Faculty, administration at loggerheads over policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rivaling President Reagan, the House Wednesday night overwhelmingly approved a resolution calling on the two superpowers to respect an original freeze resolution.

The 409-7 vote followed 43 hours of heated debate spread over six days of debate. Republican and Democratic charges that their concerns had been met, and an agreement between the two parties on a pending legislation.

Remington agreed with this opinion, saying that faculty members were not the deciding factor.

"IF WE'RE going to criticize the American Association of University Professors, then I would have imagined that faculty members would have done something," Romminger said.

"The university president is looking for a way to exert pressure on the federal government to try to force the faculty to change their stance," Romminger said. "It's always the College of Nursing that gets the press." President Ronald Reagan never more than support for the administration's position.

The revised policy, recently approved by the board of Regents, determines which revisions of faculty

Andropov offer is turnaround

MOSCOW - Soviet leader Yuri Andropov offered a new, more conciliatory position than his predecessor as a gesture toward the West, but said Tuesday he would not restructured the Kremlin's foreign ministry, which had earlier proposed a "freeze," in a Moscow expert said.

The new offer, which Andropov said was "an open violation of diplomatic regulations," was rejected by the Kremlin's foreign ministry.

If Moscow's new approach to arms control is accepted, Andropov's offer would be the first step toward a mutual, verifiable freeze on nuclear weapons which was originally proposed to the United Nations by the British, French, and American governments.

Soviet experts have warned that a new offer from Moscow would be a "dangerous" step forward, since it would allow the Kremlin to move forward with its own nuclear weapons without any international监督.

Andropov's offer is considered a "signal" to the West that the Kremlin is serious about arms control, but it is not yet clear whether it will be accepted by the other members of the United Nations, who have rejected previous Soviet proposals.

Andropov's offer is being seen as a "giving away" of the initiative in arms control negotiations, and it is not yet clear whether it will be accepted by the other members of the United Nations, who have rejected previous Soviet proposals.

Funeral services are pending for Iowa City man found dead

By Jeff Gathman

Raymond Backhus, 728 F St., was found dead Wednesday morning in his garage, according to police reports.

The corpse, found at 8 a.m. by an electrician, was pronounced dead at 9:25 a.m. A medical examiner was called to the scene, where backhus lived.

Funeral Home. Services are pending.

Evidence at the scene indicates Jeff Eichenbaum, said police.

He is a 56-year-old UI football player who performed in the band. He is survived by his wife, Lillian, and son, Mark.

A fellow student at UI's band was among those present at the scene.

Funeral services will be held Monday at the Sioux City Funerals Home. Services are pending.

Let them eat beef

Best producers want you to know that May is Beef Month — when they want you to eat beef and support our country's economic and culinary goals.

But why? Why do the producers of America's major food crop want you to eat beef? Here are the top three reasons why producers want you to eat beef.

Beyond that there is the question of whether beef — and pork production is in general — is a reasonable use of resources for feeding people in a resource-poor world. The beef industry proudly promotes in TV commercials that it takes 40 pounds of feed to make 1 pound of beef. General Motors boasts that it takes eight pounds of steel to make a pound of beef. In terms of environmental and social issues, beef is not a reasonable use of resources.

If we are to address the environmental and social issues in the world, we need to be able to deal with the tremendous amount of waste and pollution produced by the beef and pork industry.

Bishops' courage

U.S. Roman Catholic Bishops, after two years of study, have respectfully written a pastoral letter condemning nuclear war and nuclear weapons.

The letter, released by Cardinal Joseph Cardinal Spellman, Bishop of New York, said that the bishops had been deeply moved by their study of the issue of nuclear war.

The bishops called for a moratorium on nuclear weapons testing, and for a ban on the development and deployment of nuclear weapons.

They also called for a strengthening of the non-proliferation agreements, and for a reduction in the size of nuclear arsenals.

The bishops concluded that nuclear war is not justified, and that the use of nuclear weapons is immoral.

Guest opinion

Fine Americans

A great dinner has been done in a great grand fashion, and we should now be prepared for the next great event of the new country.

One of the traditional freedoms of the United States is the right to own and live on land, and the freedom to live in the way we choose.

The question is, therefore, whether we should continue to live under a government that restricts our rights.

I, not as an American citizen but as a Roman Catholic, say that the bishops must be held responsible for the direction of our country.

Dear Virginia...

Many Americans today are learning about the world through the media.

The news media have the power to influence public opinion, and to shape the way that people think about the world.

But the news media also have a responsibility to be honest and fair, and to present accurate information.

That is why I have written this letter to you, to bring to your attention some of the issues that are currently being debated in the world.

I hope that you will read this letter, and that you will think about the issues that I have raised.

Grievances

the dispute with one person, the grievance is settled.

According to Remington, it takes a lot of time to handle a grievance. Because he must resolve these disputes within a specified time frame, the negotiations sometimes end up being completed sooner than expected.

Remington also stressed the importance of involving faculty members from different departments in the grievance process. He explained that this approach ensures a more comprehensive understanding of the issues involved and helps to address concerns more effectively.

Another point Remington made was that when a grievance is related to safety, the negotiations would be initiated to ensure the safety of everyone involved. In such cases, the negotiators would discuss safety measures in detail to prevent any future incidents.

Resolution

The resolution of the grievance involves reaching an agreement that satisfies both parties. In this case, the parties agreed to a settlement that was acceptable to both sides. The settlement included provisions that would prevent similar issues from arising in the future.

In conclusion, the resolutions of grievances are often not easy to come by and sometimes involve multiple parties. It is essential to handle these disputes effectively to maintain a positive work environment.

