Council: Mini-park not for sale

By Carlos Trevino

Representatives of the McDonald's Corporation said they believed other local businesses found McDonald's to be their kind of place, but the Iowa City Council in their informal meeting Monday night said they were not interested in having the restaurant in the council's kind of place - the Blackhawk Mini-Park at Washington and Dubuque

Iowa City Mayor Mary Neuhauser told local McDonald's owners Bill and Dorothy O'Brien and corporation representatives that "for the foreseeable future, it (the mini-park) will not be for sale."

Neuhauser arrived at that decision following discussion between councilors and McDonald's personnel and owners. The owners were hoping to build a restaurant that would have McDonald's officials presented the council with a packet, which included prints of the potential commercial development, and several reasons for allowing the facility to be placed there.

"It is possible for private developers to maintain the same functions (for the open space) as the city," McDonald's Real Estate Representative Dexter Marston said.

Sorority members who confronted the Iowa City Planning and Zoning Commission Thursday to protest a proposed down-zoning in their neighborhoods were told it was "mandatory" to attend, said UI Student Senator Kate Head.

Head; a member of Alpha Phi sorority, which owns a greek house at 906 College St., said Monday that UI Program Assistant Mary Skourup told sorority presidents she wanted mandatory attendance, but used the word datory, "very loosely."

The Daily Iowan also learned that some sorority members were romised merit points to encourage their attendance at the zoning meeting. The down-zoning, which could add a requirement that all non-university ousing provide a parking space for each resident; could force hundreds of fraternity and sorority members from their current residences.

Chairman John Seward of the Planning and Zoning Commission said that greek housing could be exempted from the ordinance if it were approved by the commission and the Iowa City

HEAD SAID that Skourup told sorority presidents before the meeting that attendance was mandatory, but that she had used the word in an unofficial manner "as it was interpreted.

"If it was literally mandatory, 2,500 people would have been in that room (conference hall)," Head said. "Those that were concerned and were directly affected were there. That's why they were there," she said.

Skourup said "it was mandatory, yes, I highly encouraged everyone ... they'd better be there," but explained that she didn't mean "something would happen (punishment) if they didn't come. Skourup said she thought perhaps some of the sorority presidents or their greek sisters may have thought she meant "mandatory" in a more serious tone since "I'd have loved them to make it mandatory to have (sorority members) there.' Skourup, responsible for greek affairs, said "they may have misconstrued what I meant when I said 'mandatory'," when she spoke with the sorority presidents on the planning and zoning meeting.

IN REFERENCE to some sorority members gaining merit points for attendance, Skourup said "that doesn't surprise me ... they'll do things like

Head said she knew of no sorority president offering members merit points for those who attended.

Two sorority members at Thursday's meeting, who asked not to be identified, said they were receiving merit points for attending but that "we're here because we want to be here. Not because of the points," one said.

Neither would identify her sorority for fear of "getting into trouble." Many sorority presidents could not

Two Marines die, 14 injured in Beirut battle

The two Marines killed by mortar fire Monday were the first American peace-keepers to die in combat since the 1,800-man force arrived in Lebanon last summer.

One Marine was killed instantly and the other died later in the hospital. "We had been receiving fire from a ded in the mortar attack and five others were wounded in a rocketpropelled grenade attack. Three others were wounded when a rocket exploded near U.S. artillery positions outside the airport just south of Beirut.

IT WAS the first time the Marines, who arrived on Aug. 25 last year to help the Lebanese Army and protect Beirut airport, returned fire with heavy weapons, Jordan said. Some 1.200 of the U.S. Marines are based at positions around Beirut International Airport, which was closed because of the fighting. Another 600 Marines are stationed offshore.

"We are maintaining our positions around Beirut International Airport unless we are given instructions by our government to do something different," Jordan said. Marines were involved in their first direct fighting Sunday when they traded 90 minutes of light arms and automatic-weapon fire with Amal militiamen who opened fire at a WASHINGTON (UPI) - Crisis management members of the Reagan Cabinet were ordered to the White House Monday to consider the growing violence in Lebanon that resulted in the death of two U.S. Marines.

The officials are members of the administration's crisis management committee that assembles to consider serious developments affecting U.S. security.

In Santa Barbara, at the western White House, deputy press secretary Larry Speakes stressed the U.S. intention to keep the Marines in Lebanon and hinted the Syrians were involved in influencing the Shiite attack on the U.S. military positions around the Beirut airport.

President Reagan, after being informed of the killings, ordered a series of emergency meetings among the administration's toplevel diplomatic and military advisers, Speakes said.

Speakes said other key administration advisers would join Bush, Shultz and Weinberger at the afternoon meeting.

"It is our intention they will stay there in their peace-keeping role," Speakes said of the force sent in last year to assist in maintaining peace in the wartorn nation.

ALTHOUGH PENTAGON officials suggested the mortar rounds that killed the two Marines Monday were intended to hit Lebanese army units but fell short of their target into U.S. positions, Speakes strongly hinted that the Syrians, with Soviet

Enrollment forces hike in minimum GPAs

By Kirk Brown

In an attempt to cope with continued enrollment increases, several UI colleges offering programs for undergraduate students have raised their requirements for admission.

Of the five colleges at the UI that offer undergraduate programs, three have put limits on enrollment and the other two have recently raised the minimum grade point average that must be maintained by students.

"I feel that the situation is being handled in the most rational way possible," said Philip Hubbard, dean of Academic Affairs at the UI. Hubbard said the higher admission requirements are necessary because of the increasing shortages of space and faculty at the UI.

The colleges of Nursing, Business

Administration, and Engineering have all "capped" their enrollments in recent years.

As a result, students meeting the minimum grade requirements of these colleges are no longer guaranteed ad-

"There is approximately a four-toone ratio of applicants to openings in the College of Engineering," said the college's Associate Dean Paul Scholz. THE MINIMUM grade point required by the College of Engineering for admission is 2.0. However, Scholz said students must have a significantly higher grade point to actually be accepted. Scholz said that this semester the cutoff was set at 3.0.

Though a higher percentage of applicants are accepted to the colleges of Nursing and Business Administration, enrollment limits at each have made the minimum grade point for admission less meaningful.

"It isn't unusual for colleges not to accept students who only achieve the advertised minimum," Hubbard said, pointing out that the colleges of Medicine and Law have had enrollment limits for many years. "These schools are looking for the most qualified people available."

Although the colleges of Liberal Arts and Education have no enrollment limits, each has raised their minimum student grade point requirements in re-

CHARLES CASE, dean of the College of Education, said the college raised its minimum grade point requirements last year and predicted they will probably be raised again in the near future.

"Our concern is to maintain topflight students in our program," Case raised its minimum grade point requirement just 18 months ago, the college still has the lowest requirements on campus, with freshmen having to maintain only a 1.6 grade point average during their first semester.

Sherwood Tuttle, associate dean of the college, said "I don't know why the other colleges have higher requirements than ours but I suspect it could be historical."

Due to the problem of overcrowding Tuttle said the college is currently considering implementing "tougher entrance requirements" for incoming

The school of Journalism and Mass Communication is also establishing minimum grade point requirements. Beginning next semester, students wishing to enroll in required courses within the department must have a

U.N. Palestine meeting opens

GENEVA, Switzerland - The United Nations began a 10-day conference on Palestine Monday with the United States and Israel boycotting the meeting on the grounds it was one-sided.

