Write-ins sweep school board election

Marines authorized to order air strikes

WASHINGTON (UPI) - President Reagan has authorized U.S. Marines in Lebanon to order air strikes and naval bombardments if necessary to protect Americans and other members of the multinational peacekeeping force, the White House said Tuesday.

As negotiations continued between the White House and Congress on adherence to the War Powers Resoluion, presidential spokesman Larry Speakes confirmed a change in U.S. military procedures in Lebanon.

Speakes said the 1,200-member Marine contingent and offshore support units could conduct air strikes against Syrian-backed Moslems "if there is a threat to the safety of the MNF, other U.S. military personnel in Beirut and the U.S. diplomatic

He said the Marines could also order air strikes and naval bombardments in response to attacks on Lebanese army positions "if that action against the Lebanese armed forces endangers the

"The Marines or the supporting units offshore may take appropriate counteractions against the attacking unit,"

SPEAKES SAID the Marine commander on the ground "can first use the firepower in his unit, which includes mortars and small arms fire," and then request "fleet firepower of any kind" if needed.

The offshore firepower includes naval guns and air support from AV-8 Harrier jets and A-6 bombers based on the carrier USS Eisenhower. Last week, the frigate USS Bowen shelled Druze positions that fired on the Marines.

Senior American officials confirmed the broader grant of authority to Marines was meant as another signal to Syria to stop encouraging and sup-porting attacks by Moslem factions. The shift was approved during the weekend after being discussed at the highest levels of the administration.

While Speakes stressed the Marines "have always been authorized to defend themselves," he acknowledged the permission to request air strikes in defense of the Marines and other peace-keeping forces marked a change in policy.

The decision, urged by the State Department and U.S. Special Envoy Robert McFarlane, is consistent with 'the president's repeated statements that the Marines have the right to defend themselves and will do so," peakes said.

U.S. officials made clear that air strikes could be ordered in response to attacks on the Marines or other members of the multinational force, which includes British, French and Italian

Coalition takes fair rent issue to council floor

By Carlos Trevino

Members of the Iowa City Fair Rent Coalition said during the Iowa City Council's formal meeting Tuesday night that city rents are "much higher than other cities in Iowa," which is only one reason the city needs a fair rent ordinance.

Coalition member Jim Rhodes said that an "apartment glut" did not exist in Iowa City, rather a "landlord's market," does. Coalition members also said a fair rent ordinance and the creation of a fair rent board was 'within the powers of the council."

The council also voted against an Iowa City Planning and Zoning commission recommendation to change the M-1 light industrial zoning of 521 Kirkwood Ave. to R-2 residential zoning, for an apartment development.

The planning and zoning commission on July 7 approved of R-2 zoning for the property after its owner, Iowa City developer Larry Rigler, withdrew his application for R-3 residential zoning, would have allowed multi-unit family housing

The council's decision will keep the property zoned for light industrial use which Mayor Mary Neuhauser said was "very unacceptable, but R-2 is very restrictive."

The council also accepted a proposal recommended by the Iowa City Airport Commission to place the airport within Federal Aviation Administration safety requirements.

THE PROPOSAL, which will require both the city and airport to provide funds, would allow for the purchase of 25 acres of land and 75 acres of easements around the airport and begin construction on extending another runway. The FAA is expected to provide 90 percent of the funding necessary to correct the safety viola-

The violation of FAA requirements occurred when the council and city staff approved of developer Kenneth Ranshaw's request to build two apartment complexes in an airport runway's clear zone. The FAA then cut off the city's applications for grants to improve the airport.

In Tuesday's public hearing on the fair rent ordinance - which could become a referendum on the November ballot if the council votes against it Sept. 27 - councilors heard from members of the fair rent coalition, the Greater Iowa City Apartment Association and property owners.

"There's going to be a lot of people speaking and this (hearing) will be done very late," Neuhauser told the standing-room-only crowd in the council chambers. More than 50 people signed up to speak on the issue.

COALITION MEMBER Peter Grady said he wanted to "dispel any notions that have risen in the past few days dinance," and said the council "does indeed have the power," to enact such an ordinance.

provide for a city council appointed fair rent board that would have landlords "open the (financial) books," but not pry into personal tax informa-Coalition member Mike Bognanno presented figures commparing apartment rents in Iowa City to those of other cities with populations of more than 50,000 people, including Cedar Rapids and the Quad City area.

That study showed Iowa City rents were "60 percent higher for a threebedroom apartment." The study stated the average rent for a three-bedroom apartment was $537 in Iowa City and $349 in the Quad Cities.

THE REPORT ALSO stated that a two-bedroom apartment in Iowa City was $428 while in Cedar Rapids the cost was $286. An efficiency in Iowa City rents at an average $249 while in Cedar Rapids an efficiency would rent for $158 per month, Bognanno said.

Jim Rhodes, also a coalition member, said it would require "five people in each unit," to establish a fivepercent vacancy rate in Iowa City. A five percent vacancy rate would provide for a "renters market," while the city's current situation is "a landlord's market," he said.

Landlords and associations representing them also confronted the council with their views of fair rent.

Susan Young cited several reasons why the city should not have an ordinance controlling rent. "There is no rental shortage, fewer apartments would be built due to risk factors an ordinance would bring." Young also said homeowners would soak up the property tax which developers would no longer be paying when their property's decreased in value.

Jim Barry, representing the board of directors to the Greater Iowa City Baord of Realtors, said "all property owners would foot the bill for rent con-

The council will vote on whether to enact the ordinance at their Sept. 27 formal meeting.

TV tower site study meets lowa City airport opposition

By Patricia Thorn

The results of a study done by an aviation consulting firm hired by the Television Development Association of Iowa have shown that the proposed site for a 2,000 feet television tower near Frytown is feasible if "minor adjustments" are made in the landing procedures to one of Iowa City's airport

The report by ATC Associates, Inc., of Alexandria, Va., stated that the landing procedure change "eliminates all of the affect of the proposed tower height," except for a radar "vectoring altitude," which should have no effect on flights or air traffic control in the area.

William Newbrough of TDAI said the airport's navigational radio beacon would have to be moved to prevent the television tower from interfering with the revised instrument approaches to the airport.

But Iowa City Airport Manager Fred Zehr said that in addition to being used for instrument approaches the beacon is used as an "end identifier" on one of the airport runways. "If you move the beacon, you lose two other approaches," he said.

