Won't you be mime?

A group of about 25 youngsters gathered outside the Iowa City Libary Tuesday afternoon to participate in this week's "Kid Stuff" program - a mime demonstration performed by Deanne Wortman, library assistant in charge of children's programing. Wortman, above, explains what different types of make-up she uses and, right, how it is applied. Wortman had planned to paint all the kids' faces and teach them some simple mime maneuvers, but due to the largerthan-expected turnout, she could only show how she applied make-up to herself. When she finished her face, she asked the kids if they would rather have her perform or paint little designs on their faces. Of course, they opted for the personal paint job. The libary has been holding these informal get-togethers for children every Tuesday afternoon for the past year to show local kids different forms of entertainment and to prepare them for an upcoming talent show to be held on July 26. Although "Kid Stuff" is part of the libary's normal program offered for children, this week it took place outside to coincide with the lowa City Arts Fest being held this week.

Reagan says debate book wasn't used revising upwards his estimate of economic recovery, President Reagan said Tuesday "America's economy is beginning to sparkle." And he again denied accusations he is a "rich man's president."

At his 18th news conference, Reagan said the economy "is strong and getting stronger." He conceded there is still "a long way to go," but said there are "solid signs of hope" on the economic front and he predicted economic growth would total 5.5 percent this year, compared with earlier administration estimates of 4.7 per-

Reagan denied his administration favors the rich, saying "the rich don't need my help, and I'm not doing things to help the rich. What I want is to make sure this is a country where people can get rich."

But the news conference was dominated by questions about the debate book apparently purloined from the Carter camp in 1980 and used to prepare Reagan for the crucial presidential debate many observers felt clinched his election.

The president dismissed the papers as unimportant to his campaign, and added, "I never knew anything about it until you started talking about it."

AFTER SEVERAL questions about the ethics of using the Carter material, Reagan said it did represent the kind of "double standards" applied to political campaigns which he said in general he Saying he had no plans to discipline top administration aides who used the Carter papers in preparing him for the debate, Reagan played down the importance of the material involved.

'Everything that was used in that debate had been used time and time again on the campaign trail," he said of the material in the Carter papers.

On Page 4A:

Reporters are handed documents on the unfolding "briefing book" controversy by the White House, just four hours before Reagan went on nation television.

There wasn't any campaign strategy in those campaign positions.

As for his own role in the matter, Reagan said: "Since it (the Carter material) never got to the debater ... what purpose did it serve?"

Only a few questions at the news conference touched on other subjects, mainly the economy and Central

MARTIN FELDSTEIN, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, said afterward the increased estimate for economic growth should reduce the administration's estimate of a $208 billion budget deficit this year by about $10

He said the administration now projects unemployment at around 9.5 percent in the fourth quarter of this year, See Reagan, page 5A

Supervisor Myers taken to hospital

By John Tieszen Special to The Daily Iowan

Johnson County Board of Supervisors member Dick Myers is listed in stable condition in the intensive care ward of Mercy Hospital after he collapsed outside the Iowa City Federal Building

Tuesday morning. Mercy Hospital would not release the diagnosis of Myers' illness.

Myers, 48, was on his way to the informal meeting of the supervisors when he "started to shuffle," according to Johnson County Treasurer Donald Krall, who was outside the Federal Building when it happened. "I took him by the arm and sat him down on a bench," Krall said.

Fellow supervisor Betty Ockenfels walked up and assisted Myers by loosening his shirt and tie. "Dick said that he was moving very slowly," Ockenfels said.

Ockenfels said Myers complained of 'intense abdominal pain and of a little See Abortion, page 5A chest pain." He also said he was short of breath, she said.

A JOHNSON COUNTY Ambulance took Myers to Mercy Hospital where he was listed in fair condition for most of the day. His condition was changed to stable during the early evening.

Myers' wife, Doris, said Tuesday afternoon that Myers is "doing well and looking good. He is alert, responsive, but still on the monitor and still on oxygen. They are monitoring his heart."

She also said that he had experienced some nausea, including vomiting. Myers was elected to the board of supervisors in November, 1982. He won the seat in a special election after it was vacated by the death of Lorada

Myers has lived in Johnson County all of his life, according to Riley Grimes, a Johnson County employee who has known Myers for six years. Myers has owned and operated the Hawk I Truck Stop in Coralville for more than 15 years.

Such a book is Political Forces in Argentina, written by UI political science professor Peter G. Snow. It has suddenly become a hit in Argentina, where it has been number one for at least three of the last six weeks it has been on the best seller list. Snow's book is a study of how the parties, the military, the academic groups and the Catholic Church in-the newer version was translated into Spanish by an Argentine publisher. Snow said the book is already out of date due to the recent social changes in the country, but he thinks he understands the reason for the sudden

A FREER POLITICAL climate has developed in the country since its defeat in the Falklands War, Snow said. The military government not only lost the war, they lied to the Argentine people about the war's progress. When the British won, the military's credibility as a government and a defender of the country was crippled, he said. The result is an election of a new government to be held in October.

Rebels attack U.S. embassy

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador - Unknown gunmen Tuesday killed Rene Barrios Amaya, prominent member of the right-wing Republican Nationalist Alliance Party and a representative in the Constituent Assembly, court authorities said.

Rebels also claimed responsibility for a machine-gun attack on the U.S. Embassy Monday and said it was staged "to denounce scorched earth operations the Salvadoran army, advised by North Americans, is carrying out in San Vicente province." No one was injured in the attack.

Democrats lose their lead

ROME - Final results for Monday's parliamentary election showed severe setbacks for the Christian Democratic Party, leaving Italy's govenment even less stable than the 43 predecessors of the past 38 years, according to political commentators.

The Christian Democrats, which have dominated Italy since World War II, lost 37 chamber seats and 5.4 percent of the popular vote - dropping to just 3 percent ahead of the Communist Party.

