It was the biggest U.S. naval action since the Vietnam war.

Although the State Department called the naval bombardment "defensive," it marked a sharp escalation from the initial American policy of going into action only when artillery was directed at Marine peacekeepers.

The Lebanese army said the naval firepower helped its troops "inflict heavy losses" on the Druze Moslem attackers who demand a greater share of power in the central government and control of the Shouf mountains.

The troops, who have been guarding the Shouf town of Souk el Gharb for three weeks, repelled three onslaughts Government sources, however, noted Syrian troops were resupplying the Druze with ammunition for another anticipated attack.

The town, 8 miles southeast of Beirut, controls the only routes into Beirut and has become the government's major defense line guarding the

IF THE REBELS had captured the town, it would have put their artillery within range of greater Beirut and the Marine contingent of the multinational peacekeeping force.

The rebels, in a statement from the political party of Druze warlord Walid Jumblatt in Damascus, retracted a town and said it only "captured a strategic hill."

The statement claimed Druze gun- powered guided missile cruiser, and

State-run Beirut radio said the lost plane was a reconnaissance craft - not one of its three jet fighters.

The government also reported heavy clashes with Syrian forces north of the coastal city of Byblos, where it has built a makeshift airstrip on the coastal highway. State radio reported mortar duels. It was the second such direct clash in less than 24 hours.

'The naval gunfire support from the USS Virginia and the USS John Rodgers was conducted on military targets threatening the Lebanese Arclaim that its forces had entered the med Forces defense of Souk El Gharb," a U.S. statement said.

Two shells landed inside the Marine compound before dawn. After the U.S. bombardment started, a half dozen mortar rounds burst behind the Marines' lines, but there were no casualties, a Marine spokesman said.

Ul's enrollment rise echoed in private schools

Special to The Daily Iowan

The UI is not the only institution of higher education in Iowa attracting more students this fall. Enrollment at Iowa's private colleges is up this year with computer science classes marking the biggest increases, according to administrators and registrars.

Cornell College in Mount Vernon saw the biggest increase from last year with a jump from 830 students in the 1982-1983 school year to 962 students this fall. This shows a 16-percent in-

According to Peter Bryant, head of admissions at Cornell, a large number of entering students show great in-terest in economics and business. Bryant said this was typical.

He also found a growing interest in computer science and said that 92 students have indicated the natural sciences as their first or second field of Kirkwood Community College in Cedar Rapids showed an increase of 7 percent going from an enrollment of 5.917 in the fall of 1982 to 6,334 in 1983.

Popular areas of study at Kirkwood tend to be vocational and technological. Bill Duffy, director of community relations at Kirkwood said. "There are 65 vocational areas offered and virtually all of those are filled."

Kirkwood's health occupations programs are plagued by waiting lists. Students may be signing up for these programs now and will not get in until possibly a year from now, Duffy said.

Jim Biundo, Kirkwood's assistant president of community relations added, "We have opened new facilities and lecture halls to accommodate the increase. We even added 200 new parking spaces but that wasn't enough. There were still 400 cars that had to be parked in the grass."

Dubuque's three colleges all had more students this year. Loras lead the way with an increase of 6 percent. It jumped from 1,784 students last year to 1,906 this year. The most popular majors are math and computer science, according to

Loras' Head Registrar Gerard Noonan. "Business and accounting have always been a big department," Noonan said, "and I believe we held our own in the liberal arts area."

Noonan added that a lot of students are entering the media and journalism

He said the freshman class is the biggest one ever. "Too big to suit us."

Clarke College was unable to provide official figures but Jane Daly of Clarke's publications department said that 913 students enrolled this fall which is a slight increase over last

Daly said, "There was a 42 percent increase over the last five years and this may be significant to the fact that less than five years ago Clarke turned co-ed. For 135 years before that it was strictly a women's college.'

Clarke College officials attribute their increased enrollment to the number of transfer students, the college's retention of students from last year and more full-time students.

As with many of the private colleges computer science is at the head of Clarke's enrollment rise. Allied health is another popular field.

"Nursing has been very good to us,"

The University of Dubuque chalked one up in their record books for having the second highest enrollment ever with 1,098 this fall in liberal arts and 196 students in the Theological Luther College in Decorah reported

2,136 students this fall as compared to 2,082 last fall, an increase of 3 percent. Computer science classes are also in high demand at Luther. In addition, the college marks a slight increase in its nursing program. This is a relatively new program that seems to be attracting transfer students as it builds a good reputation, said Loyal Rue, assistant to the registrar. Wartburg College in Waverly has no official enrollment count yet, but expects this to be the largest class of freshman in seven years. It is believed that 40 percent of total students on campus are transfers or freshmen.

White House opens campaign materials

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Rep. Donald Albosta, D-Mich., said Monday investigators for his House subcommittee have turned up evidence of an "organized effort" by Ronald Reagan's 1980 campaign to obtain Carter White House materials.

At the same time, he said it appears there was more than one "mole" in the Carter White House who leaked the material to the opposing camp.

Albosta also announced that the White House and his subcommittee have reached a new agreement broadening access to Reagan campaign materials.

"My belief ... is that it was not Reagan people taking material from the Carter White House; it was Carter people removing material from the Carter White House," he said. "No one has said that anything was stolen."

Albosta told reporters he expects the panel will "get to the bottom" of how Reagan's campaign obtained the materials when two key witnesses testify at a public hearing in October. He declined to name the witnesses, but sources said they may include a Reagan campaign official and a former Carter administration official.

