UI study: Enrollment will peak in 1985

By Steve Sands

UI enrollment will peak in 1985, not in 1986 as previously predicted, according to the annual 10-year enrollment projection to be presented to the state Board of Regents today.

The peak fall head count for 1985 is predicted to be 30,780, instead of 33,049 n 1986 as anticipated in last year's study.

Tougher admission standards and an anticipated drop in the number of high school seniors are cited as two major factors in the adjusted projection, according to Ray Muston, associate dean of academic affairs.

Next fall 30,402 students are expected to attend the UI, an increase from 29,599 this year. Every year after 1985, the study predicts a decline in student population — reaching a low in 1993 of 24,789 students.

Last year the UI predicted a decline in student population after 1986, with a low of 28,810 in 1992. The projections were compiled by Elizabeth Stroud, UI coordinator of institutional data.

THE NEW ADMISSION policy requires Iowa residents to either be in the top half of their class, or achieve a score of 24 or higher on the American College Test. Non-residents must be in the top 30 percent of their graduating class or receive a score of 25 or higher

A nationwide drop will also occur in the number of 18-year-olds between 1979 and 1994, according to a report presented to the state Board of Regents last November.

The report, titled "Coming Enrollment Crisis: What Every Trustee Must Know," predicts a 26-percent decline in the number of 18-year-olds in those 15 years. This will result in a population drop from 4.3 million to 3.2

Iowa is expected to be hit harder by the demographic downturn than other regions in the nation, according to the

"THE COMBINATION of the admission criteria with the downturn in demographics, that is the biggest explanation (for the alteration of last year's study)," Muston said.

He said the admission standards were increased because "we're working at maintaining a cultural mix of the student body. That's part of the educational flavor of the institution ... but also to maintain the standard of quality of the student body vis-a-vis the class rank and the standard test scores."

He said the projections are constantly being updated and other factors. such as federal aid to students, can change the predictions.

"It's a planning device. It's not meant to be a tablet of stone," he said. Muston pointed out that one imporant influence on future enrollments will be a continuing focus on the value of education in the nation.

Student leaders told the regents last month the tuition increases at the three state universities might serve as deterrents to enrollment growth ointing out that the non-resident undergraduate increase of 25 percent may discourage many non-residents from attending the UI.

Withheld evidence merits new trial say Hall's attorneys in reply brief

By Patricia Thorn

Attorneys for James Hall claimed the information recently released by the Iowa Bureau of Criminal Investigation concerning the 1973 murder of a UI nursing student "reveals a pattern by the state of withholding material and exculpatory evidence from the defense," in a reply brief filed in Johnson County District Court

Hall's post-conviction relief appeal hearing was held in district court Oct. 13 and 14. Wednesday was the deadline for filing any papers with the court related to Hall's ap-

Harold Young, an assistant attorney general representing the state, said he mailed the state's reply brief Wednesday afternoon. "I guess it's going to be a day late," Young said.

Sixth District Court Judge Ansel Chapman will now decide if the recently released evidence warrants a new trial in the murder of Sarah Ann Ottens.

Ottens' body was found on the fourth floor of Rienow Residence Hall March 13, 1973. Dr. T.T. Bozek, Johnson County Medical Examiner, said a "long, thin tubelike" instrument had been used to strangle her. Hall was convicted of second-degree murder in May 1974 and was sentenced to 50 years at the Iowa State Men's Penitentiary in Fort Madison.

HALL'S REPLY states that while "some of that evidence, viewed alone, would not mandate a new trial," it is "significant when viewed in connection with all the circumstantial evidence, withheld from the defense, implicating persons other than James Hall.

Hall's attorneys states that although Rosemary Jones, a cleaning woman who worked on the fourth floor of Rienow Hall at the time of the murder, was "either unable or unwilling" to recall incidents concerning the investigation of the murder at the time of the hearing, the BCI file on the investigation stated that two weeks after the murder, Jones identified William Charles Burbridge as the man she had seen knocking on the door of Ottens' room the day she was murdered.

"The state further independently analyzes, and finds lacking in materiality, each piece of evidence tending to incriminate William Burbridge ... Each piece of evidence tends to underscore the materiality of the Jones identification and to reveal that we are not here dealing with an isolated incident or an investigative oversight," Hall's reply states.

The reply also cites information the BCI withheld concerning Torsten Muehl, a friend of Ottens'. According to the BCI report, Muehl failed the first of two polygraph tests he took in relation to the murder. Muehl also had a gouge on his nose when interviewed by BCI agents a few days after the murder. An autopsy found blood and skin under Ottens' fingernails.

"THE STATE'S case against and subse-

According to the reply, the BCI's reason for withholding evidence can be "gleaned" from a statement made by Assistant Attorney General Garry Woodward, the prosecuting attorney during Hall's trial.

The Day After

The ABC TV film on nuclear destruction, "The Day After," will be shown on November 20 at 7:00 pm. Jack Thomas of The Boston Globe presents the following advice:

• Do not let primary school children see 'The Day After." Do consider it appropriate for junior high school children who are mature and who have appropriate adult support. · Talk with children in advance about the · Stay with them throughout. If the film is unsettling to you as an adult, it will be more unsettling to a child. · Be alert for signs of immediate anxiety such as nail biting, hair twisting, or excessive fidgeting; and, for several days, signs of delayed anxiety such as irritability, difficulty in concentration, and even headaches in severe cases.

· Reduce the volume or turn off the set if a child seems to be suffering from excessive anxiety.

 Remember the importance of the family setting as a forum for discussion and the importance of emotional reassurance from a caring parent. · Do not ignore a child's question or greet it with silence or dishonesty.

· Admit to adolescents that parents do not have all the answers and encourage them tolearn more, to seek solutions, and to cope with conflicts between the real world and the world of fantasy.

Remember that emotions themselves are not destructive, and their expression by adolescents should be encouraged.

Point out that society has weathered many crises throughout history, and that a positive and active search for solutions-even to a nuclear dilemma-may help prevent nuclear · Reassure children that nuclear war need not happen, that adults upon whom children depend for security are looking for answers, and finally, that they expect to be successful in finding solutions.

In the at-large race — won by William Ambrisco and George Strait - Tomlin, Fry, and Bill Sackter, whose life was portrayed by Mickey Rooney in the television movie "Bill," were among the 21 people who received write-in votes in the election.

In an interview after Wednesday's football practice, Fry said he was unaware he received a vote. "That's wonderful," he said. "It's one more than I anticipated.'

When asked if he had any political ambitions, Fry replied, "Yeah, I hope I find time to vote in the next

Fry said he thought city matters were in good hands with the current group of councilors, but added he would make himself available for advice if the need arises.

COUNCILOR JOHN BALMER, who decided not to run for re-election, still received one vote. "That's interesting," Balmer said laughing. "It wasn't my own vote I assure you.

