Long-term economic plan eyed by city

By Mark Leonard

Because Iowa City will not always be able to rely on a booming UI student population for its economic well-being, City Manager Neal Berlin has proposed that Iowa City quickly embark on an aggressive economic development program.

"It would be foolhardy to predicate long-term economic growth on an everincreasing student body," Berlin said. "This luxury will not continue for Iowa City. Iowa City should build on its strengths. These are the University of Iowa and University Hospitals, the attractiveness of the community as a place to live and the positive atmosphere for industrial and business growth evidenced partly by the quality of existing business and industry.

Iowa City Councilor David Perrét said the city must be prepared for the day when UI enrollment drops. "Certainly the city is basically dependent on the university for its well-being," he said. "If it's true a marked decrease in enrollment will happen soon, then the city should be on a firm economic base so it can handle that.

UI Associate Vice President for Finance Casey Mahon said Tuesday the UI will be "supportive" of both the city's and state's efforts toward economic development. "It is clear it would be advantageous to the city to attract more industry of various types," she said. "The mere fact the university is here is helpful (to Iowa City). It gives them a substantial advantage in convincing industry to locate here."

MAHON SAID the environmental, cultural and intellectual aspects of the city, as well as the UI's athletic events, are attractive to many industries.

Iowa City currently ranks low comared to other Iowa cities in the amount of money targeted for economic development. While Iowa City has budgeted $40,000 to spend in fiscal year 1984, Cedar Rapids will be spending $150,000, Des Moines $320,000, Clinton $250,000 and Storm Lake

"I think we might be a little bit behind other communities," Councilor John McDonald said, "We probably should have started something like this earlier, but I don't think it's too late now. I just don't think it's to the point where we can't catch up.

McDonald said the city "hasn't been aggressive enough" in trying to develop other economic bases besides the UI. "I think we have to develop a program and follow through with it,' he said. "If all three segments of the community are able to work together on this I think it will be able to work. That will be the key to how successful the program is.

Perret added, "It's certainly a valid criticism that we could have gotten into this earlier, but I think what we wanted to do first is stabilize the downtown area through urban renewal. Now that we have stabilized the downtown area we can look at broader development throughout the city."

BERLIN HOPES to make Iowa City competitive with other cities in the state by suggesting the city form a nine-member ad-hoc economic development committee appointed by Mayor Mary Neuhauser. The committee will then set goals and objectives for a short-term, 12-month economic development program.

"This group will coordinate the interests and the efforts of the city, the university, business and industry and all other community resources," Berlin said. "It is expected that the group would be financed directly

New eligibility guidelines for the federal government's surplus commodities giveaway program may force the local service agency in charge of the program to seek additional funding to cover higher administrative costs, the agency's community service director said Tuesday.

The stricter guidelines have been proposed by Third District Rep. Cooper Evans, R-Iowa, as a response to abuses and other problems outlined in a General Accounting Office study of the giveaway program. Evans called for more clearly delineated eligibility guidelines as well as development of a system to monitor applications for the Commodities have also been stolen, the study reported. A center in the state of Washington was robbed of 200,000 pounds of cheese.

ACCORDING TO THE GAO report, the surplus commodities distribution program has succeeded in aiding the needy, but has not been successful in reducing the amount of surplus dairy products the government had purchased from dairy farmers. The program was enacted by the government in January 1982.

However, the other goal of the program - reducing the surplus amount of cheese held by the government - has not been met, the preliminary GAO report states.

The amount of cheese distributed by the states has increased steadily since the inception of the program. The average monthly distribution in mid-1982 was 11 million pounds, Mikelson said. The peak average was 60 to 65 million pounds distributed in March

ney who claimed to possess three videotapes showing government officials at "sex parties" told prosecutors Tuesday a member of the media stole the tapes, but officials ordered him to produce the materials in

Police Commander William Booth said attorney Robert K. Steinberg, 46, was subpoenaed to produce the tapes in court in connection with the case of Steinberg's client Marvin Pancoast. Pancoast is the confessed killer of Alfred Bloomingdale longtime mistress, Vicki Morgan, and is to be arraigned July 25 on murder charges. Steinberg announced Tuesday he is withdrawing as Pancoast's attorney. Booth said the district attorney subpoenaed Steinberg because of his claims the tapes exist and may be relevant to the murder investigation. "If such tapes do exist, we feel a need to view them," Booth said.

STEINBERG SAID the tapes showed six people involved in "sadomasochistic sex acts" and

He said the other participants were a businessman, three government appointees and an elected official.

