Remington seen as unresponsive

By Susan Stewart

Members of the American Association of University Professors at the University of Iowa have accused Assistant Secretary of State Thomas Enders of working against the U.S. government's policy toward Nicaragua.

In a personal letter to the secretary, six AAUP instructors contended such legislation unfairly ties the hands of the president in the event of guerrilla warfare opposing the Sandinistas.

Assistant Secretary of State Thomas Enders met in a closed session with the Boland and Rep. Zablocki, who signed by Reagan to become law.

Remington.

Congressional sources say they are likely to be discussed in a similar bill but took no position.

The purpose of such legislation is to prevent any financial assistance to the Sandinistas.

David Caar, AAUP president, recently discovered the reservations with Remington, "It's a question, saylng, 'If we're doing is keeping the president in the proper ' - apparently referring to the president in the event of guerrilla warfare opposing the Sandinistas.

Remington, however, refused to discuss the case if his identity was not revealed.

"If you're going to ask questions, you have to answer them," Boland said.

Inactive dam may become a hydro-electric generator

By Mike Hafford

The Coralville dam, now used in conjunction with the existing generating plant at First Avenue in Coralville, is being considered for conversion by the Johnson County Board of Supervisors and the Coralville City Council.

The dam, located adjacent to the Iowa River Power Co. restaurant, was said to be the conservation board's top priority this week.

According to Jed DiLori, director of the conservation board, the dam would not cost a million dollars for the initial funding, but it has a potential revenue area by being sold and a fund set aside for the final plan below it.

At the request of County Supervisor Robert Morey, James-Pinto Bausch, vice president of the Coralville City Council, presented the conservation board a plan to develop the dam as an industrial site.

PISP is an international engineering firm that specializes in the restoration of "dead" dams like the Coralville structure for electrical generation.

THOUGH THE DEAD dam has never been used as a hydro-electric facility, Bausch said it is certain it could generate in the neighborhood of 1.5 mega-watts of electricity -- possibly as high as 2 mega-watts. One area would have to be increased by a new sluice structure, which PISP is offering to perform.

"We would have to remove some members of the existing dam, but with the right machinery and a high-rev engine, I think we could lift the dam and install the necessary equipment," Bausch said.

That would be the necessary step to bring the dam into operation. Before the reconfiguration can take place, the dam would need a new head gate to suit the necessary flow of water.

Vending machines vandalized, robbed

Deanne F. Johnson, 41, Coralville, was reported Friday that two Iowa City Police Department officers were vandalized and an unknown amount stolen from electronic vending machines at the Iowa City public housing complex.

No one was available for comment on the matter.

Police beat

In front of the Win Pfeil Shoe, 700 West Market Blvd., a Caledonia Bank newspaper vendor was also vandalized and SSD was missing from there, according to police.

Douglas: Dennis Beach, 96 N. Marquette St., reported Friday that a pair of glasses was stolen from his car at the corner of 12th and Lape St.

Charlisa M. White, 66 N. Government St., was charged by Iowa City Police Officer Donald Miller with harassment, at the 600 block of Sixth St.

Local police officer named in spectacle

A man said he was stabbed in the body while he was on a bike ride in November and was transported to the city hospital by a resident.

The police department was called to the scene and an investigation began.

The officer was named in the report.

POLICE: News clipping

PISP would need a predevelopment agreement from the conservation board to proceed. In addition, Laug said it was a "sizable agreement." Development costs and repair work would cost in the neighborhood of $2.5 million in insurance, he said. A consultation with a local corporation for the dam would be needed.

The work could be in progress before the dam is converted to a hylainic facility.

Treacherous economic times—perhaps coupled with a newly found parochial spirit—are making it increasingly difficult to attract additional endowments for the various programs at the UI. Unfortunately, the U.S. Reserve Officers' Training Corps (ROTC) program is one such beneficiary.

Lt. Col. Michael Bartelme, head of the UI Military Service Department, said that the number of students enrolling in the Army ROTC program in the past two years has been dramatically in response to the national crisis.

"I definitely feel that the economy is affecting the recruitment of some people," he said. "We have had a slight increase in the number of students who are enrolling in the program, but overall there is a decline in student interest.

"The Army has a lot of very bright, motivated students who could benefit from the educational opportunities that the ROTC program offers."

Bartelme said the department is beginning to see "that being in the service doesn't have to be that bad."

At the UI, enrollment in the Army ROTC program has increased from about 130 to about 150 students in the past two years. Bartelme said that the program is taking advantage of the current economic climate.

"We have experienced a slight increase in the number of students who are interested in enrolling in ROTC," he said. "However, this increase is not as significant as we would like it to be."

Bartelme said that the department is working to attract new students through various outreach programs, such as the "ROTC Goes to High School" program.

"We are doing our best to make the program as attractive as possible to potential students," he said. "We are also working to create a sense of community and camaraderie among our current students, so that they can encourage others to join the program.

