'First-rate education' at UI faces tough pressure Critical report puts the focus on academics

By Dan Hauser

There is too much emphasis on athletics; the United States is falling behind in world leadership; education is going down the drain - all are complaints that have been leveled at educators in the last several weeks.

A critical discussion of the status of education has been boiling in academic circles since the White House released its report on the condition of education in America last week.

UI administrators believe the discussion is a good indicator that the public is again becoming aware and involved in the educational process.

Des Moines Register columnist Donald Kaul described the report's conclusion in a recent column by stating, "our educational system is in the toilet and the the flush is at hand."

Although administrators did not use Kaul's terminology, they are concerned with the view of education in the eyes of the public.

WE STILL OFFER a first-rate education at the UI, but we are under various pressures," Richard Remington, UI vice president for UI president James O. Freedman said the report is not cause for good cheer. He said there are many area in which the United States must upgrade its educational system.

Freedman cited math, science, foreign language and writing skills as areas where improvement is needed. 'We are going into a new period of emphasizing those areas."

When incoming freshmen come to the UI and are not adequately prepared, it slows down the educational process at the UI, said Philip Hubbard, UI vice president for student services.

Another area accused of affecting the educational process is athletics. See Education, page 6

Admission rules may be harder to meet in '84

UI admission standards will get tougher in 1984 if faculty and administrators agree to a format proposed by UI Vice President for Academic Affairs Richard Remington

A memorandum sent to UI academic deans by Remington proposes changadmission requirements in class rankings for students entering the Colleges of Liberal Arts and Engineering in the fall semester of

Because the UI has been plagued by increasing enrollment without what administrators believe is an adequate amount of funding to handle the surge, new standards would make it more difficult for out-of-state students to meet automatic acceptance standards.

Raising admittance standards at the UI has been talked about in the past but Remington's memorandum is the first attempt by the administration to specify what the new acceptance criteria might be.

THOUGH HIGH SCHOOL students who are state residents graduating in continue to be accepted automatically, the ACT "automatic admittance criteria" would be changed from the current standard of 21 to 24, the memorandum states.

But for out-of-state students, the standards would increase from the already higher standards of graduating in the top 40 percent of their class or having a cumulative ACT score of at least 22 to receive automatic admis-

"It's right on the edge," a senior Israeli official said when asked if the cabinet would accept the proposal. Prime Minister Menachem Begin, however, "is not content," the official said, because the agreement is less than what Israel wanted.

"One thing the cabinet will not accept is any proposal that gives up even one of our most vital security interests," the official said, singling out the Israeli demand for a command position for Maj. Saad Haddad, the Lebanese army renegade who is Israel's longtime ally in south Lebanon.

A U.S. official said Shultz talked to President Reagan by telephone for 15 minutes to report on the negotiations and the unresolved issues.

Shultz planned to travel to Damascus, Syria, Saturday. He had returned to Israel Wednesday from Beirut, carrying what Lebanese President Amin Gemayel's government called his nation's "final position" on Israeli troop withdrawal.

Machine-gun fire ripped through a U.S. helicopter carrying the Marine commander in Beirut Thursday as warring militias waged their worst artillery duels in months. Officials charged Syria instigated the warfare to upset an Israeli-Lebanese accord on troop withdrawals.

Neither Col. James Mead. commander of the 1,200-man American peace-keeping contingent in Lebanon, nor five other Marines aboard the UH-1 Huey chopper was injured.

President Amin Gemayel indicated he believed the fighting was a Syrian-backed effort to disrupt U.S. mediation efforts on an agreement for all foreign troops to withdraw from Lebanon

The official radio in Damascus did not comment on the allegation but it warned Beirut to reject an agreement that "will paralyze Lebanon's sovereignty and threaten Syrian and Arab

It also condemned the Shultzmediated draft agreement because, Damascus claimed, it See Mideast, page 6

Regents funding proposals await approval

By Mary Tabor Staff Writer

The state Board of Regents must brace itself for a few blows to its operating budget requests as the Iowa Legislature forges through the final days of

The regents funding proposals, which provide money to keep the state universities going, sit with seven other major appropriation bills waiting for approval by the Iowa Legislature, Sen. Arthur Small, D-Iowa City, said Thursday.

Action was taken in early April by the Senate side of the Joint Subcommittee on Education Appropriations. It reduced the regents fuel requests by $917,000, shifting $520,000 of it to Iowa's Area Community Colleges

Because Iowa legislators have been battling sluggish revenues and mounting demands for state money, Small responded wearily when asked if the community colleges needed the extra funding. "Everybody seems to need more money."

HE SAID HE didn't support the move away from the regents requests and has moved to reconsider the bill because it fails to breakdown the funding between the individual community colleges.

Although the shift marks only a small percentage increase for the community colleges, "given the tightness of the budget," Small said "whether it is justified is a judgement. The subcommittee cut the regents estimated 10 percent inflationary rise in gas, fuel oil and coal costs down to 5 percent, according to Rep. Richard Varn. D-Solon.

"I don't trust assumptions that energy costs won't increase as much," he said after the Senate committee took the action.

Small said he is trying to amend the capital appropriations bill to provide an additional $1 million to the state comptroller's office to pay any fuel costs exceeding the operating appropriations.
"If there is a shortfall, we're setting aside

Varn said although he thinks the area colleges merit an increase, he doesn't think another sector of education should suffer as a consequence.

HE CITED THE increase in tuition tax credits and the aid to primary and secondary level public schools saying, "The regents are the only people not getting an increase and in fact are getting cut." So far the regents have reaped approval for $20 million worth of bonds for an addition to UI Hospitals Colloton Pavilion and $64 million in bonds that will provide for a new UI College of Law building and construction projects at the University of Northern Iowa and Iowa State University.

But these victories will have to be balanced with the rejection of an institutional vitality fund. This priority in the regents operating budget would have appropriated $9.5 million over the biennium to the UI to reestablish competitive salaries to help recruit and retain qualified faculty.

Gov. Terry Branstad excluded the fund in his budget recommendations and the Senate Education Appropriations Subcommittee didn't reinsert it.

Rep. Richard Varn says he thinks area colleges merit an increase, he doesn't think another sector of education should suffer because of it. "The regents are the only people not getting an increase," Varn says, "and in fact are getting cut."

WASHINGTON - President Reagan said Thursday a House-passed resolution calling for an immediate freeze on U.S. and Soviet nuclear arsenals, "while superficially appealing, is fundamentally flawed" and he cannot support it.

Budget compromise offered

WASHINGTON - Senate Republicans Thursday night introduced their compromise 1984 budget that would preserve President Reagan's tax cut but create larger deficits. It quickly ran into a wall of Democratic opposition.

The Domenici compromise would increase military spending 7.5 percent next year, raise only $2.7 billion in new taxes, spend $11.4 billion more on non-defense domestic programs than Reagan wanted, and project an annual deficit of $192.4 billion. It would preserve the third year of Reagan's tax cut scheduled to take effect July 1.

West Branch man charged with carrying loaded firearm

By Suzanne Johnson

Charges were filed Thursday against a West Branch man who told a police officer Friday to "lock me up before I shoot someone.'

The police affidavit states Richard Frances Gruwell, 22, had a loaded shotgun on the front seat of his truck and said he was planning to take a Job Services employee hostage and might kill that person to get money owed to him.

Gruwell was hospitalized for psychiatric evaluation and upon his release, the charge of going armed with a loaded firearm within the city was filed, according to Johnson County District Court records. Gruwell was persuaded by police to allow himself to be admitted to the UI Psychiatric Hospital, Sgt.

Patrick L. Harney said. Harney refused to disclose whether police were notified of Gruwell's release from the hospital Wednesday afternoon. An agreement with Gruwell had

A precedent-setting Iowa City school health care program that draws upon a pool of school staff and committee voluners has received mixed reviews from chool personnel.

The program was initiated this school ear in accordance with an Iowa City chool board decision to fire the school system's six nurses, who rotated their serices to the district's 21 schools.

Under the new program, the director and issociate director utilize regular school staff members and community volunteers to administer health care.

The school board agreed to change the health care program during last year's judget cutting sessions.

