Workers protest loss of benefits

By Mike Heffern
Metro Editor and Mary Tabor
Assistant Metro Editor

About 70 UI Residence Services employees have signed a petition protesting a law that went into effect July 3 denying them unemployment benefits for the interim periods between academic sessions when they don't work.

But Iowa Job Service officials say the law is meant to close a "loophole" that has existed for some time.

"One of the first facts a prospective University of Iowa employee learns is that he or she is eligible to draw unemployment insurance during any scheduled layoff, whether during or between academic years," the petition states.

"The major problem stems from the fact that nothing at all had been mentioned about this law's passage by either the University or Job Service," the petition continued.

Mark Fagle, a baker in Burge Residence Hall food service, was one of many denied compensation for the week he was laid off between the summer session and the opening of classes this fall. He said some people hired this semester were still told they could collect during the breaks.

BUT GEORGE DROLL, director of UI residence services, said Tuesday it has never been a practice at the UI to advise potential employees about unemployment compensation.

Mary Jo Small, UI associate vice president for finance, said the UI did previously inform employees that these benefits were available.

"We are not supportive of that change," Small said, referring to the requirements of the new law. "We never treated that as a wicked provision before, but we are bound by changes in the federal statute."

The employees are no longer eligible for the benefits because of a change in the federal unemployment compensation law and the Iowa Legislature's move to comply with that change during its spring session.

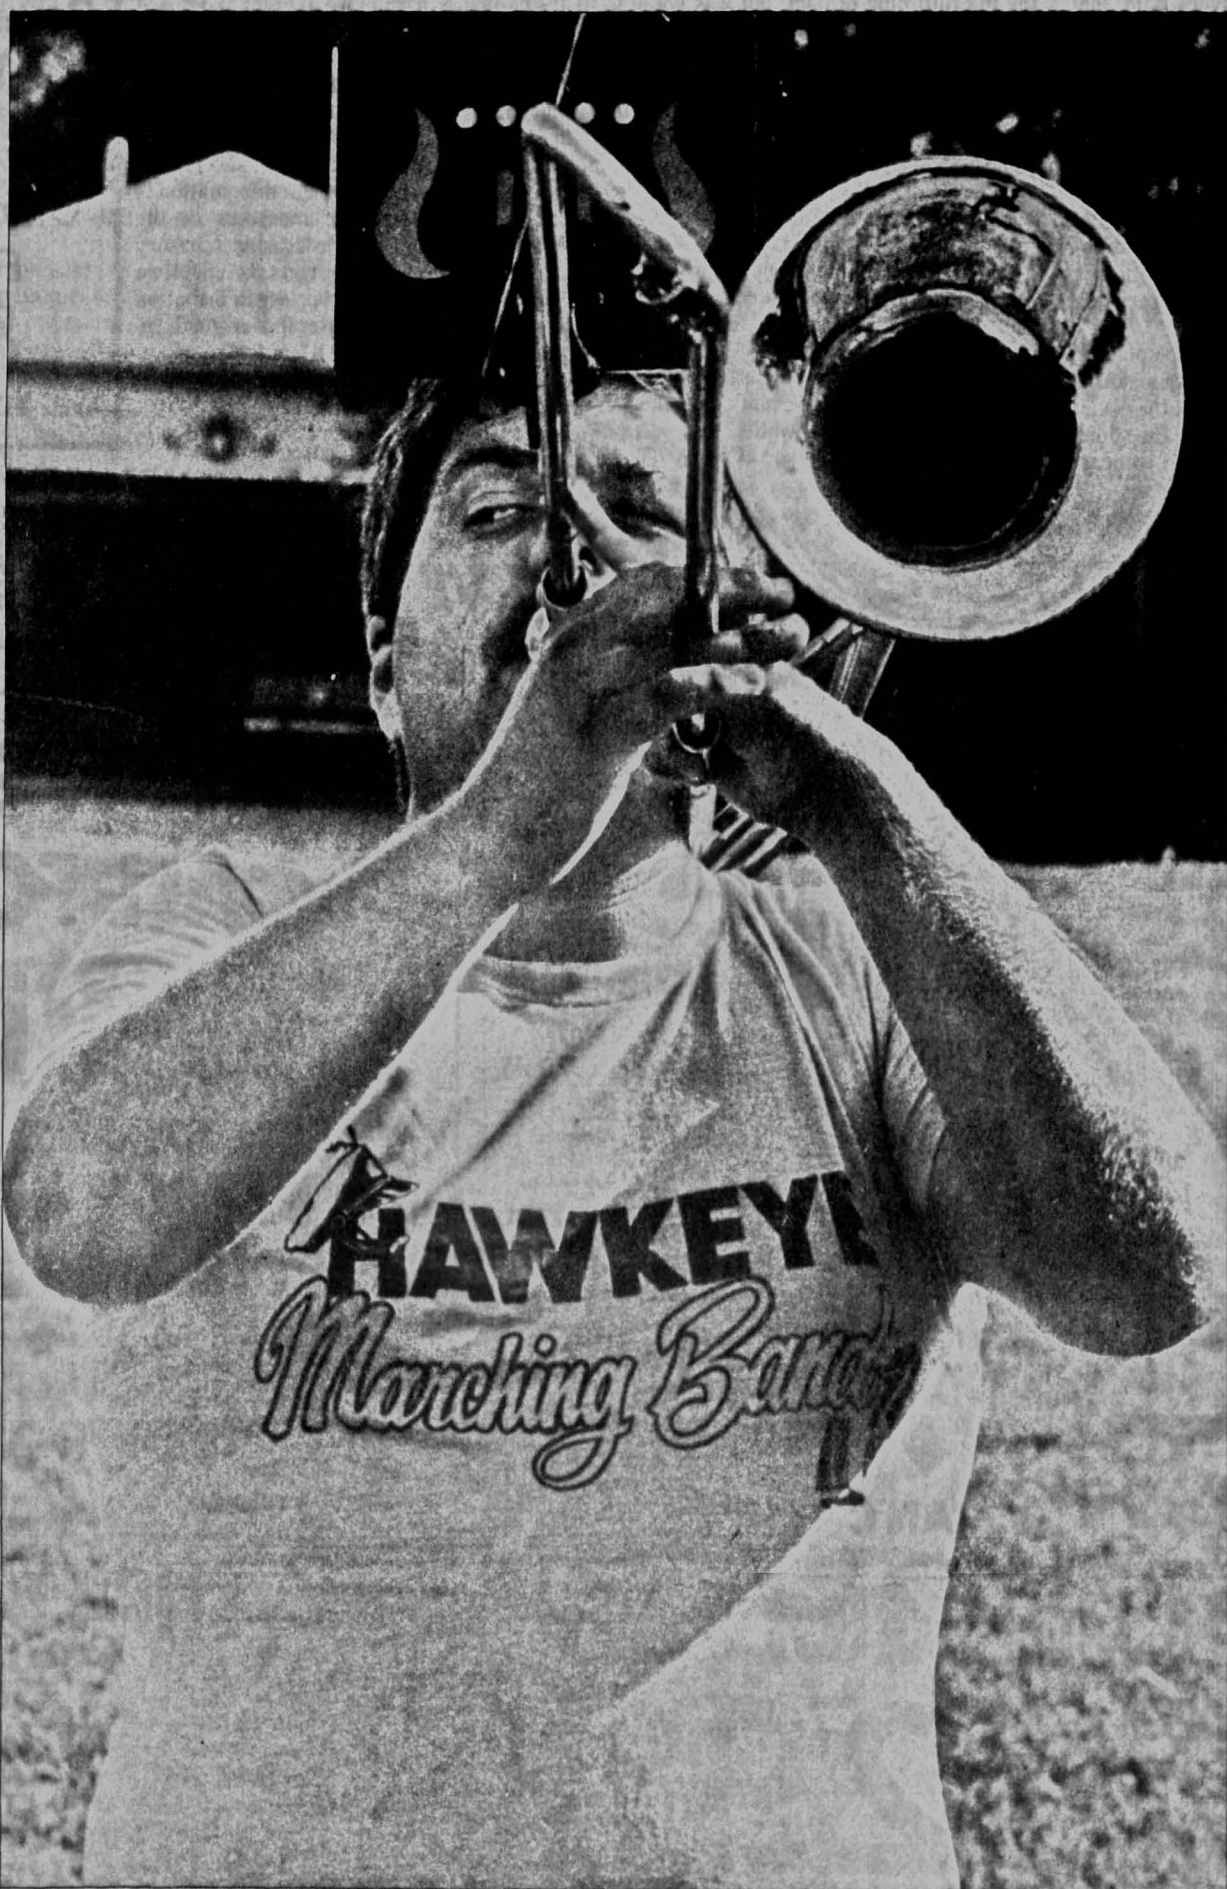

Before the law was passed non-academic employees who worked at the UI, the University of Northern Iowa and Iowa State University could collect unemployment benefits for the two summer breaks, Christmas and spring break. But workers in the secondary school systems could not.

Department of Labor officials told state Job Service officials they had a choice between paying unemployment benefits to all state non-professionals or none of them, said Paul Moran, job insurance administrator for Iowa. "They said either you pay all non-professionals at all levels between terms or else you can't pay either. The state has got to be consistent."

MORAN SAID the law "is aimed at non-academic employees at institutions of higher learning between terms. But educational institutions for grades K (kindergarten) through 12 (high school) have not been able to collect unemployment benefits for years."

Arlot Cassidy, claims manager for the Waterloo-area Job Service, said the law closed one loophole by making sure that university employees can no longer receive benefits between academic school years, but said the state legislature committed an "oversight" by letting employees still

U.S. troops under attack for third day

Toll of dead in Beirut reaches 74 Nuclear ship Eisenhower stays nearby

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — U.S. Marines and other peacekeepers came under direct attack for the third straight day Tuesday, with five French soldiers dying in one of the worst outbursts of factional fighting since Lebanon's civil war.

Clashes between the Lebanese army and Moslem militias spread to the heart of Beirut, hitting several foreign embassies. In all, 74 people have been killed in three days of clashes, the worst since the 1975-76 hostilities.

U.S. Marines came under sporadic mortar, rocket and machine-gun fire for four hours during the day and responded with salvos from automatic weapons and machine guns, said Maj. Robert Jordan. There were no U.S. casualties Tuesday.

The Marines also sent up Cobra helicopter gunships to scout with flares but did not attack, he said.

The USS Eisenhower nuclear carrier was positioned just over the horizon after coming to within 3 miles of Beirut in a show of U.S. strength and support for the Lebanese army, Jordan said.

Late in the day, Nabih Berri, leader of the Shiite Moslem militia fighting the army, urged his men and allies to return to their barracks in an apparent cease-fire agreement, a Shiite spokesman said.

But shortly afterwards, clashes between Lebanese troops and defiant Moslem militiamen spread to west Beirut. Multinational peacekeeping forces again came under fire, as did the French, Italian and Soviet embassies.

FIGHTING CONTINUED through midnight Tuesday (5 p.m., Iowa time) with explosions echoing throughout the city. See Fighting, page 8

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The State Department reported Tuesday that U.S. Marines in Beirut have come under continuous small-arms fire from unknown forces and the Marines are returning the fire.

Also the USS Eisenhower nuclear carrier is positioned within 3 miles of Beirut in a show of U.S. strength and support for the Lebanese army.

The Pentagon issued a statement clarifying the purpose behind the nuclear-powered aircraft carrier's presence Tuesday, a day after two Marines were killed and 14 injured in a mortar attack by Moslem militiamen. "(The) Eisenhower is in the Mediterranean on a normal deployment," the statement said.

"As our Marines in Beirut have been fired upon, we considered it reasonable and prudent to position Eisenhower in the eastern Mediterranean where the ship will be available to support them if required," the statement said.

It also said the Eisenhower was authorized to sail to within 3 miles to 5 miles of the coast.

At a Pentagon briefing, Army Brig. Gen. Walter Cousland said he had "not seen any conclusions" on whether there is a pattern of attacks on the multinational peace-keeping forces in Lebanon.

Cousland would not speculate on whether peace-keeping forces would pull out if the attacks continue.

THE EISENHOWER completed its part in "Bright Star," Aug. 26 and was heading for another routine mission in the Mediterranean when it was diverted to Lebanon, other Defense Department sources said.

Cousland was asked why the Pentagon would not pull out if the attacks continue. See Troops, page 8

Begin insists resignation is final

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Prime Minister Menachem Begin said Tuesday his decision to quit was final, plunging his coalition government into turmoil over his successor.

Begin's Herut Party met in emergency session to choose a new party leader, who is virtually certain to become prime minister. Two leading contenders emerged in the power struggle, Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir and Deputy Prime Minister David Levy.

Shamir, like Begin, was one of the leaders of the pre-independence underground fighters who used terrorism to fight the British. Levy is a member of the Sephardic community of Jews originating from Middle Eastern countries.

Defense Minister Moshe Arens, another leading candidate, is now ineligible to serve as prime minister because he is not currently in the Israeli parliament.

Begin's spokesman, Uri Porat, said the prime minister probably would retire from public life but held out the possibility he might become an elder statesman wielding influence from the sidelines.

