Arafat is cornered by rebel gunmen

Price: 20 cents

e 1983 Student Publications Inc.

TRIPOLI, Lebanon (UPI) - Palestinian rebels fought Yasser Arafat's guerrillas in the streets of northern Tripoli Monday, battling to within 300 yards of Arafat's headquarters as Syrian gunners pounded the city with heavy artillery. Police said at least 24 people were killed and more than 60 wounded, but the number of casualties was expected to mount as the intense fighting con-

Arafat, chairman of the Palestine Liberation Organization, sent out urgent appeals for international help and admitted his forces were surrounded in Lebanon's second largest city by both land and sea.

With battles raging in several other locations around the country, including sniper fire aimed at U.S. Marines stationed at Beirut airport, Lebanon was celebrating the 42nd anniversary of its independence Tuesday.

The state-run Lebanese news agency said a four-day truce had been arranged in Tripoli, but fighting flared up again as the Syrian-backed rebels and Arafat's fighters shelled each other's positions on the northern coastal road and neighborhoods near the Beddawi refugee camp.

"THERE IS NO cease-fire," declared rebel leader Abu Nidal. "If he shoots at us, we will shoot back. And if he shells us, we will go into Tripoli to get him."

By late Monday night, state-run Beirut radio reported the rebels battled through the glass-and-concretelittered streets in northern Tripoli

Shots to be given after break

An estimated 15,000 UI students, as well as faculty members, returning from Thanksgiving break will be lin-ing up at the Union to receive free immunization shots against measles and rubella Nov. 28, 29 and 30, ac-cording to UI Student Health Direc-tor Dr. Harley G. Feldick.

The UI immunization program requires that students either provide proof that they have been inoculated against measles and rubella after 1969, or receive inoculations before registering for the 1984-85 fall semester.

If students do not participate in the free clinic and can not provide proof they have been immunized, they must receive the vaccine from a private physician or at student health at their own expense.

The immunization process will run from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. for the three days, including the noon hour.

Students can present proof as they come through the line and those who have previously received the vaccine but do not have proof can receive the shot without danger. "This will just boost their im-munity," Feldick said.

VACCINES RECEIVED before 1969 were proved by the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta and various drug companies to be inadequate in the prevention of measles and rubella.

Tuesday, November 22, 1983

The program is an attempt to prevent outbreaks of the two diseases, such as the epidemic that spread through Indiana University last March costing more than $250,000 to control

The program was recommended by the CDC and the American College See Procedure, page 8

The UI's mass immunization program and the requirement that students receive vaccine against measles and rubella before registering for the 1984-85 fall semester is without counterpart at Iowa's other state universities.

Both Iowa State University and the University of Northern Iowa offer free vaccinations on a voluntary basis whenever a student wishes to receive one. Dr. Lila Furman, ISU student health director, said ISU provides written materials explaining the importance of immunization to students

Bob Tujetsch of UNI student health services said they have been encouraging students to receive the vaccine. He said they began their immunization program last spring after Indiana University suffered an outbreak of measles costing the school $250,000 to bring under control.

"We published it (the free immunization policy) in the student newspaper," Tujetsch said. "It has been ongoing ever since."

He said within the first couple of months UNI received only about twelve responses.

An Arafat spokesman said the guerrillas loyal to him would be prepared to withdraw when they had lost all support within Tripoli. It was not clear when that might begin.

Refugees from the fighting in Tripoli lined the coastal highway south of the city. Western relief agencies say a third of the area's 600,000 residents have fled their homes.

U.S. Marine positions south of Beirut came under small arms sniper fire Sunday night and Monday, the State Department said in Washington.

Kennedy is remembered today

Americans will observe the 20th anniversary of President John F. Kennedy's assassination today with memorial services, special masses and concerts.

Most of the Kennedy family will visit his grave and the eternal flame at Arlington National Cemetery, celebrate a special Mass and attend a commemorative concert at the Kennedy Center.

His 93-year-old mother, Rose, and his widow, Jacqueline Onassis, will be at the family compound on Cape Cod and attend a special Mass nearby.

Churches of all denominations around the country will hold services to remember Nov. 22, 1963, when the nation's 35th president was killed by an assassin while in a motorcade through Dallas.

Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass. will speak at the Mass at Holy Trinity Roman Catholic Church in Georgetown. The Mass will be sung by Archbishop James Hickey. Reagan is among the invited guests at the church, which the late president attended when he was a senator.

Dallas will hold its annual memorial service about a block from where Lee Harvey Oswald fired the fatal shots. County Democratic officials said today's commemoration of the event that brought infamy to the city will be the last one.

Erik Jonsson, mayor of Dallas in 1963, said the city has spent 20 years living down its image as the "City of Hate.

"In the long run, we were not what we were labeled," he said. Officials at the Kennedy Library in Boston planned a program of films and programs concentrating on Kennedy's life, not his death.

Kennedy's administration was marked by advances in civil rights, welfare, moon exploration, the removal of Soviet missiles from nearby Cuba and a partial nuclear test ban treaty.

The Vatican City newspaper paid tribute Monday to the slain president, saying he was "the major protagonist of a great work of conciliation and of universal peace."

to recover past federal grants given to the city to upgrade its airport.

Mel Fischer, manager of the FAA planning and programming branch, said Monday, "There are some very significant possibilities we could take (legal action) against Iowa City because the non-compliance still exists there. We've never taken such an action, but there are the possibilities of penalties and also a suit to recover the federal investment in the airport."

This fall, the FAA withdrew a $295,000 grant to the city and said all future grants are in jeopardy because apartment developments are located near the end of Runway 17, the airport's main runway. FAA officials object to the development: because they believe its proximity to the runway presents safety problems.

"I am very disturbed at what is happening," Councilor John Balmer said. "It seems as if they (FAA) are really going for the jugular this time. They want to show us who is boss.

"I THINK THEY'VE got a real credibility problem over there. They say they want us to have a safe airport and then they turn around and say they might sue us for back loans. I think they're being a little hypocritical. How will suing us get a safe airport?" Mayor Mary Neuhauser said the FAA's recent actions have put the city in a "Catch-22" situation.

"All of this doesn't seem quite fair to me," she said. "They won't meet with us. They won't respond to our proposal. Maybe they want the airport to go out of existence. Essentially, what they are telling us is that it is all our own fault and they're not going to help us." The latest threat by the FAA comes after a petition from the Iowa City Airport Alliance Inc., a group of approximately 30 local pilots and businessmen concerned about the airport, was sent to the FAA office in Kansas City Oct. 20. Fischer said the petition "requested we implement and administer the law of the federal government in this case.

"It is something we are now looking at."

Fischer added that the FAA will not take any action on the airport, including commenting on the city's latest proposal to the FAA, until a court case filed by the Airport Alliance is settled. The group is suing to force city officials to take whatever steps are necessary to solve the problem. The Airport Alliance claims the "erection, construction and occupancy of said building for high residential use constitutes an extreme hazard."

IN ADDITION TO the city, the Airport Alliance is suing Neuhauser, the city council, the Iowa City Airport Commission and City Manager Neal

the court case is decided before taking any action because, "our decision may, and probably would influence the court's decision.