Supervisors considering ordinance to protect farmers from lawsuits

Special to The Daily Iowan

Johnson County farmers will be protected from "frivolous nuisance lawsuits" filed by their non-farming neighbors if the Johnson County Board of Supervisors passes a proposed ordinance, according to county Planner Jud TePaske.

The Right-To-Farm Ordinance, which will be brought before a public hearing this fall, "gives an obvious upper hand to farmers in rural areas," TePaske said.

According to the ordinance, a suit cannot be filed by a person "if the agricultural operation was conducted in accordance with accepted agricultural practices."

"Accepted agricultuaral practices" will be determined by an expert witness if such a suit is brought before a judge, TePaske

No lawsuits of this type have been filed in Johnson County yet, TePaske said, and the ordinance is designed to prevent any from being filed in the future.

"NATIONWIDE, farmers have been getting sued by non-farmers for farm odor or other farm nuisances. This ordinance attempts to limit the type of lawsuits against

"There is an increased demand for rural home sites and so potential conflict is possi-

Johnson County Supervisor Dennis Langenberg said, "It is a good ordinance because it protects the farmer. They were there first.

Langenberg said he had previously read about lawsuits stemming from farm odor or noise from farm machinery. "This will make people who are moving out there (to rural areas) aware of what to expect. Town people who move out the the country expecting town living just won't get it," he

The ordinance, designed by TePaske, is based on a similar one in Black Hawk County. "It is the appropriate thing to do,"

The ordinance will be brought before the public after August, according to Langenberg. Then it will be voted on by the supervisors. "I don't think it will have any problems, but we'll have to wait until the public hearing," Langenberg said.

ALSO, THE supervisors are considering purchasing two parcels of land near the Coralville Reservoir from the U.S. govern-

The first parcel of land, which is five acres, is bounded on the east side by U.S. Highway 218 and by the entrance road to the reservoir marina. The other parcel, which is 30 acres, is bounded on the south side by highway 218 and by the entrance to Lake Macbride State Park.

TePaske said the government is selling the land in accordance with Secretary of the Interior James Watt's policy regarding unused government land. "States and counties have the first crack at it," he said.

It will be between 60 and 90 days before the supervisors know whether they will be able to purchase the land and how much it will cost, he said.

Collision causes $4,000 in damage

People who love wine and are willing to wait 20 years to drink it can own a palatable masterpiece, according to Clyde Kohn, professor emeritus in the UI department of Geography.

Kohn said that a Chateau LaTour 1978 will more than double in value, and will be "smooth and velvety ... just a delight," after being stored 20 years or more.

The Chateau LaTour can be bought at any of the state's seven liquor stores designated as "connoisseur wine stores, in which very expensive wines are stocked," said Kohn, who is teaching a World of Wines class at the UI.

Eight bottles of the wine are currently available for $61 each at the state liquor store on Keokuk Street in Iowa City, according to store employees. Jeff Wallace, one of Kohn's students, decided to spend $61 on a bottle of Chateau LaTour 1978, ecause he thought it was "a good investment." "Since I can't go out and buy an expensive painting, I bought a good bottle of wine," he said. "I bought the wine partly for the novelty of it, partly because it's a fun thing to have, and partly because I

WALLACE SAID he probably won't sell the wine after storing it for 20 years, even though it will probably be worth $200 by then.

"At this point, I think I'll drink it in 20 years, depending on what's happening in my life, if I have something really big to celebrate," he said.

"For now, the wine is sitting in the basement of my parents' house, and until I get a house of my own, I'm going to leave it there where it's safe," Wallace Less expensive domestic wines can also be a good investment, Kohn said. His favorites include a California Chardonnay and a Cabernet Sauvignon from either the Napa or Sonoma valleys in Califor-"The kings and queens and princesses of the world

BUT IOWANS have access to some excellent There are over 5,000 wines available in liquor stores in Iowa," Kohn said. "If a wine is not available and you want a case of it, the state will buy it for you. It may take six or seven months, though, he added.

Most wines don't need to be stored and aged to improve their quality. These wines, which include Beauiolais, California Zinfandels, Gamays and most German wines, should be consumed by the time they are 3 years old.

For Bordeaux wines and French Burgundies, proper storage is imperative to maintain the quality of the wine, Kohn said.

Kohn said the wine should be stored in a dark place that is free of vibrations. The temperature should be held constant at 55 to 65 degrees.

Students living in apartments or rooming houses usually find it difficult to store wines properly, Kohn said. The best place to keep wine is in an underground wine cellar where it is protected from temperature changes.

Reagan turns over leaked information

Reagan's 1980 campaign had inside information from the opposition, including the leaked minutes of a "brainstorming session" by aides to President Carter, documents released by the White House showed Tuesday.

The voluminous material, turned over to the Justice Department, was given to reporters less than four hours before Reagan was to be questioned about the unfolding political controversy during his 18th formal news conference.

The sheaf of papers was found in the files of administration officials David Gergen and Francis Hodsoll, who together assembled the material used to coach Reagan for his only campaign debate with Carter three years ago.

But Gergen and Hodsoll, like White House chief of staff James Baker and budget director David Stockman, who also helped coach Reagan for the debate, said the material they received was not the final briefing book prepared for Carter.

Gergen, now White House comunications director, said the Reagan camp apparently obtained an early draft of the Carter briefing book, which contained more detailed recommendations on attacks, rebuttals and debate strategy.

THE REAGAN AIDES all denied knowing how the material was obtained. However, a separate memo found in Gergen's files said the camsomeone "intimately connected" to a member of the Carter debate staff.

Gergen, who said last week he did not recall seeing or using the Carter materials, was identified as the recipient of three memos detailing debate strategy being formulated by the Carter camp.

The first two were accompanied by a cover letter to Hodsoll that described the information as "items from the Carter group" and was signed "Love to all, Myles." The sender was identified as Myles Martel, a campaign consul-

The third memo was sent to Gergen by Wayne Valis, a campaign staffer, who said it contained notes "based on a Carter debate staff brainstorming session." Valis described the inside inforsaid it came from "a source intimately member.

