Coalition asks city to act on rent rates

A coalition seeking "to curb a monopoly" on apartment rents will tonight give the Iowa City Council a petition that lists more than 3,100 names, but the group is unlikely to find much support from the council. The Iowa City Fair Rent Coalition is asking the council to establish a Fair Rent Board that would set the maximum rental value for certain residential dwelling units in the city. Reggie Harington said establishing a fair rent board would let the people decide what a fair profit should be and not allow the apartment owners to dictate their own profits.

COALITION CHAIRMAN Don Doumakes said high rents charged by lowa City apartment owners have caused people to react "very enthusiastically" to a rent control proposal.

The coalition, he says, has obtained more than 3,100 signatures for the referendum petition, but needs only 2.500 registered voters to have the rent ordinance placed on a referendum ballot this fall.

"We want to get the greatest amount of signatures possible in case some of them are invalid and can't be counted," Doumakes said. Once the city clerk verifies that at least 2,500 registered voters have signed the referendum, the council will have 60 days to either adopt the proposed or-dinance or have it put on the ballot in a special election.

Doumakes said the issue will probably come to a general vote because it's highly unlikely the council will adopt the ordinance.

Increasing Salvador advisers suggested

United Press International

The Defense Department has recommended to President Reagan that the number of U.S. military advisers in El Salvador be more than doubled, it was reported Sunday.

The New York Times and CBS News said the recommendation would bring the number of U.S. advisers in the Central American country to as many as 125. The administration is now authorized to have 55 advisers.

Reagan was asked by reporters upon his return to the White House from Camp David, Md., "What about more advisers for El Salvador?" Waving off questions, he replied, "Not today.

The Defense Department believes the advisers should be able to increase their mobility by accompanying Salvadoran troops in the field, which is not allowed under current policy, the Times said.

BUT, SENIOR administration officials were quoted as saying the Pentagon recommendations did not include a change in policy that would involve the advisers in combat operations.

A Defense Department spokesman, asked about the report, said, "The whole policy is under review, it's always under review," but, "I have not seen anything publicly (from the department) on this."

dopted the ordinance, but I don't think there's a majority on the council that supports it," Doumakes said.

Councilor John Balmer said he is opposed to any form of rent control. Balmer said rent control of any kind would hurt landlords who own only a few buildings because they wouldn't be able to charge rent according to current market values.

"We (the city of Iowa City) shouldn't be determining market values,' Balmer said. "We should let the market determine rents."

Councilor David Perret said he is not opposed to rent control but is afraid it night affect future investments by apartment builders in Iowa City.

"Rent control limits the profits made by apartment owners," Perret said. "This could have the effect of stifling future investments.'

Perret said that as a renter himself. he understands that Iowa City rents are high, but he doesn't think they will stay that way.

"The forces of supply and demand should force rents to lower." Perret said. "In the near future we should see more apartments being built and less students trying to get them.'

BUT DOUMAKES said the rent ordinance will not affect future investment in Iowa City because a profit will be assured by the rent board. He said the popularity of the petition is due to the fact that many people are led up with high rents. "People in Iowa City pay the highest

Iowa City officials, trying to make Iowa-Illinois Gas and Electric "more accountable" to the public, are proposing to scrap the usual 25-year agreement period with the firm in favor a new five-year franchise. The current franchise with Iowa-

Illinois, under which the firm supplies electricity to local residents, expires in October 1984.

"If a utility realizes it will have to negotiate more often, I think it will cause them to be more accountable to the public," said Iowa City Council member David Perret, who helped draft the proposal. Senate set to approve MX compromise

WASHINGTON (UPI) - A go-ahead to produce the first installment of 10warhead MX nuclear missiles may clear Congress this week, but opponents promise new pressure to link its deployment to progress in arms control talks.

After two weeks of delays, the Senate holds its showdown vote Tuesday.

Although the Senate bill, as approved in the Armed Services Committee, would give President Reagan everything he wants in monetary terms, it contains some significant str-

Secondly, it requires the president to submit, as part of any future requests for additional missiles, an assessment of the effect of such procurements on strategic stability and arms control.

AN AGREEMENT worked out last week ended a filibuster by Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., allowing Hart and other MX opponents to offer up to four MX-related amendments to the $200 billion military authorization bill that has stalled in the Senate for two weeks. Though the measure is likely to pass, Armed Services Committee Chairman John Tower, R-Texas, has said he expects the vote to be about the same as in May when the Senate endorsed the missile 59-39. There could be "some slippage" in the margin, he said, "but not enough to change the

Iran, Iraq claim casualties

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Iran and Iraq both claimed victories Sunday in a battle in the rugged Kurdish region in the 34-month Persian Gulf war.