Portland’s Thompson is predicting trouble for Spurs against Lakers

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (UPI) — According to Portland’s Mitchel Thompson, the Los Angeles Lakers will have a tough time against the Portland Trail Blazers. Thompson said that the Blazers have the potential to win the Western Conference championship series after they defeated Denver Thursday night.

I think San Antonio is a better team than they and the Lakers are the type of team that will always rise to the challenge,” Thompson said after the game. “I think they fought back by then, so they’ll be better.”

And through three periods with Los Angeles pounded the Blazers Tuesday night, 145-105.

The Lakers, who were up the way they were talking, couldn’t say, “We are the Lakers’ opponent in the NBA championship series.”

The Blazers, who complained about trouble for McAdoo back by then, so they’ll be even better.”

“What were we supposed to do, give up? We didn’t think we could have a chance,” said Portland guard Jim Eatt

Oiliers' first appearance in final has fans scrambling for tickets

"The people were fantastic," Young said. "We had 13 pleaing fans to try to make it in through the front gate. Chicago fans went on sale at 9 a.m. and if some people only wanted two tickets, they only took two.

"We sold a maximum of four per customer. They said four-year-old fans would not be allowed inside the arena. We have learned to live with it," said four-year-old fans would not be allowed inside the arena. We have learned to live with it.

DOUBLE BUBBLE 9-11
Bradbury’s morbidly film pits good against evil

By Rosanne T. Waith
Special to The Daily Iowan

ou might expect someone who’s been writing science fiction and fantasy for half a century and living within the milieu of his own imagination to be somewhat untethered to the world of concreteness by his own making.

But Bradbury flat out refutes the image of an expansive story-teller, a writer who is more concerned with his inner world than his immediate surroundings. Bradbury is living proof that imaginative writers don’t have to retrench reality to write about new kind of possibilities.

I was told that this time the whole world was going to make it—"Someday in L.A." Lambert was now the author of "Something Wicked," a moralistic tale of young, greedy men who accidentally discover the formula for life. By granting people their most harrowing of wishes, and then taking them back, the author could suddenly find himself very rich.

"That's the kind of relationship John Huston and I had, and that's the kind of relationship I had with Francois Truffaut." Bradbury moved to California when still quite young and lived next door to the Frenchman’s mini-mansion in Hollywood. Bradbury was eventually introduced to Truffaut by his Irish agent, who had brought the Frenchman to Los Angeles recently to screen test actors for his own work. Sensing something in the May Crowns, it was a project he’d been trying to get off the ground for 20 years, in fact, the story he offered to Truffaut, "I'm just trying to get back at something," is a little black evil and thoroughly white good in a genre of its own kind. What finally tipped Bradbury’s heart toward the Crocker is said to be the 1963 novel, "Great Expectations." But when Bradbury’s literary hero of the day, Charles Dickens, died, Bradbury was left with little more than reminiscences of a very odd kind of memory. Bradbury’s first novel, "The Martian Chronicles," was not completed when he was called to the world of fiction and fantasy for half a century. It was the kind of life that feeds on the fantasies you write to establish with you. He charms you completely while he’s busy elsewhere. I’ve worked with people who are only as good as they are perceived. Their reputation outweighs their reality. I’ve worked with people who are only as good as they are perceived. Their reputation outweighs their reality.

Kelly after admiring the hoofer’s work to draw attention to the movie version, been self-conscious of his own making. A through and through character, Bradbury is aware of the world outside of his own make-believe. The real world offers, and the other world offers his own make-believe. The real world offers, and the other world offers his own make-believe.

"It is a perfect imitation of Hartman’s eventually successful version of 'The 3 Stooges Polloes.'" Bradbury wrote the screenplay himself.

Workshops to teach artistic techniques

By Betteine Richardson

Two workshops will be held at the Iowa City Art Center featuring surface design and print techniques, and the artists teaching these workshops are experienced in their field.

Artist Jennifer Conover, who has exhibited her works in some of the nation's leading museums, will teach the first workshop, June 4 through 7. The workshop will concentrate on the commercial application of screen printing and silkscreen printing.

Artist MaryJane Whalen, who teaches at the University of Iowa, will teach the second workshop, June 16 through 19. This workshop will focus on the use of dyes, paints, and other materials to create unique fabrics and other textile products.

The workshops are open to artists of all levels of experience, and space is limited. For more information, contact the Iowa City Art Center at (319) 353-4521.

British musicians’ mediocre material bores fans

By Tom Delphy

ART UP! is the wake of the second collection of their greatest hits and is another effort at hard rock in the wake of Daft Punk’s "Random Access Memories," which they follow up with "Daft Punk, Etc.," their new album, "Materials." The album features a mix of new material and reworks of previous tracks, all with a strong emphasis on dance and electronic music.

The band’s sound, however, is noticeably different from their previous efforts. With a more polished and polished production style, "Materials" features catchy hooks and a darker, more introspective vibe. The album’s opening track, "Materials," sets the tone for the rest of the record, with its pulsating rhythms and haunting vocals. "Materials" follows with "Materials," which builds on the same formula but with a more driving beat and intense vocals. The final track, "Materials," is a triumphant closer that leaves listeners wanting more.

Despite the band’s successful career, "Materials" has received mixed reviews from critics and fans alike. While some have praised the band’s ability to evolve and remain relevant, others have criticized the lack of innovation and the over reliance on dance beats. Overall, "Materials" is a solid record that fans of the band will enjoy, but it may not be enough to bring new listeners to their fold.

Night life

MURIEL’s at Frederick: With the release of their new album, "Materials," the band will be performing at MURIEL’s on April 29. The show is a part of the club’s ongoing series of Live Music Tuesday nights, which feature a variety of local and national acts. The show is free, and the club opens at 9 p.m. for a night of rock, roll, and roll.
