Three foreign firms consider move to lowa City

By Mark Leonard

As a result of a recent trip to Europe by city officials, an Irish publishing company and a French bakery are interested in locating in Iowa City.

Keith Kafer, executive vice president of the Iowa City Chamber of Com-merce, said Sunday the city is sending information on the UI and Iowa City to the three firms in the hope of attracting foreign development here.

pean firms were made by Kafer, City Manager Neal Berlin and Mayor Mary Neuhauser in October when they spent two weeks in Europe trying to encourage foreign investment in Iowa

'At this point it would be difficult to know how many firms are really interested," Kafer said. "We've sent out a lot of information about Iowa City looking at long-range possibilities for plant.

Kafer said, however, that an "im-mediate possibility" for Iowa City is an English company which manufactures "sport-type" boats.

"This is not a contact we made on the trip, but it's something we've been working on for awhile," Kafer said. "We should hear something back from them before Christmas."

Kafer said the company is interested and I think with this type of deal we're in an "assembly-type" distribution interested in Iowa City as a possible location for a bakery. "He was thinking of maybe a joint venture with someone on this. It's something we're looking at down the road."

Berlin said a printing company from Ireland has also shown some interest in Iowa City. "They're interested in the Midwest to locate. They're looking at a joint venture with another are "not as concrete," Berlin said. "Most people over there don't know where Iowa is," he said. "So what we tried to do was let everyone know what we had to offer here in Iowa City.

"You have to build a network of people there to get the word out. That includes working with people in our area who have business contacts throughout the world. We have to build on the network extensively and it's going to take a lot of work," Berlin said.

"We can't compete with the major cities and states, but I think we should try and do something. A lot of people are looking now to invest in the U.S. because of the stability of our economy compared to the rest of the world."

Berlin said maintaining contact with the foreign firms will be the responsibility of the Iowa City Economic Development Committee, which is made up of representatives of the UI, city government and chamber of

Weather holds up ISU, UNI classes

By Patricia Reuter

Freezing rain, ice-covered roads and the threat of snow has forced officials to cancel classes today at two of Iowa's three state universities.

The opening of classes at Iowa State University in Ames and the University of Northern Iowa in Cedar Falls will be delayed one day to discourage students from driving back to those campuses after the Thanksgiving break on 80percent to 100-percent ice-covered UI Director of Public Information Dwight Jensen said classes will be in session at the UI today, and all UI offices will be open. However, he cautioned students not to attempt to drive back to Iowa City if traveling would be hazardous.

"We don't want any students to take chances driving back to school," Jenen said. "We urge them not to travel at all if they think it will be

JENSEN SAID arrangements to make up classes will be made for students who cannot make it back to Iowa City because of the bad weather. "We want to be sure that no one thought they had to take a chance in getting back to class."

UNI spokesman Don Kelly said that all day and night classes at the university will be cancelled today, but university offices, dormitories and dining halls will remain open.

"The place is one big hockey rink," Kelly said. "It's 'bad' here in big, bold

Hall murder conviction is overturned

James Hall's 1974 murder conviction was overturned Tuesday by a Johnson County District Court judge. Hall, a former Iowa football player, had been serving a 50-year sentence for the 1973 murder of a UI nursing student.

The state has 90 days to decide whether to retry Hall for the murder of Sarah Ann Ottens or to appeal the decision to the Iowa Supreme Court.

Bill Roach, a spokesman for the Iowa Attorney General's office, said it has not yet been decided whether to Chapman noted that the postretry Hall or to appeal the ruling made by Sixth District Court Judge Ansel Chapman. Roach said the attorney general's office will not comment on the ruling until it is reviewed, but the time frame set by the court, of Iowa City Attorney James Hayes said Hall was released Wednesday night after friends raised the $20,000 bond set by the court. He said a friend picked Hall up at the Iowa State Men's Penitentiary in Fort Madison, where he has served more than six years of Hall's attorneys from the Iowa College of Law's Prisoner Assistance Clinic filed a motion for "postconviction relief" in May after being allowed to see the Iowa Bureau of Criminal Investigation's file on the murder. The file had previously been withheld from Hall's attorneys.

IN THEIR APPEAL, Hall's attorneys claimed Hall's rights were violated during the investigation and trial and that evidence had been on the day of the murder. withheld which would have aided his

In his ruling, Chapman referred to a judicial statement that stated, "The trial of a criminal case is not a game of fox and hounds in which the state attempts to outwit and trap a quarry. It is, instead, a sober search for truth in which not only the resources of the defendant, but those readily available to the state must be put to work in aid of that search."

'Somewhere along the line this precept was forgotten. James Hall did not receive his constitutional right to a fair trial because the state failed to correct false testimony which reasonably could have affected the judgment of the jury and withheld material and exculpatory evidence which might have affected the outcome of the trial. The fact that our statutes and procedures mandate that a wrong be corrected even many years after an original trial exemplifies the majesty of our criminal justice system.'

OTTENS' BODY was found in a room on the fourth floor of Rienow Residence Hall March 13, 1973. In September of that year, Hall was indicted by a Johnson County Grand Jury for her murder. His trial began May 14, 1974, and a jury convicted Hall of second-degree murder on May 23.

On June 3, 1974, Hall was sentenced to 50 years in prison. He appealed the conviction to the Iowa Supreme Court, which upheld the conviction in November 1976. He appealed that decision to the U.S. Supreme Court, which refused to consider the appeal in October 1977.

One of the "central" items of evidence withheld, according to Chapman, was the photo-identification by Rienow Hall maid Rosemary Jones two weeks after the murder. She identified William Burbridge as the man she had seen knocking on Ottens' door tentative and unsatisfactory. Chapman ruled however, that "His (Jutte's) personal appraisal of Jones' credibility does not mean her identification was not 'material.' Credibility is for the jury, not for Jutte," to determine.

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) - Moslem and Christian forces exchanged artillery shellfire in the mountains overlooking Beirut Sunday as President Amin Gemayel left for Rome and the United States in a bid to bring peace to his war-torn country. For the second day in a row, Syria said it fired on a U.S. surveillance flight over Syrian forces holding the northern half of Lebanon.

In Washington, a Pentagon spokesman said he was unaware of U.S. planes in Lebanon encountering ground fire Saturday or Sunday. F-14 reconnaissance flights have been fired on three times since they began Sept. 7. Syrian official radio, pointing to the constant U.S. flights, accused Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir of visiting Washington in advance of Gemayel to complete plans for a joint U.S.-Israeli attack on Syria. Shamir and Defense Minister Moshe Arens flew Sunday from Tel Aviv to Washington for a White House summit that Shamir said he hoped would boost "cooperation and coordination of action" with Washington.

THEY arrived late Sunday at Andrews Air Force Base and flew by helicopter to the Washington Monument grounds. Shamir noted Israel and the United States have recently shared "the painful experience of monstrous" attacks on soldiers in Lebanon. He said the Lebanon fighting and the 'Syrian threat to peace are the most urgent issues for which we must find some solutions." The two were scheduled to meet

President Reagan today and hold talks with Secretary of State George Shultz and Defense Secretary Caspar Wein-Israel Radio said Shamir wanted $1.7 billion in military aid from Washington — all in outright grants — for fiscal 1984. The report said the United States already had agreed to joint naval maneuvers with Israel. Gemayel, seeking help to get Syrian and Israeli troops out of his country, left Lebanon as artillery battles raged in the mountains east of Beirut, killing at least two people.

Arriving in Rome, the Lebanese president was greeted by Defense Minister Giovanni Spadolini. They conferred privately for 20 minutes after reviewing an honor guard in a driving GEMAYEL, whose government depends on the continued presence of the multinational force in Lebanon, must reassure Italian officials their troops will not suffer needless casualties.

Official Beirut radio said artillery fire between the Christian Phalange and the Druze Moslem militia hit at least eight villages in the Shouf Moun

The Druze militiamen also exchanged artillery fire with Lebanese army troops holding the village of Souk el Gharb on the first ridge inland from the capital. Exchanges at the key site have become daily occurrences.