Begin told his coalition executive committee his decision to resign was unshakable — "I cannot continue, I cannot go on anymore," one participant quoted the 70-year-old prime minister as saying.

"When he said that in such a strong way there was no way anyone could influence him and we just accepted it," said Ehud Olmert, a leader of Begin's Likud Bloc.

Most of the two-hour meeting centered on persuading Begin to delay handing in his formal resignation to President Chaim Herzog until the various coalition partners had time to decide on a new government lineup.

Begin's resignation takes effect only after he submits a formal letter to Herzog, who must then consult all of Israel's political parties before asking a party leader to form a new government.

By withholding his formal resignation until his fractious government coalition has time to agree on a new leadership team, Begin, in effect, ensures the Likud Bloc remains in power.

"If we will succeed as we all hope to establish a new coalition government within a few days, then maybe we will avoid the immediate crisis," Olmert said.

Porat said Begin would decide today how long he would delay submitting a formal letter of resignation. Even that delay angered the opposition Labor Party, but Likud spokesmen defended the move as legal.

Israeli news reports said Labor gave up hope of ousting Begin's Likud from power when two coalition partners, the National Religious Party and the Tami Party, announced they would stick with Likud's leadership.

Begin's decision to resign put an end to seven years of leadership whose hallmarks were the Israeli-Egyptian peace treaty and a controversial program to settle Jews in the West Bank region Israel captured in the 1967 Middle East war.

Petition challenges HOPE house

By Carlos Trevino
Staff Writer

Residents of the Hilltop Trailer Court handed Iowa City Councilors a 46-signature petition at the council's formal meeting Monday, protesting the location chosen by Project HOPE for a halfway home for recently released criminals.

Councilors also deferred any action on implementing a Planned Area Development addition to an R-2 residential zoning for 521 Kirkwood

Clemens Erdahl: Residents of Project HOPE's center are "people who got into trouble one or two times, but not hardened criminals."

Ave., until an economic plan is given to councilors on the matter. A Planned Area Development would mean that a housing unit could have a higher density within the R-2 zone but the design must be approved by the council.

Iowa City Mayor Mary Neuhouser said "I'm not sure what we can do, as long as they (Project HOPE) follow city ordinances," with constructing the facility, which is expected to accommodate a maximum of 23 "criminals," according to trailer court resident Diane Coppens.

Waylyn McCulloh of Project HOPE was unavailable for comment, but a spokesman at Project HOPE said "he's fully aware of the situation and the petition. I'm not going to bother him over this." Coppens said the halfway home would be located "right next to the trailer court" and said she feared having "that element" near her home. Coppens then asked whether councilors could defer Project HOPE's move to the intersection of Waterfront Drive and Southgate Avenue.

THE FACILITY would include parole and probation offices, along with beds for 11 people, Coppens said, explaining that she had spoken with McCulloh on the matter.

"I don't object to Project HOPE," Coppens said. "But its location... it's a bad element to introduce to our neighborhood."

Coppens said although most of the residents of the mobile home court, located on Waterfront Drive, were "hard-working people, children, young, married couples and students... we're aware that there are some unsavory people in our neighborhood," and a halfway home for paroled convicts would "make things harder."

Coppens, whose 15-year-old son is one of 39 children at the mobile home court, said she was informed by McCulloh that some people who would be located at the halfway home have been arrested for "assault, burglary and drug use. This is alarming."

Councilor Clemens Erdahl said he lived near the site of Project HOPE's center for several years and that "I don't think most of my neighbors were even aware. Most of the time these people are away completely (from the facility) or they're inside the facility."

Erdahl also said the offenders were "hard-working people, children, young, See Council, page 8

Hijackers refuel jet in Iran

Four Arabic-speaking gunmen threatened Tuesday to blow up a hijacked Air France jet and its 17 hostages in the air after forcing refueling in Iran. "The plane is technically ready for takeoff at any minute," said French Charge d'Affaires in Tehran, Jean Perrin. In negotiations, the hijackers demanded a sweeping range of French policy concessions, including the withdrawal of French troops from Lebanon and Chad and a halt to French military aid to Iraq in its war with Iran.

Stone meets Salvadoran rebels

Richard Stone, special U.S. envoy to Central America, met Tuesday with Salvadoran rebel leaders in Costa Rica a day after the first postwar talks between government representatives and rebels.

Although a communique issued after the meeting described "an atmosphere of frankness and mutual respect," a Costa Rican official says the left still refuses to participate in Salvadoran presidential elections, which is the primary goal of Stone's mission.

Heat, crowding fuel uprising

HOMINY, Okla. — Heat-aggravated tempers apparently sparked a riot that killed one inmate, injured 23 people and ended with flames in five prison buildings, officials said Tuesday.

About 750 inmates were in the facility designed for 400 when the riot began Monday evening.

In a story called "City zoning proposals irk students" (DI, Aug 26), it was incorrectly reported that Iowa City Council-at-large candidate Jim Schwab stated he did not understand why the city's Planning and Zoning Commission is seeking a zoning change that would restrict additions to existing buildings and require extra parking. Actually, Schwab reports that he does understand the reasoning behind the proposal, but feels campus greek organizations should be granted an exception.

Also, in a story called "Developer for Holiday Inn projects construction dates" (DI, Aug 30), the cost of the downtown hotel project is quoted in billions of dollars. The cost actually is in million of dollars. The DI regrets the errors.

Conklin contests microfilm contract

By Connie King
Special to The Daily Iowan

A sharp exchange between Johnson County Clerk of Court Mary Conklin and a member of the Johnson County Board of Supervisors punctuated the board's informal meeting Tuesday morning.

The exchange occurred when Conklin asked the board if she could have a different company microfilm court documents than the one given preference by the board. Supervisor Dick Myers said that while he believed microfilming of county documents was necessary, "The contract has been approved with Crest Microfilming, and I don't see any reason to change it."

Crest Microfilm Inc., of Hiawatha, Iowa, was granted the contract to microfilm all of Johnson County's estimated 1.4 million court documents in late July. Board members said at the time that the microfilming was needed to save space and preserve old documents.

There is currently no adequate place to store these records and still have access to them, Conklin said. It would cost the county approximately $3,500 more for Jorm Microfilms, of Cedar Rapids, the company

Conklin prefers, to do the microfilming than if the work is done by Crest, she said.

CONKLIN SAID Tuesday she wanted Jorm Microfilms to do the microfilming because the quality of their microfilming is superior to Crest's. Several board members said Conklin had talked them into microfilming the records in the first place, and now she was trying to back out of the project.

Conklin said she was not backing out of the microfilming project, but was going to check with Johnson County Attorney J. Patrick White to determine if she is required to use the company to whom the board has given preference. No formal contract has been signed yet between the county and Crest.

Supervisor Dick Myers and Conklin exchanged sharp comments for several minutes until Myers said, "I do not have a great deal of faith in your judgment." Conklin repeated that she was consulting with the county attorney and then left the meeting.

Board members also discussed whether a proposed study of the county's computer system would be worthwhile.

Jean Schultz, Johnson County Data

Processing Director, said Mike Knoth, of the UI's Weeg Computing Center, would be utilized to do an independent study of the county's computer system.

The board's biggest concern about the computer system is that it is not being utilized to its fullest extent, Supervisor Harold Donnelly said. "We've got a Cadillac of a machine, but it's just purring; it should be used more hours of the day."

DONNELLY SAID he would like to see the computer used more at night and Board Chairman Don Sehr said it might be feasible to use the system after 4 p.m., when county offices close. Schultz pointed out though, that many programs are already being run at night.

One problem the system has, she said, is a lag in response time when information is requested. One of the members of the Johnson County Data Processing Advisory Board mentioned that it can take up to two days to receive the appropriate information from the computer after the original request has been made.

Donnelly asked Knoth if his study could "show that the machine (computer system) could be used more." Knoth, however, said no.

Rent control ordinance nears vote in council

By Allen Seidner
Staff Writer

The Iowa City Fair Rent Coalition has collected the 2,500 validated signatures needed to insure placement of a rent control ordinance on the Nov. 8 election ballot if it does not pass a vote by the Iowa City Council.

Tuesday night, the council set a public hearing on the ordinance for Sept. 13. Mayor Mary Neuhouser said the council will vote on the measure at its Sept. 27 meeting.

The ordinance is not expected to be passed by the council. Last week, Councilors John Balmer and Larry Lynch said they oppose the ordinance. Tuesday, Neuhouser told The Daily Iowan, "I'm anticipating it will not pass."

BUT NEUHAUSER and Councilor Kate Dickson said they will await the recommendations of City Manager Neal Berlin and City Attorney Robert Jansen before deciding whether to back the measure. The recommendations, Neuhouser said, will be given to the council before the public hearing.

"I do favor fair rent," Dickson said, but "I still want to hear what both sides have to say about it."

Coalition spokesman Reggie Harrington said he expects the council vote "will be close." "The big thing right now would be to get people familiar with the ordinance," he said. City Clerk Marion Karr has certified 571 of the 769 additional signatures filed by the coalition last week. The group had previously submitted 3,713 signatures, but more than 1,500 were disallowed because they were illegible or did not match the registered address.

THE COALITION gathered the additional signatures with greater care. Karr said "they put much more emphasis on getting people registered. Therefore, people who appeared on the list had properly registered."

If adopted, the ordinance would establish a Fair Rent Board to determine fair rental rates for leases and reasonable rates of return for landlords. Rental rates in Iowa City would be frozen at existing levels for a period not to exceed one year from the time the ordinance takes effect.

Last week's submission of the petitions marked the first time in the city's history that a group has refiled a petition after being denied certification in its original filing, Karr said. She called it "a good experience as far as testing out our (filing) code."

In order for the ordinance to appear on the election ballot, the city clerk's office must submit the petition to the Johnson County Auditor's Office by 5 p.m., on Sept. 27 — just hours before the council's vote.

Senate seeks to stanch rising tide of red ink in commission budgets

By Dan Hauser
Staff Writer

Facing an "astronomical" debt, the UI Student Senate has decided not to bail out its commissions if they fail to properly manage their own budgets and begin to run a deficit.

Under the new policy a group will no longer be able to operate if it is not breaking even. UI Senate President Tom Drew said, "Commissions that are currently running a deficit will be repaying it this year on their own."

Drew estimated the combined debt of all senate commissions is $33,000. The Student Commission on Programming and Entertainment can be blamed for $30,000 of the deficit.

Drew said the debt is not a new thing. "It was dropped in the lap of the current senate. It came from years before."

Now the senate is faced with paying the commissions' debts with non-state funds, Drew said. These funds include the sale of UI directories, student insurance and office supplies.

The senate expects to receive reimbursements from indebted commissions by June 30, 1984, the end of the UI's fiscal year.

Drew said the commissions have always been a "fairly autonomous part of the senate, but if they don't become (financially) stable we have to take action."

"We are not asking the commissions to make big profits, but then we are not promoting big deficits from year to year, either."

Drew said the senate is not paying SCOPE's debt because it always has the opportunity to make money on its next concert. The problem lately is that SCOPE has been ready to go ahead with money-making projects, but they have fallen through.

SCOPE director Jeff Conner said the $30,000 debt is a result of the 1981 Grateful Dead concert held in the Field House. "If it were not for that we would be in the black."

This year SCOPE hopes to generate enough revenue to break even by scheduling concerts in the Carver-Hawkeye Arena, he said.

Making an average profit of $10,000 a concert, Conner expects to break even after three concerts. However, more than this will be arranged if possible.

"As Neil Young showed us, the concert doesn't start until he comes out on stage and picks up his guitar," Conner said, pointing out nothing is for certain.

Conner said although the arena is more available than it has been before, it is mostly weekends that are open for use. But he said a weekend date would be useless if a promoter can only offer weeknight performances.

A new agreement with the arena management allows SCOPE to book the facility three times a semester, even though it may conflict with a sports practice. He said the practice would be moved unless a game or meet was scheduled for the next day.

UI's Bijou Theater, another senate commission, has also met with hard times. Director Ana Lopez said a large part of the debt will be made up by the senate, but some will remain.

Lopez said the Bijou came into debt when the Union raised box office charges, including room rental, by 600 percent during the 1981-82 academic year.

According to Bijou projections, the theater would have to charge $10 per ticket to break even, "making it the most expensive theater in the world," Lopez said.

The arrival of Home Box Office and Cinemax cable television channels in Iowa City can also be blamed for the theater's loss in revenue, Lopez said.

Lopez said this year the Bijou plans to bring in best-selling movies to appeal to a larger audience, which would raise revenue.

Law student suspended for stealing notes, book

By Dan Hauser
Staff Writer

A UI law student has been suspended until the fall semester of 1984 for stealing notes from another law student and a book from a law school organization, according to William Hines, dean of the College of Law.

The student, whose name was withheld by the UI, is alleged to have stolen the material last spring. Hines said the incidents occurred at the end of finals week last semester.

Hines said the whole matter "is very sensitive because of the privacy of the student's personal file" and that he was unable to give all of the details in the case.

At first the student denied the allegations presented to her by the panel.

Hines said, but gave up her opposition after the panel made its decision.