In addition, Fischer said the FAA would rather deal with the new city council that will convene Jan. 1. "We heard there are going to be four new council members up there and because that represents a majority of the council we would rather deal with the new council to see what they think about the problem. It's a decision that's going to have to be lived with for a long time.'

Balmer said, however, he would like to see the FAA respond to the city's proposal as soon as possible. According to the proposal the city would shorten Runway 17 and lengthen another runway - making it the main runway. The cost to the city would be $491,756, while the cost to FAA would be $2,712,515.

Fischer said the cost burden on FAA in the proposal is too high. "We just don't have that kind of money in our trust fund. In fact, we don't even allocate that amount of money for the whole state of Iowa."

Fischer said city councilors should look at shortening the runway in question to bring it into compliance, a solution city officials included in the proposal on which FAA officials refuse to comment.

AIRPORT MANAGER Fred Zehr said shortening the runway "would not affect the majority of the traffic" using the airport.

Larger planes, Fischer said, could use the Cedar Rapids Airport. He added that additional traffic could be shuttled to Cedar Rapids if the conditions of the runways at the Iowa City Airport deteriorate because there are no funds to repair them.

"If it starts to get out of hand, it is the responsibility of the airport manager to reduce traffic at the airport and maintain safety at the airport," Fischer said.

Neuhauser said at Monday night's informal council meeting she will try to re-schedule another meeting with FAA officials in Kansas City. "We're not giving up on this. We've got to keep plugging away." City Manager Neal Berlin said he hoped to meet with Rep. Cooper Evans, R-3rd District, sometime this week to discuss the situation.

Mike McVey, a legislative assistant for Evans, said it appears the "ball is in the city's court. It's up to them (city officials) to get their act together." Despite all the debate between the city and the FAA, Fischer said an agreement will have to be reached. "It's not an emotional issue," he said. "We're trying to handle all of this in a businesslike fashion. Iowa City is not the first airport this has happened to."

WASHINGTON - President Reagan, who as a candidate voiced determination to end deficit spending by the government, signed legislation Monday that raises the limit on the national debt to a record $1.49 trillion.

Man hijacks Chicago jetliner

CHICAGO - A Republic Airlines jetliner with 36 passengers aboard was hijacked out of Chicago Monday by a man who said he had a bomb and wanted to talk to Democratic presidential candidate Jesse Jackson.

The suspect, identified as a Detroit bus driver, was overpowered by passengers after the jet landed in Kalamazoo, Mich. Officials said no bomb was found after the suspect was arrested.

Bomb addressed to Reagan

NEW YORK) - A ticking bomb containing two sticks of dynamite and addressed to President Reagan was discovered Monday at a U.S. Postal Office at Kennedy International Airport, authorities said.

The parcel was discovered about 1:30 p.m., Iowa time, by a postal worker, "addressed to President Reagan and it was ticking," said Port Authority police Lt. Jose Elique. A police bomb disposal unit removed the bomb.

The day after "The Day After" UI students and faculty expressed concern about the television movie's graphic depiction of a fictional nuclear war and its consequences, which drew an estimated dience of 100 million Americans Sunday

"It was shocking. I guess I had not really sat down before and thought what would really happen to me. It just opened my eyes," said UI student Leta Klima, 22. UI student Patrick McNamara, 20, agreed. "No matter what you say, the movie was good because it forced a lot of people to begin thinking about the effects of a nuclear war, about why we have nuclear weapons in general," he said. "It forced a lot of people to (think), who before, had never really thought about these things." UI Political Science Professor James Murray said the movie did show the horrible consequences of a nuclear war, but that he thinks it will have a limited effect on the nation. "I think it may generate some symathy for something like the nuclear freeze rement." BUT HE SAID he doesn't think the movie will change people's voting patterns or their feelings too much, especially toward President Reagan and his stance on nuclear weapons. Many people already have strong feelings toward Reagan adinistration policies, whether negative or

Emotional and political fallout from the university and demanding that courses be taught on this subject," said UI Law Professor Burns Weston.

"There is no more important issue on the human agenda, and we're dangerously close to committing global suicide in my view," he said.

Weston, who belongs to two law groups studying the nuclear problem, said he thinks the movie was "terribly mild" compared what actually could happen in the event of a nuclear attack.

He added the movie was most effective in showing the people's apathy toward the potential danger of a nuclear war.

Some people were not receptive to the movie though. Hawkeye Review editor Jeffrey Renander had said the movie was "a blatant propaganda film being shown to scare people.

Becky Cooper, 17, said she passed up the movie to celebrate her upcoming birthday. "I didn't plan to watch it. But I know stuff like that, they tend to overdramatize it and I don't think it would be realistic enough, too 'Hollywood.' "

BEFORE THE MOVIE psychiatrists warned that children and some adults might be adversely affected by the graphic depiction of nuclear war. As a result, some groups set up discussion sessions after the film for people who wanted to talk about the movie.

Monday night, the Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament scheduled a discussion at Trinity Episcopal Church, and a video tape of the movie and discussion afterward was scheduled at St. Wenceslaus Church.

knocking on the doors of people at the top of Responsibility, said parents need to watch their children closely for signs of emotional distress if they were allowed to view the movie.

These signs include delayed anxiety, sleep disorder, depression and physical symptoms such as headaches.

UI Child Psychiatrist Mark Stewart said a minority of people may "brood on the fearful aspects of this problem." But he added that the majority of people will not have severe problems.

"It's much better to look these things in the face and try to deal with it," he said. "I think it should be discussed openly and most likely kids will put it to the adults and challenge them, 'Why haven't you done something about this in the past 30 years?' " he said.

DR. HELEN CALDICOTT, a vocal opponent of the nuclear arms race, said in a speech at the UI last Thursday that children may be tougher than adults give them credit for.

She said adults practice psychic numbing on the issue of nuclear weapons. "We blot it out, it's too scary so we don't think about it. Now people are saying children shouldn't watch this film on Sunday night. What the adults are doing is projecting their anx-ieties onto the children. The children are tough. They know already.'

McNamara, despite all the controversy surrounding the movie, said he thinks the movie served an important purpose. "I couldn't believe the opportunity was happening. I really felt in a way I was part of history and people were becoming aware (of the nuclear issue) right before me. I had a great sense of hope before the movie, during the movie and right now.'

By midday, one hotline in Philadelphia, run by the anti-nuclear group Physicians for Social Responsibility, said it received about 400 calls.

"For the most part they are people, just ordinary people, who were shocked by the film — not really wigged out — but asking questions like, 'How can you cure radiation sickness?' or where can they find shelter," said Dr. Joseph Eyer, a biologist at the University of Pennsylvania.

"The best way to prevent war is to keep a strong military force," he was quoted as saying by The San Antonio Express newspaper. "I've been saying that for 35 years and I haven't seen anything to change my mind."

A coalition of 30 anti-nuclear groups sought to underscore the message with newspaper and TV ads urging people to call 1-800-NUCLEAR for information about the nuclear freeze movement.

Turkey and trimmings available to spark sagging holiday spirits

By Patricia Reuter

Staying in town over the Thanksgiving holiday with no invitation to enjoy a good, home-cooked turkey dinner? Don't despair. You won't have to sit home alone with a pot pie or frozen turkey dinner this year because Iowa City is offering residents a number of opportunities to enjoy traditional holiday fare.