Tight curriculum aids West High in rebound from troubling 1970s

Iowa City West High School drew national attention six years ago this November when Time magazine picked it as an example of a troubled school in a failing education system.

Today administrators and teachers believe the school has an improved image, a tighter curriculum and more stress on attendance and discipline.

They also credit the students as being more committed to learning and more responsible than in the past.

The Time article said that West High was a product of an innovative town. It had a flexible curriculum, but the liberal philosophy was producing many students who failed to learn the basics.

Discipline in the school was described as "fairly loose" and a teacher quoted in the article said many students were not showing up for class.

Superintendent David Cronin, then the acting superintendent, said in the article that teaching the basics was a burning issue in the school district. The article added, "The Iowa City school board's determination to bring back 'the basics' is shared by parents and school administrators across the U.S."

CRONIN SAID TUESDAY, "I think we as a school staff, administrators and teachers, perhaps have tightened some of the structures" since 1977.

"I would also say on behalf of the students, I think students today have become conscious of their responsibility in terms of assigning greater responsibility for their own destiny and have shown a certain amount of maturity.'

Bill Mitchell, guidance counselor at West High, said more restrictions have been placed on attendance procedures in the last six years. The school guidelines say students must attend at least 75 percent of the class periods. The number of unexcused absences has been reduced from three to two.

Mitchell said that student smoking, permitted in certain areas during the 1970s, has been disallowed. The procedures for students leaving the school building during free periods has also become more restrictive.

The same philosophy has been applied to the curriculum. Acting Principal Edward Hauth said, "Six years ago, they (students) were taking a type of curriculum that was too broad and too diversified and that is where they have tightened up."

AN ENCOURAGING SIGN is American College Testing and Iowa Tests of Eductional Development scores for the high school showing an upward tendency in the last two years, compared to a considerable drop during the first half of 1970s.

Heidi Galer, a German teacher who criticized the students' lack of basic grammar in the Times article, said she sees a considerable improvement.

She said the students are more committed to learning and are very successoriented. She points to the increase in English advance placement classes at West High. In 1977, there were two classes of 15 students, but that has in-

Councilors unhappy; debate on park law delayed

By Mark Leonard

Councilor David Perret said Wednesday he is "very unhappy" an ordinance that would require new Iowa City sub-divisions to have their own parks has been put off for discussion until 1984. Last February, the council postponed making a decision on a Mandatory Parkland Dedication Ordinance until mid-August so council members could concentrate on completing the city's new zoning ordinance.

"The city is continuing to grow ... there needs to be more open space to enhance the quality of development and meet the recreational needs of the mem-been pushed back for the new council to debate. Perret, a member of the council for the past eight years, will vacate his seat Jan. 1.

"I am disappointed that the Mandatory Parkland Dedication issue wasn't able to be discussed, debated and looked at by the present council," Perret said. "Although I'm not terribly surprised it's been postposed with all the issues we have to finish up before the new council, I'm not very happy about the situation."

If the ordinance is passed by the council, developers will be forced either to set aside land in subdivisions to be used for parks, or make a payment to the city in lieu of that

Assistant City Manager Dale Helling said the change in scheduling reflected the current council must address before the end of the year.

"It's just a matter of the council having certain priorities it wants to see done before the new council," he said. "It's nothing out of the ordinary."

COUNCILOR KATE Dickson said, however, she would like the current council to discuss the ordinance. "This is one decision I don't think it would hurt us to make before the end of the year. I think there would be enough support on the present council for it to pass the new council. "I think there's still a reasonable chance of it passing (the new council). I still strongly support its concept.

Dickson said the ordinance is needed to "improve the living quality" in new neighborhoods. "I think acquiring the property for parkland before the people move into a new area is the sensible thing to do."

"The city is continuing to grow and I think there needs to be more open space to enhance the quality of development and meet the recreational needs of the members of this community," Perret said. "I think people ought to realize that some of this land is beautiful and ought to be enjoyed and protected."

Councilor John Balmer, who said last February forcing developers to purchase parkland would simply be 'adding another built-in cost' for Iowa City renters to contend with, said Wednesday it is "good" the issue will be

Under the ordinance, a formula comparing density per dwelling unit to the gross area of the subdivision will determine how much land should be set aside. Developers have contended the ordinance will add $850 to the cost of constructing one dwelling unit.

Any payments made to the city by developers would be put into a special fund, to be used only for parkland in the immediate area of the subdivision.

Perret said passage of the ordinance would only cause a "very, very small increase" for developers.

Four members of the Johnson County/Iowa City chapter of the National Organization for Women picketed Wednesday in front of the Allstate Insurance Company in Iowa City to protest Allstate's employment practices.

The picket was part of NOW's National Day of Protest against Allstate, as well as a demonstration of support for the plaintiffs in a 9-year-old sex discrimination suit filed against Allstate in California.

The suit, Kouba vs. Allstate, claims that Allstate's pay practices guarantee unequal pay for women, in violation of Title VII of the 1964 Civil Rights Act. The literature on smoking available to workers. case will come to trial in May 1984.

Stanley Lettas, area public relations manager for Allstate in Kansas City, told The Daily Iowan, 'There is virtually no limit to what any Allstate employee can earn.

He said starting wages are determined by "skills, education, experience and prior salary," with the intent of ensuring an employee at least the same standard of living as their last job offered.

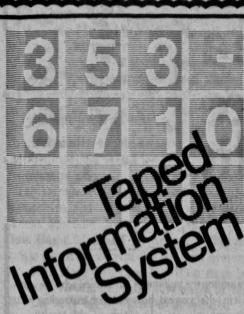

Lettas said that Allstate does not agree with NOW's position, nor does Allstate believe it has violated any civil rights act.

The Syrian-backed rebels began their drive 13 days ago and broke into Beddawi capturing two key outposts of the Palestine Armed Struggle Command - the crack Arafat unit entrusted with the camp's security.

"BEDDAWI HAS fallen," said police reports. "The shelling has stopped. The only sound coming from the camp is automatic weapon fire.'

Beirut Radio said the rebels pounded the camp for an hour before breaking through and fired shells and rockets at the rate of two every five minutes.

Anticipating a defeat by the better equipped and larger rebel forces, most of Arafat's 5,000 fighters retreated earlier this week to Tripoli and placed artillery and rocket launchers atop buildings in densely populated areas.

Arafat's spokesmen refused to acknowledge Beddawi's fall and continued to boast they could hold out in Tripoli for two months against the rebels, who demand Arafat leave Lebanon and surrender his 14-year reign of the Palestine Libera-

The members of the House of Representatives who voted against the Equal Rights Amendment (two-thirds of the Republicans members voted against it) offered a variety of absurd excuses to explain their behavior.