THE CONGRESSMAN based his comments on 75 interviews of former Reagan campaign and Carter administration officials.

When the investigation ends, Albosta said, "I believe that we will be able to indicate that someone did it. Whether or not we will find the exact person and whether or not we will have someone See Investigation, page 6

China-U.S. negotiations open

PEKING - U.S. officials arrived Monday for a second round of talks aimed at negotiating a nuclear cooperation agreement that would open the way for China to buy American nuclear technology. Sources say an agreement is near.

U.S. firms have been barred from selling nuclear energy technology to China because of legislation banning the transfer of nuclear technology to countries that have not signed the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty.

Clues to jet's downing sought

WAKKANAI, Japan - A U.S. antisubmarine surveillance plane flew over the Sea of Japan Monday to monitor an intensifying Soviet quest for the crucial "black box" of a downed Korean airliner, Japanese officials said.

The U.S. and Russia are competing to be the first to recover the coveted "black box," an electronic recording system that may explain why the plane veered off course on its flight from New York to Seoul.

Soviets condemn U.S. policy

MOSCOW - The Soviet Union Monday "resolutely condemned" U.S. military action in Lebanon and warned the Reagan administration it would have to face the consequences of its actions.

"The United States has embarked on the road of direct use of armed force and is using it on an ever-increasing scale," said the official news agency Tass.

Space hero, space cowboy

WASHINGTON - President Reagan's election-minded advisers are now pushing for a multibillion-dollar manned space station as a way to "score a gain in the space race" and take some of the shine off Sen. John Glenn's "hero image," one official said.

A National Academy of Sciences study group told NASA last week a space station is not needed to aid scientific research. But the CIA and the Pentagon are arguing for the military or intelligence functions the manned stationcould perform.

New buses expand service

By Carlos Trevino

A $1.55 million grant to provide 10 new buses for the Coralville, Iowa City and UI Cambus services was approved Friday by the U.S. Department of Transportation, John Lundell, Johnson County Council of Governments transit planner, said Monday.

The buses will eventually increase the current fleet of transit buses in Johnson County to 55. Two of the 10 will be articulated buses used by Cambus.

The articulated buses, also known as "accordion buses" due to a middle section that bends, have a passenger capacity of 140 people and seating for 70

The DOT grant will pay for 80 percent of the cost of the two articulated buses, as well as six 40-foot buses for Iowa City and two for Coralville's transit system,

The new buses could be in operation as early as January, not next fall as had been projected, ac-

"Our planning was done a while back and we decided not to apply for a grant," Lundell said. "But we were told that the longer we waited, our chances (for a grant) were not as good.

"WE WERE competing with every city transit system from the smallest to the largest," Lundell said. "This is the same fund that is paying for part of the city garage, so we've been very fortunate."

Cambus Coordinator Dave Ricketts said in mid-June the articulated buses, popularly known as "big bends" in Chicago, would solve the UI's problems in transporting a record number of students around in January, while Iowa City's new buses would replace older buses in need of renovation during the next two years.

The 40-foot buses may hold 8 to 12 extra riders,

"Iowa City has 12 buses that were bought in 1971," and they are "really at the point where they need to be rebuilt," Lundell said. "Six buses will be sent back to get rehabilitated the first year, then the other six the next year. Then they all join the fleet,"

The average estimated cost of revitalizing a 40seat transit bus is $70,000, Lundell said. New buses sell for $165,000.

LUNDELL EXPLAINED that Cambus is planning to use the colossal buses for their Interdorm and Mayflower routes and also "for the football and basketball games, where they'll be very useful" transporting people to sporting events.

Cambus, which reached a record ridership of over three million people in 1982-83, will need the articulated buses "every hour of the day, getting students around campus to classes. They (Cambus) really can use that extra capacity," he said.

The articulated buses will be the first in Iowa City's federal transit region, which includes Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas and Missouri.

As buses are added to the fleet and routes are expanded to other areas "we'll need more drivers for those buses," Lundell said. However, "It'll be a limited opportunity."

Lundell said Cambus is continuing to test various articulated buses and bidding for all 10 buses for the three transit services is scheduled to begin in

Mussolini's corporativism failure told

By Steve Sands Special to The Daily Iowan

An Italian history professor discussed the corporativism ideology Monday afternoon as part of a lecture series sponsored by the UI History Department and UI Graduate

Professor Paolo Nello from the University of Pisa said the fascist government of Benito Mussolini during the 1930s tried to institute corporativism into the economic and political aspects of the Italian society. The experiment was eventually canceled because Mussolini's fascist regime had to deal with an economic crisis facing the nation.

World War II also interfered with his plans and corporativism became a dream never to be fulfilled.

Nello said "the dream of corporativism theory was to create a new kind of democracy. Corporativism had to be an institution by which a new kind of citizen contributed to the political life of the nation in proportion to what he gave to the nation."

The ideology does not espouse a laissezfaire running of the economy through capitalism nor the total control of all the economic production by the state through socialism. Instead, the economic institutions govern themselves.

"THE CONCEPTION would be of an organic state in which all the aspects of the life of the nation were just aspects of the life of the state," he said.

fascist regime needed to be educated first in a totalitarian state before the corporativism ideology could be implemented. Mussolini believed the masses needed to be educated and "had to digest all of the values of fascism before a corporativism state could work."