The Johnson County Senior Center, 28 S. Linn St., is planning a special Thanksgiving meal Thursday.

According to Senic. Center Spokeswoman Barbara Bechtoldt, the congregate meal will include sliced turkey with dressing, green beans, cranberry salad and pumpkin pie. The dinner will be served from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m., and will cost $2.50 for persons under 60 years of age, and is free of charge for those over 60

BILL MIHALOPOULOS, owner of The Best Steak House, 127 Iowa Ave., is offering a turkey dinner, including mashed potatoes and gravy, dressing, green beans and pumpkin pie, free of charge to people "who have no plans for Thanksgiving dinner."

This is the third year Mihalopoulos has provided the free holiday dinners to city residents. "I cooked 12 turkeys last year," he said, "and we served about 400 dinners." Mihalopoulos, his wife and several volunteers prepare and serve the dinners. This year Mihalopoulos is preparing 14 turkeys, along with 20 cartons of potatoes and two cases of green beans.

Even if you end up in one of the area hospitals you can still enjoy the traditional Thanksgiving meal.

UI Hospitals, Mercy Hospital and the Veterans Administration Medical Center will all serve turkey dinners to patients Thursday. Carol Buss, clinical dietician at Mercy, said the dietary staff will try to incorporate the holiday fare into all the different diets served at the hospital. Dieticians at the other two hospitals also said that with slight changes in the menu, most patients will be able to enjoy a Thanksgiving dinner.

A turkey dinner may not take the sting out of a stay at the Johnson County Jail, but Jail Administrator Darrell Gear hopes the traditional Thanksgiving meal will make the inmates' day a little more festive.

Inmates will be having turkey, dressing, potatoes with gravy, cranberry sauce and pumpkin pie.

"We like to think we feed the guys pretty well," Gear said. "Our menus are the same type food served at

New police computer helps to recover stolen property

By Patricia Reuter Staff Writer

She has her own desk, cap, badge and her name is on the door. She's Officer Apple, the newest addition to the Iowa City Police Force.

The Apple IIe computer, printer and software package was formally presented to Iowa City Police Chief Harvey Miller Monday by Dick Buxton, president of the Independent Insurance Agents of Iowa City. Buxton handed Miller a check for $3,000 to pay for the equipment purchased from the North Bay Computer Company, 326 Second St., Iowa City.

"The primary function of the computer is to track down stolen property and match it with its owners," Miller said.

Detective Bill Cook, who is coordinating the programming of the computer, said identifying and recovering stolen property has been a real problem for the department. Until now, Cook said, officers have had to rely on entries in hand-kept notebooks and their personal recollections of individual thefts to match stolen items with their rightful owners.

"Robberies in Iowa City totaled $472,000 last year," Cook said. "Recovery has been very low. Only about 8.2 percent or $38,000 worth of property was recovered.'

OFFICER APPLE'S job will be to file away information on stolen goods, such as serial numbers and police will be able to find the information quick nd determine if there is any pattern to thefts. Miller said the computer will also aid in "direct patrols" of the city. He referred to the recent rate of car vandalism in the city, saying officers can u the computer to record such activities neighborhoods to see if patterns are developing the type and location of crimes over an extend period of time. The idea for the computer was brought to the tention of Iowa City Councilor-elect Bill Ambris by Cook and Officer Paul Sueppel. Ambrisco, who also an insurance agent, said Cook and Sueppel wer seeking advice on how to obtain money for a con puter. Ambrisco then presented the idea to the surance organization.

"I presented the facts to the Independent surance Agents of Iowa City," Ambrisco said. "The idea met with immediate approval."

Ambrisco added that insurance agencies has much to gain by the success of the computer project Buxton said he believes the computer system w act as a deterrent to thieves who will now run a greater risk of getting caught trying to pawn or se stolen goods.

Miller sees the computer as a step forward for police department

"It's time we look at technology rather than peo ple" to do some of the work, Miller said.

Foreign students may reap benefits of area college driver's education

By Emily Nitchie Staff Writer

Foreign students could benefit from an adult driver's education class now being offered in Iowa City by Kirkwood Community College

Jackie Williams, Iowa City Community Education Program coordinator for Kirkwood, said the course offers "total driving experience for everyone," but may be especially useful for foreign students who need road practice before taking the Department of Motor Vehicles test.

Williams said the course is "really needed and has been very well accepted." Although the initial session of the course is already almost full, after registering, people may start attending class any Thursday that the driving instructor has time

The four-week course offers only on-the-road driving lessons, but Williams said Kirkwood may start classroom instruction of rules of the road if there is enough interest.

Williams said many foreign students have taken the course and received their licenses. "For their own protection, most people want to practice before they take the test. Foreign students really need the class ... they think so too.'

All an adult — more than 19 years of age - needs to take the course is a driving permit, which costs $2, and the ability to pass the vision test.

However, in order to qualify for a driver's license a person must be a resident of Iowa for at least 30 days.

LINDA GARDNER, secretary to the chief examiner for the Department of Motor Vehicles in Des Moines, said foreign students may have difficulty securing a license even after taking a driver education course, because of agreements made with their home countries.

Branstad opposes informing public

'Most exchange students sign contracts with their home countries that they will not become residents of another country," Gardner said, which conflicts with Iowa's residency requirement for a driver's license

She said some students, even those from out-of-state, may claim Iowa as their home temporarily to qualify for a driver's license

The Kirkwood class offers instruction each Thursday between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m., with driving times arranged at the convenience of the student. The course costs $75, which covers the use of the automobile and gasoline provided by Kirkwood. People interested in the course will need to register at the Kirkwood Iowa City Center, 810 Maiden Lane, or call 338-7956.

Forbes: Computer know-how pays

CEDAR RAPIDS (UPI) - One of America's foremost experts on entrepeneurs said Monday it is too bad many people are afraid of the technology explosion because there is money to be made without becoming a computer expert.

Malcolm S. Forbes Jr., son of renowned magazine publisher and entrepeneur of the same name, shares none of his father's famed zest for hot air balloons or fast motorcycles.

But as an executive with Forbes magazine, geared toward the upwardly mobile executive, Forbes Jr. said initiative, not smarts, holds back regular folks from profiting on the computer revolution.

"You didn't have to be an expert automotive engineer to drive a car," he said. "You don't need to be a degreed programmer to make money from computers.

of Iowa nuclear waste shipments

DES MOINES (UPI) - Public knowledge of nuclear waste shipments across Iowa is not a good idea, Gov. Terry Branstad said Monday.

Branstad, speaking at his bi-weekly news conference, said he agrees with the federal law prohibiting public notification of nuclear waste shipments because of the risk of sabotage.

The Nebraska Public Power Company plans on shipping spent nuclear fuel waste by rail through southern Iowa. Iowans will not be told of the shipment until 10 days after the shipment leaves the state. Branstad and other top state officials will be told of the shipments in advance so specially-trained disposal teams will be prepared if an emergency arises. But Branstad believes that is as far as the notification should go. "You might have a certain individual who might to try to sabotage a particular shipment," he said. The 10-day notification delay is necessary to prevent someone from estimating the shipment's arrival times in other states, he said

Branstad said the shipments pose "very little danger" to the public as long as there are no accidents. But the public could be threatened if an act of sabotage were to occur, he said.

He emphasized the state has a disaster plan that will be used in case of sabotage or a spill.