Host country Switzerland tried but failed to have the U.N. hold the meeting elsewhere, calling the conference a "useless show." Switzerland displayed its annoyance by staging a massive security operation with troops surrounding the conference site, and set up tank and machine-gun positions. The entire 3-mile outside perimeter was barricaded with barbed wire.

Hijackers free sick hostages

Iran said four Arabic speaking hijackers freed two sick passengers from an Air France jetliner in Tehran Monday but France denied they were released and said the air pirates threatened to blow up the plane with 17 hostages, including three Americans.

Tehran Radio, monitored in London, said that Iranian negotiators were "using every possible means to try to dissuade the hijackers from dynamiting the aircraft" but that after 27 hours the talks were deadlocked.

Special Weapons and Tactics

LONDON - The reason so many flies escape the swatter is you really need two hands for the job, E.G. Gray of the National Institute for Medical Research said. Flies have a high-speed visual system that alerts them within a millisecond when an object heads their way and they take flight at a sharp angle, he wrote, for a recent issue of Nature.

"A piece of tissue paper is taken in each hand and the fly approached from the left and right, keeping the hands equidistant from the fly and moving to and fro slightly. Then both hands simultaneously pounce," Gray wrote.

Civil War history is plumbed

HATTERAS, N.C. - Divers retrieved the anchor of the USS Monitor Monday, the largest artifact ever recovered from the Civil War ironclad that fought in the world's first battle of armored vessels, said a spokesman for the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

The Monitor sank December 31, 1862, while being towed to Beaufort, N.C., to participate in a Union blockade of Confederate ports. Earlier that year, the vessel made naval history when it fought the Confederate ironclad Virginia.

Gunman terrorizes ABC

WASHINGTON - A man pulled a gun on a security guard at ABC News Monday night and demanded to be taken to the studio minutes before the network's nightly television broadcast. The hour-long incident ended when he gave himself up peacefully, police said. The man's motives were not immediately clear.

Developer for Holiday Inn projects construction dates

Ceremonial groundbreaking for the construction of the Iowa City Holiday Inn in the downtown mall has been set for Sept. 24, project developer Vernon Beck

Beck said it will take "optimistically, 11 months, and pessimistically, 13 months" to complete construction of the 178-room hotel.

Actual construction is targeted to begin Oct. 1, however. Beck has not announced a definite construction date because all of the subcontracting arrangements have not been finalized. Until the subcontracting agreements are worked out, Beck said, it would not be possible to disclose an accurate cost estimate of the project. He did, however, confirm that past projections of between $11 billion and $14 billion were accurate.

Beck said that he and the builder (Adolfson & Peterson Inc. of Minneapolis) are working with a number of local contractors who have cost-saving ideas. He said he hopes the contractors will be able to reduce his costs seven to eight percent.

'We're in kind of a design refinement phase,"

THE DEVELOPER'S plans call for the building to be constructed at a 45-degree angle between the Iowa City Public Library and Bushnell's Turtle restaurant. The hotel's main entrance will be on the west side, facing the downtown mall. Another entrance will be located on the east side of the building facing Linn Street.

Though approval from the city's hotel coordinating committee is necessary, Architect Ed Kinney said the hotel will have a brown stucco exterior with a "glass greenhouse effect" on the plaza level.

There will be seven floors built above-ground and one below-ground, with an indoor swimming pool on the second floor. There will also be a convention center capable of handling 650 people, and at least one

Gary Korte, assistant vice president of the firm that will manage the Holiday Inn, CIDCO Management Co., of Cleveland, said market researchers will survey people on Iowa City streets next week to determine the type of restaurant that will be built. Korte all but ruled out the possibility of the hotel containing more than one restaurant.

The developers said the existing city parking garage at Burlington and Linn Streets should be able to handle the additional hotel traffic.

'Prejudice' survey helps move Vinton trial to Johnson county

By Patricia Thorn

The trial of a Vinton, Iowa, man accused of involuntary manslaughter has been moved to Johnson County because the defendant complained that he would not receive a fair trial in Benton County, according to Johnson County District Court records.

Clyde Elmo Milne, 61, RFD 2, Vinton, is accused of killing two people and injuring four others near Shellsburg at approximately 7:40 p.m. on March 28 when he was alledgedly driving while intoxicated. He is also accused of leaving the scene of the accident and failing to report it to police.

Milne was found in a corncrib just northeast of the scene of the accident about two hours after it occured. The arresting officer claimed that Milne smelled strongly of alcohol, court records state.

Milne was awarded a change of venue because of a survey done by the Chesapeake Investigation Agency that showed there was sufficient prejudice against Milne in Benton County that it was not likely he would receive an impartial trial. Milne's attorney, James Crawford of Cedar Rapids, requested the survey, but said it has not yet been determined who will

"The Benton County (news)papers show for themselves why I asked for the survey. It's a small farming community and there was a lot of publicity. I did not feel that the man would get a fair trial there," Crawford said.

THE SURVEY, which covered all of Benton County, found that 100 percent of those interviewed had heard of the accident through the media, 42 percent had already formed opinions as to who was guilty, and 72 percent believed the defendant to be

The change to Johnson County is the second time the trial has been moved. On July 21 the trial was transferred to Henry County, but was moved to Johnson County on Aug. 19 because "the case should be tried within the Sixth Judicial District," court records state.

Milne's trial will begin Dec. 12 at the Johnson County Courthouse.

An Iowa City man was arrested for possession of marijuana and intoxication Monday morning on Court Street near Muscatine Avenue, Johnson County District Court records state.

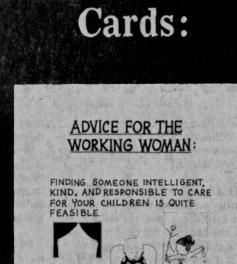

Jack Gerard Rockafellow, 22, 225 North Lucas St., had his car parked across Court Street and was urinating in the street, the report said. When confronted by Iowa City police officers about urinating in the street, the suspect explained that the car was broken down and he was "too drunk to drive."

After the officer arrested Rockafellow for intoxication, a search was made of the car and a plastic bag containing a "green plant material" was found in the glove compartment. When tested, the material was found to be marijuana, the report said.

More students, intense heat make record energy demand at UI plant

By Robyn Griggs

The combination of increased student population at the UI and the sweltering heat experienced in Iowa City this fall has led to "the biggest load on our books" for energy demand at the UI Physical Plant, said John Houck, assistant plant director.

The plant, which can handle a demand of 64 megawatts, is now providing 411/2 megawatts to the UI, a situation which could continue "up until the end of September," Houck said.

In addition, Houck said the power plant is not well-prepared to effectively handle the event of peak capacity, should it arise.

"In the event that we reach capacity, that's it," he said. The UI would have to curtail power for a time period of "minutes to a few hours."

The problem is most severe on the east side of the UI campus, because the west side, including the medical facilities, recently received a "face-

HOUCK DOES NOT foresee any problems on the west campus, but said the east campus could have some problems "due to the increased loads

The UI draws from three power sources, two of which are tied to Iowa-Illinois Gas and Electric. The UI's own power plant can generate 21 megawatts.

The UI plant can draw only 10 additional megawatts of power from Iowa-Illinois Gas and Electric on the east side of the campus. "That's all we can take. It's a local ceiling we have to live with," Houck said. "They generate some of their own power at Burlington Street, but there are some limitations," Hoogerwerf said. "We are limited in the amount of power we can provide the university on the east side of the campus because of the size of their conductor.'

Houck said the UI plant is relying more heavily on Iowa-Illinois, which presents "no problems except the ability to buy power on the (Burlington Street) substation east of the river."