Steinberg said he would destroy the tapes because they were not relevant to Pancoast's defense, but later said he would offer them to the president because of his close involvement with

Chief Deputy District Attorney Jim Bascue said Steinberg informed his office Tuesday morning of the alleged theft after prosecutors requested he turn over the tapes.

Steinberg told investigators the three tapes had been in a gym bag in the library of his law office, Bascue said.

"Someone from the press corps went into my library this morning and stole the tapes," said Steinberg, who appeared shaken and agitated as he left his Beverly Hills office.

STEINBERG TOLD reporters he conversation took place. 'Robert Steinberg called Fred Fielding at 2:20 p.m. (1:20 p.m. Iowa time) and said just before he made the phone call he discovered the tapes were not there.'

A spokesman for Fielding in Washington said when the counselor was informed the tapes were missing he advised Steinberg if the tapes turned up he should not destroy them.

"Mr. Fielding said that right now the proper party to look at the tapes was the district attorney of Los Angeles County," Steinberg said.

"If the district attorney of Los Angeles County feels there is some criminality in these tapes, then the Department of Justice will send a special investigator out for themselves to consult with the district attorney's office to see if such acts existed.'

Asked why it was a matter for local prosecutors Speakes said: "Questions have been raised about the involveofficials in this thing and our reaction is we don't want any of it destroyed. If it was a justice of the peace or traffic court, we wouldn't want evidence destroyed."

STEINBERG SAID Monday he was given the videotapes Saturday by a woman claiming to be a friend of Pancoast after he was asked to provide legal counsel to the defendant, who confessed to beating Morgan to death with a baseball bat as she slept last Thursday.

Morgan, 30, had been a model before she became the mistress of Bloomingdale, heir to the department store fortune and a founder of Diners Club. She filed an $11 million palimony suit against Bloomingdale last year, which she lost.

Steinberg claimed he viewed the tapes Saturday with an attorney and someone "from the Department of Justice," both of whom he refused to

U.S blamed for martial law

WARSAW, Poland - Poland Tuesday blamed U.S. economic sanctions, which revoked Poland's most-favored-nation status, for the communist regime's failure to lift martial law and said Washington would be presented a bill for the damages caused to the country's economy.

Jerzy Urban, chief government spokesman, said, "If it were not for the U.S. sanctions, total lifting (of martial law) would have been possible earlier than it will take place.' Urban, without setting a date for the action, hinted that the regime would act soon to restore full civilian rule.

House passes jobs bill

WASHINGTON - The House passed Tuesday and sent to the Senate a plan to bankroll a new multi-billion-dollar public works jobs program to help communities suffering from high unemployment.

President Reagan opposes the bill which would provide $1.5 billion over the next three years for economic development programs to generate new jobs building roads, community water and sewage systems. State and local governments receiving funds through the program would be required to appropriate matching sums to finance their public works projects.

Housing funds bill signed

WASHINGTON - President Reagan signed appropriations bill Tuesday, allocating $46.8 billion for the Department of Housing and Urban Development and 17 other independent federal agencies, including the Environmental Protection Agency and the Veterans Administration

Reagan had threatened to veto appropriations bills that exceeded his requests, but apparently decided to postpone his confrontation with what he calls "budget busting" bills. But legislators agreed to a request by Budget Director David Stockman to hold the number of new subsidized housing units to 100,000.

County deputies need new insurance

By John Tieszen

The Johnson County Sheriff's Department needs a more complete punitive damage insurance policy for its deputies than the one it already has, according to the county's insurance agent.

Robert Alderman told the Johnson County Board of Supervisors Tuesday that the new coverage, which would cost about $5,000 more than the present policy, is needed because of a recent court decision that makes municipalities liable for punitive damages.

The present insurance coverage for the sheriff's department includes some punitive damage coverage, but it is not complete, he

The new policy, called Professional Sheriff and Deputy Liability Coverage, is designed specifically for sheriffs and deputies, as opposed to the general coverage that the department has now, he said. For example, the new policy would cover deputies for administering prescriptions and special diets to prisoners. Prior to the court ruling, the sheriff's department was not liable for punitive damages involved in the treatment of prisoners.

ALDERMAN said that the courts have not fice said that the coverage is needed. "It apyet decided all of the punitive damages that are included under the court ruling. The new coverage is needed because the "immunity of the old law is now gone," he said.

Three companies submitted bids on the policy, with the lowest bid coming from the the Imperial Casualty Indemnity Company, which already covers some other branches of the county. Alderman said the county might get a $1,500 refund if it gets the coverage from Imperial. "We shopped around all of the insurance companies," Alderman said. Captain Doug Edmounds of the sheriff's ofpears that this is the coverage that we need in light of the recent court decision. From all appearances, this is the practical thing to do," he said.