The student was suspended by a three-member faculty panel that last spring said it would resolve the matter before the beginning of this semester. Hines said the panel reached its verdict the week prior to fall classes.

Hines said the student will be able to apply for re-admission next fall, but before she does she will first have to exhibit "a satisfactory showing of rehabilitation." This will include "serious professional counseling to show she has grown as a person."

The accused student was given the option of appealing the panel's decision because it was made up of only three faculty members. Hines said, however, that she chose to accept the suspension.

Undergarments reported stolen

UI Campus Security received two reports Tuesday of clothing being stolen from clothing lines located behind apartment buildings on Hawkeye Court during the past two nights.

Female undergarments with a combined value of $240 were stolen, according to the reports. Similar thefts were reported in the same area a month ago, according to Campus Security records.

Ramabadrnan Rasipuram, 506 S. Governor St., was arrested by Iowa City police Tuesday after he was seen walking down the street nude.

Rasipuram was charged with assault, criminal mischief, indecent exposure, and criminal trespass when police arrested him on S. Governor St. The police report stated that Rasipuram resisted the arrest.

SUCCESS WITHOUT STRESS
 The Transcendental Meditation technique of Maharishi Mahesh Yogi is a simple, natural procedure to develop full potential of the individual. Over 700 scientific studies done at more than 200 universities and research institutes have verified both the physiological changes during the practice and the benefits meditators report in daily activity.
 To date, there are nearly 3 million people who practice this effortless mental technique. Their experience as well as objective research show that TM meditators enjoy improved memory, faster reaction time, higher grade point average, greater creativity, clearer perception, reduced anxiety, better health and more harmonious social relationships. Scientists consider this to be related to the TM's technique's effectiveness in systematically reducing stress in the body and increasing coherence in brain functioning.
 EVERYONE is invited to a free introductory talk on TM & the Success without Stress sponsored by the U. of I. S.I.M.S. Club. Wednesday, August 31, 1:30 p.m. & 8:15 p.m. Michigan State Rm., IMU

Reagan requests a delay in Israeli troop pullback

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (UPI) — The Reagan administration is concerned Lebanon will be pushed closer to civil war if Israel pulls back its troops before warring Lebanese factions reach a peace agreement, a U.S. official said Tuesday.

President Reagan hopes to buy time to arrange an agreement between the Lebanese government and Moslem groups requesting that Israel postpone pulling back its troops from the Shouf Mountains outside Beirut, the official said.

Israeli government officials said Prime Minister Manachem Begin reluctantly agreed to the request, made through a letter, even though Israeli troops had begun dismantling their positions in the Shouf Mountains in preparation for withdrawal to the Awwali River. The troop movement was to have begun Tuesday.

The Israelis are to be replaced in the Shouf area by the Christian-dominated Lebanese Army. However, Reagan appealed to Begin to delay the move in the wake of escalated fighting around Beirut between government forces and members of the Shiite and Druze Moslem sects. Two U.S. Marines were killed in the fighting Monday.

Reagan has been forced to interrupt the final week of his lengthy California vacation to keep abreast of events in the Middle East through telephone calls from aides.

ISRAEL'S DECISION to delay any pullback provides "an opportunity for diplomacy to work," Deputy Press Secretary Larry Speakes said.

Senior U.S. officials said privately the Reagan administration does not want to see Israel pull back its troops until there are firm assurances from the Shiites and Druze that the substitution of the Lebanese armies in the Shouf will not lead to a new surge of fighting.

"Unless we get an agreement, all you'll have over there is more chaos," one official said. Speakes said the primary U.S. objective is "to work out some agreement between the factions."

Marcos opponents rap U.S. policy

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Philippine government opponents demanded Tuesday that President Reagan cancel his planned trip to Manila and they charged U.S. policy encourages the violence that led to the murder of opposition leader Benigno Aquino.

They urged the Senate Foreign Relations Committee to release a 1979 report detailing alleged harassment of Philippine opposition leaders in the United States by the government of President Ferdinand Marcos.

They also called on the Senate to block ratification of the U.S.-Philippine extradition treaty signed by both countries on Nov. 27, 1981, and to reject a new five-year U.S. aid package to the Philippines totaling $900 million.

"I believe unequivocally that Marcos was behind the slaying of Aquino," Marcos's chief rival for the presidency before martial law was declared in 1972, former Philippine Sen. Raul Manglapus told a news conference.

"I believe unequivocally that Marcos was behind the slaying of Aquino," Marcos's chief rival for the presidency before martial law was declared in 1972, former Philippine Sen. Raul Manglapus told a news conference.

"HIS WHOLE RECORD is one of violence. And American support is encouraging that violence. The soldiers who pulling Aquino out of the plane had the feeling that they had the support not just of Marcos but of big brother U.S.A.," Manglapus said.

Aquino was gunned down Aug. 21 seconds after soldiers escorted him from a plane at Manila International Airport upon his return from a three-year self-imposed exile in the United States. The Marcos government is investigating the killing.

Manglapus said ratification of the U.S.-Philippine extradition treaty would be "an extension of Marcos's martial law to the United States."

Further, the Nixon, Ford and Carter administrations all rejected efforts to get the treaty enacted, said Stephen Cohen, deputy assistant secretary of state for human rights under President Carter.

"The Philippine motive for the treaty is to harass opposition leaders in the United States, to bring them back to the Philippines to try them on trumped up charges," he said.

MANGLAPUS SAID a Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee on international relations prepared a report in 1979 on harassment of exiles living in the United States by the U.S.S.R., Yugoslavian, Iranian, Chilean, Philippines and Taiwan governments.

"The report reached the U.S. intelligence and security agencies, but... I was never approached by them... We would like to call for release of the report."

It appears that three former graders have made the grade National Football League.

The Chicago Bears announced Tuesday afternoon that former defensive tackle Mark Borich was the eighth-round draft choice of the team and will be in uniform when the Bears enter Atlanta on Sunday.

On Monday, two other former Hawkeyes, kicker Reggie Roby and defensive tackle Brett Miller, had their names called by Miami and Atlanta respectively.

McEnroe struggles U.S.

NEW YORK (UPI) — Top John McEnroe, in imminent danger of bowing out before even got started, recovered from a hot and humid afternoon to post a five-set triumph over Wiltke Tuesday in an opening round match of the U.S. Tennis Championships.

The left-handed New York finally took charge in the second set, winning eight games in a row and carried on for a 6-3, 5-7, 0, 6-1 triumph.

"I didn't expect to go five sets," said McEnroe after beating Wiltke for only the second time in four meetings. "He plays against me and obviously doesn't have much to lose. I feel I moved that well at all. I'm glad I got through the match."

"I won't win the tournament keep playing like that."

WALTKE, RANKED 130th in the world, hadn't survived the second round in nine previous tournaments this year and is remembered for wearing white trousers in an opening match at Wimbledon. But almost proved to be too much for McEnroe after winning the second and third sets with breaks in the 12th and 10th games respectively.

"I was happy when I won the third set, but I wish I could have made a better showing after that," Wiltke said. "I lost my spirit."

Not so fortunate as McEnroe was eighth seed Jose-Luis Clerico, who fell meekly to Tim Wilkison 6-2, 6-3, 7-6.

Although a first round loss, his previous five tournament appearances were not as successful. Wilkison recklessly attacked Clerico's net even on his opponent's serve and after yielding a 4-1 lead in the third set, he captured the break, 7-4.

"THIS WAS THE last chance I had in a major and I came in a loser," said the 23-year-old Third-seed Andrea Jaeger has advanced to the second round of the U.S. Tennis Championships after a match against Betsy Nagelsen.

Leftists assassinate Chilean governor

SANTIAGO, Chile (UPI) — Leftist guerrillas firing submachine guns killed Santiago's military governor and two aides Tuesday in a blazing ambush.

The government said four men and a woman opened fire on retired Maj. Gen. Carol Urzua as he left for work from his east Santiago home. Police, however, said there were 12 attackers, including gunmen wearing wigs.

The left-wing guerrilla group Revolutionary Left Movement, or MIR, claimed responsibility for the attack, its second murder of a top military officer since the armed forces overthrew the elected Marxist government of Salvador Allende in 1973.

"The combat command of the MIR claims responsibility for this death. This is how we avenge our martyrs," an anonymous caller told Santiago radio stations.

Military President Augusto Pinochet met with top police and military chiefs to discuss security measures.

Urzua's death came as the government was beginning talks with opposition leaders on returning Chile to democracy.

A statement issued by the Interior Ministry expressed the government's "firm determination to continue unaltered along the constitutional path it has fixed."

THE STATEMENT said the government will not give in to the "climate of chaos that fanatic minorities seek to create, nor will it renounce its advance toward full democracy."

Admiral Jose Toribio Merino, commander in chief of the Chilean navy and a member of the ruling four-man military junta, said after meeting with Pinochet the government would push ahead with its plan for a political liberalization.

Interior Minister Sergio Jarpa Reyes said the killing would not affect plans to speed up the return to democracy and there was no reason to reimpose the state of emergency, lifted last week after 10 years.

Police said the gunmen, some wearing wigs, awaited Urzua in a yellow pickup truck and fired more than 50 shots into the military officer's car. Urzua managed to fire two or three shots with his service pistol before he died inside the car, one police report said.

But Alfonso Marquez de la Plata, the acting interior minister, said the 57-year-old governor "was assassinated by a group of extremists made up of four men and a woman" armed with submachine guns.

Marquez said the general's chauffeur and bodyguard were killed in the attack.

"They defended themselves and got down from the car firing their weapons. But they were already injured and could not do anything," Marquez said.

WITNESSES SAID one of the gunmen was hiding behind a tree with a submachine gun as the general's car pulled away from his house. The chauffeur, Carlos Aguayo, jumped out of the car and sought refuge in the garden of Urzua's house, but was cut down in a burst of submachine gunfire.

The news of Urzua's death shocked the country, and radio stations broadcast new details of the assassination throughout the morning.

Heavily armed police contingents set up roadblocks, sealing off the airport and all major exits to the city. Police searching for the gunmen from helicopters located three vehicles believed to have been used by the assailants.

The assassination was the second claimed by MIR since 1973. In July 1980 a group of MIR gunmen ambushed and killed the chief of the Chilean army's intelligence agency, Lt. Col. Roger Vergara.

Aquino assassin identified as a 'notorious killer'

MANILA, Philippines (UPI) — Hours before the funeral of Benigno Aquino, the government identified his alleged killer as a "gun for hire" and the nation's cardinal warned the slaying of the opposition leader left Filipinos "angry and restless."

In a surprise statement over government radio and television, Manila Police Chief Maj. Gen. Prospero Olivas identified Aquino's killer as Rolando Galman y Dawang who he described as "a notorious killer and gun for hire." The killer was identified through laboratory tests and fingerprints on the murder weapon, a Smith & Wesson .357 Magnum revolver, he said.

Among the few clues authorities have had to the killer's identity were the name "Rolly" embroidered on his undershorts.

"THE ASSAILANT ... has reportedly been used by various elements, including organized syndicated crime or by subversive elements, possibly for vengeance or possibly for armed robbery ... hijacking, bank holdups or kidnapping for ransom," the government statement said.

Sen. Mark Hatfield R-Ore., who is in the country on a private visit, said President Ferdinand Marcos believed Filipino communists were behind the slaying of Aquino.

"I am not saying that this is an international conspiracy but only the local communists have gained in this," Hatfield quoted Marcos as telling him.

"THEY HAVE MADE us look like incompetent security people. They have made us look like we were engaged in killing outright our political opponents."

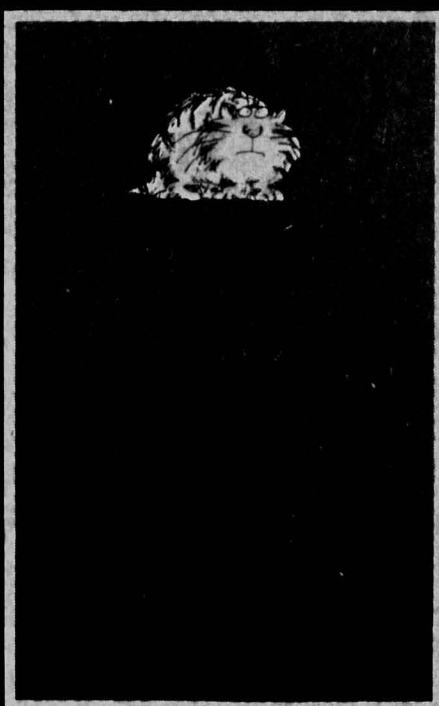

Aquino was shot dead Aug. 21 at Manila airport as he stepped off a plane after three years exile in the United States. His alleged assassin was killed by security forces.

"Ninoy's assassination has left them (the people) angry and restless and there are ugly undercurrents that threaten us all," said Jaime Sin the Archbishop of Manila.

"The assassination ... has given rise to a volatile situation," he said. "The many polarizations that have long smoldered under the surface ... are threatening to come to the fore."

Police were placed at a high state of alert and officials said more than 3,000 officers would be on duty for the funeral mass.