The UI plant has increased its use of percent over last year's figures, Hoogerwerf said.

"THE UNIVERSITY is growing; they're buying more power from us all the time," he said. "When you talk about that kind of increase, it's a very significant percentage.'

The remaining 21 megawatts that constitute the UI's capacity level are generated at the UI's generators at the power plant. These consist of electrical generators and coal, gas, or oil boilers.

Because power is drawn from separate sources, a variety of problems could cause a power outage on the east side of the river.

"If we lose a tie with Iowa-Illinois or one generator has problems, we won't be able to operate," Houck said, "If this happens, we will curtail power im-

By John Tieszen

Mary G. Martinez, a long-time UI employee who was a member of several nan rights organizations, died Monday at the UI Hospitals after a long illness. She

"It is a great loss," said Nancy Barcelo. UI assistant dean of academic affairs. She said Martinez' life was "committed to human rights."

Martinez was honored last spring by the UI Hospitals for her "leadership, guidance and service for developing a Spanish interpreter program at the hospitals," Barcelo aid. She was a member of the Iowa Bishops Commission for Spanish Speaking People and the Muscatine Migration Ser-

She also worked with Cuban refugees in lowa City and was on an ad-hoc committee

In 1981, the Chicano-Latino Alumni and Amigo Foundation honored Martinez for er service to the Hispanic community by naming a scholarship after her. The Maria Cano (Martinez' maiden name) Scholarship Award is given to promote understanding of Chicano and Latino culture, Barcelo said. The award was named after Martinez because of her "unselfish giving to the Hispanic community," she said.

MARTINEZ WORKED on and off for the UI since 1958, when she started as a secretary in the Physical Education Department. In 1960 she went to work for Mercy Hospital as an interpreter. She returned to the UI in 1965 to serve as an interpreter in several different departments. In 1974, Martinez, while working at the UI Hospitals, saw a growing need for Hispanic services there, said Jay Cayner, director of the hospital's department of social services. Martinez answered that need by developing a "voluntary language bank" that used students as interpreters to help Hispanic patients, he said.

The UI Hospitals adopted the interpreter service as a paid program in 1975 and Martinez became its director.

Martinez showed the hospital administration how "language is so important. (Each) patient has to know exactly what the physician is doing. Her commitment to Hispanic people was endless," Cayner said.

Martinez was born in Guanagato, Mexico, and came to Iowa City more than 56 years ago, Barcelo said. She graduated from St. Patrick's High School and Brown's Secretarial School. She also attended the

She was an "exuberant, high-spirited woman," Barcelo said, "She had more hope for the future than anyone.

'She never gave any praise to herself and she always wanted to learn," she added. Martinez is survived by her husband, Joe her parents Magdaleno and Maria Rodrigues Cano, her sons Joseph, Mark, Robert, three brothers and five sisters. Visitation by friends will be held after 10 a.m. today at the Donohue-Lensing Mortuary. There will be a rosary at 7:30 tonight at Donohue-Lensing. Mass will be said Wednesday at St. Patrick's Church, and burial will be at St. Joseph's Cemetery.

The family has requested that instead of sending flowers, donations be given to the Maria Cano Scholarship Award.

Branstad, legislators debate deficit

DES MOINES (UPI) - Gov. Terry ranstad and legislative leaders haggled over the state's budget problems for nearly two hours Monday, emerging with no consensus on how to resolve a projected $90 million budget deficit.

Democratic leaders said Branstad has to make the final decision on whether to call a special legislative session or make acrossthe-board cuts in state agency budgets. They estimate the cuts would have to be between 4.5 and 5 percent to cover the deficit estimated at between $85 million

"We're going to look at all the options available to us," said House Speaker Donald Avenson, D-Oelwein. "But basically, it's the governor's decision on what we do. We're looking for options short of an across-the-board cut.

Ironically, both sides said they were waiting for proposals from each other. David Oman, the governor's executive assistant, said legislative leaders were given additional time to meet with other lawmakers to find viable solutions to the

But Democrats said they were waiting for Branstad to give them his proposals before they attempt to get a consensus from caucus members. They conceded they agree there is a problem but have not agreed on "specific" ways to handle it.

BRANSTAD SAID he will make a decision on what action to take by the end of the week. Oman said lawmakers are to informally discuss ideas bantered about in the meeting with other lawmakers and then contact the governor about the reaction.

Senate Minority Leader Calvin Hultman, R-Red Oak, said there is a 50-50 chance of a special session. But Oman said the governor still wants to avoid calling lawmakers back to the Capitol for what could become an expensive, rancorous session.

Salvadoran fronts to meet with Stone

U.S. peace envoy Richard Stone arrived Monday in Costa Rica, setting the stage for the second round of talks with representatives of the Salvadoran government and rebel leaders.

"One of my jobs is to facilitate dialogue with the Salvadoran Peace Commission and the Farabundo Marti Front for National Liberation (FMLN) and Democratic Revolutionary Front (FDR)," Stone said on his arrival in San Jose.

Sources close to the FMLN-FDR rebel coalition said Stone will meet today with guerrilla leader Guillermo Ungo and leading Christian Democrat and former member of the U.S.-backed junta that ruled until the March 1982 elections, Jose Morales Ehrlich.

"I would like to announce with great satisfaction that this morning the two fronts met with the Peace Commission in Bogota (Colombia) with the help of President Belisario Betancur," Stone added.

In Bogota, Colombia, Francisco Quinonez

Salvadoran government's Peace Commission, met for two hours with Oscar Bonilla and Carlos Molina, representatives of the guerrilla front.

Following their talks in the office of Colombian President Belisario Betancur, the four men met with journalists, but declined to make any statements.

"About all I can say is that this is a first dialogue," Betancur said.

THE TALKS were the first between representatives of the government and the left's political and guerrilla wings, the Democratic Revolutionary Front and the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front. Only hours before the meeting in Bogota, Bonilla called it "a historic step to enter into direct dialogue with the Salvadoran governmount an offensive that can even touch us. We are attacking on all sides with our guerrilla forces," he said.

Stone met with President Alvaro Magana and other high officials in San Salvador on the second leg of his fourth trip to Latin American since his June appointment as President Reagan's trouble-shooter in the strife-torn region.

The United States and El Salvador want the left to participate in presidential elections, but the rebels' Radio Venceremos again rejected the proposal Sunday, charging elections are not "a real and true way out of the conflict.' "We reiterate our rejection of the elections they want to impose on El Salvador, since they are not a real and true solution from the conflict, damaging democratic principles, the aspirations of peace," Venceremos said. The broadcast also criticized the Reagan administration as the "destabilizer of the region, the wall of contention that blocks selfdetermination of our people.'

Chad rejects new proposal for direct talks with rebels

NDJAMENA, Chad (UPI) - Chad Monday rejected a rebel proposal for direct talks with the Libyanbacked insurgents and France said it would supply government troops with heavy tanks and a new anti-

The proposal was broadcast by Radio Bardai, the voice of rebel leader Goukouni Weddeye.

"We do not know this rebel government. They do not exist. We cannot talk to anyone that does not exist," said Information Minister Soumaila Mahamat.

The rejection came as France said it was shipping about 10 modern 15-ton AMX-10RC tanks to Chad along with the new and as yet untested Apula antitank rocket.

French military sources said U.S. Redeye shoulder-fired surface-to-air missiles proved ineffective against Libyan air raids during the battle for the northern city of Faya-Largeau three weeks ago.

A French spokesman said a convoy of 15 armored cars and light field vehicles was making its way through Cameroon and was expected in Chad, for the

in the next few days.

