William Ambrisco, who was elected to an at-large seat on the Iowa City Council Nov. 8, spent more money during his campaign than he will earn in his first year as a councilor. Papers filed with the Johnson County

Auditor's Office Nov. 22 state that Ambrisco's campaign committee spent $5,465.21 to get the former Iowa City Chamber of Commerce president elected. Ambrisco will earn $5,000 a year as a city councilor.

"It's the largest amount I've heard of being spent" (in a campaign for the Iowa City Council), UI Political Science Professor Russell Ross said Monday. "I'm not surprised at the figure with all the advertising and such he was doing.'

Ambrisco's documents state that his campaign committee spent: $613.56 at AMBRISCO, WHO WAS the top vote getter in the election — receiving 4,593 votes - said it was his "broad-based" support rather than his campaign operating fund that helped him win a seat on the council.

"I think it (fund raising) certainly helped, but I certainly don't credit that with being the main element," Ambrisco said. "I think it stems from the fact that I had broad-based support in the community."

Ambrisco said his campaign committee "did not put much effort" into soliciting contributions. He said his

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) - Five heavy artillery shells slammed into the U.S. Marine compound Monday, inflicting the first casualty on fresh troops sent two weeks ago and forcing the Americans into their highest alert.

The attack on the Marine position was the third in less than 24 hours. The new shelling came as President Amin Gemayel held talks with Italian leaders and Pope John Paul in Rome in Despite last-minute concern about he weather, Columbia rocketed flawlessly off its launch pad on schedule at 10 a.m. Iowa time, to begin a nine-day mission, the longest flight yet for the shuttle program.

Six hours later, Massachusetts Institute of Technology biomedical engineer Byron Lichtenberg activated an experiment in Spacelab to study the effects of weightlessness on diseaseighting blood cells.

astronauts also carried out experiments in cosmic radiation and space physics, and conducted studies on the causes of space sickness and the ways the body adapts to weightlessness.

In one study Owen Garriott hopped up and down, tethered to the floor of Spacelab, in a project scientists hope will shed some light on balance disorders on Earth.

LICHTENBERG, GARRIOTT and the other members of the record-sized space crew - commander John Young, co-pilot Brewster Shaw, and scientists Robert Parker and Ulf Merbold, will conduct 72 separate experiments working 12-hour shifts around Researchers in 14 nations already were anticipating a rich return from the Spacelab flight.

"What a venture this is! Our goose bumps have goose bumps," Bill Bock of the Marshall Space Center in Huntsville, Ala., told the astronauts from Houston. The Marshall Space Center is directing the NASA portion of the Spacelab project.

Spacelab alters future of space experimentation

SPACE CENTER, Houston (UPI) -The start Monday of round-the-clock experiments aboard Spacelab, nestled safely in the cargo pouch of the shuttle Columbia, marked a new era in space

"From now on, science in space will be done in a different manner compared to the past," said Ulf Merbold, the first European to fly in a shuttle.

Designed, built and funded by 10 member nations of the European Space Agency, Spacelab is a 23-footlong, 13-foot-diameter pressurized cylinder designed to allow scientists to work in a shirt-sleeve environment. It is anchored within the cargo bay of the shuttle, attached to Columbia's flight cabin by an 18-foot tunnel.

The 33,584-pound lab will remain in the shuttle's cargo compartment for the whole flight - with the ship's payload bay doors open in orbit - and be brought back to Earth, along with 38 different instruments that will be used to conduct 72 scientific studies.

Although the top priority of the ninth shuttle flight is to verify the ability of Spacelab and its complicated systems to function in space, officials hope it will further demonstrate its versatility as a reusable research base for a variety of science.

NASA Administrator James Beggs applauds Spacelab as the catalyst of a new era in space science.

"I PERSONALLY believe that this mission will demonstrate that we have a system which is versatile enough to accommodate almost anyone who wants to fly," he said.

"That has enormous significance for the future because in the future we hope to fly scientists, engineers and maybe even folks who have not been trained to the degree that we have trained this crew," Beggs said.

Unemployment rate in county decreases

Although the October unemployment rate in Johnson County dipped to 2.2 percent, the lowest it has been in several years, it is not expected to fall any lower, according to Tom Bullington, the Iowa City manager for Job Service of Iowa.

"It's probably gotten as low as it will," Bullington said. "Historically it (unemployment rate in Johnson County) has not been lower than 2 percent." Bullington added that a 2percent unemployment rate is considered full employment.

The October rate, which was onetenth of one percent less than September's rate, leaves Johnson County with approximately 1,000 people unemployed, according to a report from Job Service of Iowa. The county's total labor force is just under 47,000 people.

The October unemployment rate statewide was 4.5 percent. This was also a drop of one-tenth of one percent from September.

While most businesses in the county were hiring "a little bit of everything" last month, the seasonal construction and retail industries hired the most people in October, Bullington said.

THE UNEMPLOYMENT rate might rise in November due to the cold weather that affects the construction industry, Bullington said. But the decrease in construction hiring might be offset by the increase in retail hiring for the holiday season, he said. If unemployment does rise next month "it won't be significant."

Bullington said Johnson County has a low unemployment rate because there is "very little fluctuation in our economy. The industry we do have in the county is very constant. There are no large-scale layoffs." He said the UI is the best example of this type of

Larry Vienga, labor marketing analyst with Job Service of Iowa, also said Johnson County's low unemployment rate is due to the UI. "The labor force is a large part of that (UI)," he Counties surrounding Johnson County had higher unemployment rates in October. Linn County's rate was 5.3 percent; Cedar County's rate was 3.1 percent; Washington County's rate was 3.2 percent; and Muscatine County's rate was 5.1 percent, according to the Job Service report.

Vienga said Johnson County and Story County (where Iowa State University is located) have comparable unemployment rates. The unemployment rate for October in Story County was two percent out of a labor force that has approximately 39,000 people. Johnson and Story counties "are pretty much the same," he said.

to using them (loans) as a routine part of their financing. We had one student, three or four years ago, who had received 42 or 44 shortterm loans during the time he was here," he said.

THAT WAS POSSIBLE, Ryan said, because in the past, students were eligible for new loans 30 days after paying off their previous loan. # Epidemiology aids health care

Is lung cancer caused by smoking? When is drinking water a health hazard? Why is there a high rate of leukemia in Iowa?

Five UI Hospital epidemiologists are asking and exploring these questions.

Dr. Peter Isacson, head of the hospital's preventive medicine department, specializes in cancer research and is concerned with "environmental causes" of cancer.

An example of his work, he said, would be determining the rate of cancer in a population where the drinking water is considered to be hazardous. "If there is a high rate, then we have an association," he said.

A two-year training period is required for certification in epidemiology. Although most epidemiologists have government jobs, many work in universities or in private practice.

Technically, epidemiologists cannot prove anything, Isacson said. However, if a study is conclusive, the epidemiological report is taken into consideration.

