Car, bike traffic on block may continue

By Carlos Trevino

Iowa City Councilors in an informal meeting Monday overwhelmingly disapproved closing the Washington Street transit interchange to auto and bicycle traffic, allowing only buses because "people know they've got to be careful," Councilor John McDonald

John Lundell, transit planner for the Johnson County Council of Governments, had submitted an extensive 13page study describing the different hazards to pedestrians from congested auto traffic in the bus interchange, but Mayor Mary Neuhauser said, "This is really no new information. It's the same material as before.'

Lundell, also acting on behalf of transit drivers, said the one-block transit interchange between Clinton and Capitol streets should only be available to the Iowa City, Coralville and Cambus services.

"I was opposed to it before," McDonald said. "It would close off another access into Iowa City."

He also said that closing the interchange would add to traffic problems on Jefferson and Burlington streets, the other two entrances to the downtown area from the west side of

"When you're driving downtown, you've got to be careful," McDonald "We've got 20,000 pedestrians hitting the streets every hour, so peo-ple know they've got to be careful."

COUNCILOR Larry Lynch said "the Chamber (of Commerce) must have had everyone call, and every employee call," the councilors to lobby against closing the interchange area.

"It is a congested area; there are an should simply let it be," Lynch said. "I have come to the belief that the whole city is a (traffic) hazard area." Councilor David Perret said he did not think closing the interchange would "create an additional burden to those streets (Burlington and Jefferson streets).' Citing Lundell's report, Perret said that in a 12-hour period, only 2,028 eastbound vehicles passed through the interchange, compared with 8,066 pedestrians, 616 bicyclists. Buses came through 546 times.

"We have a significant number of buses there every fifteen minutes and five different (walkway) crossings," Perret said. "The hazard does exist."

Councilor John Balmer, saying the proposal was a "rehash," voiced opposition to closing the interchange, as did Neuhauser.

Phillip Nychay, an at large council candidate and an Iowa City transit driver who favors closing the interchange, said, "I'm disappointed that the interchange is not going to be made a safer place."

ALTHOUGH councilors generally agreed to allow cars to continue using the interchange, automobiles remained a topic of discussion as councilors reviewed the issue of moving permit parking places from the Clinton Street parking ramp to the Dubuque Street parking ramp. Citizens holding parking permit spaces in the Clinton Street ramp were informed of the move by letter Sept. 29.

Reagan cancels Philippines visit

House announced Monday President Reagan has dropped plans to visit the Philippines next month, and aides said one of the major reasons was the growing political unrest faced by Ferdinand

The official explanation given was that Reagan decided to shorten the trip after concluding that he needed to be in Washington while Congress wrapped up several important spending bills.

While Reagan said earlier in the day any change in his travel plans would be "totally based" on his need to be in Washington, Speakes confirmed unrest the Philippines and concerns for Reagan's security were major factors.

The White House decision ended weeks of speculation fueled by a wave pines after the Aug. 21 assassination of opposition leader Benigno Aquino. At least 12 people have been killed and hundreds of others injured in protests since the killing.

The White House sought to avoid offending President Marcos, whose islands nation is the site of two key U.S. military bases.

MARCOS SUGGESTED last month he would be offended if Reagan's trip were canceled, but Sunday he backed away from that position, saying the 'primary consideration will be the safety of President Reagan."

Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., said Reagan's decision "makes clear that no American is prepared to condone government, and I hope that this message is heard loud and clear in

In addition to worries of personal security, Reagan was under pressure to cancel the visit for political reasons. Members of Congress argued an open display of U.S. friendship with Marcos could send the wrong signal in the face of lingering suspicions of government involvement in the Aquino killing.

Resolutions were introduced in the House and Senate Monday by Rep. Stephen Solarz, D-N.Y., and Kennedy urging President Reagan not to visit Manila until there is a "full and accurate accounting" of the Aquino assassination and until Reagan's security can be guaranteed.

were canceled along with Manila, shortening the itinerary for Reagan's twoweek Far East trip to Japan and South

The changes were announced at the assistant Michael Deaver had delivered personal letters from Reagan to the leaders of all three countries cut from what was to have been a two-week trip.

Deaver left Washington Friday night on a mission kept secret by the White House until today. He traveled to Manila, Jakarta and Bangkok and was headed on to Tokyo and Seoul to arrange the details of the shortened

Laster is forced by bad health to resign

By Kirk Brown

Howard Laster, dean of the UI College of Liberal Arts, announced Monday he will be resigning his post before the beginning of the 1984-85 academic school year.

Laster cited poor health as his reason for resigning. He has been battling cancer for the past 21/2 years. Laster said, "In the last three weeks my doctor has discovered cancer has occurred in my liver."

He said treatment for the cancer will prove to be "clearly disruptive" and expressed a desire to announce his resignation early enough "so the college will have ample time to select a new dean."

In May of 1981 Laster was diagnosed as having cancer of the colon and since that time he has been undergoing a series of treatments for the disease. "I have been very pleasantly surprised how good I have felt during this time," Laster said, despite going through three major surgeries as well as chemotherapy and other treat-

UI officials reacted to Laster's announcement by praising his work and expressing sadness about his leaving. UI President James O. Freedman said he was "obviously very sad" to learn of Laster's resignation.

"DEAN LASTER has provided the College of Liberal Arts with effective and humane leadership during a very difficult period," Freedman said.

Freedman praised Laster for his "devoted stewardship of the liberal arts and sciences" and said "his example of courage acts as a beacon to the university.

Richard Remington, UI vice president for academic affairs, said Laster's resignation "certainly will be a loss to the university.

"His decision to leave from the deanship for reasons of health leaves a void which will be extremely difficult to fill." Remington said.

Laster began as dean of the College of Liberal Arts on July 1, 1977. The college is the largest at the UI. Its 18,050 students account for well over half of the UI's total enrollment.

McGovern takes 'common sense' approach

George McGovern, who as the Democratic presidential nominee in 1972 was often called a radical, came to Iowa City Monday to acquaint voters with his "common sense" ideas as a presidential candidate for 1984.

McGovern, 61, spoke to a full auditorium at Macbride Hall, sparking frequent applause.

Even though this was McGovern's first speech of "this campaign" in Iowa, and he is one of the last Democratic candidates to outline his platform, he says there is still enough time before the Iowa caucuses for him to become a contender and "plenty of opportunity for the people of Iowa to know where I stand.

He added that he will work diligently in the next five months telling Iowans and the people of this country "exactly what I think ... rather than follow the popular mood at the moment."