NEWBROUGH SAID the aviation consultants "have never heard of anything like that (the end identifier). And from what I've seen at the airport, it couldn't possibly serve that purpose anyway.'

Zehr said, however, "I'm not saying that the beacon couldn't be moved, but it doesn't look too good. The expense has to be taken into account. We spent $10,000 having it installed just this summer." TDAI advised the Iowa City Airport Commission that it would "consider participating in the expenses of relocating the radio beacon," Newbrough said, if the move would eliminate the conflict over the proposed tower site.

Newbrough said he is meeting with Dwaine Hiland of the Federal Aviation Association's Air Space and Procedures Section in Kansas City Thursday to discuss the report. Hiland will make the final decision on whether the tower site is a hazard.

ACCORDING TO Newbrough, FAA officials believe there is strong local opposition to the tower. He said it has been difficult to gain a show of local support for the tower site because of other "very serious and unrelated matters involving the Iowa City Airport.

"Even before all the comments were in, he (Hiland) was leaning towards declaring the tower a hazard because he has the impression that there's a Newbrough said the delay in granting clearance to the television project is placing Iowa City "in a posi-tion that is not to its best interest." He also said he has not heard of any opposition from area pilots regarding the tower site.

Sure, we'll look at this idea," Zehr said. "We won't turn our back on any suggestions, but I won't make any promises." He added that he is "looking around" the airport for alternative sites.

The proposed television station could begin operating in the fall of 1984 on UHF-channel 20. If connected with two other new television stations proposed for the Des Moines and Carroll areas, it would reach approximately 90 percent of the Iowa television audience, Newbrough said.

Colleges feel impact of $6 million loss in budget

Officials from UI departments and colleges are now watching as their funding recedes and their programs suffer from the loss of nearly $6 million in state appropriations.

Reduced hiring of new faculty, purchasing of equipment, and building renovation and maintenance are measures UI administrators deem cessary to help cope with "a very difficult fiscal situation.

UI Vice President for Finance Ranall Bezanson said the faculty has been making plans to help cope with Gov. Terry Branstad's 2.8 percent "across-he-board" state budget cut. Although faculty hiring has already been slowed by previous years' cutbacks, Bezanson said now empty positions will be filled only if there is "direct need" to fill them.

GEORGE DALY, dean of the UI College of Business Administration, said he is "feeling the impact" of the budget cuts. A few instructors who have left will not be replaced and equipment, for which there is no state money, will possibly be purchased "The waiting lists for about six classes are longer than the class lists," Journalism School Director Kenneth Starck says, "We've already pinched every penny we have."

through private sources.

Daly, who came to the UI last spring, said "I didn't anticipate this happening." But he said he has confidence the economy will improve. "In the long run, the prospects for the state and university are good. I'm not worried."

However, UI Hospitals Director of Finance Ken Yerington lacks such a bright outlook after $708,000 was cut from the indigent patient care program that provides medical care to Iowans who can not pay for the services.

Yerington said this year's reversion must be added to the current debt of $737,000 and will leave the care program more than $1 million in the

"A multi-faceted approach" is necessary to counter the losses, Yerington said. One facet would be a reduction in county quota allocations. The quota system is based on the number of indigents each county can send to the UI Hospitals for state funded ANOTHER WAY for the program to save money will be to "defer equipment and building repair expenditures," he said.

Restrictions will also be placed on supplying indigents with artificial limbs and back braces. Yerington stressed that the care program would try to help people find other money elsewhere for these needs.

Another way the hospital can subsidize the indigent program is by taking a percentage out of private patients' bills to pay for those who can not. This method is called "overpay."

the UI School of Journalism. Director Kenneth Starck said, "Any cutbacks in our program will be extremely damaging because past cuts were already

The extent of the cuts in the journalism school is not yet known. "Word hasn't filtered down from the executive officers yet," Starck said.

Enrollment in the journalism school has increased from 683 students in 1981, to about 800 in 1982 and again to about 900 this year, Starck said, but the school's budget has increased by only 4

'We haven't been asked to give back the increase yet, but it could hap-pen ...," he said. "What the dean giveth, the dean can taketh back."

HIGHER ENROLLMENT in the journalism school has left many students dissatisfied because many required journalism classes are over-

"The waiting lists for about six classes are longer than the class lists," Starck said. He even receives calls from concerned parents of UI students who complain about the unavailability of classes their children need.

Tightening the journalism school budget even more will be hard to do, according to Starck. "We've already pinched every penny we have."

All this has had an ill effect on the urnalism teaching staff, Starck said. "Morale of the faculty is way down and getting worse.

Chairman of the UI Department of Communications and Theater Arts John W. Bowers said his department is also feeling the pinch.

The $650,000 cut from the Capital Appropriations fund will still leave enough money to basically equip the new communications facility. But, he said, that loss of money "caused some

This loss will hurt the program in the long run, he said. "If we don't get more money next year than we got this year, we will be in trouble."

Bowers said delays in hiring new people needed within the department have occurred and will continue to occur to help stay within the limited

ALTHOUGH HE insists the cutbacks 'haven't hurt the program," Bowers said new equipment purchases will be delayed and the department may not have enough money to bring in guest lecturers, something he considers an important part of the program.

Equipment necessary for instruction will be purchased, but "will be a small quantity compared to what would otherwise would be bought," Bezanson said. Things that aren't absolutely essential "won't be funded this year."

Another area where cutbacks will occur is building maintenance and renovations. Bezanson said the nearly 10 million square feet of building space on campus has "very, very substantial maintenance demands," but he said some of these demands may not be

'How much we will be able to do, we won't know for sometime, whether it will be a slowing down or stopping," he

George Klein, business manager at the UI Physical Plant, said "the UI makes an effort to upgrade all the time" and continually has plans and projects for maintenance and renovation. The effect of cutbacks in those areas are hard to determine, he said. "It's the kind of thing that doesn't affect you today or tomorrow - but who is to say (what will happen) over a period of years."

Schlafly controversy continues

By Kirk Brown

Even though it has been more than five months since political activist Phyllis Schlafly lectured at the UI, controversy is still raging over the event. Members of Students for Traditonal American Freedoms, a conservative political group responsible for bringing Schlafly to the UI, maintain numerous threats were made against her safety. But UI officials and the coordinator of the Womens' Resource and Action Center deny the validity of their claims. 'We are not going to stand for this one," said Susan Buckley, WRAC coordinator, referring to accusations that members of her group made threats of physical violence against Schlafly. "No member of the WRAC staff or advisory board made any threats against Phyllis Schlafly.

