Council rejects building cutoff

Price: 20 cents

By Carlos Trevino

Iowa City councilors said at their informal meeting Monday they would not implement a 60day moratorium on construction in Iowa City pending approval of a new zoning ordinance and map. Iowa City Planning and Program Development Director Don Schmeiser and Senior Planner Doug Boothroy also told the council how proposed zoning changes would affect the number of occupants permitted in singlefamily homes and rooming - including fraternity and sorority houses.

Mayor Mary Neuhauser said the council would vote down the moratorium in today's formal meeting. The moratorium would have prevented the issuance of any building permits inconsistent with the city's proposed 1983 Zoning Ordinance and Map.

Boothroy told the council the Iowa City Planning and Zoning Commission unanimously voted against a moratorium and that "the time of year (fall-winter)" would also be a deterrent to construction before the new zoning map would take effect.

Schmeiser said the planning and zoning board disapproved of the moratorium because "they felt the new regulations were goon property owners.

Schmeiser explained that local developers and property owners are aware of the proposed zoning changes and "anything (structure) in non-compliance (under mediately ... not be adopted."

BOOTHROY SAID information regarding the zoning changes would be available late today and will be posted at the civic center before public hearings on the proposed zoning ordinance and map.

"The council has taken care of most down-zones ... and everything kind of muddled by the (Iowa City) airport moratorium," City Manager Neal Berlin said of the current development freeze in the city.

Boothroy said he did not foresee any problems for the city if the moratorium is not implemented. "If the ordinance is adopted by the council by December 31, I don't see any problem. Of course, you run the risk of someone building another building without the (proposed) parking regulations before December.

Neuhauser said public hearings on the proposed zoning ordinance and map would be held Oct. 17 and Oct. 25 during regular council meetings.

The new zoning ordinances regarding the number of persons in single-family homes will have no effect on fraternity and sorority houses, Schmeiser said. "It has nothing to do with (greeks), absolutely nothing."

Schmeiser said the regulations regarding "roomers in singlefamily dwellings is different from the ordinance regulating

One Christian militia leader said his men were not obligated to observe the cease-fire intended to end shooting that took more than 700 lives this month.

Official Beirut radio said the ceasefire held early Tuesday, but that there was some sniper fire on Lebanese troops in the Shiite suburb of Mreijeh and the Druze Moslem sector of Amroussiyeh in the foothills of the Shouf mountains.

The radio also said the Druze militia was sending reinforcements and ammunition to the frontline.

Freedman plan practicality doubted

By Kirk Brown

Two weeks ago UI President James O. Freedman presented far-reaching proposals for the future of the UI. While reaction to his ideas has been favorable, skepticism has surfaced regarding their feasibility.

Freedman, who has tagged his ideas "A Proposal for the Future of the University of Iowa," says his plans are "designed to nourish and strengthen the intellectual quality" of the UI.

Specifically his proposal calls for increasing endowments for faculty members and outstanding doctoral students,

New student groups are recognized

By Dan Hauser

The UI Student Senate has recognized seven new student groups in the last two weeks, adding to the 140 organizations already recognized, according to the UI Office of Campus Programs.

Nearly 50 of these groups also request funding by the senate. The senate must decide to recognize these groups and determine how much money to allot them. Before a student group may use Union facilities, it must be recognized by the UI

Most groups that request senate recognition do receive it, according to Senate Vice President Ken Brill, who works with Jill Jessen of the Student Activities Board to coordinate these groups

The most recently recognized student groups vary from the Hawkeye Cricket Club to the Iowa Bridge Club.

Before the senate approves the new organizations, Brill said, "They must fill out a recognition form and supply a constitution for the group." This constitution will then be posted in the Activities Board Office so that the senators can look it over a week in advance of its meeting.

"If they do that they will probably be recognized," Brill said. But he pointed out the senate does consider the seriousness of the group's constitution.

IF FUNDING is desired, the next step for a UI student group, after being recognized by a majority vote of the senate, is to go before the Senate Budget and Auditing Committee. Senate Treasurer Dave Diers, who directs the BAC, said recognized groups must fill out a budget request form to be considered by the BAC. If that council approves the appropriation, then the senate will consider the request.

"It all depends upon how much is requested," Diers said. If a group comes to the BAC and asks for $1,000 but only has three members, the BAC will be very cautious in allotting funds, he said.

It is very important, Diers said, for a group to conduct research on its needs before it requests funding.

This year the BAC has received five requests for funding from already established groups, but has not yet received requests from new organizations, he said.

IF A GROUP uses money allocated to them by the senate in a different way than is stipulated in its constitution, the group is subject to probation, he said.

While on probation a group is watched closely by the senate. Each time the group spends its money, the senate will watch where it goes. If the group continues to misuse the funding recognition may be rescinded by a majority vote by the senate, Brill

Groups must be re-recognized every year, he said. The re-recognition process does not require a vote, but the senate is kept aware of groups' actions by the Student Activities Board and could decide to unrecognize a group.

The wholesale robbery of land from native Americans marks one of the darkest times in American history, but according to Navajo Indian Tom Bedonie the same thing is happening today to his homeland in Big Mountain, Arizona

Bedonie said his purpose in Iowa City this week is to enlighten people about the current plight of his people and their fight to retain the land they have lived on for

The U.S. government would like to "relocate" the Dine (a specific term for his Navajo tribe) and the Hopi from the Big untain area so corporations can mine the land for coal, natural gas and elements such as uranium, he said.

The native Americans would be moved to towns bordering the four-state region of Arizona, Colorado, New Mexico and Utah, he said, "anywhere out of the reservation, they (the government) can get to the Willow Pov, an Iowa City activist on native American issues, said the building freeze is a mistake. "These certain areas have the neediest of people. It looks bad because the people are in such poverty and living in bad conditions. People point and say, 'look how they live.' But they can't do anything about it.'

has tried to force the native Americans off their land. The first time was in 1863, according to Bedonie, Pov and another Iowa City activist Karen Quigley.