Although the information provided by some studies has resulted in the printing of the warning "the surgeon general has determined that cigarette smoking is dangerous to your health," Isacson said, "No one has ever proven that lung cancer is caused by smoking.

ISACSON SAID studies have an impact on health care because prevention is the first step toward treatment. "If you can find the cause, then the treatment should be much easier," he said. Another study has discovered an area in Iowa with higher-than-normal levels of radioactivity in groundwater. There is a higher rate of cancer among people drinking the water, Isacson said.

Isacson has also found that farmers are "in much better shape" than people in other professions. He discovered farmers are at a lower risk of heart disease than people who live in urban

Another UI epidemiologist, Dr. Robert Wallace, is currently studying the risk factors of coronary artery disease, which he calls "the number-one killer of Western man." Wallace has found that high blood pressure and high cholesterol levels create high risk factors for contracting the

Dr. Philip Brachman, assistant to the director of the communicable disease center in Atlanta, Ga., said in a recent speech at the International Center in the Jefferson Building, epidemiologists are trying to improve the "state of complete physical, mental and social well-being" of all peoONE WAY to reach that goal is to teach people in other countries to utilize their resources better, Epidemiologists also study epidemics. For example, when smallpox was considered an epidemic in 1945, epidemiologists studied each of the affected populations. When cases were reported, vaccinations were called for immediately in each area until finally the disease was eradicated world-wide, Brachman said.

Epidemiology's greatest drawback is that it takes a long time to produce a conclusive study, Isacson said. The leukemia study took 31/2 years,

Isacson notes that epidemiologists often do not receive as much praise or recognition as other medical researchers. "In the long run," he said, it is the scientists who work at the cellular level of research who get most of the public recognition. "I guess you could say we're the Rodney

Dangerfields of science," he said. Because their studies are conducted in an unusual manner, epidemiology is not as easily accepted as other sciences, Isacson said. "It's a different kind of research because most of our work doesn't involve anything in the lab. It involves going out and interviewing people

Studying large populations, rather than concentrating on one case, is something that people in the field of science are not used to, he said.

Two charged with theft in check cashing incident

By Patricia Thorn

Two people claiming to work for a nonexistent Iowa City recording studio were charged with second-degree theft Saturday after checks written on the studio's recently-opened account bounced, according to Johnson County District Court records.

Paul E. Roden, 23, of Mundelein, Ill., opened a checking account at the American Federal Savings and Loan Association in Iowa City under the business name of Universal Recording Studio with $150 in cash Nov. 18. On the same day, Roden issued a check from the account for $130.71 to Suzanne F.

On Nov. 19, Kainz, 19, of Round Lake Beach, Ill., opened her own account with the check from the recording studio at the Towncrest branch of the First National Bank.

On Nov. 22, Kainz brought a $683.97 check signed by Roden from the recording studio's account to the First National Bank. First National contacted American Federal and discovered there were not adequate funds to cover the check and refused to deposit it.

Kainz then went to the First National Bank branch in Coralville and leposited the same check, receiving $400 of the check in cash.

On Nov. 23, Kainz returned to the Coralville branch of the First National Bank and attempted to deposit a $697.41 check from the recording studio into her account. She asked for $300 of the amount in cash. The bank refused the deposit "believing something might be wrong since she brought another check right away." Kainz was then allowed to remove $200 in cash from the money she had previously deposited in her account. On Nov. 25, Kainz returned to the Coralville branch and attempted to deposit the check that had previously been refused. By now the bank was

More spaces result in fewer parking tickets

By Randy Murphy Special to The Daily Iowan

More downtown parking spaces and occasional lenient enforcement have contributed to the decline in the number of UI and Iowa City parking tickets issued, officials say.

About 3,000 fewer Iowa City parking tickets have been written so far this fiscal year compared to last year, Iowa City Treasurer Nancy Heaton said. Last year, 126,000 tickets were written. In the average year about 124,000 tickets are written by Iowa City authorities, she said.

UI officials have also noted a slight decline in tickets written by campus authorities. W.L. Binney, assistant director of UI parking, said about 90,000 violations are cited each year at the UI. The number of tickets written up by the UI each month ranges from side Iowa.

IT IS EASY for the UI to catch up with these people, he said. "All it takes is to trace the ownership of the vehicle through the law enforcement teletype network.

The city puts violators on a tow list if they accumulate $15 or more in tickets. "The usual procedure is to tow or to take people to court," Heaton said.

UI and city officials agree most tickets are handed out when special events occur in town, such as home football games or downtown sales.

However, UI parking officials have granted leniency during some special periods. Binney said, "Enforcement is lifted in a number of areas to facilitate students and faculty coming to the campus for the first time, or coming

BEFORE THE ELECTION, Ambrisco was the only at-large candidate who would not disclose an estimate of his operating fund to the DI. Iowa law states that a candidate does not have to file a final financial disclosure statement until 30 days after the election. # Council eyes parking regulations

By Carlos Trevino

Although Iowa City Mayor Mary Neuhauser has said before that city parking regulations is not her favorite issue, the Iowa City Council Tuesday night tentatively resolved another parking problem prior to the expected adoption of the city's new zoning ordinance and map.

The council informally agreed that under the new zoning ordinance and map - which the council has approved on first reading and is expected to adopt Dec. 20 - the number of parking spaces required for "transient homes" ould be reduced.

'Everything we do seems to be for parking," Neuhauser said, adding that sometimes she has felt the city should dissolve all parking requirements "and let everyone scramble (for parking)."

The problem was raised by operators of Emergency Housing Project Inc., an organization that is hoping to purchase a home in a low-density zone where more parking spaces are required per resident, according to Don Schmeiser, director of the city's department of planning and program development.

Schmeiser said the transient homes would give people who have no home, cannot afford a hotel or motel, or who are temporarily in the Iowa City area a place to stay. As many as 15-20 homes could be allowed in the city.

UNDER THE PROPOSED ordinance the parking provisions for emergency shelters - which provide temporary housing to domestic violence victims, the homeless and youths — would require one parking space for every four residents.

Neuhauser suggested the council 'exempt (emergency shelters) entirely from parking requirements," but Councilor Larry Lynch said some parking requirements are needed to prevent parking problems at the tran-

Lynch said that if the city reduced parking space requirements for transient homes the same would have to apply to all zonings. He asked, "Is it fair to put them (transient homes) in multifamily zonings?"

City Attorney Robert Jansen agreed the parking regulations are necessary, "You don't want 18 cars pulling off the interstate and clogging the streets."

Jansen, asked by Neuhauser to give a legal opinion on the matter, said, "It seems to me we have a very special

(housing) use.... It's a good idea (transient housing), but we haven't dealt with them in the new ordinance." "Maybe it should be addressed as a special use," Jansen said of the proposed transient homes.

Neuhauser added that transient housing should be located in highvisibility areas, not in single-family residential areas, to "let people know they are there and available.