In mid-afternoon, shells slammed into Hadath, southeast of Beirut near the U.S. Marines based at Beirut Airport, Beirut radio reported. Four Lebanese reportedly were wounded by

The continued Syrian reports of firing at U.S. jets underscored Gemayel's larger problem of getting a com-promise from the United States, Israel and Syria on the presence of foreign troops in Lebanon. Syria is demanding the abrogation of a May 17 agreement between Israel and Lebanon, while Israel, supported by the United States, says the agree-ment should stand and demands that Syria withdraw first. Lebanese officials want the United States to agree to modify the May 17 accord to make it acceptable to Syria.

Reward for bullion offered

LONDON — Scotland Yard hoped Sunday that a $3 million reward would turn up clues to the identity of bandits who stole diamonds and three tons of gold worth $37 million in the largest peacetime robbery in history.

Insurance loss adjusters offered $3 million for information leading to the recovery of the stolen loot: 6,800 ingots of pure gold and a quantity of diamonds. "In insurance terms, it's equivalent to the loss of a supertanker," a London insurance expert said.

Acid rain decried

WASHINGTON — Environmental chief William Ruckleshaus said Sunday the nation cannot wait until after the elections to find a solution to acid rain, but conceded he has yet to make a recommendation on how to deal with the problem to Congress or the president.

Does Andropov live?

WASHINGTON — A top Russian diplomat sidestepped a question Sunday about the health of Soviet President Yuri Andropov, prompting a leading Kremlin watcher to comment, "He talked as if his leader is dead."

The remarks by Richard Ovinnikov, deputy Soviet ambassador to the United Nations, and Zbigniew Brzezinksi, who served as President Carter's national security adviser, cameduring CBS's "Face the Nation" television program.

Athletic students could benefit if school board hires trainer

By Steve Sands Staff Writer

UI student athletic trainers may get to practice in the "real" world if the Iowa City Community School District approves adding a full-time athletic trainer for the senior and junior high schools for next year.

The school district has not been able to use UI student trainers because the district lacks the full-time trainer needed to supervise the UI students.

The school board will decide on the new staff posi-

The school board will decide on the new staff position when it completes the 1984-85 budget in late January or early February, according to Dorsey Phelps, board president.

If the board establishes the new position, one of the certified trainer's jobs will be to supervise four UI student trainers who will watch over participants in school-sponsored sports activities.

"I think it's a wonderful opportunity to get students to see what it is like out there in the real world," said Ed Crowley, UI head athletic trainer.

"I think here (at the UI) they have a tendency to be spoiled."

Crowley attributed this tendency to the extensive UI athletic training budget the students have available, in contrast to the limited budget of a school district.

He said the student trainers would always consult with the certified trainer. "It's just a way to triage ... to refer medical problems to the appropriate person. They (the students) would not act as full-time trainers or physicians," he said.

Dr. Michael Durkee, one of six physicians who currently serves on a volunteer basis for varsity and sophomore football games in the district, said adding a full-time trainer would provide a more complete coverage of sports.

"BY GETTING one guy in there, that will allow them to expand immediately," he said.

Dan Foster, UI curriculum director for the athletic training program, said the students picked to serve would be juniors or seniors who have had practical experience with UI sports and with the UI summer sports schools.

He added that a "clear majority (of universities) that have athletic training programs with the student working in an apprenticeship or curriculum, do offer services to the community."

Foster said the proposed program indicates an interest in providing adequate medical care for athletic participants.

The six volunteer physicians proposed the addition of a full-time trainer to the board last spring. At the time, the board formed a committee to study the request and it recommended the adoption of a full-time trainer earlier this month.

The committee proposed that the staff position be budgeted from June 1, 1984 until May 30, 1986, and recommended a starting salary between $14,000 and $17,500 depending upon the qualifications of the trainer

ONE OF the volunteer physicians stepped down recently, in part because he was disappointed at the school board's lack of progress in deciding whether to hire a trainer.

Dr. Kenneth Printen said he thought it was time to retire, but said he would have stayed on for at least another year if the school board had come closer to hiring the new trainer.

Phelps said the board is only following the budgetmaking process. "I think that there doesn't seem to be a question, that there is a real need there. I'm not sure yet if this is the best way to meet the need." "I'm concerned about the safety of the kids and

"I'm concerned about the safety of the kids and my role as president is to make sure we go through very carefully the decision-making process." Phelps added that the full-time position needs to be balanced with the rest of the district's needs.

Crowley said the certified trainer would be kept busy. "It's an extensive job for one person. It's going to take a while to really develop the program within the financial means they have. It's not going to be an overnight thing but it's a start. That's encouraging." Former Daily Iowan photographers on working for the DI:

Boost in law applications intensifies competition

By Christine Walsh Special to The Daily Iowan

Competition to enter the UI College of Law is stiffening as the number of applications continues to increase, UI

Dean William Hines said this year's entering class has the highest median test scores and highest median grade point averages in the history of the law school. On the average, the class scored in the top 15 percent of the LSAT (Law School Admissions Test) and earned a 3.6 grade point average.

Despite a nationwide trend of declining enrollment in law schools, UI has had a 5 to 10 percent increase in application annually for the last four years, said Gregory Williams, law schools

Williams agreed that it is difficult to attribute the UI's increase in applicants to one factor. "But it is probably a combination of the economic situation, low tuition rates and the recognition of the law school, he said."

Schools, the UI is ranked fourth when

Williams said the high ranking of the Opportunities in the job market school may contribute to its appeal to out-of-state students. Last year, nonresident applications comprised 45 percent of the application pool.

> REGARDLESS of the number of outof-state applicants, the entering class is traditionally composed of 80 percent Iowa residents.

HINES ALSO noted that the average law student is now a little older because 10 percent to 20 percent of entering students return after pursuing graduate work. He said these students seem to have a definite advantage, because they have a better perspective

As the qualifications of UI law students change, the number of recruiters at the law school has increased. Assistant Law School Dean Thomas Senneff said 36 percent more recruiters from various law firms around the country held interviews at the school this fall than last year. Although the nationwide placement rate average for law schools is 50 percent, more than 80 percent of UI law school students get jobs soon after graduation.

Funeral directors: Trend toward pre-planning growing

By Mary Tabor stant Metro Editor

Funerals are big-ticket consumer items, but reluctancy to think about death deters most people from doing enough shopping ahead for a funeral.

When you have Uncle Henry dead on the sofa is not the time to call the mortician for prices," said Sandra Eskin, a member of the board of directors of the Memorial Society of the lowa River Valley. Although flippant, the remark paints the philosophy of the memorial society - a nonprofit, nonsectarian consumer organization.

Cranston, appearing on CBS's "Face the Nation" from KCCI-TV studios in Des Moines, warned "we are entering one of the most dangerous 14-month periods in the history of the world" because of the escalating arms race. Cranston was one of five people discussing the recent halt to U.S.-Soviet arms negotiations.

'The Soviets started an escalation of the arms race putting the SS-20s into Europe. We responded in kind," Cranston said. "We have a president who thinks that sending in the Marines is the way to solve every complicated international dispute.

"I suggest that we should have a halt to all this, that President Reagan should announce that we will no longer deploy or test any nuclear weapons for the next 14 months until there's a new dent Reagan is returned — giving the

The Iowa City Fire Department is investigating a fire which broke out in an unfinished apartment building early Friday morning, causing an estimated $40- $50,000

Firefighters answered an alarm at 1910 S. Gilbert St., at approximately 3:30 a.m. Friday and found three second-floor apartments on fire. According to Iowa City Fire Chief Robert Keating, the apartments were under construction, "and they were just about finished with the plumbing and wiring.' According to Keating the blaze started in the center of the secondfloor and spread in all directions, burning a large hole in the roof of the building and leaving only the charred remains of wall studs. There was no apparent damage to the first floor of the building, Keating said.

Keating said the cause of the fire has not been determined. However, he said a kerosene heater was found in one of the apartments and the building was not locked. He said the investigation of the fire will continue today, after fire officials have had a chance to talk to the building's owner, Robert Finley, who was out of town when the fire occurred. Keating said "it is difficult to make a final decision on the cause of the fire" until officials talk to Finley to "see if our findings are agreeable with what was in the

The immunization program was set up by Dr. Harley G. Feldick, UI Student Health Services director, in response to a measles outbreak at Indiana University last March. The Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta, Ga. and the American College Health Association recommended universities start immunization programs. Students who have proper proof of immunization, but have not turned it in to the UI, can present the proof at the Union without receiving a vaccination.

Feldick said he expects about 15,000 students to receive the shots. "Those (students) in need should come early,' said Feldick. "We don't want 10,000 of them showing up on Wednesday."