U.S. troops, led by Kit Carson, came to Big Mountain and burned all the crops that feed the Dine and their animals. The government moved the tribes to New Mexico and tried to convert them from ranchers to farmers. But after four years, he said, the Dine returned to their 3.5 million acres of land.

The Dine will not relocate, Pov said. Bedonie asks people to write their representatives in Washington, D.C. to urge the lawmakers to repeal P.L. 93-531. He will be speak about the issue tonight at 7 in Room A of the Iowa City Public Library.

Congress expresses doubts, seeks Reagan's promise on war powers leaders said Monday they want President Reagan's word that a compromise agreement to keep U.S. Marines in Lebanon for another 18 months acknowledges Congress' war powers authority in the decision.

The Senate opened debate Monday on the compromise package, which the House will take up Wednesday.

Irritated by some weekend comments from Secretary of State George Shultz, House Speaker Thomas O'Neill, D-Mass., said he will seek personal assurances from Reagan on the matter.

Shultz, in a Cable News Network release over the weekend, fanned fears on Capitol Hill that the president would not feel bound to get congressional approval to keep the troops in Lebanon beyond the 18-month period or to change their role. The secretary of state also suggested the administration considers the Lebanon situation serious enough to warrant an indefinite commitment of U.S. troops there. And he declined to limit or define the role of the Marines

Asked Monday if such comments will make the Lebanon resolution harder to pass, O'Neill said, "Of course it will." "I am absolutely shocked," he said.

But, he said, "A commitment is a commitment, and I would expect the president of the United States ... to keep his word."

Senate Democratic leader Robert Byrd shared O'Neill's irritation, and said Shultz was indicating Reagan will sign the resolution, if passed by Congress, and then promptly toss it aside.

SENATE GOP leader Howard Baker also appeared to have some concern about the administration's view of the compromise worked out last week between the White House, House Democrats and Baker.

Baker said he intends to talk with Shultz about the resolution, but declared his own belief that the measures "invoke the full powers" of the war powers act "and would be binding on the president.'

An aide to Baker said the administration will be asked for a clarification of its position, possibly in the form of a letter to reassure members of the Senate.

But White House spokesman Larry Speakes said he discussed the matter with Shultz, and the secretary of state said "there is much more made of that than there should be.

"He's not departing from the agreement. You have to read the agreement," Speakes

The concern was similar to that expressed last week after Shultz, during testimony before House and Senate committees, refused to be pinned down on whether the administration accepts the congressional authority implied in the com-

That plan calls for Congress to pass a resolution authorizing the Marines to remain in Lebanon, where four Marines have died in shelling, for another 18 months, but also declaring that the 1973 War Powers Resolution applies to the Marines' deployment.

FOR HIS PART, Reagan is prepared to sign the resolution "with reservations" and is expected to state his disagreement with Congress on the war powers issue at the time of the signing.

Leading off the Senate floor debate, Senate Foreign Relations Committee Chairman Charles Percy, R-Ill., said the resolution "is not an open-ended blank check" to the president.

Congress is "not simply dropping out of the picture until the spring of 1985," but will constantly review the situation in Lebanon and take additional steps as needed, Percy said.

Percy said a cease-fire in Lebanon was agreed to Sunday because the factions in Lebanon saw that the United States was determined to stay.

But Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., warned the United States has only "vaguely defined objectives" in Lebanon and may have to stay there indefinitely.

"We're signing on to incremental bleeding," he said.

Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., backed the resolution, but said the war powers act is unconstitutional. He said the congressional debate

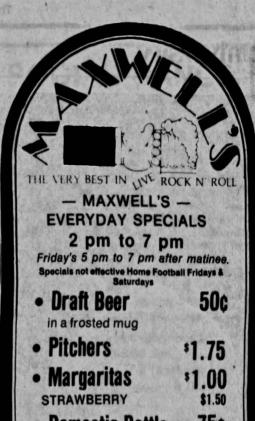

"reveals all too clearly the inability of Congress to act decisively in time of need."

The war powers act was passed over the veto of then-President Richard Nixon in response to the Vietnam war. It says U.S. troops facing armed hostilities overseas must be brought home within 60 days unless Congress authorizes them to remain.

Republican senators criticize Watt's 'unacceptable' remarks on advisers

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Embattled Interior Secretary James Watt met with his top advisers Monday, and an 11th Republican senator called for his resignation from President Reagan's Cabinet for his wisecrack about an advisory commis-

"James Watt has hurt the president and the Republican party. His statement was entirely inappropriate and unacceptable, said Sen. Dan Quayle, R-Ind.

Quayle, who added his voice to those of 10 other GOP senators urging Watt's resignation, told an Indianapolis news conference he would not be surprised if the secretary quit by the end of the week.

Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., said he told Watt last week he was offended by his racial and ethnic description of a coal-leasing commission, including calling one member "a cripple.

While Dole refrained from urging Watt to resign, he said, "If I were there (in the White House), he wouldn't be."

"I'm offended by his language. I told him so," said Dole, whose right arm is paralyzed from a war wound. "I told him" he had a real problem."

APPEARING WITH DOLE at a news

"Obviously I was quite appalled by what he (Watt) said." Perlman said. "He's obviously capable of calling a black person a nigger or a Jew a kike."

OPENING THE HEARING, panel Chairman David Linowes said commission members viewed Watt's remarks as "unfortunate," but said they will not discourage the panel as it reviews federal policy on leasing lands for coal mining.

Linowes said he chose the four other members of the commission with "no reference to political affiliation, race, sex, religion or any other trait."

Watt is under fire for describing the coal panel last Wednesday as "every kind of mix you can have. I have a black; I have a woman, two Jews and a cripple. And we have talent. Watt, who has been in hot water before

"It really depends on the type of zoning the single-family home is inthere's lots of things being tossed around and no one is listening," he said. "... And it depends what zone the fraternity and sorority is in."