Neuhauser said, "I don't think anyone wants to put up a big neon sign saying 'flophouse' Schmeiser said the council would, in effect, be allowing the transient homes to exist "under non-compliance (with city parking regulations) but by changing the zoning and the uses, the homes would be in less non-compliance than

Teachers' sick leave plan criticized

By Steve Sands

A spokesman for the Iowa City School Board criticized the teachers' union for its attempt to keep sick leave separate from insurance benefits, as the second round of negotiations began

Monday night. Teacher salaries and the board's previous proposal for merit pay were not discussed at this negotiation ses-

Ted Lepic of the Iowa City Education Association proposed that sick leave for teachers continue to be separate from insurance benefits in next year's contract, but Al Azinger, board spokesman, said he sees no difference between the two.

Currently sick leave and insurance are two separate articles in the teacher's contract, however, the board negotiators proposed in the last we could find one that says it is not, negotiation session to bring sick leave probably more than one.

under the insurance article. Azinger said the reasoning behind this move is to make the teachers aware that sick leave is an insurance benefit and an expense to the district.

A TEACHER RECEIVES sick leave pay from a fund set up by the ad-

"That kind of gamble, putting some money into a pool and taking it out to pay the benefits, is what insurance is," Azinger said.

But Lepic disagreed. "We don't see that as that kind of a benefit and we feel it should be separated," he said. "And most people would agree with us that sick leave is not insurance." Azinger then challenged Lepic to ask any insurance company to rule on whether sick leave was an insurance benefit, and Lepic responded by saying, "For each company that you find,

"What we're saving is we feel that sick leave, if nothing else, should be separated because you (the administration) are the carrier and not the insurance industry," Lepic said.

The union negotiators also resubmitted sabbatical leave as a part of next year's contract, which the board rejected in its initial response.

As stated in the union's proposal, "A sabbatical leave shall be granted to an employee by the board for study, including study in another area of specialization, for travel, or for other reasons of value to the school system."

UNION NEGOTIATORS also asked for a total of 30 days of association leave — to be utilized by teachers who are officers in the Iowa City Education

Linda Lopos of the ICEA said this proposal would ensure that the association leadership has enough leave time to take care of business.

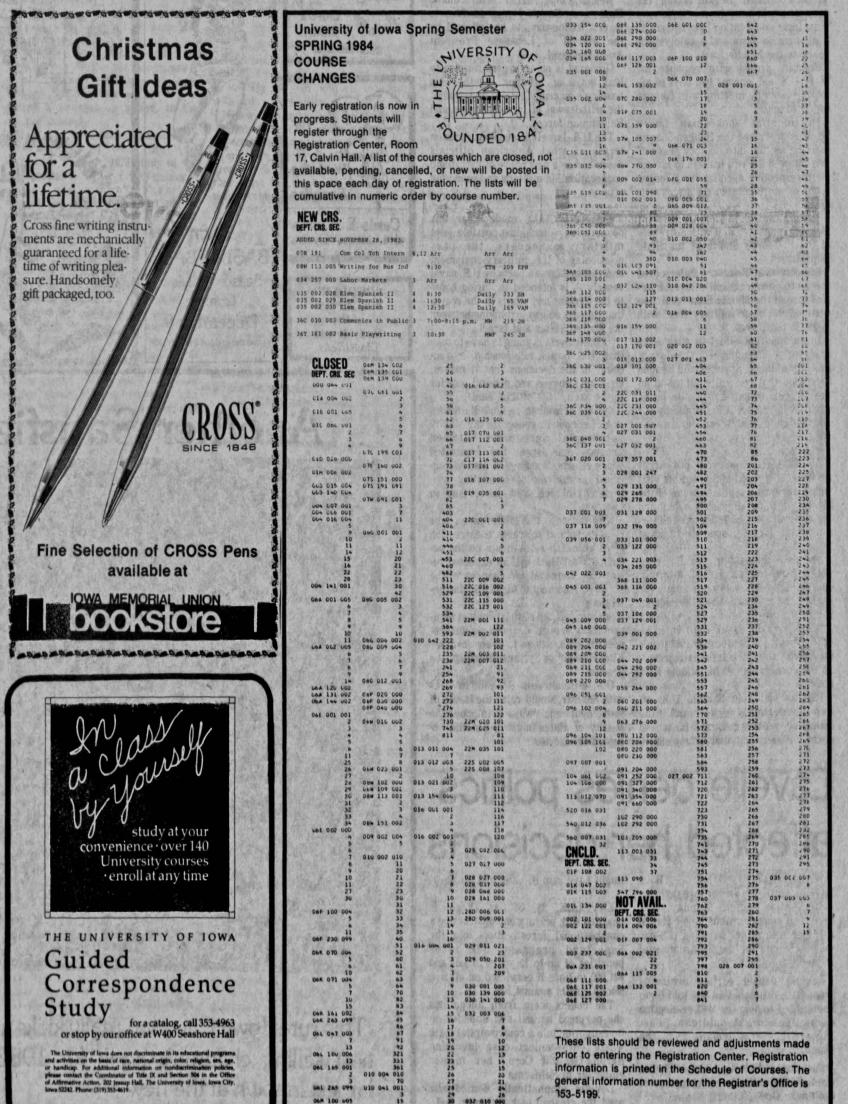

Azinger disagreed that leave time should be increased, citing national reports that say, "As the amount of leave in negotiations agreement is increased, the amount of contact time (with students) is decreased."

Azinger said: "The sabbatical leave is not a viable leave. That's not going to happen. I just don't see how we're going to agree to that."

Debate also centered around the union proposal to have the administration keep an employee grievance file separate from the employee's personnel file, which the employee would be ble to review.

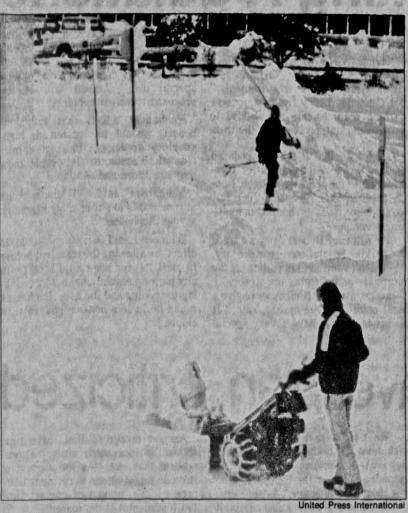

The union is worried that teachers have access only to the personnel file under the present contract; this file does not include the grievance file.

But Azinger said grievance files are now available to employees and it is not necessary to include this stipulation in the agreement between the teachers and the board.

She also denied allegations that she wanted to hurt the Senate campaign of California Gov. Edmund Brown.

"Political considerations never were a driver in the decisions I made," she said under questioning by chief defense counsel James Bierbower.

Lavelle acknowledged, however, that she may have told a top aide to Danforth that it might help the senator's campaign to make an announcement about dioxin cleanup in Missouri the day before the November

Lavelle emphatically denied she used the cleanup of a Seymour, Ind., site to help Lugar.

One of the biggest criminals from the Watergate days will clear more than $4,000 tonight for dazzling UI students with a lecture on 'Government: Public Perception vs. Reality."

