Schlafly still owed for UI lecture

By Kirk Brown
Staff Writer

Phyllis Schlafly, a nationally-known political activist whose lecture at the UI last spring raised considerable controversy, today confirmed she has not yet been paid for her lecture.

In a telephone interview with The Daily Iowan Schlafly said she has not received any money "from the university's student lecture committee."

"I can't believe it," Schlafly said. "I have written numerous letters to the committee but so far I haven't received any money."

Jeffrey Renander, a member of the UI student group Students for Traditional American Freedoms that co-sponsored the lecture with the UI Lecture Committee, said he believes "the (UI) administration has pulled a fast one on us."

RENANDER SAID the lecture committee agreed to pay $1,250 towards Schlafly's honorarium with the other $1,000 of her fee coming from a grant by the Young Americans Foundation. So far neither group has met its commitment, he said.

Tom Fessenmeyer, an advisor for the UI Lecture Committee, said the committee has received letters from Schlafly asking for "$1,250 to pay for her honorarium" but said the committee is planning on paying her "about $167 total."

Fessenmeyer said the committee is not going to pay the rest of Schlafly's fee because "that is all the money that was allocated."

"The lecture committee entertained an application from STAF and decided to give them $1,250 to help pay for her visit and lecture," he said.

FESSEMEYER POINTED out that STAF officials never came to see him about getting the money, despite receiving a letter instructing them to.

"It is a standard procedure for representatives of the group to come and talk to me about how they can get the money that was given to their group," Fessenmeyer said. "But no one from STAF ever came to see me. After awhile I just began to pay some of the incidental expenses for the lecture from their grant."

Those incidental expenses, including rental of the Main Lounge at the Union, set-up costs for the lecture, Schlafly's hotel room at the Iowa House and the extensive security at the event, ended up costing "over $1,000 of the $1,250 the committee said they would give to the group."

RENANDER CLAIMED he "never was aware of any letter" being sent to the STAF office. "Of the $1,250 that was supposed to be set aside for her honorarium more than $700 was paid to the university to cover

City moves to regain FAA funds

By Carlos Trevino
Staff Writer

The Iowa City Airport Commission is hoping to get back "into good graces" with the Federal Aviation Administration following Monday night's informal council meeting, Mayor Mary Neuhauser said.

Councilors also said they would be ready to vote on possibly granting R-2 residential zoning for an apartment development at 521 Kirkwood Avenue and made final preparations for a public hearing on the city's proposed fair rent ordinance, the final item scheduled for tonight's formal council meeting.

After re-aligning their priorities to correct a violation of FAA safety regulations that occurred when the council allowed development of two two-story, multi-unit apartment complexes in the clear zone of Runway 17, councilors said they were hopeful the FAA would grant the airport funds.

Those funds, Airport Commission Chairman Emmitt George said, could then be used to extend Runway 24 because "they (the FAA) seem to be as interested as the commission in solving our problem."

THE CITY would be required to purchase 25 acres of land, purchase an additional 75.5 acres of easements surrounding the landing runway clear zone, and then begin construction to extend the runway, according to an airport commission proposal submitted last week.

That report also stated the cost would be $103,500 to the airport and $225,000 to the city, while the FAA could kick in 90 percent — nearly $3 million — of the total funding necessary to finish the project, "which fits our master plan," George said.

Neuhauser said purchasing the acreage and easements "will get us into compliance," but "that doesn't mean we'll get any money" from the FAA.

George said the FAA has shown an interest in correcting the airport's See Council, page 6

Foreign policy issues unite lawmakers

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Republican and Democratic leaders urged Congress Monday to condemn the Soviet Union for shooting down a Korean airliner and voiced support for President Reagan's decision to keep U.S. Marines in Lebanon.

There were strong indications from top members of both parties they want a "new partnership" with the White House on foreign policy issues in the face of growing tensions around the globe.

Senate leaders, acting only moments after returning from a five-week summer vacation, filed a harshly-worded resolution calling for "appropriate sanctions" against the Soviet Union, demanding an apology and compensation for the 269 victims of the attack on a Korean Air Lines jumbo jet.

A similar resolution was to be offered in the House later, and the measures were certain of approval — probably by unanimous vote — later in the week.

The leaders indicated strong bipartisan support for keeping the Marines in Lebanon, at least for the present, but rank-and-file demands grew that Reagan invoke the War Powers Resolution to provide for a congressional review.

Sen. Charles Mathias, R-Md., introduced a resolution that would allow Reagan to keep the Marines on duty for six more months but require congressional approval of an extension beyond that date.

THE AIRLINER incident and the fighting in Lebanon appeared to forge a bipartisan front on foreign policy in Congress and closer relations with the White House.

The coming-together could help Reagan in his foreign policy and arms negotiation initiatives, and might provide the votes he needs for such controversial items as the MX missile and the production of nerve gas.

House Speaker Thomas O'Neill, after talking with Reagan chief of staff

James Baker, spoke of "showing a united front between members of Congress and the White House."

O'Neill, Senate Republican leader Howard Baker and Democratic leader Robert Byrd were firm in their positions that Reagan should not withdraw the Marines from Lebanon — despite the increased hazards.

Both O'Neill and Byrd have advocated a Reagan report to Congress under the war powers act.

UI tabs Ellis finance vice president

After more than 10 months of considering approximately 260 candidates from across the nation for the position of UI vice president for finance, the search committee has again turned to a faculty member from the UI College of Law to serve as the UI's chief financial officer.

UI Law Professor Dorsey D. Ellis, 45, has been selected to replace Randall Benzanson, who announced his resignation in mid-October of 1982, saying he wanted to return to his "first love" — teaching.

Bezanson said Monday night it has become a tradition at the UI to choose a vice president for finance who has a "clear academic record." The two men who held the office before Bezanson also came from the ranks of the UI faculty.

The person in charge of finances must maintain a "clear understanding of the academic mission of the university," Bezanson said. "This is a distinguishing strength here."

Ellis admits he somewhat regrets giving up teaching. "I love to teach. I've spent the last 15 years of my professional life as a teacher and a scholar. I will miss that very much."

But he said he is ready to accept the challenge of the new position. Despite the stiff challenges facing the UI's financial officer at a time when Gov. Terry Branstad has announced 2.8 percent across-the-board cuts from this year's budget and the state Board of Regents is being forced to again ask the Iowa Legislature for next year's appropriations, Bezanson said, "It's a wonderful position."

"I ENJOYED IT very much, but I've been doing it for five years. New perspectives can always be brought into it. It's extremely rewarding, challenging and at times, frustrating."

Ellis said it was "premature" to make any substantive comments on the financial straits the UI is in. "I'm in the process of learning about the job." Bezanson said he has confidence in Ellis. "I think he will fill it very ably, even more ably than I have filled it."

Ellis was more reserved. "I think Randy Bezanson has done an absolutely tremendous job. It's going to take a super-human effort to follow in his footsteps. That's a bit humbling."

The student will be teaching the teacher when Bezanson instructs Ellis in the intricacies of the UI's finances. Ellis taught Bezanson when he was a See Ellis, page 6

3 more Marines injured in attack on Lebanon post

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Rebels attacked a key Lebanese army post guarding the Shouf mountain approaches to Beirut Monday and wounded three U.S. Marines in a separate mortar attack as 2,000 Marine reinforcements arrived off the coast.

"A dozen 120mm mortar shells fired from the east landed in our area. We did not respond and had three Marine injuries," a U.S. Marine spokesman said.

State-run Beirut radio said the shelling started a huge fire in a hangar at the airport.

Two of the Marines were to be transferred for treatment to the U.S.S. Iwo Jima offshore. One suffered a dislocated shoulder, the other shrapnel injuries to his hands. The third returned to duty, the Marine spokesman said.

Four U.S. Marines have been killed and 28 injured since the violence erupted in Lebanon two weeks ago.

At the United Nations, the embattled Beirut government of President Amin Gemayel appealed to the U.N. Security Council to declare a cease-fire and call for the withdrawal of "all illegitimate" foreign forces from Lebanese soil.

The Council was called into urgent session to consider the fighting between Syrian-backed Druze Moslems and Christian militia forces that erupted nine days ago when Israel redeployed its forces to southern Lebanon.

NEGOTIATIONS for a cease-fire in Lebanon broke down as the Lebanese government balked at Syrian conditions.

U.S. Presidential envoy Robert McFarlane, reiterating "full U.S. commitment to help Lebanon," left for Saudi Arabia, which has been trying to mediate a solution to the conflict with the Syrians.

Three U.S. warships with 2,000 Marines aboard arrived off the Lebanese coast Monday to back up the 1,200 Marine peacekeepers in Beirut, part of the four-nation multinational peacekeeping force.

The U.S. Marine Commander Col. Timothy Geraghty said there were no plans to bring the reinforcements ashore. He added the reinforced peacekeeping force should give "Syria cause to pause before taking any direct involvement in attacking the Lebanese army."

An International Red Cross convoy reached 25,000 to 40,000 refugees in the besieged central Shouf town of Deir al Qamar, 13 miles southeast of Beirut.

The Red Cross also said it recovered the body of Canadian television correspondent Clark Todd from the nearby battered town of Kfar Matta. He was the first journalist killed in the Lebanese war.

THE 400 LEBANESE soldiers defending the strategic town of Souq al Garb came under attack twice Monday.

The second rebel Druze Moslem-Palestinian guerrilla offensive started late in the afternoon with heavy machine-gun fire from three sides after a day of intermittent shelling, security sources said.

After a similar pattern of softening up Saturday, a devastating hand-to-hand hatchet attack decimated a whole army company.

Souq al Garb straddles a crossroads through which the rebels can link up two fronts of their battle. It also is the army's last line of defense before the rebels reach the presidential palace, overlooking Beirut 3 miles to the west.

"The army destroyed vehicles advancing toward Souq al Garb," said Beirut state radio, admitting the attack.

In Jerusalem, a close aide to Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin threatened to strike at Palestinian guerrillas returning to the Beirut area alongside Druze Moslem militiamen.

Israeli military sources estimate 1,700 Palestinians from several guerrilla groups within the Palestine Liberation Organization are taking part in the fight against the Christian Phalange forces and the Lebanese Army.

The return of the guerrillas to the Beirut area comes a year after Israel's bombardment and siege of the Lebanese capital, which forced the PLO to evacuate the city.

Neuhauser won't seek re-election; she feels it's 'time for a change'

By Carlos Trevino
Staff Writer

After nine years on the Iowa City Council, Mayor Mary Neuhauser announced Monday she will not seek re-election this November saying that "I think it's just time for a change."

Neuhauser, 50, said she didn't know what she would be doing following the expiration of her term as mayor but said "I'm going to sit this election out, completely. I have too many other things to do."

Two other members of the Iowa City Council, Larry Lynch and John Balmer, have said they will not seek re-election. Councilor David Perret is vacationing and has not announced his plans yet.

WILLIAM J. AMBRISCO, Larry Baker and James Schwab have announced their candidacies for council seats. Two at-large seats, held now by Balmer and Lynch, the District A seat held by Perret and the District C seat held by Neuhauser are up for election this year.

Ambrisco is the president of the Welt-Ambrisco Insurance company. Baker is a UI Teaching Assistant and an Iowa City Council Planning and Zoning commissioner. Schwab is a research assistant in Urban and Regional Planning.