Schmeiser said under current regulations, a family - defined as the parents and their children - could accept two unrelated persons, who are defined as "roomers" into their home.

A FAMILY. Schmeiser said, could also consist of two unrelated individuals living together. That type of "family" could allow two other unrelated persons to live within the single-family dwelling under present regulations.

'So with a family, they could currently have a total of two other unrelated people living there while with couples living together, a total of four unrelated people would be together in a single-family dwelling," Schmeiser

The new ordinance would reduce the number of unrelated persons that can live with a family to one, or a total of three unrelated people under the other 'family' situation, Schmeiser said.

In multi-unit zones, the number of unrelated persons living in one residence would be reduced from five

Foremost among the three modifications in the U.S. bargaining position Reagan outlined is an implicit offer not to match Soviet missile deployment in Asia if Moscow agrees to a global ceiling on warheads.

Under such an arrangement, the United States would proceed with scheduled deployment of singlewarhead Pershing and cruise missiles to match Soviet deployments in Europe, but would only "retain the right" to deploy such weapons in Asia.

Also, Reagan said the United States is prepared to discuss a reduced deployment of the Pershings, which are of most concern to the Soviets, and "consider mutually acceptable ways" to address a Soviet desire for limits on aircraft capable of carrying nuclear for a possible compromise. As U.S. officials explained it, the two sides might agree on a total of 300 weapons each. But the Soviets have insisted that the 162 nuclear arms in the British and French arsenals be included in that count. The United States has refused, saying they are a different kind of weapon which should be dealt with in the strategic arms talks, eventually. Under the new U.S. idea, the United States would informally agree to station only some of the agreed total of missiles in western Europe. For example, if the agreed level were 300, only 200 Western weapons would actually be put in place in Europe.

The United States would, however, reserve the theoretical right to station the other 100 missiles elsewhere in the world, in Asia or in Alaska. There would be paper equality between the two sides, but the Soviets would maintain a numerical edge in medium-range weapons.

ANOTHER major point would involve the United States' acceptance of the Soviet insistence that mediumrange aircraft capable of carrying nuclear weapons be included in the negotiations. The kind of aircraft is not specified

The present Western plan is based on 108 Pershings-2s to be based in West Germany and 464 cruise missiles stationed in West Germany, Belgium, the Netherlands, Britain and Italy.

If there were agreement with the Soviets at Geneva, the United States would guarantee that any cuts would involve some of the 108 Pershings and would not be taken only from the 464 cruise missiles.

The Soviets have made it clear they fear the Pershing because of its short flight time - around 10 minutes from launch to target. A senior U.S. official indicated the United States does not expect that any agreement will be reached in time to head off the planned deployment of the Western weapons.

But the official said the United States would be willing to dismantle those weapons already deployed if agreement were to be reached later.

Marcos offers to recast panel

MANILA, Philippines (UPI) President Ferdinand Marcos said Monday he would reorganize a commission investigating the killing of Benigno Aquino, but opponents rejected the offer aimed at halting anti-government

A government-appointed panel had resigned earlier amid opposition charges of bias.

The United States State Department had no comment on Marcos' offer, but spokesman Alan Romberg said "we're watching the developments of the Philippines closely" and "continue to place the highest value as a first step on a free and open political dialogue in the Philippines.

The man behind Watt

Interior Secretary James Watt will likely lose his job this week and the reason, of course, is the national furor he touched off a week ago when, in a speech to the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, he described his coal advisory commission as "a black ... a woman, two Jews and a cripple." Initially defending the comment as a joke, within hours Watt began apologizing for his "unfortunate

The next day he offered President Reagan a letter of apology for his "morally offensive" remarks. The president accepted the apology last Thursday but has so far refused to answer reporter's questions about the Watt comments. The only White House statement came Friday from spokesman Larry Speakes: "The president retains his confidence in him until I tell you different."

Maureen Reagan, an adviser to her father on women's issues. also said Friday that in his two and a half years as Interior Secretary, Watt had sent "enough apologies to the president to paper the wall" and that if he were "truly loyal to the president" he would leave. Watt has said he "has no plans" to resign.

Wednesday Minority Leader Robert Byrd, D-Va., will offer the Senate a resolution calling for Watt's resignation for conduct "totally unbefitting a Cabinet member." The resolution states that Watt has made public statements "which question the patriotism of American citizens with whom the secretary disagrees" and that his most recent remarks were "insensitive and insulting to all Americans." Byrd said he believes "a majority of the entire Senate feels he should resign."

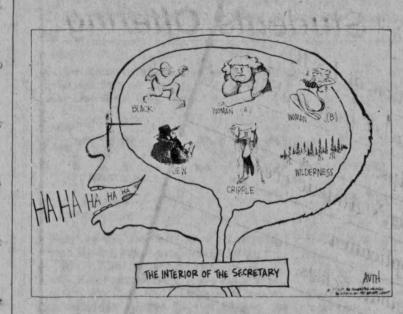

At least nine Republican senators have called for Watt to offer his resignation. Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., is among them and said Watt has a responsibility to turn in the resignation "and then let the president decide."

Sen. Paul Tsongas, D-Mass., using the Democrats' radio response to Reagan's weekly radio address, said the president should have fired Watt "on the spot.

"How is it possible in modern-day America for this kind of bigotry to be running amok in the president's cabinet for such a long time?" Tsongas asked. "The answer is very simple because the president allows it."

Tsongas is right. The real fault for Watt's continual crude remarks rests with President Reagan, who has been wrongly content to ride out these frequent Watt storms. With all the cries that have come for Watt's resignation, adminstration action this time seems probable, and the action will probably result in boosting Reagan's popularity in the polls. It should not, however, excuse the president for his unwillingness to stop James Watt's abhorrent actions and bigoted remarks before now.