"I think we can handle it," he said.

Search on for hunters after blast

PLEASANT HILL, Iowa (UPI) -Searchers slogged through muddy terrain Monday looking for signs of two teenagers disintegrated in the explosion of 12 tons of dynamite last weekend

Investigators theorize the blast, which was felt up to 45 miles away, may have been triggered when the youths - who were out hunting - fired random shots at one of three brick and concrete bunkers where large stores of dynamite were

'We'll keep on working but the chances of finding anything are pretty nil," said Patrol Division Chief Glenn McDole, who is coordinating the search for Jeff Waddell, 14, and Clinton Woodard, 14.

McDole said the bunker that exploded contained between 23,000 and 25,000 pounds of dynamite.

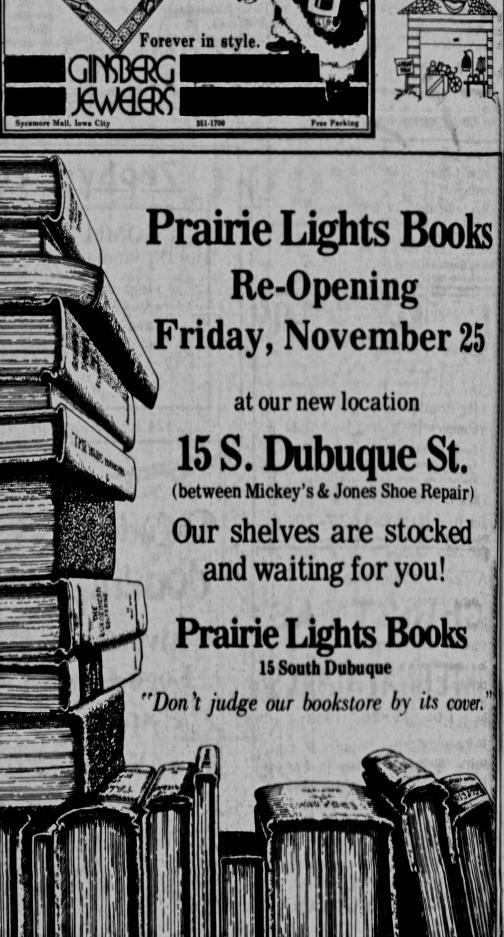

The blast blew a crater 100 feet across and 30 feet deep, flattening all trees in the area. McDole said 60 houses were damaged and two were destroyed.

Wildlife were slaughtered throughout the wooded area southeast of Des Moines where the blast occurred. The explosion flattened birds against the trunks of trees and field mice were scattered everywhere.

The buildings had been used for target practice before and Polk County Sheriff Bob Rice said "hundreds and hundreds" of bullets had been fired into the bunkers over the years.

McDole said he did not know why the dynamite exploded after all the years of target practice on the buildings.

Workers from the company that owns the property where the blast occurred removed about 19 tons of dynamite stored in a separate munitions dump Sunday. The area was marked as private property but no warning of explosives was posted "for security reasons," a spokesman said.

Soviets claim U.S. falsified compromise in Geneva talks

MOSCOW (UPI) - The Soviet Union charged Monday the United States made a compromise proposal at the Geneva arms reduction talks, then falsely ascribed its authorship to Moscow to create the impression of progress.

The foreign ministry said the unofficial U.S. proposal called for NATO to forgo the deployment of 572 new medium-range missiles if the Soviets reduced the number of SS-20 missiles aimed at Western Europe to 120.

The Soviets now have 230 SS-20 missiles, each with three warheads, aimed at Western European countries

A ministry statement also accused the Americans of spreading false rumors that the Soviets agreed to stop insisting that 162 French and British nuclear missiles be taken into account at the Geneva talks. The statement, distributed by the Soviet news agency Tass and read on Soviet television, said it was U.S. negotiator Paul Nitze who unofficially proposed the cancellation of next month's scheduled deployment of 572 medium-range missiles.

IN EXCHANGE, the statement said, the Soviets would deploy only enough SS-20 missiles to counter British and French missiles outside NATO's com-

Tass said the offer "seemed an acceptable foundation for a compromise solution.

"The question prompted itself, however, whether those unofficial pronouncements of the chief U.S. negotiator, as was the case in the past more than once, were a mere tactical move devised this time to create a semblance of possible progress at the talks precisely at the moment when the U.S.A. begins to bring its missiles to Europe," Tass said. "The dishonest game of the American side became instantly clear," Tass said.

"The American side began to spread, including among the U.S. allies in NATO, allegations that it is the head of the Soviet side, not the U.S. delegation, that has proposed some new variant.

"In the process of ascribing to the Soviet delegation the authorship of the variant," Tass said, "Washington, in addition, doctored it in a manner so as to create a false impression of the U.S.S.R.'s readiness not to take into account the (162) British and French medium-range means.

Tass said Washington's role in spreading the allegedly false reports is "added evidence that the U.S.A. does not seek a mutually acceptable agreement.'

Clark takes oath at private ceremony in White House

WASHINGTON (UPI) - William Clark was sworn in without fanfare Monday as the 44th secretary of interior in a private White House ceremony attended by President Reagan.

"Judge Clark wanted to be sworn in privately and quietly, and he was," said White House spokesman Larry Speakes

Clark, 52, former White House national security adviser and California Supreme Court justice, assumed office amid hopes he will end the confrontational approach of his controversial predecessor, James Watt.

It was unusual not to have a public ceremony for the oath-taking of a Cabinet official. Last week, Reagan staged a fuil-Llown swearing-in ceremony for Susan Phillips, the new Commodities Futures Trading Commission chairman.

Speakes said Attorney General William French Smith administered Clark's oath and Reagan attended. No press coverage was permitted.

The Senate confirmed Clark Friday on a 71-18 vote. But Democrats continued their criticism of what they see as his lack of experience for the post and his vague answers to policy questions during confirmation hearings. Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, chairman of the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee, said he hoped Clark would "still those troubled waters" stirred up by Watt at the agency

Watt announced he would resign Oct. 9, following a storm of controversy over his wisecrack that a coal advisory panel included "a black ... a woman, two Jews and a cripple." Reagan surprised even his closest aides by announcing Oct. 13 that he was nominating Clark, a longtime trusted adviser, to replace Watt. Clark promised during his confirmation hearings to review Watt's policies, criticized by environmental groups as pro-development, as steward of the nation's national resources and millions of acres of park and wilderness land. But he gave few hints as to just what policies he will adopt

Board says Reagan's policies put civil rights enforcement in jeopardy With frie and the Equal Employment Opportunity WASHINGTON (UPI) - The Commission on Civil Rights, in one of its final reports before reorganization, Monday blasted the Reagan administration for trimming the federal government's civil rights enforcement effort.

In a 220-page report, the commission looked at six key agencies charged with enforcing federal civil rights laws and found the civil rights enforcement budget throughout the Reagan years has been "inadequate to alleviate longstanding problems "Indeed, the commission believes a wide range of federal civil rights enforcement efforts have been jeopardized as much by division policies as by recent resource constraints," the report said.

The commission has been a thorn in the administration's side with previous reports critical of President Reagan's policies and supportive of such civil rights measures as school busing and affirmative action programs.