Poles decide amnesty cases

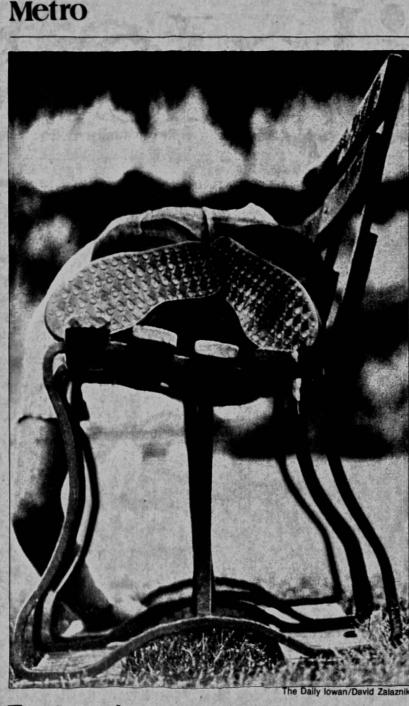

WARSAW, Poland - Polish prosecutors have set a one-week deadline for deciding whether amnesty should be granted to most political prisoners still in custody, the official news agency PAP reported Sunday.

The prosecutors promised to complete a review of cases involving Solidarity activists, PAP said. If they decide to drop the charges, the prisoners must be freed by Aug. 21, one month after the amnesty decree was approved.

McGovern may run again

WASHINGTON - Former Sen. George McGovern said Sunday he may run for president again because the current Democratic candidates have failed to stress changes needed in Reagan policies, particularly on Central America.

On CNN's "Newsmaker - Sunday" program, he said the current 1984 candidates "are not advocating enough change in the policies we're now pursuing" in Central America. "I don't see the Democratic party taking this issue head on," he said. And, Reagan is "an extremist in his views" and is pursuing "a disastrous course in Central America," he said.

Hart: MX system may prompt WW III

DES MOINES (UPI) - Adoption of the MX missile system is a "desperate mistake" that will force the nation into a more offensive approach to nuclear war and might accidently lead to World War III, Sen. Hart called adoption of the $200 on system a c erous move, but said it is typical of an administration that believes military superiority is the only way to deal with the Soviet Union. "Ronald Reagan is pursuing an Milton Feeney, 44, testified that he did not produce the checks cashed by Earl Davis, who was arrested and later convicted of cashing 12 counterfeit checks. Davis was sentenced to 10 years in prison and testified Wednesday that Feeney had employed him in the counterfeiting scheme.

Feeney's attorney, Michael Kennedy, began presenting the case for the defense Wednesday and has called Feeney's family and friends to the stand to counter Davis' testimony. Davis said he saw Feeney produce the checks and they agreed to divide the money "50-50."

EVIDENCE PRODUCED by police for the state's case was also contested by the testimony of Feeney's ex-wife, Sandy, who he still lives with, and two of his children, Shane, 22, and Polly, 18, who reside with their parents in their Solon farmhouse.

The one-year Naloxone study at the UI will be coordinated with similar studies at Johns Hopkins University and the University of Southern California. The four investigators at the UI will be Drs. Paul Eslinger, Arthur Benton, Hanna Damasio and Antonio Damasio

ESLINGER, AN ASSOCIATE research scientist, said that an earlier study on the use of Naloxone in treating patients with Alzheimer's disease was conducted by a team of scientists at New York University. He said that study showed that Naloxone had "at least a transient effect upon test performance of Alzheimer's patients.

Scientists at the three universities involved hope to confirm the earlier results at NYU. The UI study will use the same levels of drugs as the NYU study and will then measure the patient's test performance for memory skills, Eslinger said.