Western diplomats said Monday there were signs that Libva was slowing down its resupply mission to its soldiers in Chad as the undeclared ceasefire entered its third week.

Radio Bardai, broadcasting from the rebel-held north of Chad, said former President Goukouni's 'government" would agree to talk with President Hissene Habre under the auspices of the Organiza-tion of African Unity provided Habre was prepared to deal in good faith.

The Bardai broadcast rejected the proposal made by President Francois Mitterrand last week for a federated Chad state that could effectively divide the country between the rebel-held north and the government-controlled south.

The rebels also said negotiations could only take place after France withdrew its estimated 2,500 troops from Chad.

There apparently was little hope he would change his mind, but Begin kept Israel in suspense, agreeing to delay his decision until this morning "at the latest," said his spokesman Uri Porat.

"Everyone begged the prime minister to change his mind," Deputy Prime Minister David Levy said after an intense three-hour meeting between Begin, his ministers and coalition partners in the ruling Likud block. "The appeal was truly emotional and Communications Minister Mordechai Zippori told the 70-year-old Begin that he could not resign while Israeli soldiers were mired in Lebanon because of a war initiated by Begin's government, Israel Radio said.

'The fact that he promised to consider a couple of arguments he just heard ... is the best proof the prime minister did not make up his mind already," Porat said in fending off reporters' questions.

Israel's news media reported Begin's resignation as a near certainty and said Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir would be named as Begin's successor to form a new government.

Challenger begins six-day mission with 'spectacular' night-time launch

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) -Showers soaked the space center Monday but NASA confidently predicted the gray clouds draping Challenger's launch site would clear for the fiery night blastoff that will rocket the first black American astronaut into orbit.

"We are forecasting weather 'go' for launch tonight," Air Force Capt. Donald Greene, the chief weather forecaster for the shuttle launch, said Monday night. The launch was scheduled for 1:15 a.m., Iowa time, today.

Guion Bluford, the nation's first black assigned to a space flight, and the other astronauts - Richard Truly, Daniel Brandenstein, Dale Gardner and William Thornton - attended some last minute briefings, dined on steak and baked potatoes and went to sleep early Monday afternoon.

The brilliant orange blaze from Challenger's solid rocket boosters is expected to be visible up to 450 miles away.

Labor Day at 10:25 p.m. local time on a brightly lit concrete runway at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif. It will be the first night landing in the shuttle program.

The night liftoff and landing were required for deployment of a communications

The launch of the satellite is the primary goal of the flight - Challenger's third and the eighth for the shuttle mission.

Six white rats will also make the trip. The "astrorats" will test a fancy cage called an Animal Enclosure Model.

THERE WAS ONE minor problem with the shuttle's space medicine machine, but Thomas said scientists did not expect it to have too much effect on the experiments that will be conducted during the mission. It was too late to repair the unit.

The blastoff, the first night launch for the U.S. space program since 1972, did not attract the huge crowds of up to 750,000 space

The six-day flight is scheduled to end on buffs who turned out to see the previous shuttle launches.

"The working man is not going to go. He may get up and look out his bedroom window or his back door or something," said Lt. Bill Stringfield of the Florida Highway

Astronaut Sally Ride, who became the first American woman in space on the last shuttle flight in June, was at the space center to watch the launch. "I think the night launch is really going to be spectacular,"

The Challenger astronauts also will run a series of experiments with the space medicine machine and test the shuttle's 50foot mechanical arm with the heaviest load it has lifted so far - 8,500 pounds

Tests also will be conducted on NASA's large tracking and data relay satellite launched last spring. The satellite will be vital for processing the information gathered from Spacelab on the next shuttle flight, scheduled for October.

Ex-trainee: Black pilots overdue

DENVER (UPI) — America's first black astronaut trainee says the launching of the nation's first black pilot aboard the space shuttle Challenger is long overdue.

"It's just plain ridiculous," said Ed Dwight, 49, a retired Air Force captain who said he was appointed in 1962 by President Kennedy, following an extensive search for a black, to train for the United States' military space program.

"Now, more than 20 years later they get blacks and women involved when it becomes rather pedestrian ... when all the excitement is gone," he said in a recent

Dwight, a VIP guest for the Challenger's launching, said he was not attempting to diminish the significance of Guion S. Bluford's or Sally Ride's role in the nation's space program. But he said it was disturbing that the talents and skills of minorities seriously.

Bluford, 40, an Air Force lieutenant colonel, is a mission specialist on the crew of the Challenger. He is one of four blacks in the NASA astronaut corps.

"THERE WAS a time when a black could have been in the space program and had some impact, like John Glenn and Harrison Schmitt," Dwight said. "But the space program at that time disallowed black folks and it had nothing to do with qualifications. It had to do with choice.

Dwight, a highly acclaimed sculptor, said he resigned from the military space program in 1966 under immense pressure from Air Force and NASA officials who he contended were not prepared to seriously accept the prospect of a black astronaut.

They felt that to send blacks into space would lessen the general public's enthusiasm for the space program.

An Air Force spokesman said Monday Dwight was a preliminary selection for the Air Force Manned Orbiting Laboratory program, but the spokesman said Dwight did not complete test pilot school — a step necessary before going to space test pilot

Dwight said he never aspired to become an astronaut before Kennedy's search committee approached him, but because he was qualified as a test pilot he gladly accepted the challenge, which represented a major breakthrough for blacks.

Dwight said after his resignation he was replaced in the space program by another black, Bob Lawrence, who was appointed by President Johnson. But Lawrence died in a plane crash soon afterward.

Meteorites said to hold the 'precursors of life'

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Scientists meteorites, Ponnamperuma said. reported Monday that they found the "precursors of life" in a meteorite and from Australia in 1969, the group later recreated the same chemicals in a found the five nucleic acids that make laboratory for the first time, indicating up DNA and RNA, the chemical chains living things may exist elsewhere in that spell out the instructions for all

Cyril Ponnamperuma, director of the University of Maryland's Laboratory of Chemical Evolution, said his team picked apart an Australian meteorite and found the base chemicals that make up the genes of all life on Earth.

The team also created the same materials by subjecting a mixture of methane, nitrogen and water believed to have composed Earth's atmosphere billions of years ago - to an electrical charge.

"The possibility of the evolution of life elsewhere in the universe certainly receives a tremendous boost from this evidence," Ponnamperuma told reporters at the national meeting of the American Chemical Society.

He cautioned, however, "We found only the precursors of life. We have not found life there (in outer space). We have not found E.T. We have not made life in the laboratory.'

THE TEAM demonstrated 13 years blocks of proteins, could be found in Analyzing a meteorite recovered

The team said testing showed the chemicals were not the result of earthly contamination.

The acids - adenine, guanine, cytosine, thymine and uracil - also were picked out of the mixture of gases after they were subjected to electrical

Scientists believe primitive life forms may have appeared on Earth 3.5 billion to 3.8 billion years ago when electrical charges reorganized chemicals in the atmosphere or ocean.

Ponnamperuma said no one has been able to isolate the five nucleic acids in such an experiment before. Stanley L. Miller of the University of California at San Diego said the next problem, and one of the central questions of research in this area, is to figure out how such chemicals become

"People are struggling with this problem in many ways and it is a very difficult problem," said Miller, whose team produced amino acids by passing ago that amino acids, the building an electrical charge through

Cake, anyone?

The effects of the Reagan budget cuts in the area of domestic spending - education, retirement, disability, other incomesecurity programs, health care, employment programs, and social services - now are being felt and measured, and some observations now can be made.