The Johnson County Health Department, local nurses associations and UI students from health professions are among the resources the school system uses in its program, according Nancy Spalj, director of health services.

IN ADDITION, each school has designated emergency respondents from the more than 50 teachers and secretaries who have been trained in first aid and cardio-pulmonary resuscitation, according to Spalj. She said a beeper system allows school personnel to notify the health directors in case of emergency.

Iowa City's health program is unique for blic schools in Iowa, according to Dick Fischer, Chief of Special Education Support Services of the Iowa Department of Public Instruction. He said he believes the Iowa City school system is the largest school system in the state without nurses based in regular school buildings.

Although the Iowa State Department of Public Instruction has no requirements for the health services offered by schools, Fischer said the department hopes school systems facilitate more than a minimum number of nurses.

But trimming the nursing program brought the desired results, according to Superintendent David Cronin. He said the savings of the new program, originally estimated at $80,000, has allowed the district to rechannel about $74,000 to other district

The concerns parents had about whether their children will be safe in the new program were "blown out of proportion," Cronin said. "Our number one objective was to make sure that there was a system to deal with all kinds of injuries and emergencies.'

DR. ALFRED HEALY, chair of the Health Services Advisory Committee, which advises the district on the new program, said the goals of the program have been successfully achieved. Healy said the emergency response time has been increased because the school system has encouraged personnel to take first aid

In fact, Spalj said, the program will be an improvement over the earlier six-nurse system as additional community services and parental aid are employed by the school district.

'With the incorporation of new resources that are more available from other aspects, we will be able to put together a program that will give more complete health services in the future," she said.

Associate Director Joan Buxton, who was one of the terminated nurses, said one of the benefits of the new program is that more people are taking responsibility for

But, several school secretaries said they have had to assume much of the health care responsibility. According to school procedures, many of the secretaries are designated to deal with ill students, contact the parents, apply first aid and fill out health forms.

RITA JUSTIS, president of the secretaries' bargaining unit, said, "We would very much like to have the nurses back ... We don't have the training and a couple of first aid courses don't give us enough background to really deal with a lot of situations.'

The new system also means more work for the school secretary, according to Reta Lepic, a secretary at Wood Elementary School. She said she "always looked forward to having the nurses there" because it gave her time to get back to her regular secretarial chores.

But Leatrice Bean, a secretary at Mark Twain Elementary School, said the new system is not much different than the old one. "Since we shared nurses with the other schools, it seemed like whenever there was an emergency, it was when the nurses were at the other schools anyway,"

Although the new program works for Iowa City schools, other school systems should be cautious about adopting it as a model, said Kathryn Schweer, a member of the Health Advisory Committee and one of the vice presidents of the Iowa Nurses Association,

"Iowa City is a unique community; the same would not work in another community that doesn't have the same resources that Iowa City has," Schweer

Head still hoping for a transplant

By Suzanne Johnson

William Head, the leukemia victim who sued the UI Hospitals to discover the name of potential donor 'Mrs. X,' hopes to obtain remission soon and proceed with a Head said, "I have a very low leukemia cell count at the present time. If my white cells come on back and my marrow comes on back strong, then we're hoping I'll be in

Once in remission, Head has the option of undergoing an autogenous bone marrow transplant, which uses his own marrow to kill the leukemia cells, or a transplant using marrow from an unrelated donor.

Head, 27, filed suit against the UI Hospitals in February in an effort to force spital to reveal the name of a Califora woman called Mrs. X.

Mrs. X received a form letter from the UI Hospitals asking her to participate inhe bone marrow study, but did not respond. During a follow-up phone call, she refused to donate her marrow.

HEAD'S SUIT WAS defeated in the Iowa State Supreme Court in March, but he said he holds no grudges against the hospital.

"I don't think I was greatly wronged by the University of Iowa. They've been helpful, not only with Mrs. X ... but they've also given me some names besides that since the suit was filed."

'Head, a senior geology student at Louisiana State University, said the hospital has shown no hesitation in helping him locate more donors, and he accepts their position of doing no more than asking donors to participate in the program.

'Now again it's the same situation. I can't force the names out of them. If they told me that there was a possible match there was no response, you know, then I would be upset again I don't think the situation that we had with Mrs. X will arise again. At least I hope it doesn't.

Head was a patient at M.D. Anderson Clinic, Houston, Texas, for four weeks while receiving massive doses of chemotherapy. He described his condition now: "I'm slow, but I tend to get around. You know, you might compare me, I guess, to about a 70-year-old man."

HE WAS OPTIMISTIC about his chances for remission. "We're very, very pleased. You know, it's unusual, it's rare for a third relapse patient to get the chance for a remission

"Eighty percent of the time, a patient in my condition would have died probably in another two weeks and just would not have responded well at all to the treatment."

Head is also on the lookout for new medical developments, which will determine which type of transplant he chooses to

Now he is leaning toward the autogenous, he said, because if it fails, he would have the unrelated transplant left as an alter-

UI law professor, 62, dies of cancer

UI Roy J. Carver Professor of Law Allan D. Vestal, 62, died Thursday at the UI Hospitals and Clinics following a year-long bout with cancer.

A member of the UI faculty for 50 years, Vestal wrote eight books and 53 articles during his lifetime. He was a member of the local American Association of University Professors advisory committee, the Iowa City Planning and Building Commission, the Iowa State Bar and the American Bar Association.

Vestal was a widely recognized authority on civil procedure and spent the last 20 years of his life trying to encourage universally adopted state laws. Since 1964, he was a member of a 10-person national committee to forward this cause. He served as president of the committee in 1980.
Surviving Vestal are his wife Dorothy, two daughters, Josephine Salmi of Seattle, Washington, and Barbara Chester of Maine, and two sons, Allan and David, both of Iowa City.

Memorial services are pending at the George L. Gay funeral home in Iowa City. Vestal will be cremated.

Three former Iowa City councilors said Thursday they will not attempt to regain a seat on the council.

Former Mayor Robert Vevera and former council members Glenn E. Roberts and Carol de Prosse said they will not run for the four spots on the council that will be in contention this fall.

Mayor Mary Neuhauser and Councilors John Balmer, Larry Lynch and David Perret are all up for reelection this November. As of yet, none of the present council members have announced their inentions to seek re-election.

Vevera, who served on the council from 1976 to 1982, said he has bigger things ahead. "In June or July I hope to announce my intention to run for president," he said

"Seriously, though, I have no interest in running for city council," Vevera said. "I was there for six years and mayor for two of them ... I just don't want to go back and start over

In 1981, Vevera was defeated by Councilman Clemens Erdahl in a race for the city's District B seat. Roberts, who served on the council from 1978-82, said he would probably not attempt to run for the council again. "I don't think so, I'm just not interested right now."

LAST FALL, he made an unsuccessful attempt against Democrat Dick Myers to gain a seat on the Johnson County Board of Supervisors. Now, Roberts said, he is enjoying the retired life and "doing things around the house."

Roberts finished as the fourth-highest vote-getter in the 1981 elections. Councilman John McDonald captured 3,972 votes and Councilor Kate Dickson received 3,755, while Paul Poulson received 3,490

DeProsse said she has not entertained any notion about running for the council again. She served on the council from 1974

City Clerk Marian Karr said Sept. 4 is the first day people can file papers for their candidacy. Nomination papers, will be available "sometime in the middle part of

In 1981, Karr said, people wishing to run at-large had to obtain 203 signatures, while persons running for district seats had to gather 67 signatures. Karr said the numbers of signatures needed for this year's election have not yet been tabulated.

Primaries for the council election have been slated for Oct. 18 with the election coming on Nov. 8.

'The new councilors will start in January and will then elect a new mayor,' Karr said

Groups to march for disarmament

"Hope" will be the theme this Sunday as members of more than 20 Iowa City organizations march for nuclear disarma-

"People, if they get together, do have power for change," Nancy Robinson, who is directing the march, said Thursday. Robinson represents the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, which is the key sponsor of the march.

She said some of the groups may continue to work together toward this goal. ROBINSON SAID Americans have a great responsibility to protest nuclear activity, not only because the United States produces such a large percentage of the "Americans are free to speak up on such issues, while people in, countries like Russia don't have that freedom or anyone that will listen to them."