Edmounds said that this coverage protects deputies in all areas of prisoner care. "The whole range of care and welfare of inmates is a source of concern because the inmates are totally dependent on us for their needs," he

The Board of Supervisors will vote on the matter in a formal meeting after it receives the official claim from Imperial.

"WE THOUGHT it would be better to keep a separate zoning for mobile home lots, as opposed to putting it in the same classification as highway-commercial," he said.

Commission Chairman Milver Hora of West Branch said the highway and commercial zoning for mobile homes didn't cause any problems in the past, "but it sure could have caused a few problems.

Hora said the mobile home zoning "isn't used very much in Johnson County" and that the CH zoning areas are "the wrong place to

Monday set for late law school bid ruling

DES MOINES (UPI) - Polk County District Judge Luther Glanton said Tuesday he will rule next Monday whether the winning bid for the new $14 million UI Law School should be thrown out.

Glanton decided Tuesday that the bid submitted by PCL Construction was a minute late as the losing bidders allege in a lawsuit.

However, he said he has to decide whether the state Board of Regents had the authority to waive the deadline as they did. A suit to void the PCL bid was brought by Mid America Construction.

PCL, a Canadian firm, bid almost $400,000 lower than Mid America.

UI official Richard Jordisen told Glanton Monday that the bid was made on time so the suit was moot, but Glanton cited the official timekeeper's records which showed the PCL bid was 60 seconds late.

PCL officials have admitted to some last-minute scrambling to get their bid submitted. The company reportedly shaved $400,000 from its original estimate just before the deadline.

Mid America may also face legal problems if it winds up with the contract.

Several construction unions claim Mid America is just a front company so its owner, Knudsen Construction, can circumvent a collective bargaining agreement.

Cranston victories called 'short-lived'

DES MOINES (UPI) - Campaign aides for Democratic presidential hopeful Walter Mondale have launched an effort to de-emphasize recent straw poll victories by Sen. Alan Cranston, who claimed surprise wins in Wisconsin and Alabama

Peter Slone, Iowa campaign manager for Mondale, said in an interview Tuesday the importance of the straw polls has been misconstrued. "Any candidate can move into an isolated spot and demonstrate strength by spending large sums of money. Any candidate can come up with a shortlived victory, but the key to this grueling process known as the presidential delegate selection is (nationwide strength)."

"Certain candidates are emphasizing their strong showings in one instance," Slone said in a lightly veiled reference to Cranston's victories in straw polls at the Wisconsin Democratic Convention and a Young Democrats meeting in Alabama.

Mondale's strength nationwide will be a "telling factor" in Iowa's first-in-the-nation precinct caucuses next Feb. 27 and in the New Hampshire primary the following week "Mondale has to do well in Iowa," Slone said. "He's expected to do well."

Prompting failure

A number of American businesses — steel and auto makers, for example - have protested vehemently against so-called unfair trade practices by European and particularly Japanese companies. They have demanded protection. In many cases they have gotten some assistance: The Japanese agreed, grudgingly, to limitations on the number of cars they sent to the United States; the steel companies received tariffs to protect them if and when foreign companies dumped steel in this country at lower prices than in their home countries. Many businesses also have procured wage and benefit roll-backs from workers. But the behavior of U.S. Steel shows clearly many of the problems encountered by American business are of their own making. After begging for and receiving tax breaks from the government - a trigger mechanism to prevent dumping by foreign producers — and wage concessions from its own workers, U.S. Steel turned around and shafted the taxpayers and the workers. It bought Marathon Oil Co. instead of modernizing its plants and equipment. It proposed importing unfinished steel from Britain just days after it sought and received wage concessions from workers who thought those concessions would save jobs; the British plan would cost some 1,000 to 3,000 steelworkers their employment.

American business suffers from a multitude of failures, most of its own making. It skimps on investment in research and development and it expects a faster return on such investment than foreign firms. It goes for gimmicks in marketing instead of product improvement. It looks for quick, high profits instead of slow steady growth - often at the expense of long-term health. It often has spent its money acquiring a range of other businesses that it does not understand and cannot run efficiently. It expects workers and consumers to bear the cost of its mismanagement, instead of its executives and stockholders, and so alienates the workers and the consumers, further damaging itself.

A little diplomat?