Phillip Jones, UI dean of student services, said "No threats were received by my office or by campus security that I am aware of.'

BUT FORMER STAF President Jerry Taylor said Tuesday night he was aware of "several bomb threats" at the Union the day Schlafly lectured. "Security officials at the Union told me three phoned bomb threats had been received the day Phyllis lectured."

The controversy concerning Schlafly's safety arose Monday when it was learned Schlafly has not yet been paid for her lecture because the UI Lecture Committee's advisor reportedly spent more than $1,000 of the money STAF had been allotted by the lecture committee to pay for incidental expenses. These allegedly include bills in excess of $700 to pay for UI security provided at lecture wasn't unusual. "It has been the policy of the university since the 1960s to use tighter security to protect any controversial speakers that come here - whether they are conservative

Captain William Fuhrmeister of Campus Security said security at the Schlafly lecture 'wasn't really out of the ordinary.

"I WOULD GUESS we had around ten people at the lecture," Fuhrmeister said. "We have lectures coming up in which we will have more people than that present."

But Jeffrey Renander, a member of STAF, said he had been involved with bringing other controversial lecturers to the UI "and never has the security been like that.

We wanted to hire one security guard and pay $35 and instead we end up paying for a full security force we didn't ask for."

Insurance plan opens to staff

By Jill Nieman Special to The Daily Iowan

Merit employees at the three state universities will have a chance next year to enjoy the open enrollment insurance policy now reserved for faculty and professional and scientific staff, because of a decision reached by the State Executive Council Monday.

Open enrollment involves the method in which employees can join and change their insurance plans.

"With open enrollment an employee can sign up for a program, take their plan and leave," said Don Winter, executive vice president of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees (AFSCME).

A plan holder is able to move from one plan to another without showing insurability, such as a medical certificate verifying that he or she has no medical disabilities

Under Blue Cross and Blue Shield insurance the only employees who have been eligible for open enrollment are faculty and professional and scientific staff, whereas the merit system staff has not been

IN JULY the State Executive Council decided to stick with Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Iowa as the health insurance program for state employees. This decision sparked some questions as to whether the merit employees would be offered open enroll-

Blue Cross has three programs based on cost, program I being most costly and program III being least costly.

The question lies not with the cost, but with merit employees' ability to move from a less expensive program to a more expensive program regardless of their health condition.

AFSCME president Don McKee said the merit employees have had to live with more restrictive enrollment because they represent a larger group which collects more benefits.

The state Board of Regents has recommended that the merit system staff be placed in the same insurance plan as faculty and professional and scientific staff. A meeting was held Monday morning with the State Executive Council to discuss the possible change.

McKee said that he was pleased with the reaction of the council members, who were "ready to take action.

'They were willing to listen," he said. "By the end of the meeting they planned on conducting a study of how many people are in plan III and would like to change to plan II or I."

Freedman looks to future, outlines new plan for UI

In an address to faculty Tuesday, UI President James O. Freedman detailed the directions he believes the UI should take in the future

Entitling his ideas "A Proposal for the Future of the University of Iowa," Freedman outlined a threestep program consisting of increased endowments for distinguished faculty members and doctoral students as well as the creation of a center for advanced

Freedman said his program, which would be financed by a five-year $100 million fund-raising effort, 'will ensure as this institution approaches the 21st century it will continue to grow."

He told the faculty that "for the past four decades the university has grown in quality" and made special mention of the extensive academic building program that has been underway.

Freedman admitted that in recent years "the severe fiscal problems of the state have had an impact on education," but praised the UI faculty for performing "with continued and steadfast loyalty to the goal to which we are all committed.'

DESPITE THE problems currently facing the UI, Freedman said "we must dare to aim beyond our current difficulties and begin to look toward the

He repeatedly stressed that the future goals of the UI should deal primarily with the "people of the university community

"I believe we can maintain and strengthen the University of Iowa in years ahead," Freedman said. 'But to do so we must concentrate on people

In explaining the first aspect of his proposal, the establishment of endowments for faculty members, Freedman said it is important the UI find 'distinguished scholars that know how to teach."

Freedman said the endowments would allow the UI to encourage professors teaching elsewhere to come here, as well as "keeping the fine professors already teaching here.'

In the second part of his proposal Freedman suggested creating endowments for "outstanding doctoral students," because the "reciprocal reinforcement" between excellent faculty members and doctoral students "adds to the vitality of the univer-

"The future of the university depends on our ability to attract and educate the finest doctoral students," he said.

IN ADDITION to advocating increased endowments for faculty members and doctoral students Freedman also called for the establishment "of a center for advanced study

Pointing out that Iowa is located near "the middle of the nation geographically," Freedman said "we should also strive to keep in the middle of the cultural and intellectual affairs of the nation."

The establishment of a center for advanced study would accomplish this goal, he said, detailing a wide variety of programs it could research.

Under his plan "three groups of (appointed) fellows would comprise the intellectual population of

These "fellows" would include appointed faculty members and doctoral students from the UI as well

Freedman said advanced study centers have already been established by a number of other universities but admitted the cost of beginning such a project "would not be inexpensive."

Freedman said he hoped his proposals would spark conversation at the UI. "I hope every (UI) college becomes a forum for discussing this proposal," he said, because its success depends "on the support of the whole university community.'

Central Junior High is sold to Mercy

By Robyn Griggs

The fate of Central Junior High School was ecided Monday night in an extremely close vote, as the Iowa City School Board voted to sell the property to Mercy Hospital. The hospital submitted the only bid on the 80-year-old building and its surrounding property. The board voted 4-3 to sell it to the ospital for $1.6 million.

"I think they thought it should be sold, that he district shouldn't hold onto the property if it isn't going to be used," said Board President Lynne Cannon, who voted against the

Although the district administration's ecommendation was to sell Central, Cannon said she thought "people had decided where they stood prior to the administration recom-

DORSEY PHELPS, a board member who voted in favor of selling the building, said the vote "was the end of a very long process of decision-making of what would come of that property. Long ago we made the decision that we didn't, for the foreseeable future, need the unior high," she said. "From that point on, 've been prepared to sell the property.'

Providing parking for the site is the main concern of the hospital, and remains the first priority for its use of the property, said Linda Muston, community relations director for Mercy Hospital.