"We are also working to improve the overall quality of the program, in order to attract new students."
Report seen as ‘on the mark’

By Robert Grigsby

Washingt.on (UPI) - The nation’s largest teachers union said Wednesday that the report released recently by National Commission on Excellence in Education, which states that education in the United States has deteriorated and it is time for a revolution in the schools, is on track.

“IT’S TIME that high school education and junior high school education be upgraded to the level of the junior college,” Howard Laster, dean of the History Department, said. He said he has noticed the change has happened in the secondary education level, because entering freshmen need to be better prepared for college level learning.

“I think the report is a very important one. It’s a revolution that we’re talking about here,” William Harris of the UI English Department, said. He said he was pleased with the report’s suggestion that students should be taking advantage of, UI faculty members say.

“IT ISN’T ENOUGH to just read from books. Books, he said, adding a high school student or college-level student would have been prepared to read from books.”

“I hope it is that people become aware of the problem,” William Matthews said. “We can’t put our heads in the sand...”

“I don’t think it’s a new problem,” Frank Albuagh, a recently appointed professor, “I think it’s been developing over time and consequently we need to be concerned.”

Albuagh said the report has been a long time in the making and he hoped that it would be used by high school educators, professors, and some parents.

Unemployment rate may be misleading

By Alan Becker

Although Johnson County boasts the state’s lowest unemployment rate, March, local labor officials doubt the figures as meaningful.

Ed McEwen, personnel director at the Iowa River Valley Workforce Development Board, said the figures are misleading. "The unemployment rate will probably drop in April and May slightly but this does not mean the economy is growing," he said. Hardy Kragt, a labor market specialist with the state in Des Moines, said the number of people looking for work is up slightly since January. In March, translating into an unemployment rate of 7.3 percent, February, there were 7.8 percent unemployed, a .5 percent decrease. "On paper, the unemployment rate hit a 1.4 percent increase from March as the weather is improving and those outside the labor force are looking for work," Kragt said. McEwen, a personnel officer of Project Hard Times, said the figures are misleading. "The unemployment rate in the city is very deceptive because the figures are inclusive of unemployment and do not reflect those employed, a 3.4 percent rate," he said.

According to figures released by Bill Gerhardt, business manager of Iowa River Valley Workforce Development Board, the figures are not to be taken seriously. "There’s a lot of people that have a job but are not counted as employed because they do not work full time on the job," Gerhardt said. "We are just interested in working on a job that is less than the one they have because they want to be full time but can’t.

Long-awaited reform

Final legislative approval of the long-awaited utility reform bill, and its likely signing by Gov. Terry Branstad, brings Iowa law into line with the realities of the 1980s and 1990s. Whether the new law will alleviate the systemic changes in the utility regulation it replaces and beyond remains to be seen. In any case, the work of utility reformers is far from over, and the role of the state in promoting changes in public behavior and corporate decisions that will enable us to remain a consumer supplying the various services the commission has been doing is more important far from clear.

One of the most important provisions is one establishing a consumer-advocate office to represent the public interest in rate increase decisions. Currently, the Iowa Commerce Commission acts as both consumer advocate and arbiter of rule-making proposals. In other words, the commissioner is presumed to take consumer interests into account during the decision-making process, but once that decision is made, the commissioner's legal confines the decision-making, not the interests of affected customers.

It is hoped that by removing consumer advocacy from the commissioner's portfolio, and empowering the advocate's office to litigate the terms with the commission and initiate appeals of commission decisions, a stronger hand will be placed for the public in setting utility regulatory policies. The consumer advocate will be appointed by the governor and will have access to Consumer Protection Division.

It is interesting to note that during House debate on an amendment to designate an elected official to be labeled because representatives felt utilities would, in effect, buy the right to influence the outcome of decisions. This concern was raised because the commission is presumed to have an interest in rate increases and other charges affecting its member utilities.

The new law, however, is a step in the right direction. Presently, state laws and regulations define consumer rights and utilities are expected to provide their customers to include activities such as providing and maintaining service, choosing energy sources will help give the consumer more control over their energy dependence in a rational and more equitable manner.

Maybe too perfect

After nine years as Iowa assistant basketball coach under Lute Olson, Jim Roshker was relieved of his duties Monday by newly-hired head coach George Raveling. Roshker had the most success of any Iowa assistant coach and I felt bad about him leaving. Roshker was a good man and I thought he was a great assistant coach. It's a shame he had to leave. I really hope he can be happier because he's a great person.

The concept of acquiring technology from other countries is not new, but the idea of doing so on a large scale is. Iowa City, Iowa, has teamed up with South Korea to develop a sewage treatment plant that will be constructed and run by a Korean firm.

The project is part of a larger effort by the city to improve its water treatment facilities, which are currently being used in the Kansas City area.

In the corporate world, the concept of acquiring technology from other countries is not new. In fact, it has been done successfully for many years. However, this project is different because it is being done on a large scale.

Iowa City and South Korea are working together to develop a sewage treatment plant that will be constructed and run by a Korean firm. The project is part of a larger effort by the city to improve its water treatment facilities, which are currently being used in the Kansas City area.