In other words, Mussolini saw fascism was on a continuum that eventually led to corporativism.

Nello said that corporativism would consist of forming a corporation for each sector of society, such as industry and agriculture. Each sector had to produce an economic plan deciding on the amount of production, salaries, profits and investments. A national council would then consolidate all these sec-

"You can experiment with something when it's a good time to experiment," Nello said about the leader's reasoning.

Nello said he does not know if corporativism would work today because he does not think that his field of history allows him to make an accurate judgement.

In addition to the high number of new applicants, fewer students are willing to move out of the married student housing. Sokol said he is unsure why

"I can't give you any single reason for it. We expected it to be a lot higher. We're really not sure why," he said.

Nora Landas, a five-year resident of Hawkeye Court, said she and her husband considered moving into private housing, but found that the UI housing fit their needs.

"It's nice for the kids and the rent is reasonable," she said.

Sokol said those interested in applying for family housing may do so up to one calendar year before their desired date of occupancy. Status as a UI student is not necessary when applying, but the applicant should have initiated the admission process, he said.

Ebert leads record-setting climbs

By Dawn Ummel Special to The Daily Iowan

For Jim Ebert, the first pair of booties he ever owned might as well have been hiking boots.

The 36-year-old Iowa City man helps direct the Iowa Mountaineers, a UI organization his parents, John and Ede Ebert, started 44 years ago.

"I was carried in a backpack long before I could walk," Ebert said. Ebert's parents started the club in 1940 for "people interested in getting away to the mountains," he said.

After placing an advertisement in The Daily Iowan announcing the formation of the club, approximately 35 people joined. The club was incorporated as a university organization in Organizations of this type were rare back then, Ebert said, and club members could "go into areas in 1940 and find nobody." However, today it is rare to go into the country and not find camps filled with climbers.

The Mountaineers organize major mountain camps and mountaineering expeditions throughout the world, offer rock-climbing courses, sponsor weekend climbing trips and put together an annual cross-country ski outing during the winter. Many of the trips can be taken for elective credit through the UI physical education

New members gain board's acceptance

By Robyn Griggs

Write-in victors in last Tuesday's Iowa City District School Board election, Ellen Widiss and David Wooldrik, were officially accepted as members of the board in a reorganizational meeting Monday night.

They will serve three-year terms on

Dorsey Phelps assumed the office of board president in a 6-0 vote by the board members with one abstention from Lynne Cannon, who terminated her presidency at the meeting. Cannon cited "personal reservations" as her reason for abstaining from the vote. The board elected Michael Hart to the office of vice-president in a unanimous vote.

A REGULAR meeting time of the second and fourth Tuesday of every month was adopted, also in a unanimous vote. Hart moved to end all meetings by 10:30 p.m.

"I think all of us have experienced the late-night burnout and been criticized by the people of this community for too long," he said.

Hart added it is unfair to the board and the community members who attend the meetings to extend them longer than three hours.

"I think the benefits would force us to keep on track and keep discussions limited to the items of consideration and force us to appropriate how much time should be allocated to each subject," he said.

U.S. drives deeper into the Mideast war

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) - The guns of the sixth fleet Monday drove the United States deep into a Lebanese quagmire in which the troops of Syria, Israel and scores of private militias have been trapped for almost a decade.

The U.S. statement terming the largest naval bombardment since the Vietnam war "defensive" could not disguise the essential change that has taken place — from retaliating against attacks on U.S. Marine peacekeepers to fighting in support of the Lebanese

The Lebanese armed forces, three days after starting what U.S. advisers thought would be a quick sweep, found themselves under extreme pressure at the starting point of their offensive in the village of Souk Al Gharb outside

'Successful LAF (Lebanese Armed Forces) defense of the area is vital to the safety of U.S. personnel, including multinational forces, other U.S. military and the U.S. diplomatic corps present," the U.S. statement said.

THE ORIGINAL policy called for the Marines to fire back only when attacked, but the U.S. involvement has increased steadily.

U.S. forces are now operating under broad guidelines that appear to tie U.S. actions to the success of the Lebanese armed forces in what started three weeks ago as a civil war.

It is a role no one expected a year ago when the Marines arrived with Italian and French contingents to ensure peaceful reconstruction following Israel's invasion in June 1982.

Isolated individual attacks forced the Marines first to abandon their unloaded weapons policy, then to return light arms fire and then to pound back at attacking artillery with their own

The controversy is becoming perennial. Every year around this time, some campus-related group decides to show an X-rated movie as a means to raise funds. Given the number of sexually curious young adults among the campus population, the screenings are almost guaranteed to be successful in drawing a large audience. Also guaranteed is that people concerned with sexual exploitation will use tactics, legal and not, to point out what they see as a degrading portrayal of women in the films.

This fall a group called Concerned Campus is showing pornographic films. The organization says it is showing the movies as a means of bringing "freedom of speech" issues before the university community. Concerned Campus president says it wants to sponsor a forum for debate on the right to show pornographic films. The group plans on showing a series of X-rated movies on campus and holding a debate on freedom of speech issues following the showings.

People opposed to the films say the explicit depiction of sexual acts demeans women and "reinforces the acceptability of these actions that goes on in the film and it follows through when people go outside (the theater)." A protester at last Thursday's showing of Deep Throat and The Devil in Miss Jones called the films "tools to learn about rape."

