded an army of thousands. Today millions are at the beck and call of the president, and the balance of life on this planet depends ultimately on his control and use of nuclear force.

'Even more unsettling is the fact that decisions, for example, on letting loose the retaliatory might of America in response to a Soviet challenge, may have to be made within minutes," he said.

Data satellite for Spacelab passes rocket firing test

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The $100 million data relay satellite that was left in an abnormally low orbit four weeks ago fired two little rockets Monday, demonstrating it can move to the proper position during a rescue attempt later this month.

Space agency spokesman James Elliott said the test was supposed to last an hour, but was halted 181/2 minutes early because one of four stabilization rockets overheated. He said that problem could be easily fixed.

The rescue rehearsal was an important step in the effort to get the automated orbiting communications station in operation in time to permit the Sept. 30 flight of Spacelab in a space shuttle. The satellite is needed to relay scientific data from the Spacelab to Earth.

Elliott said project officials, monitoring the test firing at the Goddard Space Flight Center, were 'very satisfied" with the performance of the 21/2-ton tracking and data relay satellite.

"ENGINEERS WHO reviewed the data that we have are confident that the communications satellite can be moved to its proper geosynchronous orbit," Elliott said.

Because the test did not last the full hour, Elliott said officials were considering a second firing Thursday before proceeding with orbit change maneuvers Sunday.

The satellite, the largest and most advanced communications spacecraft ever launched, was over the eastern Pacific Ocean when a radio signal was transmitted from Goldstone, Calif., to ignite the two rockets at 9:22 a.m. Iowa time.

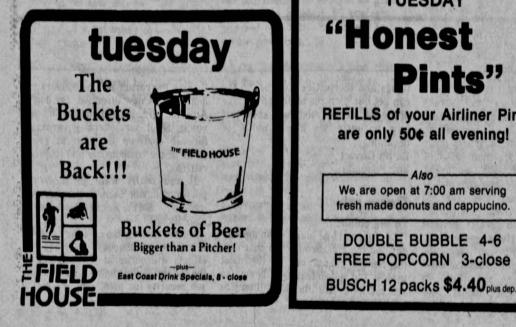

The rockets were allowed to fire for 411/2 minutes until controllers at White Sands, N.M., ordered them shut down because one of the stabilization jets had reached the maximum permissible temperature.

ELLIOTT SAID the little rocket fired only occasionally, causing it to overheat. He said if it had operated more frequently the flow of hydrazine fuel would have kept it cooler.

The satellite was carried into an abnormally low orbit April 4 by the space shuttle Challenger. A large two-section rocket was to have propelled it into a 22,300-mile high circular orbit a few hours later, but the rocket misfired, leaving the satellite in an egg-shaped orbit ranging from 13,566 to 21,977 miles high.

At the 22,300-mile altitude, the satellite's speed will match Earth's rotation and the craft will remain over Brazil, ready to act as a radio gobetween for spacecraft in orbit and Earth.

NASA had hoped to launch a second relay satellite in August to provide almost continuous relay coverage for the Spacelab mission, but the rocket tug trouble that left the first satellite in the wrong orbit is not expected to be resolved in time to launch the second this summer.

> SCHLICHTER APPROACHED federal authorities for help last month after he lost a reported $389,000 to four alleged Baltimore-area bookies. The four were indicted by a federal grand jury in Columbus, Ohio, April 7 on Schlichter's testimony.

The paper said it learned from the than they anticipated," source that several of Schlichter's teammates expressed concern about him remaining with the team.

They are fearful of being on the field with him because of what he did," the source said.

Some of the other players were said to be "hard-core gamblers," while others were "just some ex-college jocks who liked the aura and excitement of betting and found themselves drawn into this mess more seriously quoted the source.

INITIAL REPORTS on Schlichter said he did his betting on basketball, but the Plain Dealer said it appears some of the others did bet on football games.