Pretty little Samantha Smith, as she is all too often called in media accounts of the current odyssey in the Soviet Union born of her letter to Soviet President Andropov, giggles a lot. Just as the press is obsessed with her prettiness and littleness, they are likewise consumed with interest in the way she laughs. (It would seem she giggles.) And an unexpected similarity arises here - the press covers her in much the same way it covers President Reagan. Wherever either one goes, they are surrounded by cameras, tape recorders and reporters, which take pictures of their smiles, record their laughter and write endless trivia about

But Samantha has two things going for her that Ronald Reagan doesn't - she is actually in the Soviet Union and she might actually meet Andropov sometime soon.

Another comparison sometimes made concerning Samantha touches on the "Ping-Pong Diplomacy" of the late 1960s which eventually led to the opening of relations with China. But one glaring difference between the two was that then President Nixon was ready to open relations with China, as they were with us, and the ping-pong caper was just a front. One doubts whether President Reagan has sufficient pragmatism or flexibility in his character to follow Samantha's lead. His aides probably are doing a background check on the little pinko.

But, for now, Samantha will sport in the Volga and perhaps meet with Andropov. At least she will continue giggling and being pretty and little. President Reagan will have to content himself with being the last among those things.

It appears to be an absurdly simple idea: take workers into your confidence, give them more information about what they're doing, encourage them to suggest improvements and, presto, employees will do a better job because they feel better about what they are doing

BUT THAT is clearly not the way U.S. manufacturing has always worked. So now that we're in trouble on a number of fronts, there's a bandwagon going in American industry to reverse practices which were accurately depicted nearly 50 years ago in Charlie Chaplin's "Modern Times." Ford is not the only company that has een the light. It's just one of the Ford, in fact, is "light-years behind General Motors" in the implementation of this idea, according to John Simmons, co-author of a new book, Working Together, which pulls together many of the experiments going on in labor-management cooperation. Simmons and William Mares have produced a provocative report on what a difference it makes to give workers more control over their jobs. Workers here have never enjoyed that control, Simmons and Mares recount, because early on American business embraced the ideas of the efficiency engineer, Frederic Winslow Taylor, father of the dehumanizing time-study approach to work. In his book, management took care of all the thinking and directing of every job. Workers were merely soldiers who carried out orders in return for pay. Even unions accepted this division of responsibilities, concentrating their ef-

"I think back to an assembly plant. Two people are putting on a bumper. You look at that. You say, what can you do for the quality of their work life? Why not have them talk to salesmen that sell the nuts and bolts, the power guns and the wrenches? Why not have them talk to the people in our components plant who make the bumper? Once they begin to do that, they're different people. They now have dignity. No longer is it just a matter of pay for hands and feet."

WHO WOULD be hurt most in this movement toward more worker control over jobs? Simmons told me it would clearly be the middle managers and the students in graduate business schools who are hoping to become managers. With employees being more responsible for self-management, companies wouldn't need so many bosses and, in fact, a bunch of big companies such as GM, American Telephone & Telegraph, Weyerhaeuser and Monsanto have recently savaged their middle-management ranks.

Elementary mistake

Our recently submitted preliminary report to the board of directors of the Iowa City Community School District indicated that children attending fullday, alternate-day kindergarten this year at Hills and Penn elementary schools showed significantly less growth (from October to April) in average Iowa Tests of Basic Skills scores than did children attending halfday, every-day kindergarten at Kirkwood, Mann, and Twain.

The report made it clear that a gain of about 7 points was to be expected in an average Iowa kindergarten class over the time span in question. The report also made it clear that BOTH groups gained more than an average of 7 points (8.48 for the half-day, everyday children; 7.35 for the full-day, alternate-day children). Under the circumstances, we greatly regret that in coverage of the report (DI, June 30) your headline stated that "Experimental kindergartens show inferior test scores."

Reagan's education plan blasted

WASHINGTON (UPI) - In the midst of a flurry of administration civil rights actions, the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights Tuesday accused President Reagan of making education budget cuts that would be especially harmful to minorities.

Reagan's $13.2 billion education budget proposal for fiscal 1984 is 13 percent less than the amount approved by Congress for the current fiscal year and would eliminate 34 special programs, the commission charged in its "Statement on the Fiscal Year 1984 Education Budget.'

The Reagan proposal includes "substantial cuts and revisions in major education programs that have been effective in improving the quality of education for the disadvantaged, minorities and women," commission Chairman Clarence Pendleton said at a news conference called to release the

EDUCATION SECRETARY Terrel Bell charged the commission report "distorts and undervalues what this administration is doing for education."

Bell did not dispute the figures offered by the commission, but said much of the education budget reduction was due to the reduced cost of the guaranteed student loan program, because of declining inflation.

