Senate approves MX production

Reagan's military strategy, the Senate Tuesday night approved full-scale production of the giant MX nuclear missile beginning in 1984.

The endorsement, following similar House approval last week, came as the Hart, D-Colo., the leading MX opponent, to eliminate $2.6 billion in a military spending bill for producing the

"The MX missile is the wrong missile being built for the wrong reasons to be placed in the wrong silos," Hart said in his final remarks. "The MX missile does not enhance our national security. The MX missile does not move America along the path to arms control and the mutual reduction of fear and tension in a world too close to the 'hair trigger' of nuclear war."

But Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., a strong proponent of the missile program, argued the MX was part of a compromise recommended by a presidential panel and endorsed by Reagan to restore "strategic parity" with the Soviet Union and to negotiate arms reductions.

Reagan insists war is not in U.S. plans Reagan came out swinging Tuesday in defense of his Central America policy, blasting a "drumbeat ... of suspicion" for undermining public support and pledging, "We're not planning a war."

Reagan said massive U.S. military exercises to be conducted in Honduras and companion naval maneuvers off the shores of Nicaragua are routine activities not unlike military games conducted last year when "no one seemed to be excited about them at all."

We're not planning a war and I don't think that's going to happen at all." the president said, rejecting suggestions the maneuvers move the United States closer to active military involvement in the region.

In a nationally televised news conference, the president somewhat plaintively asked, "Is it just that there's no confidence in the fact that when I say these are maneuvers of the kind we'vebeen holding regularly and for years?"

REAGAN EXPLAINED that he has focused his policy on aiding El Salvador rather than "going to the source" of communist-bloc arms because, "If you go to the source, I think you're talking about the Soviet U-

He dismissed the need to confront Moscow, saying the Kremlin knows the U.S. position that he is "trying to bring about the very thing you people think we are shying away from - not bring

The president also defended his fourpart policy, comprehensively outlined in a sperch to Congress two months ago, which involves support for democratic reforms, economic improvement and negotiations to end the fighting, all carried out under a 'security shield" provided by the United States. He said his critics and the press have paid "entirely too much attention to the security shield" while ignoring his diplomatic efforts.

"THE UNITED STATES is on the side of peace, and against the export of violence," he said, declaring his policy seeks "great goals worthy of a great and generous people. The 35-minute session was dominated by Central American concerns - only three other topics were raised: the situation in Lebanon, the lingering controversy over the Carter briefing papers and whether his failure to appoint women to special Central America policy commission will exacerbate the political "gender gap."

House likely to end anti-Sandinista aid

WASHINGTON (UPI) - House debate on a bill to cut off administration aid to Nicaraguan rebels was delayed for a day Tuesday, but Speaker Thomas O'Neill said the outlook for passage later this week is good.

"From our count, it will be very close, but it looks very favorable to us," O'Neill told reporters earlier in the day.

Five former top Democratic administration officials endorsed the bill, and urged Congress to ensure that U.S. efforts in the area "conform to domestic and international law, are conducted openly and are aimed at negotiating a political settlement.' The bill, opposed by the administration, was rescheduled for debate today. House leaders hope for final action Thursday. President Reagan said in his news conference Tuesday Congress would make a "very grave mistake" that could lead to "a giant headache down the road" if it votes to cut off U.S. covert aid to Nicaraguan rebels. O'Neill earlier expressed concern that opponents of the bill would attempt to drag out debate and stall action. Some 103 amendments have been filed, most of them by opponents.

O'NEILL SAID he hopes with passage of the Nicaragua bill "we can send a strong message from the House ... to help determine presidential policy.' He estimated there are 178 firm Democratic votes for the bill so far, with 30 leaning, and said it will be a strong vote if they also pick up about 25 Republicans.

The bill would force Reagan to halt U.S. aid to the rebel forces opposed to the leftist Sandinista government of Nicaragua. In place of the assistance to the rebels, the bill would provide $80 million for friendly governments in Central America to use in trying to halt the shipment of arms to guerrilla forces in the region.

In the debate, administration critics pointed to El Salvador's 'dismal" record in correcting human rights abuses and criticized the president for continuing U.S. aid to the Salvadoran government.