Too little, too late

Astronaut Sally Ride's journey on last June's space shuttle trip as the first American woman in space occasioned an orgy of self-congratulation throughout the country. The media trumpeted the event as an "historic" breakthrough in the continuing effort for sexual equality. (Most of us chose to ignore the fact that the Soviets had put a woman into orbit 20 years earlier.)

Tuesday morning the United States' latest launching of the space shuttle Challenger was, as promised, quite spectacular. And once again the media have a new symbol of equal rights in Guion Bluford, the first black American in space. Yet the overkill of coverage on the significance of Bluford's presence only serves to emphasize the less-than-spectacular U.S. record on racial equality.

One of the problems with black involvement in the space program has been that the program is a highly symbolic focus for the attention, curiosity and pride of Americans. The program's first black astronaut trainee resigned in 1966 after pressure from Air Force and NASA officials, who he felt weren't ready to accept the prospect of a black astronaut. The former trainee, Ed Dwight, says, "They didn't want black involvement. They felt that to send blacks into space would lessen the general public's enthusiasm for the space program."

In other words, over the years the general attitude of program officials is that we weren't ready for a black as a symbol of national heroism. And now that a black has finally made it into space he can hardly be seen as a true pioneer. "Now they get blacks and women involved when it becomes rather pedestrian... when all the excitement is gone," Dwight says, "There was a time when a black could have been in the space program and had some impact.... But the space program at that time disallowed black folks and it had nothing to do with qualifications. It had to do with choice."

So now the program has chosen to send a black into space; now the media have chosen to portray him as proof of equality in America; and now the public chooses to see him as an example of the strides we've made in granting "opportunity for all". And although Bluford will be paving the way for blacks to advance in related fields in the future, real equality in the program will have arrived when we send a black into space and no one notices his color.

Don't go

The Reagan administration shouldn't have been surprised Tuesday when Philippine government opponents demanded that the president cancel his November trip to Manila and charged that U.S. policy encourages the violence that led to the murder of Benigno Aquino Jr.

The huge crowds of Filipinos that turned out to mourn slain opposition leader Aquino at processions last week and at his funeral Tuesday are witness to the largest public displays of anti-government sentiment in the history of the Philippines.

Aquino's younger brother, Agapito Aquino, who led a vast procession of mourners in Manila last week, has said the turnouts show "we must fight for the ideals that my brother died for." One of Aquino's ideals was to challenge Ferdinand Marcos to live up to the democratic tradition he has squelched for nearly 15 years.

American foreign policy has for too long overlooked the violence of Marcos' regime and helped bolster his authoritarian role by paying blackmailer's fees to lease military bases in the Philippines.

The largest, Clark Air Field, home of the U.S. 13th Air Force, is also America's largest overseas air base. Subic Naval Base is a naval supply depot and repair facility for the U.S. 7th fleet. Together, Clark Field and Subic Bay are the anchors of U.S. military power in southeast Asia.

Alongside the conspicuous wealth of the U.S. bases many Filipinos live in dire poverty. This juxtaposition has been dehumanizing to many. Beyond the social influence, Filipino nationalists say the bases serve as a target for attack from countries hostile to the U.S. Many of the ships and aircraft that use the bases are nuclear-capable. For this reason growing numbers of Filipinos are calling for a nuclear-free Pacific.

On June 1, American and Filipino negotiators signed another five-year agreement giving the U.S. "unhindered use" of the bases in exchange for Reagan's promise of his best efforts to send $900 million in aid to the Marcos government. Nearly half the total — $425 million — will be military aid.

In recent months a wide range of Filipino church leaders, politicians, academics and workers have come together to campaign against the bases. All political opposition parties are calling for removal of the bases. While the dissent grows, the violence of the Marcos regime continues and the Reagan administration avoids saying anything that might jeopardize the military leases. Instead of distancing itself from Marcos, this administration has congratulated him on his "dedication to democratic principles."

It's time the United States started listening to the Philippine opposition. The Senate has a chance to block ratification of the aid package when it reconvenes next week, and President Reagan should give serious thought to canceling his trip.

Learn to interpret what they say

Hoyt Olsen

Regular columnist Hoyt Olsen recently underwent a bout with chronic allergy, losing by a TKO during the third round. Today's guest columnist is pre-postmodern rhetorician Cissy Rowe, best known for her widely distributed and well-bespittled essay, "Sex, Not Syntax."

AS THOSE OF you familiar with my work are no doubt aware, my principal objection to the manner in which persuasive writing and speech are currently instructed in the nation's schools bears no relation to the actual applications of rhetoric by leaders in business, industry, education, insurrection and government.

Chief among the errors of rhetoric instructors is their continued pining for the hoary premise that words mean what they mean. Knowledgeable practitioners of rhetoric recognize the transmutable quality of language and, like ancient alchemists, transform lead into gold and Marion Michael Morrison into John Wayne. Recent examples, with translations:

1) Following rumors of a hiring freeze in certain UI departments, UI Vice President for Finance Randall Bezanson explains, "It's not a freeze, it's not a hold, it's an admonition we must be aware of the circumstances we find ourselves in... it is not a formal policy that would dictate a terminal point."

TRANSLATION: "We are hiring professors with international reputations and secretaries able to type 162 words-per-minute, providing both are willing to accept the salaries given to migrant workers during the 1930s. This informal policy may last until hell freezes over without being acknowledged as a freeze."

2) Chester Crocker, assistant secretary of state for African affairs, states in an interview on ABC's "Nightline" that administration efforts to expel South African refugee Dennis Brutus — whose efforts led to the barring of apartheid South Africa from most international sports competition — mean only that Brutus "is being treated like anybody else.... We have laws, and they must be applied."

Translation: "Offering asylum to the prepubescent sons of Soviet diplomats embarrasses people the president dislikes, like dirty commies. Granting asylum to refugees from South Africa embarrasses people the president likes, like racists with the sensitivity to also dislike dirty commies. We may have laws, but the president pays our salaries."

3) GEORGE STEINBRENNER, accused of paying for the medical expenses of a high school football player's mother as an inducement for the player to sign with the University of Florida, explains, "That was certainly no inducement to make her son play for the Gators. When the mother of a child is losing her eyesight, to me there's no question, I'm going to do it. I'd do it again in a minute, over and over and over again. And I guess the only way they could stop me is to shoot me."

Translation: "I'm still the same lovable guy who made illegal contributions to Nixon's campaign fund in 1968. Someone should shoot the sonovabitch who turned me in."

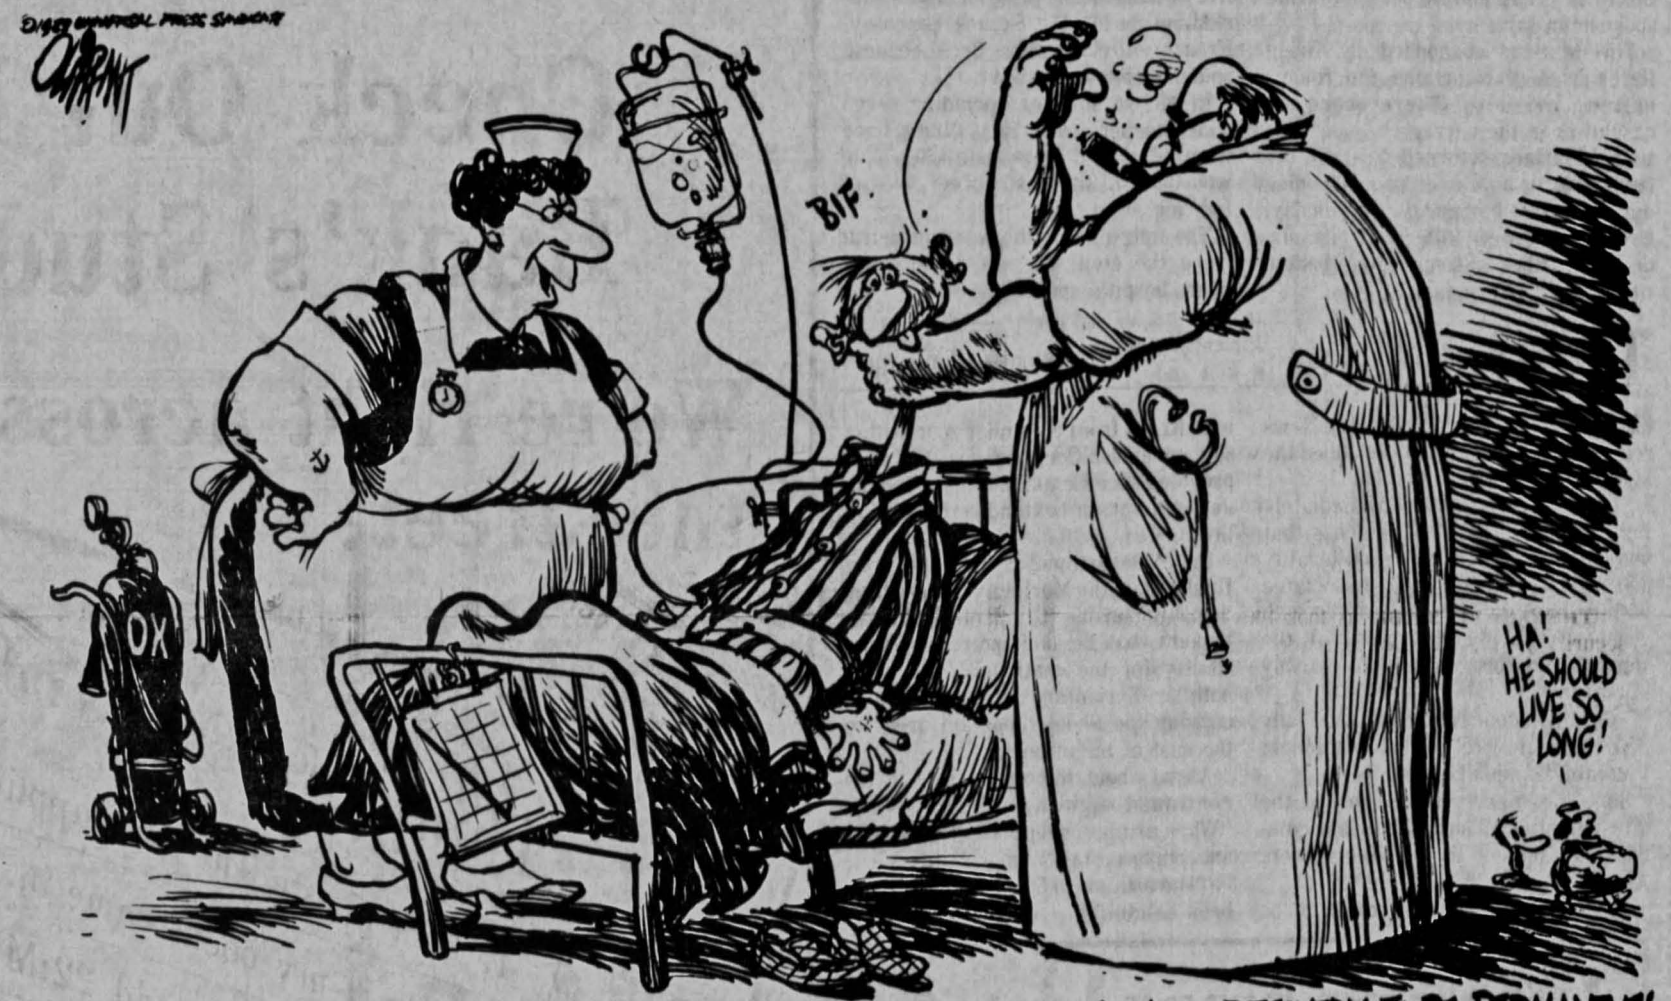

4) UI Program Assistant Mary Skourup, who oversees greek affairs, in response to reports that she had asked sorority presidents for "mandatory" attendance at last Thursday's meeting of the Iowa City Planning and Zoning Commission: "They (sorority presidents) may have misconstrued what I meant when I said 'mandatory'... it was meant loosely."

TRANSLATION: "I meant they had to be there, but in a way that meant they had to be there whether I really meant they had to be there or not, since if they had truly had to be there it would have mitigated the collective force of their semblance before the commission of truly wanting to have to be there of their own uncoerced choice, which I wished to establish by requiring their having to be there in the first place. That's what I meant loosely, more or less."

If more students could be trained to use language inaccurately to present things as everyone but rhetoric instructors knows they aren't, those in positions of responsibility would have to say what they really mean in order to confuse the issues. That moment would open whole new vistas of communication.

Rowe's first book of essays on rhetoric, Not Tonight, Darling, I Have a Thesis Sentence, will be published by Harcourt, Brace and Larry Flynt this winter.

Institutionalizing international spirit

This is the second of a three-part series on international education.

By Stephen Arum

WE ARE educating today's youth with yesterday's ideas. Our colleges and universities will have to change significantly. So that we might bring about these changes, what follows is an attempt to describe an internationalized university — an ideal against which we can measure our present institutions.

First, an internationalized university will have a president, central administration and collegiate and departmental administrators whose lives and actions reflect their own personal involvement in international activities. Their behavior will convey their beliefs. They will hire faculty and staff with international experience and foreign language ability. They will not only motivate university colleagues to seek involvement in international affairs through their teaching, research and service, but will also assist the citizens of the state to see the need to study and learn about foreign languages, cultures and world affairs. They will attempt to make the university an international center of learning, with the world as its perimeter.