G. Gordon Liddy, the infamous partner of E. Howard Hunt and the co-leader of the bungled Watergate burglary, is a fine person to compare public perceptions to what really happened. Probably more than any other figure in President Nixon's menagerie, Liddy bit his tongue and refused to incriminate others involved in the greatest constitutional crisis since the Civil War.

The public could not have possibly garnered the reality of government in June of 1973 when Liddy appeared before Sen. Sam Ervin's Watergate Investigation Committee saying he would not tell "the whole truth and nothing but the truth" about his involvement in Watergate.

Labelled "the sphinx" for his self-censorship, Liddy was convicted of nine felonies and sentenced to 20 years behind bars. He subsequently spent 52 months in prison — more than any other Watergate figure.

But the tale of Liddy doesn't end with the vision of a fallen man ready to repent his sins. His 1980 autobiography, Will, expounds on what a man must do to "prevail" despite harsh circumstances. The self-serving personal history sold about 125,000 hard-covered copies despite the rising "don't buy books by crooks" ideology.

The book includes no remorse. In fact, in it Liddy expresses regret that other Watergate felons did not keep quiet. So this is the kind of person the UI pays money to appear on campus? David Haugen, chairman of the UI Lecture Committee, called Liddy "a cult figure" on the lecture circuit. Liddy, who served as general counsel to the Committee to Re-elect the President until 1972, now makes more than 200 appearances annually. The UI is "one of the last universtities to have him speak," Haugen said.

The UI should have bucked the trend and refused to give Liddy a platform to convey his twisted ethics. A decade is not long enough to transform the episode in history created by Liddy and company into a noble venture in the "will" of government.

Subliminal stereotypes

A poll conducted recently for the New York Times reveals at least part of the reason women still lag behind men in income and in representation in key jobs, including political jobs.

While 54 percent of the men surveyed believed another effort to ratify the Equal Rights Amendment was important, only 48 percent of the women did. Moreover, 34 percent of the women and percent of the men thought men were more logical than women. Both sexes believed women were more honest.

Sexual stereotyping is not new. Decades ago, textbooks revealed t if the same essay was given to two groups for evaluation, the group that believed a man wrote the essay scored it higher for logic than the group that believed a woman wrote it.

Such stereotyping makes it difficult for women to make significant financial and political progress. Beneath all the expressed support for equality lurks a feeling among many that women are too emotional. This is, after all, a society that values and rewards logical thought and technological progress. Because of that, many unconsciously ask: Do we want emotional people making decisions about banking and profit-making and science and law and war? And these are the areas that command the most money and the most power.

The fact such attitudes remain so strong is proof women are right to be concerned about things like how their sex is portrayed on television, in novels and for elementary and secondary school readers. As long as children are socialized to believe stereotypes, too many adults will continue to accept them.

Parents and teachers who care about true equality should monitor their children's books to see if they are being indoctrinated and either counteract the books' influence or attempt to change the books being used.

The credit cram

The UI's College of Liberal Arts is undergoing a faculty committee evaluation. Howard Laster, who resigned this year as dean of the college, said the evaluation is so important it could influence the selection of the next dean. In light of that statement, it seems appropriate to bring up an issue for this committee to look at: the UI's policy on the number of semester hours awarded per course.

The UI gradually has decreased the number of credits for some courses, particularly in "core" areas. What does this mean? From a mathematical viewpoint, suppose Jane Freshman takes five core courses (a normal number for a first-year student). Because most of her courses have both a lecture and a discussion or lab, Jane spends 20 hours a week in school. For each class, she spends at least two hours outside of class reading, writing papers, etc., creating a grand total of 60 hours each week either in class or studying for class.

You would expect that for all of this work Jane would receive 20 hours credit, right? Wrong. Under the UI's current system, Jane might receive only 15 semester hours. Hence, she works harder for less credit and may not graduate on time. At five classes a semester, Jane might only have 120 credits four years later, four short of the number needed for a diploma. She could take more courses, but that only increase the 60 hours per week she already allots to college.

The evaluation committee needs to ask whether they want quality or quantity in education. Will the College of Liberal Arts ready students for effective performance in many situations over the course of their lives," as the General Catalog suggests, or will it going to force cramming for credit?

High schools will make sure Jane can read, but will the UI make her suffer scholastic nervous collapse?

News warped by cabinet control

This is the first of two guest opinions about the Reagan administration's effect on accurate reporting.

By Mark Shone

HEN COL. Robert Mc-Farlane became national security adviser last month, many people believed Secretary of State George Schultz had succeeded in adding a yes-man, a go-fer, to the Reagan cabinet.

They may have underestimated the man. Author of what the New Statesman calls a "1978 study of the presidential benefits of well-managed military interventions," McFarlane was at the philosophic heart of the Grenada invasion.

Military crises, he wrote, present a president with "an unusual opportunity to lead the policy process. He can define the crisis ... the media, the Congress and the public have relatively less effect because of their lack of information and the pace of events."

President Reagan guaranteed a lack of information about Grenada by delaying media access to the island and allowing the military to dictate terms to the media. The press complained loudly about infringements of its rights, but stories had to be filed, and the only sources of information were the Pentagon and Radio Havana. Reagan defined the crisis in a literal sense; rescue of American medical students was only one of many motivations for military action, but in Reaganese this invasion will always be a "rescue mission."

The Grenada invasion is only the most recent example of what is taking shape as a coherent strategy of information. And the the cardinal rule of the Reagan doctrine reads, "Less is

AS PRESIDENT, Reagan has attempted to scuttle the Freedom of Information Act, pushing for exemption of the FBI and other agencies on the grounds of national security. He has ordered government officials to sign oaths swearing they won't publish accounts of their experiences - even after leaving public service - without prior government approval. His concern about leaks is almost Nixonian, and like President Nixon he has begun to identify his own political interests with national security.

Newspaper publishers accused the administration of mimicking Soviet tactics in barring the media from the scene of battle in Grenada. In propaganda, as in other aspects of East-West relations, it's possible to tell what one side is going to do by what it accuses the other of doing. Another Soviet tactic used by the administration is the very "disinformation" warned against by Reagan and other conservative press-watchers.

Though a state organ, the Voice of America radio network has long prided itself on relative independence and objectivity. Its accurate news broadcasts were thought to be a better advertisement than overt propaganda for democracy. Reagan's information policies, however, have caused turmoil within the organization.

Reagan appointed an old California friend, Charles Wick, to head to VOA's parent bureaucracy, the U.S. International Communication Agency. A former Reader's Digest editor, Kenneth Tomlinson, took over directorship of the VOA. It is Wick's responsibility to wage the ideological war on communism declared by the president in a 1982 speech before the British Parlia-

Under Wick, the VOA has become more interpretive and polemic in its presentation of the news, outraging veteran staffers. Some have resigned in protest, including deputy director P.