The protesters are right. Pornographic films are degrading not only to women but in their depiction of relationships between all people. And sex is portrayed as an act of power and dominance rather than an expression of love.

But those objecting to the message of the films damage their cause by using their own methods of force and confrontation. In the past bomb threats have been phoned in to delay screenings. Last Thursday protesters met people entering the theater and either told them the program was cancelled or verbally badgered them for attending. One protester has been charged with assault and interference with official acts for allegedly harrassing a campus security officer.

Those attending the film show their ignorance and need to be educated, not berated. Concerned Campus has the right to show the movies. Others have the right to not attend. Picketing the movies is a valid form of protest. But "dirty tricks" and outright lies only damage the important cause of those opposing exploitation.

Concerned Campus has shown great insensitivity in their method of bringing the free speech issue before the community; but if the protesters are serious about enlightening students, they will consider using the idea of a forum to bring their message to the public.

A rational response

The furor over public education is rising again, this time with the release of a report by the Carnegie Foundation. Like the others, this report finds much that is wrong with public education, but unlike the highly publicized presidential commission it also found much that is good.

The Carnegie report differed in other respects. It blamed many of the problems in public education on school systems that are heavily bureaucraticized and that overload teachers with irrelevant administrative duties, not allowing them sufficient free periods to plan for classes, and on parents who are unwilling to demand that their children work harder and conform to higher standards of performance.

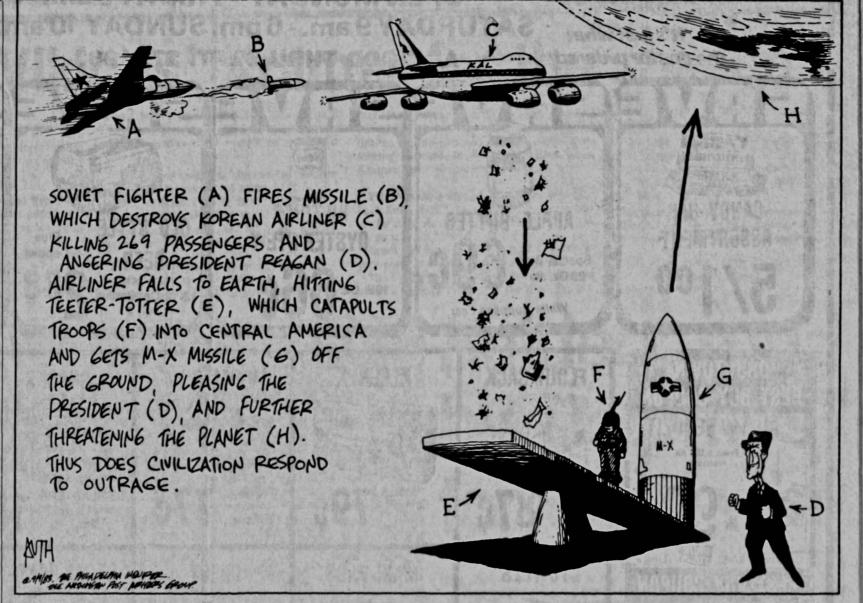

It also offered somewhat different solutions. It recommended higher pay for teachers, publicly-funded opportunities to attend professional conferences, increased emphasis on writing and reading, and increased education for citizenship, including a basic core which all students — vocational and college-bound — would be required to master.

The over-riding perceptions governing this report were in many respects more rational and long-term and less a slavish response to the new high-tech fads than other earlier reports. It argues, properly, that writing and reading are the basic tools needed to develop the clear, analytic skills that are crucial to developing later competence in any discipline.

It also argued, with Thomas Jefferson, that the purpose of education is to form good citizens. That of course is true. An uneducated or poorly educated citizenry cannot distinguish the false from the true, the self-serving from the public-spirited, the demagogic from the rational. A common core of basic courses in history, civics, literature, economics and art is as necessary for the mechanic-citizen as it is for the doctor-citizen. Both must learn to think clearly, read well and have a sufficient grasp of the way government and the economy work to judge their politicians. It is the job of the school system to provide those skills and that

Because it takes a broader view and because it sees the fundamental connection between education and good citizenship, the Carnegie report comes closer to the truth of education needs than did the presidential commission. The commission fell into the old American trap of crisis management: It saw that the world was undergoing a technological revolution, saw that math and science scores were declining and rose to fight that fire. It did not really see that decline as symptomatic of larger failures.

panies buying other companies that we forget sometimes that this flow can be reversed. Companies can slim down by selling off units they previously bought. A lot of this kind of selling is going on right now by companies which consumed so many others that they began to resemble bloated hippopotami.

For example, how would you like to get into the candy business? If so, get on the phone to Beatrice Foods in Chicago. It would like to get out of this business. Beatrice has a sizeable candy operation. Among its brands are the Clark bar, ZabNut, Milk Duds, Slo-Poke, Switzer licorice sticks and Fireside marshmallows.

It wasn't too long ago that Beatrice added to this lineup. In 1981, it bought Good 'N Plenty, Good 'N Fruity and the Rothschilds' rolled candies. Now it wants out. It has a right, of course, to change its mind. Beatrice is changing its mind about plenty of operations these days. After buying more than 400 companies in its rise from a small dairy company to a giant of the food industry, Beatrice is now sloughing them off. It has already sold Dannon yogurt, one of its earliest acquisitions. It plans now to sell 50 other companies.