Some said they objected to the Democrats' demand the House vote yes or no, without amendments and with debate limited to 40 minutes. Others wanted to amend it to restrict abortions and to bar women from combat.

The first excuse is patently absurd. The debate in this country over women's rights and the ERA is older than any member of Congress. Abigail Adams, wife of John, urged delegates to the constitutional convention to remember the women. Congress and the entire country have debated the ERA intensively for the last 12 years, and polls show that people strongly support the ERA. Those who offer this excuse were either just looking for an excuse to vote against it, or they wished-to gut it with exceptions.

Many who wished to tack anti-abortion riders to the amendment were opposed to the amendment regardless. The support of the others was clearly lukewarm, otherwise they would have understood the essential unfairness of holding the rights of all women hostage to their narrow, religious opposition to abortion. If they oppose abortion, they should work for a constitutional amendment banning it. But justice for women should not be denied because a minority oppose it or oppose abortion.

Finally, the argument about women in combat is ridiculous and probably moot. Women fought native Americans during the conquest of the continent. They fought the British during the Revolutionary War and they fought each other during the Civil War. One young woman wished to join the Union army. Her parents locked her in her room. She escaped, disguised herself as a boy, fought, was wounded and when she died they discovered her

Two young farm women disguised themselves as boys. During a battle, one of them was wounded and captured by Confederate forces. Her friend deserted and made her way behind enemy lines. She redonned her women's clothing and gained admittance to the prison where her friend was held, still disguised as a boy. The two escaped, and made their way back through enemy lines. They again disguised themselves as boys and served out their

In World War II, women pilots ferried crippled planes back for repairs. They also tested them after they were repaired to make sure they were safe for the men to fly. Almost 40 women were killed. Because they were not officially in the Army, they received no veterans benefits until Congress passed and President Carter signed a bill to that effect - more than 30 years after the war ended. Any major war now will be a nuclear war. And all - men, women, children - will fight and die in that.

As it stands now, this country has minority rule. It is a country that guarantees religious and racial minorities their rights, but refuses to extend that same constitutional protection to its female majority. That is shamefully unjust and immoral. Those who voted against the ERA (including Tom Tauke, R-2nd district, and Berkely Bedell, D-6th district) are guilty of human rights violations so severe they do not deserve to represent anyone in

The national and state Democratic parties have more to lose than political prestige if they can't resolve their dispute over the date of the Iowa caucuses: mainly, their reputation as a competent party.

The Democratic National Committee orginally decided to move all the caucuses and primaries close together to eliminate a long, drawn-out primary race. Unfortunately, the traditional media attention focused on states like Iowa and New Hampshire would be lost if all the primaries became immediately sequential. The results of those primaries no longer would have as large an impact on the primary process as they have in election years past. Candidates wouldn't have the time to turn an Iowa or New Hampshire victory into an asset in later sparring. Candidates and the media would spend less time and money in Iowa during the presidential campaign.

The Democratic National Committee therefore promised New Hampshire and Iowa rights to early dates in the primary and caucus schedule. Iowa was to have its caucus eight days before New Hampshire had its primary. But the national committee continued to mess with the political system by allowing Maine to move its state caucuses to within days of the New Hampshire primary. New Hampshire now wants to move its primary to Feb. 28, the day after Iowa's scheduled caucus. Iowa's state Democratic committee, mindful of losing its impact on the election, says it's moving the state caucuses to Feb. 20, eight days before the recently proposed New Hampshire primary. The national committee says Iowa delegates will not be seated at the national convention if the caucuses are held early. In addition, county-based Democrats in Iowa are threatening to defy the state party if the causcus date is changed.

Presidential candidate Walter Mondale once said the primary system is the true test of presidential candidates. Could arranging the primaries be a test of the party's ability to run the country? If so, Democrats should resolve the primary dispute quickly, or else the 1984 elections, at best, will be an exchange of one kind of incompetence for another.

Locust-like lawyers defy morality

By Abraham Auerbach

DRIVER'S LICENSE is a legal document. It confers a coveted privilege established by law and must be registered by a state agency, like a will or contract. But anyone of eligible age with $10 for the state and the ability to pass an easily understood test

Should it be required, for unquestionable validity, that a driver's license be certified by an attorney? This would assure both the state and the license holder no possible legal hindrance comes with the possession or use of the license. This is a valuable service, and surely the attorney would be entitled to a reasonable fee. Reasonable in the eyes of the legal profession might be, say, $500.

Ridiculous? If the decision on this proposal were left to attorneys they certainly would think it reasonable, even necessary, and would cite numerous cases of drivers' licenses obtained faisely or by und ualified state employees. Considering the millions of licenses issued, there would be no trouble finding such examples. No doubt other reasons would be adduced, and perhaps the hint that if bearers of drivers' licenses were ever taken to court for traffic offenses, they might find the judge a tad more sympathetic if the licenses bore the imprimatur of a lawyer. After all, what is a judge but a lawyer who knows the right politician?

THIS SCENARIO is unlikely to occur soon, but consider what already has. There is a "probate" system, which is little more than a license for lawyers to rob dead people on the pretext of "protecting" their estates. Often their procedure is to find out if a dead man or woman has any near relatives who might complain if too much is taken out of their rightful inheritance. If so, the lawyers may satisfy themselves with a relatively small percentage. If not, they are likely to grab a lot of it, by writing a bill for the requisite amount of legal work.

And who would say legal work was not done? Certainly not the probate office staff. Certainly (with a few exceptions) not the judge. The lawyers are his colleagues after all, and in many states, he gets his cut too.

The blunt truth is that a probate lawyer is morally no better than those people who prowl battlefields to steal from the bodies of dead soldiers. The prowlers generally are shot if caught. But unlike them, the lawyer takes no risk. His thievery is legal.

The same can be said about other legal procedures. Often there are only a few standard forms to fill out available from any well-stocked pleted in a few minutes by a secretary. But the attorney charges hundreds to glance over the completed forms and affixing his precious name. For a layman to do likewise is practicing law without a license and is likely to be punished more severely than posing as MUCH WORK done by the legal profession today smacks of a racket, the lawyers little better than gangsters demanding tribute for "protection."

Recently the UI began construction of a new law building at a projected cost of $15 million, despite the gross oversupply of lawyers already swarming like locusts over our land, preying on the people and eating out their substance, producing nothing, building nothing and creating nothing except more work for each other. One of the worst aspects of this lunacy is the diversion of the talents of so many young people away from science, engineering and other fields of knowledge genuinely vital to the nation's growth, prosperity and survival.

There are other aspects, too, some

"Product liability" has reached the point where manufacturers are routinely sued whenever someone is injured while using their product, even if there was nothing wrong with the product and the person was using it with utter stupidity.