According to the Congressional Budget Office, which released its report last week, 70 percent of the budget cuts fell on households earning less than $20,000 a year: 40 percent on those earning less than $10,000 and 30 percent on those earning between $10,000 and $20,000. When Census Bureau figures are taken into account, the statistics are frightening: About half of the households in America suffered 70 percent of the budget cuts. And the poorest, those under $10,000, suffered proportionally more. They comprise 23.9 percent of American households, but they suffered 40 percent of the budget cuts.

What is perhaps worse, many of the cuts hit the working poor those Americans who work, but whose income is either just below or just above the official poverty line. For many of them, government aid raised their income from just under to just over the poverty level. They had their aid cut, and preliminary reports indicate 15 percent then had to go totally on welfare. Some experts believe the figure actually is 30 percent.

At the other end, the tax cuts rewarded those making over $50,000 the most. What this means is the last several years have seen increased benefits conferred upon the already blessed and increased hardship loaded on the already afflicted. Such behavior cannot be justified morally, ethically or pragmatically.

Many Americans believe this is or should be a Christian nation, yet they would cut the budget on the backs of the poor. Christ said as one treats the least of his brethern so he treats Christ. Humanist ethics demand those most in need be helped the most. And pragmatically, history teaches us large gaps between rich and poor produce, eventually, instability and turmoil in a society.

The lesson to be drawn is that to be a just, moral and stable society, we cannot tolerate great division between rich and poor. We cannot preach the Christian gospel in church on Sunday, the materialist gospel on television Monday through Saturday and remain at peace when many have nothing and a few have very

And if kindness or religion do not impel help for the poor, practicality should.

As every new academic year begins here, the remaining oldtimers still around begin to muse how newcomers of both the student and staff persuasions will never know those characteristic and character-building things that passed into the beyond ere they alighted here. Now, something else might - just might - join that melancholy novel-length list of lost glory. A burger joint wants to plop its pickle chip bins down on Blackhawk Mini-Park.

And now we learn that other developers, including another restaurant, want to take a shot at it as well.

Blackhawk Mini-Park has the slightly sheepish look of long-lived accumulation. It is a bit tacky; it looks like it was built in a big hurry from parts of something that was torn down in an even bigger hurry. There also is not a single store facing on to it and there is no point in the park from which you can see those three pipes squatting unashamedy just down the way and looking like several unusual things, none of them being a fountain. Blackhawk Mini-Park looks like it sort of happened.

Well, let's hear it for unplanned things. Comparing the number of places you can go for a hamburger downtown with the places you can just sit down in sun or shade as you prefer and look at something green and growing, it makes little sense to multiply the first and obliterate the second. Blackhawk Mini-Park isn't big and doesn't pay taxes. It's just a place where people go to sit down and enjoy themselves and not buy anything. Leave it alone.

An 'international' lowa needed

ternational education

By Dr. Stephen Arum

NTERNATIONAL education and international business have been demanding headlines in Iowa. Former Iowa Gov. Robert Ray appointed a Task Force on Foreign Languages and International Studies. Then, at his inauguration ceremonies, UI President James O. Freedman described international education as one of his three priorities. Iowa Gov. Terry Branstad asked for a second Iowa trade office in Asia. And John Ruan and associates initiated the Iowa Export-Import Trading Co. to encourage hundreds of non-exporting companies to do so.

Why so much emphasis on the international? And how will the state's colleges and universities play a significant role in all of this internationalization? To answer these questions, let's examine a few student characteristics as well some U.S.

IOWA RANKED 36th among the 50 states in the percentage of pupils enrolled in foreign language courses. with only one-tenth of its junior high or high school students studying foreign languages (28,472 in 1980), according to a 1980 Des Moines Register article.

Guest opinion

There is only one high school in the state teaching the Russian language. The most recent national survey of foreign language knowledge among college-level students discovered that while almost 90 percent had studied a foreign language, only one-third believed they could order a simple meal in a restaurant without difficulty; only 7 percent thought they could read a novel without a dictionary.

In this same 1979 survey of 3,000 college-level students in the United States, less than 15 percent answered two-thirds of the 101 world affairs questions correctly. The students majoring in education - the teachers of future generations of school children scored lowest.

In a recent United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) study of 30,000 10 to 14-year-olds in nine countries, U.S. students ranked next to last in their comprehension of foreign cultures

These dismal statistics reinforce the need for the Governor's Task Force on Foreign Languages and International man focused on international education as one of three major themes of his inaugural address.

OUR HISTORY as a nation highlighted by huge amounts of resources to develop with friendly nations on our borders, by incredible numbers of foreign immigrants from which to forge a single nation, by vast oceans separating us from the need to understand other peoples and nations helps to explain our indifferent attitudes toward things international.

The world is demanding change. In the past two centuries, the time required to circumnavigate the globe has been reduced 1,000 times. Even if we can travel the thousands of miles to China or Saudi Arabia in hours, it is the last three feet in which communication and understanding are the most difficult. "Everything has changed," said Einstein, "except our way of think-

Our consciousness of these changes must be reflected in the curriculum of our classrooms. The world's population that we need to understand is increasingly "non-white, non-Christian and non-affluent." We study little of the history and language of these people. Less than 1 percent of our university-level students are studying world's population.

WHY DO IOWANS need to understand people from other countries? There are good economic reasons. In fiscal 1981, Iowa became the nation's leading state in agricultural exports. More than 30,000 Iowans owed their jobs to foreign sales. One dollar of every four in Iowa farm sales came from exports. The value of manufactured goods which Iowa exports, including corn and soybeans, was more than $3.7 billion, about 8.5 percent of the U.S. total.

Iowa farmers now earn an estimated 37 percent of their total cash receipts from overseas markets. It is estimated that more than 50 percent of our soybeans and one-third of our corn now goes for exports.

Thus, for many reasons - survival, altruism, business - Iowans need to be concerned with the world beyond our borders. These problems are not just Iowa problems, or just American problems. They are world problems. Today, there is less and less difference between domestic and foreign policy. World affairs are domestic affairs and domestic affairs are world affairs. We live on a zero-sum planet.

BARBARA HONEGGER?

Of presidents and prehistoric men

because if it wasn't for women, men would still be walking around in skin suits carrying clubs. - President Reagan

EALLY, WHY are all you women so upset about the president's jovial little remark? Don't you have a sense of humor? He obviously offered it with the best of intentions and clearly meant it to smooth the waters, which had been ruffled when the Business and Professional Women's delegation was snubbed at the door of the White House.

Well, let's run through it once more. We've been addressing this kind of attitudinal bigotry for a very long time, so we apologize if our patience is worn a little thin. But if running through the lesson once more will help, here goes:

THE PEDESTAL SYNDROME. This encompasses attitudes with which we are all familiar. They go like this: "You women are all so morally superior to us men, you must hold a special place, one that is protected from contact with the crass, seamy side of life. This includes power, especially political (which we all know corrupts), making a lot of money (which is not only crudely materialistic but causes profound unhappiness), and general association with men (so you will excuse us if we escape from you to the Bohemian Club since we must, after all, have some place where we can freely express those baser instincts that make us so inferior to you)."