Women who are pregnant or plan to become pregnant within the three months following the immunization should not receive the vaccine.

The shuttle's checkout was proceeding flawlessly and NASA and European Space Agency officials eagerly awaited the bonanza of information they expect to reap from Spacelab, the 23-foot-long cylinder mounted in the shuttle's cargo bay.

Officials of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration and ESA representatives Sunday hailed the joint undertaking as "the largest international cooperative space project in

"This mission will be a huge step forward toward the goal we share - to put science to work in space for the benefit of mankind," said James Beggs, NASA administrator.

"We hope this mission will open the door to further cooperation with our European friends as we continue to set our sights on a bold vision of mankind's future in space.'

Forecasters were concerned about a fast-moving cold front centered over

"The weather tomorrow (Monday) is questionable," said Maj. Donald Greene, the chief forecaster for the shuttle program. He said if the front prevented the launch, the forecast also would be poor for Tuesday.

Technical problems already have caused a two-month delay in the Spacelab mission, a delay that ESA officials estimate cost at least $2 million.

Reagan makes new Mideast peace effort

Reagan Sunday returned to the White House from his Thanksgiving vacation for talks aimed at overcoming the obstacles blocking the Middle East peace process and to discuss what one aide called "different viewpoints" with Israel.

Reagan landed at Andrews Air Force Base shortly before Israeli Prime Minister Ytzhak Shamir arrived for White House meetings with Reagan today and Tuesday.

Reagan, trying to get his Middle East peace effort back on track, also planned to meet Thursday with Lebanese President Amin Gemayel.

Declining to predict results of the Reagan-Shamir meetings, presidential counselor Edwin Meese said, "I think it's going to be a very constructive visit It will certainly be a meeting in which we will be exploring our different viewpoints and how we can cooperate together.'

Meese would not comment specifically on reports that Israel is seeking a new public commitment of support as America's best friend.

But presidential spokesman Larry Speakes indicated no such commitment is needed

"They've enjoyed a special relationship since 1948 ... and we're committed to the security of Israel. But at the same time we think it's important that we continue our close relationships with our friendly Arab nations in the Middle East that we

Sociologist: Farmers concerned about foreigners' land holdings

AMES, Iowa (UPI) - A sociologist says Iowa farmers are concerned over a government report indicating foreign investors were full or part-owners of about 35,529 acres of the state's farmland as of Dec. 1982.

"Ownership of agricultural land is not as great in Iowa as it is in many other states, but farmers are concerned," said Paul Lasley, an Iowa State University extension sociologist.

Foreign investors owned Iowa farmland valued at $59 million, but that represents less than one-tenth of 1 percent of the state's agricultural land." Lasley said. The figures came from a U.S. Agriculture Department's economic research service.

Nationally, foreigners owned about 13.5 million acres of agricultural land, or about 1 percent of the total farmland. the USDA report said. The adjusted value of foreign-owned U.S. agricultural holdings was almost $11 billion, the government said.

"FOREIGN OWNERSHIP of agricultural land is not as extensive in the North Central states as in other parts of the country," Lasley said. "With the exception of Maine, foreign holdings are concentrated in the South and West - 34 percent in the South and 32 percent in the West.

'Maine has the largest percentage of its agricultural land and also the largest number of acres owned by foreigners — 2.7 million acres or 14 percent," he said. Lasley said 55 percent of the land owned by foreigners is forest land, 13 percent crop land and the remainder is pasture and other agricultural land. Nationally, 83 percent of the farmland under foreign ownership is held by corporations, 9 percent by partnerships and percent by individuals Corporations, in which 5 percent or more of the ownership is foreign, reported holding 63 percent of all the land listed as foreign-held, he said. The remaining 37 percent was held or acquired by foreign people not affiliated with a U.S. corporation, the USDA report said.

DURING THE TRIAL, Jones testified e had seen a black male, who was not Hall, knock on Ottens' door on the day of he murder. The next day Jones again took he stand to correct her testimony because she claimed she had lied the previous day. During her second testimony, Jones said Hall was the man she had seen.

'This was a devastating turn of affairs to Hall), especially in view of the fact that e case against him was entirely cirumstantial," Chapman stated. "If the fense had known of Jones' earlier efinite' identification of Burbridge, the effect of her recantation would have been aterially minimized. The jury had a right know that fact."

Chapman said the state also withheld ther evidence concerning Burbridge, inding: reports from three women that he exually assaulted them; that he had knowledge of numerous details of the crime; that his alibi was described as 'suspect" in BCI reports; that he refused to take a polygraph test.

The state also withheld evidence concerning two other suspects and the lab report on a hair found on Ottens' sweater when her body was discovered, Chapman stated. During the 1974 trial, criminologist Rozetta Hallcock testified that the hair on Ottens' sweater was consistent with Hall's, but Chapman's ruling stated that the determination was not made from the microscopic analysis of a cross-section of the hair, but merely on the fact that the hair was "dark and curly and kinky."

HOWEVER, according to the BCI report, the hair was diseased, and could not be racially or sexually typed.

"All of this information not only would have been of material assistance to (Hall's) counsel in investigation and preparation, but much which would have been admissible at trial certainly was of such substantial importance that it might have affected the outcome of the trial," Chapman ruled. Although Hall claimed his rights were violated because of false statements made in the request for a search warrant for his 1977. When publication resumed, 1977-1978 Editor room, Chapman ruled there was "sufficient evidence" to issue the warrant, even after "excising the fraudulent state-

Chapman also ruled that the testimony of Charles Bolden - who Hall's attorneys claimed had heard Burbridge confess to murdering Ottens - "falls far short of supporting the allegations in the (postconviction relief) application. The statement by Burbridge to Bolden was not in the nature of a confession."

In conclusion, Chapman quoted Aristotle: "The knowing what is just and what unjust, men think no great instance of wisdom, because it is not hard to understand those things of which the laws speak. They forget that these are not just acts except accidentally. To be just, they must be done and distributed in a certain manner."

Sales begin today for newest edition of Hawkeye Yearbook

By Dan Hauser

The Hawkeve Yearbook 1983 edition is now available to UI students in the Union Box Office for $14, according to Susan Roe, the head of the yearbook's marketing department.

Roe said 3,200 books were ordered this year and she is hoping the sales will increase to 4,000 for next

Although only 3,200 books have been requested on a campus of almost 30,000 students, Roe said she is pleased with the number. She said an effort has been made this year to make students aware that there is a college yearbook. Roe said most of the purchasers of the books are seniors, because their portraits are in the book. The second largest group of consumers are freshmen. Roe attributes this to incoming students being used to buying a yearbook in high school.

The expected figure of 4,000 sales next year came about from the anticipated increase in enrollment figures plus a continuing increase in sales over the ears, Roe said. The yearbook has had a "hard time building up sales again" after the five-year hiatus in production.

In 1972 the yearbook was forced to stop publication due to financial problems and did not resume until Lowell Wightman blamed the students for the fiveyear slump.

WIGHTMAN said it was an era in which many students strove for individuality and a break with the past. "It was a book of the times and it suffered because of it.'

This year's theme is "Into the Fast Lane," which Roe said signifies the birth of the computer and elec-

Last year's book was entitled "Doing More with Less," which was supposed to signify the nation's having to cope with budget cuts.

The yearbook works with a budget of $50,000, Roe said. This money goes toward the production of the book and the salaries of 10 part-time staff editors. Each editor puts in 10 hours a week, with the editor-in-chief putting in 20 hours a week She said the staff raises the $50,000 from yearbook sales and donations from groups such as the UI

Along with the goal of selling 4,000 books, the yearbook also hopes to get next year's books out by October, Roe said. The Hawkeye Yearbook was first published in 1890 and was given to all seniors as a gift from the student activity fund. It was sold to other students so that it could stay in publication. Since 1890 it has been put out every year until the five-year hiatus during the mid-1970s.

West German protesters tear out fence surrounding U.S. army base

MUTLANGEN, West Germany (UPI) -Demonstrators tore down a barbed wire fence Sunday at a U.S. Army base during a second day of protests against deployment of nuclear-tipped Pershing-2 missiles,

The protesters pulled up about 30 steel posts supporting the fence during an attempted blockade of a depot of the U.S. Army's 56th Field Artillery Brigade. No arrests were made, a police spokesman

The fence, which formed the outer perimeter of the base 35 miles east of Stuttgart, was erected by soldiers after the West German parliament voted Tuesday to deploy new U.S. medium-range missiles to counter Soviet SS-20 missiles

The next day, the Soviet Union walked out of talks in Geneva with the United nuclear missiles in Europe.