Rep. Michael Barnes, D-Md., told a joint hearing of two House Foreign Affairs subcommittees that statistics gathered by the administration and charitable groups show an increase in civilian deaths in El Salvador during the first six months of the year.

Prison censors nix nude pix

FORT MADISON, Iowa - A woman who wants to send nude pictures of herself to her husband in prison has filed suit in federal court against state officials.

Debbie Frazer is charging it is wrong to ban nude pictures of her while allowing nude pictures published in magazines like Playboy. But officials maintain that pictures of relatives or friends may incite inmates to argue or fight, while pictures of strangers are less likely to cause trouble. County eyes grouping of agencies

By John Tieszen

A proposal to the Johnson County Board of Supervisors would "consolidate several human service agencies into one centrally located building." The board was told about the project at an informal meeting Tues-

According to Cheryl Mintle, human service coordinator for the Johnson County Council of Governments, a survey conducted last month of 28 agencies funded by United Way, Johnson County and Iowa City indicated that seven agencies wished to share space in the same building. Among the agencies that indicated interest are the Crisis Center, Red Cross and Mid-Eastern Council on Chemical Abuse

Board Chairman Don Sehr said if some of the agencies were combined "it would eliminate a lot of extra space." The plan is in the preliminary stages but Sehr said, "I'm sure there is going to be some con-

The project description recommends "acquisition and renovation for consolidation of human services in a more central location in order to more efficiently and effectively provide services to Johnson County residents."

A centrally located building will be 'more convenient," Mintle said. "The agencies will be able to share computers, filing space and phone systems."

Mintle said if the proposed project is passed it will save the county "at least $25,000" (per year).

A SECOND SURVEY of Johnson County agencies will be required to determine how many agencies will be involved in the project and how much space is needed for each agency, Mintle said.

According to the proposal, "The project is to be funded in part by the Community Development Block Grants applied for by Johnson County." Community block grants come from the federal Department of Housing and Urban Development, Mintle said. Funding for the project will also come from the state government and from the agencies that will be involved in the project, she said.

A city-owned building currently being considered for the project is now leased by U-Smash-Em auto body repair on Gilbert Street. "It is only one of several alternatives. We are really just looking," Mintle County Planner Jud TePaske said the application for the CDBG grants project is not due until Jan. 18, 1984. TePaske also said the project should receive funding because Johnson County is ranked fourth in community-wide ratings for HUD funding. According to the proposal, "The proposed project is an eligible activity for Community Development Block Grant funding, and Johnson County ranks high" (fourth out of 160 large communites).

Study: Editors decry using hidden mikes

By Patricia Thorn Special to The Daily Iowan

Although more than 80 percent of the 150 editors questioned in a UI journalism survey isapproved of journalists using hidden recording devices, even when the journalist is dentified as a reporter, 90 percent said they would consider using the method under cerain circumstances. The survey, conducted for a News and Editorial Problems class, reports the editors say such circumstances most likely involve stories in which the intent was to uncover wrongdoings or illegal activities. Some editors specified accuracy, specifically if there was a likelihood of being misquoted, as a possible reason for using a concealed recording device. Many of the ditors said the decision to use a recording device can only be made on a case-by-case basis or "as a last resort."

OF THE EDITORS questioned, 92.6 percent said they disapproved of the use of hidden equipment when the journalist does not identify herself or himself as a reporter. The survey states that a high percentage "confirmed the general disapproval even more strongly."

Most who disapproved said using such a device would be a breach of ethics. Editors described the practice as "dishonest," "unfair," and "an invasion of privacy." A typical response was, "The press has enough credibility problems without running over people's rights."

Under the federal "consensual monitoring" rule, the use of hidden recording devices is legal if one party knows the conversation is being recorded. However, 13 states bar consensual recording by private individuals. Although legality is clearly an important issue, it is apparent that the decision to use hidden recording devices is widely viewed as an ethical question, the survey states.