Unfortunately, the cost of the pedestal is high. The "woman as madonna" image is only the flip side of the "woman as inferior" coin. Its basic function is to establish an inherent difference between males and females. Most of the differences come off badly for women - we are characterized, according to the stereotype, as indecisive, weak, incapable, fearful, overly emotional, shrill, or petty. But for a stereotype to be "saleable," some aspects of it always must be positive. Therefore, we also are described as moral, nurturing, sensitive, intuitive (interestingly, qualities that are not highly valued in the male world). Nevertheless, whether the qualities are good or bad, they always are used to "prove" the existence of a fundamental, innate difference, and thereby to justify differential treat-

Not surprisingly, the pedestal never works to our advantage. (Tell me, Mr. President, if we are such a civilizing influence and so morally superior, why aren't any of us on the National Commission on Central America, which will directly affect our policies relating to that area, including the possibility of military involvement? Is it because morality will not be relevant to the Commission's considerations? Are the commissioners going to wear skin suits and carry clubs?)

THE HANDMAIDEN CONCEPT. This comes in several variations, including the time-honored canard, "Behind every great man there is a woman" - and as far behind as possible, please. Though its origins are lost in the mists of prehistory it was certainly articulated Biblically when God created Eve "as a helpmate" to Adam. Woman, the eternal, ever-faithful, uncomplaining, back-up system: wife to husband, nurse to doctor, secretary to boss. Her duties include, but are not limited to, keeping the home fires burning, running interference for him, taking care of all the nitty-gritty little problems so he won't have to worry about them, soothing his fevered brow, and in general removing all obstacles so that he can, untrammeled, go about the really important work.

Never mind the repression and limitation of her identity. Fortunately, the female stereotype is ego-free and adapts well to such functions. Unfortunately, such a definition of roles by gender deprives us of half the potential human resources that may be found in one sex and severely overtaxes those found in the other.

A WOMAN'S PLACE. Forgive us. Mr. President, but those words have a familiar ring and cause us to develop a nervous twitch. Every attempt to define our "place" has a predictable and unfortunate tendency to limit our options. The operative cliche here is 'Anatomy is Destiny.

Those definitions always have been, to varying degrees, out of sync with reality. Today they are absurdly out of

The President's "Ozzie and Harriet"/"Leave It To Beaver" view of the world is hopelessly obsolete (if, indeed, it was ever relevant to the majority of the population).

Women today are making concerted efforts to break out of the constricting definitions. They don't fit. We are expanding partly because economic and social realities have forced us to, partly because we need to and want to, partly because the world today requires the talents and skills we can

IF THIS HAS been a lengthy reponse to a brief and passing quip, it is because the moment of rage that welled up when we heard it consists of all those component parts. They represent the sum total of all the frustration, anger, disbelief, and resentment that flashed by as the thoughtless comment was spoken.

Is it a big deal? In the great scheme of things, of course not. Had the comment been made by a third-rate, standup comedian, or by some buffoon in a neighborhood bar, we would not have given it a second thought.

But it was the president of the United States who said it. Therefore, we cannot forget it because his attitudes translate into policies that affect women. And those thoughtless, blundering attitudes have left a trail of policies through his administration that show just how destructive they are for Women have gotten the message. The gender gap is higher than it has ever been; barely one-third of the women of this nation approve of Reagan's performance, and 1984 is right around the corner.

The president's spokespeople have been saying their real problem is they just have not gotten the word out about just what he has done for women, how much he cares. They need not worry. His words have spoken volumes.

Cleaning up

The recent publicity concerning the use of anabolic steroids by male athletes as a result of drug-testing at the Pan-American Games is an issue whose time is long overdue. Competition today is so intense and the rewards are so great that many athletes are willing to risk their health in order to gain an "edge" on the competition. At the highest levels, an athlete who does not use anabolics or testosterone is at a distinct disadvantage.

The greatest danger, though, is not to the world-class athlete who presumably takes the drugs under a doctor's supervision but rather to the novice who self-administers them without knowledge of proper medical procedures or dosages. Medical authorities seem to agree that the negative side effects include liver dysfunction, priapism, and hypercalcemin. In young men, steroids influence the closure of epiphyseal lines, the area of bone extension, thus stunting any future growth.

Drug-testing for anabolic steroids will be done at next year's national championship in each Olympic sport. However, officials at lower levels of competition should consider random testing in order to help clean up the drug problem.

Success of 'Girl' due to love, humor

By Scott Loy Special to The Daily Iowan

REGORY'S GIRL is a ow-key British movie about the trials and tribulations of sports and love. Like the recent Local Hero, which offered subtle wit and offbeat acting, Gregory's Girl relies almost exclusively on tongue-in-cheek one-liners and spirited ensemble performances to sustain it during the course of portraying adolescent Scottish

The story revolves around the adventures of a group of lads at a Scottish high school. Their soccer team, it appears, hasn't won a game all season - not, that is, until a beautiful Scottish belle named Dorothy (Dee Hepburn) joins the ranks and "Shows them how it's

After Dorothy, soccer just isn't the same ... and neither are the lads. Gregory, the team's goaltender, takes to his new teammate faster than he can block a shot-ongoal, but Dorothy doesn't care a whit about him. Yet that doesn't seem to matter to him much -Gregory has plenty of other girls after him, much to his delight. The "birds" at this school appear far more liberated than their American counterparts: They literally scheme to get the "best' boys, and, once gotten, share them among themselves. One night, Gregory goes into town to pick up Dorothy, and what he thought was going to be a hot evening turns out, at first, quite cool: Dorothy doesn't show up. But one of her friends does, and then another one, and then a third one In one night, Gregory takes out three different girls. And while they aren't Dorothy, Gregory isn't complaining a gentler, more human film. Writer-director Bill Forsyth has mixed two delightful hours of mild humor and unpretentious character sketches with a sort of offhand sensuality as typically Scottish, if Forsyth is to be believed, as the steamy shower scenes in Porky are American. Scottish lasses don't just "take a guy out;" they seem to sell him to the highest bid-

Forsyth works well with the nonadolescents in the film, too: He gleans amusing performances from the school principal - with his mock-seriousness and secret taste for forbidden donuts and swingy piano medleys - and from the two Scottish children so utterly precocious they lecture their elders on everything from sex to fashion design.

The director's crisp, upbeat style moves the film along at a trim, moderate pace, allowing his actors to clown around as if blissfully unaware of their own presence as actors or of the camera's interrogative role - the latter mostly thanks to Bill Coulter's sparse, naturalistic cinematography, which keeps the action close to the audience and focused on the story elements. Both Gordon John Sinclair and Dee Hepburn paint convincing portraits as the two romantic heroes and their accents, clothes and habits are musts for any true Gaelophiles. For those with a taste for slightly wacky, gentle humor and an unaffected, natural love story, Gregory's Girl is a must-see.

The Kitchen cashes in with local pasta eaters

By JoAnn Castagna Special to The Daily Iowan

ASTA IS THE food of the '80s t all began a few years back, when pasta makers were successfully marketed in this country as trendy gifts and essential kitchen appliances. Diet regimens included small portions of spaghetti on the allowable lists and a myriad of new pasta products began to appear in supermarkets from coast to coast.

It may be true that in the heartland of Tex-Mex cooking, where I grew up, my mother has to buy her spaghetti from the gourmet shelf, but much more common throughout the country are the shelves like those in our local supermarkets, where domestic and imported pastas, in dozens of shapes and several varieties (including whole wheat and spinach) abound.

So it isn't surprising that Iowa City's newest restaurant features fresh, made-on-the-premises pastas. The Kitchen, located at 9 S. Dubuque St., has only been in operation for a few weeks now, but already there are lines waiting for tables at both lunch and dinner.