"It's no big secret that I've decided not to run," Neuhauser said. "I said five years ago that once I got my law degree I wouldn't be on the council," she said.

Neuhauser received her law degree last spring from the UI College of Law.

"I think it was obvious that she was not going to run for re-election," Balmer said. "She's served nine long years and would like to try other endeavors."

Balmer said Neuhauser "has been a plus

MARY NEUHAUSER
MAYOR

Mary Neuhauser

for Iowa City ... she'll be missed."

NEUHAUSER, who is currently the president of the Iowa League of Municipalities, said she delayed her announcement because supporters tried to convince her to seek another term.

"I intend to keep up full steam to tie up a few loose ends still left for the present council," Neuhauser said, "before we get at least three new councilors."

Neuhauser said she hopes to resolve the city's problem at the Iowa City Airport, where two apartment complexes were constructed in the path of a runway clear zone. The construction violated Federal Aviation Administration safety rules and has blocked the city's eligibility for FAA grants to improve the airport.

NEUHAUSER SAID the current council will also deal with new city zoning ordinances, establish a financial plan for the Iowa City Sewer Treatment plant and also gain a franchise with the Iowa-Illinois Gas and Electric Company.

"We also need an agreement with Johnson County on urban fringe development," Neuhauser said, that would establish guidelines "on how the outer fringes of the city develop."

Neuhauser said the most important project undertaken while she has been a member of the council was "definitely redevelopment of the downtown area."

"THAT'S BEEN the biggest change ... it's really changed the face of Iowa City." The redevelopment included the pedestrian mall and the retaining of the Blackhawk Mini-park.

Neuhauser also said the new Iowa City Public Library and senior citizen housing was a "major task" the city has undertaken in her years with the council.

"I can certainly say that she's been a fine member of the council and an exceptional leader," Balmer said, adding "she's also been a well qualified spokesperson for Iowa City."

Neuhauser said she would miss both "being in the middle of the fray," on many issues facing the council and "working with the other councilors and our extraordinary city staff."

"I hope I can continue to be helpful to them," she said.

Corporate gifts aid United Way funding

By John Tieszen
Staff Writer

The United Way of Johnson County has raised $58,000 in its first week of fund raising for 1983, according to Director Mary Anne Volm.

The organization, which sponsors 33 human service agencies in the county, hopes to raise $400,000 by Thanksgiving, Volm said.

"It's been going very well. There were a lot of corporate gifts," she said.

This year's $400,000 goal is 15 percent more than last year's goal because United Way now sponsors three more agencies, Volm said. The new agencies are the Iowa City Hospice, the Rape Victim Advocacy Program and Independent Living.

THE HOSPICE PROGRAM assists cancer victims who return to their homes and Independent Living assists handicapped persons who also want to live at home.

United Way has approximately 1,000 volunteers soliciting donations, Volm said. "Many of these people go door to door" seeking donations, she said. "We break districts down geographically and a volunteer usually has no more than seven contacts to meet."

"With Iowa City businesses, we emphasize that we give the money to 33 local human services," she said.

After the money is collected, the Planning and Allocation Division of United Way allocates the funds to the different agencies. The division staff is drawn from "every sector of Johnson County" including UI personnel, farmers and blue collar workers.

VOLM SAID there will probably be an increase in United Way services in the future. "Sadly, there will be a lot of expansion. We are committed to keeping programs from being cut," she said. Government and state budget cuts will increase the need for United Way.

"There is the problem with government cutbacks. The private sector is being asked to keep up where the government dollars are not there. It is a trend I don't think will stop. Also, because of the state de-institutionalization policy, there are a lot of people in Johnson County who are not employable and we try to get them worked into the community," Volm said.

THE STATE'S de-institutionalization policy allows for people in state institutions that are not severely handicapped to be put back into their local community. Some of them are older and have no family and cannot find jobs. "These are the people that fall between the cracks," Volm said.

County residents are making up for the loss of government funds however, she said. "People are more willing to donate than before. People know that times are hard and while they don't give a lot, they give something."

The organization's main responsibility is to raise money for the agencies it sponsors, Volm said. "We are also concerned with the quality of the agencies and their services. We are very tuned into what is going on in the whole spectrum of the community," Volm said.

United Way has been in Johnson County for about 20 years, she said.

Regents foresee tuition disputes

By Janet Marie Sims
Staff Writer

Tuition increases will probably be one of the most controversial items on the state Board of Regents' agenda, when it meets in Iowa City Wednesday. The regents are also expected to approve the appointment of Rex Montgomery as Acting Head of the UI Department of Anatomy effective Oct. 1. He will fill the position left vacant by Terence Williams, who stepped down in August amid a tenure dispute within his department involving UI Assistant Anatomy Professor Asa Black.

The regents approved a tuition rate increase of 6 percent last year as part of a two-year plan but did not place a specific figure on what the rate increase would be for the second year. A figure of 7 percent was estimated as the probable increase.

"I expect that the recommendations that I present to the board in October will exceed the average of 7 percent originally assumed for budget purposes in fiscal year 1985," R. Wayne Richey, regents executive secretary, wrote to the board.

In 1981 the board asked for tuition increases on a yearly basis instead of setting the increase for a two-year period as it had done the past 10 years.

NATIONALLY, tuition rates have increased by 56 percent for public institutions during the period of 1977-1983 while tuition at the UI, Iowa State University, and the University of Northern Iowa have increased only about 40 percent over the same period of time.

"Tuition rates at the regents universities have increased by less than the growth in the Consumer Price Index since 1977-1978..." the regents September docket stated.

The board will use the following criteria, described in the "Principles and Guidelines for Establishing Tuition Rates at Regent Institutions" to determine how much tuition will go up for the 1984-1985 academic year:

- The inflation rate.
- A comparison of tuition rates at other institutions in the Midwest.
- A tuition rate that takes into consideration the cost of instruction.
- A tuition rate that provides a higher cost for graduate and professional programs than undergraduate programs.
- A limit on tuition raises from $50 to $150 for residents and $100 to $300 for nonresidents.
- Allocation of a considerable portion of income generated by tuition raises to student aid.
- The total cost for the student.

LAST YEAR when a tuition increase was proposed, UI students protested the proposal, but their actions did not change the board's decision.

"We don't want to see another large increase in tuition," said Tom Palmer, President of the UI Collegiate Association.

Palmer said that there would be a long and hard look at any proposal for tuition increases. If we are not able to prevent increases we want to see tangible results, like faculty salary increases, more classroom space and a better faculty/student ratio.

Palmer said that there would be a representative from CAC and the Student Senate to speak in behalf of the students at the regents meeting.

Also, the regents are expected to approve Montgomery's appointment. Dr. Montgomery is a UI professor of biochemistry and associate dean for academic affairs in the UI College of Medicine. He is a member of Iowa's new High Technology Commission and has served on former Governor Robert Ray's High Technology Task Force.

Montgomery joined the UI staff in 1955, and if approved by the board will be acting head of the department of anatomy until a successor for Williams is chosen.

Benefit brings tales of abuses of Central Americans' rights

By Steve Sands
Special to The Daily Iowan

The Central American Solidarity Committee brought the issues of Latin America to Old Brick Sunday night in a benefit that raised more than $1,500 for needy people in that area.

The money raised from donations is targeted for three beneficiaries: Medical Aid for El Salvador, Committees of Solidarity with Central America's "Commitment" Belize Project, and a daycare center in Arica, Chile managed by nuns, a committee news release stated.

Medical Aid to El Salvador distributes medical supplies to liberated zones of the country where the leftist guerrillas have taken over and no government aid is given. Ed Asner, the TV star of "Lou Grant," is associated with this group.

The "Commitment" Belize Project gives food and medical supplies to refugee camps in Belize. Refugees come there from El Salvador and Guatemala.

The daycare center provides a sanctuary for Chileans to organize self-help projects and assemble without government intervention, because it is run by the church and considered holy ground, according to solidarity committee member Jack Roundy.

The committee stressed that the aid is going to people who are suffering from U.S. involvement in Latin America. It would like to see the removal of U.S. forces from the area.

"We just want to convey the impression that we are concerned to help the people who are in trouble, who are suffering as a result of the disruptions that are happening from both sides," Roundy said.

SPEECHES on Chile, El Salvador and medical improvements in Nicaragua highlighted the meeting. Copies of letters addressed to U.S. Senators Roger Jepsen and Charles Grassley and U.S. Rep. Cooper Evans complaining about U.S. policy in Central America were also handed out.

Speaking first, UI student Patricio Carrasco, related his experiences of being imprisoned and tortured in a Chilean jail during 1975-76. He spent 21 months in a concentration camp before his parents used their connections in the high military to get him released.

"I love my country and I would like to return," Carrasco said. His return would probably coincide with the removal of General Augusto Pinochet from power in the country. Pinochet took control 10 years ago after a coup successfully removed the democratically-elected government of President Salvador Allende.

Peaceful demonstrations marking the anniversary of the coup and dissatisfaction with Pinochet's rule have been marred by the deaths of nearly 40 people committed by the military.

Carrasco said that he believes the people will revolt against the government if a democratic process is not instituted soon in the country. "We hope there is a democratic opening. But unfortunately, one can speak with fascists in the only language they understand, the language of bullets," he said.

The nephew of El Salvadoran President Alvaro Magana, Arturo Revelo Magana, revealed why he left El Salvador in the second speech. After being shot by government troops while coming out of a church in San Salvador, the capital city, he decided to leave for the U.S.

THE EL SALVADORAN government's human rights abuses have been a major concern for the U.S., who is providing military aid to combat the leftist guerrillas. Murders by the government occur at a rate of 200 a month, according to Newsweek magazine, March 14, 1983.

Magana said he would like to see the U.S. get out of El Salvador. "The war is between those who love the country and those who are selling the country for U.S. interests," he said. The third presentation was given by three UI medical students and a nurse at the UI hospital. Maxine Weyant, Steve Konzen-Ohly, Kathy Konzen-Ohly, and Ann Broderick toured Nicaraguan medical facilities this summer and reported on the developments the government has made since 1979.

The Sandinista regime, which took over after the 42-year reign of Somoza, has made major medical advancements in a country that was lacking even primitive treatment, Konzen-Ohly said. Four national health campaigns and regional campaigns are being run by the government stressing everyone's right of medical treatment.

"The emphasis is on prevention, education, and early intervention," she said. Since 1979, the infant mortality rate has dropped from 12 percent to 8 percent. No cases of polio have been reported since 1981, something she says is very significant.

The $1,500 donated by people attending the benefit is the most the solidarity committee has collected at a benefit since the group's inception in 1980, said committee member Paul Dougan.

UI athlete files guilty plea; receives a fine for assault

By Patricia Thorn
Staff Writer

Jon Roehlk, a senior co-captain and starting guard on the Iowa football team, pleaded guilty Monday morning to assaulting former Hawkeye wrestler Harlan Kistler at Slater Hall last March.

According to Kistler's court complaint Roehlk, 22, "pounded" his head against a wall several times and then threw him onto the floor and "kept banging his head against it."

Kistler said he needed to be treated at the UI Hospital's emergency room for his injuries.

Roehlk pleaded guilty to criminal assault — a simple misdemeanor — before the trial was scheduled to begin. He was fined $27.50 and court costs and will pay restitution to Kistler in an as yet undetermined amount. The charge carries a maximum penalty of 30 days in jail or a $100 fine.