Dangers of EDB

The latest chemical health threat, ethylene dibromide, known as EDB, is causing a furor and making the Environmental Protection Agency look bad again. The allegation is that Dr. John Todhunter, who last spring resigned as an assistant administrator under fire, met with the White House and representatives of the citrus industry and then for more than a year stalled plans to ban

The delay endangered those who work with the chemical and people whose drinking water or food has been contaminated by it. Huge sections of California, Florida and Hawaii have had wells contaminated by EDB, and NBC found flour and wheat germ sold in grocery stores as well as food fed to school children to be contaminated. EDB causes cancer and nerve damage.

Like other warnings this will no doubt stir some action, banning or reducing the use of the chemical. But what it will probably not do, what has not yet been done, is force a public, systematic reevaluation of the degree to which the economy as a whole is dependent upon dangerous chemicals and a plan to reduce that dependence and danger.

Such a public examination and redirection would cause at least temporary panic. But it seems increasingly clear, as chemical after chemical is found to be hazardous, that the country must learn to farm in new ways. Such alternative ways - such as releasing sterile pests to mate with fertile ones in the field - of controlling pests and weeds are available and have been tried and found effective.

But there is considerable resistance to a course of action that would ban or severely reduce the use of all such pesticides or herbicides. Farmers fear for their crops and thus their livilihood and the chemical companies fear for their business too. It must be made clear to them and to the American people that putting off facing the problem only makes the situation more dangerous, that it will not go away, and that they will benefit if new rules governing chemical use go into effect.

Does U.S. need Soviet enemy?

By Linda A. Rabben

N THE WEST'S reaction to the loss of the Korean jetliner are mingled feelings of outrage, compassion for the victims and some less creditable sentiments. The latter have had tragic consequences before and could have disastrous results in the future unless we confront them

Our righteous indignation when a rival power violates international law could turn into savage intolerance, blindness to our own sins, dehumanization of the enemy and, finally, outright conflict. This particular incident could be one more step up the ladder of nuclear escalation.

The U.S. seems to have a deep need for an enemy like the Soviet Union, which we can easily portray as the godless, inhuman foil to our own virtue. calls the U.S. "the great Satan." "assistance to freedom fighters"; security.

Guest opinion

Presenting a rival as a demonic force leads to greater misunderstanding and hostility, creating a spiral of conflict that can all too easily end in war.

Just as we called the Germans huns and accused them of all manner of atrocities to work ourselves up to the bloodletting of World War I, so we are now calling the Russians "murderers" and "barbarians." It is time to admit that our hands also are soiled.

WHEN OUR ALLIES the Israelis shot down a Libyan jetliner in 1973, it was a "regrettable incident"; when the Russians shot down an unarmed passenger plane in 1983, it was a "massacre."

when the Russians help the Cubans, it is "subversion." When we intensify the arms race by developing the MX, Pershing and cruise missiles, it is "keeping the peace"; when the Russians put SS-20s on their Western borders, it is "the communist threat

When we invaded the Dominican Republic, it was "the defense of freedom"; when the Russians invaded Afghanistan, it was "an act of aggres-

And so on and so forth. The continuation of mutual hostility is a mutual responsibility. By promulgating and repeatedly practicing a double standard of international relations, both we and the Russians use the same dubious methods to justify our actions. It is easy for us to call Soviet rationalizations of their actions "paranoid" and "brutal," less easy to admit that we, The Soviets bridle as much at this When we give aid to guerrillas and too, make ugly mistakes in protecting characterization as we do when Iran terrorists in Nicaragua, it is what we define as our national

THE DOWNING of the Korean etliner is a tragic symbol of the differences between us and the Soviet Union. These differences do not have to be irreconcilable; we have international institutions like the World Court and the United Nations in which to deal with them. This incident, shocking as it is, remains truly insignificant compared to the risk of massive mutual destruction confronting both countries. In such a dangerous world, it behooves us and the Russians to cultivate understanding and caution - and if they don't seem to, we must. When the mushroom cloud clears and the dust finally settles, it will make absolutely no difference who was in the right.

Now, as the Soviet Union tests our tolerance to the utmost, we must resist the temptation to self-righteousness. Evil lurks in our hearts (and in our bomb silos) as well as in our enemy's.

former First Lady, has accepted her first business assignment since leaving the White House. She is now a director of Gannett Co., the owner of 86 newspapers, 33 non-daily papers, 13 radio stations, seven TV stations and the nation's largest outdoor advertising plant encompassing 38,000 sites where advertisers can put up their bulletins, posters, electric signs and what-have-you, paying Gannett a fee for renting the space.

Carter becomes the 12th person on a board whose members include Andrew F. Brimmer, former governor of the Federal Reserve System, Walter A. Fallon, former chairman of Eastman Kodak, and Wes Gallagher, former general manager of the Associated Press. She also becomes the second woman on the board, the other being Dolores D. Wharton, president of the Fund for Corporate Interns.

No one keeps a running count on the number of women who have made it onto what used to be an all-male exclusive club, the corporate board of directors, but one recent estimate had some 400 companies with female directors. Sometimes, of course, the women are being recycled. Delores Wharton sits on three other boards: Kellogg, Phillips Petroleum and New York Telephone. There are 10 women who each hold at least five corporate directorships. The most active is Jewel S. Lafontant, Chicago attorney and former U.S. Solicitor General, who's a director of Mobil, Harte-Hanks, Continental Illinois, Trans World Airlines, Equitable Life Assurance and Foote, Cone & Belding.

SO WATCH THE paper and see which other corporate board-rooms Rosalynn Carter will show up in.