"We have been steadfastly concerned with the need for parking," she said. Iowa City will collect 10 percent of the purchase price, or approximately $160,000, as opposed to the $50,000 it would have collected had the hospital purchased the property for

The hospital did not bid on the property for public purpose usage because "it would have been impossible to fulfill the obligations," Muston said. Had the hospital decided to bid on the school for public purposes, it would have needed to create 60 parking spaces immediately at a cost of $500,000 to $600,000.

"That, of course, strongly encouraged our bidding not for public purposes," she said.

THE HOSPITAL'S exact plans for the property are "still very new," Muston said. 'Everything has been so hypothetical at this point that we can just now sit down and make plans. We don't even know when the sale will be consummated."

A gymnasium wing of the building adjacent to the hospital might be saved to use for community health programs.

"We are very interested in preventive health programs and have very limited space here because of parking and accessiblity problems, so we are going to take a careful look at the gymnasium and evaluate it,'

Cannon, who voted not to sell the property, is interested in saving what historical items can be saved from the building.

Iowa City Superintendant of Schools David Cronin and a group of school board members selected some pieces of furniture at the building Tuesday morning to be saved for the CANNON SAID she "felt very keenly we should have offices in that building. For good fiscal management that would be better. A block of downtown property like that is a considerable asset for the district," she said.

Phelps said she is "very pleased the

The money the district gained from the sale of the property was "of course, a big influence," Phelps said.

in candidates') long-time activeness in following the school board. I certainly think it was a good that they did give voters the opportunity to get a choice.

Lumsden said a lack of organization contributed to his defeat. "Probably not being organized was a factor, but Ellen (Widiss) ran a strong campaign from the beginning." He said he will try again next year.

Halliburton was "not really" surprised by his defeat "because I did know the voting clout they (the write-in candidates) had with the voters.

"One of the things that appealed to me about the candidacy was that I would not be running actively. I did get an education in running a campaign," he said.

Halliburton was not the only one to get an education from the election. Johnson County Auditor Tom Slockett said "essentially, people aren't used to writing in on the machines so it was an education for Johnson County voters.

"People misinterpreted and thought that there was somehow an official write-in slate, but anyone was eligible as a write-in Poll workers were instructed not to inform voters who the write-in candidates were, Slockett said. That caused a few irate phone calls to the elections office from voters looking for alternatives to the unopposed candidates.

"The poll workers would have been remiss in giving them directions," Slockett said, even if it meant telling what the proper spelling of their names should be Widiss said, "I am very grateful to the county auditor's office and Tom Slockett for the care which he has taken once notified there was a write-in campaign to make sure the poll workers were very well informed to give careful instruction so people who wanted to write in, could."

Wooldrik said, "It was a whole lot easier to write in a vote than I thought it was. I think the whole district got an education."

Stan Aldinger, who will be leaving the other director's seat, said the successful write-in campaign "just goes to show that there is a healthy interest in education in Iowa City." Aldinger said that "for the kind of election it was, there was a high turnout."

Marines

Although the new orders could escalate American participation in what Reagan has called Lebanon's "civil war" and sharpen debate over the war powers act, Speakes said Reagan still believes the presence of he Marines on the ground and more than 2,000 other U.S. military personnel offshore do not require a congressional mandate.

Congressional leaders and the White House continued work on a compromise that would keep U.S. Marines in Lebanon while giving Congress some say over the Secretary of State George Shultz, meantime, met with members of the Senate in private for about two hours and several senators raised the war powers issue, saying the president should seek congressional approval under that law remain in Lebanon.

Administration officials warned Congress that setting a time limit on the deployment of U.S. Marines in Lebanon could spark new attacks on the U.S. peacekeeping force and endanger American lives.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY of State Nicholas Veliotes told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee a six-month time limit on the Marine deployment, as proposed in one congressional resolution, would be "a grave error" and "almos guarantee" increased attacks by factions opposed to the Lebanese government.

Gen. Paul Kelly, Marine commandant, agreed with the administration position that his troops do not face what would be considered "imminent hostilities" under the war powers act.

HOUSE OPPONENTS, led by Reps. Ed Bethune, R-Ark., and Clement Zablocki, D-Wis., have promised a bitter fight when the conference report is taken up in the House. However, it is considered unlikely that the chamber would send the report back to the committee to excise the nerve gas money.

Eight Democrats voted against the measure: Ernest Hollings of South Carolina, Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts, Patrick Leahy of Vermont, Carl Levin of Michigan, Howard Metzenbaum of Ohio, Claiborne Pell of Rhode Island, William Proxmire of Wisconsin and Paul Tsongas of Massachusetts.

The provision was originally rejected in the House and only passed in the Senate, 50-49, with the help of a tie-breaking vote by Vice President George Bush.

Tower and several other senators also cited the contributions of Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., who died of a heart attack during Congress' summer recess, and noted the next Trident submarine will be named for him.

A dream lost?

"From secrecy and deception in high places, come home, America. From a conflict in Indochina which maims our ideals as well as our soldiers, come home, America. From the waste of idle hands to the joy of useful labor, come home, America. From the prejudice of race and sex, come home, America." Another dream unrealized.

The time was July, 1972. The place was the Democratic National Convention in Miami Beach. The dream was George McGovern's.

Now McGovern is stalking the dream again. He says he will join the already crowded field of Democratic contenders scrambling to get a crack at dethroning President Reagan in 1984.

But campaign workers for Mondale, Hart and Cranston, at least at the local level, don't seem to be taking McGovern's announcement very seriously.

"We don't see McGovern as a threat at all," said Jeff Winick. Johnson County coordinator of Gary Hart's campaign. Ironically, Hart, now a U.S Senator from Colorado, managed McGovern's 1972 campaign.

Winick echoed the criticism many other democrats are levelling against the South Dakotan's chances in the 1984 presidential race. McGovern is perceived as a loser. "In general if you can't win reelection for the senate in your own state, I don't see how in hell you can win the national nomination."

McGovern did lose his bid for re-election in 1980, but liberals Birch Bayh, Frank Church, Gaylord Nelson, Warren Magnuson and Iowa's own John Culver all were victims of National Conservative Political Action Committee tactics.

Now it seems McGovern may become a victim of his own party and its shift to the right. In his campaign platform, leaked to the Los Angeles Times, he steps to the far left, suggesting 25 percent cuts in military spending and reactivation of New Deal-like pro-

Up to now the "bleeding heart" of 1984 has been beating in the Cranston camp. Yet Jeffrey Cox, chairman of the Johnson County Democratic Party and Cranston supporter, said, "On the whole the existing candidates are pretty cautious and conservative."