He said he told a reporter in Des Moines he would like to be perceived in Iowa as a "man who is talking sense. "I'm not here to run as a conservative or a liberal or a radical or a middle-of-the-roader. I would like to look at each issue and tell you what I think is the most realistic, common sense answer in terms of the well-being of the people of Iowa and the people of America as a whole."

MCGOVERN said although he could support the other Democratic candidates and agrees with some of their positions, he noted, "I wouldn't be in this state if I thought they were coming up with all the answers as clearly and as sharply as I would like to see the Democratic contenders.'

Democratic nomination, McGovern said people will look back and say "it was worthwhile, that this campaign helped to sharpen and clarify the great issues that face the country in the McGovern outlined the changes he would work to enact if elected president. First he would "terminate without reservation" the presence of all military personnel in Central America. This suggestion received loud applause.

Studies say U.S. has vast marital rape

By Robyn Griggs

Rape is considered by most experts to be one of the most under-reported crimes in the United States, and the frequency of rape by a spouse is even more unrecognized.

National statistics, compiled by a sociology professor from Oakland, Calif., show that one out of seven women who have ever been married have reported at least one and sometimes several incidents of rape by their husbands.

Every year 600,000 women are raped by their husbands. According to Pam Lewis, a UI law student who has done considerable research on this issue, "twice as many women have been raped by their husbands than by a stranger, by the strict legal defini-

'Preliminary research indicates that the extent of marital rape may be much larger than actually figured," Iowa Assistant Attorney General Harold Young said. "The results we have seen so far are enough to make one sit up straight real fast." In 1978, after extensive debate, Iowa passed a law that gives women the right to prosecute their husbands for first- or second-degree rape. However, not a single case has come to trial since the law was implemented.

LEWIS SAID some counties in Iowa have had cases brought to them but, "for some reason or the other," they have not prosecuted.

One reason for this could be that Iowa law allows for the prosecution of a husband for first-degree rape, involving permanent injury, or second-degree rape, which involves the threat of a deadly weapon or imminent danger to the victim's life. Third-degree rape, which constitutes all other types of sexual assaults, cannot be charged against a husband. The present law "looks good on paper," but is not effective, Young said.

"I think what is really sad is that we went halfway or a little better than halfway in the change in the law made recently," he said. "My opinion is that we should, as some states already have, do away with the marital exemp-

"I THINK there's a definition roblem because women have gotten the message they can't say no," she said. Because of this, many women who are sexually abused by their husbands do not realize this is rape.

"The line for me is where sex is consentual - both people identify what

"It's not just the law, it's the whole socialization process that says she can't say no," she said. "Many women think if you've said yes once, you can't say no again."

However, a woman's right to say no is denied because of the prevailing attitude that rape by a husband is not a

LONDON - Ken and Pearl Ellis wanted to stop village tongues wagging when their 16year-old daughter became pregnant, so they pinned the facts to a tree in their front yard. It read: "To whom it may concern. Our daughter Donna is three months pregnant and we do know who the father is. They want to get married but we think they are far too young."

Baker stalls on Watt debate

WASHINGTON - Senate Republican leader Howard Baker said he would not block "forever" action on a resolution calling for the resignation of Interior Secretary James Watt, just until Congress returns from the Columbus Day recess, Oct. 17.

Acknowledging that Senate Democratic leader Robert Byrd could force a vote on the issue this week by attaching the resolution to a bill, Baker said, "He could make life miserable for me."

MX lobby tactics criticized

WASHINGTON - Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., criticized Martin Marietta Monday for urging its employees to lobby Congress for approval of the MX missile for which it is the prime contractor.

"A fundamental question ... is whether the narrow, private interest of a corporation should be defining national defense policy, especially when the lobbying is promoted as disinterested, constituent opinion," said Schroeder, a member of the House Armed Services Committee.

Zuber aims for closer ties between city and university

Ernest V. Zuber, dean of undergraduate students in the UI College of Business Administration, said that friends and acquaintances encouraged him to run for the District A City Council seat in the Nov. 8 elections. Zuber will be challenging District A Councilor David Perret.

Though he would not say who had coaxed him into the race, Zuber said, "A group of people that know me as being a member of the university and of Iowa City for many years asked me to run.

Zuber, a 27-year resident of Iowa City, recieved his B.A. in accounting in 1961 and his M.A. in the field in 1964. He gained his Ph.D. in economics in 1966 and was a teacher in finance in 1961.

Zuber was named an assistant dean in Business Administration in 1964.

HAVING A BACKGROUND in economics and business as well as possessing accounting skills would be an asset, Zuber explained, in handling problems the city council usually encounters.

Perret, who was vacationing in Europe during September, entered the race for re-election Thursday afternoon just before the filing deadline. Prior to then, no one had declared their candidacy in that

Zuber said "I'd rather not comment" on how he felt about Perret's stands on issues in the previous

BUT AT LEAST one point differentiates the two candidates; a proposal that Perret helped draft calls for a five-year franchise contract with Iowa-Illinois Gas and Electric Co. For the past 25 years, Iowa City residents have received their electrical and gas service as a part of a franchise provided by Iowa-Illinois that was set in 1958.

Perret said at the July 24 council meeting the fiveyear contract would force Iowa-Illinois to negotiate more often and thus "to be more accountable to the Zuber said the proposal would have "no effect at because the city must continue receiving utilities from the same source, regardless of the length of the contract.

"I really don't know how difficult a race it will be against him, but I'll know more in two or three weeks," Zuber said. "He's (Perret) been a councilor for eight years, he has a lot of experience.".

ZUBER SAID he did not have "pet project" goals to accomplish if elected to the council but said, "I'd like to maintain what Iowa City has now and to create a closer relationship with the city and the university. That's always desirable," he said. "There've been some great benefits from the

Nesbitt: Handicapped rights are society's responsibility

By John Tieszen

Federal legislation has made progress in advancing the rights of handicapped people in the last 15 years, but society's attitude towards the handicapped will have to change before they are treated equally, according to Professor John Nesbitt of the UI Recreation Education Department.

There has been significant improvement in human rights, which includes the rights of the handicapped, Nesbitt said. "There has been extraordinary progress in the recognition of the dignity of people. Congress, which has declared Oct. 2-8 as "National Employ the Handicapped Week," has passed several key pieces of legislation to open up new doors for the handicapped. According to Nesbitt, the most impor-

THE IMPACT of the law is that handicapped persons now have legal means against discrimination, Nesbitt said. "When a law recognizes something, it sets in motion hundreds of mechanisms to make sure that it doesn't happen again," he said.