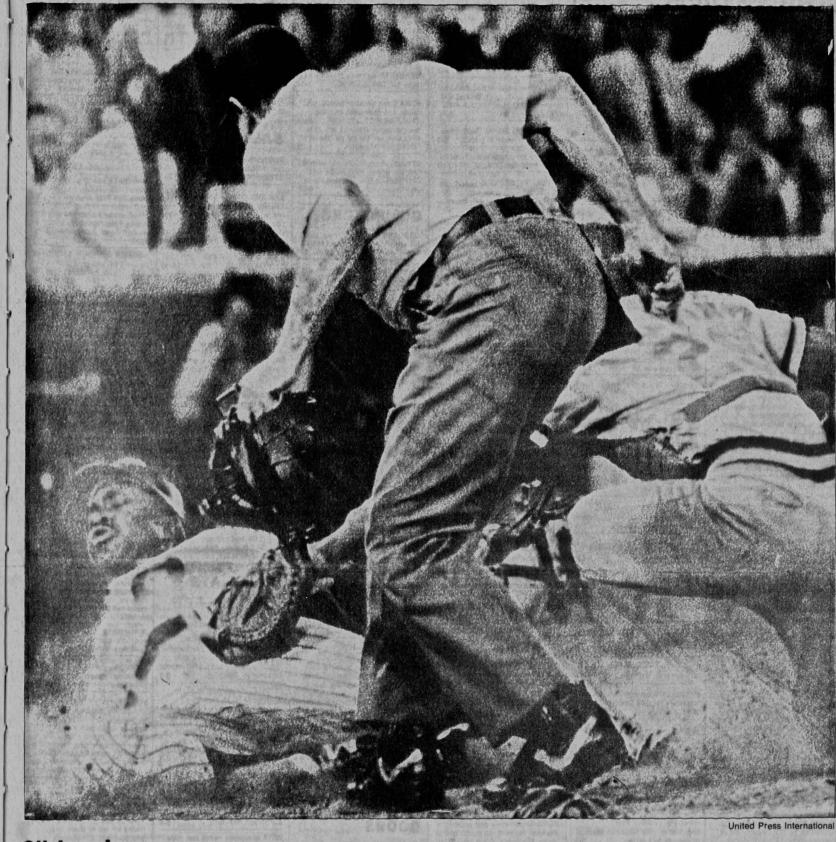

"That's a major part of the in-vestigation," said the source. "They (investigators) are going wherever this leads them. All of the tentacles will be investigated to see if there is anything more involved."

Broncos acquire Elway in trade

DENVER (UPI) - The Denver Broncos Monday night acquired All-America quarterback John Elway, the top player selected in last week's draft who refused to play for Baltimore.

"It was something I did not expect to happen," the Stanford quarterback said at a late-night news conference at Bronco headquarters. "So far not one thing that I expected to happen happened." In exchange for Elway, the Broncos traded offensive lineman Chris Hinton of Northwestern - a player they chose in the draft and No. 2 quarterback Mark Herrmann.

Rosborough out as lowa top assistant

By Melissa Isaacson Assistant Sports Editor

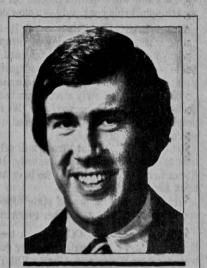

Former Iowa Assistant Coach Jim Rosborough, who served nine years under the direction of Lute Olson, now at Arizona, was informed by Iowa Coach George Raveling by phone from Pullman, Wash., Monday, that he would not be retained as an assistant on Raveling's staff. Iowa Athletic Director Bump Elliott did-confirm, however, that Rosborough would have a job at Iowa in a position "to be determined."

"In the final analysis," Raveling said, "I just didn't know Jim well enough.

Rosborough's appointment on the basketball staff officially ends on June 30th. Asked if he hoped Rosborough would remain at Iowa in some capacity, Elliott said: "I certainly ROSBOROUGH, WHO HAD applied for the head coaching job, said that he would indeed remain in the Iowa athletic department in some capacity. "Our loyalties have always been with the university," Rosborough said Monday night. "I'd prepared myself mentally for not getting the head job and I prepared myself for this," he said. "I think it's important for the students, fans, and all the people who have been involved in the program to know that they have made it just an unbelievable nine years." Raveling, who brought assistant Ron Righter with him from Washington State, said he will fill the remaining two positions on his staff "no later than Friday.

"I'd prepared myself mentally for not getting the head job and I prepared myself for this, savs Jim Rosborough.