THE COMPANY we now know as the Continental Group - it's the 93rd largest corporation in America — used to be Continental Can. It ranked along with American can as the country's big can maker. In World War II, when tinplate was needed in the war effort. Continental moved into paper containers, including the forests whence came the raw material. Now it's cutting down radically on its forest products business, selling off half of it for $500 million. Leaving the company are three kraft paper and container-board mills in the South, 15 corrugated-box plants and five bag plants. Another paper company that's

It now plans to sell its foam divison, which makes polyurethane foam products for such uses as carpet cushioning and mattress cores, and its Brown Jordan division, sell off businesses that represent at which makes a highly-regarded line of outdoor metal furniture. Also on the auction block at Scott are 240,000 acres state of Washington.

THE USUAL reason was given for the Scott selloffs. "They do not fit the Raceway on Long Island, zinc mines, central thrust of Scott's business." That's the standard corporate excuse. It's a euphemism for: "What did we ever see in these companies anyway?"

One of the biggest corporate dismemberments is taking place at the New York-based conglomerate, Gulf & Western Industries, the creation of Charles G. Bluhdorn, an immigrant from Austria. No sooner did Bluhdorn die, quite unexpectly, last February than the company, now under the direction of Martin S. Davis, began undoing what he had built. The plan is to least 20 percent of Gulf & Western's $5.3 billion in annual sales.

Among the operations that have of timberland in the western part of the departed are Consolidated Cigar (Dutch Masters, El Producto) and the Arlington Race Track outside Chicago. Ticketed for sale are the Roosevelt Gulf & Western apparently plans to keep Paramount Pictures. Simon & Schuster, the Associates consumer loan offices, Kayser-Roth hosiery, Cole swimsuits, Simmons mattresses, the New York Rangers and the New York Knickerbockers.

However, in this business it's not safe to say "plans to keep." Who knows how Martin Davis will feel when he gets up tomorrow morning? If he has a bad night tossing and turning, he may just decide to sell another dozen com-

The pornography issue

To the editor: Pornography as a means of fund-raising in the UI is not new. There is a consistent and recurring trend of using pornography in fund raisers, by the Student Senate (not the current senate), Bijou, Science Fiction League and so on. Naturally a storm of protest is generated every time these materials are shown. But to what

After a brief fury in the press and protests by outraged students the issue s quickly forgotten. The regulations regarding pornography remain unchanged. Six months later the same or another organization is engaged in the same activity.

For this reason I decided to advise Concerned Campus on their controversial fund-raiser. There is a point to be made. Pornography is an issue to be addressed. In the past there has been reaction but there was no positive result arising from it. Through my actions, I hope to generate and sustain public pressure, in turn forcing the issue to be taken seriously.

Concerned Campus is dedicated towards the promotion of communications on issues of student concerns. It has offered to sponsor a forum on the issue of pornography on campus. I intend to take up their offer.

It was for this reason that I consented to help Concerned Campus in their fund-raiser. My role in the affair was that of a catalyst, to force the issue in hope that a clear policy statement from the UI will be forthcoming. This I hope to achieve through the forum.

Thus, in spite of advice to the contrary by friends, in spite of the negative publicity that may result through misunderstanding of my position and the possibility that political opponents will take the opportunity to initiate public attacks on my integrity, I still had to do what I

Group as conduit

To the editor:

Concerned Campus is a non-profit student organization that receives no funding from the UI Student Senate or the Collegiate Associations council. As a result we have to rely on our own ability to raise funds.

The purpose of this group is to create communications on subjects of public interest. In line with our established purpose, we would be willing to ediate and underwrite the costs of a panel discussion concerning pornography if there is an interest shown by other groups to take up both sides of the issue.

We realize the pornography issue is a difficult one to address, one that traditionally has been controversial in Iowa City, and as such one that is often ignored. We believe, however, that it is an issue of public concern, and would therefore be willing to provide a conduit for expressing opinion on this

Injury benches Vikings' Kramer for the season

EDEN PRAIRIE, Minn. (UPI) - Minnesota tear was diagnosed. Viking quarterback Tommy Kramer, who injured his right knee in Sunday's 19-16 overtime victory over Tampa Bay, is out for the season following surgery Monday, team officials said. Kramer suffered a complete tear of the inside ligament to the right knee when he was tackled out of bounds by Tampa cornerback Mike Washington. Kramer's knee buckled under him as he fell.

Dr. David Fisher performed the surgery Monday at Metropolitan Medical Center. Kramer underwent an exploratory arthroscopic exam earlier in the day when the

VIKING COACH Bud Grant said Kramer is "obviously out for the year," but added "the prognosis is good in that it's not as severe as nany (knee injuries) we've seen."

Grant said offensive lineman Brent Boyd suffered the same kind of injury early in 1981 and Boyd is now pushing for a starting position. Kramer, who had completed eight-of-eight touchdown pass to Terry LeCount before he was hurt Sunday, said he knew the injury was

"I heard the knee pop," he said on the plane trip back to Minnesota. "I relaxed a bit when I ran out of bounds in the first quarter. When Washington grabbed me by the jersey, I got my spikes caught in the ground, my leg buckled under me and I went down."

A first round draft pick in 1977 from Rice, Kramer injured his left knee in a 1981 preseason game, suffering strained ligaments the season. He wore a cumbersome brace that limited his mobility and Viking coaches were looking forward to the 1983 season since Kramer reported to camp healthy.