IN ONE CASE, a man went on a his car - a violation of the law in that state. He also neglected to put the safety catch on. On arriving at camp, he could think of no better way to retrieve the gun from his car than to take it by the muzzle and pull it toward himself. His widow collected $65,000 from the maker of the shotgun in an out-of-court settlement, for the company feared a jury would award her more.

The lawyer's tactic in these cases is simply to tell the jury, in effect: "This company has lots of money. Why not give this poor widow some of it? It's nothing to you."

But it is something to them. In an increasingly competitive world, where we need innovative products to compete, more and more manufacturers fear that by developing new products, they might expose themselves to new areas of product liability. Businessmen fear to dismiss an incompetent employee who is a member of a minority group. University faculty boards can no longer honestly assess the competence of probationary instructors, for a lawsuit may follow. The list could go on and on.

Even a rich nation cannot afford such conditions indefinitely. Our necessary and impending choice is between legal reform and collapse from a parasitic social blight.

Demolishes DeMello

To the editor: After reading the letter by George

DeMello (DI, Oct. 31) condemning hunting, I felt it my duty to respond. Hunting as a sport was not a major cause of the extinction of the passenger pigeon. It was a combination of man's encroachment on the birds' breeding grounds and market hunting that caused the birds' decline and eventual extinction. The developer, not the sportsman, should take the major portion of the blame. Mr. DeMello also states that deer herds do not need to be culled. This a fallacy. The deer population is underhunted and over-browses the land. This causes a high rate of winter kill.

Mr. DeMello points out that lead shot can cause poisoning. This is true and for this reason many areas permit only steel shot to be used.

Having a gun and shooting at wildlife does not automatically make one a hunter. A true hunter is a sportsman who respects the animals he hunts and is concerned with conversation.

The next time you feel the urge to condemn hunting, just remember, it is largely because of the money spent by hunters that there is still wildlife to be observed and enjoyed by everyone.

Plea for ethics in ads

To the editor:

As a former member of The Daily Iowan staff, I take a very personal interest in that outstanding newspaper and tout the Iowa journalism school to future journalists.

That's why I was shocked to see the offensive Heileman's Old Style beer ad, best described as "Beer on a Bike" in a recent issue of the DI. Reputable brewers don't link alcohol and vehicles in their advertisements, for the wellpublicized reason that nearly 25,000 people die in alcohol-related car crashes each year.

Drunk driving should be of particular concern to the DI staff, since the one segment of the population for whom the mortality rate is not dropping is for those aged 16 to 24. The reason: auto deaths, half of which are alcohol-related.

One thing responsible publications can do is to turn down advertisements that subtly suggest drinking and driving. My oldest daughter was killed two years ago by a drunk, drugged driver. So were 8,000 others between 16 and 19 in similar crashes that same year. The driver had a bellyful of beer. He apparently took the Heileman message to heart. Let's hope other young adults don't.

Ignorance is obstacle

To the editor:

This letter is in response to Shahram Hamzai (DI, Nov. 9), whose ignorance of the problems in the Middle East show what the real obstacle to peace in the region is.

For one thing, Operation "Bright Star" is in no way connected to the "Zionist government in Israel." The operation is conducted in Egypt with Egyptian, not Israeli, soldiers.

Furthermore, Mr. Hamzai indicates that it is the Israelis who are to blame for all the war going on in the Middle East. This type of thought, to blame Israel for everything, cannot stand up when one looks at the conflicts in the region. The fighting between the two PLO factions is inflicting heavy casualties on the civilian population in Tripoli, Lebanon. It seems the PLO enjoy to fight their battles close to civilian populations that are trapped by the two fighting terrorist groups.

Where was the outcry when Syria slaughtered 15,000 in the city of Hammah, or when the PLO held Lebanon hostage, taking over the country to use it as a base for terrorist actions against Northern Israel?

It is time the American people wise up and stop listening to Arab propaganda about the so-called "Zionist threat." Their true ally in the Middle East is Israel, the only democratic country in the region.

would hamper the Hawkeyes' chances of getting the Detroit star.

"If it goes past this signing date, we'll be at a disadvantage," Raveling told members of the media at a press conference Tuesday. There are still many schools in hot

For the first time in Iowa's history, the Hawkeye volleyball season didn't end with the last regular season game of the year.

The bad news is the Hawkeyes' first opponent the fifth-ranked Purdue Boilermakers.

But the new formation will only run well if Iowa has a good passing game, according to Stewart. "We'll have to pass well and we are really going to have to play defense to beat (Purdue)," Stewart said.

THE SECOND-YEAR coach said Iowa has been practicing a defensive formation that will put four Hawkeye receivers covering the the back court. The formation will give Iowa more chances to dig Boilermaker's attack and will give the Hawkeyes an opportunity to transform it into an offensive attack.

this year we'll do real well." The meet traditionally is one of the nation's best, with only 12 of the top teams in the nation competing for the crown. This year's field appears to be no different. Dunn said he isn't sure where Iowa will place in the meet, saying that a top six finish would satisfy

"EVERYTHING SEEMS TO be coming together real well," Dunn said. "I'm real confident we'll have our best meet of our season and possibly our best Windy City since they invited us

The Hawkeyes weren't invited to the meet in 1980 following a last place finish the previous year. Iowa has finished in ninth place in 1981 and eighth place last season.

Defending NCAA Champion Nebraska will be heavily favored to defend its 1982 Windy City crown. Challenging the Cornhuskers will be Southern Illinois, Iowa State, Ohio State, Minnesota and Illinois.

"I don't think you can overlook Minnesota," Dunn said. "They do have a real good team and Illinois has been keying on this meet. They have just been sending a few of their gymnasts to some of the meets while their big guns have been sitting back home and training for the Windy City. I expect they'll do well, but I don't know how seasoned they will be in their first meet of the year.'

Oklahoma, Louisiana State, Northern Illinois, Michigan and the host school, Illinois-Chicago round out

MUCH OF THE Hawkeye success could depend on how healthy gymnast Stu Breitenstine is by Friday evening's team competition. The sophomore sat out last weekend's Wisconsin Open with the flu and a shoulder injury. "If he feels okay, he could go five events," Dunn said. "That could make a difference. He has had some pretty good workouts this week."

Iowa will use the same line-up it did in the season-opening Big Eight Invitational two weeks ago, except for a blood vessel in his hand during a workout on Monday and will be available only if needed this weekend, according to Dunn. Instead, still rings specialist Mike Tangney will compete on the Iowa nine-man roster.

ONLY ONE ALL-AROUNDER, sophomore Dan Bachman will work all six events in the Friday's optional routines and during Saturday afternoon's compulsory exercises.

If there is one thing Dunn would like to accomplish it is to get more gymnasts into Saturday evening's individual finals. Only two Hawkeyes, Breitenstine on the vault and Bob Leverence on the pommel horse advanced to the finals last year and both brought home third place honors.

