U.S., Israel agree to new military ties

WASHINGTON (UPI) - President Reagan and Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir, seeking to bury past differences and foster a new era of cooperation, Tuesday agreed to a sweeping series of new military ties.

After two days of talks with the Israeli leader, Reagan announced for-mation of a joint political-military committee with Israel that will consider joint military maneuvers and planning between the two countries as well as the positioning of U.S. military equipment on Israeli soil.

The announcement marked a change from the often strained relations under Shamir's predecessor, Menachem

In effect, the decision revived the Memorandum of Understanding between Washington and Israel that was suspended a month after it was signed Nov. 30, 1981, following Israeli annexation of the Golan Heights. At that time the terms were not put on paper.

The agreements appeared to signal closer U.S.-Israeli relations than at any time since before Israel's invasion of Lebanon June 6, 1982, and at a time when U.S. Marines are bogged down under fire in Beirut and Israel's economy is in its worst shape since the Jewish state was born nearly 36 years

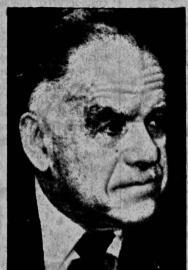

REAGAN SAID of the joint commission, "This group will give priority attention to the threat to our mutual interest posed by increased Soviet involvement in the Middle East.

'Among the specific areas to be considered are combined planning, joint exercises and requirements for prepositioning of U.S. equipment in Israel," he said.

The joint military committee is to old its first meeting in Washington in

Among specific steps agreed on is the lifting of an embargo on the shipposed more than a year ago amid allegations the weapons had been used against civilians during the Israeli invasion of Lebanon. A senior U.S. official said the sales would resume, however, only in accord with "a satisfactory usage agreement that contains a definitive guarantee against

IN ADDITION, Reagan said the United States will "take a number of other concrete steps aimed at bolstering Israel's economy and security," including better terms for military

• Negotiation of a free-trade area that would facilitate Israeli exports to the United States to ease a trade imbalance. • Consideration of additions and changes to the aid package, such as assistance and negotiation of a muchsought free-trade agreement.

As he left the White House, Shamir said the United States and Israel would "proceed on the road to peace with increased vigor" as a result of the discussions, but gave no hint that underlying sticking points had been overcome

I return to Jerusalem strengthened in my conviction that with the aid of the United States of America, and fortified by the friendship of its people and government, a strong Israel can indeed achieve peace.'

Shamir, formerly Israeli foreign minister, succeeded Begin in September. Monday was his first meeting with Reagan as prime minister.

U.S. officials indicated Shamir maintained his opposition to Reagan's September 1982 Middle East peace plan and was unbudged by the president's prodding on the issue of Jewish settlements on the West Bank.

But Reagan said he and Shamir "agreed on the need to increase our of a May 17 withdrawal agreement cooperation in areas where our interests coincide."

The U.S. official said the new areas of military cooperation clearly were meant as "a message" to Syria and the Soviet Union but, "It is not a message or threat of a military axis against the

SHAMIR BRANDED Syria "a major threat to the peace in our area by occupying more than 60 percent of tion of Soviet arms and personnel on Syrian territory."

Reagan said he and Shamir "found a

With Lebanese President Amin Gemayel due to arrive today for urgent talks on ways to remove foreign forces from Lebanon, Reagan and Shamir remained firm in their support

There had been speculation the Soviets would also break off the longrange talks but the delegation turned up for the scheduled session.

Despite the Soviet Union's threats to break off "Geneva arms talks," it never made fully clear whether it meant only the INF negotiations or START as well. The latest session had been watched as an indicator of Moscow's willingness to continue nuclear arms control talks with the United States.

Liddy: The world is a bad neighborhood

By Emily Nitchie

As Watergate veteran John Dean has described it, G. Gordon Liddy's performance Tuesday night "trivializes the unsettling realities of Watergate as a big joke in a road show that brings people into lecture halls as if they were visiting a carnival."

Although the turnout of 1,200 people in the Union Main Lounge was impressive, Liddy admitted that the majority of college students do not know why he is famous Liddy has a long history in law and FBI work, yet he gained notoriety for his role in the Watergate break-in.

G. Gordon Liddy: "A nation's spies are its eyes and ears, and without them the nation would be blind and Despite his involvement, Liddy refused to testify - in the tradition of FBI loyalty and secrecy - and was sentenced in 1973 for nine felonies to a term of 20 years. His sentence was commuted in 1977 by President Jimmy Carter, and he was released in September of that year.

"How old were most of you during Watergate? 8? You weren't watching the Watergate hearings on TV, you were watching the Flintstones," Liddy told the audience.