Reagan has been criticized by civil rights groups for trampling on the independence of the 26-year-old bipartisan watchdog group since May, when he announced his intention to replace three of its six members. He had already replaced two other members.

Reagan formally fired the three Oct. 25, leading to a confrontation with congressional Democrats.

A compromise was worked out and passed by Congress last week calling for expanding the membership to eight, split between Republicans and Democrats and presidential and congressional appointees. Reagan has yet to sign the measure, however.

COMMISSION CHAIRMAN Clarence Pendleton Jr., a Reagan appointee, dissented from the report and attached a statement to it saying: "It is filled with the notion of some vague standard about what could be achieved with unlimited resources.

we we can thank Rep. Thomas "Tip" O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., and his band of old-boy liberals for the defeat of ERA last week; House Democrats have betraved a constituency they've heavily banked on for successful returns in 1984.

The tactic of railroading the amendment through the House without debate and without the restrictive language - pending the 19 tempting fumes of Thanksgiving recess - was either politically naive or intentional. Given O'Neill's smarts, the latter is more likely.

Combustible issues like the ERA cannot be expected to go through Congress without debate no matter how strongly its proponents feel, and a political realist like O'Neill should know that. The ERA, without qualifications on abortion, has only a nervous chance of passing in the Senate, much less the legislatures of 50 states. Congressional debate gives politicians a chance to ilitake stands for the benefit of their constituencies or to, in some cases, exonerate themselves from positions some back home may not accept. But what the Democrats had to know - and arguably intended - was that many moderate Republicans would find the unadulterated amendment unacceptable and that their no-votes on the ERA would be political albatrosses for them to take back to their districts for the holidays.

Many representatives leaning toward or legitimately neutral on the ERA are resentful of such procedural tactics. And the no-votes by long-standing proponents like Iowa Reps. Berkley Bedell, D-6th district, and Tom Tauke, D-1st district, evince this.

The ERA has been used as political leverage by its so-called supporters in Congress to widen the gender gap, making the Republican party look bad. Women's organizations lining up political endorsements should perhaps think twice about who their real allies are.

Tragedy, triviality stalk Kennedys

LMOST 30 YEARS have passed since a handsome young senator from Massachusetts published a slim volume of essays about political leaders in tough situations. Wellreceived critically and soon read in many high school civics classes, "Profiles in Courage" would later help propel a relatively inexperienced John F. Kennedy into the White House.

Today, amid the rush of memorabilia marking the 20th anniversary of JFK's assassination, comes a new "profiles in courage" this time about the "third wave" of America's most prominent family. Titled Growing Up Kennedy, the book tells the story of the 29 Kennedy cousins who, the authors say, have titudes toward sex, drugs, rock 'n' roll and other things with which most people are obsessed.

Unlike some of the other Kennedy tributes in circulation, Growing Up Kennedy can at moments impress even the most die-hard Kennedy-hater. We learn in gut-wrenching detail how each of RFK's children learned of his murder, and how each struggled to recover over the next decade. The book makes clear the tragedy has become a family trademark, and that self-searching ofcourage" that serves them well in life necessary pastime at the Hyannisport

IN THE AUTHORS' estimation, the tragedies have helped to make every young Kennedy a paragon of some kind. Teddy Jr., who lost his leg to cancer, is mature beyond his years; Caroline is a role model for her friends and a firm believer in privacy; Kathleen has paved the way for the Kennedy women who aren't interested in standing in their husbands' shadows. The thinking seems to be that such triumphs over adversity are the stuff of great leadership

But therein lies the inherent contradiction of the entire project. The 'third wave'' has encountered such incredible challenges in growing up that political matters have yet to replace personal problems on their agenda. The best proof may be Bobby Jr., the been bred with a special "moral ten has replaced touch football as the namesake of the most determined of his recent admission to a heroin habit indicates.

Moreover, for all the talk of public service, the authors uncover no evidence to indicate that the young generation understands one modern fact: Political success no longer comes with a family name. A chief lesson of Uncle Teddy's ill-fated 1980 presidential bid was that while a certain number of Americans will always come out to chant, cheer and crowd around a Kennedy, many just want to ogle a celebrity and have no intention of voting for one.

If that's the rule, it will take more than pretty faces and anecdotes about wild times at the Caps to turn the public around Former Secretary of State Robert McNamara - one of two panelists not playing match games?

The panel after

It's now two days after The Day After, and what was most rightening about the event was not the movie itself, but the panel discussion that followed it.

Panel members, with the exceptions of astronomer Carl Sagan and former Secretary of Defense Robert McNamara, were gray old men who persisted in seeing nuclear war as just another war, only worse. They persisted in thinking of it in terms of deterrence, counterforce, aggression and response.

William Buckley worried about the dirty repressive communists, failing to see that the death of man brings with it the death of ideology; capitalism, communism, democracy, tyrrany will not survive man.

Former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger talked about complexity and the need for stability to prevent war. He failed to nderstand nuclear weapons are the ultimate destabilizing force, bringing numb terror, apathy and escape to fantasy into the world. Elie Wiesel voiced despair and confusion, but offered no hope, lo insight.

General Brent Scowcroft was the typical military technician, worried about how to do whatever task he is assigned, not about the meaning of it all. He and Kissinger both argued that more weapons are safer than fewer.

Only Sagan and McNamara demonstrated an understanding of the horror, the science, the politics and the psychology of nuclear war. Both advocated reducing U.S.-Soviet tensions and reducing the nuclear weapons. Sagan said a certain level of nuclear weapons use would bring the destruction of all we understand: a nuclear winter that would freeze the world and prevent farming. McNamara said recent CIA intelligence reports now show the Soviet military build-up slowed in the mid-1970s and that the slowdown continues.

Sagan called the two superpowers men in a room awash with gasoline. One has 9,000 matches and the other 7,000. Like those two men, the rest of the panelists argued about the number and quality of matches, when they should have been thinking about how to get rid of the them and clean up the room.

political environment. It's enough to make one say "here we go again." Whatever part the original "profiles" played in JFK's career, there's no mistaking the new book is a thinly-veiled attempt to introduce the next generation in the political marketplace. Fortunately, in contemporary politics, a book does not a leader make.

and might prove handy later in a compound

Growing Up Kennedy is a full-length People magazine piece, at once playing on the public's bizarre fascination with these kids while trying to portray them as "normal." The result is confusion. While authors Harrison Rainie nd John Quinn have received the advice and consent of the entire family to compile this hagiography, they came away waffling on whether the third generation deserves idolatry or indifference.

FOR EXAMPLE, while justifiably chiding RFK's heady son Joe for signing his high school love letters "God," they extoll the physical legacy of his brothers and sisters in exalted terms: "For the men, long, hard bodies, unbent from the physical punishment they inflict on themselves." Had enough? Try this: "For the women, high-cheeked, natural beauty in slender frames. For both, piercing eyes of aqua, emerald and brown in square, open, expressive faces.'