Breitenstine, who is given an ex-freshman Lenny Lucarello, who broke cellent chance to return to the finals in the vault, has the best chance of making the floor exercise finals, along with Bachman and Kyle Shanton. Leverence and Joe Leo will be the Hawkeyes' best bets on the pommel horse. Aaron BreMiller, who broke a school on the still rings last weekend at the Wisconsin Open, has a shot in that event and Bachman and Ron Rechenmacher should have a chance on the parallel bars. .

> On the horizontal bar, Shanton, Rechenmacher or Bachman could advance to the finals. "It might be a little tougher for us to get in the finals on the high bar because it is our first event and the scores tend to escalate as the meet goes on," Dunn said, "but in the first meets of the year, a lot of guys don't hit so if you hit, you do have a

lowa swimmers face first test

By Greg Anderson

One of the main goals Iowa men's swimming Coach Glenn Patton has set up for his squad this season is an undefeated dual meet campaign.

And with Minnesota traveling to the Field House Pool Friday night, the 2-0 Hawkeyes should have their first real test in dual competition.

"Our other meets have been low pressure and not serious tests of our ability," Patton said. "This will be our first serious challenge of the season."

The Golden Gophers topped Iowa in last year's one-on-one confrontation and Patton said if his team isn't ready, they could be in for another defeat at the hands of Minnesota.

"WE HAVE TO BE mentally plus physically sharp and prepared to compete in swimming and diving on Friday," Patton said, "or we will find ourselves looking at a dual meet loss."

Minnesota's undefeated squad is led by sprinters Jay Peterson, Scott Ruppert and Chris Tahti.

Wisconsin, Minnesota, Stevens Point and Wisconsin-Eau Claire will also be competing with the host Hawkeyes, in a meet that will have no admission charge.

Rydze said that Iowa should have an easier time of it in their second meet of the weekend

"We should win the relay," he said. 'We have a lot more depth and I would be real surprised if we don't win." Friday's dual gets underway at 7:30

'Low-key' weekend awaits Hawks

By Mike Condon Assistant Sports Editor

For the third consecutive weekend, the Iowa women's swimming team is facing double-duty with a meet on Fri-Evanston High School and Saturday morning at the Southern Illinois Relays at Illinois-Chicago.

Friday's meet with the Wildcats had to be moved to 8 p.m. due to a conflict with getting the Evanston High pool. Northwestern is in the process of building a new facility and it will not be available for some time.

Normally that wouldn't be a problem, according to Iowa Coach if his squad would be able to capture ferent. "He (Wildcat Coach Pat fighting illness.

we have to get up the next morning and be ready to swim the relay meet by 7:30," he said.

SO KENNEDY HAS decided that day night against Northwestern at this should be a "low-key" weekend for his squad. "With six meets in three weeks, the kids just need a chance to swim with no pressure and that is what we are going to do at the relay meet." Eight teams, including Southern Illinois, Wisconsin and Minnesota will be of nothing but relay events in all

"We are just going to put the kids where we want to," he said. "In fact, we probably will decide where to swim people on the bus ride to Chicago."

IN FRIDAY'S Northwestern meet, the Wildcats' lack of a diving squad will give Iowa a decided edge. Kennedy said before the season that Northwestern could improve the most swimming in the meet which consists of any team at the Big Ten Championships in March at Brown Deer,

Iowa football Coach Hayden Fry left Wednesday's practice in particularly good spirits and said his Hawkeyes were in tune for Saturday's showdown

"We had a good practice and got a lot accomplished," he said. "There was good weather, it was brisk.

The fifth-year Iowa coach said his squad went through more of the basics on Wednesday, as they do in each Hawkeye practice.

'We strees fundamentals every day," Fry said. We stress blocking, punting, throwing and kicking

Although Iowa faces the hopeless Golden Gophers are currently 1-9, Fry said there will be definitely not be a Hawkeye let down this weekend.

"Our guys are always ready to play. This will be the last appearance for a great group of seniors at Kinnick Stadium and they've played some great games there.'

Iowa's football mentor added that a number of factors will get his Hawkeyes anxious for action. 'This will be Iowa's first chance to win nine games since '56 and it's our seniors' last game at Kinnick. That should be enough to get them pumped champion, Jim Zalesky and 190-pound NCAA champ, Pete Bush. The senior cocaptains are gearing up for their last season as are 142-pounder Jeff Kerber and 126-pounder Tim Riley. Kerber and Riley both finished fifth in the NCAA tournament last year at 138 and 118 respectively.

"I know Jeff Kerber is anxious to get the season started," Robinson said.

The season's start will be delayed partially for senior 134-pounder Mark Trizzino. Trizzino, who had a 9-3 record last year probably won't see action until the Northern Open, Nov. 26 in Madison, Wis., due to a nagging shoulder injury.

Robinson said after Trizzino fully recovers from the operation he had earlier in the summer, he will get a shot to earn his way back into the Hawkeye line-up.

Aside from some pain in heavyweight Steve Wilbur's hips, Robinson said the Iowa grapplers are relatively healthy.

Egan named hockey All-American

Iowa field hockey player Ellen Egan has been selected to the Mitchell and Ness All-American team.

Egan, the Hawkeyes' leading scorer, was one of 16 hockey players selected from around the country to the first team.

The New Jersey native set a new Iowa scoring record this season with 42 goals for a single season, averaging nearly two goals a game. The old record was held by Anne-Marie Thomas, who scored 28 goals last and an experienced player, she said. "Ellen's strength is her scoring," Davidson said. "Forty-two goals scored in a single season is one outstanding accomplishment."

EGAN WAS THE only Iowa player Davidson nominated for the All-American award. Davidson said when she thinks of an All-American player she thinks of an experienced player. "And, our players are still very young," she said.

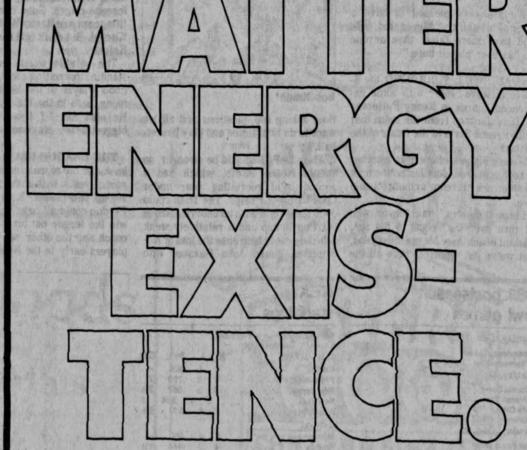

The hockey players are nominated by their coaches and then the All-American candidates are selected by a regional committee which sends its selections to the national committee.

The national committee picks 16 players on its first team, 16 on the second team and five honorable mention.

The All-American is also the only senior starter on this year's Hawkeye field hockey team that was ranked third in the nation all but one week during the regular season and finished in the top eight of the NCAA field hockey tournament.