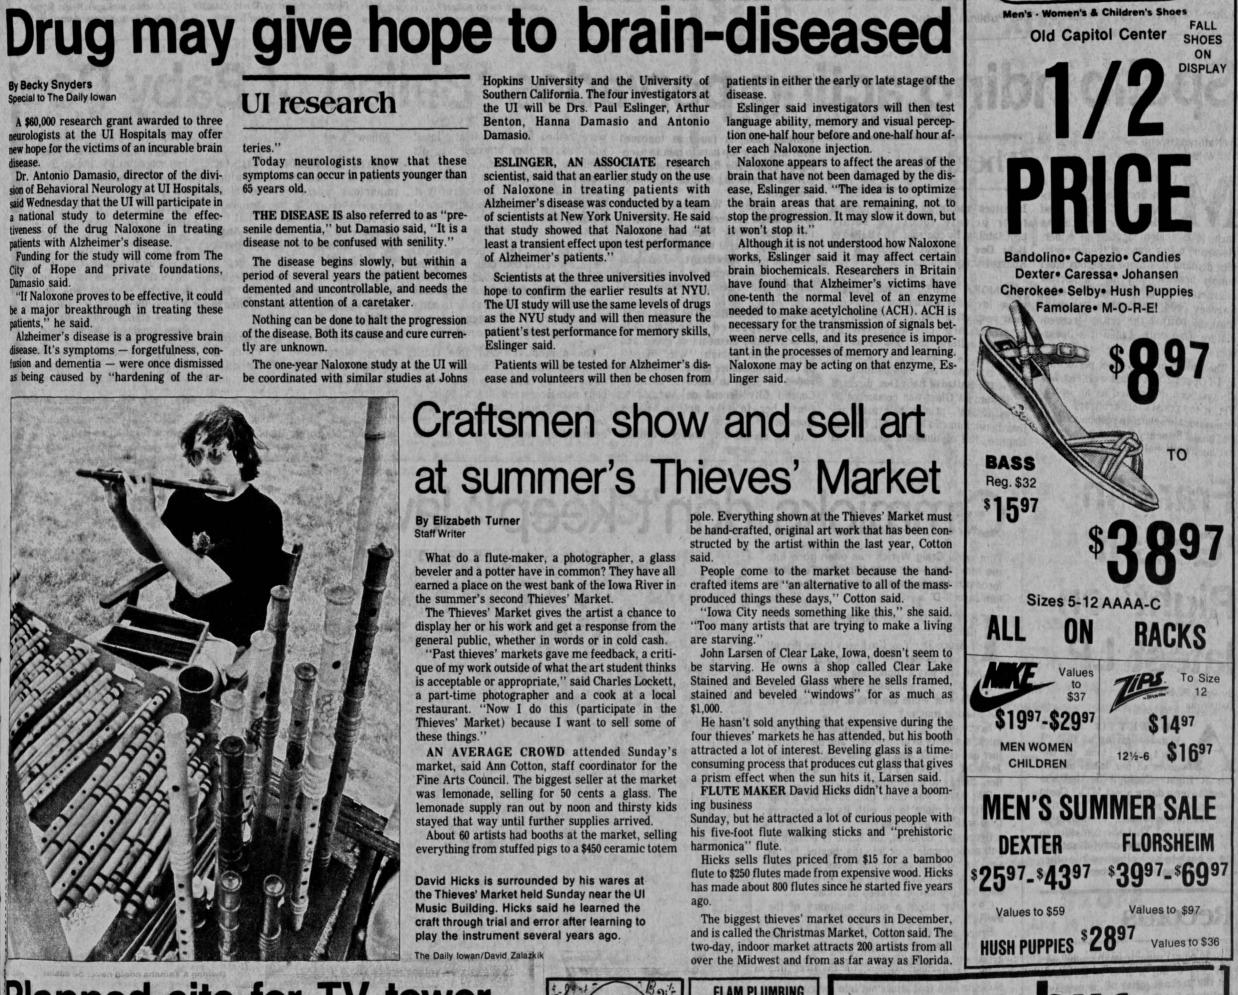

Patients will be tested for Alzheimer's disease and volunteers will then be chosen from patients in either the early or late stage of the disease.

Eslinger said investigators will then test language ability, memory and visual perception one-half hour before and one-half hour after each Naloxone injection.

Naloxone appears to affect the areas of the brain that have not been damaged by the disease, Eslinger said. "The idea is to optimize the brain areas that are remaining, not to stop the progression. It may slow it down, but it won't stop it."

Although it is not understood how Naloxone works, Eslinger said it may affect certain brain biochemicals. Researchers in Britain have found that Alzheimer's victims have one-tenth the normal level of an enzyme needed to make acetylcholine (ACH). ACH is necessary for the transmission of signals between nerve cells, and its presence is important in the processes of memory and learning. Naloxone may be acting on that enzyme, Eslinger said.

People come to the market because the handcrafted items are "an alternative to all of the massproduced things these days," Cotton said.

"Iowa City needs something like this," she said. "Too many artists that are trying to make a living are starving.

John Larsen of Clear Lake, Iowa, doesn't seem to be starving. He owns a shop called Clear Lake Stained and Beveled Glass where he sells framed, stained and beveled "windows" for as much as $1.000.

He hasn't sold anything that expensive during the four thieves' markets he has attended, but his booth attracted a lot of interest. Beveling glass is a timeconsuming process that produces cut glass that gives a prism effect when the sun hits it, Larsen said. FLUTE MAKER David Hicks didn't have a booming business Sunday, but he attracted a lot of curious people with his five-foot flute walking sticks and "prehistoric harmonica" flute.

Hicks sells flutes priced from $15 for a bamboo flute to $250 flutes made from expensive wood. Hicks has made about 800 flutes since he started five years ago.

spurs investigation by FAA

By Patricia Thorn Special to The Daily Iowan

The proposed site for a 2,000-foot commercial devision tower will be investigated by the Federal Aviation Administration after the Iowa City Airport manager told the FAA the tower may cause moblems at one of the airport's runways.

William Newbrough, of the Television Development Association of Iowa, wants to build the $2 million tower 6.7 miles northwest of Frytown in Iowa

But Airport Manager Fred Zehr is concerned the tower may affect the instrument approach to the airport's sixth runway, and he sent formal notice of the problem to the FAA.

Newbrough and the Airport Commission met Thursday to discuss the potential problems.

Dwaine Hiland of the FAA's Air Space and Procedures Section in Kansas City said the agency has informally investigated three or four other sites for the tower, but that no conclusion has been reached on the new site. "I wouldn't prejudge this site at all," he said.

NEWBROUGH, HOWEVER, is optimistic that the roposed location will be accepted. "A few aviation procedures might have to be changed, but the tower iself is no hazard. The FAA presumes that a tower of 2,000 feet or less is safe," he said.

Newbrough said the only significant opposition to all towers comes from private pilots, "but the FAA poesn't agree with them.

The other factor that has to be taken into conideration is the reaction of the people who are going to live around the tower, Newbrough said. "Word travels fast in rural areas." he said, but so far only one complaint has been received.