THE FACULTY in the internationalized university will teach their subjects from a comparative perspective, knowing when their ideas are relevant only to the United States and when their thoughts approach universality of relevance. They will understand the history and status of their fields as they are practiced in the United States as well as in other countries. Our faculty will have lived and worked in other countries for significant periods of time and will have ongoing collaborative research projects with foreign colleagues.

Some of their research and experience abroad will be done explicitly

"Students will seek to prepare themselves to play a meaningful role in the interdependent world of the present and future. They will want to learn to be world-minded, world-feeling and world-caring citizens, professionals and human beings."

Guest opinion

to benefit the development of Third World countries. This international experience will also enhance the faculty members' capabilities as advisers to foreign students as well as to American students with international interests. They will occasionally teach their courses in a foreign language and they will also utilize the experiences of foreign students and scholars as well as American students in order to provide comparative insights regarding subject matter.

Such faculty will desire to share their own international experience with their students by encouraging them to study and do research abroad, and they will occasionally lead such study-abroad programs.

THE CURRICULUM will not only contain courses and coherent programs that focus on particular world areas and international problems and topics, but also there will be international and comparative aspects to courses in the liberal arts and professional schools. In the liberal arts college there will be well-thought-through programs on many world areas as well as programs focusing on particular international topics. The professional schools will provide courses that look at their subject matter as it exists in other countries and contexts where appropriate — international law, comparative education, Asian marketing or world health, for example.

They will also examine their professions' histories, achievements and status in other countries so that students will be prepared to interact knowledgeably with their foreign colleagues and, where relevant, to understand the significant contributions of professionals from other countries.

THE INTERNATIONALIZED university will involve itself in teaching, research and service with other countries. The university will establish linkages with foreign universities to encourage student and faculty exchanges for study, teaching and research. The faculty will be assisted to organize joint conferences and collaborative research with colleagues at partner foreign institutions. Because of the tremendous needs of Third World countries, faculty and staff will be urged and helped to seek technical cooperation so that foreign institutions and human resources can be developed and truly collaborative relationships continued in the future. This not only will assist with the development process abroad, but also enable our faculty and staff to learn about the realities of their specialties in other cultures.

BEFORE GRADUATING, the students of this internationalized university will have significant learning experiences concerning at least one foreign culture and learn to speak and read its language. They will come to appreciate cultural traditions other than their own and see the future as encompassing the hopes of people from many countries. They will have an appropriate overseas study, work and travel experience during which they utilize their foreign language and develop a sensitivity to another culture. They will learn the skills of communicating verbally and non-verbally with people of other cultures. Upon returning to their campus, they will seek out foreign students and scholars and help develop international activities of all kinds, learning about themselves and those different from themselves.

They will insist that their coursework help them understand the world they read about in the daily newspaper. They will seek to prepare themselves to play a meaningful role in the interdependent world of the present and future. They will want to learn to be world-minded, world-feeling and world-caring citizens, professionals and human beings.

Arum is director of the UI Office of International Education and Services.

Benefits

receive benefits at Christmas and spring break.

But Small said it is still unclear whether benefits will be awarded for these two breaks.

Bob Selk, job insurance manager for the Iowa City-area Job Service, said, "What it comes down to is that a cook at a high school was not able to draw (unemployment benefits during the period in which school is out) and a cook at a university was able to draw."

After Job Service receives a claim for unemployment from an individual, they send a notice to the employer stating that the person has filed for unemployment benefits. The employer can then file a protest against the claim on several different grounds.

Under the new law, UI administrators are required to protest unemployment claims filed by employees who they are reasonably sure will be returning to work. Selk said Job Service has received "40 to 50" such protests from the UI since the law went into effect.

Fiagle, however, pointed out that while public school employees are hired to work only nine months, UI employees are hired on a full year salary.

HE ESTIMATED that his yearly salary could decrease by about 6 percent if benefits are denied for the days he does not work during Christmas and spring break.

Small said she couldn't guess how many UI non-academic employees will suffer the income loss, but said residence hall food service workers are the group most affected.

Fiagle and Marietta Gill, a food service employee in Quadrangle Residence Hall, are leading the petition drive and plan to send the document to U.S. Sens. Charles Grassley and Roger Jepsen and U.S. Representatives Cooper Evans and James Leach.

The petition suggests two possible solutions. Either abolish the law and allow the benefits to be collected as before, or force the UI to find "fair adequate employment which would at least meet our (the workers') normal hourly salary."

Two copies of the petition will also be forwarded to Des Moines, one to the state Job Service office and the other to Gov. Terry Branstad.

Don Winter, president of the local American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, said the union is trying to work with UI residence services to assure work will be available during the breaks.

Droll said this is "certainly a possibility," but added his office is still reviewing the issue.

Council

"people who got into trouble one or two times, but not hardened criminals."

Councilor Larry Lynch said he wanted the trailer court neighborhood to "keep us aware of any problems you have," regarding any Project HOPE residents.

"We'll be very sensitive to any problems you have," he said.

COPPENS SAID later she was not aware of the project's move until a neighbor "saw a small (article)" in a local newspaper and that her neighborhood didn't have time to place any input into the situation.

Coppens said she would need to speak with other petitioners to decide what to do next and would also consider moving from the trailer court.

Although the council could not arrange much for the trailer court's problems, the problem of Kirkwood Avenue was contended with by deferring action until the next council meeting in mid-September.

Councilors said the delayed decision was due to the absence of an economic report that would help them determine whether the change to R-2 residential zoning from the current M-1 light industrial zoning would sharply affect developer Larry Rigler's opportunity to build and profit from his land.

Rigler had originally applied for R-3 residential zoning in order to build a larger housing unit, but his request was hampered when it met with a petition and a zoning request from the Kirkwood Neighborhood Association. Rigler later withdrew his request for R-3 zoning.

JOHN BENNETT, a Kirkwood Neighborhood Association spokesman, said persons living around that location "will not petition against any reasonable PAD (Planned Area Development) submitted by the owner (Rigler)."

Bennett said the PAD agreement is "the best way to go," and that his committee would trust the council's judgement since "we're confident your judgement will be reasonable."

On July 7 the Iowa City Planning and Zoning Commission approved changing the zone from M-1 to R-2 for the 2.4 acre lot that Rigler had specified he wanted to build a multi-unit apartment complex on.

Fighting

capital. Italian officials announced that one Italian soldier in the peacekeeping force was wounded slightly by a stray bullet.

Heavy artillery fell every five minutes near U.S. Marine positions for about 45 minutes around midnight, and two shells exploded within the perimeter of the Marine positions at Beirut International Airport, a Marine spokesman said.

The Marines responded by firing flares as a warning and the rounds halted, he said. There were no casualties in the barrage.

The Marines returned fire for the first time in a year of peace-keeping duty in Beirut on Sunday. On Monday, two Marines were killed and 14 wounded in further clashes with Moslem militias.

The Pentagon said the remains of the two dead Marines — 2nd Lt. Donald Losey, 28, Winston Salem, N.C., and Staff Sgt. Alexander M. Ortega, 25, Rochester, N.Y. — would arrive at Dover Air Force Base, Del., today.

The 4,800-man multinational peacekeeping force took more casualties, with five French soldiers killed and five wounded in three assaults, including one on the French Embassy, French officials said. Six Lebanese soldiers also were killed.

In all, 44 soldiers, including seven peace-keepers, and 30 civilians have been killed and more than 150 people wounded in the last three days of fighting.

The fighting was the worst in Beirut since the civil war left up to 40,000 dead, hospital spokesmen said.

Troops

tagon objected to a CBS Evening News report Monday night that described the Marines as "killed in combat."

"One difference that immediately jumps to mind is... in the sense that you declare combat, there's a legality and certain other things associated with it," he said. "I would agree with you to an individual being shot at, the semantic distinctions are not terribly important."

The Pentagon currently lists only three "hostile fire" or combat zones: Vietnam, Cambodia and Iran.

Some lawmakers have charged the latest fighting makes Lebanon a combat zone subject to the War Powers Act.

The act requires U.S. troops to be withdrawn from a combat zone within 60 days unless Congress declares war, provides specific authorization for the deployment or extends the 60-day limit.

State Department Spokesman John Hughes said the Marines who are under fire are unable to identify the attackers, but he laid indirect responsibility for the continued fighting on both the Syrian and Israeli forces occupying the Shouf mountain areas to the east of the airport.

Asked about the Syrian role in the continued fighting, Hughes said, "When armies occupy a territory, they undertake certain responsibilities."

"The attitude of Syria has clearly not been helpful."

Alliance petitions court on airport

By Carlos Trevino
Staff Writer

The Iowa City Airport Alliance filed a petition in Johnson County Court Wednesday asking court order be issued to force City Council to correct the "hazards" they claim would result from occupancy of a two-story apartment complex located at the runway at the Iowa City Airport.

The alliance, consisting of pilots and businessmen, and known as the Committee of Concerned Persons for Iowa City Airport, filed the petition that occurred the two-story structure would be "extremely hazardous conditions."

The Federal Aviation Administration notified Iowa City Mayor Neuhauer in July that the airport complexes under construction at the runway 17 were a violation.

BECAUSE OF that violation, Iowa City Airport was forced to withdraw a $295,322 grant request had been submitted to the FAA for port improvements and also defer a projected $2 million in grant applications.

The 37-unit apartment development on U.S. Highway 1 West is owned by Iowa City developer K. Ranshaw, and will be ready for occupancy this fall. The council approved the development in March.

"Right now, he has one of the most complex finished," Iowa Building Inspector Dick Franz said. "He is still constructing the building right now."

Jon Kinnamon, an attorney alliance, said "The city has been correcting the problem, while denying an occupancy permit — was the recommendation by the or condemnation powers and power."

"I think the court should order the city to act and to eliminate the hazard," Kinnamon said. "The city can't act contrary to regulations or the FAA contract signed."

THE CITY attorney's office notified the alliance prior to the action, informing them that apartment complexes met all city specifications an occupancy permit would have to be granted.

"The apartment complex does comply with city requirements," Franz said.

The court action comes more than a month after attorneys for the alliance threatened to implement proceedings to stop occupancy taking place at the complexes.

Iowa City Manager Neal Berlin was named in the court action respondent, along with city attorney and the city manager's supporters said he was "not surprised," the occurred.

The petition was filed by attorney Nicholas Russo, the alliance's lawyer, and attorneys R.N. Russo, Kinnamon, who stated in court that city officials "neglected" to take action correct violation of FAA regulations.

"Building for high residential constitutes an extreme hazard to residential occupants of the airport," he said.

Bears drop veterans in favor of Bortz

It appears that three former Iowa gridders have made the grade in the National Football League.

The Chicago Bears announced late Tuesday afternoon that former Iowa defensive tackle Mark Bortz, an eighth-round draft choice of the club, has made the team and will be in uniform when the Bears entertain Atlanta on Sunday.

On Monday, two other former Hawkeyes, kicker Reggie Roby and offensive tackle Brett Miller had survived cuts by Miami and Atlanta, respectively.

In order for the Bears to reach the

This story was written from reports by DI assistant sports editor Mike Condon and United Press International.

49-player limit, they waived nine players and placed another on the injured reserve list, a team spokesman said.

AMONG THOSE waived were eight veterans and one rookie. Tight ends Robin Earl and Brooks Williams were dropped in favor of rookie Pat Dunsmore from Drake. Tackles Andy Frederick and Dennis Lick along with former Nebraska standout Henry Waechter were let go to make room for Bortz, who was moved to the offensive line during training camp.

Other Bear cuts include safety Lenny Walterscheid, running back Willie McClendon, guard Perry Hartnett and rookie linebacker Don Kimble. Linebacker Al Chesley was placed on the injured reserve list.

In other news around the NFL, defensive end Joe Klecko is back on the New York Jets' Sack Exchange but defensive tackle Abdul Salaam is off-

THE JETS PLACED Salaam on the injured reserve list Tuesday and claimed wide receiver Preston Brown on waivers from the Baltimore Colts. Salaam, an eight-year veteran with the Jets, had been plagued by a shoulder injury throughout the pre-season. He will rest for a minimum of six weeks, a team spokesman said. Klecko, an All-Pro in 1981, is recovered from major knee surgery performed early last season.

Brown, a 1980 sixth-round draft pick of New England, started the first four games of the 1982 season after spending the entire 1981 season on injured reserve. The 5-11, 187-pound receiver was claimed by Baltimore after the Patriots released him two weeks ago.

At Dallas, coach Tom Landry said he thought the Washington Redskins would be the favorites in their division and added he was not looking forward to his season-opener at RFK Stadium next Monday night. It will mark the third time in four years Dallas has opened its campaign in Washington. Running back James Jones was placed on the injured reserve list and free agent tight end Cleo Simmons was recalled.

Harmon brothers facing redshirt

By Mike Condon
Assistant Sports Editor

At this time last season, it appeared that Iowa running back Ronnie Harmon would be going through a typical year for most incoming freshmen that play for Coach Hayden Fry — a redshirt year, that is.