The sheer volume of the material, as well as the handwritten notes showing that Reagan aides had a secret link to the Carter camp, dashed White House hopes that the debate book controversy could be quickly or easily contained. Gergen sent a letter to Rep. Donald Albosta, D-Mich., apologizing for having said last week that he did not recall

"UNFORTUNATELY," he said, "I wrote that letter to you before completing a thorough search of all my files. I just didn't think I had anything there of relevance. That was a mistake I very much regret.

> Only CIA Director William Casey, who served as campaign manager, stuck by the position he took last week in denying ever having seen Carter briefing papers. Baker said last week he recalled receiving some Carter camp material from Casev.

The flap began when a new book reported Reagan aides had used materials compiled for Carter to help Reagan prepare for his crucial, nationally televised campaign debate with against Carter.

Reagan has directed the Justice Department to "monitor" all allegations for evidence of illegality, and instructed his staff to come forward with relevant information.

Asked if he supports a committee mation as "nothing spectacular," and probe of the matter, House Speaker Thomas O'Neill said: "Personally, I'd around here.

Patricia Hayek, Tom Cilek, Michael Hart and President Lynne Cannon voted against the Also Tuesday, Cannon, Aldinger and Dodge St. Hart said they were in favor of selling There w Sabin School to the county. Iowa City Council members Monday night informally agreed the sale of Sabin to the Johnson County Board of Supervisors for use as county office space would satisfy the public purpose use asked for by the city.

AFTER NINE MONTHS of haggling, both the council and school board last week reached a tentative agreement to resolve the Central Junior High ownership issue. The school board is considering selling Sabin to the county and moving its offices into either the Central building or Mann School at 521 N.

There was some disagreement on the board, however, on whether its offices should be moved into Central or Mann

Cannon said. "I personally would put the Central offices at Sabin and sell off part of the (Central) property."

But Aldinger said, "I'm in favor of selling both Central and Sabin and moving the Central offices to Mann."

Mayor Mary Neuhauser said Monday that along with an undetermined amount of cash, the sale of Sabin would satisfy the public purpose aspect by providing the city with additional offstreet parking.

Arafat's deputy military commander, Khalil Wazir, said at a news conference in the northern Lebanese city of Tripoli that the rebels were "closing all the roads to negotiations" for reform in the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Wazir said the rebels attacked bases throughout Lebanon of Arafat's Fatah guerrilla group, the largest PLO faction, and cut key highways through the Bekaa Valley junction of Chtaura and the eastern Lebanese city of Baalbek.

Arafat threatened to "cut off the tongue" of Khadafy last month unless he quit his support for rebels. An attempted rapprochement, when Arafat and Khadafy visited North Yemen, appeared to have failed.

The attack gave the rebels led by Col. Said Moussa, known as Abu Moussa, control of most of the Bekaa Valley where Palestinian and Syrian forces face Israeli troops

Cars riddled with bullets were abandoned along the sides of the road near Chtaura and a body lay on the highway. Shops in the town, a market center 22 miles east of Beirut, were shuttered and the streets deserted.

Arafat, chairman of the PLO as well as Fatah, was expelled from Syria and Syrian-held Lebanon last Friday for charging that Syria was militarily backing the PLO rebels.

The beleaguered PLO chief flew from his headquarters in Tunis to Algiers to meet President Chadli Benjedid, WAFA said. The Tunisian News Agency said the PLO executive committee will meet in Tunis within the next two days.

U.S. envoy Philip Habib, meanwhile, met Egyptian officials in Cairo on a Middle East shuttle aimed at withdrawing foreign forces from Lebanon. Habib also has visited Israel and Saudi Arabia since returning to the region Sunday

It's been awhile since we've had a nice, fragrant scandal to perk up the news. One can be sure the Democrats include a request for one in their evening devotions, but so far neither the Almighty nor Ronald Reagan has seen fit to give them political succor. So desperate have the Democrats become that they have seized upon the fact that a briefing book made for Jimmy Carter in preparation for his televised debate with Ronald Reagan in the 1980 campaign was, shall we say, illicitly transferred from Carter hands to Reagan hands. Close, fellas, but no cigar.

The odd thing is that the Reaganauts are giving the Democrats a helping hand in blowing this out of proportion. Reagan aides have thought and thought, and wouldn't you just know it: They can't remember a thing about the briefing book nor who gave it to them. Fancy that. George Will, who was an ex officio scullion in the Reagan campaign's kitchen cabinet, says he saw it, but it wasn't a book at all, it was a collection of mimeographed sheets and not even very interesting ones - so there, case closed. And the evervigilant Justice Department is looking into the matter, although one hopes with more vigor than they showed when most of them worked for the Reagan campaign when the fateful book first appeared among them.

All in all, this is hardly a scandal and certainly not a "gate." It is dishonest, sneaky, tacky and a dirty trick, not just because they accepted the book, but because they seemed to actively solicit it and might have even had a "mole" planted in the Carter camp to get it for them. It gave Reagan an unfair advantage in his televised debate with Carter, which was for all intents and purposes the final nail in Carter's coffin. It let him know everything Carter was

And that brings up another interesting point. Given Reagan's frequent and often obvious misstatements of fact and comparing them with his debate performance, he doesn't seem to read his own briefing books as thoroughly as he reads other people's. So maybe he should fire his own staff and hire Carter's. But he should beware - you never know who you can trust these days. Or do

Baker's pipe dream

Recently Sen. Howard Baker, R-Tenn., has called for a return to the citizen-legislator: the farmer, lawyer, or doctor who comes to Washington for a few months a year, passes needed legislation and then returns home to his farm, his business or his practice. This citizen-legislator would serve only a few terms.