THE VIKINGS also may have lost defensive back Keith Nord, who suffered a complete tear of the right Achilles tendon. Nord was to undergo surgery Monday.

Grant said in terms of seriousness, Nord's injury posed more questions than Kramer's. The Viking coach said they are also thinking about a backup. Steve Dils replaced Kramer that forced him to miss the first two games of Sunday, completing 16-of-33 passes for 205

"We have been looking for a third quarter-back," Grant said, "but that really is not that big a deal when you're talking about somebody who would take a few snaps in a quarter to get you out of an injury problem.

Grant said the Vikings will not change their offensive strategy because Kramer and Dils are similar in their quarterbacking style.

'We would rather have lost the ballgame than a couple of players like that," said Grant,

Sore volleyball team spikes Drake

By Robert Ryser

The Iowa women's volleyball team had to fight a five-game battle to defeat a competitive Drake squad in Des Moines Monday night.

The encouraging aspect of the match was that the Hawkeyes, still somewhat sore from their victorious weekend at the Carver-Hawkeye Arena, stayed together as a team and maintained their poise - something that has become more and more prevelant during Iowa's eight-match winning streak

"It was a very long five games," Coach Sandy Stewart said after the match. "We played five matches in

"We did," she said. "We came back and won, (the third game) 15-6."

PART OF that regained momentum came in the form of sophomore Denise Watson, according to Stewart. "Denise Watson had a really good

Stewart said she didn't want to overlook, tommorow night's contest against Northern Iowa, However, Iowa could mark their ninth win in a row if the team plays up to its potential, which has proven to be quite high compared to last year, according to Stewart. The Hawkeyes easily defeated the Panthers in the Hawkeye Invitational last weekend, 15-6, 10-15, 15-4, 15-1.

'They're a scrappy team," Stewart said. "We have to eliminate some of our unforced errors - you can't lose 15-1 (as in the Drake match) to any team. If we can get rid of some of our mistakes, I'm confident we can win."

Raiders run by Dolphins for easy win LOS ANGELES (UPI) - Tackle

Greg Townsend recovered a fumble and rambled 66 yards for a touchdown Monday night, climaxing a brilliant Los Angeles defensive performance that powered the Raiders to a 27-14 victory over the Miami Dolphins.

The Dolphins scored two touchdowns in the last two minutes, 29 seconds, averting their first shutout since last Dec. 12 against New England in the famous snowplow incident in which a tractor cleared a path for kicker John Smith as the Patriots won 3-0.

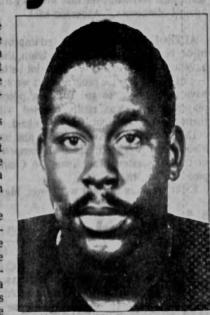

Many Eastern Iowa fans tuned in the game to watch former Hawkeye All-American punter Reggie Roby. As the Dolphins had offensive troubles, the Waterloo native had quite a few opportunities to use his foot in front of a national television audience. Roby's kicks included a 58-yard boot in the third quarter.

THE VICTORY was the 20th for the Raiders in Monday night games against two losses and one tie, by far the best Monday night record in the NFL. Los Angeles is now 3-0 and joined the Dallas Cowboys as the only undefeated team this season. Miami, which ranks second with 15 Monday night victories, fell to 2-1 on the season.

Los Angeles put the game away with 1:12 remaining in the third period. boosting its lead to 20-0 on Townsend's touchdown. Miami quarterback David Woodley was crushed by linebacker Rod Martin and coughed up the ball. Townsend, a 240-pound rookie from Texas Christian, scooped up the ball along the right sideline and followed a wall of blockers down the middle of the

Martin got up after jarring the ball loose from Woodley and made the final key block on Townsend's run, clearing the way for the big tackle who ran the ball into the endzone for a 66-vard touchdown run.

LOS ANGELES took the opening kickoff and drove 61 yards to the Miami 28 yard line, but Marcus Allen fumbled and the Dolphins' Glenn Blackwood recovered at the 19. On their next possession, the Raiders again drove 61 yards and culminated that drive on Frank Hawkins' two-yard touchdown run to give Los Angeles a 7-

0 after Chris Bahr's extra point at

The touchdown came one play after a 11-yard pass interference penalty against Blackwood gave the Raiders a first down at the two-yard line.

The Raiders got the ball again with less than two minutes remaining in the first half and quarterback Jim Plunkett moved the team down field in nine plays, capping the 80-yard march with a 14-yard strike to Todd Christensen in the end zone with only nine seconds remaining. Bahr missed the extra point and the Raiders took a 13-0 lead at the half. Plunkett completed four passes for 75 yards in the drive, the longest a 19-yarder to Christensen.

AFTER TOWNSEND'S touchdown made it 20-0, Greg Pruitt made it 27-0 at 9:45 of the final period on a five-yard touchdown run.

The Dolphins then averted a shutout with 2:29 remaining when backup quarterback Dan Marino hit Joe Rose with a six-yard touchdown pass. The Dolphins recovered their onside kick and Marino marched them to their second touchdown, hitting Mark Duper with a two-yard touchdown pass with 20 seconds remaining in the game to close out the scoring.

The Raider defense, led by ends Howie Long and Lyle Alzado, harrased Woodley throughout the first half, limiting the Dolphins to 143 total yards, 84 passing.