American companies have reacted to pressure and placed more women on their boards but the progress has not been all that great, according to Lloyd D. Elgart, associate professor of law/management at the Barry University School of Business at Miami Shores, Fla. Writing in the summer issue of the California Management Review, Elgart notes that in 1980 women held board seats at 157 of the 500 companies making up the Fortune 500 roster. That's a percentage of 31.4 percent but it's not as impressive as it

These 500 companies have a combined total of 6,549 board seats to fill. The 181 women who have seats (some companies have more than one female director) therefore represent only 2.8 percent of all directors. At this rate. says Elgart, it will take women 200 years to reach equal representation in the corporate board rooms.

THE PICTURE is similar in the management ranks. Joe Cappo, publisher of the Chicago area business weekly, Crain's Chicago Business, does an annual survey to track the progress of women in the executive suites of Chicago companies. His latest report shows that in 1983 the 12 largest companies had a total of 1,280 vice presidents (compared to 1,166 in 1982) of which 108 were women (compared to 69 in 1982).

Now that looks like progress - a jump of 39 women vice presidents in one year. But wait a second. When Cappo broke down the results by company, he found that the big two Chicago banks - Continental and First National - accounted for 38 of these new vice presidents.

The rest of the companies had hardly moved. Sears Roebuck has 12 vice presidents, not one female (but it has three female directors); Standard Oil of Indiana has 13 vice presidents, not one female; Dart & Kraft has 17 vice presidents, one of them female; United Airlines has 57 vice presidents, two of

The only place women are advancing is the banks, where they now account for nearly 10 percent of all the vice presidencies. "It might well turn out," muses Joe Cappo, "that one of the most traditionally conservative businesses in this country - banking will provide the most fertile ground for executive women. The binary disease To the editor:

A new disease has spread like wildfire throughout this country. We read about it every day in magazines or newspapers and hear about it on radio and TV. No one is safe from the disease, and innoculation is an expensive and, for some, a tedious process. Students are enrolling in computer science courses in record numbers, thousands of people are buying home computers, and schools are desperately trying to acquire personal computers, all in an attempt to avoid computer illiteracy.

So what is computer illiteracy? Jeff Eichenbaum (DI, Sept. 2) defines 'computer literacy' as "a fundamental knowledge of computers ... knowledge about the programs, processes and functions of computers." Do people need to understand how an engine runs in order to drive a car? No. Do people have to be electronic technicians to play a to communicate at our level.

radio or TV? No. Just as there are mechanics for engines and technicians for electronic equipment, there are computer programmers who specialize in understanding programs, processes and functions of a computer.

A good programmer can create a program that makes a computer so easy to use all you need to do is turn it on and press the keys the computer program tells you to. With a wellwritten program, learning to use a word processor or a business spreadsheet is no harder than making a long distance call.

Programmers are continuously striving to create programs that allow computers to communicate at our level. So do we really need to understand BASIC, FORTRAN, PASCAL, MIX, LISP or any of the other 200 or more distinct computer languages, in order to use a computer? No: Don't rush out to learn to communicate at a computer's level. when computers are rapidly learning

Although I have worked with computers for a number of years, it could be easy to dismiss my thoughts as the ravings of a fool, unqualified to discuss the intricacies of computer

However, my thoughts are shared with good company. Joseph Weizenbaum, professor of computer science at MIT and a pioneer in the field, states: "Computer literacy is the current version of body odor ... Many years ago the pharmaceutical industry invented deodorant. In order to sell billions and billions of dollars worth of deodorant, they had to invent a problem for which deodorant was the solution. So BO was invented. There are other examples: halatosis for mouthwash, 'the-blahs' for Alka-Seltzer. Here someone has invented a brand new mental disorder, 'computer illiteracy,' and it's very dangerous ... I would think it was a joke if it weren't so sad" (Science Digest, August, 1983).

So, to those of you who fear being left behind in the computer revolution, I

Post cease-fire peace process slows

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) - The shooting may have died down, but the unknown goals of Syria and the hatred still dividing Lebanon's religious factions threaten to derail the process designed to bring lasting peace to the country.

The cease-fire that stopped the shooting went into effect Monday after 22 days of bloody fighting in which more than 700 people have been killed.

But along with the cease-fire, the only other announced step toward peace was a call for the convening of a so-called national reconciliation council. If and when it meets, the areas of dispute are far more numerous than the few things council members may have in

IN ADDITION, the government view is that any recommendations the council may make will have to go through a constitutional process to be accepted. That is not the view of all those who oppose the government.

A lack of progress in the talks or hesitation to implement reforms is likely to be interpreted as a sign of bad faith, and traditionally in Lebanon that has led to violence.

The United States, which helped negotiate the cease-fire, is counting largely on a belief that the Lebanese are suffering from "war weariness" and are ready to bury their deep differences and blood feuds.

Even if the official American view is correct and the 12 Lebanese leaders do agree among themselves, there is no guarantee Syria will like the results.

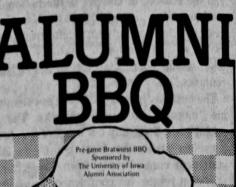

If the Lebanese government expects Washington to exert the pressure that will make the proposed peace talks a success, it should remember the last year.

The United States hoped to arrange a speedy withdrawal of Israeli and Syrian troops, but a year later they were trying to stop the Lebanese from shooting the Salvadoran government warplanes killed 18 civilians and wounded more than 40 of their own troops in bombing raids in support of soldiers trying to retake a town seized by leftist guerrillas, witnesses said Monday.

In El Salvador, U.S.-supplied A-37 "Dragonfly" war jets, backing government troops, attempted to drive insurgents from Tenancingo, 17 miles northeast of San Salvador. They dropped 500-pound bombs on the heart of the town of 3,000, destroying at least five houses, witnesses said.

Massive manhunt begins for 21 Maze escapees

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI) In Northern Ireland's biggest manhunt, thousands of British troops and police searched house-to-house Monday for 21 "utterly ruthless" terrorists on the loose after a mass prison break.