THE ENTERPRISING Wick, who made a great deal of money as owner of a nursing home chain in California, also has taken a stab at grandstand propaganda, producing the dismal foreign television failure "Let Poland

For some $550,000, Wick assembled a cast including Bob Hope, Frank Sinatra and Margaret Thatcher to dramatize the plight of the Polish. What resulted was not considered worthy of broadcast by the foreign television stations for whom it was Not content as a TV producer, Wick asked the House for more than $11 million for a string of medium-wave radio stations in Central America to counteract what he called Cuban and Soviet efforts to penetrate the region, in addition to funds for Radio Marti, a source of propaganda directed at

It is frightening that Wick wanted "Let Poland Be Poland" shown in America. The domestic audience is the most important target of the Reagan administration's information policy. Even government sponsored activities have their most important impact on American audiences.

A CASE IN POINT is a training program directed by Ian MacKenzie, previously employed by Nicaraguan dictator Anastasio Somoza, "Baby

Doc" Duvalier of Haiti and the Guatemalan right wing. Wick channeled $170,000 to the Mid-America Committee for International Business and Government, a Chicago-based organization, which in turn hired MacKenzie as a consultant. MacKenzie will be advising media officials from Latin American and Arab countries on how to handle the U.S. press.

If officials in military regimes down south learn how to deal with reporters, perhaps the American public won't hear so many nasty stories about human rights abuses, death squads and the art of "disappearing" people. A more positive image for Reagan's allies will increase support for his hemispheric paternalism back in the United States. The Reagan administration will have erected a Latin American mirror for its own version of

And it will be easier to certify the rights records" of countries like Chile, where statements extracted by torture are recognized in court and physicians are paid from public funds for their electric shock services.

In flight to Washington, President Reagan discusses the Beirut situation with Secretary of State George Shultz and National Security Adviser Robert McFarlane. Is the Reagan public information doctrine More is Less?

World without weapons

I find it ironic that some people on this campus feel angry that the opposing side of the nuclear arms question was not heard during the Nuclear Weapons Awareness Week. The whole impetus for the week's activities comes from the fact that, not only does our present administration speak for the militaristic, pro-arms race viewpoint every day in the media, they are also using their status and power to proliferate nuclear arms and military intervention in our name throughout the world. It is the common sense and heartfelt concern of the peace movement that needs to be heard now.

As for Jerry Taylor's remarks about the "emotionalism" of us peaceniks, what in the world is wrong with people displaying human emotion about a very human issue? It is the worship of the one-dimensional, linear logic, that got us into this mess in the first place and, as Dr. Helen Caldicott so aptly put it, if one is aware of the total devastation and loss of human life associated with nuclear weapons, it is insanity to react with anything but fear, hurt, anger and a deep grieving love for this planet We may not feel great about the Russian (Soviet) government, and they certainly have little reason to trus Ronald Reagan, but we must trust that the vast majority of Russian people are women, men and children like ourselves who are ready to make a solemn commitment to building a peaceful, loving world community without weapons.

Seeks straight answers

To the editor:

I wish that we could raise the level of discussion of nuclear weapons policy beyond mere flag waving on one side and the parading of charred corpses on the other. Not knowing what to make of the issue myself, I attended Dr. Helen Caldicott's speech on Nov. 17, hoping to hear some convincing reasons to support nuclear disarmament. I left oratorical mastery.

Her speech was a graphic, emotional appeal, complete with testimonies from children and visions of melting eyeballs, sprinkled with ad hominem attacks against the president and national policy makers. She diagnosed her opponents as "physically numb" to the threat of nuclear war and dismissed their views.

When the microphones were opened for questions, she repeatedly sidestepped the deterrence issue by parading more charred bodies. At one of the most distasteful moments of the evening the monitor resorted to Sovietstyle silencing of dissent by threatening to have security guards remove one rather persistent questioner who deserved but never received a straight answer. The uestion is which policy, deterrence or disarmament, is safer. Given that we are already in the frying pan by virtue of having come this far with nuclear weapons, it may well be that any upset in the balance of terror is a selfconfident leap into the fire.

Edict dissolves lower house of Japanese Diet

TOKYO (UPI) - Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone dissolved the lower house of parliament Monday in a compromise with his opponents, paving the way for nationwide elections next month despite signs his party could suffer

An imperial decree issued by Emperor Hirohito formally dissolving the house was delivered to the assembly wrapped in a purple cloth on a lacquer tray. It was read to the legislative body by House Speaker Hamjime

A chorus of "banzai" (hurrah) echoed throughout the chamber as Fukuda read the decree as the Diet convened at 3:35 p.m. (12:35 a.m., Iowa time).

Former Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka's conviction Oct. 12 for accepting a $2 million bribe from Lockheed Corp. of the United States prompted the opposition to set in mo-tion a series of events, including a boycott of the key legislation, to the dissolution. The Dec. 18 elections will be the first real test of Nakasone's year-old government.

In return, opposition parties agreed to rubber stamp legislation pending in the upper house, including administrative reform and a $5 billion tax reduction bill.

A few analysts believe Nakasone's Liberal Democratic Party, suffering a severe image crisis, will emerge from the polls Dec. 18 with its strength intact.

Nakasone, who took power with strong backing from Tanaka, has tried to distance himself from his mentor while shoring up his image as a world statesman.

Tanaka has refused to give up his parliamentary seat and is appealing the conviction.

Arafat, rebel troops told to leave Tripoli

TRIPOLI, Lebanon (UPI) - Arab peacemakers hoping to end the Palesti-nian civil war Monday ordered Yasser Arafat's men and the opposing Syrianbacked PLO rebels to leave Tripoli and return to their refugee camps.

Damascus Radio said former Lebanese Prime Minister Rashid Karami announced plans for the dispersal of the warring Palestine Liberation Organization factions after long meetings in the Syrian capital with Tripoli officials.

There was no mention in Karami's announcement of Arafat's fate or his

There was no immediate response from Arafat or the Syrian-backed rebels to the plan - part of the Syrian-Saudi cease-fire agreement reached last week. The rebel leader Col. Abu Mousa said Sunday, however, that his men would not surrender the Beddawi or Nahr el Bared refugee camps north of Tripoli to Arafat's men.

The move apparently came after an envoy delivered an "urgent message" from Saudi King Fahd to Syrian officials at the peace talks in Syria's capital, Beirut radio said. The contents of the message were not known.

KARAMI SAID the 4,000 to 5,000 men who traveled to Tripoli with Arafat in September, and the guerrilla leader's local PLO forces, must leave the city within two weeks. But he said they could return to their homes in the nearby refugee camps.

"As for the dissident fighters, they must return to the camps, not precisely Beddawi or Nahr el Bared, but to whatever regions where they get support, to continue their national obligations," Karami said.

The vagueness of the Damascus Radio report left open the question of which PLO faction would control the two camps near Tripoli.

As for the rift in the PLO, which developed in May over Arafat's leaderhip and led to the fighting around Tripoli, Karami said three commissions would be created to discuss political, security and social matters.