Nesbitt gave an example of a case in New York where a fully-qualified teacher was denied a teaching position because he was handicapped. The state supreme court ruled in favor of the teacher saying that he was discriminated against by the school board. He was subsequently awarded a teaching position.

The Education of the Handicapped Act of 1975 is another act that prevents discrimination of the handicapped, Nesbitt said. With this act "every disabled child is entitled to an appropriate education," he

These three pieces of legislation are a continuation of legislation for handicapped rights that dates back to the 1920s. Nesbitt said. "These acts are a culmination" of earlier acts for the handicapped, he said.

THE ORIGINAL handicapped rights acts were a result of society's compassion for returning war veterans. "Throughout the world, people feel a responsibility for the people who fought in the wars. There is a sense of obligation," he said.

But the problem with the laws that are passed is the lack of manpower to enforce them, Nesbitt said. "The ability is negligible to enforce the thousands of laws" concerning discrimination against the handicapped, he said.

'There has been tremendous progress but there are still barriers," he said.

The attitude of society tends to concentrate on the 'disability instead of the ability" of handicapped persons, Nesbitt said. It takes "the performance by a disabled person to change that attitude," he said. Nesbitt said handicapped persons are quite capable of doing jobs if they get a chance. "When properly trained and properly placed, a disabled person is equal to or more productive than a nondisabled person. They have lower accident rates, lower absenteeism and lower turnovers than nondisabled persons," he said.

"WE HAVE to take the responsibility every day" to help the handicapped, he said.

Jeff Johnson, president of the Cedar Rapids Citizens Committee on the Handicapped, said "we still have a very long way to go" in giving equal rights to the handicapped.

Johnson said a big problem is that groups will get 'gung-ho' about promoting the rights of handicapped persons but the enthusiasm dies down. "We don't have a day-to-day, year-long effort. We can't have a person there all of the time," he said.

"It is a social problem that society has to deal

Iowa City Councilor David Perret said Monday he has not decided whether he'll seek a third term in District A of the Iowa City Council. Perret said he would decide "in the next couple of days."

Perret's nomination papers for the Nov. 8 city election were filed by Councilor Kate Dickson just before the Sept. 29 deadline. The same day Ernest V. Zuber, the assistant dean of undergraduates in the UI College of Business Administration, filed his papers challenging Perret in the District A race. Perret was in Europe on vacation during Septem-

"What I did was to ask Kate Dickson to file my papers," Perret told The Daily Iowan. "I wasn't going to be here to do that, and it gave me the option to decide if I wanted to run," he said. If Perret decides to withdraw from the council race, he would have to notify the Iowa City Clerk's office in writing Tuesday. "I have to decide what the political climate is here and I'll need to talk with my friends and supporters before deciding," Perret said. "I also have to analyze exactly what I really should do. I should know pretty soon."

COUNCILOR Clemens Erdahl said "I really feel if someone has served for two terms he should do what he feels comfortable with." Erdahl explained that if Perret were to withdraw, candidate Zuber would run

"I'd like to serve with him again," Erdahl said. Saying that he has already thought "quite a bit about the race," Perret said he didn't think it would be right for Zuber to run unopposed.

"Right now, I just need to get everything together, review the issues, because I'm a little rusty right now." Perret said. "There's not much to say until I've talked with my supporters."

Perret narrowly won his elections to the city council in 1975 and again in 1979 when he ran as a four-

In the 1975 District A council race, Perret defeated his opponent, David Clark, by 352 votes in an election that turned out 7,518 voters. Perret's 1979 election victory was by an even slimmer margin. He defeated Mark Koenig by only 16 votes. Nearly 10,000 voters turned out at the polls in 1979.

Johnson County Deputy Auditor Sandy Steinbach said if Perret did decide to withdraw from the race, a potential write-in candidate against Zuber would need to inform supporters how to cast a write-in Steinbach said write-in candidates do not gain an official status on the ballot and "if you seek write-in votes, you need to tell people you're running and instruct them of how to write in your name.'

strike out a batter.

Johnson County residents will get a chance to see their county and city officials in action today when the Johnson County League of Women Voters sponsors a Local Government Open House.

"We are interested in people being informed voters," said Naomi Novick, president of the league's local chapter.

Johnson County offices as well as the government offices of Iowa City, Coralville, Lone Tree, Oxford and North Liberty will be open to the public today. The Iowa City Civic Center will be open until 6 p.m. and the county court house will be open until 4 p.m.

The open house is in conjunction with the statewide Local Government Week proclaimed by Gov. Terry Branstad. "The idea behind Local Government Week is to enhance understanding and communication between local officials and the general public," a letter from the governor's office states.

The theme of the week of Oct. 3-8 is "Cities, Counties, Schools: Your Partners in Service."

NOVICK SAID the open house will make voters more aware of what goes on in local government. "Many people aren't aware of the services offered by local governments. The open house will give peo-ple the opportunity to ask questions and give com-ments" on the work of local officials, she said. "We want people to be able to vote more in-

The Iowa City government offices at the Civic Center will be open an hour later than usual to accommodate people, Novick said. There will also be a shuttle bus running from the Civic Center to the Johnson County Court House so people can tour all of the county and city facilities, she said. "Many of the local officials agreed to have an open house," Novick said.

During the tours, the league will be registering voters, Novick said. "There will be a voter registration booth at the Civic Center for people who haven't registered and for students who want to change their registration," she said.

THE LEAGUE will also hand out a booklet on Johnson County and its services, Novick said. The booklet, which is published approximately every 10 years, offers voters a chance to learn the structure and workings of the county government, she said.

Novick said the league has spent many hours trying to get the open house organized because they "tried to cover the broad spectrum of county and city governments" to be included in the open house,

Novick said this is the first time in several years that there has been an open house for city govern-ment buildings and she said she is hoping for a good turnout. "I have no idea how many people will attend but I'm hoping for a lot."

High court passes the buck on handgun law

Supreme Court signaled Monday that it will not stand in the way of community efforts to ban handguns from residents'

Opening its 1983-84 term, the high court declined to review a federal appeals court ruling approving a stringent handgun ordinance enacted in Morton Grove, Ill., which is believed to be the first of its kind.

sleeping in tents pitched across from the White House.

Gun-control advocates hailed their action in the Morton Grove case as a green light for local authorities to enact tough gun laws.

"The decision means a lot of small towns and villages will now pass laws based on our ordinance. There is nowhere for the NRA to go," said Morton Grove Mayor Richard Flickinger.