Britain's Northern Ireland Secretary James Prior vowed the mass breakout from the infamous Maze Prison - considered Europe's most secure facility - would not help the "bloody" Irish Republican campaign to end British

Thirty-eight prisoners shot their way out of a segregated block for Republican killers and escaped Sunday, killing one guard and wounding six

Government officials said 11 of the 21 men still at large were convicted killers and included top-ranking officers of the IRA, conducting a terrorist campaign to oust 10,000 British troops from Northern Ireland.

Every available British trooper and policeman was called on for Monday's search, with helicopters and dogs crisscrossing the countryside near the Maze while house-to-house searches were conducted in the cities.

A three-mile radius around the prison was still sealed off, with residents held virtual hostages in fear of leaving their homes.

AUTHORITIES described the hunt as the biggest in Ulster history and because of army involvement.

In the Irish Republic, officials ordered the nation's biggest border operation ever to stop escaping convicts. Dublin's anti-terrorist squad was called into action and extra reserves were rushed to border crossings.

Sinn Fein, the political wing of the outlawed Irish Republican Army, said there was a "feeling of jubiliation" in Catholic neighborhoods that the Republican prisoners at Maze had 'humilitated enemy security' and

About 23 percent of Maze's inmates are lifers convicted for murder and bombings. "We have all our rotten eggs in one basket. You have a group of utterly ruthless and determined men who are out to cause all the trouble they can at any time," Prior said.

Of the 15 fugitives recaptured Sunday, some were quickly rounded up minutes after they hijacked cars and vans of families living near the prison

Others were found hiding in the waters of a nearby river, attempting to conceal themselves in the marshland using hollow reeds to breathe underwater. Two more fugitives were captured Monday.

During the night, troops in Cookstown, 55 miles west of Belfast, uncovered a cache of 2,000 pounds of explosives that police believe was being stored by Republicans for a new IOWA STATE BANK & TRUST COMPANY Iowa City and Coralville 338-3625 Member FDIC

Fry: Rowdy fans tarnish victory

Saturday was a perfect day for Iowa football Coach Hayden Fry — except for one thing.

'The total environment for the game was great - the press coverage, the TV," Fry said. "And for the first time in my life the president of an opposing university (former UI vice-president and current Ohio State president Edward Jennings) came into the locker room and congratulated

What took the polish off of Iowa's 20-14 win over the Buckeyes, the Hawkeyes' first over Ohio State since 1962, was an incident that occured with 22 seconds remaining when an estimated 250 fans ran onto the field and pulled down the goal post in Kinnick Stadium's north end zone. That followed the Hawkeyes' third interception of Buckeye quarterback Mike Tomczak.

"IT WAS THE worst thing associated with the game," Fry said. "Fortunately, the security people took care of it, with the exception of a few hardheads. A couple of them didn't want to leave at all - I think they got handcuffed.

"What if Ohio State had scored a touchdown and needed to kick an extra point? We could have been penalized for the conduct of our fans. That didn't happen though.

Fans came out of the north and west stands and pushed, shoved and climbed onto the steel goal post before it finally toppled over.

Meanwhile, an officials time out had been called as security officers tried to return the crowd to

"THOSE PEOPLE (the fans) don't realize how dangerous that is," Fry said. "They also probably don't realize that the home team can be penalized for the actions of its fans.

reassure the officials that if they wanted me to, I would go down into the end zone and appeal to the fans to get off the field."

While the crowd had erupted onto the north end, many of the fans who remained in the stands began to boo and chant 'clear the field.'

Fry had some kind words for those people. "I really appreciated the fans who booed the people who were tearing it down. It was really a bad

But following the game, the fans poured back onto the field and the situation flared up again.

FRY SAID SUNDAY that celebrating fans attempted to pull the jerseys, chin straps and other assorted articles of clothing off of the the Hawkeye football players.

Hawks soar to third after beating OSU

Spurred by its 20-14 victory over Ohio State, the Iowa Hawkeye football team has climbed to No. 3 position in this week's UPI Board of Coaches poll.

Iowa Coach Hayden Fry said after Monday's practice that he was surprised by the Hawkeyes' ranking. 'That's great," Fry said. "I feel like we earned it.'

Ironically, the Hawkeyes take over the spot from Ohio State, which fell to 11th following the loss. The only other Big Ten team in the Top 20 this week is 14th-ranked Michigan.

There are no more dissenters on the board of coaches - Nebraska has been unanimously voted No. 1 in the latest

THE CORNHUSKERS, who improved to 4-0 with a 42-10 thrashing of UCLA Saturday, received all 40 firstplace votes for 600 points to solidify their hold on the top spot. Nebraska has been top-ranked since pre-season, but until this week it had not been

Texas, 2-0, remained second with 550 points. Alabama was right behind Iowa in fourth with North Carolina rounding out the top five.

Alabama's come-from-behind win over Vanderbilt moved the Tide from fifth past North Carolina, despite the Tar Heels' 51-20 whipping of William &

Rounding out the top 10 are No. 6 West Virginia, No. 7 Oklahoma, No. 8 Georgia, No. 9 Florida and No. 10 Auburn.

West Virginia rose two places after toppling Boston College and knocking the Eagles from the ratings. Oklahoma and Florida each jumped four spots after wins over Tulsa and Mississippi State, respectively.

COMPLETING THE Top 20 are No. 11 Ohio State, No. 12 Southern Methodist, No. 13 Louisiana State, No. 14 Michigan, No. 15 Miami of Florida, No. 16 Maryland, No. 17 Arizona State, No. 18 Kentucky, No. 19 Washington

The teams currently on probation are Clemson, Southern California, Arizona, Wichita State and Southern Mississippi.

Miami hasn't been ranked since preseason. The Wildcats' victory over Tulane Saturday gives them a 4-0 record, the school's best start in 33 years. Kentucky, 0-10-1 last year in coach Jerry Claiborne's first season at the school, is idle this week before facing its first major test of the year against Auburn Oct. 8.