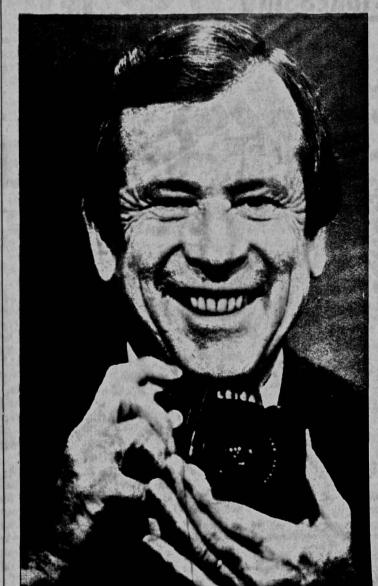

This wonderful ideal, which actually was once the norm on the federal and state level, has almost completely passed into oblivion. But the dream, apparently, dies hard. It is an appealing dream, a nostalgia, a turning to simpler days and simpler ways. Calling for its return is not only futile, but in some ways dangerous. The citizen-legislator could not succeed now.

The U.S. budget is heading toward the trillion dollar a year mark. It is Congress that sets the priorities, establishes policies and spends that money. The money to be allocated is huge, the issues complex, and the knowledge needed to act wisely and efficiently is immense. Any corporation that tried to run that big a company with part-time help would go bust.

Even if Congress did return to the citizen-legislator, it would have to leave full-time staff behind to answer constituent mail and keep an eye on the store. In the end that would mean the staff would know more than the elected representatives about the nation's business, and that means the staff would in the end, in reality, be making the decisions - more than they do now. Those with the knowledge have the power. And the lobbyists would stay, too, to work on the staff.

So Baker's idea is a pleasant way to waste some time, but no more. If he really wants to help improve Congress, he should work on ways to reduce the power of special interest groups — perhaps by supporting public funding of Congressional elections.

Linda Schuppener

Reagan ineligible for merit pay generated a favorable national response with several of his suggestions for improving the quality of American education. Recently a poll conducted by Newsweek revealed that 80 percent of Americans would like to see teachers' salaries based on individual merit, while a staggering 90 percent agree that prospective teachers should have to pass competency tests.

Hoyt

measured in part by a competency test. The test should involve the ability of the individual to remember complicated facts and figures, to adequately understand complex issues inof such a test: 1) Carter; 2) Nixon; 3)

I'm not only certain that Reagan would finish dead last, but also that there would be a large gulf between his score and Jerry Ford's, despite Ford's reputation as a dim bulb. Reagan not also is nowhere close to his predecessors in keeping up with his official reading, relying frequently on the summaries of others. So limited is his ability to think abstractly that he is vations, such as the now famous inci-

Johnson; 4) Ford; 5) Reagan.

But on the theory that what's good for the goslings should also be good for the country's biggest goose, shouldn't U.S. presidents also have to pass written competency tests before assuming office, and subsequently have their pay based on individual merit rather than receiving the same salary regardless of performance?

With teachers, more than one method of teaching may be effective. With presidents, more than one political approach may be effective. In order to assure a truly objective evaluation of a president, only nonpartisan criteria could be applied. A fair evaluation must use standards without Democratic or Republican, liberal or conservative bias.

The following standards seem important, impartial, and simple to apply. A president might be fairly evaluated according to his 1) leadership ability; 2) intelligence; 3) integrity; 4) concern for the common man; 5) crisis management.

When these criteria are applied, how would Ronald Reagan measure up against his recent predecessors, say from Lyndon Johnson to Jimmy Car-

LEADERSHIP involves the ability to get one's programs into effect. A president's ideas, however brilliant, are useless if the American public will not support them and Congress will not im-

Nixon rates first in this category. He battled and usually beat a Democratic Congress, manipulated the media, outmaneuvered his critics, and won reelection by a resounding margin. There was never any question - until Nixon started falling apart toward the end of the Watergate investigation - about who was running the country.

Reagan would rank third, below Lyndon Johnson, although Reagan's rate of success with Congress is presently on the decline. Johnson enjoyed the benefits of a strong Democratic majority, but lost popular support over the mishandling of Vietnam. Ford, despite the benefit of years in the House leadership and a post-Watergate swell of bipartisan cooperation, was only moderately effective. Carter, a Washington outsider, never established Congressional support, and is clearly the bottom man in this category.

would be the obvious caboose, preceded by LBJ. Johnson was often willing to distort the truth for his own advantage; he also had a nasty penchant for using FBI files shared with him by J. Edgar Hoover for "influencing" the votes of various senators and congressmen. INTELLIGENCE is the one presidential area that could be

Carter and Ford were essentially honest men in a job where total disclosure is a practical impossibility. The biggest question about Ford's honesty is whether his pardon for Nixon was part of a deal which led Nixon to appoint Ford his vicepresident after the resignation of Spiro

Reagan deserves his place behind Jimmy and Jerry. He has a deliberate tendency toward obfuscating the facts with shallow generalizations; on several occasions he has been caught using horribly erroneous "statistics" to advance his positions.

CONCERN FOR THE COMMON MAN: Johnson and Carter lead the pack. The Johnson administration produced sweeping civil rights legislation, Medicare, and the "War on Poverty" - although he lost points for his inability to understand the anti-war movement. One of Carter's greatest attributes was his concern not only with the "human rights" of Americans, but with international human rights for all INTEGRITY: Reagan would rank in - even those who were perThird-place Ford had the common touch, and at least maintained the social programs of his predecessors.

Reagan ranks rock bottom. As imperious as Nixon was, the poor prospered during his presidency in comparison to what Reagan's domestic economic policies have achieved. Reaganomics rewards plutocrats, penalizes the middle class and the poor. Carter's human rights policies have been discarded in a return to the unquestioning support of any regime willing to oppose communism. Reagan is visibly out of touch with major portions of his constituency: women, blacks, blue-collar workers, students. Reagan has been an active opponent of the Freedom of Information Act; as much as possible, he attempts to isolate bureaucracy in a shroud of secrecy. His disdain for foreigners was made apparent by his recent warning that communist victories in Central America would lead to floods of refugees entering the United States a bigoted scare-tactic that revealed his concern for preserving America's white majority, not for the suffering of the innocent individuals caught in Latin America's continuing turmoil.