Roehlk has an honorable mention to the All-Big Ten football team last year. Kistler finished third in the 142-pound weight division in the 1983 NCAA tournament last year.

A Westchester, Iowa, man was arrested Sunday for public intoxication and two counts of possession, Johnson County District Court records stated.

Courts

LeRoy Steven Kelley, 33, was arrested in the downtown pedestrian mall by Iowa City police officers. The officers responded to a call from The Mill Restaurant that a man had left the restaurant without paying. After an employee of The Mill identified Kelley, officers noticed he "smelled of an alcoholic beverage, his eyes were bloodshot, his speech slurred, and his balance poor."

When they arrived at the Johnson County Jail, the officers discovered two plastic bags near Kelley on the seat of the police car. One bag contained a "green leafy substance." Tests identified the first bag's contents as marijuana. The second was said to contain three amphetamine capsules.

During a "pat down" search in the jail's elevator, an officer found another small plastic bag containing marijuana in Kelley's right shirt pocket.

Iowa hospitals sue Heckler

DES MOINES (UPI) — The Iowa Hospital Association filed suit in U.S. District Court Monday on behalf of its 70 city, county and non-profit hospitals, claiming Medicare regulations are unconstitutional and violate the Medicare Act.

U.S. Department of Health and Human Services Director Margaret Heckler was listed as sole defendant in the suit, which seeks "redress for arbitrary cost-shifting since 1979."

The complaint states hospitals are not adequately compensated by the Medicare program for patients who are either unable or unwilling to pay for hospital services.

The suit also says that in order for hospitals to remain solvent and provide quality care, they must recover costs from paying patients or private third-party payers. It points out the 5th Amendment forbids the taking of private property for public use without just compensation.

Association President Donald D. Dunn blamed the problems of hospitals on rising costs due to inflation, the aging of the population and the increasingly-expensive technology.

"The financial burden from these 20th-century phenomena to business, labor, industry and the self-insured family should not be further loaded by inequity in federal government payments."

Dunn said Iowa's hospitals do not have an endowment from which they can draw to cover losses from bad debts.

Under the Medicare regulations, hospitals are to recover "all necessary and proper expenses of an institution in the production of services."

District school board elections

School board ballots have new write-ins

By Robyn Griggs and Carlos Trevino Staff Writers

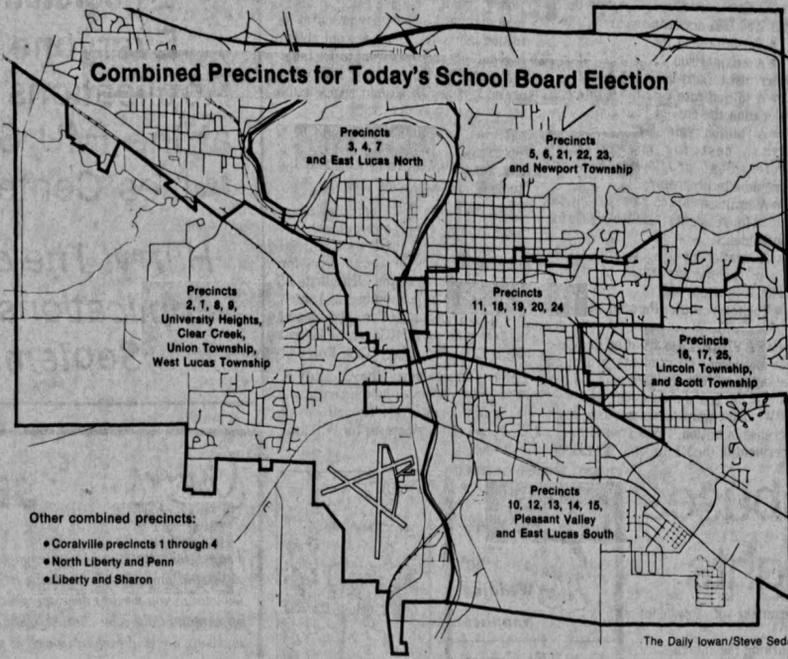

Voters in today's Iowa City School District Board of Directors election will have more candidates to choose from than they did last week when only two people were slated for the ballot — to fill two board vacancies.

Candidates Patrick Lumsden and Thomas Halliburton were the first two to announce their candidacies — which were unchallenged — until three people, Ellen Widiss, Karen "Dee" Vanderhoef and incumbent director David Wooldrik, joined the race as write-in candidates at the request of "interested citizens."

"A community like this one needs more than two candidates," said Sue Mandernach, president of the Iowa City Education Association.

The teachers' union voted not to endorse Halliburton or Lumsden and said their solicitation of candidates "is not an endorsement. We are just encouraging careful consideration of all the candidates, including write-ins," Mandernach said.

"I really think people were shocked that there were only two candidates,"

Other combined precincts: • Coralville precincts 1 through 4 • North Liberty and Penn • Liberty and Sharon

Mandernach said. "Now, we have an active candidacy for write-ins, which is highly unusual."

The polls will be open today from 7 a.m. until 8 p.m. Many of the regular polling places, are combined for the school board elections. Voters should check their voter identification cards, which will list their polling place for the school election.

Tom Stockett, Johnson County Auditor and Commissioner of Elections, said the poll workers have been given instructions to help the voters with any questions they have.

"It's a simple process to write-in and if voters wish to do it, they should ask the poll-worker," he said.

Wooldrik notes need for focus on future

By Robyn Griggs Staff Writer

David Wooldrik said he "meant it" when he announced in July he would not seek to regain his seat on the Iowa City School District Board of Directors, however, last week he was "kind of talked into" staging a write-in candidacy.

The incumbent was approached by members of the Iowa City Education Association, the business community, and some friends when they realized only two unchallenged candidates had entered the school board race.

"I was very surprised (at the lack of candidates)," Wooldrik said. "One of the reasons I announced early that I would not run was because it's very tough to beat an incumbent unless he has done something terrible. I thought if I announced early the flood gates would open for other candidates, but this didn't happen."

Wooldrik, manager of the Credit Bureau of Iowa City, filled an expired seat on the board last year. He is a graduate of City High School in Iowa City and earned his bachelor's degree from the UI in 1973.

HE IS PROUD of the Iowa City school district and believes it "stacks up pretty well" against others in the country.

He pointed this out in regard to the National Commission on Excellence in Education's report. "I think the report itself accomplished what it was supposed to accomplish — to get everybody thinking about education — but it was too broad," he said.

He said the report could not be of much help to each individual school system.

Wooldrik said the question of merit pay for teachers, brought out by the report, should be looked at closely.

"I'm in business for myself and when you're in business for yourself, you pay merit-wise," he said. "I'm not sure you can treat a school district like a business, but it is something that we should take a look at."

"I don't see it as penalizing any of the teachers, but rewarding them. I think some teachers are paranoid about this because they think they're not good teachers."

THE REPORT also suggested raising graduation requirements, something Wooldrik noted the Iowa City school district is beginning to do.

"Last year we increased the math requirement from one to two years, and I think we probably did that out of the need we saw arising from some students," he said.

Wooldrik believes the students' needs are most important, and the way to gauge them is to examine how well students who have graduated from the system are prepared.

"I think we've got a good school system, and I think we prepare kids real well for either the college scenario or the job market," he said.

Wooldrik believes, the district "definitely has to pass" the 67½-cent tax levy and is in favor of using it to eliminate student fees. "I would support elimination of the fees to get support for the levy," he said.

He also said he would be extremely careful if forced to eliminate programs because of Gov. Terry Branstad's proposed across-the-board state budget cut.

He said he would save academic programs before others.

"I think the reason people go to school is to get an education, not to play football or basketball," he said. "I'm an advocate of athletics, and I wouldn't like to see them cut, but if it was a question between cutting athletic programs or academics, I would cut athletics."

ICEA urges Vanderhoef to run

By Robyn Griggs Staff Writer

Write-in candidate for the Iowa City School Board of Directors Karen "Dee" Vanderhoef cited the "combination of the lack of candidates and many, many people saying, 'Could you do it? Would you do it?'" as her reason for conducting a last-minute campaign.

She sought the seat unsuccessfully in last year's election and had decided not to run again this year because of time commitments.

"In the middle of the summer, I had to make a decision, and I had a lot of commitments for late summer and early fall. I have time to serve now starting Oct. 1, and I have made the decision to run now," she said.

Vanderhoef was urged to run by members of the Iowa City Education Association because the organization wanted to "broaden the field," ICEA President Sue Mandernach said.

"Dee has been in attendance at nearly every meeting," she said.

"I have followed the school board for over 10 years," Karen Vanderhoef says, "and feel I have stayed in touch with what has happened in the school district."

"She's always been there and she's very well-informed."

Vanderhoef said that is one reason she is qualified for the position.

"I HAVE followed the school board for over 10 years and feel I have stayed in touch with what has happened in the school district," she said.

Vanderhoef, who earned her bachelor's degree from the UI in 1961, has been on the Area Council Parent-Teacher Association, the Superintendent's Round Table, the District-Wide Parent Organization Executive Committee, the Superintendent's Advisory Committee, and the Iowa City School District Survey Committee.

That experience will be helpful, she said, because "there are an awful lot of things that have to be reconciled now to get more quality education for fewer dollars."

Her highest priority, in light of Gov. Terry Branstad's proposed cuts in the state budget, is "to save education programs ... I think the 'support' kind of activities are the kinds of things that we'll have to cut back, whether it means a little less money for painting or touch-up."

The school system's need for money prompted her to "strongly support" the 67½-cent fund. "I think it's crucial that we re-vote this and get it for another 10 years," she said.

VANDERHOEF said the school system should be determining whether it is utilizing teachers to their full potential, but she is "open" on the question of merit pay.

"I want to look at the whole bit, work through it step-by-step, and then I will slowly accumulate an opinion," she said.

The school system should also "look very carefully at (academic) requirements, because we have a full spectrum of students." College preparatory classes would be impossible for students in the lower third of the student body to handle, she said.

Higher level classes and requirements do not need to be mandatory, but more college preparatory work could be done "through counselors and parent organizations," she said.

Widiss favors teacher pay raises

By Carlos Trevino Staff Writer

The first write-in candidate for the Iowa City School District Board of Directors to announce was Ellen Widiss, a "concerned and involved parent" who said, "I had my arm gently twisted and decided if I'm going to run, I should do it now."

Widiss, who was a member of the district superintendent's Parent Advisory Committee, said she has followed board activity for the past five years and has considered running for a director position in previous elections.

"I assumed there would be a full slate of candidates," Widiss said. "Friends who knew of my interest in the board asked me to run, so I decided Saturday (Sept. 3) that I should.

"IT WAS VERY discouraging to see only two candidates running," Widiss said. "Now, I'm glad I'm running and I'm very excited and committed to the candidacy," she said.

Widiss, who earned a bachelor's degree from Bryn Mawr College and a master's degree from Harvard in Regional Studies of the Soviet Union, said she believes her experience with special committees in the district makes her "better informed with the issues."

Widiss said it helps for candidates "to be informed of the issues over the years ... since they are continuing items the board has been dealing with."

ONE ISSUE that has dominated the news lately is the report by the National Commission on Excellence in Education to President Reagan. It is something that Widiss said "I'm aware of by reading reports and analyses from the Des Moines Register and the New York Times. I have tried to get my hands on that report, in order to study it further."