Because the march is taking place on Mother's Day, one of the main philosophies behind it will be to end the arms race for children's sake. Robinson said, "The love for children, family instinct and survival instinct are what will eventually save us," from nuclear destruction.

A group of children will even be heading up the march. Students from Iowa City's Helen Caldicott School, who have been actively writing letters and doing projects to protest American nuclear policy, will be one of the first groups in line.

PARIS (UPI) - Police in full riot gear battled throngs of stone-throwing shopkeepers near the Eiffel Tower Thursday, and across town 8,000 students marching against education reform were dispersed with tear gas.

Freedman also recognizes the importance of keeping up technologically with other countries such as Japan and Germany. If the United States has learned anything from the past decade, he said, it is that more money must be spent on education to stay even with U.S. competitors.

In the 1960s and 1970s, there was change in the social climate which resulted in an era of experimentation in education, Freedman said. He said there were good and bad consequences of this era. Some of the negative holdover include a loss of discipline and a loss of support to basic courses.

Freedman said he would like to see the educational process return "back to the basic skills."

ALL THREE administrators said they are pleased with the attention the subject is receiving. Hubbard said the 'public must be supportive if something is going to be effective. I hope the people stay excited long enough to do something about it."

Freedman said all of the debate over education stems from parents not seeing their children get an adequate foundation on basic skills.

Another aspect of the recent surge of concern, Hubbard said, is the idea that the United States was once a world leader but is now being outdone by other nations.

Remington agreed, saying there is a need to re-emphasize the importance of schooling - to restore it as a "high establish a 20 percent difference in the class ranking used to automatically accept Iowa students and the class ranking to accept non-residents.

A top 30 percent class ranking or a cumulative ACT score of 25 would be required for out-of-state students. The reason for the additional increase for non-resident students. Remington said, is because "the rate of growth (in enrollment) is somewhat higher for non-residents.'

THE MEMORANDUM recognizes the need for affirmative action in accepting potential students, Remington said. The memorandum states, "The Admissions Office ... will continue to admit students who show definite promise of success even if they do not meet these new criteria.

"In addition, we must be particularly vigilant at maintaining our recruitment of minority students who might, without such special attention, be disproportionately affected by cultural biases present in standarized tests such as the ACT."

Related to the ACT, the memorandum says that there has been a 'substantial increase" in the number of students taking the ACT which have indicated a preference for the UI. 'This could produce an actual fall 1984 enrollment above our projected level of 31,259, unless appropriate intervention is initiated now.

The new requirements could 'produce a decrease" of at least 500 students, in the fall of 1984, the memorandum states. "That's a fairly conservative estimate," Remington said, "but it will be at least 500 students.'

Remington said the more stringent requirements are an attempt "to get on top of enrollment increases" that are causing crowded classrooms and scheduling difficulties for UI students and faculty.

Senate questions funds request

"Internal problems" between the UI Student Senate and the Collegiate Associations Council nearly blocked partial passage of a budget request from an organization designated to receive approximately $36,000 in mandatory student fees.

United Students of Iowa is a state student organization joining the UI, Iowa State University and the University of Northern Iowa.

The UI's two student governing bodies — the senate and CAC — voted to give 65 cents per student in mandatory student fees to the group as budget. UNI hopes to contribute $2,000 to USI and ISU is hoping to chip in $5,000 to $7,000.

Thursday night the senate considered the USI budget. But according to two student senators and Sharon McMulin, chair of the USI board of directors, some members of student senate had problems accepting the budget because they are concerned with who will be appointed as USI's executive director.

"IT WOULD BE my guess that they're concerned about who the executive associate would be," McMulin said. She believes the problem is that Karol Sole, currently outgoing CAC soon its members could come up with a president, may be appointed to the McMulin said "internal problems" are the root of senate concern. "There's always some sort of healthy mistrust between the senate and the Senators Kelly Hnatt and Tracy Davis agreed that this appointment may be causing problems for some

"There just seem to be some personal issues" involved, Hnatt said, which have to do with Sole's possible appointment. Davis said, "Whoever the director is, is not germane to our decision as to whether USI should be funded or not."

Two amendments decreasing the amount of funds to USI were offered, but both were defeated and the original budget was passed.

The budget allocates the group $42,227.74, including $15,433 in salaries and benefits for the executive director and a secretary. However the mandatory fee recommendation has not been approved by the state Board of Regents yet. Toward the end of the meeting, senators called an executive session to discuss their representative to the USI board of directors, Ann Richards.

After 20 minutes behind closed doors the senate concluded that Richards will be replaced by Sen. Jeff Winick, because Jeff can better represent the senate than I can," Richards said. "That's what I was told."

In a report published Thursday, Washington Post White House correspondent Lou Cannon described the 35-minute interview as "a rambling and sometimes confusing" session.

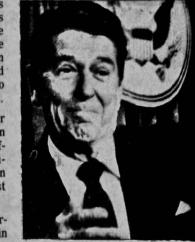

Cannon wrote that some of the participating reporters "said afterwards that the president at times appeared to have difficulty concentrating on the questions and his answers to them."

"WE THOUGHT the president was clear in what he was saying," deputy press secretary Peter Roussel said, noting that Reagan was "dealing with Speakes, barely suppressing anger, sensitive issues of foreign policy and

Speakes also chided reporters for their laughter in the press center when Reagan, 72, sought to explain differences in U.S. support of antigovernment "freedom fighters" in Nicaragua and hostility to leftist "guerrillas" in El Salvador.

At another point during the interview. Reagan referred to the rebels in El Salvador as "freedom fighters."

It's that time in the presidential race again: States are again locking horns over which will hold the first Democratic primary in the nation.

Democratic Party rules say that all states are to select their delegates to the national convention during a 13-week period beginning March 13. The New Hampshire primary (March 6) and Iowa caucuses (February 27) are the only exceptions.

But when New Hampshire found that Vermont and Maine had scheduled non-binding caucuses on the same date as its primary, and that Massachusetts is also considering holding its primary then, New Hampshire officials began planning to move their primary up to Feb. 28 — only one day after Iowa's caucuses. But Iowa officials say they want to hold their caucuses at least a week before New Hampshire's primary.

Even though it violates party rules, New Hampshire is seeking legitimization of its primary move by soliciting Democratic presidential candidates to support the seating of the state's delegates at the convention, no matter how early the delegates were chosen. Some candidates have given their support, others

All this jockeying for the "first state" spotlight seems a waste of political time and effort. Though much is made of the importance of the outcome of the first primary or caucus, the biggest effect of having the nation's attention is one of boosting a state's self-image.

But even if a first-state primary win gives a particular candidate the advantage of drawing public and media attention, the state itself rarely benefits. The early primary is merely another tool used by ambitious politicians who will move on when they have gotten what they need from the state. Witness Iowa: Up until next February, we'll be flooded with candidates and promises; after the caucus we'll be left with promises, and the fleeting national spotlight will be focused elsewhere.

Iowa has been in the "first" position for a long time; although it's been a minor boost for our state ego, we should tell other states that it's hardly worth squabbling over.

Inequity engraved

It has been long apparent that you must have money or friends with money or belong to a party with money to run for Congress. Registering your name in the heads of voters - many of whom see little point in keeping it there — takes bucks: bucks for TV, bucks for radio, bucks to put your message in thousands of mailboxes.

Well, the U.S. Supreme Court decided Monday that once you've proved your ability to handle the cash, once you've weathered the financial battering of a campaign and come out on top, you deserve a break if you have a second go.

In a one-sentence order issued without opinion, the court affirmed the constitutionality of the congressional franking privilege. The justices voted 6-3 not to review a 1982 federal district court decision that determined free-mailing rights for members of Congress did not constitute "a substantial detrimental impact" on fair elections.

The franking privilege, a prerogative recognized by Congress in 1775, is necessary for adequate representation. Senators and representatives have an obligation to maintain a flow of information from their offices to constituents. The privilege facilitates that, allowing bulk communication without expense.