Arafat Monday accused Syria of trying to scuttle the cease-fire agreement by massing two battalions of elite troops, armored vehicles and 40 Sovietmade tanks north and east of Tripoli.

IN AN INTERVIEW published Monday in a Cairo newspaper, Arafat claimed the Syrians planned to attack his men as they withdrew from Tripoli and he demanded an Arab peacekeeping force to supervise the pullout.

"I will stay in my place, confronting these schemes firmly," Arafat told the Egyptian paper Al Massa. "I have no choice but to confront all these challenges in defense of the PLO, until the last man and the last bullet, as long as Syria does not abide by the cease-

In the same interview he accused his one-time ally, the Soviet Union, of backing and supplying the Syrians to attack him, but Arafat's spokesmen at his headquarters in Tunis denied he had made any such statement.

The Soviet Union responded by sending Arafat a telegram Monday charging that the PLO's unity in fighting America's and Israel's "aggressive and expansionistic intrigues in the Middle East ... leaves much to be desired," Tass reported.

BONN, West Germany (UPI) -Chancellor Helmut Kohl said Monday the Soviet Union has signaled a willingness to reconsider its walkout from the Geneva arms talks, but Moscow said the new U.S. missiles in western Europe made further negotia-

Kohl told a news conference that he received a letter from Soviet leader Yuri Andropov Friday in which he expressed willingness for a continuation of the East-West dialogue.

"The Soviet Union does not consider the situation that has arisen irreversible," Kohl quoted the Andropov letter

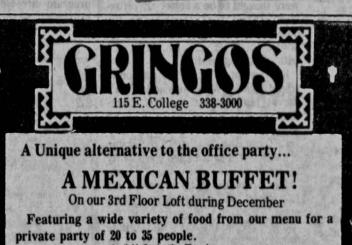

The West German leader said his in-

Soviet leadership is willing to possibly revise last week's decision to leave the Geneva talks on medium-range missiles. The walkout came after West Germany approved the stationing of new U.S. missiles on its soil.

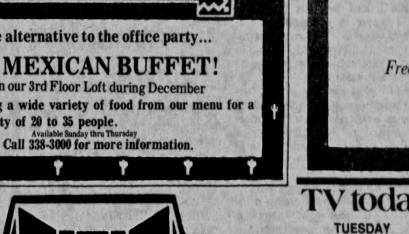

Kohl said the Andropov letter "shows that the Soviet leadership is aware of its responsibility and obligations ... and wants to do its part

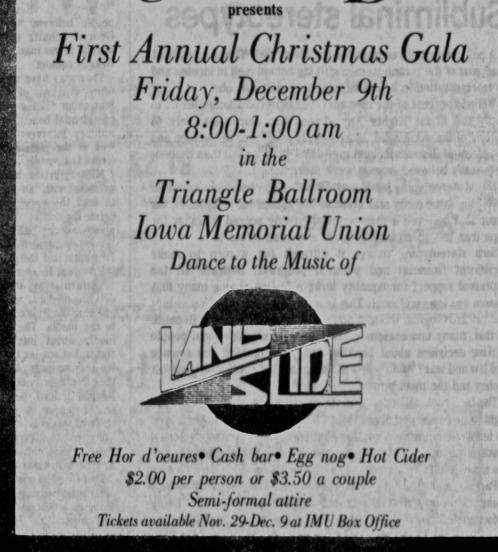

The text of the Andropov letter was not released and it was considered possible that Kohl was putting the most favorable light on it to combat the growing West German anti-missile

They should be thankful their eams aren't meeting in the Gator Bowl.

The news conference with White and Donahue kicked off the month-long festivities leading up to the 70th Rose Bowl on Jan. 2.

Between now and the game there will be a hundred requests or their time, including more news conferences, a trip to Disneyland and, of course, a parade.

BUT WHITE, WHO led his record in the Big Ten, and Donahue, who guided his Bruins through one of the roughest schedules in the nation before clinching the Pac-10 crown with a 6-1-1 mark, both said the glamour of the game far outweighs the distractions that must be tolerated. "This is a proud moment for those of us who represent the University of Illinois," said White, who will bring an Illinois team to the Rose Bowl for the first time in 20 years. "For me personally, the Rose Bowl is something that means an awful lot.

"I was born here and raised around the Rose Bowl and I know what it stands for. "Once again, we're delighted to be back in the Rose Bowl," Donahue said. "This year for UCLA football has been a very exciting year and a productive year. We're very excited that we've come this far and we get another shot at the Rose Bowl."

The Illinois squad will arrive in Southern California Dec. 18 and White, whose team has 22 players who either went to high school or junior college in California, said the distractions will be greater for the Illini than the Bruins.

"THERE'S NO QUESTION the Big Ten team is exposed to new and different distractions than the Pac-10 teams," White said. "But I think we'll be equal to that. I think we'll handle it. And I know there are nine other eams from the Big Ten who would love to have those distrac-

No. 17 Drake spoils debut for Stringer

By Thomas W. Jargo Assistant Sports Editor

A very early indication is that the Iowa women's basketball team is good and it's definitely going to get better.

Before an Iowa record crowd of 3,165 screaming fans, the youthful Hawkeyes battled 17th-ranked Drake all the way to the wire before falling, 58-56, Monday night at the Carver-Hawkeye Arena in the season opener for both clubs.

It ended up being the experience of a veteran Drake squad and the inexperience of an Iowa squad that thwarted the Hawkeyes shot at an upset. The turning point in the game was the last five minutes of the first half when Drake outscored the Hawkeyes, 11-4, to build an eight point advantage, 30-22,

THROUGHOUT THE ENTIRE second half, Iowa had to battle from behind and freshman errors, aggressive errors and late mental lapses cost the Hawkeyes the victory. The fatal blow for Iowa came with 4 minutes, 16 seconds to go in the game with Drake's Dawn Wumkes shooting two from the foul line. The Hawkeyes had just cut Drake's lead to two, 49-47, on a shot by guard Tricia Blair.

On the Bulldog's ensuing trip down court, Wumkes was fouled by Iowa guard Angie Lee. She sank both free throws but after the second, Bulldog center Lorri Bauman was fouled by freshman Lisa Long in the scuffle under the basket.

Bauman sank the first free throw but missed the second however, Drake sophomore Wanda Ford hauled down the rebound and scored an easy basket. In a matter of seconds, the Drake lead went from two to seven points.

IOWA HAD NUMEROUS chances in the late going to pull the upset. But the inability of Lee to get the ball inbounded during the waning minutes of the game cost the Hawkeyes dearly. The Hawkeyes had cut the lead to 58-

54 with just 25 seconds left. Lee attempted to inbound the ball but was called for stepping over the sideline, giving the ball back to Drake. "I'm satisfied where we are right now," said first-year Iowa Coach Vivian Stringer. "We played 60 seconds for every minute and were not cheated

"The last three days of practice this week I saw that this team was arriving," she said. "I'm extremely pleased with our defense. And with the team unity and character of this team when the game is on the line. I have good feelings of what is to come."