In the commission report, merit pay was cited as a way of rewarding good teachers, but Widiss said "I know the National Education Association is opposed to merit pay."

"It could lead to favoritism and there is a concern over what standards will be used and who would make judgements," Widiss said. "It's a hot issue and I'm not ready to commit myself to either side."

Widiss did say she would approve pay raises for teachers "if the budget would allow it."

ON THE ISSUE of raising graduation requirements, Widiss said she would not want to "set standards so stiff that some kids, no matter how hard they tried, wouldn't graduate, and drop out, which has long range consequences."

Widiss also said she would like to give good students "an opportunity to take four years of math, science and a language, but still have an opportunity to take elective courses."

In financial matters, Widiss said she favored voters' reapproving of the 67½-cent fund to pay for the district's physical plant needs and would oppose raising property taxes "unless it were a last alternative."

U.S. Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick, far right, and United Kingdoms Ambassador John Thomson vote in a meeting of the United Nations Security Council in favor of a resolution that "deeply deplored" the destruction of the KAL jumbo jet and called for a U.N. investigation of the incident. At left is Soviet Ambassador Oleg Troyanovsky who, seconds later, vetoed the resolution. The vote was 9-2, with four abstentions.

Russia vetoes U.N. resolution that 'deplores' plane destruction

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — The Soviet Union vetoed a Security Council resolution Monday that "deeply deplored" the destruction of Korean Air Lines Flight 007 by Soviet fighters and called for a U.N. investigation of the incident.

The United States, which sponsored the resolution, managed to secure enough support from allies for a 9-2 vote in the 15-member body, with four abstentions.

The United States, Britain, France, Netherlands, Malta, Zaire, Togo, Pakistan and Jordan voted for the resolution. China, Zimbabwe, Nicaragua and Guyana abstained. The Soviet Union and Poland voted against it.

The Soviet Union is one of five permanent members of the Council with the power to veto any resolution. The Soviet veto was its first since rejecting a U.S. call for sanctions against Iran over the hostage crisis in January 1980. The resolution "deeply deplored" the destruction of the KAL airliner with the loss of 269 lives 12 days ago.

IT WAS watered-down over the course of a week of closed door negotiations to attract as much support as possible.

In a last-minute concession to both the Soviet Union and the United States, a paragraph was inserted in the measure on the importance of territorial integrity and recognizing procedures for dealing with intruders.

A vote on the measure was postponed last Friday when the United States and Japan — the chief sponsors of the measure — realized they would not be able to muster enough votes for a strong show of support against a Soviet veto.

U.S. Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick rebuked the Soviet Union for defending its "indefensible act" and for being "contemptuous of the truth" and "callous toward human life." Soviet Ambassador Oleg Troyanovsky repeated Moscow's reasons for shooting down the airliner, including that it was on a "pre-planned" spy mission into Soviet territory while en route from New York to Seoul.

China, according to diplomatic sources, switched over the weekend from a yes vote to an abstention.

THE SOVIETS insist the reason they shot down the plane was because it intruded over Russian territory. The United States has charged the Russians ignored the recognized method of dealing with an intruder, such as forcing the plane to land.

Juggling international crises, the Council met in urgent session first on the Lebanese civil war, then on the Korean airliner incident.

Lebanon called for an immediate U.N. order to halt the fighting between Syrian-backed Druze and Christian militias and the withdrawal of "all illegitimate foreign forces" from the country.

Council

problem but could not make an official statement on the matter until Iowa City would "do what is satisfactory to get within good graces."

ERDAHL SAID the proposal and the strong possibility that the FAA may fund a major portion of the project is good, while Neuhouser said, "They're (FAA) asking for our commitment ... and it seems we're willing to make that commitment."

Neuhouser also said "it would be far more expensive if we didn't (follow the proposal)."

Councilors also said they are committed to voting on the rezoning of 521 Kirkwood Ave., which became a site of controversy earlier this year when owner Larry Rigler approached the city Planning and Zoning Commission asking that the 2.4 acre lot be rezoned so he could develop apartment complexes.

"I'm ready to vote on it," Balmer said. "I think we owe it to everyone to get it done."

The council heard a financial feasibility report conducted by Iowa City Planning and Zoning Commissioner Bruce Knight to determine the cost Rigler would incur building multi-unit, duplex and townhouse dwellings.

THE STUDY states that the cost per unit of a single-family duplex dwelling would be $42,263 per lot at a total cost of $338,100 if eight duplexes were constructed on the lot. The cost of each townhouse would be $55,500 and would total nearly $888,000 for 16 units.

Building a 34-unit apartment complex would cost $42,220 per unit, at a total cost of nearly $1.5 million. That construction could begin if Rigler is granted Planned Area Development zoning, which allows greater population density in a structure if the design meets city approval.

Although some people at the meeting protested that the study did not take into account profit and tax deductions, Neuhouser said "you can protest all you want, I am not instructing our staff to produce more and more alternatives."

"We've spent a lot of time on this and I think we're ready to make our decision," she said. "It's on the agenda. If it fails, it remains in its present zone." The property is now zoned for light industrial use.

Neuhouser also said she didn't "think it was fair" to discuss matters concerning the proposed fair rent ordinance because a public meeting on the matter would be part of the council's formal meeting tonight at 7:30.

"SINCE IT may go on the ballot," Neuhouser said, "this should be out in the open, so everyone involved can be there to hear all this."

Neuhouser said Iowa City Attorney Robert Jansen and City Manager Neal Berlin will present their study on the legality of the fair rent ordinance at the meeting. The fair rent coalition will also be able to present its legal study, a 13-page report submitted to the council Monday.

Fair Rent Coalition spokeswoman Karen Kubby said her organization is holding a rally at 6:30 tonight at the Blackhawk Mini-park, and will lead a march to the civic center prior to the meeting.

Following the public hearing, the council must vote by Sept. 27 on whether to adopt the ordinance. If the ordinance proposal fails, it would be placed on the November ballot as a referendum under home rule provisions, Neuhouser said.

security costs. "We only requested one security guard," Renander said. "But because of threats of violence made by individuals at WRAC (Women's Resource and Action Center) and New Wave concerning Schlafly's visit, the university decided to hire a large number of security guards."

Renander said he was upset "the university had stooped so low," adding "I think it is disgusting that the conservatives should have to pay for security guards to assure the safety of visiting lecturers."

RENANDER SAID he wasn't sure how Schlafly will be paid. "I don't know what we're going to do, STAF can't pay for it because we don't have any money."

An attempt will be made, Renander said, to "exert some pressure on the public so they can realize what has happened and I guess there is always the possibility of a court case." Schlafly, however, denied that STAF owed her any money. "The group is as indignant about this as I am," Schlafly said.

"The campus was unsafe when I was there and now the student lecture committee is trying to get out of their agreement to pay me," she said.

Although "no action other than letter writing has been done at this time," Schlafly said, "I am surely expecting to get paid."

student in the UI College of Law. Ellis was "an extraordinarily effective teacher and a mentor," Bezanon said. Bezanon graduated in 1971.

After finding out that he got the position Ellis told a friend, "I'll just try to live up to one of my former students."

Ellis will not officially join the UI central administration until Jan. 1. Bezanon said this will provide for "a very positive transition period as we work into the supplemental legislative askings for next year."

ELLIS CARRIES a lengthy set of credentials from his time at the UI, as well as from other institutions. He joined the UI law school faculty in 1968, after serving for five years with the New York Law firm of Cravath, Swaine & Moore. While at the firm Ellis specialized in general corporate litigation with emphasis on anti-trust, economic regulation of business and constitutional law.

A Missouri native, Ellis received his bachelor's degree from Maryville College in Tennessee in 1960. He earned his law degree from the University of Chicago Law School in 1963.

Ellis is not a newcomer to administrative positions, having been special assistant to UI President Willard Boyd and acting assistant dean of faculties in the mid-1970s.

He was also president of the UI Faculty Senate during the 1978-79 academic year.

While on the UI faculty, Ellis served as a consultant to the antitrust section of the American Bar Association; consultant to the National Commission on the Causes and Prevention of Violence; counsel to the U.S. House of Representatives in Powell v. McCormack, an important constitutional law decision of the U.S. Supreme Court, and is now a consultant to the Federal Trade Commission and the Iowa Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations.

Paying for quality

For public schools to administer quality education, school boards must keep teacher salaries competitive. Competent teachers are leaving the nation's classrooms to become insurance salespeople and legal secretaries because those fields have more to offer in terms of salaries and other incentives.

Teachers in the United States have been the victims of public indifference toward their importance in society. A report issued last month by the Carnegie Foundation said that 36 percent of teachers surveyed would not go into teaching again because of the low social status and the accompanying poor pay.

According to the Carnegie report, the purchasing power of teacher salaries has dropped 12.2 percent in the last 10 years, while it has dropped 15.2 percent in Iowa.

It can be no accident that the decline in the purchasing power of teacher salaries corresponds with the decline in the effectiveness of public education described in the "Nation at Risk" report issued by the National Commission on Excellence in Education.

Anyone who can successfully teach the mathematical concepts needed to solve inequalities and variations can see that the grass is greener on the other side of the equation; foreign language teachers who can capture the attention of adolescents no doubt have more going for them than school administrators realize or have been willing to pay for. In the past, when better education entailed increased teacher salaries, which in turn entailed increased property taxes, no one wanted to see the problem solved.

In Iowa, the money to deal with poor teacher pay may already be in the pipeline. This summer Gov. Terry Branstad signed legislation that will pay school districts $25 in state school aid for every student enrolled in advanced math and science classes and similar funding is available for students enrolled in first-year foreign languages.

It will be interesting to see how much of that money will be used to improve teacher pay.

Time to withdraw

When the multinational peacekeeping forces, including American Marines, were sent into Lebanon last year, critics predicted that the Americans would become a target of one or more of the many factions in Lebanon seeking to discredit the Lebanese government, drive out multinational forces, or score points against the United States.

That prediction has unfortunately come true. The central flaw in the Reagan administration's decision to send U.S. troops was that, as a superpower, the United States was a prime target. The force should have been composed of troops from countries with a less highly-charged and visible presence in the area.

By that error in judgment, the United States has now been put in an untenable position. If it stays, the United States must either continue to be picked away at or send in more troops and become more heavily involved. Either outcome will bring heavier casualties and switch the argument from peace in Lebanon to the issue of the American presence in the country. If the United States withdraws, it looks weak. Neither eventuality will help settle the crisis and neither will be healthy for the United States.

So American hopes now rest on a negotiated settlement — which will be extremely difficult. Passions have been so inflamed over the last seven years of foreign occupation and civil war that trust will not easily, if ever, be restored. Moreover, it is not just a matter of returning to the old system of government. That was established in 1932 when Christians outnumbered Moslems and when religious-political passions were not caught up in East-West power politics. Now there are new players, with different agendas: The Syrians have regional power goals; the Palestine Liberation Organization wants a base to attack Israel; and the fanatics in Iran have sent their own holy warriors into the battle.

Perhaps the best of the troublesome solutions is for the United States to find troops from other countries to replace its ground troops, but continue to keep its carriers there as support for the multinational force and to send economic aid. That would defuse those who seek to make the American presence there the issue, and would free the United States to concentrate on working out a negotiated settlement.