Two weeknight visits (the Kitchen serves dinner until 9:30) have provided a chance to taste several of the restaurant's dishes. Each night's menu, shown on a large blackboard, includes pastas, a variety of sauces, addition such as meatballs and sausages, soups, salads, desserts and a daily "special."

I TASTED both the spinach fettucini and the tomato spaghetti. A semolina spaghetti, the thin kind you had as a child, is always offered, and I heard tell of a carrot pasta, too. The ones I tried were mild - the vegetable additions to the flour seemed to be more adding color than taste.

Sauces for the pastas included marinara, Alfredo, Primavera (made of sauted vegetables), Basil Pesto (an herb and oil blend), clam and Beef Ragout. A serving of any of the pastas with one of the sauces will, depending on the sauce, range in price from $3 to

A generous serving of meatballs is only $1, while sausage and herbed chicken are 75 cents each. The herbed chicken is very tender and tasty, but be on the lookout for pieces of skin. It was excellent with the marinara sauce, a chunky fresh tomato and onion com-

Other sauces sampled included the clam (a white, or oil-based, sauce), which was rather bland, and the Alfredo, which was not quite rich enough. A good Alfredo sauce should be creamy, but this one was almost dry. The Beef Ragout sauce was also dry and, although it smelled delicious, the taste was almost absent. A bolder hand is needed with the basil and the oregano, and please, more garlic and

I was surprised to find no appetizers on the menu, not even the logical antipasto. I didn't try the soups, though a cantaloupe-champagne ($1.25 or 95 cents, depending on the size of the helping) sounded intriguing.

THE MOST SUCCESSFUL dinner was a special - canneloni. Two crepes were folded around a spinach-ricotta mixture and topped with a bit of tomato sauce. It was very good and, with its accompanying salad, it's a real bargain at $4.50. These salads are carefully made and worth adding even a la carte. The salad primavera consisted of broccoli and mushrooms, while Toma's salad is made up of marinated vegetables. All the a la carte salads are $1.25.

The Kitchen's desserts are superb. An unusual apple Bavarian cheesecake is not to be missed, and the lemon cheesecake, with a sour cream topping, is simple — and simply perfect. A lemon tart with fresh blueberries was also well done. Each dessert was garnished with fresh fruit, and a fruit dessert was also offered each evening.

Wine, beer and soft drinks are available with your meal. The wine list is hardly extensive, and it doesn't even include a Lambrusco - surprising in a restaurant with a predominantly Italian menu. The house wines are Inglenook and are available by the glass, half-liter or full liter ($1.25 to $6). A dozen different beers, some imported, are also available (75 cents to $2).

The staff is helpful without being obtrusive; the restaurant is never pretentious but obviously cares about good food. As adjustments to recipes continue to sharpen the menu's balance, I predict that practice, in this case, will make for an ever more enjoyable dining experience at the Kitchen.

As a postscript, I should note that the restaurant takes no checks and allows no smoking on the premises.

ISU linebacker erases self-doubt

AMES - When Chris Washington came to Iowa State in 1980 as a freshman linebacker, he weighed a mere 202 pounds and wasn't sure he had a future life as a Cyclone.

"I didn't know what was going on, Washington said, referring to his first days as a Cyclone. "I didn't think I would play at all."

Any self-doubts Washington might have had quickly diminished, when he became a full-time starter as a sophomore in 1981. That year he led the Cyclones in total tackles with 168, including 110 solo stops.

All-American pick. Washington will be counted on heavily to spearhead a young, enthusiastic Iowa State defense, which lost seven starters from last year's team that led the conference in many defensive catagories.

"Our defense is designed to take advantage of our best personnel," said Cyclone Defensive Coordinator Mike Knoll. "Chris is the best we have."

"Chris is our best defensive player without a doubt," said Iowa State Last year, Washington led the entire Coach Jim Criner. everybody. Knoll joined the Cyclone coaching staff this season after a three-year stint as defensive coordinator at Tulsa. He brought with him a defensive philosophy that led Tulsa to the Missouri Valley title last year.

Knoll's defensive scheme resembles a three-man front with four linebackers. However, the two outside linebackers will take a position on the front line as if they were playing the defensive end spot. This alignment resembles a 5-2 defense, which Criner calls a "reduced 50" defense.

Roby, Miller survive final roster cuts

National Football League clubs painstakingly trimmed their rosters to the mandatory final 49-player limit Monday and a number of veteran players have fallen by the wayside.

Two former Hawkeye gridders, punter Reggie Roby and offensive tackle Brett Miller, were not cut by their ballclubs and are currently listed on the 49-man rosters.

It isn't known whether former Iowa lineman Mark Bortz, the Chicago Bears' eighth-round pick, will be cut by the Bears. Chicago officials made their cuts Monday evening but chose not to release the names until this morning.

Miami dealt veteran punter Tom Orosz to San Francisco for a 12th-round draft choice in order to make room for Roby, a sixth round draft choice of the

Purdue's Burtnett promises an improved defense

CHICAGO - Football fans love to see an explosive offensive attack. But football coaches love nothing ther than to see a good defensive struggle. It's true, the offense has to put the points on the board, but it is the defense that goes a long way towards ing football games.

The 1983 version of the Purdue Boilermakers features an explosive offensive attack, led by quarterback Scott Campbell, tailback Mel Gray and tight end Cliff Benson.

The defense, one of the biggest downfalls of the 1982 season when the Boilermakers finished with a 3-8 record, should be improved and that has second-year Coach Leon Burtnett

"THERE IS NO doubt that our efense will be improved over last year," he said. "But we had seven starters who didn't participate in spring makers this fall will be tackle Chris Rockford, Ill.

as No. 1 strong safety heading into the fall practice season. Filling holes at the inside linebacker and defensive end will be junior college transfer Rob Heller and senior John McKenzie.

The kicking game was one of Purdue's biggest weaknesses last fall and returning starters should help the Boilermakers in that department this fall, but Burtnett is looking at making a few changes. He is hoping to put a little life into the Purdue's kicking game.

"OUR KICKING GAME probably hurt us more than it helped us last fall," Burtnett said. "All of our kickers have been in those same spots going on their third years, but we're planning on making some changes this fall."

Punter Matt Kinzer, placekicker Tim Clark and kick-off specialist Walt Drapeza all return but Burtnett may make Drapeza the primary punter. Burtnett said that "Kinzer has been our punter but we had a lot of problems in that area last season. We have a couple of freshmen coming in we will look at, but we know that we must improve our kicking game from last year.'

In fact, the entire freshmen class has caught Burtnett's eye, but he doesn't see the newcomers getting as much playing time as last season's crop.

"THIS CLASS MAY be even better than last year's was," he said. "When you rely on that many young players (Purdue had 18 freshmen on its traveling squad), it's almost impossible to stay away from critical mistakes.

"We're trying to build the program so that in the next couple of years all this outstanding physical talent we have will be veteran seniors who will know how to win football games."

BIC's Century Ride has historical significance for area bicyclists

Special to The Daily Iowan

If pedaling long distances on a bicycle is your idea of fun, the Bicyclists of Iowa City have a great way for you to spend a Sunday. The Century Ride, which will be held on Sept. 18, will follow a route that has not been announced but the distance will cover 100 miles. But, unlike other bike rides, this

There will be a number of food stops strategically located throughout the ride. If you still feel a little weary, "the distance is one anyone can do with a little training," said former BIC president Greg Kovaciny.

According to Kovaciny, training entails having bicycled throughout the summer and being able to ride 50-60 miles at one sitting. Kovaciny also said the ride is "not only for enjoyment, but also a goal to finish." And, if you do finish within the time limit, you will receive a patch.