But spokesmen for the National Rifle Association predicted it would have no major legal impact.

spokesman Jack Adkins said. "They've merely thrown the ball back into the Illinois court system, opening the door for the Illinois state supreme court to resolve the issue."

The Morton Grove gun ordinance drew nationwide attention because it pitted gun advocates, led by the NRA, against those who believe handguns contribute to street crime and domestic violence.

The rifle association argued the law violated the Second Amendment right to "keep and bear arms."

But gun control advocates said the guarantee applies only to state militias of cable television to protesters' rights "BASICALLY they (the justices) and that local governments have the in expressing their political views by have not resolved anything," NRA authority to ban handguns.

Michael Beard, president of the National Coalition to Ban Handguns. said "the little town that defied the might of the NRA prevailed There is no way now that the gun lobby can use the U.S. Constitution as a club to threaten communities that follow Morton Grove's common sense example."

THE COURT'S action is likely to en-supervisor Harvey Milk. Also on the court's agenda for the new term is a federal appeals court ruling that held sleeping in a national park is a constitutionally-protected form of expression. The case was sparked last March when temporary tent cities - dubbed "Reaganville" and "Congressional Village" - were set across from the White House and the Capitol to dramatize the plight of

The justices also heard arguments for the second time - in the celebrated Sony "Betamax" case that will settle whether Americans may videotape TV programs and movies at home without violating copyright law. The court agreed for the first time to consider to what extent cable television programming may be regulated.

The court said it would take up the question in a case from Oklahoma questioning whether states may ban li-quor advertisements from cable televis sion and from the "super-stations" they transmit.

Berube says he was fired for safety violation outcry

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Bertrand Berube, a longtime whistleblower at the General Services Administration, charged Monday he was fired because the agency chief felt he was "making too much noise" about safety violations in federal buildings.

BERUBE suggested many of the safety deficiencies stemmed from Carmen's desire to "look good" by reducing GSA's maintenance budget, which he said was cut by $18.5 million last year alone. He said when he questioned the policy his superiors told him. "Do more with less."

Richard Haase, commissioner of GSA's Public Buildings Service told reporters, "I completely disagree with a lot of the distortions," referring to Berube's allegations.

Berube, 22, who was praised by Ronald Reagan and received a promotion and $7,500 bonus after Reagan took office, was dismissed Friday by Administrator Gerald Carmen.

"For the first year or so of this administration, I was the darling of the agency. After that year, I was no longer fixing the problems of the last administration. I was fixing the problems of this administration. That's when my problems began," Berube said.

Rep. Barney Frank, D-Mass., scheduled hearings Thursday before his House Government Operations subcommittee to explore Berube's allegations.

Frank also said he would investigate the unusually quick denial last Thursday of Berube's petition for a stay of his dismissal.

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Sen. Jesse Helms launched a filibuster Monday to block legislation for a Martin Luther King Jr. national holiday, charging the civil rights leader associated with communists and used "non-violence as a provocative act."

"The legacy of Dr. King was really division - not love," the North Carolina conservative declared.

Helms also opposed the holiday on grounds it would be a burden to taxpayers. He estimated it would cost $4 billion to $12 billion to provide federal workers the additional paid holiday.

Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., angrily contradicted his assertions about the cost. "Hogwash. That's hogwash," he said.

The Congressional Budget Office estimates the additional holiday - on the third Monday of January - would cost the federal government $18 million in lost productivity. Opponents cite a U.S. Chamber of Commerce estimate of $4 billion including private sector costs. Kennedy challenged President Reagan to back the bill publicly.

Helms' dogged opposition may keep the Senate from a vote until Friday or possibly beyond next week's congressional recess.

Senate GOP leader Howard Baker filed a motion to limit Helms' initial filibuster. If Helms pursues further delaying tactics, the Senate will have to approve another motion before being able to vote on the bill.

During his speech, the conservative southern senator denounced the slain civil rights leader for associating with communists and his "calculated use of

"If Dr. King had these known associations with communists ... then to say this man was as pure as the driven snow is not a logical conclusion," Helms later told reporters.

Helms says colleagues tell him privately they cannot risk alienating blacks by voting against the bill, despite their concerns about its cost.

TEN THOUSAND telegrams in support of the bill were sent to senators last month at the urging of black singer Stevie Wonder, who held a nationwide radio telethon for the bill. Coretta Scott King personally visited a number of senators to persuade them to endorse the holiday honoring her slain husband.

NEA releases '84 hit list of Congressional enemies

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The National Education Association, which had one of the best 1982 union records for defeating foes in Congress, made public Monday "a preliminary target list" of 37 Republicans it wants to help oust in 1984.

House GOP leader Robert Michel and assistant Senate GOP leader Ted Stevens of Alaska are among the 31 House members and six senators on the list drawn up for the nation's second-largest union.

Joe Standa, a political specialist for the 1.7 million-member teachers' group, said all the target lawmakers are classified by the NEA as having 'anti-education' records and all are likely to have close races for re-election.

"It is a preliminary target list - one that is subject to possible change," he said, depending on how the congressmen vote in coming months and what they say in interviews with the union.

The NEA's political action committee, which last week backed Walter Mondale's quest for the Democratic presidential nomination, is to meet in February to help decide which congressional candidates the union will endorse in 1984.

In 1982, the NEA endorsed 344 candidates in House and Senate races, and 243 of them, or 73 percent,

Twenty-one of the 60 incumbent House members the NEA went after were defeated, "which gave us one of the highest success rates among any union,"

THE PRELIMINARY 1984 list also includes 49 congressional "friends" whom the NEA will try to help re-elect next year. Only one Republican made the list — Rep. Claudine Schneider of Rhode Island.

Last week, NEA President Mary Futrell predicted that between 700,000 and 1 million union members will participate as volunteers in the 1984 presidential and congressional races, with the NEA spending

Here is the NEA's preliminary list of legislators it will try to defeat:

Thad Cochran of Mississippi, Jesse Helms of North Carolina, Gordon Humphrey of New Hampshire, Roger Jepsen of Iowa, Stevens of Alaska and John Warner of Virginia.

U.S. must 'speak the truth' of Soviet Union, Reagan says

WASHINGTON (UPI) - President Reagan, seeking to shore up relations with the political right, said Monday night a "willingness to speak out forthrightly about communism" is the only way to push the Soviet Union toward peace.

Slings and arrows

The "gender gap," the most important Achille's heel in President Reagan's expected presidential campaign (only 38 percent of female voters, compared to 49 percent of males, still support Reagan), can hardly be seen for all the arrows being slung from the bows of Democratic candidates.