That settlement must give the new Moslem majority and its various factions a more representative role, it must protect the Christian groups' rights and it must offer the Israelis assurances that Lebanon will not once again be used as a staging ground for attacks on their cities. Achieving such a settlement will be no small task; the United States must be free from other involvements in Lebanon and must be and appear to be as impartial as possible. That means withdrawing the U.S. ground troops.

Coalition should study economics

By Dennis Bobel

IN THE LAST few months a coalition has formed that advocates the passage of a local ordinance to control rents in Iowa City. Numerous articles have graced the pages of local newspapers alerting people to the existence of this group and its objective.

Unfortunately, little has been written concerning the economics of such a law. Instead of sound analysis of the issue, the community has been presented with shallow, trite statements from the coalition. An individual following this issue through the local newspapers could probably make only the following general statements about the views of the group. First, rents are too high, implying that high rents are bad rents. Second, supply and demand analysis does not work in the Iowa City housing market. Finally, the coalition's proposed solution will improve the housing market for residents of the city. In order for the coalition to have any integrity it must provide a more detailed analysis of the issue.

PERHAPS THIS lack of sound economic analysis is not the fault of the coalition; it may simply be a victim of poor reporting in the local newspapers. However, after talking to a few members of the coalition, I do not believe the newspapers are at fault. I doubt the members I talked to have ever read an economics textbook. They reminded me of a character in a children's story. In that story, Winnie-the-Pooh decided to trap a heffalump. The only problem was that Pooh had no idea what the creature looked like.

How can people say that supply and demand does not work in the housing market when they cannot explain how a market system is supposed to work? Again, perhaps I have talked to the wrong members of the coalition. If so, I invite a more informed member to respond to the following questions and comments:

What makes a high rent a bad rent? Does a high price mean that the market is not working? Does a high rent mean that landlords are making an excessive profit? What is a fair rent? Which omniscient being will tell us what "fair" means? A clear explanation of these questions would be quite helpful in understanding the coalition's goals.

WHY DOES SUPPLY and demand not work in this market? What market failure exists that prevents the system from working? The housing market seems to be working as any economics textbook would predict. The expectation of larger UI enrollments has caused a tremendous increase in building in the Iowa City area. The number of housing units is increasing as the need for them increases. If there is a problem it is not that supply does not adjust, but rather that supply adjusts too slowly.

Given that housing is such a durable good, this slow adjustment should be expected. Builders must be cautious because it would be very difficult to transform the resources in a housing unit to another productive capacity should this enrollment surge turn out to be temporary. Certainly, an efficient distribution of resources is not one where a substantial amount of the housing stock sits idle.

If the problem is one of uncertainty and speed of adjustment, then the correct solution will address these issues. Unfortunately, the coalition's proposed solution can only make matters worse. What will the proposed ordinance do to the uncertainty faced by landlords? Will it decrease? Common sense indicates that it must increase.

Instead of facing only market forces, now landlords are faced with additional government bureaucracy.

WHAT DOES THIS do to incentives to build in Iowa City? Instead of giving builders greater incentives to locate in town, they are driven to surrounding areas not covered by the ordinance. This can only serve to make the housing crunch in Iowa City more severe. The coalition seems to forget that the market system works through incentives. If you advocate government intervention in the market, then at least you should structure incentives in a manner that will provide the greatest chance for success.

Another important issue is the impact this ordinance will have on property taxes. It seems difficult to envision a scenario in which taxes are not adversely affected by this proposed ordinance. There are two effects that could impair the tax base.

First, the Iowa City tax base will not expand as rapidly as builders develop surrounding areas. At the county level of government, tax revenues might not be affected greatly, but there will be a shifting of revenues at a municipal level.

SECOND, AND more important, if you succeed in lowering rents, then you must also succeed in lowering property values, as a rental unit is only as valuable as its stream of discounted rents. Here there is not simply a shifting of the tax base, but rather an actual reduction in it. Because local governments are financed mainly through property taxes, this issue is of critical importance. Again, failure to address it diminishes the coalition's credibility.

Finally, the coalition fails to understand cause and effect. As any doctor knows, a patient cannot be cured by treating symptoms. The disease must be treated for an effective cure. Yet the coalition's solution to problems in the housing market treats only symptoms.

In any market the price is only a signal. If you wish to change the signal, you must change the sending mechanism. In this case the sending mechanism is supply and demand. A law that neither increases supply nor decreases demand cannot lower the market price.

The coalition's efforts would be much more effective if instead of trying to define the meaning of fair, they demanded an explanation from the UI administration as to why enrollment was allowed to increase faster than the capacity of both the UI and the community to handle it. Clearly, this is the fundamental problem in the housing market and the issue to be addressed. Bobel is a UI graduate student in economics.

Think you own piece of the rock?

THERE'S A legal fiction that maintains the big mutual life insurance companies — Prudential, Metropolitan, Equitable, John Hancock, New York Life — are owned by their policyholders.

That was the point of that old Prudential advertising campaign, "You own a piece of the Rock." Commercials would flash to a U.S. Steel plant and inform viewers that Prudential policyholders owned a chunk of U.S. Steel. Why? Because Prudential held a slug of U.S. Steel stock in its portfolio.

It was farfetched reasoning. To be sure, the premiums paid by policyholders enabled Prudential to buy those U.S. Steel shares. But I never met a policyholder in one of these big mutuals who felt this sense of ownership. The poor suffering policyholders certainly don't enjoy the fruits usually associated with ownership, such as the ability to throw out the management. When has that ever happened? By the same legal fiction, depositors in mutual savings banks and mutual savings and loan associations are sometimes said to be the owners of those institutions. Just how fictional this concept is, can be seen in a ruling handed down in a Philadelphia court.

THE FEDERAL laws were changed last year to permit the so-called thrift institutions — mutual savings banks and savings and loans — to do more of the things that commercial banks do. As a result many of these institutions, needing money to play this larger role, have been converting to stock-owned companies; namely, they have been selling stock to the public.

The largest mutual savings bank in the nation, the Philadelphia Saving Fund Society, is about to go down this road. It expects to raise more than half a billion dollars by selling shares to the public.

Philadelphia Saving has some 660,000 depositors, and they are being given first crack at buying shares in the bank they supposedly already own. They will have to pay for the shares, just the way any member of the public will.

Two of these depositors — Mark and Ethelyn Goldberg — thought this was unfair. They pointed out, in an action filed in the court of common pleas, that Philadelphia Saving has a surplus of something like $425 million. That's the amount that would be left if liabilities were subtracted from assets. They argued that this surplus belongs to the depositors. And they demanded that before stock was sold to the public, this $425 million surplus be distributed to the depositors, as the owners of the institution.

PHILADELPHIA SAVING naturally disputed that this surplus belonged to the depositors — and the court, as you might expect, sided with the bank. In its ruling the court explained that the depositors do not "own" this institution in the usual sense of this word. Their relationship, the court said, is more that of a creditor than an owner.

So you see how they get around this legal fiction. It's not so much that you "own" Prudential or Bowery Savings Bank or any of the other mutual institutions in which you have deposited money. It's more that you simply lent them some of your money. They borrowed from you.

Thrift institutions go back more than 150 years. They were started to give poor people a place to lodge their savings. In its brief to the court, Philadelphia Saving said:

"Savings banks originated in order to serve a public need. The needs and times have changed."

Cruel hypocrisy

To the editor:

The downing of the Korean Airlines jet over Soviet airspace by the Soviet Air Force is a deplorable act that warrants world condemnation, but for Ronald Reagan to call the Soviets barbaric is an act of utter hypocrisy.

We have just seen the 10th anniversary of the overthrow of the democratically-elected government in Chile of Salvador Allende with the support of the CIA. The same type of activity is being carried out against the present government of Nicaragua by the CIA with the full support of the Reagan administration. The recipients of this support are mostly ex-members of the National Guard of the Somoza dictatorship, who were some of the most barbaric killers in recent history. (Remember the filmed death of ABC reporter Bill Stewart in June, 1979).

To further prove this point, there are many more examples of barbaric governments that Reagan has supported, such as Ferdinand Marcos in the Philippines or the tacit support of the Israeli invasion of Lebanon and the subsequent refugee camp massacres. When the whole world picture is looked at, the charges of barbarism by Reagan are laughable, but it is a very cruel joke to play on the rest of the world.

He's no Kaul

To the editor:

Who is John Voland? And why does he write in three-paragraph sentences? And if he is a professional journalist why doesn't he know the difference between a review and an editorial? If he intentionally wrote his article on the Elvis Brothers as an editorial, why didn't he research his attacks before printing them as "facts?" (DI, Sept. 6).

I don't recall the Elvis Brothers ever (onstage or off-stage) labeling themselves "Rockabilly," or a "Rockabilly Revival Act." Anyone who knows the slightest thing about "real" rockabilly, (and I'm borrowing Voland's quotations) knows that even Elvis (Presley, of course), did not refer to himself as rockabilly. Note the connection.

Voland could not, or deliberately did not find anything positive to report on. He made no attempt whatsoever to describe the slick pop originals that make up nearly 75 percent of the group's material. Instead, it seems he based the band's musical prowess on one cover song — one cover song in 13 paragraphs.

It seems rather odd that Voland did not mention any of the originals, especially when they've just released an album on a major national label. Given that, I'd like to know which "other bands are doing a little bit better on the national (and regional) music scene?"

And is it so shocking that the Elvis Brothers opened for the Clash? Jimi Hendrix opened for the Monkees at a Davenport club in 1966. Ooh, relate to that.

I am not a staff writer for The Daily Iowan. Nor am I a music critic. I do however know what I like and why. But that does not give me the right to have my personal opinions blatantly displayed each week in the DI.

I am not Donald Kaul, but then neither is John Voland.

Job-seeker laments

To the editor:

It is somewhat surprising to find in today's unemployment situation that people still don't want to work. I took the time, money and effort to put up signs advertising for a legitimate job. The response I received was shocking, to say the least.

Four phone calls at odd hours (2 a.m.) and one phone call complaining about the tone of the sign. If they would have looked closely they would have seen that it was approved for posting. Why would I open myself to ridicule and persecution?

Let's hope that the thousands of unemployed college students will learn something from this and take note.

Boston's Yastrzemski wants to bow out a winner

By J.B. Glass
Staff Writer

A thunderous roar engulfed Comiskey Park on the night of the 50th anniversary All-Star game, as the public address announcer exclaimed, "And now batting, No. 8..." The capacity crowd reacted with the enthusiasm that has surrounded this legend for some 22 years.

That legend still resides in Fenway Park, as he has since 1961, and that man of course is Carl Yastrzemski.

It would take a long list to cover all of the accomplishments and career highlights of No. 8, who plans to retire after the 1983 season. But the 1967 season ranks near the top. During that year he won baseball's triple crown, the last player to do so. In that same year, he won the most valuable player award and a gold glove.

HE HAS SURPASSED the 3,000 hit plateau and has blasted some 450 home runs. Yastrzemski was the first American League player to reach both of those marks in a career. He also ranks first among active players in games, runs batted in, total bases and extra base hits.

Yastrzemski also is first among active players in plate appearances and led the American League in slugging percentage in 1965 (.536), 1967 (.622) and 1970 (.592).

This summer's historic introduction was Yastrzemski's 18th All-Star appearance, and he admits to being touched by it.