Bucks bounce into league final scoring, the Celtics raced to a 12-4

MILWAUKEE (UPI) - Marques Johnson scored 33 points and Sidney Moncrief added 25 Monday night, helping the Milwaukee Bucks defeat the Boston Celtics 107-93 to complete a four-game sweep of an Eastern Conference semifinal series.

The Bucks will meet the Philadelphia 76ers in the Eastern Conference finals.

Boston was led by Larry Bird with 18 points. Cedric Maxwell had 15 and Robert Parish had 12 for the losers. The Bucks had their biggest lead when Junior Bridgeman hit an 18-foot umper late in the third period to make it 67-47. But the Celtics, with Bird and Maxwell doing most of the scoring, closed the gap to 75-63 by the end of the quarter

Boston tied the score early in the second period when Kevin McHale tipped in a Bird missed shot. But the Bucks then went ahead 45-34. The Celtics closed the halftime gap to 46-37 when Danny Ainge scored three points late in the period.

RAVELING SAID three people are still in the running for the two assistant positions and that of the 206 applicants for the jobs, 49 were from head coaches.

"The people still in the running for the jobs are more compatible with my personality and my lifestyle," Ravel-ing said. "Whoever I hire, I have to feel totally comfortable with him.

"From what I know about Jim, he's a tremendous person but until three weeks ago, I didn't even know him. The people who say I should hire Jim have known him for years and years. I cannot base my judgment on what other people's feelings are."

Rosborough, 39, came to Iowa and Olson's staff in 1974 from a teaching and coaching post on Chicago's West Side. Rosborough played basketball at Iowa under Sharm Scheuerman and Ralph Miller, graduating in 1966.

IOWA SOPHOMORE Michael Payne was shocked at the news.

'We all just took it for granted that Coach Rosborough would be named assistant because he's the one we related to the most from the old staff," Payne said. "Everyone is always going into his office to talk with him.

"I'm really disappointed he didn't get it. Heck, everyone around here knows that he's a good recruiter; he knows the Chicago area. All those things were on his side. We felt that there was no way he wouldn't be assistant coach again. But I'm sure Coach Raveling has his reasons and I guess you have to respect his opinion."

When told of the fact that Raveling cited compatibility as one of the criteria he used in making his decision, Payne said: "A person would have to try his darndest not to get along with Coach Rosborough. If the players had to pick who would be our assistant, it would definitely be Coach Rosborough."

Rosborough, who had been director of the Iowa summer basketball camp, said he will still be involved this summer, but on a very limited basis. Taking over much of Rosoborough's duties will be graduate assistant Wade Jones.

Meanwhile, under the Raveling regime, only the managers and players remain from the Olson era. Even Olson's secretary was transferred to a different department.

'This just goes along with all the other shocking news we've heard," Payne said matter-of-factly. "What else can they bring on to shock us?"

Apparently there is another movement within the Oklahoma State wrestling program to oust Coach Tommy Chesboro.

Although Chesboro could not be reached for comment, Oklahoma State Athletic Director Myron Roderick said late Monday he is currently reviewing the program, but said no decision has been made on Chesboro's fate.

"I feel some things need to be done in our wrestling program," Roderick said, "but we have not made a decision yet on what we're going to do."

Iowa Coach Dan Gable, who was approached by Oklahoma State last year, said Monday he is not a candidate - if the job were to open. However, Joe Seay, the coach at California State-Bakersfield, is thought to be a possible

"THERE HAVE BEEN a lot of rumors, but until there is an opening, I can't comment," Seay said. "But if the job were to open up, I'd be interested. "As far as I know, all this going around is just rumors until Coach Chesboro resigns - if he does resign. I wish I could give you more information.

Gable first heard about a possible move from Chuck Kearney, a recruit for a runner-up. Despite that fact, Iowa was courting from Portland, Ore. Kearney signed a national tender Monday with the Oklahoma State. He could not be reached for comment Monday. "He (Kearney) told me that he had one phone call from Seay recruiting him for Bakersfield," Gable said. "The next call he got from Seay was one pushing him toward Oklahoma State

"THE SITUATION IS probably a bit complicated right now. But if it's going to be done, what are they waiting on?" The Cowboys finished second in the national tournament last month, finishing with 102 points, the most ever Cowboy supporters long to regain the national title, which the school has won 27 times in 52 years - more than any other school.