Six addressed a meeting of the National Organization for Women in Washington, D.C., Sunday. All are "considering" women as running mates, none are promising. All made reference to the Equal Rights Amendment, none have specific agendas for getting it passed. There was clamorous support for what was heard at the gathering - much of it appropriate, because a forthright national address of these issues has fermented too long. Ann Lewis, director of the Democratic National Committee, said during the National Women's caucus in Texas this summer, "Ten years ago, I remember sitting in Washington trying to figure out how to arrange a meeting with George McGovern. Now we've got five of the six Democratic presidential candidates here."

And now there are six.

But there are countering overtones that all the enthusiastic focus is aimed at a lead in the polls, not authentic empathy for the plethora of discriminatory and condescending realities still facing

Females in role-model positions and federal legislation enforcing equality are important steps against prejudice - but they are only symbols, and symbols without constant reinforcement remain only arrows in the air, without target. Supreme Court Justice Sandra Day O'Conner is a symbol; her title and attitudes render her incapable of making any important shifts in the daily battles women fight against Victorian values. The Civil Rights Act was passed in 1964, but reports came in as late as 1981 that blacks in Dubuque, Iowa, were being discriminated against at public accommodations.

As Lewis points out, the force and recognition of women has grown in 10 years, but the growth is laborious. Women are leaving traditionally underpaid "female" jobs - clerking, bookkeeping, stenography - for higher-paid blue collar work: splicing cable, welding, plumbing. Some 354,000 women work skilled craft jobs at 39,000 American firms — an improvement, but hardly a scratch in the iron-clad armor of "traditional employment." More and more women are appearing on the corporate boards of national companies — but still comprise only 2.8 percent of such positions. At the rate they are proceding, 200 years will pass before equal representation exists.

A woman as vice president and passage of the ERA will improve these conditions, but will not change them. What's needed from Democratic candidates is less about symbolic gestures and more categorical talk about how to change the male-dominated situations that exist everywhere from federal commissions to the local hardware store.

Feminist groups — NOW, specifically — should do less clapping and more exploration in order to determine which candidates are launching vote-catching, balsa wood arrows and which, like the mythical Paris, can strike a vulnerable spot - in this case Reagan's ludicrous explanations for his ignorance and inaction on sexual injustice.

Gift of life

There is a 12-year-old girl in Tennessee who is dying of cancer. She and her parents belong to a fundamentalist Christian sect that rejects most forms of medical intervention. The state courts have ruled that she is a victim of child neglect and have taken custody of her and ordered chemotherapy.

Her parents argue that they and she ought to decide for or against medical treatment on the basis of their religious convictions. In a country that dislikes government intervention in the family but also fears death, especially the death of children, and expects doctors and modern medicine to work miracles, the case is an emotionally difficult one.

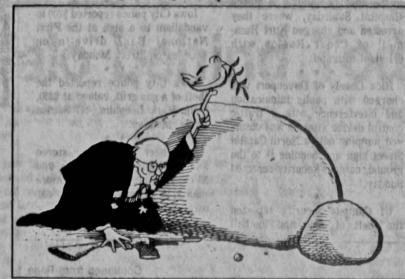

But the parents' decision is irrational and improper; and the parents, however well-meaning and devoted - and they pparently are - have no right either to make that decision for her r to allow her to make it herself. It is irrational because it is hard to understand how one could believe in a loving God who created he earth and man, with his intelligence, and then deny man the right to use his intelligence and the products of the earth to heal others. It is hard to believe one would not see that as either using god-given gifts, which is proper, or as god working through man to

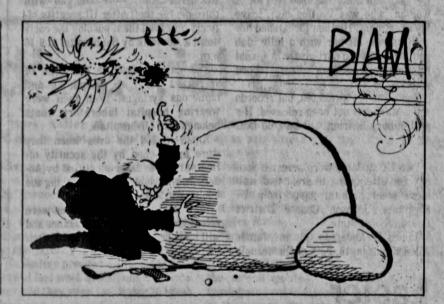

But they do not believe that and in normal circumstances a religious belief, however irrational, would require legal respect. But, a child of that age is not competent to make such a decision. We do not allow twelve-year-olds to vote, serve in the armed forces or sign contracts because they are not competent at that age to make important life or death decisions.

We also should not permit parents to make life or death decisions like that. A child is not a piece of property of which a parent has unlimited ownership. A child is a being the parents only hold in trust for the future. They may not make decisions that limit that future. It is one thing to decide to drive a car until it wears out because one disapproves of mechanics and another to allow a child to die because one does not believe in doctors.

PEACE TALK

Rents here higher than average

ing the Fair Rent Coalition's reply to a guest opinion that appeared in The Daily

By James Rhodes

N THE SURFACE Dennis Bobel's two prong argument concerning the theoretical impact of the fair rent ordinance on Iowa City's tax base (property taxes) seems to make sense. (DI, Sept. 13). But, in fact, there are two major problems in the logic.

First, given Bobel's own argument concerning the durability of housing and the uncertainty of continued demand and thus slow supply adjustment, to develop in the surrounding areas? If the Fair Rent Ordinance does lower rental rates in Iowa City, demand will increase in Iowa City and correspondingly decrease in the surrounding areas. The corresponding increase in vacancy rates provides disincentives for development in surrounding areas. Thus it is unlikely that "there will be a shifting of revenues at the municipal level." Bobel's second and more important point, that if the ordinance succeeds in lowering rents it will cause an actual lowering of rental property values and thus an actual reduction in rental property taxes, again belies a careful review of the ordinance's mechanism for determining a fair rent and is in contradiction with his earlier assertion that the market is operating

IF THE MARKET is operating properly, the high rents in Iowa city are not due to excessive profits, thus the fair rent mechanism will not lower rents nor the corresponding property values and resulting tax base. If the high rents are due to excessive profits then the mechanism would lower the rents; but only by limiting the rate of return on equity. Now, by definition, assessed value is equal to the net operating income divided by the rate of capitalization. The rate of capitalization is a function of the rate of return. Because the rate of return on equity is lower the corresponding rate of capitalization should decrease. Thus the decrease in net operating income due to the fair rents will be offset by a corresponding decrease in capitalization rate and thus not necessarily lead corresponding tax revenues.