The administration's budget proposal also reflects "the national priority for economic recovery," Bell

'The administration's proposal to reduce federal aid to education comes at a particularly inopportune time," because of recent reports on the decline in U.S. educational standards, the commission's statement said. The news conference came on the Committee hearings on Reagan's controversial nomination of three new members to the six-member commission, which has repeatedly criticized his administration. It also came one day after the Reagan administration filed its first school desegregation lawsuit, accusing Alabama of perpetuating a system of "racial dualism" at 16 college cam-

Pendleton said the 34 program budgets that would be eliminated include $24 million to provide assistance for desegregating school districts, $5.7 million for the Women's Educational Equity Program, $66 million for the In-

Pendleton also criticized a new Self-Help Grant program for college students, which he said would require students to provide 40 percent of their own education costs before becoming eligible for a grant.

"Many in the higher education community view these and other proposed changes in the federal student aid program as detrimental to students, particularly minority students who, generally, are less able to afford a college education," he said.

"At a time when the nation's educational system is in jeopardy, we can ill afford to reduce the federal commitment to equal education opportunity," Pendleton added.

Ul to host Nikolais dance group

By Nancy Moore Special to The Daily lowar

HE NIKOLAIS Dance Theatre, directed by one of the great modern dance choreographers of the last 30 years, Alwin Nikolais, has been engaged by Iowa Dance Residencies for a three-week period in the summer of 1984. This year's guest company, the Joffrey II Dancers, will return in 1985 and succeeding oddnumbered years.

In addition to their participation in the UI Dance Program's summer workshops as teachers and artists-in-residence, the Nikolais company will conduct intensive two-day sessions in various Iowa

The theatrical creations of Alwin Nikolais, in which dancers, lighting, props and sound share a roughly equivalent status, still generate as much controversy as they did in his first multimedia effort in 1953, "Masks, Props and Mobiles."

As one might guess from the title, the source of that controversy concerns whether the total masking of dancers, often to the extent that one can't make out a familiar human shape, much less a face, constitutes a dehumanization of art.

NIKOLAIS, WHO is known for his rhetorical agility as well as his handiness in making the props and soundtracks he dreams up, writes of himself: "I cannot be content only as a choreographer. As such, my dominant concern should be motion; yet I cannot forego my attraction to the shapes and forms of things. Therefore, I do not hesitate to stress a sculptural form to the exclusion of emotional excitement. Nor can I divorce myself from strong passions for sound and color, so I invade the fields of the composer and painter as well.

"In truth, then, I am not a devoted husband to dance, for I choose to marry the lot of my inamorati rather than swearing fidelity to one."

Nikolais started his professional career in 1936, first as a musician and then as a puppeteer. He studied dance with Martha Graham, Doris Humphrey and Hanya Holm, among others, and found himself becoming increasingly annoyed with what he saw as an excessive choreographic preoccupation with self-expression - what he calls "the Nureyev complex," in which dancers and audience focus on individual performers as divine represen-

To enable man to "identify with things other than himself," Nikolais builds kinetic relationships between human and inanimate bodies and calls attention to the space in a dance as it is shaped by this

IN ONE EARLY, much-photographed piece called 'Sanctum," Nikolais encased each of his dancers in a stretchy white loop of fabric that made visible the line of tension between opposing parts of the body. rather than the body parts themselves.

The dancers in other works become moving screens for fantastic projections of light and shadow. One of his theatrical innovations was to substitute three-dimensional "environmental lighting" for the usual overhead beam that that accents dancers'

Most recently, the Nikolais Dance Theatre premiered "The Mechanical Organ II," which was partially inspired by a trip to Disneyland, and "Pond," which Nikolais characterizes as "a choreographic Walden." In a typical critical split, Anna Kisselgoff commended Nikolais in The New York Times for engineering an unusually pretty "Pond," while Sally Banes complained in Dancemagazine that his dancers seemed merely like 'excuses for these theatrics.'

Iowa audiences will have plenty to think about when the Nikolais Dance Theatre touches down next summer. One can only hope that financial problems won't deny us the whole show: props, costumes, lighting, sound systems and, of course, dancers. Nikolais theatre without this high-tech environment

Falco's political 'Einzelhaft' hums along with hit after hit

By Paul P. Soucek

F THERE WERE a Recording Artist Skewered With the Green Weeny category, Austria's Falco would take ... the shaft.

No sooner had Falco and songwriter Robert Ponger composed "Der Kommissar" than various filchers slid through international copyright loopholes, capitalizing on the song's unforgettable hook and catchy upbeat. This is no Van Halen exhuming "Pretty Woman" sleaziness: The new song leapt up the charts, with everyone this side of the Berlin Wall humming it, and profits stuffing the pockets of

But all's fair in the music industry and, no hard feelings, the Falco/Ponger team released an EP containing the true version of "Der Kommissar" and two other cuts. Little did the sterile After the Fire know that these "other cuts" were as potent, as clever and as salable as the one they had covered.