At the Vatican, Pope John Paul II told pilgrims gathered in St. Peter's Square he hopes the United States and Soviet Union will resume arms control talks and he called for prayers that "the road of dialogue does not remain closed."

AS HE SPOKE, the first components for 112 cruise missiles arrived at NATO's Sigonella Naval Base for deployment in Sicily. Italy is the third NATO country to receive deliveries of the intermediaterange nuclear missiles and the only one in which anti-war forces did not immediately mount large demonstrations.

The first cruise missiles arrived at the Greenham Common base in England earlier this month, and last week the components for Pershing-2 missiles began arriving at Mutlangen, West Germany. Cruise missiles are also scheduled for deployment in Belgium and the

In Panaji, India, leaders at the 48-nation Commonwealth summit, also expressing concern at deteriorating U.S.-Soviet relations, signed a declaration demanding the superpowers resume talks aimed at bring ing peace to the world.

Their first objective must be to work for the genuine political dialogue between themselves leading to a relaxation of tensions," the declaration said.

ABOUT 500 members of West Germany's anti-missile movement conducted blockade actions at the Mutlangen base Saturday.

The demonstration outside the base was continued throughout the night, despite rain and high winds, by small groups of young people working in shifts.

The Foreign Ministry announced that Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher called for U.S.-Soviet meetings on the highest level during a meeting Saturday with a special ambassador of Romanian President Nicolae Ceausescu.

Genscher reiterated that he expects the Soviet leader Yuri Andropov's statement that deployment of Pershing-2 and cruise

Rallies marking Aquino's birthday turn to violence

MANILA, Philippines (UPI) - Club-swinging police and riot troops firing rifles clashed with hundreds of youths hurling stones and homemade bombs Sunday in a violent climax to rallies marking the birthday of slain opposition leader Benigno Aquino.

Police and hospital officials reported 17 people injured in at least three separate clashes.

Five policemen were wounded by homemade bombs during a pitched battle with rampaging youths setting street fires in the suburb of San Juan. At least 20 people were arrested, San Juan

Two people were killed when the driver of a passenger jitney swerved to miss a group of protesters in downtown Manila, police said.

Earlier, a 24-year-old fisherman carrying a concealed knife was disarmed after he came within 36 feet of Aquino's widow, Cory, as she sat on a stage during a rally in downtown

RAFAEL ORTONIO, described by his mother as "mentally unbalanced," was disarmed by opposition leader Mel Lopez and later charged with carrying a concealed weapon. Lopez said the assailant had a companion with a gun tucked in his trousers who escaped into the crowd.

Aquino, Marcos's political arch-rival, was shot to death Aug. 21 while in military custody at Manila International Airport as he arrived home from a three-year self-exile in the United States. Many Filipinos blame the government for the assassination.

The late-night rampage followed a day of nationwide protests against the government of President Ferdinand Marcos, who placed his troops on alert to prevent a repeat of earlier street rioting that left 12 people dead and hunpacked position.

Then give it a try!

Rallies were held in at least a dozen cities throughout the country, drawing more than 200,000 people.

Security was increased outside the downtown U.S. embassy after convoys of vehicles, their horns blaring, drove back and forth in front of the mission. Several people threw large firecrackers at the embassy gates and burned tires in the street outside

At least 12 people, including an American free-lance photographer, were wounded in two clashes between government troops and mobs of squatters trying to march on government fool stores in downtown Manila and in the suburb of Paco, officials said.

EIGHT OF THE wounded were civilians, four of whom were hospitalized with gunshot wounds, police said.

Hospital officials said U.S. free-lance photographer Jenny Calsi, 22, of San Francisco, was one of four civilians hit by rocks. She was taken to a hospital for treatment of a head in jury but was listed in good condition, officials

An army spokesman said the four-hour melec in Paco began when a crowd of about 200 squatters armed with sling shots, rocks, clubs and galvanized iron shields tried to march on the food center. Four Philippine Army riot troops were hit by rocks.

Troops fired M-16 rifles into the air and then charged the mob with truncheons and shields. One civilian suffered gunshot wounds, a Philippine General Hospital spokesman said.

Three other people were shot and wounded when they joined a large mob trying to march on the Manila government food store near the city's university belt.

Civil air traffic officials said it was a mystery why the Avianca airlines Boeing 747, arriving from Paris, went down on a mostly clear night within sight of the runway of Madrid's Barajas airport.

Shots? Ouch!

Get your shot yet?

If you're 25 or under, not a health science major, can't prove your immunity to measles and rubella and plan to register as a UI student in fall 1984, the UI requires you to submit to vaccination. Conveniently, the UI is "offering" free inoculations to all those in need today, Tuesday and Wednesday in the Union. After that, affected students will have to obtain vaccination at their own

Implementation of this program is the UI's response to a recommendation by the federal Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta, Ga., and a concurring report by the American College Health Association. (You may remember CDC as those nice people who saved us from the swine flu; CDC's immunization program killed more people than the disease itself.) The CDC recommendation was a response to the measles outbreak last spring at Indiana University that cost that school $250,000 to control. The only other U.S. university to make immunization a requirement for registration is Stanford University in California Iowa State University and the University of Northern Iowa each have voluntary programs.

Somewhere along the line, UI administrators decided this is a really big deal. Even though there have been no cases of measles reported to state health officials since 1980, even though only five cases of rubella have been reported in Iowa since 1981, even though UI Student Health Director Harley Feldick knows of no cases of measles or rubella at the UI in the past year, the threat has been judged serious enough to warrant the crash immunization program.

Both Feldick and Philip Hubbard, UI vice president for student services, say the UI community is particularly vulnerable to measles and rubella because 1) today's students likely were immunized prior to 1969 with vaccine that is no longer adequate and 2) the number of foreign and out-of-state students makes the introduction of these diseases to the student population a distinct possibility. Toss in the facts that health officials see no danger to individuals' health from the vaccination (except to pregnant women, who are exempt from the requirement), that CDC will provide vaccine to the UI free of charge, that attorneys have scrutinized the program and found the UI requirement legal, and you've got everything you need for an immunization program except the threat of an actual measles outbreak.

One of little faith might point out the UI's action is bound to be good public relations with the Iowa Legislature, convening in January to start cutting the state's red-ink budget; with the state Board of Regents, which the legislature will pressure to reduce its budget requests; and with the general public, which trusts the medical establishment to act decisively in the best interests of

One could as easily choose to see good intentions, a sincere concern for public health and sound medical advice as the main factors in the UI's decision. Inoculation is safe and prudent and immeasurably preferable to contracting either measles or

But the mandatory aspect of the program undermines any likely

For the UI to argue the immunization program is desirable because it will cost the institution less than an epidemic reflects only the bureaucratic side of its nature. For the UI to compel student immunization because it is wise to do so abandons the notion that students are adults who are able to conduct the affairs of their own personal health, and that the university's role in society is to foster independent thinking.

All things considered, the mandatory immunization program seems a cynical and abusive use of the UI's power to set registration requirements. A voluntary program would have been much more appropriate to the goals of the university and to the academic freedom the UI presumes to represent.

Roasting revolution

Exterior and interior threats - fed by this country - press Nicaragua today into a dilemma the Russian duma faced after its last Tsar: betray a people's movement for either totalitarian or authoritarian repression.

The U.S. government blindly forces the decision; Nicaraguan leaders plead for an alternative.

Last week, the Sandinistas announced the departure of 1,000 Cuban advisors, a goal of sending home all foreign military counselors, decreased press censorship and efforts toward negotiations with the Catholic church. In addition, the regime promised the departure of Salvadoran rebel leaders by the end of November to placate the administration's anxiety about revolutionary "export." Ruben Zamora, among the rebels' highest brass, agreed, saying he didn't want to provide the impetus for a U.S. invasion.

The claims are "difficult to evaluate," said one U.S. policymaker. "All you've got is an aroma from the kitchen. You don't have the meal in front of you."