But a lack of production from the wingback position forced Fry to move the talented Harmon to the outside in the season's third week. He responded with 19 catches for 299 yards and three touchdowns during the last nine games, including two in Iowa's 28-22 win over Tennessee in the Peach Bowl.

Talk began that Harmon could become one of the top receivers in the Big Ten but that talk stopped abruptly when Harmon let it be known that he had no desire to remain at wingback. He simply said, "I want to be a running back."

WELL, FRY GAVE Harmon his wish, but the Laurelton, N.Y., native has a small problem — he's No. 4 on the depth chart behind Owen Gill, Eddie Phillips and Paul McCarty. That all adds up to an apparent redshirt season, the one Harmon was planning on getting last season.

However, Harmon can make redshirting a family affair. Brother Kevin, a quarterback/wide receiver, is in that redshirt freshman group.

The obvious question to Ronnie is: Why give up the No. 1 wingback position for the No. 4 running back slot? "I don't think they really need me at wingback," he said. "We have a lot of talent out there this season and I feel I can do best for the team at running back."

"It's not a point of playing, it's doing what I want to do," Ronnie said of the prospect of riding the bench behind Gill, Phillips and McCarty. "It's like going to a job and not liking where they put you. I like to go to a job that I like ... not that I don't like wingback, I just like running back better."

How does the younger of the Harmon brothers feel about his brother's decision to move to running back? "Ever since he was a kid he's been stubborn," Kevin said. "He works hard and usually gets what he wants."

MANY ASSUME that Kevin's coming to Iowa had a lot to do with Ronnie's enrollment last year but Kevin said that wasn't the case. "No, Ronnie didn't have too much to do with it," Kevin said. "I had an injury (stretched ligaments in the See Harmon, page 3B

McEnroe struggles at U.S. Open

NEW YORK (UPI) — Top seed John McEnroe, in imminent danger of bowing out before he even got started, recovered on a hot and humid afternoon to pull out a five-set triumph over Trey Waltke Tuesday in an opening-round match of the U.S. Open Tennis Championships.

The left-handed New Yorker finally took charge in the fourth set, winning eight games in a row, and carried on for a 6-3, 5-7, 4-6, 6-0, 6-1 triumph.

"I didn't expect to go five sets," said McEnroe after beating Waltke for only the second time in four meetings. "He plays well against me and obviously he doesn't have much to lose. I don't feel I moved that well at all, and I'm glad I got through the match. I won't win the tournament if I keep playing like that."

WALTKE, RANKED 130TH in the world, hadn't survived the second round in nine previous tournaments this year and is best remembered for wearing long white trousers in an opening round match at Wimbledon. But he almost proved to be too much of a test for McEnroe after winning the second and third sets with breaks in the 12th and 10th games respectively.

"I was happy when I won the third set, but I wish I could have made a better showing after that," Waltke said. "I lost my spring."

Not so fortunate as McEnroe was eighth seed Jose-Luis Clerc, who fell meekly to Tim Wilkison, 6-2, 6-3, 7-6.

Although a first round loser in his previous five tournaments, Wilkison recklessly attacked the net even on his opponent's serve, and after yielding a 4-1 lead in the third set, he captured the tie-break, 7-4.

"THIS WAS the last chance for me in a major and I came in confident," said the 23-year-old left-hander. "I thought as soon as I drew him (Clerc) I should win the match. This is a good surface for me and I was just very confident."

Clerc, who recently won three consecutive tournaments and has a world No. 8 ranking, said he lacked concentration "and I could not move my legs, but I do not know the reason."

Wilkison hasn't gone beyond the quarterfinals in 16 tournaments this year and has seen his ranking drop to 73.

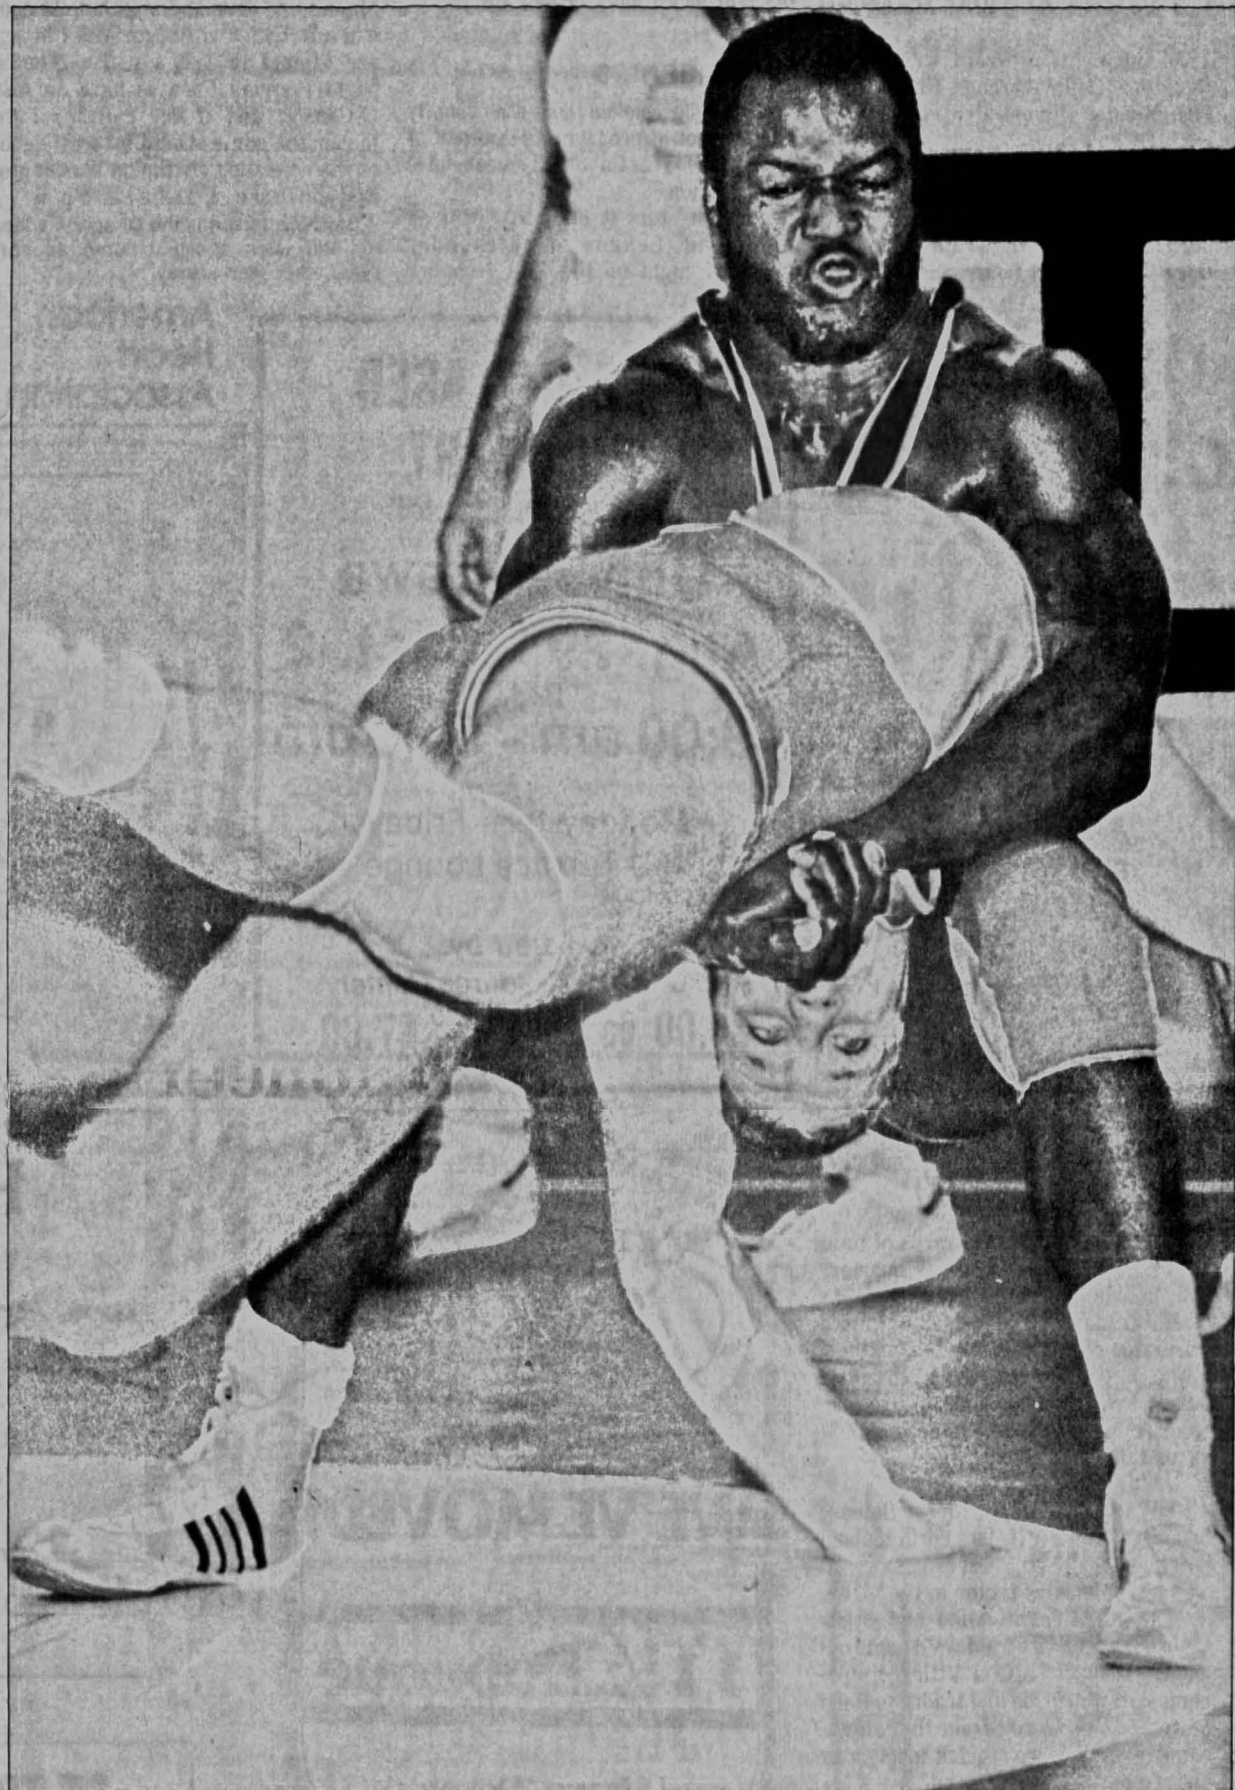

In a milder surprise, hard-hitting Eric Korita, a pro of only two days, turned back Brian Teacher, 6-3, 4-6, 6-0, 6-4. Korita has been playing well this summer, reaching the semifinals in tournaments at Washington and South Orange, N.J., and turned pro after winning the doubles championship at the Pan American Games.

STILL, KORITA HAS a ranking of 79 to 23 for Teacher.

Among other seeded men, No. 6 Guillermo Vilas tamed Eddie Edwards, 6-2, 6-2, 6-2, No. 9 Jimmy Arias beat Jonathan Carter, 6-2, 6-3, 0-6, 6-2, and No. 14 Eliot Teltscher defeated Australian John McCurdy, 6-0, 6-4, 6-4.

Hana Mandlikova, twice a runner-up in the U.S. Open, including last year, when she lost the final to Chris Evert Lloyd, and seeded eighth this year, swept through the first nine games and then held on for a 6-0, 6-3 victory over Nancy Yeargin; No. 7 Sylvia Hanika of West Germany struggled past Russia's Larissa Savchenko, 6-2, 5-7, 6-4, and No. 16 Kathy Jordan beat Camille Benjamin, 6-0, 7-5.

In a surprise announcement, two-time Open champion Tracy Austin, seeded fourth, withdrew. Austin is bothered by a stress fracture of a rib, affecting muscles in her back, and hasn't played since Eastbourne, England, two months ago.

'Cats hunger for winning identity

By Robert Ryser

CHICAGO — Two years ago they were a team hungry for an identity. Three games into last season they were half dead from starvation.

But after that emotional, historic 31-6 victory over Northern Illinois last year on Sept. 25, the Northwestern Wildcats began to live again. The Cats got their competitive appetite back and devoured two Big Ten foes. Minnesota and Michigan State fell to the 'Cat people, and Northwestern finished tied for 8th in one of the toughest football conferences in the nation.

This year, the novelty is over. Northwestern is now considered a viable Big Ten foe by conference coaches, and the Wildcats will no longer be the favorite scheduled main course at opposing schools' Homecomings.

"I THINK FROM 1981 to 1982 Northwestern was the most improved football team in the nation," Ohio State Coach Earle Bruce said. Bruce and his Buckeyes got a good scare the last game of the 1982 season when the once tame 'Cats exploded for three touchdowns on quarterback Sandy Schwab's 393 yards. A Northwestern fumble on the Ohio State 12-yard line ended their upset bid.

The game before that, when Northwestern ended a streak of 47 road losses, was an even better indication of Schwab's maturity as a freshman.