CRISIS MANAGEMENT allows measurement of a president's ability to respond to special circumstances that may occur during his presidency. • Nixon ranks first for his stunning move to open relationships with Communist China despite his strong anticommunist background. Johnson scores high for his management of the most important issue of his presidency, civil rights.

Ford ranks third for his work to restore confidence in the presidency and in the system after Watergate. Carter ranks last - despite much effort, ultimately events in the Middle East controlled him rather than vice Reagan ranks fourth, slightly ahead of Carter. Clearly the most important issue of his administration is the threat of nuclear war; to date, Reagan has not risen to meet it. His pronouncements on nuclear armament have not changed significantly in two decades.

WHEN THE RESULTS are tallied, Johnson, Carter and Nixon are left as rough equals at the top. Each had considerable strengths in some areas; each was also far from perfect, making major presidential mistakes. Ford, a decent guy but no one's idea of brilliant presidential material, finishes a clear

Words, pictures and El Salvador

FRIEND sympathetic with the revolution in El Salvador recently expressed dissatisfaction with the articles on Central America appearing in the Des Moines Register. My friend was bothered by the menand-women-in-the-streets approach. He claimed it obscured the "larger issues." He, of course, saw them from his vantage point, i.e., someone who assumed he knew what they were. As I thought about the problems of portraying an absolutely foreign world, a world available to most of us only second-hand, it occured to me that it really came down to the kinds of pictures you could draw from the materials presented. Which, obviously, depended upon where you got them and what they consisted of.

While El Salvador is "news," there will be no shortages of "stories." Americans will be inundated with them. But what will be remembered, what will be the sense of the place, the situation, the feeling we'll retain, if we retain anything at all? What will we think about if, again, El Salvador gives us pause to do just that: think. Perhaps Joan Didion, the novelist-essayist, has rendered the place most succinctly in Salvador, a book comprising several articles written for The New York Review of Books. In reviewing that work, Robert Stone - whose prize-winning novel, A Flag for Sunrise, concerns a curiously similar country (and reflects the time he spent "observing" Central America) - cited a single, salient line: "Terror is the given." But what is the picture of terror we get headlined victims fleeing from "war zones." Sunday's opened with color photos of two "rebels" who claimed they were "freedom fighters." It may seem pedantic to distinguish between "war" and "revolution," but such distinctions are necessary if we are to understand the way certain words cause us to think of certain situations. In her book On Revolution, Hannah Arendt states, "Only where change occurs in the sense of a new beginning, where violence is used to constitute an altogether different form of government, to bring out the formation of a new body politic, where the liberation from oppression aims at least at the constitution of freedom, can we speak of revolution." Arendt has elsewhere elaborated distinctions guarding such concepts as "war," "violence," 'power," "force," which, as words, are all too often treated to glib, synonymous exchanges, muddying the discourse on already turbid and turbulent matters. But Arendt's explanations are much too long to appear anywhere other than in books or magazines, and not under an editorial gun. A statewide out for readers besides those in Didion's or Arendt's orbit.

AT STAKE HERE is how to realize a situation in print — even with the use of photographs. The June 19 Register showed a Salvadoran man sitting on a hammock, behind him his "hut" or 'shanty," call it what you will: a patchwork of corrugated tin and burlap bags held together by dried mud - the kind of picture that may or may not require a thousand words. Why? First, you can't feel the heat nor smell the air. How much of the night seeps through the gaps or comes up through the ground? The naked child in the background can either be seen as a victim of poverty or a little cutie beating the heat without honoring civilized conventions. Of course, the very statement "victim of poverty" is duplicitous. Does poverty impoverish its victims or is someone the force behind poverty?

Sunday's Register showed photos of government soldiers, young, part Indian, or so it seemed, wearing baseball caps and carrying M-16's. One said he'd joined the army at 18 because he could not find work. The rebels featured earlier in the same article were about the same age. One said he was old enough "where the army was going to suspect me of being a guerrilla," so he became one to have seize - the right to self-defense, something he claimed he would not have as a civilian. The proposition fac-ing 18-year-old men in El Salvador seemed to be one of soldier or suspect. In which case, the word "civilian" is rendered inoperative.

How does the army of El Salvador 'recruit" its soldiers? Several months ago the New York Times suggested you joined" or were shot. If you deserted, members of your family were shot. It put a crimp in the whole notion of family. It's part of what Joan Didion calls "the mechanism of terror."

After her two weeks in El Salvador, Didion came home with an understanding of what parking problems in the capital city of Salvador mean. You park your compact and come back to find it between a National Guardsman's Cherokee Chief and a local youth's motorcycle. No problem, except that the local youth is carrying a semi-automatic rifle, and if you look the N.G. in the eye, you can be shot. Ditto asking one or the other to move his vehicle. Or so you think. And that's what's important: make one wrong move and .

But what's a "wrong move" when you parked there first? The fact that you parked there at all, that you didn't keep on moving until you were out of the country.

There is nothing wrong with the Register's reports on El Salvador; in fact, the paper is to be commended for sending a reporter and photographer to get "the story." Jerry Perkins' reports are about as good as you can get from a statewide newspaper. But that's the problem. Read it in the morning, toss it out at night. I would refer the curious to the books mentioned - which can be read over and over, and passed on to

After witnessing numerous balls being hit into and across the street, it is apparent it would take only one hitting a car to cause a serious accident. This practice seems especially dangerous since it occurs during the noon hour when the street is busy. It seems unwise for the UI to continue actions that could produce a potential liability.