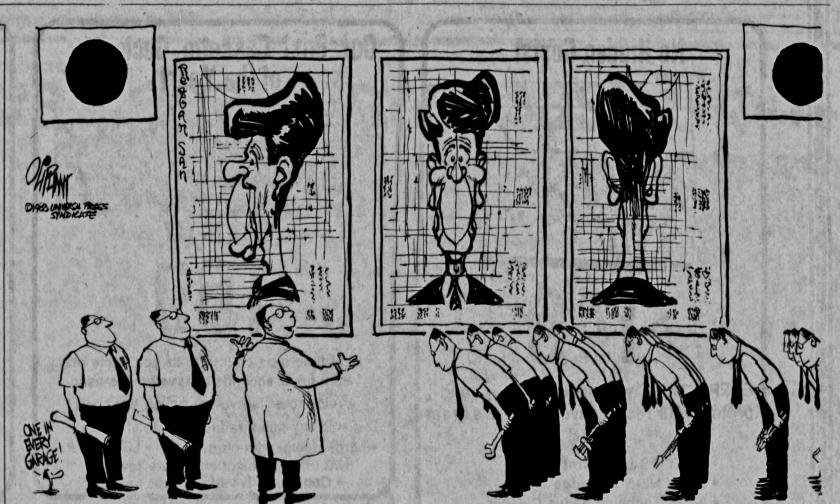

Those words are difficult to swallow, especially when a State Department official suggests how much the government may now about the internal affairs of Central American nations. Spokesman Alan Romberg said any lift of Nicaraguan repression would be welcomed by the United States, but we can't confirm hat such a move is taking place." Barely pausing to rewrite his Press papers, he countered himself: "We understand that about ,000 Cuban teachers are leaving Nicaragua temporarily for their nual end-of-the-year break in Cuba."

If the latter claim was limp fiction, if administration members eally cannot see "the meal in front" of them, why do they refuse ot only a chance to taste it, but to talk with a chef? Nicaraguan Interior Minister Tomas Borge asked for a high-level meeting with the Reagan administration this week, but his visa process is being stalled, reportedly by the White House.

Any indication the Sandinistas are easing human rights abuses gives hope they are ready to deny what Emma Goldman believed was the ultimate outcome in Russia: " ... the worst travesty on the basic idea of revolution and on all ethical values."

The administration remains untouched by hope, prefering its candy-covered militancy to the Sandinista's apparently hearty last summer and Grandma, for the first Ltime in her 80 years, has found herself genuinely alone. It was difficult, but, as deaths go, less traumatic and sudden than many. Over the past several years his emphysema (inspired by Camel straights) had worsened, and near the end cancer was discovered. He weakened steadily and finally was allowed to go in peace.

I'm proud of the way the ordeal was handled; there were no life-prolonging tactics, and according to his wishes he was cremated and the ashes spread among the graves of relatives in rural Throughout, Grandma had been strong, but when I returned home for Emotionally drained and physically posed. When I saw her standing alone I realized Grandpa really was gone.

She has to go on now and, though noticeably more fragile than before, she's endured the sudden loneliness with admirable gusto. She's making a valiant attempt at filling the void. She began asserting her independence by forcing herself to drive — a notion that left her rife with anxiety. (Grandpa had taught her once but, as she's laughingly told me in the past, the experiment only was a mild success.

Kevin

Somehow she had gotten and maintained a license over the years, but the great majority of her driving had been done from the passenger's side.)

BUT TO FREE herself from the confines of a lonely apartment, without having to rely solely on friends and relatives for transportation, she felt it necessary to relearn the process from the driver's seat. Because her license recently had expired, that meant passsing a written exam, an obstacle I looked on as a blessing in disguise. If the memorial, she had changed. the thought of Grandma's driving weakened, her frailties were fully ex- family deeply frustrated and concerned. Suddenly the stories about her first learning to drive were no longer funny; I didn't want her on the street. We went to lunch a couple of days before the exam. As I drove, we reviewed the road signs, their shapes, colors and messages. I did my best to increase her confidence, secretly wishing she would (for her own good, I thought) fail. When she did, I was

'Guess what your old granny did today? She passed her driving test!" she announced excitedly.

"Great," I lied, full of dread. "I knew you could do it." Granny was legal. Now what?

NOBODY RELISHED the thought of Grandma on the road, but, to our dismay, she'd passed the test. Our options seemed few. To suggest public her hard-earned qualifications - dent, and so far we haven't seen fit to restrictions against an 80-year-old will to defer philosophically to the judgment of the State.

Sackter Hall' would belittle history

HERE IS A proposal currently going through UI administration channels to rename North Hall after Bill Sackter.

Made by the School of Social Work and endorsed by the Student Senate, it is a well-meaning proposal. It serves to recognize a man whose story has brought recognition to the university and served as an example for mentally handicapped people everywhere. Popularized by the television movies "Bill" and "Bill: On His Own," the tale of how Sackter ran a coffee shop in North Hall after spending 44 years in mental institutions is heartwarming and inspirational. Sackter, who died this year, deserves recognition.

But renaming North Hall after Sackter is not the proper way to express this recognition, for it betrays the history of the building. The School of Social Work has occupied North Hall for only a short time. For its first 48 years, it housed, was built for and known as University High School.

University High School was founded in 1916. It moved to North Hall in 1925, and occupied the building until the state Board of Regents closed it despite protest in 1972.

Throughout its existence, U-High was a progressive school well-known among leaders in secondary education. It was designed for training high school teachers, principals and superintendents, and for experimental work in new teaching methods. It was the first school in the country to use the Iowa Test of Basic Skills as well as the ITED would be to ignore the accomplishments of a great educational institution at a time when leaders in the field are decrying the mediocre conditions of our elementary and secondary schools. It would tell the teachers who worked to make U-High special that their accomplishments were insignifi-

Department heads such as M. F Carpenter, Helen Eddy, Anna Pierce, Vernon Price, Camille LeVois and John Heaffner devoted decades to the school. What sort of message do these people receive if their building is named after a man who ran a coffee shop in it for a few years?

Many have likened the situation here to the one at Iowa State University, where many are working to name the football stadium after Jack Trice, the school's first black football player and a man who died of injuries suffered while playing for the football team. The circumstances are different: first, the football stadium in Ames is a new structure and to name it after Trice would not deny any history; second, Trice gave his life for Iowa State. It could be argued the UI, in fact, gave Sackter his life.

North Hall, as a name, means nothing and should at some time be changed, perhaps to "Bluehawk Hall," after the U-High school nickname.

While Sackter's accomplishments are undeniable, it would be too great an irony to name a building that symbolizes academic excellence after a man who couldn't read.

The Vivian Stringer era at Iowa begins tonight as the women's basketball team entertains intrastate rival Drake in the season opener for both clubs at the Carver-Hawkeye Arena, with a 7:30 p.m. tip-off time.

Stringer, the first-year coach who came to Iowa after a very successful campaign at Cheyney State College, takes a young and inexperienced Hawkeye squad up against the experienced and talented Bulldogs.

Drake is ranked anywhere from 15th to 17th in most preseason polls and returns four starters from last year's squad. Iowa, on the other hand, returns only one starter from last season's 7-20 team and could start as many as three freshmen against the Bulldogs.

BUT DRAKE COACH Carole Baumgarten, who labeled the past week's practices "terrible," says the game is even because it's the season opener for both clubs.

"It's early," she said. 'Usually we play a game before this. Sure, we're ranked and we have four starters returning and they could start three freshmen, but we're also playing early and they have us at home. That does some equalizing.'

Among the four returning starters for Drake are 6-foot-3 senior center Lorri Bauman, who was the fifth leading scorer in the nation last year, and 6-0 sophomore forward Wanda Ford, who was ne eighth best repounder in the country last year as a freshman.

JOINING BAUMAN and Ford in the Drake line-up are returning starters Kay Riek and Dawn Wumkes, both seniors. The 6-1 Riek joined Bauman and Ford on the Gateway Conference first team last year.