But the potential for abuse is large. Incumbents, already endowed with an exposure advantage, can check some of the reelection bid cost by conducting mass-mailed psuedo-campaigns at the Post Office's expense. A 1973 statute prevents outright perversion of the privilege, prohibiting mass mailings two months before an election or for material that is campaign financed. But congressional races begin long before that; nothing stops incumbents from sending out chummy, endearing letters that are not directly linked to campaign funds. Meanwhile, challengers empty their own coffers simply introducing themselves to voters.

Common Cause, a public affairs lobby, recognized that when it brought suit against the Postmaster General and Treasury Department in 1973. The Supreme Court silently engraved inequity Monday when it refused to consider the suit.

Change at Ole Miss

In 1962, the then lily-white University of Mississippi was forced to open its doors to its first black student, James Meredith. Two decades later, there are 734 blacks in a student body of 10,000 considerable progress, but still far from ideal in a state with a population that is 40 percent black.

But progress is being made, and the old vestiges of racism are slowly being removed. This year Ole Miss had its first black cheerleader, and largely because of his leadership the administration has moved to disassociate the school from the Confederate flag that was its long-time unofficial symbol.

The Rebel flag had been connected with the university ever since the Civil War, when a brigade made up entirely of students fought for the South. The association became closer during the 1950s, when Ole Miss officials started purchasing thousands of miniature flags to hand out at ballgames and pep rallies.

When the movement to remove the flag began, many Mississippi students and alumni argued that the Confederate flag was a part of their cultural heritage separate from the Civil War itself. But the connection of the Confederate flag with the South's slaveholding past and with still-existing racist organizations like the Ku Klux Klan makes it legitimately offensive to blacks and others; the administration's decision was unquestionably the right one. Mississippi's flag controversy contains needed messages for all of us. The vast majority of Mississippi boosters who displayed the flag at games presumably intended no racial slurs. Their problem, and ours, is that racism is culturally ingrained in American life and cannot be ended until we learn to avoid not only obvious racist behavior, but implied racism as well.

Recalling a snapshot of my youth asked me how things have changed since my freshman days, I told them about the time the Students for a Democratic Society stormed my Latin poetry class and ordered the grayhaired professor to shut up right in the middle of a Catullus verse.

I also told them about the three bomb scares that interrupted my struggles with linear algebra, the April Fool's Day "Hash Bash," and the architectural renaissance that transformed the administration building, many classrooms and most of the local banks into brick fortresses with tiny, slitted

"Yeah, those were the days," I said, getting nostalgic.

My students, many of whom were sporting the uniform of young modern conservatism — Polo shirts, designer jeans, monogrammed sweaters stared back at me with a mix of muted admiration and moral smugness at their own progress from barbarism. What a Smithsonian relic I must have seemed!

We discussed the political irony of my generation - how by a quirk of history, my age group is sandwiched between two vast ranks of conservatism — elders and youngers. Two weeks later, one of my students announced that a protest demonstration was occurring on the Pentacrest. After reminding me of my protest stories, the class eventually cajoled me into letting them go watch it.

WHEN WE ARRIVED, several hundred protesters were already gathered around a makeshift stage. The first speaker - an Asian American with long straight hair and a beret - urged resistance to draft registration.

A pre-med frat brother in my class asked, "How much will you pay me to knock that guy off the stage?

A little shocked, I asked him if he knew what the speaker was saying. "I haven't really been listening," he

I snorted out a weary little laugh and left to mingle with the crowd.

While meandering through the eclectic assemblage of bodies - sunbathers, punk rockers, lunching university staff, religious fanatics and rhetoric students - I had to marvel at how little humanity has changed since the days of the Elizabethan rabble.

Some protesters wore fill-in-theblank placards which read, "I'm tooto die like this." Many had written in "human," an obvious enough choice and touching too until I noticed a motley pooch trotting about with a "too human" placard hanging from his neck like an oversized dog-tag.

One protester declared he was too "close to graduating" to die. Yet another was too "sincere." I was glad I didn't have a placard. Perhaps all that Jim Thornton Digressions has changed for me in the 12 years since my freshman days is the fear of appearing ridiculous; I have it now, and I didn't used to.

A NEW WAVE spokesman replaced the Asian American on stage. It was hard to hear him because the microphone was too far from his mouth. I wished he didn't look so much like John Ritter.

He said something about defense research on campus and then announced it was time for the "Die-in."

The truth is I never occupied a building in college. Often I wish my youth had been more adventurous. As fearful as I am of appearing ridiculous, this was an opportunity to make up for what I'd missed.

The New Waver told us to enter the administration building and a "monitor" would give the cue when it was time to die.

I passed a small knot of fundamentalist Christians who were trying to turn us away.

"Bombs don't kill people" an evangelist shouted. "People kill peo-

As I neared the administration building, my thoughts turned paranoid. Would I be photographed and fired? What about police? Strains of Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young blended with reruns of the Chicago Republican convention. It was depressing to realize how much of my experience comes from TV.

A monitor said to go upstairs and avoid blocking the doors or hallways. Photographers and a Channel 2 minicam stood ready.

AFTER FIVE MINUTES, a New Waver dressed in fatigues and carrying a plastic sub-machine gun, made the announcement.

'Okay, die, everybody. It's time. Get down and die. Some people collapsed on the spot.

Because of my bad back, I eased down slowly. I even propped my head with my knapsack. No sense in being uncomfortable. Immediately the hail of flashbulbs started. I closed my eyes and the exploding bulbs looked red through my eyelids. The sound of automatic film winders punctuated the stillness. It was a curiously moving experience. I remembered John Hersey's Hiroshima and how the atomic flash looked to survivors. I thought about those history-book pictures of mass

The poem lasted several minutes; then we were left to lie in silence. I felt peaceful for a while, but as the time wore on, I wondered if graduate psych students were conducting an experiment on us.

'Okay, you can get up now," our monitor said. I suddenly felt angry at his self-importance, angry that we were being ordered about like blockheads to make someone else's

I GUESS the masses are doomed to be masses, no matter what the political leadership.

We left the building. I never saw a policeman.

Under the blue sky, a fellow with a Reagan mask danced for the crowd. The "human" dog trotted over to two pretty sunbathers and licked them. The evangelist shouted at the indifferent throng while his devotees glared piously, their knuckles blanching on

On the way home, I passed several bars. I saw two rhetoric students approaching from that direction.

AT FIRST I was angry. When they saw me, they smiled sheepishly. One held up his Little/Brown Reader and feigned hiding behind it.

The moment of my recognition was sharp but not unpleasant. I found myself starting to smile, and when we passed on the street, I nodded at them the way one might at a snapshot from one's youth.

The Daily Inquirer?

It was with great interest that I read of the editorial decision to change the format of The Daily Iowan to that of The Daily Inquirer (DI, May 2). Blatant sensationalism has scarcely irritated me more. What more can DI readers expect after Rochelle Bozman's "investigation" of the vile and "lucrative" business dealings of former Iowa basketball coach Lute

As a fellow-journalist, I was more than dismayed to see this type of "investigative journalism." Bozman goes to great depths to dig up dirt concerning Olson's business matters, only to sadly discover that they were all quite legal. I rather speculate that nowhere in Olson's contract did he ever agree to become the Mother Teresa of basketball coaches. His job was his business, he looked out for that business interest and he branched out from that initial interest. I know of no reason that says a coach cannot own real estate or accept legal job benefits. It seems both petty and vindictive to try to barbecue Olson with insinuations on the coals of slow spring news days.

I also see jealousy rather than objectivity at the base of this story. Would there be quite as much "news interest" if DI fans were to make private contributions to the paper in order to tempt DI editor Craig Gemoules to stay in Iowa City? Would editors decline the use of a new car offered for public relations purposes by area auto dealers? And did Bozman, who generally does a nice job, write these articles for community interest or as a "springboard for personal gain"? After all, a meaty investigative story on a well-known person looks pretty nice in a journalist's string book of stories, especially when the job market is tight.

Olson was not a god. If there was something shady going on, it should come out. If there was not, Bozman is creating a story rather than covering it, and it produced nothing more than muckraking journalism. Kathy Trevathan

Observer: Soldiers in Salvador killed rebels in 'counterattack'

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (UPI) damaged beyond repair and useless to - Salvadoran and Honduran soldiers killed as many as 90 rebels in a counter attack on a leftist column that demolished six strategic bridges, a military observer said Thursday.