"THE PEOPLE HERE want us to win," Roderick said. "I'm not convinced Iowa has all the secrets to winning the national title."

Roderick, a former Cowboy coach, has been a critic of the program in the past. He lead Oklahoma State to seven national titles in 12 years, but left the post to enter private business in 1970. But since becoming athletic director just five weeks ago, Roderick has tempered his harshness.

In an article that appeared The Daily Iowan on March 16, 1982, Roderick was quoted as saying, "Our program is in bad shape. The alumni have been trying to make a change for several years. The fans here are hungry. We're not even in contention for the national title.

Oklahoma State approached Gable about coming to Stillwater last year in an "unofficial capacity," and Roderick was a believed to be behind the possible move.

Seay, who grew up in Oklahoma, has coached Bakersfield to seven Division II national titles in the last eight years. His 11-year record at the school is 117-46-2.

Mary Hartman, (played by Louise Lasser) and Dennis Foley, (Bruce Soloman) are main characters in "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman," WQAD-8, cable channel 19, is rerunning the soap opera/comedy nightly at 12:30 a.m. and 1 a.m.

Entertainment today

Music

MTV faves Modern English prove that they're more than twodimensional tonight, as they stop by the Crow's Nest for a one-night stand. The group, currently riding the popularity of their "I Melt With You" single and video, is touring in support of their new After the Snow LP. Tickets are $7 at the door; show begins at 9 p.m

• The UI Kantorei, under the direction of Scott McCoy, will present a concert at 8 tonight in Harper Hall. The Kantorei will perform vocal material by des Prez, Bach and Schumann. The concert is free and open to the public.

At the Bijou

The Bijou may not raise Kane, but their Orson Welles double bill tonight is plenty exciting itself.

Mullavey), her bratty daughter Heather (Claudia Lamb), her dingbat mother Martha (Dody Goodman), her choleric father George (Philip Bruns), her nympho sister (Debralee Scott) and her kind but touched Grandpa Larkin (Victor Kilian).

As the series progresses, the Hartmans and their neighbors, the Haggers (Graham Jarvis, Mary Kay Place), go through kidnappings, homosexual affairs, paralysis, terrorists, crooked evangelists, lustful social workers, adultery and, finally, the collapse of everything they believe in. No show was ever so frightening and so funny at the same time.

For those who do remember "MH." it's another chance to see one of the best repertory casts in TV history (including, aside those mentioned above, Dabney Coleman, Martin Mull, Bruce Solomon, Salome Jens, Ed Begley, Jr., Susan Browning, Oliver Clark, Howard Hesseman and dozens more) at work with the best idea its creators ever had. And for those who lived in eastern Iowa, it's a chance to see what happened after what was then WMT-2 yanked the show off the air when a character mouthed the disgusting, filthy, obscene word "clitoris." We all make mistakes, but ... 12:30 and 1 a.m., WQAD-8 (cable-19). • Tonight on "St. Elsewhere": The always-troubled and troublesome White (Terence Knox) is accused of a drug theft; the sometimes-troubled and never-troublesome Auschlander (Norman Lloyd) dukes it out with some jerk; Craig's (William Daniels) possibly-troublesome son gets a high from medicine that isn't related to the joy of healing; Morrison's (David Morse) wife goes into labor. 9 p.m., KWWL-7.

Cookie-mania invades lowa City

By Brad Patten Special to The Daily Iowan

HEY MAKE you happy." "They're a nice little round shape and you can hold them with one hand." "I never eat a whole one because it's bad luck.'

That's how Iowa City residents describe their fondness for one of the town's hottest selling snacks - the cookie. Everyday downtown cookie connoisseuers bite into over 3000 of the fresh-baked little comestibles, which are available in over two dozen varieties from six downtown merchants.

'It's just phenomenal to me." Therese Lohmeier, a clerk at Things & Things & Things, said of Iowa City's cookie-crazed consumers. "We sell more of the chocolate chip cookies than anything else in the store."