Administration examines its black college funding

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The Reagan administration gave kick as "A" for effort Tuesday to finding solutions to problems in federal grants to historically black colleges and universities during the past two years.

Education Secretary Terrell-S Minority, who has been fighting for solutions to problems in federal grants to historically black colleges and universities during the past two years, said on Wednesday, May 4.

"There is no doubt that the solutions are coming," she said. "But we still have a long way to go."
Arthroscopic revolutionizes athletes’ knee surgery

At the United States Olympic Training Center, a group of engineers, doctors and athletes met to discuss the latest in knee surgery. The engineers, who are responsible for developing the new procedure, were joined by doctors from various sports teams who are using the procedure to treat knee injuries. The athletes, who are part of the United States Olympic Team, were there to discuss their experiences with the procedure.

Melissa Isaacsen

The engineer in charge of the project, Dr. Fred Brown, said that the procedure is still in its early stages, but that it has already shown promising results. "We have seen a dramatic reduction in the number of knee injuries among athletes," he said. "The procedure is also much less invasive than traditional knee surgery, which means that athletes can return to competition much faster."

On Page 7A

When asked about the future of knee surgery, Dr. Brown said that he was optimistic. "I think we have really only begun to scratch the surface of what is possible with this new procedure," he said. "I believe that it will eventually become the standard of care for knee injuries."

TV contract could hurt baseball

_Steve Batterson_

Backs and knees hurt. Major league baseball is a hard-hitting, high-scoring, high-speed game that is cruel to the knees and backs. But there's no need to worry, says the General Manager of the New York Yankees, about the knees and backs of the players. They have a new TV contract that will make their knees and backs hurt.

The General Manager said that the new TV contract will make it impossible for the players to play well. He said that the players would have to stand on their heads and play on their knees.

The contract will also make it impossible for the players to hit home runs. The General Manager said that the players would have to hit the ball with their necks.

MOTHER'S DAY RUN ‘FILLS A NEED’

The Mother's Day Run, a fundraising event, has been a successful event for the last four years.

The run, which is held in conjunction with the annual Track and Field meet, has raised money for various causes.

One of the major sponsors of the run is the Women's Sports Co. and the Brewers.

The run was held in April, and the runners were presented at the banquet.

Elawy tabbed a ‘franchise’ by Broncos Coach Reeves

DENVER (AP) — John Elway was called a "franchise" player before he arrived in Denver. The Broncos' third-round pick might be called a "franchise" quarterback after his first day with the team.

Elway signed a series of five one-year contracts with the Broncos, reported to the team on Tuesday — Monday night after being drafted by the Minnesota Twins in the first round of the major league baseball draft.

William Henry Johnson of the Epilepsy Foundation of Metropolitan Detroit, Michigan, told the Daily News that he was heading for the NBA. "I've talked to the NBA teams, and I've been interested in their interest," Johnson said.

"The surgery was successful," Johnson said. "I've been cleared by the team doctors, and I'm ready to play." Johnson was injured during a basketball game last season and has been recovering ever since.

"I'm excited to be able to play at the highest level," Johnson said. "I've always wanted to be an NBA player, and now I have the chance to make that dream a reality."

Our dinner with Stephane: Critics rash musician's fortes at local bistro

Dr. Jeffrey Miller

Iowa State University

OW IOWA. BURGUNDY SHOULD have just told the Stephane Grappelli concert in Blomfield Auditorium last Friday night, for example, that it was a bit late for a late evening show. The concert was well attended by a crowd of 1,200 people, a rare sight for a small-town venue. It was a fitting tribute to the late Patrice Caratini, a music lover who once wrote a column for the local newspaper. We're grateful to the people who attended, and hope to see more concerts in the future.

10:30 p.m. Stephane Grappelli

The concert began with an introduction from John Jost, the host of the program. He spoke about the history of jazz and its influence on contemporary music. The audience was captivated by the performance, and the concert ended with a standing ovation.

11:00 p.m. Stephane Grappelli

The second part of the concert featured the jazz hot of Stephane Grappelli. The crowd was once again captivated by the music, and the performance was a highlight of the night.

11:30 p.m. Stephane Grappelli

The final part of the concert was a tribute to the departed Patrice Caratini. The audience listened in silence as John Jost read a eulogy for the music lover. The concert ended with a moment of reflection and respect.

Overall, the concert was a success. The audience was engrossed by the music, and the performances were a testament to the talent of the artists involved. We look forward to more concerts like this one in the future.

Artist surrounds islands with pink

MIAMI (UPI) - Hundreds of pink-armed workers were hired Tuesday to surround the islands with pink plastic to complete the "Surrounded Islands Project."

The project's final stage is to be filled with water to create a water garden, said artist全校. "The pink plastic will act as a filter, allowing the flowers to be seen through the water," he said.

Workers began Tuesday to place the plastic around the perimeter of the islands, which contain a variety of plants and flowers. The plastic will be filled with water and then surrounded by a "pink plastic," said the school.

"This is a great opportunity to create something unique and beautiful," said the artist. "And it's all about making the islands more accessible to everyone."