THE SURVEY NOTES that the code of ethics of the Society of Professional Journalists states, "Journalists will seek news that serves the public interest, despite the obstacles." But the code also says, "Journalists at all times will show respect for the dignity, privacy, rights and well-being of the people encountered in the course of gathering and presenting the news." The survey was conducted for UI Journalism Professor Gilbert Cranberg by UI students Elizabeth Bird, Thomas Daykin and Patricia Steffen. It specifically concerns the use of hidden microphones or cameras when Cranberg said the idea for the survey was prompted in part by the movie Absence of Malice, in which a reporter wears a concealed microphone.

'Curiously, the movie was set in Miami, and Florida is one of those states in which it would be illegal." he said.

Cranberg said the results of the survey did not surprise him. "Most people regard it as sneaky," he said, "but they don't want to absolutely rule it out."

Cranberg said that while hidden recording devices are used by law enforcement officials, "police practices are not a yardstick for journalism ethics. There seems to be a certain amount of confusion among reporters that they serve a quasi-law enforcement func-

A Colorado man jailed for more than seven months for being suspected of raping a woman in Coralville last year was released Friday in Johnson County District Court when it was learned that he "couldn't have done it."

Robert F. Bakker Jr., 32, was released when it was discovered that he had been in the Scott County Jail in Davenport at the time the rape occurred, court reports state.

Bakker had been accused of second-degree sex abuse involving a Coralville woman who was taken at knife-point from the Clear Creek bridge on First Avenue in Coralville and raped November 13, 1982.

Bakker was held in the Scott County Jail from Oct. 9 to Dec. 10, court records state.

The order dismissing the case came from 6th District Judge Robert E. Ford on the recommendation of Assistant Johnson County Attorney Linda McGuire, who wanted Bakker released "in the interest of justice."

Shortly after the reported rape, the victim had identified Bakker as her assailant in a photo line-up at the Coralville Police Department, and he was charged for the incident.

Book details messianic Marley's reggae influence

By Tom Doherty

Catch a Fire: The Life of Bob Marley by Timothy White. Holt. Rhinehart, and Winston, 1983, 380

HOUGH THE laid-back ballads of mellow Californians and the disco rhythms of beat machine operators from New York dominated the American record charts in the 1970s, it was Jamaican reggae that had the most invigorating impact on the era's

A complex hybrid of rhythm and blues, jazz, and Caribbean-based folk beats, reggae is immediately recognizable by its offbeat syncopations and fluid bass lines. Books

FOR INHABITANTS of Jamaica's hellish shantytowns, however, reggae was more than pleasant background music: It was a vital folk art that galvanized communities with names like Trench Town, Concrete Jungle, and Lizard City.

Of the hundreds of "rude boys" (street toughs) and "bungo-bungoes" (country hicks) whose energies reggae drew from soccer or random violence, none was more talented than the visionary singer/songwriter Bob

It was Marley's peculiar genius that made the island's indigenous music meaningful and accessible to a worldwide audience. He used reggae to voice his religious aspirations and political grievances, praising Jah, the Rastafarian God, and inveighing governments. In the process, he became the Third World's most beloved advocate of social justice and, incredibly, an international rock

Catch a Fire, by rock journalist Timothy White, is a comprehensive and richly detailed account of the singer's life and times. Exhaustively researched and lucidly written, White's book is no quickie, tattletale rock bio. It is a judicious study that is careful to place Marley within the context of contemporary Jamaican

IN HIS LIFE and music, Marley adopted the role of a messianic seer of the Rastafarians, a millenarian cult whose teachings derive from Marcus Garveys's back-to-Africa movement and a "Black Man's Bible" called the

> Though Marley was always more of a mystic than a Marxist, the radical messages of albums like Burnin'. Natty Dread, and Rastaman Vibration had made him, in White's words, the "hero of black freedom fighters everywhere and the most charismatic emissary of modern pan-Africanism." He celebrated ghetto rebellion ("War") and wars of liberation ("Zimbabwe"), but his sense of humor usually kept his stridency in line.

THE MOST DANGEROUS lyrics Marley wrote condemned the senseless political violence in Jamaica itself. It may be useful to remember that Marley was no punk rocker safely baiting a tolerant political Establishment, that he was expressing these

Just days before a scheduled concert for the Jamaican Ministry of Culture. seven gunmen invaded his Kingston residence and shot Marley, his wife, and a business associate. Remarkably, no one was killed in the raid, and Marley triumphantly performed at the show as scheduled.