FALCO AND PONGER hence reversed the table, soaring up the charts with the EP and releasing the album Einzelhaft, which translates to "unique

If Falco did not sing on Einzelhaft, it would still be one of the most durable hit-after-hit records now available, and not because of Falco's MTV video, either. The record is a snare for any pop music listener. With his complex Linndrum beat, Ponger adds a frame of keyboards, rives through with guitar hooks (like the one you're humming right now) and uses Falco as a rapper, a rhythm, a ratatat barrage of Austrian colloquialisms and American slang.

And what of these lyrics? What the hell is he saying? Falco is not merely the rhythmic bond between the volley of sticky this-could-be-a-hit melodies. His lyrics are alive and political — it's a shame that After the Fire hasn't ripped off other Falco material to give themselves that facade of integrity they so much lack.

"Zuviel Hitze (Much Heat)" has Falco frustrated over a woman who sacks up with everyone but Falco and returns to him as a conversational partner. Falco's wry tone moves around the lofty backing vocals and Dire Straits-like guitar riff with the same spirit this notorious femme has as she moves around town: "It's too hot for me in this town; there's too much heat in this freezer for me.

"AUF DER FLUCHT (On the Run)" opens like the hardest of Eurodisco: a thundering beat, a frontline guitar riff and Falco panting an introduction. Behind the beat is a strong political message, doused

Records

Einzelhaft: Not only are the lyrics in German but they are coughed out in an accent that is to German what Jamaican patois is to English. Passive pop

Falco opens "Auf Der Flucht" discussing the mood of Berlin in 1967, outlining the fear and panic of the "flight" from East to West. After detailing the sentiment of that era, he leaps ahead to 1982, where he sees stifled anger starting to bleed from an angered youth: "In the future those will come to ask what's in the minds of the young voters. Then who will be on the run?"

"GANZ WIEN (All of Vienna)" is another perspective of unrest, this scape numbed by drugs that Falco feels are ensnaring Vienna. The simplicity of the song is highlighted with piano splashes and a waltzing synth, ultimately reaching a peak with a rocking guitar solo and eerie background vocals whispering "cocaine, caffeine, pills and heroin" in anticipation of Vienna's overdose. In the end, an ethereal keyboard riff overpowers the melody with a dissonance musically reflecting the

"Nie Mehr Schule (No More School)" and "Helden Von Heute (Heroes of Today)" continue as examples of a Falco upset with what he sees as misguided

'Nie Mehr Schule" decries sitting in a classroom during the years when "a transcript does not mean an easier life." Falco isn't abandoning education but

"HELDEN VON HEUTE" belittles looking at the world for its trendiness, changing with the fashions and waiting for the heroes of today to change the world with their clothes and haircuts.

So Falco is bitter? We should add Einzelhaft has its lighter moments, all of them very pop. So far as we know, no one has yet ripped them off. We're

The music on Einzelhaft is wonderful, and the message is more active than the dirty limericks Falco could have rapped to the beat. Dance to it, listen to it and think about the Green Weeny Award Winner: He has something to say, even if it is in a

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (UPI) - Mystery writer Ross Macdonald, whose 24 novels featuring private detective Lew Archer spawned two movies and a television series, died Monday of Alzheimer's disease, a brain disorder that results in senility, his publisher said Tuesday.

Two of his books, The Moving Target, and The Drowning Pool, were made into movies with actor Paul Newman starring as Lew Archer. And a TV movie, "The Underground Man," starring Jack observer, a socially mobile man who knows all the Klugman and Peter Graves, was based on his novel.

Landmark update

The Johnson County Landmark jazz band's trip to Europe is going exceedingly well, according to correspondent Winston Barclay. The band was the "hit of the evening" at the Montreux Jazz Festival Monday in a program that included bands from California, Switzerland and Sweden. The international audience responded

After an encore of "Take the A-Train," the audience clapped rhythmically until the band had to leave the stage. Traditional designs such as Robert Spangler's breakfast table and chairs or Susan Patterson's turkey red-painted Windsor chair, though copies of earlier fur-niture styles, bear the hallmark of careful workmanship.

Jeff Easley's designs are more innovative; his standing clocks combine dark and light woods in sleek modern lines, often commenting on perceptions or effects of time. One of them omits the traditional numbers on the clock face but suggests, through the inclusion of forms in its design, the sun and the moon cycles.