Iowa-Hawaii grid contest possible

By Steve Riley Assistant Sports Editor

Iowa will play a 1984 football game against Hawaii at Honolulu if plans can be worked out between the two schools.

Hawkeye Coach Hayden Fry has been negotiating with the Hawaii athletic department over the possible meeting. According to reports, Iowa Athletic Director Bump Elliott said the game is "fairly close" to being a Kurdelmeier said: "I'd say there is a reasonably good chance of a game in 1984, or if not then, 1985 or so.'

He added, "As I understand it, it is a matter of (Hawaii) switching dates. Hawaii is also dealing with other people right now.'

FOR THE HAWKEYES, Kurdelmeier said, there would be several advantages in playing the Rainbow Warriors. "No. 1, it is a heck of a recruiting tool. It would be a glamour trip, kind of like a bowl game. And it will be firm until he is selected." Hawaii's search for an athletic direc-

'We've played some pretty good teams in that slot, like Nebraska, Oklahoma, Southern California, Arizona State, West Virginia and South Carolina."

He added that playing Iowa would also be an attractive game. "Iowa has a good football program. They are very respected nationally.

If scheduled, the meeting would be the 12th of the year for Iowa. Collegiate games played in Alaska and Hawaii are not included in an NCAA rule that allows only 11 games during the regular-season schedule.

NEW YORK (UPI) - The Houston Rockets, a ramshackle franchise last season, were handed the keys to the palace Tuesday with the selections of Ralph Sampson and Rodney McCray in the first round of the NBA college

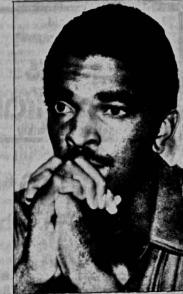

Sampson, the 7-foot-4 center whose career at Virginia earned a place in basketball legend, was the opening choice in the 10-round draft at the Felt Forum.

A three-time Player of the Year and one of the game's most graceful big men, Sampson comes to a franchise in need of serious overhaul. The Rockets finished with a 14-68 record last season and that appalling mark plus a coin flip with Indiana won them the right to the No. 1 choice.

Following the selection of Sampson, Indiana chose center Steve Stipanovich of Missouri, Houston came back with McCray of Louisville, San Diego picked guard Byron Scott of Arizona State and Chicago went with forward Sidney Green of Nevada-Las

"I'M NOT GOING down to Houston to set records," said Sampson, tailored in a blue pinstripe suit. "Scouts can give me all the compliments in the world, but they mean nothing if I don't play up to my capabilities." Charlie Thomas, the Houston owner, presented Sampson with his No. 50 uniform and spoke of better things for his club.

"Hopefully, we're going to see a lot of wins," he said. "I think there'll be an instant improvement. There's no question that you have to spend money to make money and negotiations will begin as soon as Ralph picks an agent.'

Sampson, who can make the delicate shot from the outside and also provide the inside power, has been likened to Kareem Abdul-

Everyone's a comedian at VIP

At the Amana VIP pro-am golf tournament Monday, everyone was a come-

The biggest hits of the tournament were not Larry Nelson's booming 300yard drive on No. 1, or Barbara Moxness' eagle on the par-5, 500-yard second hole in which she put her fourwood fairway shot within two feet of the pin, or even Mark Hayes' seveniron shot to the No. 13 green which landed within 15 inches of the cup, winning him a new car.

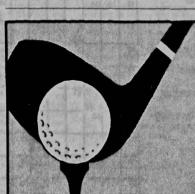

Instead, the biggest hits on the UI's Finkbine golf course came from the mouths of such celebrities as George Raveling, Johnny Orr, Ben Wright and pros Fuzzy Zoeller and Tom Watson.

RAVELING, THE NEW Iowa basketball coach, caddied for Orr the Iowa State basketball mentor. Raveling and Orr joined fellow basketball coaches Jim Haller of Baylor and Marvin Adams of Arkansas State in a fivesome that included Iowa Athletic Director Bump Elliott and Nelson.

The sixsome, especially Raveling and Orr, received a rousing ovation when introduced to VIP fans on the first tee. Orr took the microphone and addressed the crowd, telling Hawkeye fans how much they would like their new coach, but added, "He's a lousy caddy, but his price is right."

Orr may have spoken too soon,

because Raveling took the microphone and told Orr the tip he really wanted. "When we play in Ames next season, instead of money, I'm going to ask him to let us start with a 10-point lead."

RAVELING THEN JOKED about the recent wedding anniversary celebrated by Orr and his wife, Romie. 'She wanted to make love for 30straight days, and Johnny said 'put me down for two," " he said. Orr told the crowd he and Raveling are the stars of a new television series called "The Salt and Pepper Show."

Noting from the response, the show should bring rave reviews.

Nelson, winner of the U.S. Open just over a week ago, was not to be denied a little verbal abuse of his own on the part of Orr. "We told Larry he better shoot 63 or we'll dump him," Orr said. Nelson shot a 67.

Later in the day, the fivesome which included Zoeller and Wright, treated the crowd to a few laughs of their own.

Wright said. "Unfortunately, I gained eight pounds.' IN HIS LOSING EFFORT, Wright had to spring for half the cost of dinner for family and friends. His half of the bill came to $983. (The crowd gasped.) "He only lost by a pound and a half, too," Zoeller said. (The crowd loved Watson joked with the press about his tee shot on the 10th hole, which duck-hooked out-of-bounds and into the adjacent driving range. He compared the shot to the home run he hit Sunday in the VIP celebrity softball game. "Well, I sure hit a home run on the first

Monday was not only the VIP, but it was also Raveling's 46th birthday. Orr led a chorus of "Happy Birthday," and VIP officials presented Raveling with a "official VIP birthday cake." It had an awful-looking orange frosting. I'm

'Sportswriters' offers stimulating conversation on Windy City sports

What started as a brainstorm of Chicago sportswriters Bill Gleason and Bill Jauss has turned out to be one of the most in-teresting radio talk shows in the Midwest.