The only question mark on Baumgarten's Bulldog squad is the point guard position where 5-9 sophomore Mia Stockdale is being challenged by 5-9 freshman Mary Goedken. Baumgarten has decided to go with Stockdale in the opener with Iowa because of the sophomore's experience on

Iowa's lone returning starter is 5-8 point guard Lisa Anderson. In fact, Stringer is still undecided on a line-up for tonight's game. She has decided to go with 6-4 center Lisa Becker and 5-11 Lisa Long, both freshmen, along with 5-8 junior Robin Anderson in

Lohaus shoots lowa past Titans

By Steve Batterson

Last season, Iowa opened its basket-ball season with a 91-80 triumph at Brigham Young. This year, the Hawkeyes easily disposed of Illinois Wesleyan, 86-60, in their season opener Saturday at the Carver-Hawkeye

There's no doubt that the Cougars are probably a tougher opponent than the Division III Titans were, but overall, the Hawkeyes may have learned even more in Saturday's triumph.

The Iowa reserves gained some valuable playing time and that could come in handy with upcoming road trips to Louisville and Oregon State. Saturday will also be remembered as the date that 7-foot center Brad Lohaus came of age.

THE SOPHOMORE came off the bench to drill eight of 11 shots for 16 points, most of them from the 15 to 20 foot range. He also picked up 12 rebounds to pace Iowa.

"My initial reaction to the game was that it was good to see Brad Lohaus smile and have good feelings about himself," Hawkeye Coach George Raveling said after picking up his first win at the Iowa helm. "I wasn't surprised that he hit the shots. He shoots about 100 of them from the distance everyday in practice.

'He's relaxed and playing with confidence," Raveling said. "Anything he does now is a plus.'

The Hawkeyes may be adding up the benefits all season long if Lohaus has his way. "I just went into the game with the attitude I'd go into a Saturday morning scrimmage with," Lohaus

HE ALSO ADDED that putting the ball up from the outside doesn't bother him. "I could hear Coach Raveling telling me to put it up, so I felt pretty good about shooting out there. That's my bread and butter right now. My strength isn't up to par.

That's a portion of the game Lohaus is still working on - becoming the dominating figure that a seven footer for me is my aggressiveness," Lohaus said. "I've heard from a lot of people that I wasn't aggressive and I got tired of hearing it ... so I'm working a little

Though listed as a full house of 15,450, approximately 12,000 fans looked on as the Hawkeyes opened their season successfully for the sixthstraight time.

THE TITANS KEPT the game close in the early going and stayed within seven points until the eight minute mark in the first half.

According to Illinois Wesleyan Coach Dennis Bridges, the Titans accomplished what they wanted to, but things didn't work out as planned. "Part of our game plan was to force Iowa outside." he said. "We did that, but we found out they're pretty good outside

"I think they (the Hawkeyes) have everything it takes," Bridges said. "I don't remember seeing or playing against any big time team with which I've been more impressed."

Raveling said his initial concern was to set the tempo of the game early and the Hawkeye press seemed to accomplish that, forcing several Illinois Wesleyan turnovers.

Fullard's quick feet help Hawks

Assistant Sports Editor

Diving on a basketball floor is nothing new to Iowa junior Kenny Fullard.

The 5-foot-10 transfer from Arizona Western Junior College was the first guard off Coach George Raveling's bench in the Hawkeyes' 86-60 romp over Illinois Wesleyan in the Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

He brought into the game a dimension that has been missing at Iowa for quite some time - quickness.

Although he scored only three points in the contest, Fullard could be seen harassing his opponent into mistakes and hustling after those mistakes which meant hitting the arena's wooden floor a couple of times.

At the 15 minute mark of the second half, he combined with Steve Carfino to make the most spectacular play of the day. After knocking the ball away from the Titans' Eric Bridges, Fullard dove headlong in front of the Iowa bench to save the ball.

BUT HIS SAVE was heading out of bounds under the Iowa basket where Carfino dove headlong to keep the ball in. The Hawkeyes eventually got a basket out of the play by Greg Stokes.

"I've always learned to dive after any loose ball," Fullard said. "My high school coach really stressed getting on the floor. In fact, he even paddled us so we would want to get on the floor."

Raveling was impressed with the effort of his cat-quick point guard. "I felt bad about not getting Kenny in against the Italians," he said. "Kenny had a good week of practice and I knew he'd be ready to play.

It's a small miracle that Fullard is even a member of the Hawkeye team. After finishing his career at Arizona Western, he considered San Diego State and Utah State before signing with Drury College, an NAIA school in New Mexico.

THAT WAS BEFORE Raveling got the Iowa job. "Coach (Iowa assistant Joedy) Gardner got in touch with me

Rechenmacher wins high bar title

By Steve Batterson

Ron Rechenmacher capped off the first half of the Iowa men's gymnastics season by winning the horizontal bar title at the Midwest Open in Rolling Meadows, Ill., last weekend.

The senior won the event with a 9.55 score after posting a 9.75 score in the preliminaries against a tough field of

"I didn't do a lot of big stuff," Rechenmacher said. "I just did a simple routine. The bar was pretty slippery and a lot of the other guys were having trouble so I decided to stick with the basics.'

Iowa's Stu Breitenstine finished second on the event with a 9.5 score. Breitenstine also advanced to the finals in the vault, tying for second with Tom Glielmi of Northern Illinois. Both gymnasts finished with a 9.5 in

DUNN ALSO CITED the performances of freshman Tom Auer and Rechenmacher on the floor exercise, Lenny Lucarello on the vault, Kyle Shanton and BreMiller on the horizontal bar and Brad Smith and Joe Petricek on the parallel bars.

"Brad Smith probably had the best parallel bars routine of his life," Dunn said. "But he had some trouble with his dismount and ended up with an 8.75."

As a team, Iowa decided earlier this season not to enter the team competition at the Midwest meet and as expected, Iowa State walked away with the title. "They were really the only team

We could have taken second like we have the past couple of years, but I really don't know if we would have really sure whether we competed any better since we didn't enter the team competition or not.'

IOWA NOW FACES a month-long break in its schedule before competing in a meet similar to the Midwest Open in early January - Michigan State's Spartan Invitational.

"I don't know if we're ever as far along as we'd like to be," Dunn said about the progress of his team so far this season. "We're ahead of where we have been in the past few years. We're off to a much better start and hopefully we'll finish even stronger.'

Dunn said the main work that lies ahead of the Hawkeyes includes strengthening the nine-man team that is used in dual meet competition. "We've got to work to make our nineman team as strong as possible," he

'Yet-to-be-proven' lowa wrestlers give Robinson an optimistic feeling

By Robert Ryser

The Hawkeyes wrestled without three of r starters at the Northern Open in fadison, Wis., Saturday, but some encouraging performances from yet-to-beproven Iowa grapplers gave Coach J Robinson a positive feeling for his squad's progress so far this season.

Sophomore Matt Egeland (118) didn't compete due to a hamstring injury and All-Americans Jim Zalesky (158) and Duane Goldman (177) were sidelined with knee inuries sustained in the Minnesota adrangular, Nov. 19.

The two knee injuries are not serious, and Zalesky and Goldman will be back on he mat in the home opener against Cleveland State on Thursday in the Carver-Hawkeye Arena, according to Robinson. he dual also opens Iowa's dual meet

BUT IT WASN'T the 158 or the 177-pound

weight classes that Robinson was concerned about during Saturday's competition, which included teams from Iowa State, Michigan and Wisconsin

Robinson had said at the beginning of the season that there were four or five weights where Iowa's wrestlers had to come out and prove themselves in order to earn starting positions.

Greg Randall (134) and 167-pounder Lindley Kistler came through for Iowa, Saturday, as they won individual championships at the Northern Open, along with 190-pound NCAA champion Pete Bush.

"Randall and Kistler proved they were worthy of being rated this year," Robinson said. "And the two wrestlers who finished ahead of (Marty) Kistler at 150 were older

Iowa's wrestling in Saturday's competition much of which was mental.

"We had problems that weren't really technical," Robinson said. "We had some mental lapses which cost us some matches ... you can't win with mental

"If we got anything out of the match it was that we have to be aware of what it

Robinson said the mental attitude that must accompany a successful wrestler is a state of mind that has to be relearned every

"We're going to talk to (the wrestlers) about the way they should perceive winning, during practice this week," he said.

Although the Iowa line-up is more visible after their two recent competitions, Robinson said he should be down to his 14 top wrestlers by the beginning of next week, following the dual with Cleveland State on Thursday and Saturday's competition at the Northern Iowa Invitational

Nan Doak waged a battle with the top nen's cross country runners in the on for the second straight time last ekend, and once again, only one ete could top Iowa's standout.