Schwab passed for 265 yards and scored two touchdowns to give the Wildcats a 28-24 victory over Michigan State.

Coach Dennis Green, the man credited with most of Northwestern's Big Ten success and national acclaim, said he is confident that his players' maturity will help the 'Cats improve on last year's 3-8 mark.

"I THINK WE now have the maturity and experience ... the players realized their capabilities last season and we're counting on that momentum to carry into this season," Green said.

"Generally we will attempt to become even more aggressive than last year. We want to be on the attack. Offensively, we need to be more efficient and establish more productivity through the air."

That means an even tougher assignment for sophomore Schwab, who last year completed 234-of-416 passes for 2,735 yards and broke or tied 15 NCAA records.

Records and impressive figures have a strange way of not being lived up to the next season for some players, but judging from his spring practice, which his coach described as "excellent," Schwab could have another fine year.

"HE (SCHWAB) has to cut down on his interceptions," Green said, "and he has to work on improving his consistency into the end zone ... but Sandy Schwab is outstanding."

Despite Green's praise, he stressed that the Wildcats could not depend on any one player.

"Overall, there are more juniors and seniors in our top 44, and we will have much better special teams," he said. See Wildcats, page 3B

Miller steals show from Open

All you have to do is take a look at many of the weekly professional tennis tour stops and you may find a big name or two, but for a lot of the pro tourneys mediocrity seems to be the name of the game.

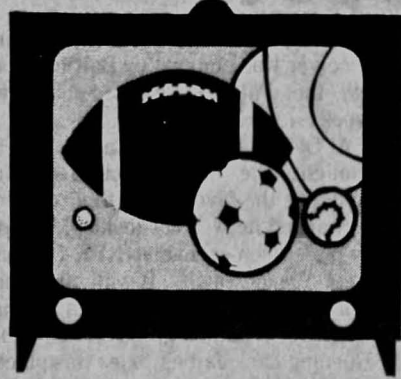

However, for the next week-and-a-half, tennis fans should be ready for a real treat, as the U.S. Open Tennis Championships, the true Wimbledon of the United States, take place in New York.

The tournament is a major one on the circuit and will feature the likes of three-time Open champion John McEnroe, who despite his childish antics is the top player in the game today, and Martina Navratilova, a winner in 25-of-29 tournaments during the past 18 months.

CBS WILL HAVE extensive coverage, totally at least 34 hours, but Eastern Iowa fans will have to look beyond KGAN-2 if they want to view the daily 30-minute highlight show that CBS will be airing.

"We will be carrying 16 hours of live matches," KGAN Public Affairs Director Barry Norris said. "We have made a commitment to carry Barney Miller and we have made that commitment to our audience. It's one of those things but we will have plenty of live match coverage."

Steve Batterson

So, while Barney and the guys are laughing it up at the 12th precinct, tennis buffs will need to turn to WHBF-4 (Cable-14) to watch Brent Musburger highlight the day's activities.

The highlight program will air at 10:30 p.m. today through Friday and then Monday through Friday evenings next week.

THE LIVE COVERAGE, which can be found on both KGAN and WHBF, begins Saturday at 11:30 a.m. and continues with three hours Sunday at 3 p.m. and 11:30 a.m. on Monday. KGAN will bypass Monday's matches for the Jerry Lewis Labor Day Telethon.

For the first time ever, CBS will telecast live coverage of both the women's semifinals and the men's doubles championships. The action begins on Friday, Sept. 9, at 10 a.m. CBS coverage of the women's finals and the men's semifinals begins at 11 a.m. on Saturday, Sept. 10, and coverage of the men's finals will follow an NFL telecast on Sept. 11 at 3 p.m.

As usual, CBS has put together a superb coverage team that should bring its coverage alive. In addition to Musburger, who will serve as a host, 11-Open veteran Pat Summerall and reporter Pat O'Brien will be joined by commentators Tony Trabert, John Newcombe and Virginia Wade.

The professional expertise of the commentators should provide for some excellent tennis coverage — despite the fact you'll have to look for it.

Video games

It's a long weekend and that usually means a lot of programming aimed at sports fans. This Labor Day weekend is no exception.

Why not start it off early with an American League doubleheader Thursday night on the USA Network (Cable-23). The first game, at 6:30 p.m., features Texas at Detroit and then the New York Yankees will head for the Bay and a meeting with Oakland.

NBC (KWVL-7) has a Yankees-Milwaukee game on tap for 7 p.m., on Tuesday night replacing The A-Team this week. Pity the fools.

AFTER A YAWNER in the Kickoff Classic, nothing but a soap clinic with a higher admission, ABC (KCRG-9) will begin its college football coverage Saturday with a match-up between UCLA and Georgia at 8 p.m.

The major college schedule begins in Iowa this weekend and IPTV (KIIN-12) has a tape-delayed broadcast of the Drake-UNI game from the UNI-Dome Sunday night at 10.

Sunday marks the beginning of the NFL season and CBS (KGAN-2) will kickoff its telecasts with the Minnesota-Cleveland match-up at noon while WHBF-4 will begin with Chicago and Atlanta at 11:30 a.m. The Monday Night Football Crew is back on ABC (KCRG-9) and if you can stand the jabber the game should be pretty good as the defending champion Washington Redskins take on Dallas at 8 p.m.

Steve Batterson is the DI sports editor. His television sports column appears every other Wednesday.

Lions pick up pieces after 'Kickoff' rout

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (UPI) — The name of the game was the Kickoff Classic, and kick is just what Nebraska did to Penn State all over Giants Stadium.

The much-anticipated match-up Monday night between the preseason No. 1 team and the defending national champion turned into a rout, with the Cornhuskers rolling up 500 yards of total offense to hand the Nittany Lions a 44-6 pasting in the opening game of the 1983 college football season.

The defeat for fourth-ranked Penn State matched the most one-sided whipping of Joe Paterno's illustrious 18-year tenure.

"They're a great football team and they played with tremendous enthusiasm," Paterno said of top-ranked Nebraska. "I said earlier that unless we can score some points, it's going to be a rout. We were outcoached and they beat us in every way. It was their night."

QUARTERBACK TURNER Gill, who accounted for 211 yards of total offense in just three quarters of play, set the tone for the game in a 14-0 first quarter as he sneaked one yard for a touchdown and threw a 19-yard scoring pass to tight end Monte Engebretson.

It was 21-0 at halftime, 30-0 after three quarters and 44-0 before the Nittany Lions managed to avoid their first regular season shutout since 1966 by scoring a touchdown with 20 seconds remaining.

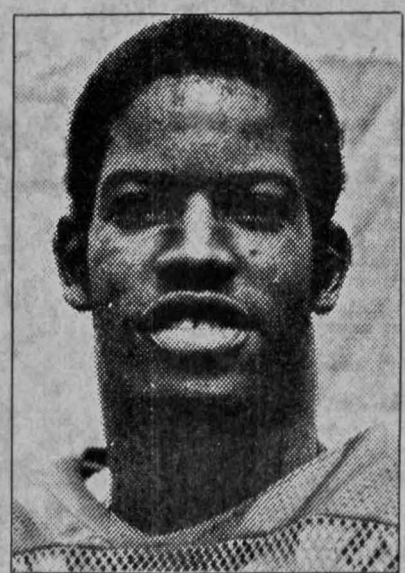

The result certainly was a surprise to the 71,123 in attendance and a national television audience, but perhaps no one was more shocked than Nebraska coach Tom Osborne.

"I was surprised at the outcome," he said. "I thought it would be a close game. We were playing a tough game against a tough opponent and we were afraid it could go the other way. If we fumbled the ball or made mistakes, we could have gotten blown out. It was rather amazing the way it went."

GILL, WHO SAW a brilliant performance wasted in Penn State's thrilling 27-24 victory last year at University Park, Pa., that proved to be the Cornhuskers' only loss of a 12-1 season, wasn't that amazed.

"We didn't expect that we were going to blow them out this bad," he said. "Maybe two or three touchdowns, but not this bad."

Much of the Nebraska's success

Turner Gill

Monday night could be traced to two areas that were preseason question marks.

The Cornhuskers' defense held the Nittany Lions to just 145 yards of total offense over the first three quarters and hounded shuttling quarterbacks Doug Strang and Dan Loneragan into a miserable 13-for-39 night.

The unit added a bonus in the third quarter when junior linebacker Mike Knox returned a Strang interception 27 yards for a touchdown.

"I WAS PLEASED with the defense because I was a little less certain about how they would be," Osborne said. "It was a tremendous factor in the game."

"The interception Mike had broke their backs. I was afraid we'd come out (in the second half) a little complacent. With the pride and tradition Penn State has, we were afraid they might come out and score a quick touchdown and we'd be fighting for our lives."

The Huskers' offensive line, which returned only one starter, opened up the holes for Mike Rozier and company to run for 322 yards and provide Gill and backup Nate Mason with enough time to throw.

Mason found tight end Todd Frain for a 20-yard touchdown pass in the second quarter and ran 21 yards for a fourth-quarter score. Paul Miles closed out the Nebraska scoring with a one-yard touchdown run and Dave Schneider added a 34-yard field goal.

Loneragan hit Sid Lewis with a 35-yard touchdown pass to lessen the severity of the loss a bit.

Trudeau looks to replace Eason

Jack Trudeau

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (UPI) — Ken Cruz has moved up to the No. 2 position in the contest to replace Tony Eason as the University of Illinois' starting quarterback this season, Illini Coach Mike White said Tuesday.

White said sophomore Jack Trudeau will continue to get 60 percent of the practice time and Cruz will call 40 percent of the plays as the team prepares for the season opener at Missouri Sept. 10. Previously, Cruz and Kris Jenner were splitting the remaining time 20-20.

"Trudeau is a very heady ball player, a good arm and a lot of poise," White said of his No. 1 choice. "Jack carries himself like a Big Ten quarterback. When it comes time, he will be all right."

On his decision to eliminate Jenner, White told reporters participating in the Big Ten skywriters' tour Cruz's performance since camp opened Aug. 16 was the deciding factor.

TRUDEAU IS A prep standout from Livermore, Calif., and Cruz is a transfer student from San Francisco Junior College, keeping the California quarterback tradition since White arrived in 1980 alive. Dave Wilson was a transfer from Fullerton Junior College in Calif., and Eason was a transfer student from American River College in Sacramento.

While the passing game received most of the attention during Eason's tenure, White has promised more balance this season between the run and the pass. Dwight Beverly and Thomas Rooks will be running out of a two-back offense, White said.

"Beverly and Rooks are probably the best offensive players on the team," White said. "Beverly and Rooks will run with the ball, we know that. Wide receiver is still a question mark."

At wide receiver, Mitchell Brookins was a standout during Saturday's major scrimmage and White was pleased.

"MITCHELL BROOKINS grows every day at receiver," White said. "He's got some talent."

But White said Brookins still needs experience to make the adjustment from running back to wide receiver.

White feels confident about his tight end Tim Brewster, who is one of the few returning receivers. Brewster caught 46 passes for 550 yards last year.

"Tim Brewster is one of our key people," White said. "This is the league of the tight end and he's ours."

Experience on the squad is heavily in favor of the defense. Illinois' four linemen and three linebackers all will be seniors.

With a new quarterback and new receivers, White said he knows Illinois is not among the favorites to take the Big Ten title, but it's a position he doesn't mind.

"We like our position, overlooked and underrated," he said.

Wildcats

"We have six seniors that are outstanding prospects, and that leadership will filter down."

In other words, Northwestern is beginning to look like a football team again — completely equipped with veterans and depth.

"I think we're going to approach the depth you need to play in this conference," Green said. "We'll have reached the depth we want when we have depth in upperclassmen. That may be just one year away."

GREEN SAID there is an outside chance that one or two freshmen out of his recruiting class will start.

"If the players accept the challenge of competition, they'll keep the freshmen on the bench," Green said. "The freshmen have three years — an investment to get better."

Green said although Northwestern is a passing team, all successful teams play good defense. The Wildcats will have to play solid defense against the run to keep them in the game in the third and fourth quarters, according to Green.

"Our players are better experienced, so they will be better players. I think we'll be much improved in rush defense," he said. "Not only do we have everybody back, they are bigger, stronger and a year older. I'm impressed with our talent — they have grown up with their positions, and they remember two years when they were getting pushed around."

THE PUSHING AROUND might not be over yet, however. The Cats, inspired by their new slogan "Go Wild", open at Dyche Stadium with nationally ranked Washington — a squad notorious for airing the enthusiasm out of opposing teams. Northwestern then travels to Syracuse before starting off the Big Ten season at Indiana.

And now because teams like Michigan State, Minnesota and Ohio State said they will regard the Wildcats as a viable competitor, Northwestern's victories will no longer be considered upsets. Green said he wants to be competitive in the Big Ten again.

"I know that there are a lot of people in the Chicago area, and if they want to see one of the top three of four passing teams in the country play," he said, "they need only come to Dyche Stadium... we'll have some awfully exciting football players participating in one of the country's best leagues."

knee) my senior year. When I was in the hospital, the head coach sent me a get-well card and that really meant a lot to me."