The observer, who asked not to be identified, said 50 guerrillas were killed when in what he called an army "counter ambush" outside Santa Rosa de Lima, 88 miles east of San Salvador last Friday.

The observer, close to the Salvadoran high command, said he had an "unverified report" that guerrillas buried another 40 of their fighters inside Honduran territory half a mile from an international bridge rebels

He said Honduran authorities had discovered the bodies in a mass grave in which some West German-made G-3 rifles were discovered, apparently

There has been no comment from Salvadoran or Honduran officials about the gravesite, although the Salvadoran government said 95 guerrillas were killed in the fighting.

THE OBSERVER said the army killed "as many as 50 guerrillas" when troop reinforcements moving to relieve occupied Santa Rosa de Lima detected a rebel ambush and staged a counter ambush.

The rebels called the series of spectacular attacks on Santa Rosa de Lima and the six bridges a reaction to Reagan's recent speech on Central America before a joint session of Congress asking for more aid to fight the

1,500 Miskito Indians kidnapped by rebels

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (UPI) - A band of 80 rebel Indians trying to overthrow the Nicaraguan government kidnapped 1,500 Miskito Indians and forced them to march across the border into Honduras, the governmentcontrolled radio said Thursday.

Radio Sandino, the official radio of the ruling Sandinista National Liberation Front, reported the Indians were abducted April 22 from Silmalira, 49 miles north of Puerto Cabezas in the province of Zelaya.

Radio Sandino said the kidnapers belonged to the Misurasata rebel alliance that is made up of Miskito, Sumos and Rama Indians who live in northeastern Nicaragua and are led by Steadman Fagoth.

The radio claimed the rebels, in the latest raid headed by Fagoth, forced 1,500 Miskitos, including children, pregnant women and old men, to march through the night across the Rio Coco into Honduran territory.

"THE TREATMENT that was given to the people taken by force to Honduran territory was inhuman." Radio Sandino quoted Guillermo Larabe Ramirez, who reportedly escaped from the kidnapping, as saying.

Larabe Ramirez told Radio Sandino that Fagoth and his followers told the Indians the rebels had come to rescue them because Nicaragua's leftist government had plans to kill them.

"In reality we cannot say that the treatment that the counterrevolution will give them, in case of victory, which is doubtful, is going to be better than what we have now," Larabe

Nicaragua's government angered the Miskito Indians when authorities relocated them apparently fearing they were sympathetic to antigovernment guerrillas who operate out

In another development, a Radio Sandino correspondent said government soldiers killed 22 rebels during an attack Wednesday on the highway between El Porvenir and Jalapa, in the province of Nueva Segovia, 150 miles north of Managua.

Argentines assail junta death report

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (UPI) - Six thousand people shouting "assassins" massed Thursday outside a meeting of the ruling junta, which had declared thousands of people legally dead in a report on the '70s "dirty war" against subversives.

"Now, now, it is indispensable that they (the missing people) show up alive and that those responsible for their disappearance be punished," the crowd chanted on the steps of the national congress.

The Argentine Bishops Council, in its first reaction to the report, said it has "positive aspects" but was "insufficient" and "deplorable" overall because it failed to detail what kind of search was made for the missing, especially children.

The protest was organized by the Mothers of the Plaza de Mayo, relatives of an estimated 7,000 missing Argentines. The crowd first gathered in the plaza in front of the government house and then marched 16 blocks to the congress.

POLICE MONITORED the protest and blocked the crowd from approaching the government house. Mounted police and riot control cars stood by but were not used.

On reaching congress, the crowd walked up the steps to the front door, which was closed. They chanted, "assassins" and other slogans for 15 minutes before dispersing.

The three-member military junta uses the congress building as its headquarters.

"We will return," the crowd sang as

The human rights organization criticized the military report for making no mention of the numerous kidnappings and "diabolical and unforgiving torture" carried out by the "dirty warriors" of the security forces.

"We will never accept that legal aberration called the administrative death," the mothers said.

LAST THURSDAY the seven-yearold military regime made a 40-minute report to Argentines on their crackdown on leftist guerrillas and declaring legally dead thousands of missing people.

The Permanent Assembly for Human Rights claims at least 7,000 Argentines disappeared without trace after being abducted at home, off the street or in their offices by men claiming to belong to security forces.

Foreign Minister Juan Aguirre Lanari said a plot has been unleashed against Argentina because of the military report and in retaliation "for our persistent claims to the Falkland

Peeters denies the Islanders, Bruins keep title hopes alive

BOSTON (UPI) — Pete Peeters bounced back from two sub-par performances with a sparkling 21-save effort and the Boston Bruins remained alive in their Stanley Cup playoff series Thursday night with 5-1 victory over the New York Islanders in Game 5.

The Bruins will seek to even the best-of-seven Wales Conference final when it returns to Uniondale, N.Y. for game six on Saturday night. Boston is trying to become only the third team in NHL history to win a playoff series after trailing 3-1.

Five different players scored for the Bruins, who spotted the three-time defending champs a 1-0 lead 3:12 into the game when Bob Nystrom scored on a 58-foot slapshot which handcuffed Peeters. It was the only mistake he made all game in returning to regular season form after allowing 15 goals in games three and four.

THE BRUINS OUTSHOT the Islanders 21-7 in the first period and 33-15 over two periods when all the scoring took place.

Boston tied the game 1-1 at 5:07 of the first period when Craig MacTavish picked up a loose puck in front of Billy Smith and flipped in a backhander. Barry

Pederson scored what proved to be the game winner 68 seconds later by tapping in a Rick Middleton rebound for his 14th goal of the playoffs, which ties him with Edmonton's Mark Messier for the leader in goals scored.

lowa given a shot at snapping Cyclones' Big Four domination

By Steve Riley

The five-year history of victorious teams at the Iowa college track Big Four meet can be written in one line: Iowa State has never failed to win.

That's right; it's Iowa State 5, Iowa 0, Drake 0 and Northern Iowa 0. So, is it safe to call the meet, held at Des Moines Saturday, the annual Big One and Little Three?

Not after hearing Drake Coach Bob Ehrhart's prediction. "I would think Iowa should be favored." The Hawkeyes' superior sprinting strength, which was showcased in a sterling effort at last weekend's Drake Relays, is at the base of Ehrhart's reasoning.

Iowa's Ted Wheeler is in complete disagreement. "I would guess that right now Iowa State is clearly a heavy

THE PSYCHOLOGICAL warfare continues with Cyclone Coach Bill Bergan's assessment. "I think that it's going to be a close meet with the competition coming from Iowa," he said. With the Big Eight meet coming up next weekend, a lot of our guys are taking the meet a little too lightly."

Northern Iowa Coach Lynn King may have predicted accurately where the meet will be won or lost. "The Iowa sprinters are coming on real well, but the key may be how their field event people do," he said. "Iowa State at this point has better field event people."

A factor weighing in Iowa's favor is that the Cyclones may be minus their two premier weight men, Dave Juehring and Scott Crowell. Juehring, the freshman who won the Big Four indoor shot put, is definitely out with strained ligaments in a wrist. Crowell, a former NCAA discus champion, is doubtful due to a groin injury.

IOWA MAY HAVE grabbed its share of Drake Relays glory with 200-meter champion Jeff Patrick and places in three relays, but Iowa State didn't come away empty-handed.

In fact, three Cyclones - Bob Verbeeck in the 1,500, Joseph Kipsang in the 5,000 and Brian Tietjens in the high jump - won crowns. Additionally, Sunday Uti was third in the loaded 400

Wheeler said the Hawks' hopes lie in the "depth people." "We know what Jeff Patrick, Ronnie McCoy and Terrence Duckett will do, but it's going to come down to the fellows that can go out and do some unusual things who haven't done them yet," he said. That See Track, page 2B

Sixers try to regain their health as they prepare for Bucks series

Philadelphia 76ers look as if they're going to need every day of rest they can manage to have a full line-up ready for Sunday's NBA playoff opener against the Milwaukee

The 76ers were missing two key players from practice Thursday as they continued preparations for the first game of the bestof-seven Eastern Conference finals.