Marley's pre-eminent stature in the island's political life was confirmed at the "One Love" concert in 1978. A stunned audience watched him bring Prime Minister Michael Manley and Opposition Party Leader Edward Sedgewick onstage to shake hands publicly. Only Marley had the authority - and the guts — to unite the two bitter foes.

MARLEY'S MIRACULOUS escape from the death squad enhanced the reputation he cultivated as an 'obeahman," a kind of sorcerer or wizard who can call on the powers of 'duppies'' (other-worldly spirits) to influence events. White notes that Marley and the people around him "believed in magic and lived their lives Book Store.

in accordance with these beliefs. The author has what he calls "a healthy respect for native mysticism.' Skeptics may be put off by White's credulity, but as the coincidences in Marley's life pile up - fulfilled prophecies, fatal omens, and strange possessions - one begins to appreciate his viewpoint.

Marley overcame poverty, spiritual confusion, and political violence, but neither native folk remedies nor modern medical science could help him defeat cancer. After a painful fight that lasted months (and after radiation treatments had caused his prized dreadlocks to fall out), Marley's doctor finally admitted he could do no more

Marley called his lawyer and made final arrangements for his family. He comforted his mother, saying: "I'll be all right. I'm gwan te prepare a place." He died on May 11, 1981, at the

Jones' newest album provides Entertainment today survival lessons for listeners

By Alex Wilding-White

NLIKE A number of artists within our boundaries, Rickie Lee Jones is pure Americana, as red, white and bluesy as Edward Hopper or Jack Daniels. The images of her songs draw from familiar milieus such as poolhalls, solitary apartments, old beat-up Cadillacs and beer halls where the jukebox goes "doit-doit." Through Jones' eyes, they become more than often bleak pictures of displaced love and life at the bottom rung. The strength and hope that inform her longs, brought out so convincingly by her slightly warbling, crying-in-the-night voice, provide the listener with strong lessons in survival, of making most of minimal conditions. While the dark underside is always there, the reaction to it can range from joy and dancing in the streets, to sorrow from a eart rent asunder by soured love, to wreckless abandon against God knows what. One doesn't so such listen to Jones' songs as experience them. Jones' visibility on the musical scene has been mostly due to constant touring, with only two records to show for herself. Her eponymous debut LP garnered considerable attention, "Chuck E.'s In Love" becoming a moderate hit single and "Easy Money" and "Danny's All-Star Joint" receiving en-rouraging amounts of FM airplay Two-and-a-half years passed before Pirates emerged, and while it was critically acclaimed for its greater musical scope and lush production, it didn't quite ring up the sales of the first LP. Still, Jones had passed through a difficult period both artistically and personally, and with many of her problems resolved, it looked like she was in for a productive career as a recording musician.

ALMOST THREE years later, a third LP has yet materialize. In fact, Jones has gone to great lengths to state that her new record, Girl at Her Volcano, is not that much-anticipated platter, but a group of songs that were not quite enough to make a whole LP but that she wanted the public to hear. Pressure from the A & R department no doubt also led to the release of this 10-inch, seven-song minialbum. Whatever the reason, Girl at Her Volcano offers a different side of Jones and will be welcome nourishment for her starved following.

All the familiar elements of Jones' sound are here. Rough, chopping piano chordings and sparse, onenote-at-a-time arrangements form the foundation for Jones' vocal gymnastics. Never elaborate, the intrumental background provides enough to give the listener an accurate picture of the environment against which Jones draws her observations and con-

Records

"Lush Life," a sobbing, bleary-eyed ode to life married to the bottle, shows all the sides of a person victimized by an addiction. Many times the words become unintelligible beneath the growls, slurs, and cries Jones uses, but these effects often say more about the conditions depicted than any number of words ever could.