She also scored the Hawkeyes only goal in the regional finals last weekend against Northwestern, but the Hawkeyes lost the CHICAGO (UPI) - Will freshman Dallas Comegys be able to give to retiring Coach Ray Meyer and DePaul what George Mikan, Dave Corzine, Mark Aguirre and Terry Cummings could not provide?

Comegys was one of the top recruits in the nation last year and disregarded the lure of playing for a hometown Philadelphia school in favor of DePaul and Meyer's 42nd and final season.

Meyer has never won a national championship. He wants to go out with the brass ring and Comegys could be the key to whether the septuagenarian Blue Demon coach claims a national

"We are very pleased to have a player of his ability," Meyer said. "He could have more talent than anyone who has ever played here."

Meyer's biggest concern is whether the hoopla surrounding his retirement will sidetrack his team's championship

"I hope it doesn't," said Meyer, who will turn over the reigns to his son, assistant coach Joey Meyer, next year. "But we've got reporters here all the

While DePaul should be stronger, so should Notre Dame, which had a second solid recruiting year under Coach Digger Phelps. The Irish could open the season with an underclassmen starting lineup and a relatively weak schedule could help ease the loss of All-America guard John Paxson, who sparked last year's 19-10 team.

"THE QUESTION IS, how good was Paxson for this team and how much can we pick up where he left off," Phelps said

Marquette, the other traditional Midwest independent power, is also in transition with Rick Majerus taking over for Hank Raymonds. Like Phelps, Majerus will have to find a replacement at guard for Glenn "Doc" Rivers, who left school early for the

For a change, the Big Ten won't be trying to figure a way of stopping Indiana from marching to another conference crown. Gone from last year's title team are Randy Wittman and Ted Kitchel. But don't feel sorry for Bobby Knight ... yet.

The volatile coach landed an outstanding recruiting class, including Illinois Player of the Year Marty Simmons, built in the mold of a Wittman. He also has 7-2 Uwe Blab and his biggest asset, his coaching ability.

THE LEAGUE RACE actually may be one of the more wide open affairs in recent years with most teams having strong backcourts. Iowa, Illinois and Purdue could all have been favored to win the league but one school lost its coach and the other two lost their top players early to the NBA.

That leaves Michigan State with four starters back — including guards Sam Vincent and Scott Skiles - from the 17-13 team that won an NIT berth and is the team to beat.

Kevin Willis may emerge as the league's best big man and Coach Jud Heathcote also will have former Southern Cal forward Kenny Johnson. George Raveling takes over for Lute Olson at Iowa. He was one of the West Coast's top coaches at Washington State and inherits a talent-rich team.

"THEY TELL ME we have national championship talent," he says. "I hope the fans have not been misleading me."

Raveling has a double threat underneath in 6-11 Michael Payne and 6-10 Greg Stokes but the coaching transition may hurt the Hawkeyes.

At Illinois, guard Derek Harper chose not to stay for his senior year and Coach Lou Henson must replace his leading scorer. But his excellent freshman class of a year ago has more experience and Henson is counting on the development of forward-center Efrem Winters.

Purdue also saw Russell Cross follow Harper to the pros but the Boilermakers have everyone else back, including guards Rickey Hall and Curt Clawson.

"I MIGHT GET WORKED UP.

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (UPI) -Charlie Grimm, a slick-fielding first baseman who managed in the major leagues for 19 years and led the Chicago Cubs to three of their last four National League pennants, is dead at the age of 85.

AMERICAN TRAVEL AND Tour Inc. of Cedar Rapids is waiting for the official bowl invitation to be extended before it finalizes travel plans, said director of sales Ken Terukina.

"We are taking people's names and addresses and telling them we'll get back to them," he said. "We have had about 70 requests so far. Hopefully we'll be looking at a full charter plane of 140 or more.'

Several travel agencies contacted in Des Moines and Iowa City said they are looking into preparations for Gator Bowl trips.

Officials of the University of Iowa Alumni Association said they would not have any information on the trip they plan to sponsor until early next week.

On the line

It is with great sorrow that we, The Daily Iowan's On the Line staff prepare this, the final ballot of the 1983 season. It has been a banner year for some while for others, such as DI Assistant Sports Editor Mike Condon, well, let's move on.

We here at the DI would like to thank all of you readers for all your ballots but when it came time for all you lucky winners to drink the brew, the good old DI was sort of forgotten.

But don't fret, the drinking habits of the sports staff have been well

For one last time, sniff, the rules. Circle the winners in all 10 games. In the tiebreaker, try and fathom how high the score may go in the Iowa-Minnesota game. If you forsee any tie games, circle both teams. Each contestant is limited to five ballots.

THE SPONSOR FOR this final week is the House of Lords bar located in the Cantebury Inn in Coralville. Many folks have left the friendly confines of the hotel singing its praises, we know you will, too.

The staff would also like to extend its appreciation to all those establishments that agreed to donate a keg for our contest. Without you it wouldn't be much of a contest and some unlucky person would have ended up with a pair of Assistant Sports Editor Thomas W. Jargo's tan pants, stapled together by Jill Hokinson, the Moline masher.

Ballots are due at noon today in Room 111 of the Communications Center. At that time DI business manager Mary New, sniff, will put the trusty ballot box in mothballs for another

Dickey's passing mark may fall as Cyclones' Archer closes in

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) - Lynn Dickey has played for two National Football League teams and recovered from two potential career-ending injuries during the last 14 years.

Dickey rebounded from a hip injury that forced him to sit out the 1972 season with the Houston Oilers and then bounced back from a broken leg that forced him to sit out the 1978 season and parts of two others with the Green Bay

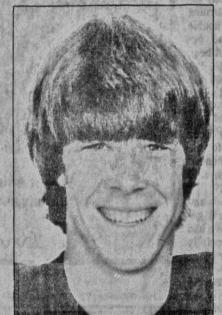

Dickey has risen during those 14 years from a third-round draft choice and Dan Pastorini's backup with the Oilers to the most productive passer in the NFL this season with 3,084 yards and 24 touchdowns for the Packers.

There have been very few constants in Dickey's life as a quarterback during these last 14 years - except, of course, his lore as a collegian. Dickey's name has remained atop the Big Eight singleseason passing chart since 1969 when he threw for 2,476 yards for the Kansas State Wildcats.

DICKEY'S SENIOR SEASON doesn't seem that staggering an accomplishment; in fact, it isn't. There were 16 college quarterbacks last season who threw for more than 2,476 yards - but none from the Big Eight. In fact, the Big Eight has only had six other quarterbacks in its history top 2,000 aerial yards and not a one has come within 200 yards of Dickey's best.