"It was for aesthetic purposes, " he said. "A man said the tower would change the view from his backyard."

Newbrough said Iowa City is "a logical place for there to be a television station. It's an important part of the state not just because of the university, but also because of the local recreational activities, such as theater and music.'

THE STATION WOULD begin operation in the fall of 1984 on UHF-channel 20. The Iowa City station, which would not be affiliated with any major networks, would serve eastern Iowa and portions of Illinois and Missouri, Newbrough said.

Newbrough hopes to link the station with a proposed station in western Iowa, that would also reach portions of Nebraska, and said he is also interested in establishing stations in Des Moines and possibly Carroll.

Newbrough said the station would offer alternatives in television entertainment and prove valuable for merchants and businessmen by attracting spending to Iowa City.

Newbrough said the station's payroll for the first year could be $250,000. The station's staff would include three management positions and five other full-time positions. There would also be numerous part-time jobs, he said.

The tower and its FM radio stations, two-way radios, mobile telephones and paging systems would bring from $40,000 to $60,000 in tax revenues to Iowa County.

A new mobile home zoning ordinance proposed to the Johnson County Board of Supervisors will place mobile home parks "in separate residential disticts" from their present zoning as commercial disricts, according to County Planner Jud TePaske. The ordinace, if passed, will change the classificaon of mobile home parks from Highway Commeral Districts to Manufactured Housing Residential Districts, TePaske said, because "under the present "dinance, there are too many commercial uses" for he mobile home parks.

The new ordinance, which was proposed by ^{lep}aske, came about because of problems caused by uning residential mobile home parks as commercial Ireas, TePaske said. When the Johnson County Zon-¹⁸ Commission wanted to zone for new mobile home Parks, it had to worry about motels, restaurants and ther commercial buildings being constructed there Recause of the commercial zoning, he said.

THE PROPOSED ORDINANCE would affect 26 bile home parks in Johnson County. According to the proposal, "The purpose of the anufactured Housing Residential District is to provide for the location of mobile homes, modular homes, manufactured housing and the development of mobile home courts and parks."

Under the new ordinance, only manufactured housing, single-family dwellings and mobile home courts will be allowed in the mobile home parks, the ordinance states.

THE PRESENT MOBILE home zoning ordinance allows mobile homes to be used for either residential or commercial purposes, TePaske said. "You could use a mobile home as a temporary home or for commercial use in a mobile home park," he said. The ordinance has been in effect since 1960, he said.

A public hearing on the proposal will be held Aug. 11 during a formal meeting of the board, TePaske said TePaske said he did not expect the ordinance to have any strong opposition. "There might be some changes in the proposal, but the concept won't change. I don't believe there will be any objections. "I hope to have some public input from attorneys and residents to get some suggestions and some criticism. If there are any revisions to be made, we can set a new date for the hearing," he said. TePaske said the proposal has been on the county agenda for about five years.

Spellbinding acting pervades 'Ballad of Baby Doe'

By Kathryn Helene

USICAL THEATER is a term broad enough to encompass both opera and such, it is seldom applied to either. However, a few musical theater vehicles demand this more generous label simply because they defy a narrow characterization. In recent years, Sweeney Todd, ostensibly a Broadway musical, baffled the critics' nomenclature. One critic called it a "nearopera.

The Ballad of Baby Doe, performed by UI Opera Theater last weekend, has always been designated as an opera. Yet, it too resists this arbitrary label. One rationale seems to rest on a financial basis. Sweeney Todd was financed by the traditional Broadway method:

Theater

Investors known as "angels" risked their private funds for future profitability. By contrast, The Ballad of Baby Doe was commissioned by the Koussevitzsky Foundation.

A MORE SUBTLE, and perhaps more invidious distinction, concerns their respective audiences. Broadway musicals are characterized as popular culture" for "low-brow" or "middle-brow" audiences; whereas opera is considered "high culture." But The Ballad of Baby Doe, directed by Beaumont Glass and conducted by Jerry Kracht, proves how arbitrary this distinction can be as well. Sung in English, full of tuneful melodies and comedic delights (such as tuxedoed were bathed in yellow light, tinged men sing their top hats to mimic panning or gold), The Ballad of Baby Doe offered an evening of musical theater treasures.

Horace and the other principal singers invested both their singing and dramatic roles with considerable flair. Horace (Gregg Lauterbach) had a rich baritone that projected well. In early scenes he evinced the swagger and confidence that only silver could buy.

The diminutive Baby Doe (Lisa Narveson-Henderson) basked in an aura of sweetness and beauty. Narveson-Henderson has a voice of such clarity that it soared throughout the evening's most enchanting and In the second act. Horace's cronies demanding music, such as the

The supporting chorus members were not as strong vocally. Their collective stage presence was often too tentative.

The Ballad of Baby Doe requires a robust interpretation to match the Americana grandeur of the music. Director Glass created some inspired moments - the advancing, almost militaristic, front of women who encircle Augusta, and the contractionexpansion of Byran supporters who first physically approach the candidate as a tight cadre of mesmerized voters, then subsequently envelop the stage in a deafening march.