For almost nine years, "The Sportswriters" have held court on the state of sports in Chicago. The show airs twice a week - Sunday from 4-6 p.m. and on Wednesday evenings for 45 minutes at various times due to Cub baseball on WGN (720-

The panel consists of four of the Windy City's most well-known journalists. The show's founders, Jauss and Gleason, along with moderator Ben Bentley have been a part of the show since its inception. Chicago Sun-Times writer Dave Van Dyck has been on the panel for two years.

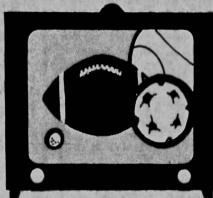

JAUSS IS EMPLOYED by the Chicago Tribune, while Gleason, who spent many years at the Sun-Times, now has his own magazine that focuses on Chicago sports. Bentley works for the Chicago Park District after years as a boxing promoter and

According to Jauss, there is very little planning that goes into the show. "We come in and devote about 30 seconds to planning," he said. "Bentley will try and organize something, but we get our most letters when we go off on a tangent."

Of course, the main topics of the show are the professional franchises in Chicago. Each writer has his favorite. "Gleason is a life-long White Sox fan (even though he says there is no way the Sox will win the American League West this season),' Jauss said. "Bentley has been defending the Cubs lately. Van Dyck has this passion

WHAT DOES JAUSS ENJOY? "I like baseball in the summer time," he said. 'I've been covering the (United States Football League's) Blitz lately and I can understand why they aren't drawing well. Fans like to watch baseball in the sum-

Among the current topics of debate are the ineptness of White Sox manager Tony LaRussa and the questionable strategy of Cubs' skipper Lee Elia. All four of the panelists are campaigning to get White Sox rookie sensation Ron Kittle on the American League All-Star team.

Jauss also added that he is well aware that the show has many listeners in the Hawkeye State. "All I have to do is mention how dumb I think Iowa girls basketball is and I have a ton of letters telling me what I can do with that opinion."

Set your alarm tennis fans. Breakfast at the women's final will be Sunday at 8 a.m.

The 50th All-Star game is on tap for Tuesday night in Chicago's Comiskey Park. The American Leaguers will be trying to stop their long losing streak against their rivals in the senior circuit at 7 p.m. on NBC (KWWL-7). Don't bet on it.

Ah, Wilderness!

UI production captures play's complex beauty

By Kathryn Helene

UGENE O'NEILL'S only comedy, Ah, Wilderness!, eems so antithetic to the Weltanschauung of O'Neill's total work that drama critic Gilbert Gabriel, a contemporary of the 1933 play, was compelled to describe it as a "comedy of recantation."

But the current University Theatre's revival of Ah, Wilderness!, playing as part of the Summer Rep '83 program tonight and through July, captures the play's intrinsic mood and structural dualities without sacrificing faithfulness to the text.

Like O'Neill's Long Day's Journey into Night, Ah, Wilderness! involves a family whose central relationship is between father and son. But Nat Miller, small-town Connecticut newspaper owner, and his teenage son, Richard, share a depth of camaraderie that James Tyrone and son Jamie could only allude to with bitterness.

Director Robert Hedley and set and lighting designers Gerard Leahy and

Theater

David Thayer gently lull us into a false sense of security by creating an atmosphere of familiar and familial middle-class life.

NAT (RON CLARK) puffs on his cigar and pontificates on "the dangers of being foolhardy in the water." Essie Miller (Jody Hovland) tenderly scolds the children for their lack of manners. The teenagers (James Read and Meredith MacArthur) tease and jostle one another while Essie's mischievous brother, Sid (Brian Poteat), repeats his annual proposal of marriage to Nat's sister, Lily (Laura Gordon).

Throughout most of the first act, the actors speak their lines in measured, deliberate rhythms that simultaneously convey the placidity of their lives and the distance between their world of 1906 and the present.

angle from the audience, rather than centered, indicates a time that is out of kilter with our own.

Richard's (Philip Thompson) fervor for neighbor Muriel and the graphic love poems of Swinburne inject a note of conflict into the family's otherwise predictable Fourth of July.

As Richard embarks on his own rites of sexual passage, the dualities of Ah, Wilderness! become more apparent.

For example, Nat and Sid read the confiscated poetry ("that I could drink thy veins as wine, and eat thy breast, like honey"), with a mixture of horror and delight. Essie insists with Victorian righteousness that Richard be punished for his transgressions, but as soon as her husband rolls up his sleeves, she retreats to motherly indulgence.

THAYER'S LIGHTING provides a visual parallel for the dichotomies of mood and character trait. When the family anxiously awaits Richard's late return from what they believe to be the Fourth of July celebration, Essie in-around in the gray-green area of their backyard, Meanwhile, the others are bathed in the warmer yellow porch and white reading lights. Later, as Sid enters, he sits on the porch steps - on the fringes of both pools of light - to request Lily's forgiveness for his alcoholic spree.

The backyard swing also functions as a symbol of ambivalence. Lily swings back and forth with her parasol, weighing the likelihood of Sid's reformation. It is the site where Sid sleeps off his drunk, warning his nephew of the temptations of Demon Rum. And Richard plops in the swing as a refuge from his flight toward evil; at the play's end, he sits there serenely confident of Muriel's love and that of

O'Neill's overriding optimism in Ah, Wilderness! obscures neither the intensity of emotion nor the ambivalences inherent in characters too often perceived as mere stereotypes. University Theatre's production of Ah, Wilderness! reclaims its complex will present a pair of world premieres when they climax their 1983 summer residency at the UI with two different programs, 8 p.m. Thursday and Saturday, at Hancher Auditorium. The Joffrey II performances in Hancher will also conclude Iowa City's Arts Fest celebra-

The highlight of the Saturday performance will be the world premiere of an as-yet-untitled work by Choo San Goh, artistic director of the Washington Ballet. He is one of four choreographers commissioned to create works celebrating the 15th anniversary of Joffrey II.