The Hawkeye senior, along with nmate Jenny Spangler, competed the prestigous The Athletics Coness national cross country chamionships on Saturday, in State College, Pa.

As was the case at the NCAA national race on Nov. 21, both Doak and North Carolina State's Betty Jo Springs fought for individual honors at TAC and the Wolfpack star came out

Doak crossed the chute in second ace with a time of 16:47.3 that also lattered the course record, while pangler finished 30th in 17:40.3.

Because Springs broke away from he rest of the field at around the two mile marker, Doak said she just wanled to secure a second position in the lough field that contained most of the lop 30 at the NCAA's, along with almost all of the best unattatched runrs in the country.

"I SLOWED DOWN at one point of he race, around two and a half miles, but I broke away at the end." Doak said. "I was just trying to keep second because the top six qualify for the World Cross Country Championships." Last year, Doak finished 10th at TAC and was the ninth American placer, but she ran in the world race when a

HBO conquers its humble beginnings

the past, present and future of Time Inc.'s Home Box Office pay-cable television service.

By Craig Wyrick

LEVEN YEARS ago this month, Richard Nixon had just been reelected president of the United States; American troops were being slowly withdrawn from Vietnam; "All in the Family" was renewed for its second season; and Time Inc., as a part of its diversification program, launched Home Box Office, a national pay-cable station.

Today, that small outgrowth of the Time Inc. empire has become the source of over half a billion dollars in revenue and has over 12 million subscribers. Most important, HBO is changing the way Americans watch television and go to movies. In the last few years, HBO has been the biggest influence in the entertainment field since television came into America's homes in the late '40s.

And in the future, HBO will change the shape of films and TV to come. In this series of three articles, we'll look at where HBO has been, where it is, where it's going, and why everyone from Hollywood to Las Vegas to New York to Paris is keeping one eye on their cable television sets and one hand on their pocketbooks:

HBO floundered in its infant years. (For trivia buffs, the first film shown was Sometimes a Great Notion, with Paul Newman.) But in those early years, an important decision was made by Gerald M. Levin, then a Time Inc. executive - HBO would charge a monthly rate instead of the pay-per-view basis (where the consumer would pay for each film they watched). Here was business genius: The subscriber pays a flat price at the beginning of the month, and this way, all

This marketing strategy also allows HBO to program flops without any great loss. The Nielsen ratings are of little importance to HBO - they only have to program enough quality programs to convince the subscriber to renew each month. Advertising, which discriminates against individual shows on network television, is not used on HBO, and there are no future plans to use it. The weight of mass popularity is no longer on an in-

IN 1975, the next important step was taken by Time Inc. when it bought onto the RCA SATCOM 1 satellite (at a mere $6.5 million), which allows HBO to transmit their program simultaneously to local cable companies across the nation. It was just the boost that was needed to send HBO profits to the sky.

So why were the movie studios sitting on their duffs while HBO was moving in on a territory that "infringed" on the movie business? The film industry usually jumps on the bandwagon years after a trend has become a reality, and the reality of pay-cable was finally staring the six major studios straight in the eyes. In 1980, in an amazing act

from a new 'Amityville' production of hindsight, the "Big Six" (Columbia, MCA/Universal, Paramount, UA-MGM, 20th Century Fox, Warner Brothers) invested $15 million in an HBO-like system called Premiere. The company was smashed by the Sherman Antitrust Act, the same law that, in 1948, took the studios out of the theater-chain ownership business. The studios had made the major mistake of thinking that video cassettes and video discs were the wave of the future. It was cable TV instead.

IT MAY BE a fatal error for some studios. In 1927, Warner Brothers, on the verge of folding, made a last gasp attempt by investing in sound movies. The Jazz Singer and sound motion pictures saved Warner Brothers. Pay-cable could have saved some of the studios, but by initially ignoring it, it now looks like cable-TV in general, and HBO in specific, might spell the end of the weaker studios like the struggling UA-MGM

Columbia, considered "dirty doublecrossers" by the other studios, has joined with HBO and CBS to create what may be the 'Big Number Seven," a studio built from the know-how and finances of the three companies. Tri-Star (originally called Nova and jokingly called "Diet Columbia" after Coca-Cola bought Columbia) is planning to produce 12 to 18 films a year, starting with The Natural (starring Robert Redford). Columbia will distribute the films to the theaters; HBO will have exclusive pay-cable rights; and CBS will have exclusive rights to the network showings.

It's been a fast climb for HBO to reach the position of a "Big Seven." Since 1977, HBO has helped to finance over 100 films to give them exclusive pay-cable rights. This "prebuy" strategy is both smarter and cheaper if a film becomes a big hit, the distributors will charge exorbitant amounts for television rights. By pre-buying, HBO has acquired the rights for such hits as On Golden Pond, Tootsie and Sophie's Choice at a fraction of what it would have cost to buy into them after their success. A striking example of "success inflation" is Walter Hill's semi-successful 48 Hrs., asking a ridiculous $4 million to $6 million for television rights. And by prebuying, HBO helps to get projects struggling for funds off the ground - they have a direct influence on which products will be produced. Today they have over $1 billion committed to 75 or more projects at the other major studios. HBO has its hands in other pies, too:

1. AN INVESTMENT GROUP, including Orion Pictures, has bought controlling interest in the dying film company Filmways, and hopes to produce enough projects to rival the major studios. (Currently, the major studios produce 60 films a year, and distribute another 60 made by independents.) Without the financial aid of HBO, this project would never have been initiated. HBO, of course, receives exclusive pay-cable rights on ten of the films produced by this new com-

2. An investment and movie production program called Silver Screen Partners aims to raise $125 million to finance at least 12 pictures. HBO, with exclusive rights in hand, helped the financing of this "small" project.

3. On the overseas market, HBO, Columbia, and 20th Century Fox joined Gold Crest Films in organizing a new British company to produce programming for British pay-cable.

HBO is on its way to becoming the largest movie-financing conglomerate in the history of motion pictures, and that's made some people wary of the power HBO will have over the entertainment world.

Amityville 3-D

Produced by Stephen F. Kester. Written by William Wales. Directed by Richard Fleischer. Rated PG.

Showing at the Astro could have used a few 3-D effects to spice things up). But Amityville 3-D does have its moments when the 3-D effects are used with maximum impact (i.e. sometimes it almost scares you out of your pants).

AS FAR as the story is concerned, remember this is a 3-D movie - the plot has little to do with 3-D moviemaking. Amityville 3-D does an admirable job of trying to string together the series of 3-D effects, and I'd be tempted to say that the screenwriter, William Wales, even wrote the story before conjuring up the 3-D ef-

John Baxter (Tony Roberts, Woody Allen's buddy in Annie Hall and Manhattan), despite the warnings of the neighbors and his wife, moves into, pause, The House (dramatic flourish...dun, dun). Scary, huh kids? Soon, the fly population grows, his daughter is killed temporarily (you can get killed temporarily in 3-D movies), and strange things, like flying debris and shrinking walls, alerts Baxter to the fact that maybe, just maybe, something is amiss with the house he moved into.

Swing into the Poltergeist phase. Baxter calls in a parapsychologist, Eliot (Robert Joy), who tells him his daughter is being held by the spirits in the house. Eliot brings with him all types of recording gear, which will serve the function of flying around and blowing up real good for the finale. Of course, there's a real big monster that lives in the bottom of the Pit to Hell (do not pass go, do not collect $200), who jumps out into the camera, and our laps. The house is not, as you may have guessed from the Poltergeist connection, sucked into a void, rather it is just blown up many times (which makes for some neat 3-D effects). Do Baxter and his daughter survive? Does a bear sit in the woods'

DIRECTOR Richard Fleischer, son of cartoonist Richard Fleischer, has been responsible for a mixed bag of middle-ofthe-road movies, and a number of turkeys. 20,000 Leagues Under the Sea and The Vikings were passable films for a "young" director, but his material, and his handling of it, has gradually gotten worse. Fleischer's Che! is listed as one of the Fifty Worst Films of All Time, and Mandingo, Tora! Tora! Tora!, and Dr. Doolittle were generally ripped to shreds by most critics (Note: Dr. Doolittle was nominated for a Best Picture Oscar, but not for a Bwana Award). 3-D films suit Fleischer's style (or lack of it) just fine.