Jones' vocal range allows her to change the mood of a song as slowly or as abruptly as needed, one moment wondering quietly, another stating matter-offactly, the next screaming painfully. "Lush Life" is, in a sense, a typical Jones song with its paradoxical

BY CONTRAST, "Under The Boardwalk," a short salsa number, maintains an even keel throughout, the arrangement as tightly knit as any of Jones' have ever gotten. The setting suggested by the title acts as the perfect symbol for the life and social strata Jones describes in many of her songs. The suggestion here is that even if life passes over the outcasts and renegades that populate this space, there is still joy and hope, even if only for a short while.

What distinguishes this record from previous efforts is the extensive use of cover material, most Valentine." Even before one has broken the shrink wrap off the cover, one can tell that this tune. covered by artists ranging from Chet Baker to Elvis Costello, is perfectly suited to Jones' sensibilities.

She exceeds these expectations and makes the song sound as if it were written especially for her. The same vocal swoops and dives that characterized "Lush Life" again give this selection a multi-faceted character.

Girl at Her Volcano, at the very least, helps maintain Jones' visibility, showing that she is indeed alive and well and still able to reach people. Her lack of recorded material is a shame as the current popular music scene, riddled with fly-by-night gimmicks, desperately needs more artists of Jones' integrity, creativity and depth.

While this record is not insolubly fixed to past trends, it does liberally utilize forms and images from her first two records and offers no clue as to future directions. This record is welcome material, but it will only heighten the anticipation of her third LP, which, at this point, would be even more

Television

We have a thing about soap operas, and the best one of all time is being given a second look tonight on PBS. It's hard to believe that it's already been ten years since the Senate Watergate hearings, the beginning of the process that brought Richard Nixon at last to his knees (we're still bitter).

A personal digression, if we may: at that point in time, we were attending a small college that had a TV lounge next to the cafeteria. There were many times during that spring and early summer that there would be more people in the lounge than in the cafeteria - and you know how college students love to eat. We weren't around for the McCarthy hearings; the Kennedy assassination is hazy at best this was the most important, exciting television event at least in our own history.

Join correspondent Charles McDowell in a look back at the Watergate hearings, featuring the faces and voices of John Mitchell, H.R. "Bob" Haldeman, John Ehrlichman, the "cancer on the presidency" testimony of John Dean and Alexander Butterfield's revelation that the President had this little taping system, as well as interviews with Sens. Sam Ervin, Daniel Inouye and Lowell Weicker. You'll never see any better TV. 8 p.m., IPT-12.

At the Bijou

We've said it before, but we'll say it again: Preston Sturges' The Palm Beach Story is the funniest movie ever made. Join the Wiener King, the Ale and Quail Club, Joel McCrea, a Claudette Colbert, Rudy Vallee (who is simply superb) and Mary "Ah, desert nights" Astor in a hilarious romp over the skyscrapers of New York and the lagoons of Florida, with a few stops in the boudoir on the way. Great Art Alert. 7 p.m.

 Monsieur Hulot drops in on his brother-in-law's family in Jacques Tati's Mon Oncle, and all hell breaks loose. Aside from the usual major food differences, there are brats doing unusual things with lampposts, cars that stretch from Vichy to Bordeaux, houses with eyes, garage doors with brains and a whole panoply of related problems. Modern life never looked so wierd. 8:45 p.m.

House votes down boxing board; would have set national norms

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The House refused Tuesday to establish a board to propose federal standards for professional boxing matches.

Spurred by the death of Korean boxer Duk Koo Kim in a fight with Ray "Boom Boom" Mancini last November, supporters wanted to spend $880,000 to create a Congressional Advisory Board on Boxing. But they were defeated, 167-254.

The board, to be appointed by House Speaker Thomas O'Neill and Senate Republican leader Howard Baker, would have included two doctors, three members involved in professional boxing and five others who do not present or regulate boxing matches.

Perfect Krauts deflate Ego in IM coed playoffs

By Mike Condon

Shortstop Jay Griener drilled a tworun double down the left field line to highlight a three-run fourth inning that propelled the Krauts past Ego, 94, in the quarterfinals of the intramural coed playoffs Tuesday night.

Earlier in the evening, Ego was a 13-2 winner over The Generals in firstround play. In the other first-round tilt, Goosetown Poops prevailed, 9-2, over Raw Score.