"We're going to get better and she's going to make us better," Becker said of her coach. "And that's a good feel-

Drake Coach Carole Baumgarten was very supportive of the Iowa effort. "(Stringer) really had some good freshmen out there tonight," Baumgarten said. "Blair really blew my mind a few times. She really came through like I haven't seen an Iowa player do before.

Stringer that there is a bright future good coach. And there's no reason they should not do well in the Big Ten."

Bauman injured her right ankle late in the first half and it hampered her play throughout the second half, according to Baumgarten.

THAT WAS ONE of the big reasons Becker, Blair and teammate Lisa Long were able to hurt the Bulldogs more inside. "She (Bauman) didn't even want to go inside the second half," Baumgarten said.

The 5-foot-5 Blair, who Stringer calls "They have a good ball club and a "blood and guts player," utilized her Thursday at Northern Iowa.

speed and quickness to lead the Hawkeyes with 16 points. Long added 12 points and 13 rebounds.

'Blair has many more great things to come," Stringer said.

Bauman led the Bulldogs with 19 points and Wumkes and Ford added 14 and 13 points, respectively, for Drake. Wumkes hurt the Hawkeyes time in and time out with her outside shot, taking over for a dormant Kay Riek - the Bulldog all-conference forward who was only three of 14 from the field.

Large crowd gets excited about Hawks

By Jill Hokinson

A surprisingly large crowd turned out Monday night to witness the debut of new Iowa women's basketball Coach Vivian Stringer.

The turnout was unlike last season when Iowa averaged around 600 people for a women's basketball game. Monday night, a record 3,165 fans showed up at the Carver-Hawkeye Arena to watch a new era in Hawkeye basketball begin as Iowa dropped a 58-56 decision to highly-rated Drake.

Many fans had to wait in long lines to get tickets for the game, but most of them had one goal in mind - watching Stringer and seeing what she has done to the Iowa women's basketball

"I didn't mind waiting in line if there is going to be a lot of people here,' Iowa student Scott Kirkpatrick said. "I'm glad to see a lot of people at the

KIRKPATRICK SAID HE went to the game because he wanted to see the Iowa basketball team and Stringer in action. "Stringer looks very confident of herself and of the team," he added.

Marcia Hupp of Iowa City likes women's basketball and has followed the sport in the past. Hupp said she came to the game because she was excited about seeing the new Hawkeye coach.

Hupp said she also thought it was tremendous that Iowa got such a large turnout for the game. "I'd like to see the large crowds show up all the way through the season," she said.

Another follower of women's sports, Jurine Moore, said she came to the game not only to see Stringer but to watch freshman Lisa Becker play. "I followed Becker in high school and I wanted to see her play in college,' Moore said.

MOORE, WHO IS involved in high school athletics in Marion, Iowa, said having such a large crowd show up for the game was also a great thing for the Iowa athletic program.

"I was pleased to see so many people were here at the game," she said. "I also think this is just the beginning of what will be in the future.

"I think Coach Stringer is an asset to the (Iowa women's athletic) program," Moore said.

Besides getting to watch the new Iowa basketball coach in action, severals fans were at the game last night because they were curious to see a women's college basketball game.

Student Tony Redlinger came to the game because he had never seen women play five-on-five basketball before. "I'm surprised at how well Iowa is doing," he said. "I think Stringer is doing a good job since she's starting three to four freshmen."

The Dogs are regional co-champions after going 5-1 in the regional tournament held at Omaha, Neb., last weekend. Their only loss came against a team from Wisconsin that took the other co-champion spot next to The Dogs.

The Dogs-Wisconsin championship game never took place due to the poor weather which hit the Omaha area over the weekend. The Dogs, after their loss to the Wisconsin team, played back in the tournament to earn a rematch with their fellow

THE CHAMPIONSHIP GAME didn't necessarily need to be played as each regional winner and runner-up advanced to the Sugar Bowl tournament which is scheduled to take place the week before Auburn-Michigan Sugar Bowl clash on Jan.

The Dogs now have a 15-1 record going into their postseason competition.

In the intramural pre-holiday basketball tournament, Old Phi Rho Canoe Rentals defeated the Speerfs, 50-41, to win the championship.

The Old Phi Rho Canoe Rental team won the championship contest after barely managing to defeat More Problems, 36-33

We were pretty happy with how the tournament went even though I don't like the way our intramural basketball is set up," Warren Slebos, associate director of Recreational Services, said.

THE SPEERFS, the Old Phi Rho Canoe Rentals opponent in the championship game, advanced to the final by defeating the Driz Bags, 51-47.

In the intramural Turkey Trot race held Nov. 16 at the Finkbine Golf Course, the Funkley Racing Team won both the men's and coed division championships while Phi Rho Sigma won the women's division.

Rich Schupham, a local marathoner, won the intramural race with a time of nine minutes, 38 seconds in the 2.1-mile event. Cam Ratering won the women's division

Cross Country Ski Club to offer many weekend excursions this year

By Melissa Rapoport

Although there's no snow in Iowa City yet, the Iowa Cross Country Ski Club will hold its first seasonal meeting tonight at 7 p.m. in the Michigan State of the Union.

The club is not competitively based, so skiers of any level are welcome to join. "It's just a club to get people together who want to try to ski every weekend," club spokesman Jim Majure said. "It's just basically a club to get cross country skiers

The club will also take a few trips this winter. "We try to plan two or three weekend trips every year," Majure said.

Sportsclubs

"We go up to a race in Northern Wisconsin every year called the American Birkebeiner, and we will try to do a week trip in Colorado over spring break."

THE MEMBERSHIP FEE for the club is $5 and further information is available from Majure at 338-8177.

In bridge action last week, duo Linda Edwards and Jay Rajgopal won the novice division and twosome of Ardee Cushing and Mildred McCray won the open division.

The club will meet this Sunday at 5:30 p.m. in the Harvard Room of the Union. All interested players are invited. For players who aren't confident in their game and want to spruce up their skills before tackling advanced players, they can play in the novice game. An open division is available to experienced players.

Anyone who is in need of a partner can contact club spokesperson Phillip Cummins at 338-0392 on the day of the game, or pick up a partner at the game.

Sportsclubs is a Tuesday feature of The Daily Iowan. If you would like further-information or results published about your club sport, call the DI at 353-6220 between 9 a.m. and noon or after 5 p.m. on Sundays.

Charismatic Police capture crowd with great UNI-Dome performance

ESS THAN HALF a decade ago. the Police had trouble filling up a venue the size of a high-school gym. In 1983, the Police are the big boys. Synchronicity still dominates the charts, as it has all summer. If the '80s has a supergroup, the Police are it.

The Sunday show at the UNI-Dome was full of success' trappings and a crowd that paid sixteen bucks a shot, on top of driving through the first sputters of winter's machine, to see the band. And they weren't sorry. The Police have an amazing ability to maintain a ray of special attention with each member of the audience - indeed a charismatic quality in such an ominous

Overall, the pre-show audience was unconcerned; they were numbed from the pleasant weather, the diesel exhaust piped in courtesy of the Dome's inflating fans, or perhaps the digestion of Thanksgiving leftovers. There was little of the agitation Dome audiences usually show before the houselights dim.