The advertisements for Amityville 3-D disavow any connection to the other two Amityville movies - "Not a sequel to The Amityville Horror or Amityville II" declare the ads. Well, that's just fine. Why would Amityville 3-D want to be connected to those pieces of trash? It stands alone as one of the best of the trash movies, the best

'Cha' is a catalog of Latin-based rhythms

By Paul P. Soucek

SENT the Australian-based Joe

Camilleri has been in the music scene since long before the microchip or the resulting Fake Drum, aka the LinnDrum. Better known as Jo Jo Zep, Camilleri - with the help of his dashing band the Falcons - has released two sleepers stateside and six back at the Aussie outback. Perhaps slightly depressed by unsuccessful attempts at an American breakthrough, perhaps going on his own Walkabout, Camilleri stayed away from the studios for two years, returning finally to forge his most recent Cha.

Cha reflects a massive streamlining and an attempt to link onto the studio shine sound that sells these days. The arrangements are careful, each layer is almost guaranteed to catch, and catch means sell. Sometimes the album has the air of an artist who has been given a last chance: A series of high peaks and mediocre plateaus, as if both the "on" and "off" days had to be spooled - no second chances.

IT VERY WELL could be the fact that the 35-year-old songwriter was given a stipend of three weeks studio time to complete the entire record; limitations must be considered. Camilleri teams up with keyboardist/producer Peter Solley who he worked with earlier in his career and leans on heavily for the formation of Cha. Solley and Split Enz' Edward Rayner (who produces two cuts on the record) want to ensure that the listener tastes their production. "Losing Game" is a chief example: Rayner's keyboards almost completely comprises the ballad, while Camilleri croons through the latest in studio polish. Although our Jo Jo Zep has given this opener a wonderful, longliving and haunting hook, the atmospheric pace that is set here is completely different from the straightforwardness of earlier records such as Screaming Targets or Step

During his absence from the studio, Camilleri must have been listening non-stop to calypso, reggae and latinbeat oriented musics; Cha is a catalog of sambas, tangos, salsas, waltzes and beguines - the rhythms carefully programmed into the fake congas and cabasas of the LinnDrum, Camilleri speaks of his musical behavior modifications as a mirror to "what the people want." Take that as you may, yet nothing - refering to producer Solley and the digital drummer named Linn - could distort his knack of penning hit material, whether it hits the charts or not.

SOMEWHERE DURING his upbringing on the 122 square miles of Malta, steeped in Foster's Lager on the Aussie range, Camilleri has synthesized an original formula out of chunks from differing stylistic backgrounds. The beat seems welltraveled in the Carribean and South American; Jeff Burstin (an ex-Falcon) uses his guitar as a grinding counterpoint to Camilleri's smoothly-shifting vocals; the horns are accurately transplanted from the swing era while Solley binds things together with his keyboards, occasionally allowing his piano to have a mind of its own. This incongruous amalgamation works and

"King Kong" shows the formula's swift reaction; Camilleri is haunted by the enchanting voice of Jane Clifton ("one ticket to Melbourne, please"). The cut opens with a bass prance and simple beat, then an unnerving silence is installed between the catchy intro and the body of the song — a perfect pop voice reeling around the razoredged horns and quivering rhythms. Finally Camilleri joins the stalking arrangement of the intro with the chorus, the two already existing parts of the song giving the listener an illusion of a new hook.

ON "MAN Is Just a Boy," Camilleri fools you again with his "intro and body won't mix" principle. Burstin's guitar bursts in with hot flashes of the earlier Falcon vim, the horns punch him back, but suddenly this battle becomes second to the uptown sound of the main portion.

One cut later, Camilleri is using this same city sound as a backdrop for 'Competition," a feisty little mover that pairs Clifton with the lead man as they test their respective leashes in a relationship caught somewhere betwixt the vibraphone and sweep of the horns.

"Slave for Love" is a tango of warning, Camilleri sings like Bela Lugosi, overacting in a ridiculous way, while Solley turns Montovani and Burstin plays a slow, low, outback guitar solo cooling his pick for the meltdown of the final cut.

This closer, "Can't Decide," is a roaring piece of rock, Burstin makes up for his low-key, essentially rhythm guitar work throughout the rest of Cha. No more hiding behind the LinnDrum or Solley here; Simon Gyllies' bass joins in the high-strung rebellion and Jo Jo Zep has no choice but to return to a nostalgic burst of Falcon voltage.

Cha can be sluggish at times but it has held it's slot on the testing turntable, regardless of whether it ever holds a slot on Billboard's charts. Indeed Camilleri has changed - he is industry conscious without being a caterer. Cha is fine pop, certainly nothing less.

Maybe the LinnDrum wasn't sent to Australia; maybe it was ordered.

Networks compete with holiday shows

NEW YORK (UPI) - OK, so a lot of you don't believe Santa Claus can get you anything your heart

How about if there were a lower-level spirit who could put anything you wanted on TV for Christmas?

A whole group of them right now are double-checking old lists compiled by the A.C. Nielsen elves and deciding who's going to get what for the holidays.

They are bringing back some old favorites, along with some new

In the animation department, NBC promises specials starring the Chipmunks and the Smurfs. CBS will show "Rudolph the Red Nosed Reindeer" on Dec. 3; the 1970 version of "A Christmas Carol" on Dec. 4; "A Snow White Christmas" on Dec. 7; "A Charlie Brown Christmas" and Dr. Seuss' "How the Grinch Stole Christmas" on Dec. 12.

Among new shows, ABC on Dec. 5 will show "The Best Christmas Pageant Ever," starring Loretta ("MASH") Swit and based on the Barbara Robinson contemporary children's classic in which the meanest kids in town discover the meaning of the season. The kids steal the show in this delightful family comedy.

NBC IS offering a Mac Davis special and another celebrity program tentatively titled 'Christmas in Washington" that will be taped in the capital Dec. 11. It also will air the Orange Bowl parade on New Year's Eve and the Rose Bowl Jan. 2.

A "Hallmark Hall of Fame" special on CBS Dec. 6 will be John Steinbeck's "The Winter of Our Discontent," starring Donald Sutherland, Teri Garr, Tuesday Weld and E.G. Marshall. On Dec.

Television

11, the same network will air "All Star Party for Frank Sinatra,' and, on Dec. 20, "General Foods Golden Showcase" will present "The Gift of Love, a Christmas Story," starring Lee Remick, Angela Lansbury and Polly Holli-

CBS will usher in the New Year with the fifth annual "CBS' Happy New Year, America," a live music and dance celebration broadcast from various locations in New York's Time Square, at Disney World and across the country. It also has scheduled "The CBS Tournament of Roses Parade and Pageant" and "The Cotton Bowl Festival Parade.'

For viewers who think New Year's isn't New Year's without a Lombardo at the Waldorf-Astoria, the syndicated "New Year's Eve with Bill Lombardo and His Orchestra: An American Tradition Renewed," will feature the nephew of late bandleader Guy Lombardo in the hotel's Grand Ballroom.

BILL'S Uncle Guy and his Royal Canadians played the Waldorf every New Year's Eve from 1929 until the bandleader's death in 1976, when Bill Lombardo took

The celebration was carried by CBS through 1979, when the nephew left the band and CBS switched to a New Year's special hosted by Dick Clark that originated from Las Vegas and the

The program also will feature Miss America 1984, Vanessa Williams, singer Bobby Vinton and original "Man on the Street" comedian Steve Allen in Times Square.

Rather: Journalists tend to 'lean right' politically anchorman Dan Rather said Sunday says, 'Man, I don't even real that most U.S. journalists are politically right of center, a majority likely voted for Ronald Reagan and print reporters should feel superior to broadcasters.

January issue of Playboy magazine, Rather also said women are the underdogs in television news - even at CBS and he too could be guilty of stereotyping them. The interview was released Sunday.

Rather said no one should depend solely on television for news.

FAMILY HEALTH CARE

DOCTOR'S ORDERS

Today's medicines are far more potent and far more effective than ever before. Because of this, they demand far more care and attention to your doctor's directions.

That's why we've instituted a system of auxiliary labeling in all of our pharmacies. Powerful reminders and important instructions - from warnings about possible misuse to information concerning side effects. Our pharmacists will place these labels, when needed, on every prescription that they fill.

We want to work with you to help you better understand the medicines that your doctor prescribes. With auxiliary labeling. Just what the doctor ordered...from your Family Pharmacy.