The case for a fair rent ordinance in Iowa City must contend not only that the market has failed to alleviate the housing shortage, but also that the public determination of fair rents is ecessary to alleviate one of the effects of the housing shortage - inor-

1983 Rental rate comparison

Cedar Rapids	$335 (60)	$286 (50)	$198 (54)	$158 (58)
Quad Cities	$349 (54)	$287 (49)	$231 (32)	$163 (53)
Waterloo	$326 (65)	$255 (68)	$203 (33)	$160 (56)
Des Moines	$388 (38)	$322 (33)	$214 (43)	$177 (41)

(The numbers in parenthesis represent the percent that lowa City rents are higher than those of the given city.)

Guest opinion

To determine whether rents were, significantly higher in Iowa City than in other nearby Standard Metropolitan Statistical Areas, a comparison of rental rates listed in the main newspaper of each SMSA was conducted during the week of August 3-10, 1983 The results show that Iowa City's rents are significantly higher than Des Moines', Waterloo's, the Quad Cities', or Cedar Rapids'. For example, an average two bedroom apartment in Iowa City rents for 68 percent more than a two bedroom apartment does in Waterloo.

SOME MAY CRITICIZE our data because it may only show that Iowa City has a newer housing stock. It is true that 31.7 percent of all Iowa City's housing stock was built between 1970 and March 1980, according to the 1980 census. But the corresponding proportion for the Quad Cities is 27 percent. The data indicate that Iowa City efficiencies are 53 percent higher, one bedroom units are 38 percent higher, 2 bedroom units are 49 percent higher and 3 bedroom units are 54 percent higher than comparable units in the Quad Cities. It is implausible that a difference of 4.7 percent in the percentage of housing built in the last decade can account for such discrepancies bet-

The significance of the rental discrepancies is highlighted by the low average number of rooms per unit and the relatively high percentage of units lacking adequate plumbing. According to the 1980 census, Johnson County has the smallest average number of rooms per unit in the state. Also, Iowa City has an appreciably higher number of units that "lack plumbing for exclusive use" than any other SMSA. Therefore, renters as a group not only pay more in Iowa City but, on the whole, receive

CITY ATTORNEY Robert Jansen and City Manager Neal Berlin note that "rents since 1975 have risen generally consistent with increases in the consumer price index." Yet this documents that rents are inordinately high. Landlord costs do not increase as fast as the Consumer Price Index (the federal government's measure of inflation) because one third to one half or more of landlords' costs are unaffected by inflation. Studies done by George Sternlieb in Boston, and Fort Lee, New Jersey, and the Santa Monica Rent Control Board, using figures provided by the Institute of Real Estate Management, indicated that full CPI increases are excessive. The data show that rent increases of one half CPI are sufficient to cover general cost increases of rental units. Because rents increased at the same rate as the CPI in Iowa City, they increased approximately twice as much as landlord

Further, use of any index applied to the 1975 rents begs the question of whether or not rents are too high. Because the vacancy rate was 1 percent in 1975, rents may have been inflated due to the tight rental market at that time.

FINALLY, BOBEL raises some definitional questions. First, if Bobel would have carefully read Section IX (Establishment of Maximum Allowable Rents) of the ordinance he would realize that no "omniscient being will tell us what fair means," in the abstract sense he implies. But rather the fair rent board with the use of the stated formula will determine fair rents case by case.

In general, the formula determines that fair rents shall not exceed the sum of the expenses borne by the owner (which includes operating costs, local property taxes, and interest) and a reasonable rate of return on equity. This reasonable rate of return will be commensurate with the rate of return on investments of similar risk. It has been argued that one or two percentage points above the average mortgage interest rate for the previous year would be reasonable, resulting in a rate of return for 1983 of approximately 15 per-

The point is that if the market were at equilibrium, as Bobel asserts, such rental rates would exist: thus they are fair. Correspondingly, rental rates above these rates are excessive (and thus unfair or bad), because landlords would be receiving a rate of return on their equity which is above the rate of return for investments of a similar

Now because it is impossible to access reliable data specifically on Iowa City's landlord costs, it is impossible to unequivocally conclude that the existing high rental rates are due to landlords demanding excess profits. In fact, this is precisely why a mechanism was constructed that would operate on a case by case basis. It is highly probable that some landlords are receiving excessive returns on their equity while others are not. The implementation of the fair rent ordinance will determine the specific truth in this matter. If Bobel and the opponents of the ordinance are correct, the maximum allowable rent will be higher than the existing rents and the market will not be affected. In other words, if the landlords are correct, they have little to lose, and maybe a lot to gain in landlord-tenant relations; that is, a tenant who views the landlord as a person charging a rent based on costs and reasonable return and not someone squeezing the tenant just as much as possible.

The data show that rents are inordinately high. The ordinance is fair in that it allows landlords a reasonable return and keeps rents as low as can be realistically expected. The new rental units built this past year have at best maintained the current housing shortage. The problem still exists. The market will not solve the housing problems by itself.

Rhodes is a member of the Fair Rent Coalition.

1983-84 STUDENT BASKETBALL TICKET POLICY

1. A student may purchase one season ticket at the student price

Students will receive a priority based on the number of consecutive years they have purchases or applied for basketball tickets at the University of Iowa with no loss in priority for student exchange programs off campus or bona fide illness. An individual who misses two or more consecutive seasons for reasons other than the above will lose all priority.

Student tickets will be on sale at the Athletic Department commencing October 3 and closing October 14, 1983. These tickets will then become available for pick-up beginning November 15, 1983. The student I.D. card must be presented at the time of pick-up so that the student name and number can be stamped on the student tickets.

The public sale will open immediately after the student sale closes, therefore, a student who has not ordered by October 14 will have no further opportunity to buy a ticket for the 1983-84

A University student may order season tickets for a group no larger than eight, provided he/she has the additional student credentials, but each individual student must pick up his/her own ticket and sign for it.

Iowa women's golf Coach Diane Thomason says greens are only "25 percent accurate" in allowing a golfer to make the putt.

Well, golfers. The odds are against

But all is not lost on the putting green, a place that can make or break golfers of any level.

Putting takes lots of repetition and a positive mental outlook, according to Thomason. But one of the biggest problems facing golfers is how to practice the fine art of putting, she said.

"Most greens, especially practice greens, are probably only 25 percent accurate," Thomason said. "Even if you had the (putting) machine out there that hits the ball the same every time, 25 percent of the time it would make the putt, 75 percent it would

Jets topple Buffalo behind Todd's aerial display

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. (UPI) - Mark Gastineau, whose war-dance antics have become an issue of controversy, recovered a fumble in the end zone for a touchdown and Richard Todd threw two touchdown passes Monday night to send the New York Jets to a 34-10 victory over

The all-pro defensive end, whose "sack dance" incited a bench-clearing brawl in last week's victory over the Los Angeles Rams, recovered Joe Cribbs' fumble for the touchdown that gave New York a 17-0 lead.