The work receiving its premiere here will be presented in the spring of 1984 in New York as part of a series of performances celebrating the anniver-

Choo San Goh was propelled into international stature when his "Momentum," choreographed for the Joffrey II, led to commissions by the Joffrey Ballet, American Ballet Theatre, the Paris Opera Ballet and other prominent ballet companies. He will be on the UI campus to oversee the final rehearsals and premiere performance of his new work.

ON THURSDAY, Joffrey II will premiere "The 'Mary' ... Chapter," set by New York choreographer Catherine Hills to the music of Jim Croce, and will also present the company's first performance of "Corbel," by UI dance faculty member Susan

Other selections on the Thursday program include "Echoing Silence," a lyrical ballet choreographed by Helen Douglas to Debussy's "Fantasy for a Piano and Orchestra," and "In Kazmidity," Ann Marie DeAngelo's wild feminist spoof of dramatic classical

In addition to the Choo San Goh premiere, the Saturday Joffrey II program includes "Fantasy at Fiddler's Bend," by Joffrey II Ballet Master Lance Westergard, a series of gentle memories of childhood in a small American town; the wedding pas de deux from the classical ballet "Coppelia"; and Gail Kachadurian's "Bermuda Blues," a youthful ballet performed to the music of Andre Previn by a troupe costumed in Bermuda shorts and sport shirts.

Joffrey II was created in 1969 as the "farm team" of the famed Joffrey Ballet and was the first of the "second" companies that now fill the gap between the dance studio and the professional stage.

"Bermuda Blues" will be one of the works performed by the Joffrey II Dancers in Hancher Auditorium Saturday.

Dance

IN ITS NEARLY 15 years of existence, the company has trained more than 225 dancers and has provided opportunities for promising choreographers, designers and composers as well. Joffrey II alumni are currently performing in more than 35 dance companies worldwide.

More than two-thirds of the current Joffrey roster is filled by graduates of Joffrey II, including seven of the dancers who performed with Joffrey II last summer in Iowa.

Most Joffrey II dancers are in their teens or early 20s, and the average tenure is two years, during which they learn and perform the company's full performing repertoire. Dancers are selected from the Joffrey school and through auditions held throughout the country.

The 16-member company tours yearround, performing a diverse repertoire in ballet, modern, jazz and contemporary dance styles. This year, the Joffrey II Dancers have appeared in more than half the states in the nation, and the company frequently travels to other countries.

Tickets for the Thursday and Saturday performances are priced at $8.50, $6.50, $5, $4 and $2 ($2 more for nonstudents) and are available at the Hancher box office.

Roxi update

We now take pause in our busy day to bid farewell to our mentor and favorite globetrotting correspondent, Roxanne T. Mueller. Thanks to her brilliant career here in Iowa City, Roxi will be leaving us this weekend for her new job as film critic of the Cleveland Plain Dealer. Cleveland. In Ohio. You know - the one with the burning river. That's what she gets for meeting Paul Newman and Sally Field and not bringing them back to visit.

But seriously, all the best to Roxi from those of us clustered over the arts/entertainment desk here. And hey, Rox - let's be careful out there.

Arts Fest

Live on the plaza today: the Iowa City Community Theatre (noon), the Rhythm Rockers (1 p.m.) and Scott Hayward (7 p.m.). All events are free and open to the public. Stars in the Bars moves to the Sanctuary tonight, with the various talents of the O'Prirohdye Balalaika Troupe, Chuck Henderson, Ken McCullough, Niambi Webster and Calliope featuring Guy Drollinger to entertain you. Admission comes with an Arts Fest button, available for $5 from a number of downtown merchants.

Theater

Summer Rep '83 continues tonight with Eugene O'Neill's Ah, Wilderness!, the wistful story of a boy growing up in turn-of-the-century Ohio, his family and the small, humorous problems therein. Tickets are $4 for students, senior citizens and children; $6 for all others. Showtime is 8 p.m. at

At the Bijou

Strangers on a Train is our favorite Hitchcock movie, bar none. The story, based on a Patricia Highsmith novel, is wonderfully sleazy: One stranger (Farley Granger) wants to get rid of his haggard wife; another (Robert Walker) wants to get rid of his overbearing daddy

The solution: a double murder, with each offing the other's bete noire. The problem: Farley thinks the idea is funny, but Robert is dead serious.

Hitchcock's scare tactics have never been better employed, particularly in a spine-tingling tennis match and the merry-go-round finale. And Robert Walker is simply brilliant as the mommy-ridden fop for whom murder is as simple as lighting a cigarette. Screenplay (in part) by Raymond Chandler; co-starring Leo G. Carroll, Ruth Roman, Patricia Hitchcock and Marion Lorne. Great Art. 7 p.m.

• Part two of tonight's Murder and Mayhem double bill is Claude Chabrol's Wedding in Blood. Michel Piccoli and Stephane Audran play starcrossed and spouse-bossed lovers who, though not strangers on a train, come up with their own solution to their problem. Chabrol's film is more than just a crime thriller, however, as he attacks the repressive small-town French life that acts as the moral backdrop to the story. 9 p.m.

Television

Tonight's "Taxi" repeat is one of the best of the series. Latka and Simka (Andy Kaufman, Carol Kane) throw a party to unite all their friends with new romantic partners. What happens? Well, Louie (Danny De Vito) gets a blind date, Elaine (Marilu Henner) gets a cute little homunculus (Wallace Shawn, reprising his role in Manhattan), and Rev. Jim (Christopher Lloyd) gets his heroine -Marcia Wallace of the old "Bob Newhart Show." And then there's Alex (Judd Hirsch) 9:30 p.m.

· We should submit for your approval the fact that the original 'Twilight Zone' is being rerun again at 10 p.m. weeknights on WGN-9. Better than the movie, you bet.