The Century Ride will also be offered as a

Another popular club, the Hawkeye Soc-cer Club polished off its summer season by beating Iowa State in the final of the State Soccer Club Championship. This past Sunday, the club commenced preparations of its regular season in the Eastern Iowa Soccer League. The preseason 'friendly' was against the Cedar Rapids Orbits and was played on the Lower Finkbine Field. Because of intense heat, substitutions were frequent. Although this took its toll on both teams, the Hawkeye Club posted a 6-3 victory, showing strength in both offensive and defensive areas.

Hughes' departure hardly noticed

At last week's Iowa Board in Control of Athletics meeting, one of the points brought before the Board was the resignation of Iowa women's Sports Information Director Lee-Ann Hughes.

It was mentioned briefly by women's Athletic Director Dr. Christine Grant and was generally ignored by the members of the Iowa news media. Hughes' talents were never very vital to most of the media in Iowa, anyway.

She never had the opportunity to have 60 or so radio and newspaper people show up before a packed crowd in Carver-Hawkeye Arena to cover a women's sporting event.

Instead, she usually sat alone, keeping score at an event and the number of press people she had to serve usually numbered

I WAS MANY times a part of that three or less that Hughes did her job for. It would have been easy to say 'There's no hurry with those stats, it's just a college paper.

But that was never the case. The name of the newspaper on the press pass didn't make any difference to her.

Although she worked just as hard as George Wine, her counterpart in the men's SID office, very few members of the Iowa media ever have had the time or space to tell the readers in the state about women's

During her tenure, the department became computerized with the purchase of a word processor, beating the men's department on that one. Full-time assistant coaches were added for most sports, an affiliation change occured as the Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women was dissolved and the NCAA began governing women's sports and, of course, the move from cramped quarters in Halsey Gym to the spacious offices in the Arena.

But Hughes decided "this was the right time to go" when she announced that she was leaving to move to Gainsville, Fla.

As of now, assistant SID Rick Klatt is running the show in Suite 205 of the Arena but the dedication, cooperation and hard work of Lee-Ann Hughes will long be remembered by this reporter.

Hawley's 'pumped up' for final year

By Greg Anderson

Iowa defensive back Ron Hawley had good reason to be "pumped up" for last year's season-ending contest against Michigan State, but the Hawkeye senior had no idea that by the end of the game he would be somewhat of a national celebrity.

Hawley, a former Michigan resident, said he was looking forward to playing at Spartan Stadium where the Hawkeyes were going for a berth in the Peach Bowl and also said that after the game he heard from "everybody"

All the attention, though, was not because of Hawley's defensive exploits against the Spartans or even because Iowa had earned their second straight trip to a bowl game. It was all the result of Hawley smashing into and breaking one of the portable wooden goal posts that Michigan State had installed for their final home contest of the year.

HAWLEY'S ACHIEVEMENT came in the second quarter when he went speeding after an errant pass deep in the Iowa end zone and ended up snapping the goal post.

At the end of the play a Michigan State receiver congratulated Hawley, and that was only the beginning. For a few short weeks Hawley found himself on television, in newspapers and in magazines throughout the Hawley has recovered from all of the instant stardom and says he has now been concentrating solely on the upcoming season. "After school I went home for a month (he now lives in West Covina, Calif.), but then I came back to Iowa City and started working out ... I did a lot of running trying to bring my 40 (yard dash) time down and we lifted weights three times a week."

THIS YEAR WILL be Hawley's last as a Hawkeye and the senior said that makes a big difference when preparing for competition. "You really get dedicated," he said, adding, "I've worked quite a bit harder for this season and I'm going to be more ready than ever going into game one.

"I want every game this year to be my best because when I look back on this season it would be really dissapointing to have a bad year," Hawley said.

Although Hawley is a senior this is only his second season for the Hawks. The defensive back was red-shirted his first year at Iowa (1981) after transfering from Mount San Antonio Junior College in Walnut, Calif. Hawley played two seasons at Mount San his sophomore year and although most football players dream of going to a major college right away, Hawley said he is glad he made the move to junior college ball first.

Antonio where he was named all-conference

"IT MADE A big difference (playing junior college)." Hawley said, "It gave me the chance to perform right away which most freshman don't get and it also gave me exposure ... I can't imagine coming into a place like this (Iowa) as a freshman now."

Hawley has always been a "big fan" of the University of Michigan but says he has no regrets about coming to Iowa.

'Iowa has everything that a football program could offer, you couldn't get any better," Hawley stated, adding, "when I first visited I went to an Iowa-Iowa State basketball game and the people and fans were fan-tastic — nobody's close after you come here."

Boilermakers

Offensively, the name of the game is Campbell. Campbell is fifth among Big Ten career passers heading into his senior season and is second in the Purdue record books behind NCAA record holder Mark Herrmann. During each of the past two seasons, Campbell has thrown for more than 2,600

"Scott can make the plays happen," Burtnett said. "He has a strong enough arm to really throw the ball, but the people surrounding him this year will be bigger and better this year.'

CAMPBELL, TOO, is looking for bigger and better things. "Everyone seems to want it a lot more this year," he said. "I've seen work habits that I've never seen at Purdue. We'll rely a lot on seniors this

But the Boilermakers do have some quality depth on the offensive side of the ball and with the return of Gray, last year's leading rusher, Purdue has rediscovered the rushing offense. Gray carried the ball 916 yards in 195 carries to lead the Boiler-

Benson and starting fullback Rodney Carter return to boost the Boliermaker chances.

"Cliff at tight end gives us a threat that we need," Burtnett said. "This year, we have the ability to run Burtnett.

Washington

Washington and fellow inside linebacker Dwayne Gilyard won't be inhibited to the middle of the field. And a "freed" Washington is planning to take full advantage of his new-found liberty.

He has set his sights on 200 tackles this season, a total never reached before by a Big Eight player. But Washington, who is now the "hit-man" on the Cyclone squad, said 200 tackles is a conceivable goal.

"I'M MORE FREE on defense," Washington said. 'I'll be moving around like a rover. I'll be able to roam the entire field instead of the middle. Before, it was just me and the center.

the ball. We are looking for more of a balanced attack this year.'

BENSON THINKS fans will see an aggressive Purdue team. "We'll be tougher offensively." he said. "I think we'll score points consistently and we should be able to get away with more big plays this season with both a running and passing threat."

Though Purdue has had recent success running the ball, the Boilermakers will still be filling the air with footballs this fall, and on the receiving end of things could be Jeff Price, one of the top junior college receivers in the nation at Coffeyville, Kansas, last Weighing in at an average of 265 pounds, the Purdue offensive line could give opposing defenses fits. The lone returning starter from last year's offensive line, tackle Paul Alenka, will be the leader of the Purdue attack.

Burtnett was looking for leadership from 6-6, 285pound tackle Tom Jelesky, a redshirt last season, but the fifth-year senior was named academically ineligible last week.

But if the Boilermakers are going to make any noise in the Big Ten this season, newcomers such as junior college transfers, offensive linemen Drew Banks and Bob McCurdy, must come through for

"I think I can get 200 tackles. Every game last year you think of something you could have done better ... you think of a missed tackle here and there. The middle linebacker should lead the team in California tackles anyway.'

But just how good can Washington get? "I think a person's success is proportional to the time of preparation he puts in," Knoll said. "And with the Monday's results nt of time Chris has put in to prepare for this season, he can have a great year."

Amassing 200 tackles would be a great year, but Washington said, "I have a lot to learn just to get