But other scenes could have benefited from this "larger than life" approach. Both the wedding scene and an early Bryan campaign scene were marked by a lackluster triad grouping of chorus members. One of the most tender love scenes was seriously undermined: Horace and Baby Doe declare their love for each other as Horace stands awkwardly behind the piano, singing to the audience.

Still, Douglas Moore's score of incidental ragtime music, suggestions of American folk themes, and contrasting moods of delicacy and magnificence offers pleasures for which any Broadway devotee would gladly plunk down several silver dollars.

Franklin 'Gets It Right' on latest LP

ND WHY is Aretha Franklin giving us that "I don't care" look on the cover of her latest album, Get It Right? Could it be that she doesn't give a damn about MTV? Gimmicks don't keep 'Jaws 3-D' afloat

Film critic Craig Wyrick has often gone into the tank, but never quite like this: To talk to ferocious leopard shark, Bruce Jr., about the film Jaws 3-D.

S IT true that your mother appears in the film?

Bruce Jr.: Yes, I'm happy to say that all 35 feet of her are in Jaws 3-D, and my brother also has a supporting role. CW: What are you doing in the lobby of the Astro Theater while the rest of your family is out making movies? Bruce Jr.: I'm what you might call a gimmick, a novelty to bring people into the theater, just like the 3-D. And from the looks of things, Jaws 3-D is making a real killing at the box office, thanks to us gimmicks. CW: Don't you think that Jaws 3-D's popularity has more to do with its predecessors than with the gimmicks?

Bruce Jr.: Granted, the name is enough to pull some people back into the theater, but as soon as the word gets around about the, ahem, quality of the movie, we're going to need more than our reputation to keep us afloat. CW: How about a quick summary of the movie? Bruce Jr.: Okay, there's this floating fish head that almost falls into your lap, and a syringe that squirts right into your eyes, and a rubber arm, and a frog that jumps, and a skeleton arm that sticks out into the audience. and

Perhaps trying to replicate the formula of her last record, Jump To It. Franklin has once again teamed up with producer/songwriter Luther Vandross, the man who, in the words of a friend, "can do no wrong."

Though Vandross has no problems preserving the heart of soul while shaping a vital sound, the studio band is composed of the elite of R&B talent. Marcus Miller, who co-wrote a majority of the material with Vandross. remains funky whether he's strutting his bass stuff in the front of Michael Brauer's mix or conserving the heat meandering around in the background.

NAT ADDERLY JR. provides the fundamental and expert keyboards. darting in with a crafty chime of harmonies that give Get It Right a nostalgic ring while keeping it perfectly timely.

Guitarists Doc Powell and Georg Wadenius pick and strum in playful stereo rivalry, and drummer Yogi Horton provides a lesson in pliability, working his rhythms to create an unobtrusive but poised beat. The backing chorus includes voices that have already made amazing solo releases: no less than Tawatha Agee, Brenda White, Michelle Cobbs, Fonzi Thornton and Vandross himself.

Franklin is in perfect vocal form, subtle and sensuous in her low range and flowing up into a smooth and nimble upper range. With just a slight variation in tone and timbre, Franklin can convey a dramatic shift in mood, setting and perspective. Aretha can seem to be chatting next to you in the most casual tone, as she does in the title cut, or she can seal herself in a lonesome state, like the sad walk she takes on "I Wish It Would Rain," all in the twinkle of a measure or two.

AND WHEN FRANKLIN raps, she does it without any nervous choppiness. After Paul Riser's swirling horn and string arrangement on "Pretender" fades, she raps a breezy walkthrough, sometimes on the beat, sometimes curving in front or in back of it, always full of a mellow blaze.

Each song on Get It Right is steady and laid-back on a two-tiered level: The beat could put you into motion, while the sound pleases and relaxes. Aretha Franklin's Get It Right severs itself from most current R&B in that it relies not on a monster remix, not on postproduction gadgets, but on classic material and classy camaraderie among the musicians.

We find ourselves at a loss for words; after all, Aretha's haircut isn't that exciting, and there are no lousy cuts to refer to as low points. On Get It Right there is never an empty moment.

CW: I was more concerned about a plot summary, not the "neat" 3-D effects.

Bruce Jr.: You were, huh? That's more than I can say for the filmmakers. Not that I don't love Joe Alves. No, he gave me my best role as an extra in one of the underwater sequences. But let's just say he was going for those "chilling" 3-D effect, and the plot is secondary.

CW: OK, so how about a quick summary of the "secondary" plot?

Bruce Jr.: As you remember in the first Jaws, Sheriff Brody had a son who was almost eaten by my great-grandfather and was traumatized for life. In Jaws II, the trauma wore off, and the kid went on a fateful boat trip with his younger brother, while my grandfather munched on some young flesh. Now in Jaws 3-D, that damn kid, played this time by Randy Quaid, has once again overcome those silly childhood fears, and he now has a job at Seaworld.

CW: Sounds good so far .

Bruce Jr.: I'm kind of foggy about the rest of the film, but I know there's this new attraction at Seaworld, an underwater system of tunnels for viewing sealife, and my mother - that's Bruce Sr.- manages to break into it and wreak Reviewer Craig Wyrick interviews Bruce Jr. at the Astro Theater.

of the underwater world, has some fun with his role, and even manages to ham it up a bit. Sadly, his role is, once again, a supporting one. Quaid, Armstrong and the rest of the cast seem intent on taking the film seriously.