Cox said McGovern probably isn't running as a serious candidate. "He is running to raise issues or achieve something else."

Mondale supporter Ken Albrecht also suspects that McGovern's purpose is "to promote a more liberal viewpoint" and not to actually capture the nomination.

Besides, as most politicos agree, Albrecht said, "he's starting too late in the ball game."

It's too bad that a candidate can launch a campaign 10 months ahead of the nominating convention and be too late. It's also too bad the party must be coerced into accepting a more

Although Cranston pushes peace and jobs, his support of the B-1 bomber, for whatever reasons, still taints his campaign. Although Mondale says military spending is too high, in a survey taken this summer by the Stop the Arms Race Political Action Committee he suggested 4 percent continued growth. Hart advocates a bilateral nuclear freeze, but is cautious about making promises of unilateral concessions.

McGovern's strong breath of liberalism should be taken more seriously. His dream should be the Democratic Party's dream.

KAY, I KNOW I'm new here and it's sort of presumptuous for someone still getting acclimated to the UI to already be pointing out something very inadequate about the college experience to people who have already had a lot more inadequate experience than I have.

But the other day I was heightening my awareness of the UI by visiting some of the campus buildings I don't have classes in, like the Chemistry-Botany Building and the Lobotomy Laboratory and the old state capitol the interior and the winding staircase in particular are delightful examples of our past heritage, considering how long ago they were constructed - when I realized that I had been here three weeks, and still hadn't even seen Mr. Freedman

James O. Freedman, as most of you probably know, is president of our university

Now I know this was almost naive of me to place such significance on this, but at the school I come from, Paul Kantner High School in Inglewood, Calif., it was always customary for the principal to meet in small groups with every new freshman student and by the time I was a senior and had finished Second Runner Up in the Miss Inglewood contest - I'm not saying this as bragging just to make myself look good here or anything; I'm honestly probably not that much above average in looks and it was probably my baton twirling abilities and personality that impressed the judges - the principal knew me well enough to congratulate me personally over the loud speaker system during homeroom.

I'M NOT unrealistic or anything. I know that with around 30,000 people here it would take President Freedman days to meet everybody individually even if he really tried - which I understand he hasn't, but I know he must be busy lots of times concerning himself with important procedures about first home game.

Hoyt Olsen

So I decided to take personal initiative to go by Jessup Hall just to say hello and introduce myself, so I'd feel like I knew him if I ever needed help with a serious problem, like with my roommate or something.

First I went and looked up his picture at The Daily Iowan so I wouldn't make a fool of myself if I met him just out wandering the hall and ask him for directions to himself, which could have been pretty embarrassing.

He has big glasses that make him look sincere, and short black hair that was neat and a little shiny in the picture like he uses something to hold it down so it doesn't look scruffy when he's trying to impress kids to come here instead of Iowa State or Kirkwood Community College.

THEN I WENT to Jessup Hall and talked to his own secretary, which he has as one would expect for a university president. She was nice enough and was willing to wait and wasn't doing decorum.

anything more distracting during the next three hours than humming softly and filing my nails so I don't think the part she told me about having a pearl handled derringer in her purse with a bullet she'd filed the end of herself so it would fragment on impact was necessary. If she'd been patient enough to hint a third time that that afternoon wasn't a good time, I'd have happily come back another day.

It wasn't until later that a friend who's really been around and is a sophomore already having graduated a semester early from high school told me that no president of the UI has met with an actual student since maybe early 1970, when she thought maybe then-President Willard Boyd was held hostage briefly.

NOW I understand that the president's secretary has to screen him from some non-essential contacts, but this seems excessive to me. Poor President Freedman must feel awfully isolated some times, not even knowing there are people willing to talk to him in the outer office unless he walks through on his way to the lavatory on the second floor, and then he wouldn't really have time for a substantial chat who can have tenure and what the all, and I understood that I didn't have unless you went with him, which I halftime entertainment will be at the an appointment. But I explained that I wouldn't for obvious reasons of What I'm getting to is that students who want to meet President Freedman should come to a surprise party for him this Saturday at 7 a.m. on the lawn of the president's mansion.

I've never organized a party at a place this big, so I'm taking the liberty of making some assignments to organizations that should want to help.' I thought those in student government could bring snack stuff like croissants and cucumber sandwiches.

AND I THOUGHT maybe someone could provide entertainment by dressing up in clown costumes and shouting ridiculous funny things at the rest of us who go. Since I read somewhere that liberals take themselves too seriously, I thought maybe Jerry Renander and the rest of the staph of the Hawkeye Review could do that.

And to be fair about who should bring the beer, I drew addresses out of a hat at random, and the suppliers are whoever currently lives in 3528 Burge Hall and 2311 Quadrangle.

And just for kicks, let's make it a come-as-you-are party, so you have to wear whatever you have on when you read the paper.

Hope to see you there.

U.S. is paying for Begin's debacle

T IS ALWAYS a tragedy to have a son die in warfare, even when your heart and mind tell you that the cause was noble

It is horrible to have 50,000 sons die in a conflict such as Vietnam, when the leaders say the cause is freedom and the nation doesn't believe it.

It must be intolerably painful to have a son die when even those who consigned him to the ultimate sacrifice cannot concoct any great moral or political purpose - and when you know that your son is the victim of foreign policy blunders by your government and its allies.

U.S. marines are now being maimed and killed in Lebanon, not for any grand cause that they or their parents can understand or appreciate, but because of amateurish bungling by the Reagan administration in the explosive Jimmy Carter lost his re-election bid and had his presidency discredited because he twisted helplessly in the wind during the Iranian hostage crisis. Ronald Reagan won millions of votes by portraying Carter as a wimp while Reagan uttered macho talk about how, once he became president, no thirdrate nation would ever again kick Uncle Sam in the shin.

THOSE MARINE casualties are evidence that Israel and its prime minister, Menachem Begin, set Reagan to twisting in the wind. And Israel created a mess in which a fourth-rate country, Syria, is now kicking Uncle Sam in the derriere. With the Soviet Union providing the boot.

ing. I do not. I think the man knows that the invasion of Lebanon was a blunder of monumental magnitude. Rather than destroy the drive for a Palestinian state, it created worldwide sympathy for the Palestinians and ripped away the halo of morality under which Israel had basked. In fact, it made Israel a pariah in much of the world, including portions of Europe and the United States. The Lebanon caper cost far more economically than Israel could afford. It cost Israel more in military casualties than the Israeli people will accept.

