Local group ‘adopts’ Chilean political prisoners

By Amy Prange

Source: The Daily Iowan

University of Iowa’s City Cryer Editorial Board has become involved in an international letter-writing campaign as a means of political relief for a group of political prisoners currently being held in Chile, according to group member Norm Montefiore.

The board has decided to participate in a letter-writing campaign as an extension of its usual activities and hopes to raise solidarity throughout the United States and the University of Iowa community. The City Cryer is a weekly publication that focuses on local issues and news stories.

Montefiore stated that the group’s main objective is to alert people to the situation of political prisoners in Chile and to encourage them to write letters of solidarity. The campaign is coordinated by the Chilean Solidarity Network, a group that works to raise awareness and support for political prisoners in Chile.

The group is particularly focused on the case of Pablo Hasél, a Chilean poet and political activist who was sentenced to nine years in prison for “terrorist activities” in 2019. The group believes that Hasél’s conviction is unjust and that he should be released.

The City Cryer is calling on its readers to write letters of solidarity to the prisoners in Chile. The letters can be sent to the group’s mailbox, located in the University of Iowa Student Center, or via email to citycryer@uiowa.edu.

The group hopes to continue the campaign for as long as necessary, and is open to anyone who wants to participate. The City Cryer is hoping to raise awareness about the situation of political prisoners in Chile and to encourage people to take action to support them.

The City Cryer is a publication of the University of Iowa’s student government, and is published by the City Cryer Editorial Board. The board is made up of students who are interested in local and national issues, and aims to provide a platform for students to express their views and opinions.

The City Cryer is one of many student publications that are working to raise awareness and support for political prisoners around the world.

Three photographers display depths of their field

By Allen Hagg

I THINK I'm years too old to forgive Robert Stewart's apology for half a decade of outrageous behavior, nor did I pay much attention to your column last fall about Body Wishes. The new movie, at least in its description of what happened to him and the lawyer who's now arguing his case, continues to be a matter of interest. However, the behavior in the late 1970's involving the description of the stoical Robert Stewart's public relations, made for a provocative tale, and has been a matter of interest to those of us who have been following his career. But øetworks is the name of the game, too. Improves the quality of life for others.

Anny Lyon's photographic career began in the late 1960's, as a frequent contributor to the Society for the Preservation of Books, a position she later held as an assistant editor. At the beginning of her career, she worked for several magazines, including the National Geographic Society, and later moved to the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, where she has been a staff photographer since 1975. In 1987, she published her first book, "And my snotty lawyer comes back to me..." which received wide acclaim.

Plato developed an interest in photography as a means of expressing his ideas, and in 1937 he opened the firstMuseum of Modern Art in New York City. He was also the owner of a photography studio and gallery, which he used to exhibit his own work and that of other artists. In the 1940s and 1950s, he took many photographs of famous people, including Robert Frank, who later became known for his work as a photographer and writer.

Fire chief frowns on fireworks use

By John Truesdell
Special to The Daily Iowan

It's July, the time when illegal or legal fireworks are in full swing across Iowa City, and the time when a police chief frowns on the use of fireworks.

"There are only a few legal private fireworks displays in Iowa City," said Chief Robert Keating. "I would only recommend that you consider an electric firework display instead of using fireworks." He said that the police department is not involved in the enforcement of fireworks laws and that it would be a very difficult task to enforce the laws.

The illegal use of fireworks is a serious problem in Iowa City, and the police department is working to combat it. "We have seen a significant increase in the use of illegal fireworks in recent years," said Keating. "We are working to increase the enforcement of the laws and to educate the public about the dangers of illegal fireworks." He said that the police department is working with the community to reduce the use of illegal fireworks.

Rookie slugger leads AL reserves

NEW YORK (UPI) - Rookie slugger Dan Kouv of the Chicago White Sox has led a list of 12 reserves named to the American League All-Star team by manager Harvey Kuenn and league president Lee MacPhail.

MacPhail said the selections were based on the performances of the players in the first half of the season. The All-Star game is scheduled for Tuesday night at Fenway Park in Boston.

In addition to Kouv, the All-Star reserves include outfielders Dickie Thon of Houston; and Steve Yeager of the Los Angeles Dodgers; and second sacker Lou Piniella of the New York Yankees.

On the left side of the field, the All-Star reserves include Minnesota's Alan Quatman, Detroit's Pete Incaviglia, Texas' Scott Fletcher, and California third baseman Doug Rynski.

Petersen said the players were selected on the basis of their performances in the first half of the season. The All-Star game is scheduled for Tuesday night at Fenway Park in Boston.

The reserves were named Thursday to the Iowa basketball team's 12-man roster for the upcoming season. The team's top returning player is center Tony Patten, who averaged 11.3 points and 8.8 rebounds per game last season.

Raveling said he was pleased with the addition of Kouv to the All-Star team. The White Sox, who have been struggling offensively this season, have had some power in their lineup with players like Kouv and Tim Raines.