"The standing 'O' took me back a little bit, I might have tried too hard (Yastrzemski struck out, but still received a standing ovation as he made his trip back to the dugout). I was trying to put one out. Hey, what happens to fastballs anyway?"

THE GRAND OLD master thought that Montreal would be his last All-Star contest, "...but this was nice; I came back in '83 to try for one more series, being here is a honor and we won, making it a great night."

As seen by his quest for victory, the 43-year-old still possesses the desire to win. He does not just want to go out and be a memory of the past, but to succeed and be a winner today.

He seems to refuse to be the 25th man on the roster, just because he is Carl Yastrzemski, rather he thrives on aiding the only major league team he's ever played for.

This brilliant career began when he was signed out of Notre Dame, after his freshmen year, as a shortstop. Later he went back to school to earn a degree in business administration. He played second base and shortstop at Raleigh in the minor leagues, but was moved to the outfield in Minneapolis of the American Association in 1960.

IN 1961, he made the parent ball club and from that time on, he has made history.

George Vecsey of the New York Times said about Yastrzemski, "Just when you think he is to become a living museum piece, he surges back." Holding true to form, Yastrzemski is going out in style with a respectable .280 average and 52 RBI's. His batting average this season is comperable to his .286 career average.

Yastrzemski is a hero who has survived throughout the years and has written himself a ticket to Cooperstown.

"Baseball tests your emotional stability, you have to be emotionally identical everyday," Carlton Fisk said. "Oh no, I'm not talking about myself, I'm thinking of Carl Yastrzemski."

Yastrzemski will be honored in Boston as the season draws to a close, just as he has been throughout the years.

Arm's control

Hawkeye baseball pitcher Phil Smith tests his arm during Iowa's first baseball practice Monday afternoon at the Iowa baseball diamond. Smith was redshirted last season by Coach Duane Banks after transferring to Iowa from Morningside College in Sioux City. A business major from Cedar Falls, Iowa, Smith has two years of eligibility remaining as the Hawkeyes, second place finishers in the Big Ten last year, prepare for the season.

Hawkeyes notch 2nd straight win

By Mike Condon
Assistant Sports Editor

Things are looking much better for the Iowa volleyball team today than at this time last year.

The Hawkeyes posted their second consecutive win on Monday night as they defeated Western Illinois in three straight games at George Edward Marshall Gymnasium at Davenport Central High School.

Two wins may not seem like much but a year ago, the Hawkeyes were in the midst of a 10-match losing streak. Coach Sandy Stewart's squad showed the ability to come back as they were down 14-5 before rallying to win the first game 17-15. Iowa then won games two and three by wider margins, defeating the Westwinds, 15-9 and 15-5.

PART OF IOWA'S problems in the first game could be traced to last Saturday's emotional five-game upset win over Iowa State in Ames.

"We just started slow," Stewart said. "We didn't pass well at all in the first game. But we just hung in there and tied the score at 14 before getting the win."

While Stewart was concerned with Iowa's passing, the hitting of the Iowa front line drew a totally opposite response.

"This had to be one of the best hitting nights we've had in a while," she said. "Dee Ann (Davidson), Linda (Grensing) and Lana (Kuiper) all had good nights."

The statistics show Davidson with 11 kills in 18 attempts while Grensing, who played her high school volleyball at Central under current Hawkeye assistant Coach Cindy Smoker, had 15 kills in 26 attempts.

KUIPER, A FRESHMAN from Indianola, Iowa, came in off the bench to record nine kills. Stewart was able to clear her bench during the match, giving her young squad some valuable playing time.

Western Illinois defeated the Hawkeyes three times last season and Stewart expected a stronger effort from the Westwinds. "I really thought they would give us a tougher match."

"They lost their setter from last season and they have a freshman who is trying to fill the void," Stewart said.

The Hawkeyes have a freshman setter of their own in Kathy Greishem who "did a nice, consistent job setting," according to the second-year Hawkeye coach.

Connors joins battle for No. 1

NEW YORK (UPI) — Unlike the women, where there is a No. 1 and then everybody else, there is a lot of room for argument about who rates best among men tennis players.

Jimmy Connors made certain there would be no certainty at all in crowning a king for 1983 when he upended Ivan Lendl in Sunday's U.S. Open final. This leaves Connors, Lendl and John McEnroe all with strong arguments as to who deserves the No. 1 ranking.

Connors did not have a particularly brilliant year leading up to the Open, ranking third in the world behind McEnroe and Lendl and standing only 10th on this year's earnings list. McEnroe had Wimbledon to his credit while Lendl was No. 1 when it came to money with $657,378 this year.

VIRTUALLY EVERYONE agreed that the winner of the Open would deserve to be No. 1, but at the time it was figured that McEnroe or Lendl would come out on top.

Connors, following his 6-3, 6-7, 7-5, 6-0 victory over Lendl, wasn't making any rash statements. Asked his opinion of who is No. 1, he replied, "You guys (the media) are the experts. I told you before, I didn't defend my Wimbledon title. I didn't worry about who I played, under what conditions I played. I just went out and played my matches."

The story on a sweltering day Sunday wasn't so much a matter of Connors winning — even he admitted "it wasn't quite as beautiful as the others but it got the job done" — but of Lendl losing. For all the tournaments (35) and money ($4,253,572) he has won, the 23-year-old from Czechoslovakia now has gone through 15 Grand Slam events without a single championship.

JUST WHEN HE seemed on the verge of putting Connors away, Lendl double faulted at set point in the 10th game of the third set, and he wound up losing the last 10 games.

For consolation, there were some encouraging words for Lendl from Connors and Martina Navratilova, who stands alone among women after stretching her match record this year to 66-1 by beating Chris Evert Lloyd in Saturday's women's final.

"He's still a young guy and I'm sure he's going to be around for a long time to come and have a lot more chances to win major tournaments," Connors said. "You go out there and try to play the best tennis possible to win the title and if not then you come back next year and try."

"I don't think it's fair to give him the title of a choke man. I think you are jumping on him a little too hard — you must give credit where credit is due. I'm out there trying to do the same thing he is — win the title. I don't think choking has anything to do with it. I think he's a little lax in a final because he's never won one and that's probably on his mind."

NAVRATILOVA, WHO remembers Lendl as a boy in Czechoslovakia — "I saw him play there and didn't think he was so good then" — and played tennis against his mother, also feels his time will come.

"I felt sorry for him," she said. "He was so nervous he couldn't move his feet. He'll just have to relax. With time he'll figure that one of these years he's going to win it, so he should relax. Mentally, he (Connors) psyched him out."

Navratilova also teamed with Pam Shriver to win the women's doubles Sunday, boosting her weekend winnings to $644,000, including a $500,000 bonus for taking the singles. This brought her career earnings to $6,113,750, a record for any tennis player.

John McEnroe and Peter Fleming won the men's doubles and Australians Elizabeth Sayers and John Fitzgerald captured the mixed doubles.

Jimmy Connors celebrates scoring a crucial point in his win over Ivan Lendl Sunday. The win gave Connors the U.S. Open tennis championship.

Faulty turning lanes trigger a BIC Night Tripper Ride

By Melissa Rapoport
Staff Writer

Bicycles are a major mode of transportation at the UI. If you travel from one side of town to the other by bicycle, you know how frustrating traffic lights can be.

For instance, a couple of days ago, I was riding my bike to the EPB building from the Coralville Strip. I battled the traffic in order to get to the left-hand turning lane at the intersection of Iowa Avenue and Riverside Drive.

Unfortunately, as I entered the left-hand turning lane, the light turned red. A string of cars lined up behind me. Eventually, the traffic opposite me, including the left-hand turning lane started to flow.

FINALLY, THE southbound traffic started to move. As always though, there was one exception; my left-hand turning lane light was still red. The angry drivers behind me started honking their horns. I quickly jumped off my bike and made my way to the closest sidewalk. Not only was I embarrassed, but I was baffled as to how that light could possibly have been my fault. Sound familiar?

The Bicyclists of Iowa City are aware of this problem and are in the process of doing something about it. Earlier this summer, BIC sponsored the Midnight Ride.

The participants of this ride rode through the streets to all the intersections with left-hand turning lanes in order to determine whether bicycles would change the lights.

THERE IS A so-called 'sweet spot' under the road in the left-hand turning lanes. This sensitive area is supposed to change the lights upon detection of a metal vehicle. However, bicycles usually don't 'trip the trigger'.

So, the sequel to the ride, the Night Tripper Ride will take place Sept. 24 at 1:30 a.m. The riders will once again take to the streets of Iowa City to make a list of the delinquent metal detectors.

Once the ride is finished, the participants will congregate at the Country Kitchen restaurant to discuss their findings and prepare a list to give to city officials. In conjunction, the city has agreed to upgrade the current detection devices to meet the specifications of bicyclists. The repairs could cost anywhere from $20 to $200 per light.

ALL CONCERNED bicyclists and citizens are encouraged to participate in the ride. All riders will receive a water bottle to commemorate the ride.

This weekend, on Sunday, Sept. 18, BIC will also be sponsoring the Century Ride. The goal of this race is to cover 100 miles in 12 hours. The ride will start at Shelter 12 in Lower City Park, with registration from 6:30 to 8 a.m.

This year, the ride will start in Iowa City and will go through Oxford, Windham, Frytown, Wellman, West Chester, Washington and Riverside before returning to Iowa City.

Hawk notes

Football

Iowa Coach Hayden Fry was all smiles after Monday night's practice. "It's always nice when you win and we also had a good workout," he said.

Fry also attributed the good workout to the change in weather, which he called great football weather. "I got a tickle out of Rob Smith from Dallas, Texas, Monday night," Fry said. "He said this weather is like the winters in Texas."

Fry was also happy Monday night because only a few players suffered injuries over the weekend that will keep them out of practice for a few days.

"This is the best we have ever come out of a game since I've been here," Fry said.

The Hawkeyes spent Monday night correcting mistakes made during Iowa's 51-10 victory over Iowa State. The team will not start preparing for the Penn State game until this afternoon.

Sportsclubs

The Trophy Dash will start at the Iowa City city limits, at 8 a.m. There will be two divisions of racers, including rides for licensed racers and citizen racers.

The entry fee of $4.50 for the Century Ride is due at registration, as well as the $5.50 fee for the Trophy Dash racers. Included in the fee is a map, a sag wagon, a BIC Century patch and refreshments.

ALTHOUGH HELMETS are not required, they are recommended. For more information on either the Night Tripper Ride or the Century Ride, contact Shelly Plattner at 337-7478.

Over the weekend, The Iowa City Women's Rugby Club had a home match against Minnesota. Although the game ended in a 4-4 tie, captain Jean O'Leary said, "We did a lot better than we expected to do... we are a young team with only eight or nine returning players... Minnesota is a very experienced ball club."

Iowa's only try, which is equivalent to a touchdown in football, was scored by graduate student Sherry Edwards, a first year player. The teams' next home match is against St. Louis in Lower City Park on Sept. 24.

The Iowa City team will meet Southern Illinois and Illinois this weekend in Carbondale, Ill.

Another successful women's team, the Virago women's soccer club, had a tremendous summer season.

WITH AN IMPRESSIVE overall record of 20-1-3, the club took first place in the First Eastern Iowa Soccer League Women's Open Invitational, the Cedar Rapids Comets Soccer Tournament and the Miller Tournament in Cedar Rapids.