SO WE WIND up with the dichotomous tragedy of a rambunctious Israel rushing into Lebanon and Beirut, ostensibly against the wishes of the Reagan administration, and then a wounded, chastened Israel withdrawing from Beirut earlier than the U.S. desires.

Depressed by the mounting casualties, Begin has dumped his mess on the United States, France and thers. But it now seems obvious that the American and French people are at any time in its history. Under Begin, no more content to see their sons die in Israel has been expansionist on the Lebanon than are the people of Israel. The Iranian hostage-takers made

Voland chastised

To the editor:

Living in Iowa City for the past seven years and reading The Daily Iowan on a regular basis, I find myself reading mostly articles that interest me, (that is, Sports and Arts/Entertainment). In the Arts/Entertainment section, I read an article that would have been more appropriate on the editorial page (DI, Sept. 6). The new Arts/Entertainment editor, John Voland, has in only two weeks of classes shown that DI readers will be subjected to only his personal attitudes and not actual entertainment reporting. His article on the Elvis Brothers clearly shows that Voland also insists upon writing articles when ignorant of the subject.

For his benefit, I would like to clear up some of his major misconceptions: 1) The Elvis Brothers are not a rockabilly band.

2) The Elvis Brothers are most certainly doing better on the regional music scene than most other live-act

3) The Elvis Brothers do not envy 4) The Elvis Brothers are not a rockabilly-revival package. 5) The Elvis Brothers do not wear 1950s period clothing and hairstyles.

6) The Elvis Brothers' rapport with their audiences is merely theatrical sarcasm of bands that play stereotypical covers.

7) If a "real" rockabilly bank played Iowa City, the ignorant musical mentality of the crowd would not accept them. (i.e. Big Daddy Sun and The Hellbillys)

For these reasons, The Elvis Brothers have devised a show for those who watched American Graffiti and "Happy Days" and want to believe that is how the '50s were lived.

If something is wrong with this type of show as enjoyable, entertaining and fun-to-listen-to music, why did Ken Adamany, the public relations manager for Cheap Trick, promote the band throughout the midwest? Why did the CBS Portrait label sign the band for an internationally-distributed album? Why did the producer of The Red Rockers bring the band to New Orleans to film an MTV clip? And finally, why did a capacity crowd at the Crow's Nest (despite a $3 cover charge and no usual bar specials) cheer the band for two sets and two encores? I have yet to see groups of people leave an Elvis Brothers show insulted or disappointed, so you and your guitar-player friend, Voland, were on this night in the minority. So stick with something you can relate to.

The similarities between this year's Penn State football team and last year's Hawkeye squad are not all that great, according to Iowa Coach Hayden Fry.

Darryl Strawberry drove in three runs and Mike Fitzgerald became the 48th player in major league history to hit a homer in his first at-bat, helping the New York Mets tumble Philadelphia into second place in the National League East with a 5-1 victory over the Phillies.

The decision, coupled with Mon-treal's victory over Chicago and Pittsburgh's triumph over St. Louis, left the Expos in first place, with Philadelphia a half-game back and the Pirates one game off the pace.

Strawberry ripped his 25th homer and drove in runs with a single and a double to enable Walt Terrell, 7-7, to defeat the Phillies after losing three by Tony Ghelfi, 1-1, to score a run in the first. Keith Hernandez and George Foster walked, then Strawberry singled to make it 1-0. In Chicago, Terry Francona capped a four-run first inning with a two-run double and reliever Bob James picked up his first major league victory Tuesday in leading the Montreal Expos to a 5-2 triumph over the Chicago Cubs.

James, 1-0, gave up just one hit and walked one in 41-3 innings, striking out

CUBS' STARTER Dickie Noles, 5-10, gave up a leadoff single to Tim Raines in the first inning. Raines then stole his 71st base and scored on Andre Dawson's triple to the center-field wall. Dawson scored when second baseman Dan Rohn bobbled Al Oliver's grounder. Gary Carter forced Oliver at second, but Noles walked Tim Wallach and Francona doubled into the right-

Weinstine draws attention with court play

By Mike Condon Assistant Sports Editor

Two months ago, Juli Weinstine's plans were to enter the UI Business College as a transfer student from Van-

But one day last summer, her plans changed a bit. She happened to be playing tennis with a friend at the Kinnick Stadium tennis courts. Weinstine was having a pretty good day and drew the attention of a player on the court adjacent to hers - Iowa women's tennis Coach Cathy Ballard.

The thing that makes this even more amazing is the fact that Weinstine hadn't played competitively for three

"It was just a coincidence that I even got the chance to try out for the team," night during the summer, but a friend and I went one morning and Cathy was there and asked me to tryout.'

WEINSTINE didn't have the luxury of playing high school tennis per se. She attended Morrison (III.) High School which did not field a tennis team. Her only competition was district and state competition in the Illinois High School meet.

When it came time to look for a college. Weinstine didn't find any good offers for tennis - "I didn't have too good of a senior year in districts," she said - so she enrolled at Vanderbilt where she became a "social tennis

But a dropping of the undergraduate business program at Vanderbilt had me," she said. "I never even ran a WELL. BALLARD took to Weinstine just as quickly. The diminutive junior came through tryouts and made the 10member Hawkeye squad. "She just has a basic enthusiasm for life," Ballard said. "And the big thing is that her enthusiasm rubs off on the other players.'

Making the top 10 doesn't insure a player much court time and Weinstine s aware that the fall season will be one of adjustment for her.

"This is a working semester for mile before I came here. The running and the (weightlifting) are new things to me but I know they will help me improve as a tennis player."

Right now, Weinstine says it's "just an honor" to be a part of the Iowa squad, but she does have some definite goals. "My goal is eventually to work my way into the top six, if not this season then next," she said.

"I DREAM OF the day Iowa wins the Big Ten title and I'm going to know that I was a part of it either as a player or one who helped the other players.' Ballard just can't say enough about the attitude Weinstine brought with her to Iowa. "She came here with a very realistic approach," Ballard said.

"I've never seen a player who knows

she isn't going to see much court time

'In this day and age of the pampered athlete, that kind of dedication is unheard of. Juli has a goal of selfimprovement that is really amazing." Don't get the idea that Weinstine is all that bad of a tennis player though. "In almost any other year she would have been in the top six," Ballard said. "But when you consider the fact that we have two freshmen in the top three and five returners from last year, its easy to see why she's not up there."