There's plenty of the stuff that keeps gossip columnists in business. Readers learn how Teddy's kids differ from Bobby's kids and how the older children are more committed than their younger counterparts, who often never knew their fathers. For stargazers, the authors include an entire chapter on each of the 14 elder siblings. (These have insipid titles, such as "Maria - Beauty at the Crossroads" and "Steve - He Packs a Wallop.") Much is made of the generation's varied regard for Catholicism - considerably more, in fact, than their atfrom the weight of many problems, as Field Newspaper Syndicate

Candidacy candor

To the editor:

Linda Shuppener's editorial, "Jackson's action," (DI, Nov. 8) has a plausible ring to it. (I could say more positive things about most of her editorials!) In appraising Mr. Jackson's presidential candidacy, however, one should consider a serious flaw: Jackson's tilt to the left is understandable, but he sometimes tilts to the point of demagoguery.

Item: his position on the PLO and Mark Helprin's Winter's Tale by Scott Loy, I am compelled to respond to Yasser Arafat, whom he literally embraced, the same Arafat who clear up several factual and conceptual addressed the United Nations with a errors in his article.

Second look at review

Concerning the recent review of

Maurice M. Shapiro

To the editor:

Peter Lake, the protagonist appearing and reappearing throughout the book, was not born in the Lake of the Coheeries. He was the son of immigrants and was cast adrift off the coast of New Jersey when his parents were denied entrance at Castle Garden because they were diseased with tuberculosis.

youngsters.

Peter Lake was never in love with Virginia Gamely. Rather, his love was directed entirely toward the beautiful Beverly Penn, and that is one of the central points of Winter's Tale - that love can be such a powerful force, a man will deny even the fact of his death in order to continue his search for it.

Justice, the ultimate treasure pursued in Helprin's novel, was not to be found in the rise of a new city out of the ashes of a firestorm. But rather, true justice was achieved in the resurrection of a young girl named Abby, who stands as the conscience for all who died poor and starving in the slums of New York City.

For the future, I would suggest that Mr. Loy at least read the books he intends to review.

Health Association. It was set up at the UI by Feldick after consultation with UI Vice President for Student Services Philip Hubbard, UI Vice President for Academic Affairs Richard Remington and UI Registrar Jerald Dallam.

Feldick said three lines will be set up at the Union to handle the large number of students. "We will use four if necessary." UI officials intend to handle 750 students per hour per line.

Feldick stressed that those students in need of the immunization should come early, "so we don't have a rush ... jammed lines on the last day. First come, first serve.'

Between 11,000 and 12,000 UI students are automatically excluded from the program because as health science students, they are required to receive inoculations before entering their professional college.

BEFORE RECEIVING the vaccination, students must read and sign an informed consent sheet for UI records. The consent form explains why the shots are being administered.

The sheet also informs women that if they are pregnant they will not be given the immunization and if they receive the shots they should take precautions not to become pregnant within three months.

Also women with late menstrual cycles will be required to have a pregnancy test before they receive

Students born in 1957 or earlier are exempt from the immunization program because more than 90 percent of the population had the measles before the vaccine came out in the early 1960s.

"These other students (those younger than 26) had an immunization that did not hold," Feldick said.

After receiving the informed consent sheet, students will get a computer print-out card of their record and proceed into the vaccination line. Their information sheet will be checked and their key punch card will be kept in their student health records for a minimum of ten years.

Funding for the program is provided by the state and the CDC. This will include paying personnel to administer the shots, as well as the inoculant itself. UI College of Nursing staff and nursing students will help keep the lines moving.

FRED APPLETON, CDC representative in Des Moines, said the CDC will fund the program by grants.

Neither Feldick nor Appleton could estimate how much the program will cost

"It will be cheaper than a hospitalized case," Appleton said. "The vaccine will cost less than $3 (per shot).

Feldick said the UI could not begin the program any earlier, because the CDC and student health services were conducting a statistical evaluation. Results of the evaluation proved the major measles and rubella epidemics occurred on university campuses. College students are also the most susceptible age group, he said.

Iowa State University and the University of Northern Iowa started voluntary inoculation programs last spring, following the Indiana epidemic, and still maintain these voluntary programs.

About 75 potential supporters of presidential candidate Sen. Alan Cranston (D-Calif.) gathered to drink free beer and pose questions about his campaign Monday night at Amelia Earhart's Deli.

The event was the "kickoff" for the Cranston campaign in Johnson County and according to Phil Roeder, a staff intern with the campaign, the motive was to "bring in a lot of new people to the campaign."

"This event is kind of a kick-off for the Johnson County campaign. We're doing something a little more fun. A lot of campaigns have had office parties, but we wanted to have a party atmosphere with people here to answer questions,' he said.

Sen. Thomas Mann, D-Des Moines, former assistant attorney general and past executive director of the Civil Rights Commission, was the guest speaker at the kickoff. Mann is a member of Cranston's state coordinating committee and the National Coalition of Black and Hispanic Americans for Cranston.

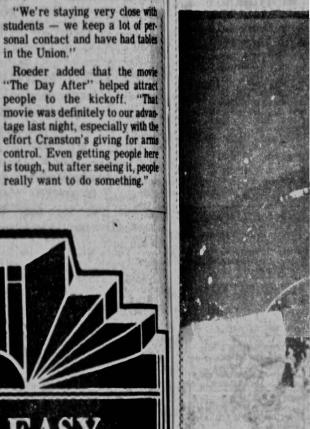

Mann urged the crowd, mostly students, to support the Cranston campaign.

Illinois also dominated the second team offensive selections.

Joining Trudeau in the second team backfield were Illinois back Thomas Rooks and Rick Rogers of Michigan. Duane Gunn of Indiana and Illinois' David Williams were the receivers while Illinois' tight end Tim Brewster was a second team choice.

Mike Krerowicz and Bill Roberts of Ohio State were selected as second team tackles; Iowa's Joel Hilgenberg was the pick at center while Scott Zalenski of Ohio State and Joe Levilis of Iowa were the second team guards. Second team linemen included Keith Cruise of Northwestern; Al Sincich of Michigan; Specer Nelms of Ohio State and Chris Scott of Purdue. Stringer taking it a step at a time

By Thomas W. Jargo tant Sports Editor

On Nov. 28, 'the Iowa women's basketball team will open its season with the Drake Bulldogs - a team that first-year Hawkeye Coach Vivian Stringer didn't want to play back in the spring of 1982.

That spring, Stringer was coaching at Cheyney State College in Cheyney, Pa., and had taken the Lady Wolves to the first-ever NCAA women's Final Four by winning the East Regional. The championship game of the West Regional between Maryland and Drake had yet to be played. Stringer was at that game because Cheyney State would play the winner.

"My secret wish was to play Maryland, although I would never want to play Maryland because everytime we played them, it was a dogfight," Stringer said other at the final buzzer, Stringer said. But besides all this, Stringer said she wanted to play Maryland for one reason - Drake was an unknown.

"My feeling was that nobody knew anything about Drake," she said. "Maryland is like a machine - very methodical and exact. But I would rather take my chances on playing Maryland because I was at least familiar with (them)."

Stringer got her wish as Maryland defeated the Bulldogs to advance into the first round of the Final Four.

CHEYNEY STATE defeated Maryland, 89-78, in the ensuing game to advance to the finals against Louisiana Tech. The Lady Techsters toppled Cheyney State's hopes of a championship, defeating the Lady Wolves, 76-62.

Looking back on that match-up with Maryland, Stringer said Cheyney State should have lost that game. As odd as that may sound, Stringer does have her reasoning for saying that.

For the previous seven years,

Stringer had been calculating - to the exact degree - Chevney State's advancement from season to season.