Guard Andrew Toney still was sidelined with a deep bruise of the left thigh, an injury that has not been responding to treatment. Toney sat out game two of the 76ers' four-game sweep of the New York Knicks and did not play more than 21 minutes in either of the two weekend games.

Philadelphia Coach Billy Cunningham is concerned about Toney's availability for

"RIGHT NOW, Andrew can't run; he can't do anything," Cunningham said. "He's been taking treatment every day from 9 to 5. I don't know what more can be done but I do know that we can't have an 80 percent Andrew Toney playing against a 100 percent Sidney Moncrief or we could be in some serious trouble.'

Moncrief was Milwaukee's leading scorer, averaging 23.3 points per game, in the Bucks' four-game sweep over the Boston Celtics in the Eastern Conference

Clemon Johnson, the 76ers' back-up center and power forward, also did not participate in practice as a partial tear in his left hamstring continues to heal. He is expected to be ready for Sunday.

Bobby Jones, who came down with swollen glands Tuesday, and Franklin Edwards, who developed a case of food poisoning on Tuesday night, did return to practice Thursday.

THE 76ERS have been idle since last Sunday, when they completed their sweep of the Knicks with a 105-102 victory.

Cunningham said the key to the series the third one matching the 76ers and the Bucks in the last three years - will be rebounding. The 76ers are led in that department by Moses Malone, the league's leading rebounder, while the Bucks have a platoon of board crashers, including Moncrief, Bob Lanier, Alton Lister and Harvey

"Rebounding is the biggest area," Cun-ningham said. "Milwaukee swept Boston in four straight by beating them on both boards, and we swept the Knicks in four straight controlling both boards.

Rebounding aside, Cunningham said the Bucks are on a high right now and will be a tough team to beat.

"Milwaukee is playing as well as they ever have under (coach) Don Nelson," he said. "From what I've seen, in the games against Boston, they excelled in every phase of the game.'

A club spokesman said the nationally televised game probably will be blacked out in the Philadelphia area. As of Thursday afternoon, the advance sale barely was above 11,000 in the 18,482-seat Spectrum.

Game two of the series will be played Wednesday night in Philadelphia, with games three and four slated for May 14 and

Hassard uses Big Four track meet as tune-up for Big Tens, nationals

By Greg Anderson

Iowa's Big Four women's track teams will be meeting in Ames this weekend and the general feeling among the school's coaches is that the second annual affair will be primarily used as a tune-up for major meets to come.

Iowa Coach Jerry Hassard said that he and his Hawkeyes "are gearing for" the Big Ten and national meets that are approaching shortly and they will just try to "keep the motors running," this weekend.

'We're focusing our time on the major meets and it's hard to focus on more than just a few," Hassard said. "This meet will be a tool for development."

The same feelings were expressed by Iowa State Coach Ron Renko who said, 'the meet is set up as a tune-up for conference championships." He adds that, 'we are hoping for personal best performances with possibly some school records and national qualifying times. We want the meet to be a confidence-builder for our

NO TEAM SCORE will be kept at the Saturday meet, which was also the case in last year's affair, but Hassard said it was the "desire" of all the coaches involved to have it that way. The only time the four teams met this season and a score was kept was at the Drake Invitational in April. Iowa won that meet, with Drake finishing third, ISU placing sixth and Northern Iowa taking seventh in the nine-team field

Iowa also did well in last year's Big Four encounter with 15 top-three finishers including two firsts. "We stand a pretty good chance of excelling in more than a few events (this year)," Hassard said.

The Hawkeyes will be doing some experimenting of sorts this weekend as many athletes will be participating in events that are not their specialties. According to Hassard this was done to, "provide variety as they move ahead and develop quality and character in their specialty races.

ELAINE JONES, the talented sophomore sprinter for the Hawks who finished second in the 100 meter at the Drake Relays last weekend, will be competing in the 400 for the first time. Hassard said that this will be a "change of pace," for Jones and added that it is something she has "really wanted to do."

Distance runner Nan Doak will also be competing in something new this weekend after taking third in the 5,000 meter race at the Drake Relays with a school record time of 16:08.69. Hassard plans to have Doak run in the 1,500 and 300 (a race she hasn't participated in) at Ames Saturday.

Hassard is also using the meet to give some runners who haven't competed much a chance to participate.

STEPHANIE MAKS, a sophomore, will be running in the 100 and 200 and freshmen Suzanne Wiese will be participating in the 400 hurdles. Hassard said that both athletes "have been working hard and deserve a chance to compete.

Although the team competition won't be fierce, there will be some tough individual match-ups Saturday. In the 400, Jones is expected to meet Carlon Blackmon from Drake in one of the top match-ups of the day. Blackmon took fourth in the 400 last weekend at the Drake Relays

The 5 000 meter race should also feature some top runners with Jenny Spangler of Iowa facing Suzanne Youngberg and Margaret Davis from ISU. All three have already qualified for the nationals.

Only two Hawkeyes will not compete this weekend. Kathy Gillespie is ruled out with a groin strain and Natalie Spinks is considered "doubtful" because of a sore leg means the Kenny Williams', Caesar Smith's, Doug Pennino's and Jon Betz'."

The track and field rosters of Iowa's Big Four include 50 percent (86 of 172) in-state

Iowa is not known for bushels of high school track talent. However, Bergan says the state doesn't lack in quality. "The quantity is not there, but there is some quality,"

Iowa State usually reaps the All-American types. Two glittering examples are Crowell, from Mason City, Iowa, and Tietjens, from Kensett, Iowa.

The Hawkeyes' top in-state athlete is Smith, the freshman middle distance ace from East High School in Des Moines. Other than him, though, native Iowans aren't big point producers for the Hawks.

The Big Four's other two schools provide the opposite ends of the in-state recruiting spectrum. Northern Iowa has the highest percentage of Iowans (40 of 51), and Drake has the lowest (five of 28).

Lukas' three-horse entry is the first since 1946. Also coupled are Highland Park and Freezing Rain, while a five-horse field was established - consisting of Law Talk, Explosive Wagon, My Mac, Paris Prince and Luv A Libra. The 20-horse field is one of the largest in Derby history. In the 100th Derby, a record 23 horses competed in the race won by Cannonade, the sire of Caveat.

A MILD SURPRISE in the field was

Country Pine, with earnings of $74,158. After the 1974 Derby was contested, a 20horse limit - based on career money-earnings - was established. With the addition of Law Talk and Country Pine to Saturday's Derby field, projected starters Common Sense and High Honors were not entered.

Two seniors took top honors at the 1983 Dr. C.E. Obermann men's gymnastics awards banquet Thursday night at the Ironmen Inn.

Steve Troester, a senior from Waterloo, was named the recipient of the Dr. C.E. Obermann Award. The award, named after an Iowa gymnast in the 1920s who is the sponsor of the annual dinner, is given to the senior who has contributed the best of his athletic ability to the men's gymnastics team.

Troester owns the school record on the horizontal bar, posting a 9.8 score in a dual at Michigan. He also qualified for the NCAA Championships in the e-

ALL-AROUNDER Brett Garland, a Richland, Wash., native, was presented the first-ever N.R. Holzaepfel most valuable team member award. from Elmhurst, Ill., was named the team's captain for the 1983-84 season. Leo, who will replace Garland, is a former Big Ten co-champion on the pommel horse and has qualified for the NCAA meet the past two seasons.

Other gymnasts who won awards include Bob Leverence, the academic excellence award; freshman Joe Short, most improved gymnast; junior Brad Smith, most improved competitor and Stu Breitenstine, coach's appreciation award. Leverence and Breitenstine were 11th-place finishers in the NCAA meet, on the pommel horse and the floor exercise, respectively.

THREE SENIORS, Ken Cajet, Garland and Troester, were presented with rings for completing their careers

The formation of the Hawkeye Gymnastics Club, a booster organization, was also made at Thursday's dinner. The officers named for the organization include Ron Kroeze, president; John Alderman, vice-president and Barb Hansen, secretary/treasurer. The club, which is still in the organizational stage, will send out information this summer to former Iowa

Next week is final exam time, and nobody knows that better than the Iowa men's golf team.