Weinstine knows that it will take a lot of patience and self sacrifice for her to work her way up. But if attitude and effort have anything to do with it, the name of Juli Weinstine may be remembered as a pretty good collegiate tennis lowa field hockey to battle Westerwinds with quickness

By Jill Hokinson

The Iowa field hockey team travels to Macomb, Ill., today to take on Western Illinois in a game that will pit speed against size, according to Hawkeye Coach Judith Davidson.

Davidson, whose team won three games and tied one match last weekend in action at St. Louis, Mo., described Western Illinois as a very aggressive team. "Their body control is not as good as I would prefer," Davidson said. "They like a lot of body con-

The Hawkeyes do not have a physically large team this year and Davidson believes the game could be tough for her players if they get bumped around.

Davidson said Iowa will use its speed to combat Western Illinois' size.

The game should be a very tough and scrappy match, Davidson said. "Western Illinois always likes to beat us, so I know it will be a hard and physically demanding game," she said.

The Hawkeyes are also preparing for the first home weekend of the season. To generate some enthusiasm for this year's field hockey team, Herky the Hawk will be passing out buttons Thursday on the Ronnie Harmon and Jonathan Hayes will start at the wingback and tight end positions respectively, according to Fry. Harmon will replace Bill Broghamer, and Hayes will fill the gap left open by an injured Mike Hufford.

Fry said he would like to redshirt junior college transfers Jerry Malone, Robert Oliver and Greg Fitzgerald. All three are defensive linemen, who will have two years of eligibility remaining if they are redshirted.

WMT radio calls on sportswriters to air their opinions about football method for airing their opinions rather than on the sports pages of their respective WMT radio (AM-600) in Cedar Rapids is giving its sports call-in show a new twist For the 11 weeks of the college football season, host Ron Gonder will be talking with sportswriters rather than listeners during the 7:05-7:55 p.m. Sportstalk program on Wednesday night.

'It is kind of an extension of what we do during the rest of the year," WMT program director Rick Sellers said. "We'll be taking the show to the Roosevelt Royale and the people at the restaurant will have the opportunity to listen to the program as it is being taped."

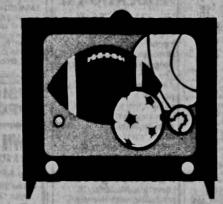

The show, because of scheduling conflicts with the reporters, will be taped on Tuesday evenings.

SELLERS SAID WMT "stole the idea from WGN in Chicago," whose popular program "The Sportwriters" is airing twice a week. "We think that we are big enough to do that and we've invited some of our competition to come on the show. It really gives the listeners a chance to get a Gonder will be joined weekly by writers from the Des Moines Register and the Cedar Rapids Gazette. The show will also feature a reporter from an area newspaper such as the Quad City Times or the Waterloo Courier. In addition. KGAN-2 Sports Director Howard James and KCRG-9 Sports Director John Campbell will be guests on the program.

TONIGHT'S PROGRAM will feature Bob

Dyer of the Des Moines Register, Don Doxsie from the Cedar Rapids Gazette and

"We'll focus mostly on Iowa and Iowa State football," Gonder said. "We'll probably talk about other football issues of national importance and maybe the baseball World Series when that comes Sellers said the show remains untested in the Eastern Iowa market, at least for the time being. "It has sold well so far." he said, "but it has yet to prove itself in the ratings. It is an interesting concept in programming and we'll conduct some research on it after it is completed to see if it was worthwhile.'

In general, football is the name of the game this weekend.

Former Iowa punter Reggie Roby will bring his foot to Monday Night Football for the first time Monday night when Miami meets the Los Angeles Raiders at 8 p.m. on ABC (KCRG-9).

CBS (KGAN-2) has a good doubleheader of NFL action that will be shown in this area on Sunday. At noon, the Los Angeles Rams meet Green Bay and at 3 p.m. Minnesota travels to Tampa Bay.

Iowa Coach Hayden Fry is scratching where it itches on Sunday nights at 10:30 p.m. on KWWL-7 with the Hayden Fry Show and Iowa State Coach Jim Criner will reflect on his team's game at Vanderbilt Sunday night at 11:30 p.m. on KCRG-9.

CBS (KGAN-2) and ABC (KCRG-9) both have action slated for Saturday. CBS' game begins at 11:30 a.m. and ABC will follow at 2:30 p.m. WTBS (Cable-17) features a match-up between two rated teams. West Virginia and Maryland, at 7 p.m. on

Once again this week, there will be a Thursday night version of Monday Night Football on ABC (KCRG-9). The battle of Ohio, between Cincinnati and Cleveland, will begin at 7:30 p.m.

Other than football, the best bet is Thursday evening's baseball game on the USA Network (Cable-23). Montreal and Philadelphia, a pair of teams fighting it out for National League East supremacy will meet in the City of Brotherly Love.

Steve Batterson is the DI sports editor. His sports media column appears every other

On the line

Oh, we've got some tough games for you this week as The Daily Iowan continues its fall feature. On the Line.

It's understandable if these games scare away some would-be prognosticators. For example, who would want to decide between Oklahoma and Ohio State, or Michigan and Washington, or Texas and Auburn, or ... But consider the grand prize - an eight-gallon keg of your favorite brew donated by R.T. Grunts, an exciting little night spot on South Dubuque Street.

But there is only one way to win the cold, tasty brew for family and friends. You have to fill out the official contest ballot, and ollow all the rules correctly. If you don't fill out the ballot exactly as follows, O.T. Line, the DI's resident prognosticator, will personally come to your home and tear the inaccurate little slip of paper to shreds right before your very eyes.

FIRST OF ALL, circle the names of the winners in the nine games listed on the ballot. Then, pick the winner of the tiebreaker in the same manner and predict the final score of the battle between Iowa and Penn State. If you believe any game will end in a tie, circle both teams.

Complete the ballot by signing your name and phone number on the bottom and return it to the DI business office, Room 111 of the Communications Center. Friendly Business Manager Mary New will be there to greet you with a smile.

All entries are due by noon on Thursday, and we won't accept a ballot even if its just one minute late. Get them in early ... And, let's be careful out there.

George Cukor directs, and the famous doubles team of Ruth Gordon and Garson Kanin wrote the script. With a young and thin Shelley Winters, double-crossed by Colman. At the Bijou tonight at 7.