Virago also won the state soccer tournament in Grinnell, Iowa.

The state champions had eight out of the 11 all state players on their squad. Named to the All-State team were, fullback Jean Albrect; halfbacks Wendy Cole, Julie Johnson, Diane Pfile and Holly Woolard; and forwards Margot Bilanin, Susan Bird and Kelly Flanagan.

This weekend, the club will participate in the regional tournament in Des Moines. If you're interested in joining Virago, contact Carole Sedlaeck at 354-4330 or Wendy Coyle at 338-6841 or 353-6249.

Also, official practice starts today at the Hawkeye Drive Field from 5:30-7 p.m. All newcomers are invited to attend whether or not they have any previous experience in the sport.

Weekly practices will take place every Tuesday and Thursday from 5:30-7 p.m. at the Hawkeye Drive Field.

Sportsclubs is a Tuesday feature of The Daily Iowan. If you would like further information or results published about your club sport, call the DI at 353-6220 between 9 a.m. and noon or after 5 p.m. on Sundays.

NFL strike had Chicago's Payton thinking of retirement, not record

LAKE FOREST, Ill. (UPI) — Chicago Bears' running back Walter Payton said Monday he seriously considered quitting football during the 1982 players strike because he had become "fed up" with the game.

However, Payton said he decided to continue working out during the strike last year and has come back for the 1983 season with renewed vigor and determination to break Jim Brown's all-time career NFL rushing record.

"I was ready to quit football altogether at the time of the strike," Payton said.

"When the strike came, I thought that I owed a great deal to my family and didn't want to go through it anymore."

Payton said no one from the Bears talked to him about changing his mind, adding "no one ever has had to do that."

the Bears is up at the end of the season, said he had also gotten down on himself part of the 1981 season and into the 1982 campaign. He was also unhappy with the way he was being used by the Bears at that time.

"I'm my own worst critic," Payton said. "If I don't work hard, I'm down on myself. If I don't work hard on myself, then I get down."

Payton has been used more as a receiver this year, cutting down on the number of rushing opportunities the veteran has had under Coach Mike Ditka's offense. However, he expressed confidence he will be able to break

Brown's career mark of 12,312 yards. However, Payton would not give a target date when he would break the mark or when he plans to retire.

At St. Louis, Coach Jim Hanifan says there is a simple reason why the St. Louis Cardinals have lost their first two games this season.

"The problem has been mistakes, and the most disturbing are the mental mistakes," Hanifan said during his weekly news conference Monday. "You can excuse the physical mistakes."

"In so many cases what we had Sunday (a 34-17 loss to Dallas) were mental mistakes that allowed our opponent to capitalize, both on offense and defense. We had a good opportunity to make a good play and because of a mistake here and there we didn't."

Hanifan refused to blame anyone specifically for the errors against the Cowboys.

Buckeye 'Don't'

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Quarterback Mike Tomczak, early warning to fans: Don't overplay.

Oregon made that remark and Tomczak, a 6-foot-6, 210-pounder, made the Ducks pay.

He completed 21 of 37 passes for 210 yards and four touchdowns, ahead only by trying to establish a run away in the second half.

In that half, Tomczak attempted, including his 181 yards and three touchdowns.

For his performance, named the season's first named Player of the Week.

"I KNEW WE could

said Tomczak, "but we the run first. We won half-time. We got stuck running game."

Buckeyes' Tomczak serves notice: 'Don't overplay our running game'

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI) — Ohio State quarterback Mike Tomczak has issued an early warning to future Buckeye opponents: Don't overplay our running game.

Oregon made that mistake last Saturday and Tomczak, a 6-foot-1, 190-pound junior, made the Ducks pay dearly.

He completed 21 of 25 passes for 273 yards and four touchdowns as the Buckeyes, ahead 10-6 at halftime while trying to establish a running attack, pulled away in the second half for a 31-6 victory.

In that half, Tomczak completed 13 of 14 attempts, including his last 10 throws, for 181 yards and three touchdowns.

For his performance, Tomczak was named the season's first UPI Midwest Offensive Player of the Week.

"I KNEW WE could pass against them," said Tomczak, "but we wanted to establish the run first. We were disappointed at halftime. We got stuck a few times on our running game."

"They overplayed the run, so we threw more in the second half. Football can be easy if you just take what your opponent gives you."

It wasn't quite that easy a year ago for Tomczak, whose interception rate soared and was benched in the fourth game of the season. He sat out the following week's game against Wisconsin, a third straight Ohio State loss, then led the Buckeyes to seven straight wins to end the season.

Tomczak, after his miserable 1982 start, finished as the Big Ten's passing efficiency leader.

TOMCZAK, WHO WAS suspended briefly this summer after posing for a Columbus department store ad but had his eligibility restored following an investigation by the NCAA, is quick to share his success with teammates.

He praised the work of his huge offensive line, which gave him ample time to throw and his receivers — flanker Cedric Anderson, who caught two touchdown passes, split end Thad Jemison and tight end John Frank.

"If the line give you enough time, you can just stand back there and wait for the receivers to come open," he said. "It's only a matter of time."

But Tomczak also is aware that things won't always be that easy, starting Saturday when the Buckeyes visit Oklahoma.

"I'm sure I won't have as much time to pass the next 10 weeks," said Tomczak. "Our opponents are going to look at films of the Oregon game and I'm sure they're going to be blitzing."

Tomczak's 10 straight completions against Oregon was one short of the single game Ohio State record of 11 held by Art Schlichter.

"I'm just happy to win the game," he said. "If I keep throwing the ball well, the records will fall in place. But, I'm a team player."

On the line

If you think your classes are getting tough, you ought to see the games in this week's On the Line contest.

After trudging through 29 perfect ballots on Sunday, The Daily Iowan's chief ballot counter, O.T. Line, has decided to play tough this week.

Make no mistake about it, this contest isn't for those of you with a weak heart. It's tough — so tough in fact, that it makes Burge Hall food look good.

Now in order to win this contest, you've got to have some luck and you have to follow the rules. If you don't follow the rules, the sports staff thug will pay a visit to your home before destroying your ballot.

First of all, circle — and we mean circle — the names of the winners in the nine games listed on the ballot. Then, pick the winner of the tiebreaker in the same manner and predict the final score of the battle between Iowa and Penn State. If you believe any game will end in a tie, circle both teams.

NOW, JUST WHEN you thought you had the rules down pat, here comes a change. All entries are due at noon on Thursday. That's right, noon and not a minute later.

No DI employees are eligible and according to Iowa law, those of you who are under 19 are may not participate because our prize is, yes, an eight-gallon keg of brew from R.T. Grunts on South Dubuque Street, one of Iowa City's finest Friday night spots.

Then, complete the ballot by signing your name and phone number on the bottom and turn it in at the DI business office, Room 111 of the Communications Center.

Rogers pleases C.R. crowd despite unoriginal concert

By Ann L. Scholl
Special to The Daily Iowan

KENNY ROGERS' concert at the Five Seasons Center Saturday night was almost a carbon copy of the country/pop singer's last two Cedar Rapids affairs.

Rogers, who shared the bill with comedian Lonnie Shorr and once-popular singer Helen Reddy, sported his traditional three-piece suit and salt-and-pepper beard, and tossed tambourines into the audience at the beginning of the show rather like a politician.

Immediately, the crowd of over 8,000 greeted him with a roar, as cameras flashed and flowers were tossed on stage.

During a five-minute break between songs, Rogers apologized for not shaking hands with a member of the audience by explaining, "Once I start, I keep on going." He then joked with the crowd, calling them among the "worst tambourine players" he had seen in his seven years of handing out the instruments during his shows.

THE CROWD not only ignored his insult but also seemed to overlook his sometimes strained voice on songs such as "Love the World Away."

In keeping with his other concerts, four movie screens were lowered around the stage and Rogers sang the tune "You Are So Beautiful" during a film about his son, Christopher Cody. Later in the show, the screens were used again to show movie clips from "Coward of the County" as the singer performed the title track from the film.

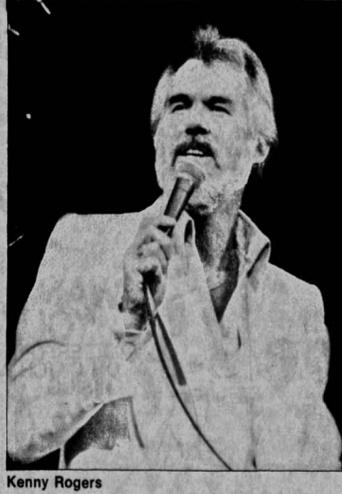

Throughout the evening Rogers made sure the audience stayed involved. They clapped along with nearly every song, including "Love Will Turn You Around," the theme song from his film Six Pack.

They joined Rogers in singing "Lucille," the megagold single that broke the singer's career wide open in 1977.

ROGERS' BAND, called Bloodline and made up of seven Nashville natives, had a chance to show itself during "Blaze of Glory." Backup singer Bobby Daniels handled the deep bass notes superbly and Gene Golden's falsetto brought thunderous applause from the audience.

"You've done it better than you did it tonight," Rogers chided the band afterwards. He then turned to the adoring audience and told them to go easy on the applause. "They equate applause with a raise," he quipped.

"It's okay to stay with one person for the rest of your life," he said after mesmerizing the audience with "Through the Years". Rogers then added a new narrative song to his repertoire titled "Scarlet Fever."

Kenny Rogers

Night life

Before the penultimate time of the show, Rogers tossed glow-in-the-dark Frisbees into the balcony seats, then went into Lionel Richie's "Lady." He delivered a powerful performance of the song and ended it with a green laser-light dome focused on him and the stage engulfed with mist.

THE LASERS continued to dance around the stage as Rogers launched into the final song, "Ruby (Don't Take Your Love to Town)," and, of course, a promise to come back next year.

Opener Reddy was making her first appearance at the Center, and she stomped around the big stage looking decidedly uncomfortable in her spiked-heel shoes and side-slitted orange sequined dress. She mechanically went through the motions as she tried out some flat new tunes on the audience.

The crowd politely applauded the songs from Imagination, her latest album, but exploded briefly when she sang her "crazy ladies medley," which included "Leave Me Alone (Ruby Red Dress)," "Angie Baby" and "Delta Dawn," all hits from Reddy's salad days in the early '70s.

Radio 'screening' proposed

DALLAS (UPI) — The manager of a Mormon-owned radio station proposes establishing a national panel to screen songs for "objectionable" lyrics and award those records that meet its standards a Good Housekeeping-type seal of approval.

William Steding, vice president and general manager of KAFM in Dallas, said the process would weed out the 3 to 4 percent of songs that he considers overtly harmful to teenagers because of references to sex or drugs.

Steding said the ratings would advise a station either not to play a record that does not bear the seal or to delete the offending word or line. He does not consider the proposal censorship.

"We don't think playing anything and everything is consistent with our responsibility to the community," he said. "You never make a mistake by not playing something. You make your mistake by playing something people don't want to hear."

Not surprisingly, many record company executives see potential harm in Steding's concept.

"I RESENT and fear the establishment of any form of centralized censorship," said Stanley Gortikov, executive director of the Recording Industry of America, whose 45 member companies produced 85 percent of the $3 billion worth of records and tapes sold last year.