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. - Iowa's 42-34 victory over Penn State, in what could be tabbed one of the most exciting and impressive college football games ever, proved beneficial to both the Hawkeyes and Nittany Lions.

It was the perfect preparatory contest for Iowa as the Hawkeyes await the start of the Big Ten season Saturday against Ohio State, according to Iowa Coach Hayden Fry.

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI) - Ohio State football Coach Earle Bruce wasn't about to minimize last Saturday's 24-14 road win over Oklahoma. but the celebrating has officially ended for the Buckeyes, who now must prepare for Iowa.

'That was a great win for Ohio State," Bruce said. "I thought we were a very physical football team. When you hold Oklahoma to 177 yards rushing, that's a great job of a defense playing physical football and controlling the line of scrimmage.

They turned to the passing game to move the ball and did a good job against us, but we did stop them and when you keep them down to 14 points, I think you've done an outstanding

"The secret of the football game will be the offensive and defensive lines," Bruce added. "Who will be the most physical and who will dominate the line of scrimmage. Also, who has the best pass defense. That's going to be one of the factors.

Women's rugby club posts wins, improves over previous weekend

By Melissa Rapoport Staff Writer

Not only did Iowa's football, volleyball, field hockey and cross country teams post weekend victories, but all of the area sportsclubs were also successful last weekend.

The Iowa City Women's Rugby Club played in a three-team round robin tournament at Southern Illinois. The team's first match against SIU ended in an 18-6 win. During the first half, graduate student Sherry Edwards scored the first try, which is equivalent to a touchdown in football but is worth only four points. Shortly after the first try, a two point conversion was scored by veteran Sarah Lussman.

Robin Walenta scored the first try of the second half for another four points, giving Iowa City a 10-0 lead. At this point in the match, SIU scored its first try of the game.

IN RETALIATION, the rugby club worked the ball downfield to score again. Team captain Jean O'Leary scored the try. One final try was scored by Trudy Grout, making the final score 18-6.

In regards to the game, player Betsy Anderson said, "It was an excellent game for the rookies, they played very well this weekend "

In the second match against Illinois, all the points were scored in the first half. Scoring the two trys for the club were Grout and Lussman.

Both matches portrayed the club's potential, talent and improvement. "This weekend's game showed a lot of overall team improvement over last week's game against Minnesota," Anderson said.

ALTHOUGH THE team showed improvement, because they are a young team, they have a long way to go. "It was a lot better - I mean we can see progress, but we still have a long way to go. The new people played well, I was really pleased with them ... We did alright," O'Leary said.

The Hawkeye Tae Kwon Do Club also had a successful weekend. The club competed in the Midwestern Tae Kwon Do Championships in Omaha Eight trophies in total were won. Mark

Women prisoners vent woes on HBO

By Merwyn Grote

EAR IN MIND," warns Lee Grant, the narrator/director of When Women Kill, "you are not hearing the victim's side of the story."

It is a cautionary note that is worth considering for this documentary about women in prison that is showing on HBO throughout September. The show contains some of the most compelling and seemingly sincere interviews one is likely to encounter on the airwaves. Actress/director Grant has recorded brief, insightful interviews with seven inmates of the California Institute for Women in Bedford Hills. The women are from a variety of backgrounds and their stories vary greatly, but the one trait they share is prison terms for murder or manslaughter.

Grant's film is a straightforward document made with considerable craftsmanship. She relies mainly on the strength of the interviews to get her message across, and that is more than sufficient to make this a captivating and moving documentary. While not free of editorialization, Grant's presentation never belabors the points she makes nor does she preach about the obvious injustices she

A PALPABLE FEMINIST thread runs through the show: According to the film, most women inmates are the products of child abuse or abuse from partners. The film also suggests that the system is harder on women who violate the law because there is the feeling that they have "fallen off the pedestal" and that merely killing in self-defence is not Television viewed as justifiable because women are somehow held responsible for their own

The truth in these sentiments is not proven, but the interviews themselves provide some potent support for the accusations. The women's stories are sad and frightening, and are told with such conviction that one is compelled to accept them. Though the inmates speak with obvious regret and sorrow, there is little self-pity or resentment in their con-

Virginia was convicted of killing her husband of 26 years. A cheerleader married to a high school football star, their marriage began deteriorating after their children had grown up. They were separated and on the verge of a divorce. According to Virginia, her estranged husband attacked her with an icepick and she shot at him to get "him to turn around and get out." She was sentenced to 15 years to life. The saddest thing about her interview is her remark that her first night in jail made her feel safe and protected - it allowed her the first good night's sleep she'd had in years.

VIOLET KILLED her second husband after he had shot at her several times. Despite his attack and a history of abuse in which he had beaten her, kicked her and thrown her down stairs, she was given 15 years to life. Because intra-spouse violence was a family tradition, she says it was "like a part of marriage ... my first husband didn't beat me up. It seemed like he didn't love me that much." When Grant asks Violet's little granddaughter what she would do if a boy hit her, she replies "Kill him."

Frannie is a 20-year-old clarinet player who killed her boyfriend, a fellow musician, over a drug deal. High at the time of the killing, she had been dealing for the victim in order to support her coke habit. Serving eight to 25 years for manslaughter, Frannie discribes herself as a "class A schmuck" but remains optimistic and attends college within the prison. She says "I'm young ... I've got the rest of my life." Part of her interview is in the presence of her mother, who hears the details of her involvement with drugs for the first time. The mother, shocked and heartbroken, can only take so much and walks away from the interview.