CW: You don't think the film is serious? Don't director Joe Alves and screenwriters Carl Gottlieb and Richard Matheson try to tackle some serious themes?

Bruce Jr .: Sure, a couple. Like man's inhumanity to man - these guys are inhuman to The Daily Iowan/Mel Hil HEN HE wrote and directed .The Palm Beach Story in 1942, Preston Sturges was at the peak of his brief reign as Hollywood's king of comedy.

After a decade of adapting screenplays from other writers' stories, Sturges finally got the chance in 1940 to make a movie from his own story and screenplay. He quickly became one of the film industry's most prolific and profitable directors, generating seven more comedies in the next five years alone

By the time he made The Palm Beach Story, which the Bijou is showing tonight at 9 and Wednesday at 7 p.m., he'd perfected the Sturges style.

THE KEY INGREDIENT is speed. Sturges' movies are nothing if not quick. As critic Manny Farber once noted, the manic pace begins right at the start of a Sturges comedy, with the first two minutes "throwing an audience immediately into what is generally the most climactic and revelatory moment of other films." So it is with The Palm Beach Story. Under the opening credits, in a sequence that could be the conclusion of any screwball comedy from the reason for that?

1930s, a bride and groom make a mad dash to the altar. But for Sturges, the Hollywood happy ending isn't enough. Although he matches this movie's fairy tale start both a typical twist:

"And they lived happily ever after," says the title card on the screen. "Or did tney?"

Within that cynical framework, he constructs a plot complicated enough to accommodate all the elements of the Sturges style. The bride and groom, for instance, fit his usual split along sex lines - a man who's an idealistic individualist, a woman who's a pragmatic opportunist. He's an inventor (played by Joel McCrea) who needs $99,000 to complete a project but balks at charity, and she's a schemer (played by Claudette Colbert) who needs her freedom but counts on chivalry.

TOGETHER THEY EMBODY the struggle between low commerce and high culture - far and away Sturges'

> Along the way, the couple meets other staples from the Sturges menagerie - characters with odd names, like wealthy industrialist J.D. Hackensacker III (Rudy Vallee) and his sister, Princess Centimillia (Mary Astor); characters with odd occupations, like the Wiener King (Robert Dudley); characters with odd dispositions, like the members of the Ale and Quail Club, who conduct a drunken hunt aboard a train.

But other scenes could have benefited from this "larger than life" approach. Both the wedding scene and an early Bryan campaign scene were marked by a lackluster triad grouping of chorus members. One of the most tender love scenes was seriously undermined: Horace and Baby Doe declare their love for each other as Horace stands awkwardly behind the piano, singing to the audience.

Still, Douglas Moore's score of incidental ragtime music, suggestions of American folk themes, and contrasting moods of delicacy and magnificence offers pleasures for which any Broadway devotee would gladly plunk down several silver dollars.

Greenpeace activists back in U.S.

NOME, Alaska (UPI) - Members of the Greenpeace "Siberian Seven" who were held in Soviet custody for five days said Sunday they weren't told they were going to be released until minutes before they boarded a ship for the Bering Sea.

The anti-whaling activists arrived aboard the Greenpeace trawler Rainbow Warrior at Nome late Saturday. They said they were told at one point during their detention they could face up to three years in a Soviet prison.

"On the third day we were told that they were deciding whether to handle our case in an administrative court or criminal court," said Chris Cook, 35, of Washington, D.C.

Cook said the Soviets gave them no idea of the worldwide attention their actions had received, nor of the fate of the Rainbow Warrior, which dodged through fog banks to escape Soviet naval vessels after the seven whaling protesters were arrested last Monday.

"CONSIDERING WE WERE uninvited guests, they treated us very well. There was extensive interrogation, but it wasn't harsh," he said

Central American policy is criticized

He also said the Soviets seemed genuinely interested in Greenpeace stands on whaling issues but wanted to known how the organization could justify violating Soviet law. "My answer was that there was a higher law," Cook said.