Up until the 1982 season, Cheyney State had made precision advances through postseason play until "skipping a step" and jumping to the finals against Louisiana Tech

"I WAS TELLING the team that we skipped a step," Stringer said. "Because history was showing us - I traced it for seven years - the exact numbers, the exact spaces.

"(We) always made the same progression - We never went any faster or slower. At no time did I ever look back and see where we didn't accomplish more than we did before.

'What should have happened (in 1982) is that we should have made it to the Final Four but lost (to Maryland.)'

Step by step, Stringer will attempt to advance the Hawkeyes on to postseason play in the years to come. Maybe, she won't mind skipping a few steps along the way.

SPRINGS FINISHED the competition in 16:30, while Iowa's frontrunner was only four seconds back at 16:34. Doak, who had crossed the chute in second place at both the Big Ten and NCAA District IV races earlier this month, said Monday's performance was definitely the best one of her record-shattering senior season.

"I feel pretty good, I'm pretty ex-cited about it," Doak said. "I pushed myself to a point that I hadn't pushed myself all year.'

The Hedrick, Iowa, native said she decided to employ a laid back strategy in Monday's national race. "I stayed back for awhile, and Andrea Fisher (from Missouri) took the lead ... and so did five Stanford girls.

"After about the mile mark, Betty Jo Springs and (Wisconsin's) Cathy Branta came up. Later the Stanford girls dropped back and so did Andrea. then it was a race between Springs and Branta. Later it just became Betty and DOAK AND SPRINGS fought neck and neck from that point until about 220 vards were left on the 5,000-meter course, according to the Iowa runner. "There was 220 left and I was with her for the first 100 yards into the 220. Then it was like my willpower ... I respect her (Springs) a lot and I just let her go.

Iowa Coach Jerry Hassard, exceptionally pleased with his runners' performance, felt strategy was the key to both Doak and Spangler's high placing.

"They ran a very good race. They positioned themselves very early in the race and got out in good position ... I'm proud of them because they're consistent and run well in the big races. With the second-place showing, Doak was crowned an All-American for the eighth time in her cross country and track career. She also had to gain some personal satisfaction by finally topping Branta, who was the only one to defeat Doak at the Big Ten and District races.

THE BADGER had to settle for an eighth place finish to end her cross country career, while Oregon's Kathy Hayes, Liz Natale of Tennessee and Fisher finished third through fifth, respectively.

Led by Hayes' third place finish, Oregon edged Stanford by three points for the team title, 95-98. Wisconsin (107) was fifth, while Iowa State was also in the top 10, finishing sixth with 134 tallies.

Doak was a 10th place finalist in her two previous appearances at national meets, but she vowed early on that she would not fill that position again.

"Coach (Hassard) and I sat down at the beginning of the year and thought, well, maybe top five," Doak said. "Then we evaluated the field and said top six. But I swore to myself I would never finish 10th again."

Spangler was also named an All-American, because of her 20th place finish. The top 25 American runners gain the national honor and the Rockford, Ill., native was 16th among American competitors.

With good finishes at the NCAAs under their belt, Doak and Spangler will now travel to State College, Pa., for the prestigous The Athletics Congress national cross country championships on Saturday.

Gymnasts seek you wouldn't try in a dual meet because you're working for a team The Hawkeyes have decided as a team not to compete in the meet's team competition and will enter on an individual basis. Iowa Coach Tom Dunn agrees with the idea. "The team competition at the Midwest Open is kind of an awkward situation," Dunn said. "You can put as many people in the meet as you want, but before it begins you have to designate the nine people you want to DUNN SAID that not competing in the team competition will have several advantages for the Hawkeyes. "The team wanted to worry about their own routines rather than worry about a team score," he said. "It will give See Gymnasts, page 2B

lowa frontline biggest problem for Wesleyan

By Mike Condon Assistant Sports Editor

After losing a tough 64-58 exhibition game to the Italian Nationals last Friday night, the Iowa basketball team begins its season in earnest Saturday against Illinois Wesleyan at 1:15 p.m. at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

Hawkeye Coach George Raveling said following the Italian game that he limited his squad's game plan for a simple reason. "There were scouts here from Illinois Wesleyan ... and I didn't want to give away everything we had," he said.

Iowa ran the same offense "90 percent of the time" according to Raveling. It was an offense that was geared to get the ball inside to the Hawkeye big men Greg Stokes and Michael Payne - an offense that has veteran Titan Coach Dennis Bridges worried.

"THAT'S USUALLY the biggest problem we have when we play a Division I school," Bridges said of his Division III team that plays in the College Conference of Illinois and Wisconsin. "We can play just super defense on a particular trip down the floor and the other team can just storm the boards and put the ball in the basket."

Northern Open gives wrestlers better matches

After a Thanksgiving break, the Iowa wrestling team travels to Madison, Wis., for the Wisconsin Open on Saturday.

After an impressive showing in the Minnesota Quadrangular, the Hawkeyes have a few things to work on before going into competition with the likes of Iowa State and Northern Iowa. "We did pretty well in Minnesota and we'll just have to learn from what we

There were a number of impressive performances by Hawkeye wrestlers in last weekend's meet

"I think (Jeff) Kerber, (Marty) Kistler and (Al) Frost did real well along with other members of the squad," Robinson said. "It was a good meet to get things started off for us."

Hawkeyes return to UPI top 10, Nebraska still first in football poll

NEW YORK (UPI) - A week off certainly didn't hurt Nebraska's rating in the UPI Coaches' college football ratings. The Cornhuskers, top-rated since pre-season, are one win away from a perfect regular season and they remain one vote away from being a unanimous choice as No. 1.

The first nine teams held their rankings in latest balloting by the UPI Board of Coaches as three of the top five teams and seven ranked teams were idle las weekend.

Iowa climbed back into the top 10 after clobbering Minnesota, 61-10, while Ohio State fell from the 10th spot to 13th after a 24-21 loss to Michigan.

Nebraska, 11-0, received 39 of a possible 40 votes and 599 points from the UPI Board of Coaches. Texas, 10-0 after a 24-21 win over No. 19 Baylor, remained second by getting the other first place vote and 549 overall points.

been made on the team since then. Equaling its 1981 feat, spokesman Dave Neumeister said, "Basically we're the same team, but we are a lot better than the time we won before.

The Squadders have a balanced offensive attack that lets every member get into the action, according to Neumeister. "You can't defend on any one person."

Four men and three women make up the squad. Team members include: Neumeister, Bill Kruger, Steve Roup, John Shultz, Kami Frantz, Chris Freeman and Jenny Housel best player in our conference," Bridges said. "We beat Arizona at Arizona last year and Blaise just shot the lights out. If he were 6-7 of 6-8 he could play anywhere." Junior Tom Baffes starts at the other forward while 6-2 senior Gary Judson and 6-0 senior Mike Wall will be at the guard spots. The latter has big shoes to fill according to his coach.

"We lost a great point guard in Brad Gregurich (to graduation)," Bridges said. 'That's our biggest concern right now. If Mike develops, we can have a fine season." Bridges is realistic about the prospects of playing before a packed house in Iowa City against the No. 5 team in the country. "Lightning can strike at any time," he said of the Titans' chance of winning.