• Another 1947 film, Dead Reckoning, features a dangerous Lizabeth Scott as the femme fatale who ensnares Humphrey Bogart in her trap. Bogey hangs tough, as usual, but is he tough enough? We don't know much about it, but with Bogart it can't be too bad. At the Bijou tonight at 9.

Note: The two above films are part of the Bijou's "Hard-Boiled Dames of the '40s" series and, as such, you can get in to see both for a measly two clams. If you should want to see only one of the two, however, it'll still cost ya $1.50.

• If you want comedy, you got it ... for free! The Russians Are Coming, The Russians Are Coming (1966), a featured film in CND's (Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament) film series, is showing in Shambaugh Auditorium at 7 p.m. And there is no admission charge. Admittedly a lightly comic essay on the Cold War, the film nevertheless has interesting parallels to the recent air tragedy. Starring Carl Reiner, Alan Arkin and Jonathan

Television

• On cable: Tonight, you can catch two of the best films of 1982: Barry Levinson's Diner (HBO, 9 p.m.), which is a light, likable comedy, and George Miller's The Road Warrior (HBO, 12:30 a.m.), which is a light, likable violent fantasy adventure. Also consider another top contender of last year, Fast Times at Ridgemont High (Cinemax, 11 p.m.). It features the excellent comedy performance of new teen star Sean Penn.

• On the networks: The UI's own Alex Karras stars with Susan Clark in the role-reversal comedy "Maid in America" (CBS, 8 p.m.). It's a TV movie rerun, so don't expect anything new. John Ford's The Last Hurrah (WTBS-Atlanta at 11 p.m.), starring Spencer Tracy as a city politician running for the last time, has an allstar veteran cast, including Pat O'Brien and John Carradine.

Two paintings stolen from Picasso show

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (UPI) -Police said Tuesday that the same crude method of entry - a cinderblock thrown through a glass door - was used to steal two Picasso paintings from a museum this week as was used in a previous theft of rare gems. The paintings, worth $910,000, were taken at 4 a.m. Monday from the Art Museum of South Texas.

The Picasso paintings were "Tete de Femme," a 1946 work valued at $550,000, and "Buste de Femme," painted in 1949 and worth $360,000. The vertical works were on a wall beside Dali painting valued at $2.1 million.

A silent alarm went off, but the burglars escaped before police arrived.

ALTHOUGH THE Picasso works would be impossible to sell openly, authorities said it was possible they could be sold underground to a zealous

Glenda Jackson is 'perfect' as English poet in 'Stevie'

By Richard Panek

RENDAN GILL once wrote of Stevie Smith's poems that "nothing seems to stand between them and us, least of all their maker." So it is with the film biography Stevie - nothing seems to stand

The making of a movie is anything but intimate, yet the makers of Stevie have created just that effect. Part of the illusion comes from the movie's many theatrical devices; it was originally a play, and in many ways still is.

But part of the illusion also comes from the sheer conviction of its creators. Stevie is clearly a labor of love, born of belief in the will power and words of Florence Margaret Smith, who was born in 1902 and who died in 1971.

After a tubercular childhood spent mostly in hospitals, Stevie, as she was nicknamed, lived a suburban life with her aunt. For a while Stevie commuted to her job in a London publishing firm, but a suicide attempt helped convince her that she would be happier at home, doing the housework, writing poetry and - especially waiting on her aunt.

"She is not a literary person, thank God," says Stevie early in the movie. Instead, her aunt is her one true passion.

JUST AS HOUSEWORK is a distraction from the headier concerns of her poetry, so is her aunt a tonic for her fear of death. Together in their suburban home, delighting in the details of daily life, the two women grow old.

It is within the living room of this house that Hugh Whitemore places his 1977 play and most of this movie. He limits his characters' number to four - Stevie and her aunt, a suitor named Freddie and The Man, a chorus and commentator who sometimes recites Stevie's poetry.

Actors addressing the audience, the single set and the paucity of characters are a few of the stage conventions that Whitemore and director Robert Enders have kept intact - deliberately.

They try to break down the barrier between the actors and the audience, to make the film as immediate as a play ... to suggest the intimacy of

It's a tough trick to pull off, and it wouldn't be possible without the right performers. As Stevie, Glenda Jackson is the perfect performer. Whether addressing the audience or thinking out loud; telling of a visit to the Queen or discussing dinner with her aunt: proclaiming her individuality to a suitor or picking a petty fight with a friend, Jackson is more of a presence in the theater than that person across the aisle.

MONA WASHBOURNE, whose stage and film career dates back almost 50 years, has played hundreds of roles. After Stevie, it is impossible to imagine her playing anyone but Stevie's aunt.

Thanks to those two performances, and the dedication of Whitemore and Enders to their singular vision - as well as Stevie's contribution, directly through her poetry and indirectly through her inspiration - this movie has become something of a classic since its initial release two years ago. Its current run at the Iowa Theatre is its first local booking (it also plays at the Bijou for three consecutive evenings Sept. 23-25), and it's about time.

This film captures the spirit of Stevie by making us more than a witness to her life. Stevie invites us into that suburban living room north of London and makes us feel at home.

Each episode was by a different director, so you could always count on the next one to be different, and, hopefully, better. With

The Twilight Zone, the first two episodes by Nightmares has no such luck. If anything, the episodes become progressively dum-ber. The final coup de grace of George Miller's episode in The Twilight Zone is hardly mirrored by Nightmares' final episode, called "The Night of the Rat." All the episodes are directed by Joseph

Sargent, so there's no chance that the film might get any better. And the screenplays

(producer Christopher Crowe wrote the first three and Jeffrey Bloom the last one) are particularly absurd. Here's a quick run-ing a crisis of faith, decides to leave his church behind in Mexico. On his drive to the States, a large black pick-up truck starts to terrorize him on the road. Could it be the Avenging Angel in a pick-up truck?

No such luck. It's the Devil. And to prove it to the skeptical audience, the truck explodes out of the ground in one scene, and later we see a cross hanging upside-down on the rear-view mirror. It just so happens that the priest is carrying a jug of holy water with him on the trip, so he flings it at the truck and it disappears. The priest goes back to his convent. Faith was never made

4. "Night of the Rat," like "The Benediction," shows some promise at the start, but the last half is so absurdly hilarious, the suspense created becomes laughable. The Houstons have a rat in their house, and it's not a small one either. This one is the size of a Saint Bernard. And it roars. Uh huh ...