THE JETS' victory left four teams - New York, Buffalo, New England and Baltimore tied in the AFC East with 3-2 records.

New York had a 10-0 lead late in the third quarter when they downed a punt by Chuck Ramsey at the Buffalo one. On the next play, Cribbs fumbled and the ball was pounced on by Gastineau in the end zone at 11:35.

The first quarter was scoreless but the Jets threatened with a drive to the Buffalo 20.

The Jets took a 7-0 lead at the 6:00 mark of the second quarter. Todd threw an 11-yard touchdown pass to Harper, who caught the ball at the six and dove into the end zone.

Perfect putters practice patience

Lynn Tauke, a sophomore on the Hawkeye team, said you have to "practice to know how it feels - to the point that you are sure of it. They can teach you the very, very basics, but from then on, it's how it feel to them. You have to learn the feel."

TAUKE SAID this process is beneficial to the team because "it makes it like a tournament situation. Diane sees our results, so we feel the pressure to make them.'

Both Rosine and Tauke agree that it's "more fun and challenging" to practice on an "actual green" rather than a putting green.

"So many people have trampled over (a practice green) in a day, that you don't get the true roll," Tauke said. "Putting greens are not regular greens," Rosine adds.

'Old-timers' battle youth for NL title

Philadelphia Phillies and Los Angeles Dodgers, two teams who successfully tinkered with the hands of time, meet in the best-offive National League Championship Series beginning Tuesday night at Dodger Stadium.

The first game will be nationally televised beginning at 7 p.m. on NBC (KWWL-7).

Philadelphia, a team which won the National League East with a mixture of the not-too-old 'Wheeze Kids' and young players, will start left-hander Steve Carlton, who recently won his 300th major league game and ended the regular season at 15-16. Los Angeles will pitch left-hander Jerry Reuss, who finished with a 12-11 record during the regular when it traded third baseman Ron Cey, a cornerstone of the infield for 10 years, to the Chicago Cubs and allowed Steve Garvey, a bulwark at first base for 10 seasons and the team's most popular player, to try free agency and sign with the San Diego Padres.

Many baseball people felt the Dodgers could not recover from such losses, but Manager Tommy Lasorda used Greg Brock to fill Garvey's shoes and moved Pedro Guerrero, who this year became the first Los Angeles Dodger to have consecutive seasons of 30 or more home runs, in from the outfield to take over at third base.

Sox get defensive to play Baltimore

Chicago White Sox earned a trip to this fishing capital by finally learning to make a catch.

Despite rivaling the Orioles in power and pitching and outracing them on the bases, the White Sox actually captured their first American League West title by patching up the second-worst defense in the league.

Their gloves as well as their bats and track shoes will be on display Wednesday when right-handed Cy Young Award favorite LaMarr Hoyt, 24-10, faces Baltimore lefthander Scott McGregor, 18-7, in the first game of the best-of-five American League playoff series.

Hawkeye field hockey player Egan named Big Ten player of the month

Iowa's leading field hockey scorer Ellen Egan was named the Big Ten Field Hockey Player of the Month for her performances in September.

Egan, originally from Gibbsville, N.J., has scored 21 goals in the last nine games, including five against Michigan State, four against Western Illinois and three against Indiana State. For the season the senior has chalked up 22 goals and nine assists.

Iowa Coach Judith Davidson said Egan's overall play has been very good this season. Davidson also foresees Egan breaking former Hawkeye Ann-Marie Thomas' record of 28 goals last season.

Egan didn't score much her sophomore and junior years because of illnesses. "She didn't play up to what I expected then,'

But after recuperating last year, Davidson said, "Things have really fallen into place for her this year.'

Egan didn't score last weekend against Connecticut, Penn State and New Hampshire. The three Eastern teams throttled her play over the weekend, Davidson said. "The word was out that she scores a lot of goals," Davidson said.

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (UPI) - Mark Butkus does a good job of living up to his famous uncle's legacy.

The vounger Butkus, a 6-foot-4, 260-pound defensive tackle at the University of Illinois, terrorizes his Big Ten opponents in the best tradition of former Illini and Chicago Bear great Dick Butkus.

But Mark, named UPI's Midwest Defensive Player of the Week, has clearly made a name for himself at Illinois. He leads his teammates with 33 tackles and had a game-high 10 tackles (five solos and five assists) in the Illini's 33-0 victory over Iowa Saturday.

The defense, tops in the Big Ten in statistics, has not given up a touchdown in 10 straight quarters. Against Iowa, the defense yielded only a net of 17 yards in 32 rushes and it sacked quarterback Chuck Long seven times.

Illini quarterback Jack Trudeau, named UPI's Midwest Offensive Player of the Week, orchestrated the 33-0 victory over the Hawkeyes. He fired three first-half touchdown passes and completed 23 of 32 passes for 286 yards.

"It's the first game where we planned to throw more than we ran," Trudeau said Monday. "I felt it was another game where we improved."

Lou Ferrigno appears in the title role of Hercules.

B-movie buffs find it all in 'Hercules'

ANS OF MOVIES that are so bad they're good should take note: Hercules is the real

It's an instant classic. It ranks right up there — or down there — with the immortals of incompetence, the B movies that everyone loves to hate.

It's not as inept as a Plan Nine From Outer Space, which makes every list of the All-Time Worst Movies. Nor is it as singularly bizarre as a Terror of Tiny Town, the only all-midget musical Western.

But Hercules is inept, and it is

Its ineptitude includes footage from other movies, a magic chariot clearly made of tinfoil, and a starlit backdrop for a scene at the center of the Earth. Its bizarreness includes costumes that even Raquel Welch wouldn't touch (including a face veil that creeps into the heroine's nostrils whenever she inhales), and a blonde bimbo who adorns the arm of the King of Africa.

CREDIT OR BLAME for this travesty belongs to Menahem Golan and Yoram Globus, a producing team that specializes in shoestrings. Most of their movies make substantial profits without ever coming to the U.S., disappearing instead into the lucrative bowels of the international market-

Hercules is an exception. It's one of their increasingly-frequent efforts. however half-hearted, to find a spot in the more prestigious movie

But Hercules is still under-financed,

The only "name" in the cast is Lou Ferrigno, who plays the Hulk on television and who presumably got the title audiences. The movie's ad campaign calls him "incredible," and he is, indeed, not credible The movie's special effect is Tinkerbell, a dancing light that serves every imaginable purpose. The movie's many process shots don't count because their halves don't match.