The 1983 Hawkeye Action Guide lists Kevin as both a quarterback and a wide receiver. He says he has no preference to which position he plays, but Ronnie believes he'd rather play quarterback.

"He started as a running back in high school and they switched him to quarterback," Ronnie said. "I think he really would rather be playing at quarterback." Kevin believes he'll redshirt this season, but we all know what happened last season when Ronnie came out of nowhere to star for the Hawkeys. Kevin says his goal is to get out of his brother's shadow and make a name for himself.

If he contributes anywhere near as much as Ronnie has to the team, the name of Kevin Harmon will have no trouble being recognized by Hawkeye fans.

This view of Cape Horn on the Columbia River on the Oregon-Washington border was photographed by Carleton E. Watkins in 1877. A new book appraising Watkins' work has judged him to be one of the true greats of scenic/landscape photography.

Film caught Watkins' vision before his light was spent

By James Kaufmann
Special to The Daily Iowan
Carleton E. Watkins: Photographer of the American West, by Peter Palmquist. Foreword by Martha A. Sandweiss. University of New Mexico Press, 1983, 234 pp.

IN 1910, when Carleton E. Watkins was 81 years old, his family had him committed to the Napa State Hospital for the Insane at Imola, Calif. "It was convenient," according to his daughter, Julia. Even though Watkins lived another six years, his shrewish wife immediately began referring to herself as a widow. That must have been convenient, too.

Four years before his commitment, Watkins had suffered the total destruction of his life's work. The great San Francisco earthquake of 1906 "wrecked his place... and the subsequent fire consumed everything." Actually, Watkins did not see the disaster — his eyesight had begun to fail in the 1890s, and for the last dozen years of his life, a life based on seeing the American West with extraordinary acuity, he was blind.

FATE WAS CERTAINLY not kind to Watkins — arguably the best of many fine 19th-century photographers of the country's diverse Western landscapes — but Peter Palmquist's Carleton E. Watkins: Photographer of the American West, and the large exhibition for which it serves as a sort of pepi-catalog, should at least assure that Watkins' work will find its proper niche in history.

Like so many photographers, Watkins met with the medium by chance. Born in Oneonta, N.Y., in 1829, Watkins went to California in 1851. Because of the gold rush, San Francisco had grown from a quiet town of roughly 500 in 1847 to a bustling city of 33,000 by the time Watkins arrived, and he joined those seeking a "main chance." He then met R.H. Vance, who needed an operator in his San Jose gallery.

Watkins hopped on the stagecoach and soon started work; the fact that "he knew absolutely nothing in regard to photographic processes" apparently did not matter.

In 1856, Watkins moved into James M. Ford's portrait studio and "specialized in baby portraiture." He also began doing the landscape work for which he became famous at this time. "His earliest surviving landscape photograph," Palmquist reports, "was taken as evidence in an 1858 dispute involving the Guadalupe quicksilver mine near San Jose... Watkins was asked 'Who selected the point from which you took that view?'" and his reply amounts to a credo. "I did myself," Watkins said. "I went to the ground and when there selected the spot which would give me the best view."

WATKINS PROCEEDED to take many, many photographs from that "spot which would give (him) the best view" over the next four decades. He photographed Yosemite in 1861, 1865-66, 1872, 1875, 1878-79 and 1881 — and "some members of Congress even used his images as office decor," according to Palmquist. Watkins also photographed the New Almaden quicksilver mine, Oregon, the Columbia River, Mt. Shasta in California, scenes of Arizona mining operations, Washington's Puget Sound, Yellowstone National Park, Southern California agriculture and the homes of the wealthy in San Francisco. The list of places visited by Watkins and his cameras is lengthy.

There were many family photographs of the American West in the 19th century. T.H. O'Sullivan, Isaiah West Taber, W.H. Jackson and Edward Muybridge, among others, produced quality work, but it's still hard to see that any of their work was superior to Watkins'. His images are pictorially beautiful and at the same time topographically exacting, and his dedication to his craft was exemplary. And even though a cruel twist of fate deprived him of his sight, what he had already created before darkness fell testifies to his greatness.

Television

On cable: Time Bandits (HBO, 8 p.m.) is a fun piece of flippery from several charter members of the Monty Python Gang, most notably animator Terry Gilliam. Also on hand are Sean Connery as an affable Agamemnon, David Warner as the Evil Genius and Sir Ralph Richardson as the Supreme Being. Absence of Malice (Cinemax, 8 p.m.) will appeal to the more serious minded viewer, concerning as it does the uses and abuses of the immense power of the Fourth Estate — the media, don't you know. Paul Newman stars as the man falsely under legal scrutiny due to the libellous story reported (and stuck to) by journalist Sally Field. As an added bonus, Star Bored... er, Wars is on again tonight on HBO at 11:45. Rather Forcing the point, aren't they?

On the networks: The Trial of Billy Jack (CBS, 7 p.m.) is a rather embarrassing triquel to the original (and excellent) Billy Jack. This 1973 ho-hummer, while it stars the two originals (Tom Laughlin and Dolores Taylor), involves Mr. Jack fighting back against the law — kind of a contradictory message. Spend your time instead on this week's segment of "Writer's World" (IPBN, 8:30 p.m.), which this time around concerns itself with the story of novelist E.L. Doctorow (Ragtime) and his progression as a mythmaker.

Laurence Olivier and Jackie Gleason star in HBO's Mr. Halpern facts about themselves and the woman they both loved when and Mr. Johnson as two men who discover some surprising they confer in a restaurant after meeting at her funeral.

HBO team of Gleason and Olivier deliver an hour's worth of tedium

By Merwyn Grote
Staff Writer

HBO, IN ITS DRIVE to produce original programming, must have considered it quite a coup to sign Sir Laurence Olivier and Jackie Gleason to co-star in an original two-character drama. It is unfortunate that the cable network didn't find a more vibrant project for them than "Mr. Halpern and Mr. Johnson," which premiered on Aug. 28 and will be playing on the network this afternoon at 1 p.m. and again at 5 a.m. Thursday, and then throughout September.

The drama begins nicely enough at the funeral of Mrs. Halpern in a Jewish cemetery in the Bronx. As Joe Halpern (Olivier) stands by his wife's freshly dug grave, he is joined by a stranger, Ernest Johnson (Gleason), a dapper-looking man who requests the other's permission to place a single flower at the site. Curious about this strange man, Halpern remarks that he must not be Jewish, since it is custom not to bring flowers to a Jewish funeral. "It is a time of heartbreak," he says. "Why pretend otherwise with a display of beauty?" Still, he is moved by the gesture, and the two leave the cemetery together talking like friends.

UNFORTUNATELY, what follows does not live up to the simple warmth of the introduction. Halpern and Johnson meet for drinks six weeks later in an elegant bar. Here Johnson explains his presence at the funeral: he had an affair with the late Mrs. Halpern some 40 years earlier, before her marriage to Halpern, and had maintained a platonic "thrice-a-year" relationship with her ever since. Halpern reacts with disbelief, shock and anger — and too much of

Television

What is supposed to follow is a game of cat-and-mouse that reveals long-buried truths about the men, Mrs. Halpern and their intertwining relationships. What does develop, unfortunately, is an hour's worth of tedium. Instead of a dramatic recreation of the past, the two men simply sit and talk... and talk... and talk.

Both men reveal little things about Mrs. Halpern that the other did not know. But these surprises are presented in such a bland, enervated fashion that they seem petty and insignificant. Lionel Goldstein's teleplay is chaotic — it never builds to any emotional peaks or a powerful climax. He just presents Johnson to the audience as an immovable object that rambles and Mr. Halpern as an irrational object that babbles erratically.

SUCH PRODUCTION problems could overcome if the actors and director were to allow the characters to come to life — but that never happens. There is a certain pleasing irony that the usually loutish Gleason is cast as the dapper gentleman and the controlled, refined Lord Larry is the hysterical immigrant. But that is the only novelty in their performances.

Gleason's Johnson works well within a limited range, but the character is so limited that it is virtually a one-note performance. But Olivier's Halpern is so overwrought it borders on the ridiculous. The character is just an extension of the old father that Olivier played in the atrocious Neil Diamond film The Jazz Singer. The English actor's wildly gestured and mugged portrayal is a vexation that is compounded by the fact that he seems to be constantly — and bafflingly — searching for his cue-cards.

Their dialogues are poorly paced; it is clear that the actors are waiting for their cues before they deliver their lines. It is as if they are still in early rehearsals rather than performing for the final production. Ultimately the problem with "Mr. Halpern and Mr. Johnson" is not that it is so badly done, but that it is so inconsequential. What the two men say about life, love, friendship and old age is either elided or so obvious that to say it at all is almost redundant.

It is disheartening that HBO could invest the time and money in a project that so totally wastes Olivier. It is well known that he is not well and has been taking on inferior projects to raise money to leave his family a financial as well as an artistic legacy. This has made critics sympathetic and forgiving about many of his recent films and performances. Yet Olivier is a legendary actor whose talents must not be taken lightly. He deserves far better than this... and so do we.

Inspiring vocals, lyrics on 'Lifeline'

By Steve Horowitz
Staff Writer

Holly Near and Ronnie Gilbert, Lifeline, Redwood Records, RR404

RONNIE GILBERT was the sole female member of the original Weavers, that wonderful folk group of the '50s whose string of hits included "Goodnight Irene," "Tzena, Tzena" and "On Top of Old Smokey."

If this sounds like tame stuff, one should remember that the Weavers have the dubious distinction of being the first musicians blacklisted during the McCarthy era for alleged anti-American activities. The once popular quartet ("Goodnight Irene" still holds the record for most weeks at number one on the American charts with 13) was commercially ruined at the height of their career. They could no longer secure a studio contract or decent recording dates.

Gilbert is just as radical as ever and in fine voice on her latest live effort with Holly Near, Lifeline. The title comes from the refrain of the first song on the album, which is about the life of Harriet Tubman, who helped run the Underground Railway during the Civil War. Other tunes concern Sacco and Vanzetti, Stephen Biko and the Spanish Civil War. This is music for the politically aware.

Records

By titling the record Lifeline, Gilbert and Near imply that its function is to give hope to those alienated individuals, isolated from others of the same persuasion, who wonder where the values of feminism, humanism and socialism can be found in contemporary society and its music. The album succeeds at its task, as the women's inspiring vocals and stimulating material are a pleasure to hear. Unlike so many discs these days that are technically perfect and intellectually vapid, Lifeline is never boring. It surprises and delights the listener in everything from its sound quality (better than most studio albums) to the talented backup musicianship of Jeff Langley's punchy piano playing and Carrie Barton's thumping electric bass.

SOME MIGHT mistakenly call this "women's music" because it was produced by an all-female recording company and many of the songs are specifically about women. But this would be a misconception — it reduces the artistry to mere propaganda, and Lifeline is much more. It is for all people: male and female, gay and straight, black, brown, red and white.

Not all of the songs are political. Near sings a medley of love songs which includes "Stormy Weather," "Come Rain or Come Shine," "People Will Say We're in Love" and "For Me and My Gal." Gilbert croons two tunes about growing older, "Isabel" and "The Activity Room." But the best tunes are the most radical. Their tender duet for eight missing women in Chile, "Hay Una Mujer Desaparecida," "Two Good Arms," concerning the dignity of the martyred Sacco and Vanzetti, and Woody Guthrie's classic ballad of migrant life, "Pastures of Plenty," are among the highlights. They also do a rousing rendition of "Goodnight Irene."

If you are tired of the current crap on the radio, bored by the old new wave, MOR and AOR alike, this album will serve as a welcome alternative to the conventional fare. Gilbert and Near offer relief from the empty airwaves of the '80s by exuberantly expressing themselves rather than conforming to commercial standards. If you are looking for something different, both serious and pleasant, Lifeline is it.

Former Iowa City bandleader dies

Larry Barrett, a former resident of Iowa City whose orchestra entertained thousands of people in the Midwest during the 1940s and 1950s, died Monday after a brief illness at the Veterans Administration Hospital in Washington, D.C. He was 62. "He was an outstanding talent," said Bill Meardon, an Iowa City attorney who played with Barrett during the 1940s. Barrett attended the UI during the 1940s where he was a prominent band leader, musician (he played the trumpet) and composer. Barrett started his own band, called Larry Barrett and his Orchestra, and toured the Midwest until the mid-1950s.

In 1956, Barrett became a radio announcer and assistant program director for WSUI and KSUI, the two Iowa City public radio stations. During his radio career, Barrett was best known for a program called "The Book Shelf" and a Saturday morning program that satirized rock music called "Rock and Roll." "He was a fixture in this town on WSUI," said Dee Norton, professor and associate chair of the UI Department of Psychology, and a long-time friend of Barrett. "He was a real genuine character who had a wide span of knowledge about music." Barrett also wrote about music for several magazines and newspapers, including The Daily Iowan. In 1970, Barrett left Iowa City and went to Washington, D.C. where he became the music critic for the Washington Star. Barrett was hospitalized with a kidney ailment in July of this year and died Monday after slipping into a coma. Barrett is survived by his mother, Lucille, three sons, one daughter and a granddaughter. Services for Barrett will be held at the Steink Funeral home in Galena, Ill., Thursday at 10:30 a.m.