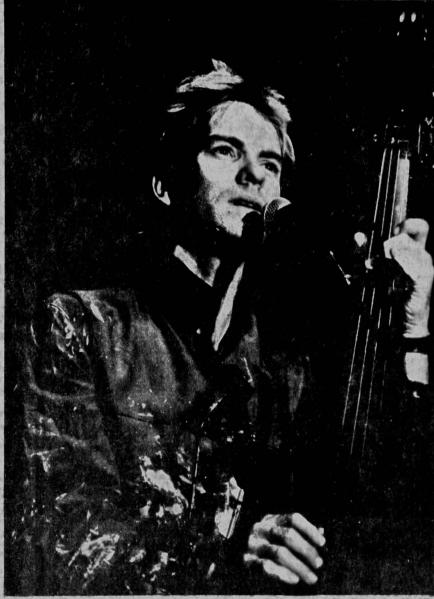

This coldness continued into the opening act of UB40. Granted, Brian Travers' sax opener to the UK-side hit "One In Ten" was a little too lounge-lizardly to catch many ears, but even Astro's toast, "Sway with the Cool Motion," went unheeded. The segregationalist attitude of MTV was reflected in the audience's lack of interest. Throughout the smart songlist of pieces from UB40's latest Labour of Love and older hits, the audience may as well have gone out for Cokes and official tour T-

AT ABOUT 9:30 p.m. the shadows of the audience's favorite cops were seen ascending stairs to the stage. The crowd creature on the floor slithered forward and those in the stands stood to see Stewart Copeland climb into his rhythm cockpit and Andy Summers, with guitar and equipment, come downstage right. Sting shouted, "Hey! How are ya'?" and the band ripped into the title cut of Synchronicity.

Three background vocalists (two looked distinctly like Tawatha Agee and Dolette McDonald of recent R&B fame) took the weight off Summers and Copeland, who were able to dive deeper into their particular grooves. For "Walking In Your Footsteps" Copeland moved to a percussion platform behind him and beat on various implements while Summers showed evidence of his work with Robert Fripp, his solo airy and unpredictable. The audience was silent with veneration.

This unaffected pace was shattered by 'Message In A Bottle.' Sting prompted the audience to chant and was surprised with the result: "This is pretty amazing," he said as a roadie presented him with a bass looking like it came from Frank Lloyd Wright's conservatory. Copeland joined the fretless fun with sidesticks and offbeats for 'Walking on the Moon" and, in the song's rhythm section solo, the audience continued its idolatrous hum.

NO "SHOVE OFF" from Sting on Sunday the lead singer/bass man was happy to be in Cedar Falls and happy to let you know it. His humor was a caricature of himself: he picked up a ski sweater someone had 'given' him, "Anybody who wants this sweater after the show - tough!" "Wrapped Around Your Finger" was the

'new" Police - each member on their own - the only continual thread their name: Copeland lost in the chatter of his drum kit, Summers in a celestial oneness with the harmonics he found, Sting strutting the edge of the proscenium as his gate to the unknown. Somehow you could forget Martha Quinn saying, "And I'll have those Police tour dates for ya ..." a thousand times; the show made the band look like victims instead of sponsors of a media hype. Even the stage guards behaved without their usual enmity - they handed out water to those stuck in the front of the floor's sardinorama.

During "King of Samara" Sting practiced "skarobics" and encouraged the audience to join him as he hopped on a mini-tramp. He was thoroughly ripe by the time "Spirits in the Material World" began with a nearly unrecognizable ska arrangement; Summers' sword of a guitar lick gave the song a UB40ish sound and suddenly there were a lot of hypocrites in the audience. This song kicked off a Ghost In The Machine medley, following were renditions of "Invisible Sun," done somewhat murkily, and "One World Is Enough."

"KING OF PAIN" brought about the typical mega-response a current hit evokes from the audience, Summers took a leftist path with a King Crimsonesque guitar solo while the final bass note of the song shook the Dome into the beginning of a vastly restructured "Don't Stand So Close to Me."

'Every Breath You Take" was another audience-milker, played in a standard way, almost as if the band was tiring toward the end of its set. "Roxanne" continued in the same passable way, the song speaking for itself until Sting shifted keys on the bass and the whole band went into a tropical jam. The crowd was too heated to go back out into the cold before one more dose of reggae rock and the band returned for a quick but well-done encore of "I Can't Stand Losing You."

About five minutes past eleven, the Police finished in a way that couldn't help but be anticlimactic in comparison with earlier moments in the concert. Indeed the band put on a fine show for today's biggest pop-stars. It's reassuring to know that perhaps the trio cares about more than every buck they make.

At the Bijou

Jennifer Jones plays a swamp siren seeking revenge on her inconsiderate lover (Charleton Heston) in King Vidor's searing examination of the American Way of Life, Ruby Gentry (1952). We like the description of Jones in Movies on TV as "a sexy wench who seeks revenge on an elaborate scale." At 7 p.m.

 Unlike the characters in Nagisa Oshima's Merry Christmas, Mr. Lawrence, the people in fellow Japanese filmmaker Yasujiro Ozu's The Tokyo Story don't shout at each other, don't beat each other and don't commit harakiri. Theirs is a more personal anguish — Ozu explores the generation gap in the sensitive and compassionate style that became his trademark. At 8:30 p.m.

Television

On the networks: Rodney Dangerfield may get no respect, but if the ratings are high for the "Ro Dangerfield Special: I Can't Take it No More" (ABC at 7 p.m.), who needs respect? Kenny Rogers stars in "The Gambler - The Adventure Continues" (CBS at 8 p.m.), which is the most ego-inflating title of the evening. And there's also "Vietnam: a Television History" (IPTV-12 at 8 p.m.), where peace is at hand — at least for the American

 On Cable: For the best movie of the day, you'll have to wait until the middle of the night — Charles Laughton's only directorial venture, Night of the Hunter (WGN-10 at 3 a.m.) is a film buff's delight, with references to Welles, Hitchcock, Griffith and even Capra, plus excellent performances from Shelley Winters, Lillian Gish, and Mr. "Love-Hate" himself, Robert Mitchum. Lighter fare comes early this morning, with Love Laughs At Andy Hardy

(CBN-21 at 11 a.m.), and later this evening, with a co pisode of "The Alfred Hitchcock Hour" (USA-23 at 10:30 p.m.), starring Tony Randall as a man who wakes up after a long night of boozing, and finds his wife missing and Jayne Mansfield in her place. That sounds like a fair

The Milwaukee Ballet brings Tchaikovsky's by-now infamous "Nutcracker" ballet into Hancher tonight and Wednesday night at 8. No more tickets are available, but ballet, who knows? A reminder: There are preperformance discussions each night, held in the Hancher