Lewis Coates wrote and directed. If he's not using an assumed name, he should. The whole enterprise looks like an "SCTV" production of Dr. Tongue's 3-D House of Hercules, only funnier because it's true.

A movie like Hercules should not be confused with a movie like Screwballs, its neighbor at the Campus Theatres. Screwballs is just plain bad. It's a vicious variation on Porky's. The humor ranges from the obvious - the name of the high school is Taft and Adams, so the cheerleaders wear T&A sweaters - to the offensive - jokes at the expense of overweight people, stutterers and, in abundance, women Screwballs is a movie only James Watt

Hercules, though inept, is at least earnest. It deserves a cult following. With luck, The Return of Hercules, which Golan and Globus have already finished filming, might be even better

At the time of its release (1960), Saturday Night and Sunday Morning was hailed as a breakthrough for the British cinema. Its story of a factory worker's frustrations with his workingclass life caught the critics' collective fancy for its unsparing grittiness. Albert Finney stars, Karel Reisz directs, and both became famous as a result. 7 p.m.

• Platinum Blonde (1931) doesn't have the technical polish or the dramatic flair of Frank Capra's later movies, but it does have Jean Harlow, Loretta Young, Robert Williams, screwball dialogue and the unmistakable imprint of Capra's comic vision. 8:45 p.m.

Television

On cable: One of the most unsung films of last year, My Favorite Year, makes its cable bow tonight (Cinemax at 9) as part of pay cable's "Peter Q'Toole Film Festival." We couldn't think of a better O'Toole film to start things off; this part (a drunken Errol Flynn-type making his belated television debut) is the most fun he's had in decades. A fine supporting cast and excellent script make this movie definitely worth your while.

On the networks: IPTV is showing the first segment (of 13) of PBS's

"Vietnam: A Television History" tonight at 8. This show deals with the British and French prelude to America's involvement in the area Very important television (not a contradiction in terms). And for the incorrigibly (and blissfully) ignorant, the Phillies and those lovable Dodgers square off in Game One of the National League pennant series. Go Dodger

Radio

KSUI (91.7 mHz), 8:30 p.m. Tonight's concert by the New York Philharmonic is conducted by Christoph von Dohnanyi and includes music by Beethoven (his Eighth Symphony), Schumann (the Piano Concerto, with Bella Davidovich as soloist) and Richard Strauss ("Till Eulenspiegel's Merry Pranks").

Nightlife

DFX-2. At the Crow's Nest, tonight only. Musician magazine calls these MCA recording artists' music full of "raw, Stones-like passion" and finds it "the best straight-ahead rock debut of 1983." We've always been a little leery of hyperbole, but we'll be there anyway. They'll do one set only, at about 11:15 p.m.

'Beyond the Limit' beyond dull

By Craig Wyrick

HERE IS ONE fatal mistake a romantic thriller can make - and that is to be dull. Beyond the Limit, based on Graham Greene's best-seller The Honorary Consul, makes that fatal mistake, and many more potentially crippling ones besides. By the time the audience staggers out of the theater, everyone feels as if they've been through the Whatever is left (or not left) of Greene's novel lacks the excitement to make a good political thriller. Eduardo Plarr (Richard Gere) is an apolitical, unemotional doctor living in Argentina whose father suffered tortures under the Paraguayan government. His new-found friend, the drunken British honorary consul to Argentina Charlie Fulton (Michael Caine), is the unintentional kidnap victim of Plarr's Paraguavan terrorist friends. Eduardo tries to talk reasonably to the terrorists, but it's useless - their fate has already been sealed by the screenwriter.

AND WHATEVER is grafted onto Greene's novel to make room for Gere's sexual forte lacks the eroticism or emotion that normally constitutes a romantic triangle. Eduardo beds Charlie's wife, Clara (played by the incompetent but pretty actress Elipida Carrillo), even during the time Charlie is being held hostage. But since Charlie is the only one who can really love, he naturally ends up with the girl and Gere ends up with a bullet in his head. Charlie, in a sentimental gesture worthy of a road-company Hamlet, names their child-to-be Eduardo. Gere's performance is the center of the film, and when the performance is so feeble, the film just crumbles away. Even if the story and direction had been better, the film would have still suffered immeasurably at the hands of Gere. The archetypal Californian is required to don a British accent, which comes and goes at Gere's whim -Gere's idea of a British accent is being able to pronounce amateurs as "Amma-too-ers."

In moments of emotion, Gere seems unable to keep up the false facade, and the accent entirely disappears. The accent is typical of Gere's entire performance, a half-hearted walk-through. Why. when you have an actor of Gere's limited, but often powerful, talents, should vou put him in a movie that's such anathema to his skills?

GERE'S BEST when he's angry, or just seething under the surface and exuding an almost animalistic sexuality. Robert Mulligan's Bloodbrother, Paul Schrader's American Gigolo and Jim McBride's Breathless (one of the best films of this year) reveal the powerful sides of Gere's persona, often expanding on his outward toughness to reveal a bit of tenderness within (especially in Bloodbrothers).

Beyond the Limit, on the other hand, is a role entirely unsuitable for Gere - too much tenderness and too much emotion, in addition to the British accent, are required for the playing of Dr. Plarr. When Gere tells one of the terrorists, "I am a simple man," the terrorist replies, "There's no such thing as a simple man." Wrong. Gere is, at

Michael Caine, in this rare performance as a good guy, is the only one who's trying to make this movie decent. But it doesn't really matter. The rest of the cast and crew, particularly the screenwriter, seems to have given up about five minutes into the movie. The background score often tries to drum up some excitement, but when nothing thrilling is ever happening on the screen, it's hard to be excited by a soundtrack. (Paul McCartney threw away his talent on the indistinguishable theme song.)

What buries Beyond the Limit under the films of this year is not its badness, but its sheer mediocrity. There is only thing worse than a bad movie, and that's a mediocre one. Beyond the Limit is almost beyond the limit of endurance.

The Rape Victim Advocacy Program crisis line receives numerous calls from rape victims who preface their complaints with the statement, "I'm not sure this is rape," because they were raped by an acquaintance.

Karla Miller, RVAP director, said these complaints definitely do constitute rapes, and are actually a very common crime.

National statistics show about 50 percent of rape victims are assaulted by an acquaintance, she said. Miller said the RVAP crisis line receives almost the same number of calls concerning rapes by acquaintances as by