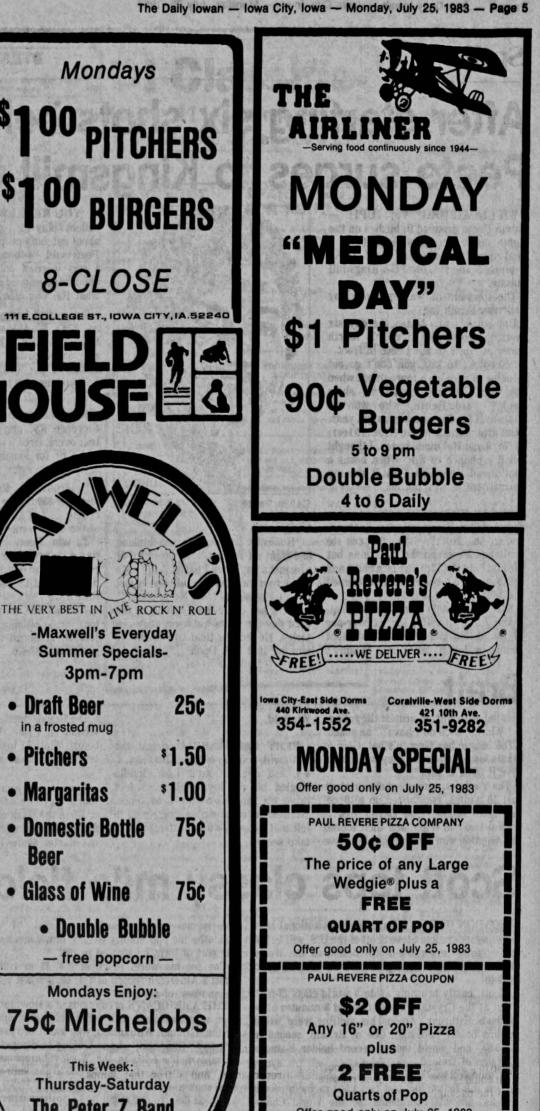

Greenpeace claims the Russians were violating international whaling rules by processing whale meat for a commercial mink farm

The seven activists were taken to a rendezvous point across the International Dateline by a 250-foot Soviet merchant vessel, which was escorted by a 350-foot Russian warship.

After starting six shots behind, Peete surges to Kingsmill win

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (UPI) -Calvin Peete dropped in birdies on the eighth and ninth holes en route to a final-round 69 Sunday and a one-stroke triumph in the $350,000 PGA Kingsmill Classic.

The tournament was sponsored by Anheuser-Busch Inc.

Hal Sutton, who began the day six shots in front, picked up his fourth bogey at No. 9 to put Peete in front.

'Needless to say, you don't go out thinking of winning a tournament when you start the last round six shots back," said Peete, who won at Kingsmill for the second straight year. "But after I made birdie (from 15 feet) at No. 8 and Hal made bogey, I thought I had a chance to win. When I was a shot ahead after nine, I felt it was my tournament to win, not his.'

PEETE FINISHED at 276, one shot ahead of Tim Norris, who fired a threeunder 68. Norris had chances to challenge Peete on the back nine but birdied only the 13th and 14th holes and fell back with a bogey when he missed the 16th green.

Sutton could only blame his own shotmaking inabilities for the six-over-par 77 round. He had posted six straight rounds under 70 going into Sunday's Landrum's $13,300 check gave him just over $30,000 for the year and an excellent shot at a 1984 exemption as one of the top 125 money winners.

To win, Peete had to two-putt the tiered 18th green from 35 feet away. He rolled his first putt to within two-and-ahalf feet and tapped in for the $63,000 first prize With $20,900, Sutton maintained his

Illegal bat costs Brett, Royals dramatic triumph

NEW YORK (UPI) - George Brett's bat brought bedlam to Yankee Stadium Sunday - it also brought the New York Yankees a victory.

With two out in the ninth inning, the Kansas City third baseman sent a fastball off hard-throwing reliever Rich Gossage into the right field seats and the two-run shot apparently gave the Royals a 5-4 victory. But the dramatic home run, as it turned out, was merely the last out of the Yankee manager Billy Martin charged that the pine tar on Brett's bat handle was past the trademark, exceeding the 18-inch allowable area for foreign substance on the bat.

CREW CHIEF Joe Brinkman and home plate umpire Tim McClelland measured the pine tar and declared

Brett out after he had circled the bases and returned to the dugout. In making their decision, the umpires cited baseball rule 1.10 (b). When McClelland made the out signal, Brett stormed from the dugout, his eyes bulging and his arms swinging wildly. He and Kansas City manager Dick Howser had to be restrained by teammates and coaches.

"I'm furious." Brett said. "But it's in the rulebook." In the melee, one of the Royals on the field grabbed the bat and tossed it to on-deck hitter Hal McRae, who threw it into the Kansas City dugout. Both umpires and security personnel ran into the dugout to retrieve the bat.

THE STAGE for the wild ninth inning was set when with two out U.L. Washington singled off winner Dale Murray, 3-1. Gossage then relieved and rett then hit his second pitch for what would have been his 20th homer. New York catcher Rick Cerone at the source of the dispute, inspect Brett's bat after he drove the shot in the seats

'They'll probably bring it up debate," Cerone said. "But there's nothing they can do about it. It's ani. legal bat

"We had discussed this about I weeks ago when we were in Kans-City. And I picked the bat up but I wa checking it for cork.

"I tossed the bat down and the remembered what I was supposed to checking it for. I started yelling their bat boy not to take it away. The pine tar was way above th trademark."

Brett also thought Cerone was loo ing for cork.

"I THOUGHT they were going the check it for cork," he said. "And wasn't concerned. I was unaware of (the pine tar rule). It was the furthe thing from my mind. Every time h

Hawkeye basketball schedule reshuffled

By Steve Batterson Sports Editor

The possibilities of putting a college basketball game on national television are too much for most schools to ignore, and when the networks come calling, the schools usually are more than happy to adjust their schedules. Not only do the schools like the money, but anymore the exposure itself is enough to force the change. The Big Ten Conference, including Iowa, is no exception and two Hawkeye moved to Sunday to pave the way for network telecasts. The Iowa-Illinois game at Champaign, Ill., scheduled for Feb. 11 has been moved to Feb. 12 so NBC can present the game on a semi-national basis.