Until Saturday. Dickey's name will finally tumble from the top of that list when David Archer of Iowa State completes his first pass against Oklahoma State. Archer has thrown for 2,471 yards through 10 games this season and needs only six more yards to end Dickey's lengthy

Only two NCAA quarterbacks - Steve Young of Brigham Young and Terry Nugent of Colorado State - have thrown more passes for more yards than Archer this season. Young has thrown 404 times for 3,634 yards, Nugent 402 times for 3,101 yards and Archer 374 times for his 2,471 yards in the traditionally run-oriented Big Eight.

ARCHER HAS BROKEN nine school passing records in this his senior season and three other Big Eight records: total offense (2,507 yards), plays (472) and completions (220). He has thrown for 300 yards in two games this fall, including a school-record 346 against No. 1-rated Nebraska, and owns five of the top 10 passing performances in Iowa State

But it wasn't until last week that firstyear Iowa State Coach Jim Criner put Archer on a plateau with Young, Chuck Long of Iowa, Doug Flutie of Boston College, Boomer Esaison of Maryland and the other top quarterbacks in the Criner inducted Archer into Iowa State's "Order of the Red Helmet" prior to Saturday's game against Kansas State. The Cyclones collectively wear yellow helmets — except for those players who distinguish themselves for their consistent play on a Big Eight level week-after-week.

ARCHER BECAME ONLY the fourth player on the Cyclones to wear the red helmet on a game day - joining center and wide receiver Tracy Henderson and he responded by completing 29-of-40 passes for 286 yards and two touchdowns in leading Iowa State to a 49-27 road victory over Kansas State.

'We felt some things were missing in his performance," said Criner when asked why it took Archer 10 weeks to earn his red helmet. "Basically, he was throwing too many interceptions (11). He had to show us better judgement and to do that he had to eliminate the interceptions. Well, David has now thrown 116 consecutive passes without an inter-

When we give that helmet to a player, we feel he's the best in the conference at his position. David has demonstrated to us he's All-Big Eight caliber. In our opinion he is the best quarterback in the conference."

Archer began the season slowly in the new system of Criner, completing only 14-of-26 passes for 158 yards in a 51-10 thrashing at the hands of Iowa in the season opener. But he picked up steam the next week with an 18-of-28 showing for 255 yards in a 29-26 road loss to Van-

ARCHER COMPLETED 16-OF-28 passes for 231 yards the following week against Colorado State - outdueling Nugent (8-of-15 for 50 yards) for a 21-17 victory over the Western Athletic Conference Rams — and has only been held under 200 yards once since then. That was a 196-yard showing against the nation's No. 6 defensive team, Oklahoma.

Archer's 17 touchdown passes this season rank him second nationally to Young (27) and leave him five shy of the Big Eight single-season record of 22 held by Vince Ferragamo of Nebraska in

"I'm just now adapting to the system," Archer said. "Early in the season I wasn't sure where I was supposed to go with the ball. Now I'm thinking along the same lines with the coaches in the press box. They can look out over the field and see who I should be throwing the ball to ... and lately I've been throwing to that receiver. I think I'm at the top of my game right now.

Russians favored, but U.S. women to have home crowd

CHICAGO (UPI) - Pat Summit, coach of the 1984 women's Olympic basketball team, said Wednesday the Soviet Union has to be considered the favorite when the women's Olympic basketball competition opens in Los Angeles next year.

But Summit, a 10-year veteran coach at the University of Tennessee, said the American women should not be counted out for one key reason; namely, the fact that the Olympics will be held in the United States.

"There'll be 18,000 people cheering for us," she said. "The crowd factor, the excitement and enthusiam generated in the arena and throughout the United States should be a real plus for us.

"But everything is going to have to be right. We're going to have to play excellent basketball to win the is considered a favorite over the U.S. team is because of its year-round training program. We put together our team during a six-to-eight-week period," Summit said. Another advantage the Soviet team will bring to the Olympics is a 7-foot-2 center, which would seem tall even to 6-foot-8 Ann Donovan, an Olympic hopeful who qualified for the 1980 team that never got a chance to play, Summit said.

DONOVAN, A GRADUATE of Old Dominion, will be among four college graduates expected to try out for the Olympics when trials are held in April. The

"There's always a chance of someone on the outside breaking in," Summit said.

TO PREPARE FOR the games, Summit said she hopes to draw foreign teams to the women's Olympic training site in Colorado Springs, Colo.

"The main thing we need in women's basketball for the USA is competition," Summit said, noting she hoped to play women's teams from China, Korea, Cuba and Canada during the pre-Olympic training period.

For future Olympic hopefuls, Summit recommended competition begin at an early age.

"The basic philosophy is to start at a very young age and stay with the game as much as possibl she said. "I think that's where a lot of great players are developed."

Because women's basketball generally receives less attention than men's programs. Summit also recommended young players contact the Amateur Basketball Association to learn how their game can be developed.

Whatever the description may be, a solo concert by pianist Keith Jarrett, who will be performing at Hancher Auditorium Nov. 21 at 8 p.m., is something for which there are no ready comparisons. His playing culls from a wide range of influences and, when it's in full gear, melds them together into a single harmonious voice. Yet because they are completely spontaneous — Jarrett insists that he has no preconceived ideas before stepping onto the stage — they can be risky affairs. But this element of unpredictability lends a certain suspense to the concerts and gives them their fascinastylings of Bill Evans, Jarrett started turning his energies to jazz. After attending the Berklee School of Music in Boston, he began gigging in Boston and New York, playing with anyone at any time under any circumstances. Jarrett has said that this experience gave him the wide range of styles and approaches used in his playing today.

TWO THINGS happened in 1972 that shaped Jarrett's career. The first was the formation of his first quartet with bassist Charlie Haden and saxophonist Dewey Redmen (both Ornette Coleman alumni) and drummer Paul Motian. The recognition that Jarrett had garnered in previous groups was now intensified, leading critics to praise him as the first significant jazz voice of the '70s. The other was the release of Facing You, his first piano solo album. Done for the then-obscure German label ECM, the album presented Jarrett as a highly innovative and individual musician. Though he continued to record with fordable, it also showed a complete Much of what Segovia and 1975, respectively) literally rehas said can be seen as arrogant, selfrighteous and narrow-minded. Yet defined piano improvisation and, while analogies such as "this generation's Segovia had dedicated his life to mak-Art Tatum" were misplaced, there was little doubt Jarrett was the artist ing the guitar a legitimate concert instrument. The flip side to his musical gifts has

It is unlikely that Jarrett will be remembered as having made a similar contribution, but his musical path to date has many similarities with the guitarist's. Like Segovia, his music holds many ties with the past; and in both cases, heavy risks were taken and years of arduous preparation went into the big step forward.