However, Goosetown couldn't make Krauts to their fifth win without a loss.

Intramurals

it a sweep in the quarterfinals as they dropped a 6-5 thriller to Sugar Bowl International. Mid-American Erectors took a 10-8 decision over Angies Phalanges while Final Four eeked out a 14-13 win over Sophists.

IN THE Krauts' win over Ego, errors and timely hitting led the first of nine Ego errors in the first. Ego many Ego hitters to hit harmless popthird baseman Myra Hart threw ups. wildly, allowing Hammes to move to third where he scored on shortstop Lee Specter's error of a routine grounder.

Iowa football player Carl Peiffer singled to left in the third inning for the second Kraut run. After the three-run fourth, the Krauts salted the game away in the sixth, scoring four times thanks to four more Ego errors.

Ego could only muster single runs in

"THEY REALLY had the advantage only having to play one game," Specter said about the Krauts. "We were a little tired and that's when the mental mistakes started. But we had a good season. We were 0 for the 80s before this season. The turnabout came after (first baseman) Sid Carlson took over the ball club."

Hammes said the key to the Kraut the final four innings as Kraut pitcher success this season is the sqaud's

In the two blocks of South Johnson Street between Burlington and Bowery streets there are 16 three-story, lookalike apartment buildings, all but five built in the last year or so.

The area around Johnson Street has become a showcase for an unprecedented boom in the Iowa City multiple-unit housing industry. And with record UI

Dairy may expand, despite objections

By Mark Leonard

The Iowa City Board of Adjustment Wednesday decided not to revoke Home Town Dairies' building permit, which will enable it to expand its refrigeration storage facilities.

Two neighbors of Home Town Dairies, which is located at 1109 N. Dodge St., appealed the building permit because they feared the expansion plans at the dairy would increase noise blems in the area. "They're a noisy operation," Andrew Isserman, 9 Caroline Court, said of Home Town Dairies. "And the issuance of this building permit makes us afraid the new construction will make it much noisier in the neighborhood." He added, however, that the dairy has taken steps in recent months that have reduced the level of noise in the area. HOME TOWN DAIRIES sued Iowa City last year for $14 million, questioning the lawfulness of the city's noise ordinance. The case is still in litigation. When it came to a vote on revoking the building permit, board members Lea VanderVelde and Peter Fisher voted in favor of revoking the permit, while board chairman R. Scott Barker and Marcia Slager voted to uphold the ssuance. The fifth member of the board, Robert Randall, did not attend. At the June 22 meeting of the board, Attorney Roger Colton, who represented Isserman and Anthony Frey, 15 Caroline Court, asked that Barker 'voluntarily decline" voting on the appeal because of a potential conflict of

Barker's father, Charles, owns approximately 10 acres of land near the dairy and Colton argued at the time that if Barker and the board were to rule against the appeal, it would monetarily benefit Barker's father by increasing his property value.

At Wednesday's meeting, Barker said he had decided that no conflict of interest existed. "I have determined in my mind that I do not have any conflict of interest," Barker said. He said any property owned by his father would not "sway or influence

(his) vote or decision.' THE ISSUE BEFORE the board was whether Home Town Dairies is conducting activities on its property that are not allowed under its present CH, commercial/highway, zoning. Under that zoning, a retail store is permitted, while industrial use is not.

Isserman said the dairy is not a 'creamery" because it no longer See Dairy, page 6 novation in the game of golf. Many members of the Iowa women's golf team, including Coach Diane Thomason, currently use the metalhead club

The theory behind the metal-head driver is that it is lighter, producing a faster swing and longer distance off the tee. But Thomason said she "couldn't tell the difference" in the weight of a metal-head driver and the standard one-wood. "I've never really measured the distance," she said. "I like it because I'm more accurate with it," Thomason said, "I also like the looks of it, and it feels good.

TWO MORE advantages to the new club, which is comparable in price to the standard wooden driver, is that it is "much easier to manufacture to the exact specifications," and the "maintenance of the club is easier," Thomason said.

Another interesting wood that has surfaced in many golfers' array of clubs is the "ginty." The ginty, which