Banach gets top Big Ten athlete honor

By Steve Batterson Sports Editor

Iowa wrestler Ed Banach could only say he was in "awe" after being named the recipient of the second-ever Big Ten Male Athlete of the Year award. "I really haven't comprehended what it means yet," Banach said. "I really think it is amazing, especially considering all the football players that

THE REGULAR season finale, against Michigan State at the Carver-Hawkeye Arena, has been moved from Mar. 10 to Mar. 11 for a national CBS telecast. The game will be the only game broadcast by the network on that day and will precede the announcement of the pairings for the NCAA tournament.

It has also been announced that Iowa's game at Oregon State on Dec. 10 will likely appear on MetroSports. MetroSports, which also owns rights to three Big Ten games a week during the conference schedule, will telecast seven Hawkeye games. Those games include home contests against Wisconsin (Jan. 21), Purdue (Feb. 4), Ohio State (Feb. 18) and Michigan (Mar. 7) and road games at Michigan State (Jan. 4), Indiana (Jan. 28) and Minnesota (Feb. 25).

THE OTHER schedule change involves a tenatively-planned game with South Carolina. Because the Gamecocks have been accepted for admission in the Atlantic Coast Conference, South Carolina officials were forced to pare down their schedule to meet NCAA limits Replacing South Carolina on the Hawkeye schedule is Illinois Wesleyan of Bloomington, Ill. The game will be played at the Carver-Hawkeye Arena on Nov. 26 and will be Iowa's regular season opener.

The Titans, who compete in Division III of the NCAA, last faced a Big Ten team in the 1981-82 season. In that game, they lost to Northwestern, 71-57.

were up for it.

Banach received eight first-place votes, one second and two thirds to easily outdistance runner-up Marc Behrend, a goalie on the Wisconsin hockey team, and Michigan All-American football player Anthony Carter. Banach received 28 points to Behrend's 11 and Carter's 10.

OTHERS WHO were nominated for the award included football players Tony Eason of Illinois and Chris Hinton of Northwestern, basketball players Randy Breuer of Minnesota and Randy Wittman of Indiana and Ohio State golfer Chris Perry. The Female Athlete of the Year award was given to Judi Brown of the Michigan State track team, Brown won three Big Ten titles and an NCAA championship during the 1983 season. Iowa's nominee was long distance runner Nan Doak.

Banach and Brown will be honored at breakfast prior to the Big Ten Kickoff Luncheon in Chicago on Friday. Brown, however, is running in Europe and will be unable to attend. "Last week, I watched Anthony Carter in the USFL Championship game. He put on some incredible moves,' Banach said at a media luncheon on Friday. "And last year I watched Tony Eason against Iowa and in the winter, Randy Breuer of Minnesota and Randy Wittman of Indiana were great.

"I SIZED them up in my mind and I sized up what I had done in four years. It was fun, but it was difficult for me to think what I did was as unique and awesome as what they did."

Banach, a 190-pounder from Port Jervis, N.Y., is the winningest and pinningest wrestler in Hawkeye history. His 34-3 record during the past season included 22 pins. He also sported a career record of 141-9, winning 73

Ed Banach matches by pins.

His 4-3 win over Iowa State's Mann in the NCAA Champio gave Banach his third NCAA crown is also only the sixth wrestler in Ten history to win four conference tles.

IN ADDITION, he won all 23 Big dual matches he competed in and was named the league's Most Value Wrestler for the 1983 season. Despite the fact that Carter Eason will likely earn more money professionals, Banach said he has regrets about the sport he chose. "I'm a firm believer that you've to do what you're interested in a what you do well at," Banach said feel real lucky that I can wrestle do well at it.

The Dogs to chase Raw Score M for softball title

Summer predictions are always fun to make. If you're dead wrong, nobody ever remembers that fact when the fall semester begins, and if you're right, you can always remind readers how prophetic you were in the fall.

After following the squad I felt was the team to beat for the men's intramural summer softball championship nearly all season. I saw The Dogs and High Stakes go at it Thursday night. Raw Score M is no longer the heavy favorite I thought them to be. The Dogs 9-3 victory gave them a 5-0 mark in Section VI, and dropped High Stakes to 4-1.

I am going to make a conditional Score M also competes in the coed

Sportsview prediction, which is fair because it's only summer. Raw Score M will go all the way this year on two conditions:

2. Raw Score M will win the championship if they produce some sound hitting. I have no qualms with their defense - only opposing teams will have problems with that. Pitcher Kevin Spratt said early in the season that the problem with his team was that on some occasions they hit, and other times they didn't.

THE DOGS aren't worshipers of the long ball either, but every time they put the ball in play, it becomes a challenge for the opposition to keep them off the bases. A combination of outstanding base running a d a few

The Dogs make you throw them out on the bases, and can score on a walk and a base hit. Few teams in the league have learned the value of aggressive baserunning, making the Dogs look like the Oakland A's of the softball league.