The Hawkeyes will not compete in the Northern Intercollegiate in Bloomington, Ind., Saturday and Sunday due to conflicts with the university's exam schedule, according to Coach Chuck Zwiener.

"Originally, the Northern Intercollegiate was scheduled for the 6th through the 8th," Zwiener said, "but Indiana had their commencement on the 7th, and the administration didn't want them to host a tournament during commencement, so they had to move it back to Sunday and Monday. We couldn't go to Indiana because we have a rule here that you cannot compete during finals week." Although that is a university police it is not a Big Ten policy, according to Athletic Director Bump Elliott. He said that there is no Big Ten rule on competing during finals week because 'everybody has different schedules." The respective teams in the Big Ten have to work around their schedules as best they can, according to Elliott.

"IT'S NOT SOMETHING peculiar to the rest of the schools (invited to the Northern Intercollegiate)," said Hoosier Coach Bob Fitch, "It was golfers get their final exams out of the way. "That's what they are here for," he said. After the tests are over, the Hawkeves will start to concentrate on the Big Ten meet, May 20-22 in Iowa City, according to Zwiener.

When asked if he thought the one week lay-off would be counter productive after Iowa's first-place finish at Drake last weekend, Zwiener said, "Maybe by taking this week off we can maintain our winning role

Gophers will net league crown

Big Ten agree on about this year's conference meets is that both - the men's at Madison, Wis., and the women's at Chicago, will be unpredictible. But there are some interesting patterns worth noting before the first serve is truck today.

The important thing to remember bout the men's meet is that it's inoors, which makes for a faster surface. The clear-cut favorite No. 1 singles is Fredrik Pahlett of Minnesota. The big Swede is 34-4, 9-0 in the Big Ten, on the season and should cruise past the competition.

At No. 2, Minnesota's Stefan Eriksson is favored. But he will be strongly tested by Northwestern's Danny Weiss. Eriksson is 37-5 and 9-0, while Weiss is 32-9, 8-1. Eriksson won a close decision earlier this season when the two players met at Evanston. Give to Eriksson in a three-setter.

MICHIGAN'S ROSS Laser has the best record at No. 3. He is 5-1 in Big Ten competition but the indoor factor may hurt him. Wisconsin's Dan Arends' serve has been clocked at 130 mph and four of his five conference wins have come indoors. He is seeded in the middle of the pack, but he is a Mike Condon much better player on the fast service. Look for an upset here.

Another upset could come at No. 4. Michigan's Jim Sharton is 8-0 in conference play this season, but he had to struggle to get past Iowa's Jim Nelson last weekend. Nelson has taken most of his matches to three sets this season. He enters the meet with a 4-5 league mark. But two of those wins have come against players with better records. Sharton should win, but Nelson, or Illinois' Neil Adams, could surprise him.

WITH NO CLEAR-CUT favorite at No. 5, its anybody's guess who will win. Iowa's Cary Vorheis may be the biggest beneficiary of the meet being played indoors. Three of his four wins came indoors and Hawkeye Coach Steve Houghton says Vorheis' serve and volley game works well indoors. Marco Wen of Northwestern has to be favored but Vorheis is a streaky player. If he is on, he could pull off the overwhelming choice at No. 6. He was 16-1, 9-0 on the season and was never really challenged in his matches. His closest challenger is expected to be Iowa's John Willard. This should be easy for Moorin, but Willard played well at the conference meet and might be able to raise his game enough to beat Moorin, but don't count on it.

In doubles, the favorite for No. 1 slot has to be defending champs Mark Mees and Tom Haney. They had an 8-0 conference mark and haven't been too sorely tested. The Swedes' Pahlett and Eriksson may challenge, but their strength is in singles. Mees and Haney

AT NO. 2, Steve Lovett and Tom Klien of Wisconsin are big favorites. The fact that the meet is on their home court should give them a big advantage. Peter Kolaric and Lou McKee of Minnesota could challenge but the title should stay in Badgertown.

The most open division of the meet may be at No. 3 doubles. The most consistant team in recent weeks has been Iowa's Willard and Sunil Reddy. They have won their last four matches, leaving them at 4-2 in the conference. Bill Koch and Jeff Cohen of Indiana have a to anyone, but right now Willard and Reddy look to be the top choice.

As for the team title, look for Minnesota to end the long Michigan string. The Gophers were hurt by injuries early but are now at full strength and have what it takes to keep the Wolverines from their 16th straight crown. Iowa? Look for the Hawks to pull some surprises and also be surprised. The Hawkeyes look good for fifth place.

At the women's meet, Indiana is the top seed, with Northwestern right behind them. The Hoosiers are the defending champs, but there is bad blood between Indiana and Northwestern. Hoosier Coach Lin Loring refused to schedule the Wildcats during the regular season and Northwestern Coach Sandy Stap hasn't forgotten it.

WHEN THE TWO teams meet for the title (and it's a safe bet they will), it will be Northwestern that comes out on top. The advantage of playing at home combined with the fact Indiana's top player, Heather Crowe, has been nursing an elbow injury and may not be at full strength, should be enough to give the Wildcats the title.

Group: Up legal drinking age

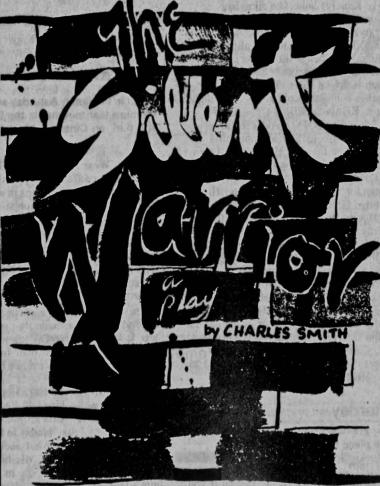

DES MOINES (UPI) - A poll of Iowa high school athletic directors released this week indicates overwhelming approval of a call to raise the state's legal drinking

The poll, conducted at the Iowa High School Athletic Directors Association convention in late March, shows 93 percent of the respondents would like to see Iowa's legal drinking age raised from 19 to 21 years of age.

Other results of the poll show 71 percent of the athletic directors in favor of the six-player girls basketball game, 88 percent support the three-point field goal in basketball, and 89 percent back a bench decorum rule for both boys and girls basketball coaches.

Indianapolis Dome is nearly a reality

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) - Construction is on schedule for the July 1984 dream-to-become-reality - the Hoosier Dome in downtown Indianapolis.

With no serious weather or building problems so far, the work on the project southwest of the downtown circle is about 60 percent complete, project manager Alan J. Armstrong said.

There is a lot of work that won't be done until the top is put up, Armstrong said. That includes putting in the concrete floor, which will support the arlificial turf used for athletic events.

The entire dome has to be sealed airtight before much of the inside work is done. Like most of the other domes built in America, the entrances will be revolving doors to keep the inside air in and the outside air out.

At the same time, the air is being circulated from the top of the dome, lown through air ducts surrounding the floor, then back up to the top of the stadium to be recirculated.

"IF WE WANTED to, we could have a complete change of air in 20 linutes," Armstrong said.

11 months since the groundbreaking, Armstrong said construction work "has gone fairly well. Most of the work two sports in mind.

is being done by local contractors, and they are taking a lot of pride in their work. The union people are taking extreme pride in their work. Things have fallen together pretty well."

Armstrong said the mild winter did not speed up the construction schedule, but was preferable to having a heavy

"It helps, but it's hard to say how much," Armstrong said about the warm winter. "If you know its going to be that way, you can gear up for it. But we didn't know.'

Along with the domed stadium, which will have permanent seating for 60,000 and will cost $75 million, an exhibition hall is being built south of the current Indiana Convention Center

"A lot of people still don't understand," Armstrong said. "We're exhave 300,000 square feet of space for conventions. Facilities-wise, we could easily handle a political convention."

Still, it is the domed stadium's sports uses about which most people care. there are groups trying to bring But all of that is in the future. In the professional football and baseball into the stadium, and, for the most part, the stadium is being designed with those

CINCINNATI (UPI) - World Boxing Association junior welterweight champion Aaron Pryor and his estranged manager Thursday reached a courtapproved agreement permitting Pryor's rematch with Alexis Arguello.