"Who will do the censoring? What is right and what is wrong? We've always steered away from nominating some genius to determine that for us in this country," Gortikov said.

In the year that the contemporary music station has been following Steding's guidelines on lyrics, it has edited or refused to play about a dozen records.

Gallery art blends visual experiences

By Suzanne Richerson
Staff Writer

INTIMATE OBJECTS/Personal
Landscapes at the Art Center is really two exhibits, each with a different character. "Intimate Objects" features the work of four women who create sculptural forms, while "Personal Landscapes" is a collaboration of three people who work in different areas of art.

In the first gallery, poet Paula Klein, artist Buzz Masters and printer Lauren Geringer combine their talents to produce visual expressions of word images. In her biographical statement Klein notes that when she was a child she accompanied her parents in civil rights and peace marches, but little of politics or human rights groups appears in her poetry. Most of the experiences she writes about are encounters with nature. Her verses speak of the out-of-doors — the forest, snow, fields in winter, animals, birds, wood, stones.

MASTERS interprets the poems with abstract watercolor collages that hint at the separation of people from the natural world. In "The Stone Field" he alludes to the depth and mystery of nature by surrounding masses of grey with black paper, and in "Gardening at Night by the Sea" he interprets a poem about the breaking up of a household (a separation?) using rectangular shapes punctuated by random curving paint strokes in four separate variations.

Lauren Geringer's handset type provides pleasing displays of the poetry in conjunction with the abstractions.

Masters also shows three silk panels of batik on the theme of swimmers: arms and bodies outstretched on a ground of rich blue.

"Intimate Objects," in the second gallery, is a group of pieces by Bonnie Marzlak, Mary Merkel-Hess, Pam Sickles and Nancy Piersel. Many of the works are small — doll forms, tiny boxes, rattles, brooches — and some of them seem to hide private meanings.

FOR INSTANCE, Pam Sickles titles one of her metallic doll forms "Heartease" and another "Shaman I," leaving the viewer to try to sort out the connection, if any, between the title and the work. She states her premise more openly in "Three Stages," a shadowbox containing three female figures in white, pink and black underlined by suitably-shaped seashells, the whole alluding to the cycles of womanhood and to the ocean.

Nancy Piersel, who states that she "likes to walk through cemeteries," shows two cast-iron tombstone figures of deep grey tones. Her large iron vessels, conical in form, have a rough-hewn, weighty substance, while in another grouping she features brightly-polished three-dimensional copper triangles. In yet another copper form, a large bowl, the freedom of an asymmetrical boat-shaped vessel reveals new perspectives on the form.

Mary Merkel-Hess makes baskets from paper cord and handmade paper, avoiding the woven format and emphasizing the linear quality of the paper cord. She, like Piersel, also uses copper, which she forms into bowls with wrinkled and folded surfaces that look like copper-covered paper.

Bonnie Marzlak fashions miniature structures from metal, small figures, triangular boxes, a goblet on lizard legs. One might find her pieces in a gift shop, except that they often include frightening or unsettling images meant as more than coffee table decorations.

"Intimate Objects/Personal Landscapes" continues through September 24 at the Art Center in the lower level of the Jefferson Building.

Entertainment today

Films

Note: Oops! We were wrong. The Entertainer has been withdrawn from distribution, so the Bijou is substituting Our Man in Havana in its place. If you went to see The Entertainer last night, you already know this.

The only similarities between the two films are their date of release and their country of origin — they're both 1960 British films. Sir Carol Reed (The Third Man) directs and Alec Guinness stars as a vacuum cleaner salesman turned spy in Our Man in Havana. The uneven mixture of comedy and drama has little basis in Graham Greene's original novel, and the satire loses much of its potential because of this. With Ernie Kovacs as a Cuban police officer and Burt Ives before he started selling records on TV. At the Bijou at 7 p.m.

What would you do if your off-stage life became controlled by the roles you portrayed on stage? You certainly wouldn't play Othello, the tragic hero who kills in a jealous rage. But Ronald Colman decides he wants to tackle Shakespeare's great role, in his Oscar-winning performance in A Double Life (1947). George Cukor, who's been acquiring a cult following here in Iowa City, directs the tale of a famous actor who takes on Shakespeare's play, with tragic results for the actress who plays Desdemona (Shelley Winters). Written by the captivating husband and wife team of Garson Kanin and Ruth Gordon. Excellent melodrama and suspense. At the Bijou at 8:45 p.m.

Television

On cable: HBO brings us its first Album Flash at 9 p.m., this one from Linda Ronstadt's new album. New video and "exclusive recording studio footage" are combined as Linda belts out a new note with big band classics. We don't know about ourselves, but we're sure Jerry Brown will be watching. Ticket to Heaven (HBO at 7 p.m.), a thinly-disguised critique of the Moonies' brainwashing techniques, is one of those films that never was distributed nationally but ends up at the Bijou and on pay cable. Better than most. Also, Ken and Barbie go to Russia, a.k.a. Reds (HBO at 9 p.m.).

On the networks: Try the excellent series of documentaries, Lifeline. Tonight a look at a pediatric surgeon. Not for the faint-hearted. IPBN at 8 p.m. On the majors, Anthony Hopkins' portrayal of Der Fuhrer makes Mr. T look like a sissy. The Bunker dramatizes Hitler's final days in Berlin. CBS at 7 p.m. And in the conclusion to Beulah Land, a determined Sarah tries to rebuild her family's plantation after the Civil War. But frankly, my dear, we don't give a damn. NBC at 8 p.m.

Radio

KSUI (91.7 MHz), 8:30 p.m. New York Philharmonic Orchestra. Rafael Kubelik, conductor; Alicia de Larrocha, pianist. An all-Beethoven program, including the overture to The Creatures of Prometheus, Beethoven's only complete ballet score; the Third Piano Concerto; and the Second Symphony.

The Secrets, Kansas City's finest dance band, will be playing at the Crow's Nest tonight through Wednesday.

Nightlife

The Secrets. At the Crow's Nest, through Wednesday. K.C.'s premier dance band continues its engagement and gives all of you a chance to get out those academic tensions.
Manikins. At Gabe's/The Oasis.

This band, which constructs modern pop for modern-type people in and around Beantown, makes a visit Out West. Sounds interesting.

The Uptown Serenaders. At the Deadwood. This week's Tuesday Night Tunes brings in these sultans of swing for a night of '30s and '40s standards.

'Cats' lack emotion on recent 'Rant n' Rave'

By Allen Hogg
Staff Writer

DESPITE THE critical pans it seemed to get from everyone else who wrote about it, I'll still defend Built For Speed, the Stray Cats' American debut LP. Okay, so by now even I'm sick of hearing "Rock This Town" and "Stray Cat Strut" on the radio, but the rest of the album still moves me.

On Built For Speed, the Cats sound young, exuberant, and naively hopeful — they're refreshingly cocky in an era when it seems everyone else is either ruminating on middle age or trying to prove their artiness by making neat sounds on synthesizers.

However, on their new LP, Rant n' Rave With the Stray Cats, the Long Island trio has stepped past the bounds of cockiness into conceit. In doing so, they have created one of the most obnoxious albums to appear in quite some time.

It seems the naivete and hint of vulnerability that gave Built For Speed its charm simply has been forgotten. A comparison of the two albums' ballads demonstrates this. Rant n' Rave's "I Won't Stand in Your Way" substitutes a doo-wop chorus for the saxophone of "Lonely Summer Nights" off Built For Speed, but each is lyrically a smarmy, melodramatic expression of teenage despair.

In "Lonely Summer Nights," Brian Setzer's vocal pathos gives the tune a captivating appeal. In "I Won't Stand in Your Way," he just charges unemotionally through the words.

ANOTHER EXAMPLE is the new "Too Hip, Gotta Go." In this tune, the singer is giving a girl who loves him the big kiss-off because he only lusts for her, and we are supposed to cheer him on. It seems Setzer has tried so hard to be cool he's simply become cold.

In place of vulnerability, the Cats have installed "cuteness" and some rather forced attempts at silliness. The most immediately noticeable is the insipid Grease-like record sleeve, but it soon becomes apparent that the insipidity has been extended into the music as well.

"Rebels Rule," for example, starts off with a motorcycle revving up ("Motorcycle by Harley Davidson," the liner notes mention with typical humor). Similarly, "Something's Wrong With My Radio" begins with the overused gimmick of a static-filled AM signal.

Records

The main component of the song "Hot Rod Gang" is the nonsense line, "Boom boom, shang-a-lang, shimmy shimmy, shoo-wop, bang bang." Sometimes this stuff can work, but here it is sung so unenthusiastically that it comes closer to Sha Na Na than Gene Vincent or Eddie Cochran.

Producer Dave Edmunds has tried to enhance this "cuteness" by cleaning up the sound and destroying all the rough edges. While this may improve the Cats' pre-teen appeal by allowing all the vocals to be understood, it seriously undermines the emotional charge of the music.

A FINAL COMPLAINT concerns the lack of focus in the songwriting. While admittedly the tunes on Built For Speed weren't gems of musical construction, they at least stuck on one topic and developed that topic fully.

On Rant n' Rave, however, they seem to try to make every song an anthem about everything, thus overextending their lyrical abilities. The single, "Sexy & 17," for example, first takes on school, then becomes about a girl, then goes off on a tangent concerning a rock band. As it is, none of the subjects are developed enough to give the song much punch.

"Rebels Rule" suffers the same fate. Setzer apparently couldn't write a coherent three minutes worth of material, so he fills out the song with chants of "You can take that school and shove it up your ass!" and "Rock and roll is never too loud!"

There are, however, two cuts off Rant n' Rave in which the spirit of the Stray Cats' earlier work lives on. The first of these is "18 Miles to Memphis," a C & W inspired "on the road" number in which Setzer demonstrates his expanding ability on Hawaiian slide guitar.

The other is "How Long You Wanna Live, Anyway?" a great rumble tune which features some cutting surf-style guitar and Jerry Lee Lewis-esque bravado vocals.

These songs demonstrate that the Stray Cats are talented musicians and offers hope that good things will once again come from these young men in the future. It is a pity that the future isn't now.

Marine author to order air strike

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Reagan has authorized the Marines to order air strikes against Lebanese and other multinational peacekeepers in Beirut if they refuse to leave the White House said Tuesday. As negotiations continue, the White House said it will not adhere to the Warrenton, presidential spokesman confirmed a military procedures in Beirut and the U.S. presence.

He said the Marines air strikes and naval bombardments in response to attacks on positions "if that act of Lebanese armed forces Marines."

"The Marines or the offshore may take actions against the Lebanese," he said.

SPEAKES SAID the broader grant of the firepower in his includes mortars and snipers and then request "He any kind" if needed.

The offshore fire naval guns and air support Harrier jets and A-6s on the carrier USS Eisenhower, the frigate USS Druze positions that Marines.

Senior American officials said the broader grant of Marines was meant as a response to Syria to stop encouraging attacks by the Syrian. The shift was approved last week after being approved by the administration.

While Speakes stressed "have always been at the defense of the Marines peace-keeping forces in Beirut."

The decision, urged by the Department and U.S. Robert McFarlane, is "the president's repeated that the Marines have defend themselves and Speakes said.

U.S. officials made strikes could be ordered attacks on the Marines' bases of the multinational includes British, French troops.