Miami scored a 20-0 victory over Notre Dame Saturday for the Hurricanes' third straight win since they lost their opener to Florida.

LSU and Maryland each topped a ranked team Saturday to return to the ratings after dropping out last week. LSU knocked off Washington, while Maryland upset Pittsburgh. The addition of LSU and Kentucky gives the Southeastern Conference six ranked teams, including Alabama, Georgia, Florida and Auburn.

Putting based on state of mind through use of 'mental imagery'

Putting is probably the most difficult aspect of the game of golf "because your mind plays such games with you," according to Cookie Rosine, a senior on the Iowa women's golf team.

The art of putting all boils down to .how you "feel" mentally, said sophomore Lynn Tauke, with nods of agreement from Rosine

And Iowa women's golf Coach Diane Thomason tries to accentuate the positive when teaching the intricacies and importance of putting.

Rosine said five-foot putts are the hardest for her "because it is so easy. It should be an automatic thing. It should always be makable.

"ONCE YOU THINK that, then you think about all the other things that can go wrong. You can push the ball, or you can not hit it far enough, or you can hit

"I absolutely talk myself right out of it," Rosine said. "Your mind, it plays such games with you."

"There's more pressure on the short putts because the odds of you making that shot are greater," Thomason said. "In making a 25-foot putt, sometimes you think there is a lot of luck involved

People will stand over a foot and a half putt, and they'll probably miss those more often than they will the longer putts, because they don't expect to make the long ones. They expect to, and should, make the short ones." Tauke and Rosine agree that some See Putting, page 2B

Forsch overpowers Montreal for second career no-hit game

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (UPI) - Bob Forsch salvaged at least one highlight in an otherwise forgettable year by pitching the second no-hitter of his career and the second of the major league season Monday night to lead the St. Louis Cardinals to a 3-0 victory the Montreal

Forsch struck out six, walked none but hit a batter in becoming only the second pitcher to toss a no-hitter against the Expos in their history. Forsch pitched the last no-hitter by a Cardinal on April 16, 1978 against Philadelphia in St. Louis. The only other no-hitter against the Expos was by Larry Dierker of Houston in

Dave Righetti of the New York Yankees pitched the only other no-hitter in the majors this season when he beat the Boston Red Sox, 4-0, on July 4.

FORSCH'S BROTHER, KEN, also pitched a no-hitter against Atlanta in 1979, making them the only brother combination to hurl no-hitters

The Cardinals' 33-year-old right-hander had failed to get past the sixth inning in his last four starts. The last game he won as a starter was July 28 against Montreal when he allowed eight hits and one run while pitching a complete game. The right-hander had pitched just one shutout this year, a three-hitter against the Expos May

The victory was only his ninth this year against 12 losses. He entered Monday night's game with an ERA

So overpowering was Forsch that he didn't even need any outstanding defensive plays to notch his no-hitter. The hardest hit balls off him were long flies to the warning track by Andre Dawson in the first inning and Tim Raines in the second. Only two runners reached base for Montreal, one on a hit batsman and another on an error by second baseman Ken Oberkfell.

WITH A CROWD of 12,457 cheering on every pitch, Forsch began the ninth inning by striking out pinch hitter Terry Crowley, who was ejected by plate umpire Harry Wendelstedt for arguing the call. Forsch then got Terry Francona to fly to right - only the second batter to hit the ball out of the infield since the fourth inning and retired Manny Trillo on a grounder to third to end

As soon as the final out was recorded, the crowd stood and applauded and fireworks went off. Forsch was mobbed by his teammmates and stood in the infield posing for cameramen. He then went to the mound tipped his hat to the crowd and left the field waving his cap. The Cardinals scored all their runs in the fifth inning off Steve Rogers, 17-12. David Green walked to lead off the inning, advanced to second on a groundout and scored on a single to center by Ozzie Smith. After Forsch flied out to the warning track in right for the second out, Lonnie Smith ripped a double down the left field line to drive in Ozzie Smith. Oberkfell walked and Willie McGee followed with an RBI single to right to

Ul soccer clubs suffer defeats

By Melissa Rapoport

As the Tampa Bay Rowdies of the North American Soccer League say. 'soccer is a kick in the grass.' Perhaps soccer is a kick in the grass in Tampa, but soccer at the UI this weekend was nothing less than a kick in the derriere.

The Hawkeye Soccer Club suffered its worst defeat in many years last weekend, 8-1. "We lost in the biggest defeat for many years at Palmer College in Davenport. Although we had a few illnesses and injuries, this was no excuse for our inept performance," veteran player Graham Tobin said.

According to Tobin, the entire team played poorly. "We, the whole team were not very good. We just lacked aggression ... My sympathies to the goalkeeper, because it wasn't all his

NEXT SUNDAY, the Hawkeye club will face the Waterloo Strikers. Tobin added he is hopeful the team will pull itself together because "8-1 is a very embarrassing score."

The UI Soccer Club also had a detrimental weekend. Although the club had a home field advantage, they fell to Marycrest College, 4-1.

Joseph Kobomo scored the solo goal with assists by Bill Burke and Mark Bartelme.

According to team secretary Chris Ullrich, it is hard to say what factor attributed the most to the loss. "We didn't get the breaks we needed today. We also had problems with control ... and the defense let up a little

The UI club will play its last home game against UNI on Sunday at 2 p.m. on the Lower Finkbine Field. In regards to the game. Ullrich said, 'There will not be any major changes, including the starters. Although we might have extra practices to prepare for the game."

IN LACROSSE ACTION last weekend, the UI Lacrosse Club smashed intrastate rival Iowa State, Bill Monat, Jim Palmer and Tom Seimler paved the way with three goals apiece and Jim Weldon was credited with four assists.