Jerome Schneiders, on the other hand, has constructed the quilter's dream: an immense, polished and pegged quilting frame that fairly begs to be the focus of a quilting

One small walnut box with four drawers is butterfly shaped; another purely ornamental wood sculpture, a toaster of walnut, holds two bread shaped pieces of carved maple.

But the utilitarian furniture built of oak, such as the bookcase by the Days, or of walnut, like the stereo cabinets of Patrick Hughes, tell more about the uses of ordinary materials made into fine furniture than all the other works. It is in these pieces that one sees the transformation of the mundane into works that, though not always art, are nevertheless marked by

Hard-hitting rock on 'Sleeping Dog' makes Ryder comeback worth wait

OCK 'N' ROLL trivia question: Who is the present-day rock star intimately connected with motorcycles and America who produced a comeback album by a faded R&B singer with a string of hits in the 1960s, and what was the name of the artist whose career he tried to rescue?

Well, of course, the original and obvious answer is Bruce Springsteen and Gary U.S. Bonds. Now, however, another duo qualifies.

The current star is none other than that American fool, John "Cougar" Mellencamp, and the artist making the comeback attempt is Mitch Ryder, who, as lead singer for the Detroit Wheels, was responsible for such mid-1960s gems as "Devil With the Blue Dress On/Good Golly Miss Molly," "Jenny Takes a Ride," and "Little almost worth the wait. It is a powerful album that defines its purpose in its opening lines: "When you hear the bell it's nine o'clock/That's the time we start to rock." Mellencamp proves himself to be a fine producer. He is able to keep the album consistently hard-hitting, despite a variety of songwriting styles employed.

Included among the album's nine songs are one Mellencamp number, a Ryder/Mellencamp compilation, three other songs co-written by Ryder, and pieces originally done by such diverse artists as Keith Sykes, Prince, and Long John

Surprisingly, it is the Mellencamp tune that makes the greatest impact. "Rue de Trahir" is an indelible rocker about a road so mean it makes Jackson Browne's

"Boulevard" sound like Sesame Street. ALSO SURPRISINGLY, it is the Prince number, "When You Were Mine," that stands as the most problematic. Not that this quirky pledge of devotion to an un-faithful girlfriend isn't a fine song; it's just Never Kick a Sleeping Dog, however, is that the lyrics are too obviously written by Prince to work for Ryder. After seeing Ryder's unkempt appearance on the album cover, it's hard to keep a straight face when he sings lines like: "When you were mine/I used to let you wear all my

Another notable cut is "A Thrill's a Thrill," a duet with Marianne Faithfull. Although a discourse on sex roles in the second verse seems somewhat out of place, this song still ranks as one of the album's Faithfull and Ryder both have rather gruff vocal styles, each reflecting a rock 'n' roll life lived to the fullest. When Faithfull sings: "I will try anything, if it makes my head go around," you tend to believe her. Together they sound wonderfully sleazy as they snarl out the chorus.

It will be interesting to see if Never Kick a Sleeping Dog will revive Ryder's career as Dedication did for Bonds. The lack of radio airplay so far suggests it is more likely that Ryder will remain in obscurity, as happened to Del Shannon after Tom Petty produced a comeback attempt for

USFL telecast may boost league

Chicago Blitz, 38-17, with less than 12 minutes to play in last Saturday's USFL divisional play-off game, it looked like another in a long line of onesided games that have been prevalent in the league's first year.

But the Stars pulled the miracle of all miracles and came from back to tie the score with 50 seconds to play and eventually win, 44-38, on Kelvin Bryant's touchdown in overtime.

So what is the big deal, comebacks happen, right? Yes, they do, but this one has the potential to make the USFL a real winner as far as the networks are concerned. A similar event occured 25 years ago which propelled the NFL into national prominence.

LAST SATURDAY'S Philadelphia win draws some interesting parallels. The USFL and ABC (KCRG-9) could receive a similar boost on Sunday when the Stars and the Michigan Panthers (a team which drew a record crowd of 60,237 for their divisional playoff game with Oakland last Sunday in the Pontiac Silverdome) meet for the first USFL championship. The numbers will be much smaller, of course, since the NFL will be on top of the pro football world for years to come.

Denver has had the best average attendence all season and a fine crowd is expected. I suspect a few more fans, who were intrigued by Philadelphia's comeback against Chicago and the big turnout in Michigan, might tune in. If these two teams can put on a game as exciting as the Chicago-Philadelphia contest, it would be a tremendous springboard for ABC's ratings and the

Trevino ready for comeback in British

BIRKDALE, England (UPI) - Lee Trevino, adopting a new routine to counter recurring back problems, Tuesday played his one and only practice round in preparation for Thursday's start of the $465,000 British Open golf championship and announced he felt in a winning mood.