LESLIE IS seemingly the most intelligent and good-natured of those interviewed, and perhaps surprisingly so. She is Leslie van Houten, member of the Charles Manson cult and a participant in the grisly 1969 Tate-LaBianca murders. Her death sentence for the killings was commuted to life. She talks about her participation in the killings and marks the beginning of her downfall as when she "surrendered (her) individuality" to Manson. When asked what she would say to the LaBianca children, she says that she's very sorry, but adds "that doesn't do much." Leslie studies philosophy in the prison's college.

Marie was sentenced to death, later commuted to life, for the murder and mutilation of a man. Oddly, her boyfriend, who she start making some noise.

claims actually did the killing, received only seven years to life because he gave state's evidence against her. Marie is the only one of the those interviewed with an extensive prior record and was the victim of child abuse by her alcoholic stepfather.

LUZ, SERVING 15 years to life for the killing of her stepfather, claims she could have gotten off by testifying against her boyfriend, but she feared him more than the court system. Something of an activist, she fought for reforms within the prison that brought about a new administration and a college training program. She was the first woman to receive a bachelor's degree in the college

In addition to the interviews of these women, the film is sprinkled with bits of interviews of other inmates, their families and prison officials and employees, as they discuss aspects of prison life that are unique to female inmates. For one thing, the spouses of male inmates generally remain faithful and visit them regularly, while female inmates are all but abandoned by their men. Also, according to the film, more often than not women kill someone they love or had loved.

The interesting thing about the women interviewed is that most do not fit the stereotype of a criminal: They are "passive" women who were forced into situations where violence seemed their only alternative. There are moments of despair in When Women Kill, but there is an underlying spirit of resiliency. As one inmate put it, "Justice may be blind, but that bitch can hear, and we're going to

Albert Guerard, visiting Ida Beam professor and distinguished literary critic, will try to evoke "some of the magic of contemporary fiction and point out the irrelevance of most criticism commenting on it" during his lecture tonight at 8, which Guerard has wryly titled "Flying Carpets and Earthbound Critics." He will read from the works of some his students' work, including such authors as John Hawkes and John Updike, and comment upon them during his appearance.

Moody Blues endure changing rock scene

By Allen Hogg

HE NOTION OF art-rock has shifted radically since it was first conceived of in the late '60s. Originally the term referred to the attempts to merge rock 'n' roll and more "serious" forms of music, which seemed to sprout up all over the place in the wake of the Beatles' Sgt. Pepper album.

The most popular of this early artrock used the orchestral sounds of the 19th century as a source for the great consolidation. This sort of work was pioneered by the Moody Blues on their debut album, Days of Future Passed. The result was the creation of a sound which amounted to nice mood music. The fact that it was taken as someti much more profound by the millions of druggy souls who bought it up does nothing to discredit the artists.

In the '70s, however, the focus of artrock gradually expanded. The satirical interests of Frank Zappa, the synRecords and the increasingly-harsh aural violence of Pink Floyd were among many radically different styles which became collectively known as art-rock. Now, in the '80s, the concept of artrock has once again narrowed, due to the disdain created by the new wave movement for the original classical bombast. Today, in order to be truly arty musically, one must embrace the funky experimentation of David Byrne and the Talking Heads or bop to the calculated minimalism of the B-52's. SO WHERE DOES this leave the original art-rockers? Well, refugees of Yes. King Crimson, and Emerson. Lake and Palmer are now creating slick, faceless, and boring AOR with Asia. The Electric Light Orchestra is performing rockabilly on synthesizers. Supertramp is performing pure pop with deep titles like "It's Raining thesizer experimentation of Brian Eno. Again." Ex-Genesis singer Peter Gabriel has splashed headfirst into the most appealing cut on The Present is funky experimentation scene while for- "Meet Me Halfway." Co-written and mer bandmate Phil Collins is now doing covers of the Supremes.

seems interested in the merging of classical and rock forms is, well, the Moody Blues. Not that this devotion to form is hurting them commercially. Their last album, Long Distance Voyager, came out of nowhere to go all the way to number one back in 1981. Even more amazingly, with the lack of comparable stylistic efforts, Long Distance Voyager managed to sound sort of fresh and enjoyable.

So now, two years later, we have the Moody Blues new album, The Present, and, guess what, it sounds just about the same. The lyrics are still doggered with pretentious overtones, the music is still mostly slick solos above dense harmonies with classical roots, the entire package is entirely forgettable, and, overall, it sounds pretty good.

IN CASE IT actually matters, the sung by guitarist Justin Hayward and John Lodge, the song drives along on The only group, in fact, which still Graeme Edge's drumming while the vocal harmonies soar to ask the deep musical question, "Is it a dream?" Hayward plucks out restrained riffs between the vocal lines and ex-Yesman Patrick Moraz fills out the sound with his whooshing keyboards.

To be truthful, The Present will probably not have the commercial impact of Long Distance Voyager. For one thing, while the former whole album floats along pleasantly, none of the cuts has quite the mainstream appeal of "The Voice" or "Gemini Dreams" of the latter album.

Plus, today's New Music-oriented tans will be less likely to accept an old dinosaur like the Moody Blues than the REO/Styx crowd who were in control two years ago. But if The Present is a commercial failure, no matter. The band can just hope things will be better for them in 1985, when their next album