'We just have an outstanding team." club spokesman Chuck Speilman said. "A lot of veterans and young kids played well this Sunday. This was our first game."

'We're hoping for the same performance next weekend," Speilman said about the clubs' match Saturday against Western Illinois at 1 p.m. on the Field House field.

The Iowa City Women's Rugby Club added another win to its record last weekend by clobbering St. Louis, 11-0. In the first half, Sarah Lussman had a kick for post for three points. According to team member Betsy Anderson, a kick for post is basically like a

THE SECOND HALF was another story, though. The wind didn't let up, but with the wind at their backs, the club moved the ball downfield and scored two more times. Although the first half was low scoring, according to Anderson, Iowa definitely dominated the second half.

'We dominated the second half but we didn't improve as much this week as last week. We were much more consistent and played a cleaner game. We were even a little more skillfull in ball control and ball handling," Anderson

Last weekend was the club's last home game, but they will have many more away games, including trips to Illinois State and Chicago this weekend. Another women's club, the Virago soccer club, posted a weekend win against Grinnell College, 5-1. Wendy Coyle had a great day, scoring three of the team's five goals in the first half. "Some days you're just on," Covle said.

Maureen Riogelle also contributed a goal during the first half, and Coyle added one more goal in the second half to round out the scoring.

Next weekend, Virago will host Ma Bell of Des Moines. The game will take place at the Hawkeve Drive Field beginning at 1 p.m.

NBC gloats through ceremony as it wins 21 Emmys

POOR BRESST

By Merwyn Grote

WISH THAT I had a dollar for every time NBC's name was mentioned during the 35th annual Emmy Awards Sunday night. If I did I might be able to pay off my student loans. Not only did the No. 3 network massacre the competition in the number of awards amassed, but it took advantage of the show to sprinkle it with tacky, live, self-congratualating commercials that kept a running total of the number they were winning.

The only thing that made their commercials forgivable was the fact that the network is No. 3 and also that it needs the publicity and deserves the awards it won. Of the 29 awards given on the show, NBC took 21, ABC 5, and CBS, PBS and independent productions one each. Adding last week's wins in technical catagories NBC totaled 33 awards, ABC 14, CBS 11 and PBS 4. NBC's fledgling shows "Cheers" and

"St. Elsewhere," its now reliable "Hill Street Blues" and the recently canceled "Taxi" cleaned up, taking all the awards in their categories. "Cheers" took four of the seven awards in the category of comedy series with "Taxi" taking the remain three.

Long of "Cheers," gushed thank-yous to the folks at NBC for standing by the show. This was in sharp contrast to Judd Hirsch, whose funny but somewhat malicious acceptance speech for outstanding actor in "Taxi" did little to hide his bitterness about his series' second cancellation in two years. NBC's cameras found an unsmiling Grant Tinker, the network's president, in the audience, and he obviously did not find Hirsch's remarks For the third year running, "Hill Street Blues" picked up trophies for outstanding series, writing and direction, but this year it had to share the accolades with its sister program "St. Elsewhere." A sprawling soap opera in the "Hill Street" mode, "St. Elsewhere" garnered awards for its star Ed Flanders and supporting awards for Doris Roberts and James Coco, who played guest star roles as illiterate street people. Roberts and Coco beat out competition that was comprised primarily of supporting regulars on "Hill Street" and was one for best individual performance in musical special, which went to opera star Leontyne Price. In winning the award, Price was competing against such diverse talents as Luciano Pavarotti, Carol Burnett, Michael Jackson and Richard Pryor.

There were few shocks among the chosen winners but a few surprises concerning who was left out of the winners' circle. ABC's multi-million dollar opus, "The Winds of War," garnered a few technical awards last week but was ignored in all the major categories. Likewise, it was the first year that I can remember that 'MASH'' went home empty handed. Despite heavy publicity and high ratings for its finale episode. The show's cast and crew went home with many tearful good-byes left unsaid.

I WAS VERY pleased with several awards, especially those won by Shelley Long, Tyne Daly and "Special Bulletin." Long, the fresh-faced heroine of "Cheers." is the nicest personality to come to television since Mary Tyler Moore, and it is only a shame that her costars Ted Danson and Rhea Perlman did not win as well. There was sweet revenge in Daly's win, the only one for a CBS program. Her "Cagney and Lacey" was a superior program that was continually trashed by the network, which never accorded it the respect or publicity Undoubtedly the most bizarre award support it richly deserved. Because the

As for "Special Bulletin," which won for best drama special and best writing in a drama special, it was a particularly daring concept in both content and execution. A drama about television coverage of nuclear terrorists, the show was both adventurous in style and risky politically. Such shows are rarely honored appropriately and it is gratifying when they are.

A MAJOR disappointment was the failure of NBC's "Buffalo Bill" to win any awards. Like "Special Bulletin," it is an innovative show in style and content and boasts a particularly fine performance by Dabney Coleman. Its status as a short run, summer replacement probably hurt its chances, but it will be reinstated as a replacement series later this fall and might be around next year for a shot at the brass

As for the ceremony itself, it was neither star-studded nor particularly glamourous. Few TV superstars were in attendance, with the show relying heavily on old-timers for nostalgic appeal. It was nice seeing the likes of Kukla, Fran and Ollie, Kathryn and Arthur Murray and Snooky Lanson and Giselle McKenzie, but without a Farah Fawcett-Majors in sight, the show lacked the trashy glamour that make "Great," said Rivers. "You're a Catholic and a black. I'm a woman and a Jew and if you had a limp we could be the committee appointed by James Watt.

"Is he an idiot!"

LATER IN THE routine, Rivers broke another television taboo - using a profanity by saying, "I've been waiting to get on the Emmys for many years, but they always wanted me to sit in the goddamned audience." Part of the profanity was bleeped when the

"I imagine some network executives are squirming in their britches," he added.