The 43-year-old Texan was full of bounce after winning the Canadian PGA by three strokes Sunday and confident of being able to complete a backto-back double like he did when capturing the title in 1971 on these same Royal Birkdale links.

"I can win this Open. I have got the confidence and I am playing well enough to win," Trevino said.

TREVINO'S VICTORY in 1971, (he also went on to win the British Open the following year), came in the midst of a torrid streak which saw him wrap up the U.S., Canadian and British Opens in the space of three weeks.

This year, his nagging back problems forced Trevino to withdraw from the U.S. Open at Oakmont and on medical advice he has limited himself to just one practice round instead of three before each event "I tried it out at the Canadian PGA in Quebec and it worked and I am only going to have one practice round here," Trevino said.

Trevino was more than pleased with his performance in Canada

"I hit 24 birdies and finished 17 under," he said. "I also putted well, averaging 28.2 putts a round, despite the rough being nothing like here. It 'has given me tremendous confidence as far as my putting is concerned."

Commenting on the par-71, 6,968yard course, Trevino described the greens as the finest he has seen for any tournament he played in Britain.

But Trevino was less enthusiastic about other aspects of the course. "The rough is solid deep and the fairways narrow," he said. "I like rough, but anyone who drives the ball three feet off line should not be penalized with the rough as thick as 40 feet off line. They should grade it."

Trevino thought the 112th British Open had assembled the best field in the tournament's history.

"It is going to be a great happening and however thick the rough and narrow the fairways, it isn't going to make any difference, someone is going to eat it alive," he said.

TREVINO SELECTED defending champion Tom Watson and another three-time winner, Jack Nicklaus, as the men to watch along with U.S. Open champion Larry Nelson, former amateur champion Hal Sutton and Spain's Seve Ballesteros, the Masters title-holder and winner of the British Open in 1979.

"Watson, Nelson and Nicklaus are all ready and Sutton is a dangerous darkhorse, an extremely straight driver and a good putter. Seve could leave his driver at home and still probably shoot 10 under par," Trevino

Secret tenure vote is rejected

By Janet Marie Sims Staff Writer

A panel of tenured professors and associate professors in the UI Department of Anatomy voted by secret ballot May 26 to grant tenure to UI Anatomy Assistant Professor Asa Black, panel member Robert Tamanek said Wednesday, but the vote was later rejected.

Black was not told about the meeting, although he was aware that some kind of review was going on, according to Black's attorney, Clara Oleson.

"I had some objections to this method, but according to the University Operations Manual, this is a personnel matter and all information concerning it would be kept confidential. It is even being kept confidential from the person it involves," she said, referring to Black. "We have not received any official vote nor has my client been informed about any of the decisions made.

Tamanek said Anatomy Department Chairman Terrence H. Williams then rejected the 6-3 vote in favor of granting tenure for Black. Therefore, Black is still without tenure, according to Tamanek.

IN NOVEMBER 1982, UI President James O. Freedman rejected a faculty judicial panel report on the Anatomy Department dispute after the panel had supported Black's request for

In December 1982, Freedman sent the the tenure dispute question back to the Anatomy Department for reconsideration and stated in the event tenure is not granted, Black should be given a two-year appointment to help fulfill tenure guidelines. Later that month, Oleson appealed Freedman's ruling to the state Board of Regents, but was denied a hearing by the board. Black subsequently filed suit against UI in January of this year. That suit is still pending in Johnson County District Court.

The process to review Black's application for tenure has been taking place within the UI Anatomy Department since late May, but according to Oleson, "it could be all rumor.

The secret vote was made public Wednesday in a copyright story published in the Iowa City Press-Citizen.

Oleson said she had only received a notice that Black's tenure case was going to be reviewed again and the process by which the review would be conducted.

"It was proposed that tenured faculty members in the Anatomy Department would receive access to Black's files in order to review them (the files,)" Oleson said. "The case would be discussed among them and a secret ballot taken to vote whether to grant Black his tenure."

Under pressu stand on child

WASHINGTON (UPI) - President Reagan yielded to pressure from women Wednesday and agreed to have the federal government pay a larger share than he first proposed for collecting child support payments from elinquent fathers.

In what one congresswoman called "a profound step forward," Reagan also agreed to let federal aid to the states go for collecting child support for non-welfare families as well as hose on relief.

He told Health and Human Services Secretary Margaret Heckler and a group of Republican congresswomen he would moderate the administration's original plan, which would have cut the federal share from 70 percent to 54 percent, settling instead on a 60-40 the conse polls show