When Jarrett is "on," his depth of emotion and sense of color can be hypnotizing. Capable of actually becoming one with his music, his command of the piano's tonal range can produce a rich tapestry of voices, moods and thoughts. The end of one phrase or section becomes the beginning of the next, moving the music in a way that makes the audience unaware of the changes, bringing them closer to the heart of the music. And his music does warrant close attention from the audience for its full communicative power to show itself. All one can hope is that something out there in the cosmos aligns itself properly with the stage's main attraction on Monday.

Julie Walters and Michael Caine star in the film version of the long-running British play Educating Rita. Caine plays a disillusioned professor who tutors the determined working-class woman.

'Educating Rita' a doubtful lesson from the inside out

By Richard Panek

DUCATING RITA is clever in the British sense of the word: It's too smart for its own good.

Like its synthesizer soundtrack that mimics music of the baroque style, this movie does impressions without illuminating the subject. Its renderings of the highly educated and working classes are knowing enough to be accurate, but they lack the nuances that would make the movie's conflict convincing.

British professor Dr. Frank Bryant (played by Michael Caine), a former poet and present boozer who sneers at formal knowledge, tutors Rita (Julie Walters), a hairdresser who seeks acceptance among the elite. She learns her lessons only too well for Bryant's taste and loses the un-self-conscious charm that first attracted the dispirited doctor.

The situation suggests Prometheus and "Pygmalion," but here the battle lines are ar-

"What does it gaineth a man," bellows Bryant near the end of the movie, "if he gaineth the whole of literature yet loseth his soul?'

What, indeed? But is the question significant? Apparently it is, at least to Willy Russell, who adapted the movie from his hit London play. As Rita rises through the university's social system, firmly fixing herself within its endlessly debating and formerly intimidating student body, she learns, as she says, "what wines to drink, plays to see, clothes to Bryant starts shouting about her loss of it, his ranting makes little sense.

Are the differences between the professor and his student a matter of class? Education? Spirit? All of

The movie doesn't answer. Instead, the disintegration of her soul is a given, as are the evils of her ways — as if intellectual passion and passing fancies were mutually inclusive. She's guilty, in the moral vocabulary of Educating Rita, of sloth by association. And her salvation is as obvious and simplistic

"If you want to change, you have to do it from the inside," says Rita near the start of the film, and the movie, with 90 minutes to run, is over.

Mellencamp excels with 'Uh-huh'

By Allen Hogg Staff Writer

KNOW, I KNOW. In the past, John Cougar Mellencamp has not exactly had the reputation for being one of the most intelligent of rock 'n' rollers.

His music, though catchy, has mostly been cynical, third-rate Americana. His onstage tendency to throw microphones at the audience and walk off in a huff has not made him a real crowd-pleaser. And his magazine interviews have given the impression that when they were passing out brains, he was out riding his motorcycle around his hometown of Seymour,

And now I expect to convince you that John Cougar Mellencamp has just released a great rock 'n' roll album? Well, Uh-huh.

Don't ask me what caused it maybe it was something he learned from producing Mitch Ryder's comeback album, or maybe it was just confidence gained from superstardom but Uh-huh, Mellencamp's new LP, is by far the best thing he's ever done. With the questionable quality of Bob Seger's recent studio albums, it just may establish him as the Midwest's premier rock 'n' roller.

This is not to say that Mellencamp's attitude has changed. His point of view is still staunchly Middle America. Of course there was never anything wrong with this, even if the New York critics thought otherwise.

Records

HE STILL HAS his misanthropic tendencies, too. But now it is a purposeful anger, much like Elvis Costello's, rather than a "let's hate the world cause it's hip to do" feeling.

And, of course, he still assumes a bad-boy, anti-authority, let's-live-for-rock stance. On Uh-huh, however, his musical direction fits these feelings better. Rather than pseudo-Springsteen pop, here Mellencamp is playing the most raucous brand of rock, with direct antecedents in heavy metal and, especially, classic Rolling

The Stones' influence can be heard throughout Uh-huh in the vocal harmonies, the snarling guitars of Larry Crane and Mike Wanchic, and the Watts/Wyman sound of drummer Ken Aronoff and bassist Toby Myers.

It is most apparent in "Crumblin' Down," the LP's highlight and first single. "Crumblin' Down" serves as Mellencamp's reply to critics of his previous work. "Some people say I'm obnoxious and lazy," he snarls, alluding to them, "that I'm uneducated and my opinion means nothing."

He subtly replies, "But I know, I'm a real good dancer," as if that makes up for his other faults. Mellencamp sings it with such glaring defiance, though, that he proves he's probably right. The middle choruses, in which the guitars fade out and he and Wanchic harmonize accompanied only by the rhythm section, sounds closer to premiddle-age Jagger/Richards than anything this side of Exile on Main

THE HEAVY METAL tendencies are best heard on a trio of songs on the album's second side - "Play Guitar," "Serious Business," and "Lovin" Mother Fo Ye." The titles of the former and latter are pretty much selfexplanatory. "Serious Business" starts off with an authentic AC/DC 'Ugh" - utterly rebellious and disdainful. Mellencamp then spins the tale of a wild party which becomes something of a crucifixion for the singer. "This is serious business," Mellencamp proclaims, "Sex and violence and rock 'n' roll."

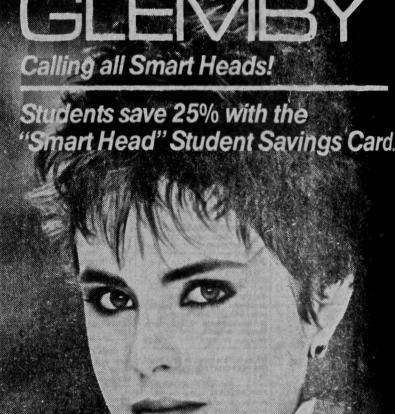

Uh-huh does have its softer side. "Jackie O" is a mere throw-off, cowritten by Mellencamp and John Prine. It sounds like it was recorded in one take with a drum machine and a toy piano, but Mellencamp gives it the most vulnerable vocal performance of his career. "Pink Houses" is the opposite, an angry ballad about the painful illusions of the American Dream. Though perhaps slightly racist in its portrayal of "a black man, with a black cat, living in a black neighborhood," fundamentally it epitomizes Mellencamp's identification with the common man.

TWO SONGS that play with religious imagery, "Warmer Place to Sleep" and "Golden Gates," end the sides, although both are fiercely antireligious in their attitude. The first is another Stones-based number, while the second is the album's tenderest moment. Together, they define Mellencamp as a man who will accept no authority, not even a spiritual one, but whose faith in the individual man is almost inspirational.

All in all, Uh-huh is probably the best surprise to come from rock 'n' roll so far this year. Nobody but that "Little Bastard" (as he is billed on production credits) himself expected an album this powerful and exciting from John Cougar Mellencamp. Musically and thematically, it may be the best expression yet of young, angry America in the 1980s

And you know? If Mellencamp doesn't watch out, people might start thinking he's smart.