The agreement puts aside the contract dispute between Pryor and Donald "Buddy" LaRosa, whom the boxer wants to fire as his manager, until after Pryor's bout with Arguello. The fight is tentatively scheduled for Aug. 13 in Las Vegas, Nev.

In the season's final production of "Live from Corroboree," Hawkeye Cablevision-5 presents New York video artist Bob Harris, Harris, influenced by, among others, Gregory Bateson and Lao-tzu, sees motion as the key element in linking together space, time, the "real" world and the video "image." His show from Corroboree features the creation of an Iowa City landscape based on motion, 8 p.m., cable-5. (For those who want to see the show in person, the Corroboree Gallery is located at Market and Gilbert.)

· And in the season's final production of 'Dallas," all hell breaks loose at Southfork - literally, Pam (Victoria Principal) decides to separate from Bobby (Patrick Duffy) but agrees to help him get the drill bit to win Ewing Oil, said news of which sends J.R. (Larry Hagman) crawling for a

But that's not all J.R.'s crawling for. Ray (Steve Kanaly) holds the slimebag responsible for Mickey's (Timothy Patrick Murphy) paralysis and decides to pay him in kind. There's some name-calling, then a fistfight, and then a thrown candelabrum ... oh, yes — Sue Ellen (Linda Gray) and John Ross (Tyler Banks) are upstairs. Someone could lose a life tonight. 8 p.m., KGAN-2; WHBF-4.

• Tonight's "SCTV" repeat features Robin Williams as Slip Mahoney in a Bowery Boys takeoff, Meanwhile, Johnny LaRue (John Candy) is in trouble again, and Count Floyd (Joe Flaherty) repairs to the den for another Monster Chiller Horror Feature. 11:30 p.m., KWWL-7.

• Movies on cable: Meatballs (Bill Murray); 7 p.m., HBO-4. Blackboard Jungle (Glenn Ford, Sidney Poitier, music by Bill Haley and the Comets); 7 p.m., Cinemax-13. It's all in the family Saturday when Jane Fonda, left, her father Henry, and Katharine Hepburn star together in the Oscar-winning film, On Golden Pond. The film will air at 5 p.m. on Cinemax-13 as part of that channel's May "Fonda Family" tribute.

Men Don't Wear Plaid presents Steve Martin as detective Rigby Reardon, a fasttalking, fast-walking shamus in search of a missing scientist-philanthropistcheesemaker. Needless to say, the jokes fly faster than the bullets here, especially in the movie's best gimmick: Rigby's dialogue with Bogart, Bergman, Bette Davis and others in clips from their films. Also starring Reiner and Rachel Ward ("The Thorn Birds"). 7 p.m., HBO-4.

• On Golden Pond set records for HBO viewership when it made its premiere there last December. The big movie network has now sent it over to its little brother Cinemax for a summer run as part of that services May "Fonda Family" tribute. See Henry and Kate Hepburn suck face tonight, while Jane looks on in awe. 5 p.m., Cinemax-13. (Other films in the festival include Julia, Sunday in New York, and Summer Solstice. What about Peter?)

• Other cable features: Missing (Jack Lemmon, Sissy Spacek); 5 p.m., HBO-4. Julia (Jane Fonda, Vanessa Redgrave); 7 p.m., Cinemax-13. Continental Divide (John Belushi, Blair Brown); 10 p.m., HBO-4.

• "TV's Greatest Commercials" is yet another NBC "sweepie cheapie" - a show that costs nothing to put together and automatically gets huge ratings. Still, there is a certain amount of historical and cultural information to be gained here, not to mention a few laughs. Tonight's show features early TV ads done by "unknowns" Dustin Hoffman, Lily Tomlin, John Belushi, John Travolta, Sly Stallone and others. 7 p.m.

• Well, we should let you know that Francis Ford Coppola's Apocalypse Now is being televised at 7 p.m. by ABC tonight. Having said that, we'll now go out of our way to tell you not to watch it. This is a wondrous film, but after years-long hassles over whether or not it would be a 70 mm or a 35 mm release, with endings appropriate to each, what the sound would be like, etc., etc., for it to be wasted on a foot-wide screen with tinny noise is an injustice both to the movie and to the viewer. You might as well listen to a digital recording of Beethoven's Ninth on a Mattel Close 'n' Play. (The same goes for ABC's showing of Stanley Kubrick's The Shining Friday 建设区(6374322)

'Hill Street' star Enriquez is forceful Latino presence the embittered Lt. Ray Calletano in "Hill Street Blues," is the most visible Latino on TV and is fast becoming the favorite with Hispanic viewers.

There aren't many Hispanic faces in series TV, to Erik Estrada, of "CHiPs" is one, but the young man with the flashing white teeth and macho image speaks perfect English and could be a Ryan O'Neal clone with a Malibu tan.

Highly visible, too, is Ricardo Montalban. But his name in "Fantasy Island" is Roarke. Proud as he is of his Mexican heritage, Montalban, resplendent in meticulously tailored wardrobe, is an intimidating figure

It is difficult, if not impossible, for the average American of Mexican, Puerto Rican, Cuban or El Salvadoran background — especially new arrivals in lower income brackets - to identify with him or Imagine, then, the delight Latinos take in Enriquez in his rumpled suits as Lieutenant Calletano, an authority figure who is still one of them.

Enriquez, a native Nicaraguan, and Calletano, a Colombian in the series, are one and the same man. One's an actor and the other a cop, true, but they share a fierce pride in their work and national

IT WASN'T UNTIL last October that Enriquez made his presence felt.

Calletano was honored in the "Officer of the Year" episode at a banquet at which huevos rancheros and marguerita cocktails were served with obvious patronization by the police department and his fellow officers.

Despite the honor, Calletano blew his stack in an impassioned speech. He laced into hidden prejudices and demeaning attitudes toward Hispanics prevalent in our society.

It was a brilliant, moving speech. Its impact on viewers, especially Latinos, was electric.

"It changed my career," Enriquez said. "That show, and a subsequent three-parter in which Calletano stands up to Captain Furillo about a promotion, made Calletano a symbol for all Latinos. "Since then I have made two feature films and a

> IN ADDITION to boosting Enriquez' career, the Calletano character has catapulted him to the front rank of Hispanic spokesmen.

Last month the League of United Latin American Citizens honored Enriquez at a Corpus Christi, Texas, banquet, along with singer Vikki Carr, Los Angeles Raiders coach Tom Flores, New Mexico governor Toney Amaya and Miami mayor Maurice

"It was a great honor for me to be in that com-Enriquez said.

'The 1980 census showed there are 15 million Latinos in the United States, but many were not counted, especially among the illegals. The number probably is more than 20 million.

"There is a need for Hispanics to unite and become an important political force. To do so we need to forget our differences and concentrate on our common goals.

"It is wrong for Mexicans, Puerto Ricans, Cubans and other Latinos to be fighting each other. It weakens our cause.

"I want to travel and make Latinos more aware of their rights as American citizens. I want them to get more into the mainstream without losing pride and knowledge of their background and culture.

"MORE LATINOS should be brought into business and the arts.

"Without being boastful, I set myself as an example of achievement, that the American dream still exists - but it takes hard work, faith in God, concentration and sacrifices

'Sometimes it even means suffering humiliation, which must be overlooked in order to achieve your

More Americans traveling abroad

WASHINGTON (UPI) - U.S. flag carriers captured a slightly larger share of the international air travel market last year than the year before despite a small drop in the total number of passengers flying, the Commerce Department said Thursday.

The department's Travel and Tourism Administration said almost 50 percent of air travel to and from the United States was aboard U.S.-owned carriers, up 1 percent from 1981.

The total volume of passenger traffic between the up 2 percent from 1981.

United States and other countries, except Canada. was down 3 percent from 1981, the report said.

The report said that with the strengthening of the dollar more Americans were traveling around the globe. The number of U.S. citizens traveling abroad rose almost 4 percent, with the domestic carriers flying 5 percent more American citizens. The foreign carriers' volume of American travelers was