Jane O'Brien, owner of Cookies & More in the Old Capitol Center, said that business is so good that she's already had to install a second oven to accommodate the hundreds of cookie

Food

cravers who come to her counter every day. She said she's selling 150 to 200 dozen cookies a day, with the everpopular chocolate chip cookie accounting for 30 percent of her business. ALL VARIETIES of cookies at Michael's, also located in the Old Capitol Center, are selling "phenomenally well," owner Michael Jones reported

It's difficult to gauge just how widespread Iowa City's cookie craze is, since nobody knows how many "Cookie Monsters" stalk the downtown area

One thin cookie craver, Lynda Field, an undergraduate in psychology at the UI, admitted that she consumes up to a dozen cookies during a "really stressful week."

"It's a positive reinforcement," Field said. "Today I bought myself a cookie because I decided to go to class on a sunny day."

Robert Fink, an undergraduate in biomedical engineering, says he buys between 20 and 30 cookies a week.

"THEY'RE GOOD, that's all I want to say," Fink said in between bites on one of two chocolate chip cookies he held in front of Cookies & More.

Most Iowa City residents, however, probably stick to the more strict cookie diet held by Kate Sparks, a graduate student in counseling, who said she buys only about three cookies week.

"I don't like to get in the habit of eating cookies. But you have to crack once in a while," Sparks said with a smile before she took a bite out of her chocolate chip cookie.

Of course, some Iowa City cookie lovers won't settle for anything less than homemade.

Hilary Siebert, a graduate student in English at the UI, said he's forced to bake his own cookies because none of the downtown cookie venders sell cookies with artificial chocolate chips. "All these health food nuts have ruined it for us," Siebert said.

Just about everybody has a differen explanation for the cookie's popularity here

"IT'S A TREAT. It's fairly inexpensive. Most people associate it with childhood," Cookies & More's O'Brien said.

"Cookies mean everything good don't you think?" asked Barb "Cookie" Laughlin, who sold cookies out of The Cookie Wagon in Black Hawk Minipark last year.

Laughlin said she doesn't think lowa City's cookie craze is a passing fad. "] think the day we're eating pills for dinner we'll still be eating cookies," she said.

But John Higgins, co-manager of the New Pioneer Cooperative, which selfs cookies for the reviled "health food nuts," isn't quite so optimistic about the fate of the cookie. He compared the development of the cookie to the development of nuclear weapons.

"It takes clever people to build a nuke, but foolish people, too," Higging warned. "It's the same with the cookie.

Shields to pursue academics at Princeton

PRINCETON, N.J. (UPI) - Actress Brooke Shields told Princeton University she will attend the Ivy League college beginning in September, the school's admissions office said Monday.

"Her letter was postmarked April 29, and was received this morning," said spokeswoman Dot Lupichuck

The actress "will enter Princeton in the fall with some 1,100 other members of the Class of 1987," a statement said

Shields, 17, has appeared in several controversial movie roles, including a child prostitute in Pretty Baby in 1979 and has been a high-fashion model since childhood.

In March she lost a lawsuit in New York where she tried to block publication of nude photographs taken when she was 10 years old. Photographer Gary Gross was given the right to sell the photographs as long they were not used for pornographic purposes.

First up is The Stranger, a 1946 thriller with Orson as a Nazi war criminal trying to escape the persistent sleuthing of a police detective (Edward G. Robinson). The two, along with the Nazi's innocent and psychologically brutalized wife (Loretta Young), end up turning a quiet college town into a Magritte nightmare. 7 p.m.

• Then comes Welles' version of Othello, a patently bizarre screen translation of Shakespeare's tragedy. Working without funds, sets or editing equipment for much of the picture, Welles pieces together an Othello so ragged and rambunctious that it rips more proper, reverential treatments to shreds. 8:45 p.m.

Television

Fernwood fans: If you don't have cable now, go out and get it today WQAD-8 (cable 19) is beginning this week to rerun our beloved "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman."

For those too young to remember "MH," this is one of Norman Lear's two truly great contributions to television ("MH" spinoff "Fernwood Tonight" was the other) - a mixture of soap opera, satire and surreal comedy, the sum of which exceeded, at least for one year, the substantial total of its parts. The story centers around Mary

Hartman (Louise Lasser), a confused middle-class housewife of Fernwood, Ohio, whose struggle with the waxy yellow buildup on her kitchen floor is almost as desperate as those with her philandering husband Tom (Greg Lemmon does his usual tortured middle-aged-man-on-the-flying-trapeze shtick; Spacek is wonderful as ever; both were Oscar nominees.