"Whatever happens in the Iowa game won't make or break our season. We just have to go out and play as hard as we can." Raveling will go with the same five star-dicated that he would like to get freshman Dave Snedeker into the game along with other reserves Bryan Boyle, Brad Lohaus and Todd Berkenpas.

Saturday's season opener will be the third meeting between the two schools. The Hawkeyes dropped the first meeting, 29-26, in 1929 but Iowa avenged the loss with an easy 95-55 victory over the Titans during the 1979 season.

Iowa was not originally scheduled to meet the Titans this season. South Carolina was originally scheduled for a nonconference game at the Carver-Hawkeye Arena, but the Gamecocks joined a conference and asked to be released from their commitment. The Hawkeyes then picked up the game with the Titans as a replacement.

Nearly 20 current and former Iowa gymnasts will compete in the meet on Saturday and Dunn said the meet is an important recruiting tool. "We want to get a lot o black and gold on the floor," Dunn said.

Blake, Watson in top form on recently released albums

By Steve Horowitz Staff Writer

Norman Blake, Original Underground Music from the Mysterious South, Rounder Records 0166

Kentucky Country, Old Time Music from Kentucky, Original 1927-1937 Recordings, Rounder Records 1037.

Doc and Merle Watson, Doc and Merle Watson's Guitar Album, Flying Fish 301.

HERE'S SOMETHING special about old time country music. It sounds as natural as the bark of a gnarled pine tree - and is usually just as corny. But every once in a while a performer emerges who can make the jangle of strings sound like the great outdoors on a clear autumn day. Two of the most consistent practitioners of this art are Norman Blake and Doc Wat-

Blake and Watson have just released acoustic instrumental albums that show them at the top of their forms. Neither man does it alone. Blake is aided by his wife Nancy and three friends who call themselves the Rising Fawn String Ensemble. Watson is supported by his son Merle, champion fiddler Mark O'Conner, bassist T. Michael Coleman and percussionist Pat McInerney.

Although Doc Watson has been playing country music professionally for over 40 years, he is not strictly an old time artist. He combines elements of contemporary bluegrass, swing, blues and even a polka in his tunes. Blake is more of a purist. While all of the selections on his latest album are original compositions, they evoke memories of a more rustic era. There are musical allusions to rags, jigs, square-dances, marches and the big string bands of the 19th century.

THERE IS NO DOUBT that Blake's record is by far the better of the two. His virtuoso handling of a variety of instruments including guitar, mandolin, 8string tenor banjo and mandocello and his superb songwriting make Original Underground Music from the Mysterious South a joy to hear. He uses no drums or percussion, relying solely on a number of stringed instruments deftly played by himself and his ensemble. Nancy Blake in particular shines on cello and mandolin. She also composed two of the songs, 'Pueblo" and "Peezlewhister," which are gems in their own right.

Doc and Merle Watson's Guitar Album is also good listening. They do everything from the folk ballad "John Henry" to the ever popular "Take Me Out to the Ballgame" in high-spirited style. Doc and Merle know how to turn any song into a good time, and their happiness is infectious.

Most of Doc and Merle's previous albums have featured Doc on vocals. It is interesting to hear them pick without a voice covering. Their twenty-plus vears of performing together has allowed them to know each other's moves in advance. This gives them the freedom to take chances while playing without worrying about making mistakes.

Although Norman Blake's album is called Original Underground Music from the Mysterious South, it is modern music meant to sound like the old stuff. Rounder Records has just released an album of the real thing, Kentucky music from the late '20s and early '30s by obscure backwoods musicians. This is the stuff Doc Watson, Bill Monroe and Loretta Lynn heard as kids. Kentucky has a rich musical heritage, much of it unheard by modern audiences.

The selections on Old Time Music from Kentucky include fiddle tunes, gospel, banjo breakdowns, folk ballads and some songs that defy simple categorization. Of particular beauty are Ernest Phipps and his Holiness Quartet's "I Want to Go Where Jesus Is" (1927) and Lonesome Luke and his Farmboys' 'Beaver Valley Breakdown'' (1931). The album contains 16 selections by 15 different groups, many of which had not been issued in almost 50 years.

Quilts display settler women's art

GROUP OF 19th- and 20th-century quilts from the University of Kansas Museum entitled "Quilter's Choice," currently on exhibit at the Cedar Rapids Museum of Art, attests to the ingenuity and sense of design which spurred many of the women who settled the Midwest to create works of art from humble materials.

Quilts served two utilitarian purposes for their makers: they provided a method of conserving small bits of fabric and they supplied necessary bedding. In many quilts, the resulting designs rival some of the most complex contemporary abstract art works. The 22 quilts hanging in the museum's second floor gallery crowd each other, giving a claustrophobic atmosphere to the show. A quilt like the brilliant floral "Paradise Garden," which features appliqued and stuffed flowers and fruit, needs space for the viewer to enjoy its design and texture. Here, though, it must share attention with quilts hanging alongside it. The whole effect is to make the display appear like a mundane clothesline hung with bedding. With the exception of two dark-toned "Log Cabin" designs, the quilts contain bright colors against light or white backgrounds. Many are made of small pieced designs; a "Double Irish Chain" features tiny 3/4-inch squares of fabric. These works, in contrast to the deep optical designs of the Pennsylvania Amish quilts, are sunny and almost jaunty.

The show includes two quilts from the Grant Wood family - one a baby quilt with black and white checked squares accenting softer hues and the other an album quilt with blocks inscribed by members of the Wood family.

A side room off the main gallery of the second floor contains grid constructions by Iowa artist Anne Gochenour. Metal and wooden latticed cubes, either painted black or silver or rusted, surround rough forms or feature broken or burned centers.

A wooden bottle case stands on end with its compartments filled with wire ovals, and the whole work is painted in dull black. Another cube, built of clear lastic stri written in black. In one sculpture the artist uses electrical wires that extend out from a square of asphalt like antennae from a sea anemone, and in another a hollow box made of pieces of grass matting reveals mustardcolored rubber tubes in the center. Also included in the show is a video tape and a book of photographs of the artist costumed and painted to resemble one of her grid structures. Though relegated to a back corner, Gochenour's works reveal an intriguing use of unusual materials and of the grid form.

100 million people view 'Day After'

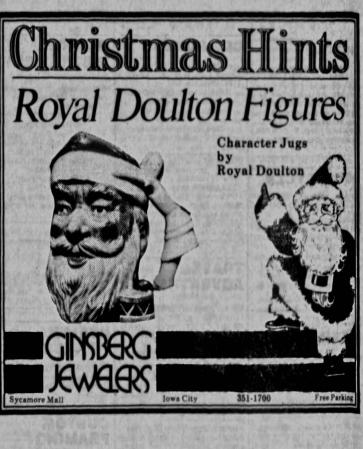

NEW YORK (UPI) - ABC Research said Monday an estimated 100 million Americans watched the network's nuclear war movie "The Day After," according to the overnight Nielsen ratings from six of the nation's largest TV markets.

The network had predicted "The Day After" would be the highest-rated movie ever to air on network television, but in February more viewers watched the last episode of the CBS series "MASH."

National ratings are not released by the A.C. Nielsen company until today but ABC said an average of the overnight figures for the six markets gave "The Day After" a 52.2 rating with a 68 percent share of the viewing audience.

The network's viewership dropped off immediately after the movie.