AUDIENCE REACTION to Liddy

was mixed, with applause for both some incriminating questions and for Liddy's glib, side-stepping responses. By far the greatest applause oc-curred when a male student asked about Liddy's famous childhood incident of eating a rat. The student then pulled on a rat mask and held up a sign, "Eat Me." In the midst of laughter and applause Liddy told the student,

"You're the wrong sex."

Throughout his speech Liddy stressed the idea that Americans are dependent upon illusion to make life more pleasant.

Liddy said the vast majority of American citizens have confused how the world really is and how they would like to think it is.

"The world is a very bad neighborhood," Liddy said, and he added that most Americans are waiting for a savior

Although Liddy realizes Americans are offended with the idea of the U.S. government's clandestine activities, he maintains that clandestine investigative service is a reality and a necessity for all governments. Liddy said investigative spying has two aims: to determine the capabilities of other countries whether those assets would be used for or against the United States - and See Liddy, page 8

NABLUS, Israeli-occupied West Bank -About 70 Jewish settlers began a sit-in Tuesday in the center of the most populous Arab city on the West Bank and vowed to stay there until the army clamps down on rock-throwing Arabs in the area.

The sit-in coincided with the 36th anniversary of the U.N. partition resolution dividing Palestine into Israeli and Arab states, and followed an ax attack on a Jewish settler Monday, and what the settlers charged was a spate of rock throwings by Arabs against Jewish vehicles on West Bank roads.

Reagan signs dairy aid bill

WASHINGTON - President Reagan Tuesday signed a bill to aid dairy and tobacco farmers just hours after voicing concern about its cost. The proposal, which the administration opposed, is the latest effort by Congress to grapple with the cost of the dairy program, estimated to be $2.7 billion this year.

The legislation will provide a direct payment to farmers of $10 for every 100 pounds of milk they do not produce in an effort to restrain production.

Abuse treatment payments by county prompt new panel

By John Tieszen

The Johnson County Board of Supervisors formed a committee to develop a policy dealing with out-ofcounty substance abuse treatment payments exceeding $500 at its informal meeting Tuesday.

The committee was formed in response to differing opinions from the Iowa attorney general's office and the Johnson County attorney's office on a section of the Iowa Code.

According to the Iowa Code, a county must pay for 25 percent of the substance abuse treatment of its residents if they receive treatment in another county. But if the cost of the treatment exceeds $500, the code states, "The approval of the board of supervisors is required for payment by a county for costs incurred which exceed a total of $500 for one year for treatment.'

The attorney general's office set forth an opinion on the state code last April, stating that county supervisors must approve and pay for 25 percent of all costs incurred for a patient in one year.

Johnson County Attorney J. Patrick White said the attorney general's interpretation of the word "approval" was "extraordinarily narrow." The Johnson County attorney's opinion concerning the code states, "Boards have discretion in deciding whether the county will pay for treatment costs

The committee consists of Supervisor Dick Myers, Riley Grimes, clerk in the Johnson County Auditor's office, and Art Schut, executive director of Mideastern Council on Chemical Abuse

Grimes said the supervisors requested the opinion of the county attorney's office because Johnson County has been billed more than $500 for the treatment of a Johnson County man now receiving treatment in Clinton County.

Grimes said the question before the supervisors in this case is whether they will pay more than $500. The committee will present the board with a policy on how to handle such cases in the future.

Each year Johnson County averages seven cases in which residents receive substance abuse treatment in other counties, Grimes said. The treatments total between $7,000 and $10,000 a year, he said.

Schut said he believes the supervisors should have the right to control the treatment costs of Johnson County residents when these costs exceed $500.

"The county funds a local substance abuse treatment agency and Johnson County residents should go there," Schut said. "If they (county residents) go other places, the county should have control over" how much is spent for their treatment.

White said the question over the code might ultimately be solved through litigation between a county and a treatment center requesting payment, or by the Iowa Legislature.

Officials from Iowa City and the UI met Tuesday afternoon to discuss "the interests of the city and the university" concerning the scheduled reconstruction of the Iowa Avenue bridge next year.

The Iowa Department of Transportation has notified the city that federal funds have been allocated for the reconstruction of the 67-year-old bridge under the Federal Aid Bridge Replacement program.

Assistant City Engineer Denny Gannon said both the Burlington Street and nton Street bridges are also "high priorities" on the DOT's reconstruction list, and are slated for reconstruction in 1985 and 1986.

Gannon said the city expects to receive a formal letter outlining the funding details in two or three weeks. Gannon said federal funds will cover about 55 percent of the estimated $1.18 million cost of the construction, or about $650,000. He could not pinpoint the starting date for the construction, saying it depends on when plans are alized and the bids are accepted.

BOB LENTFER of Shive-Hattery & Associates, Iowa City, engineers for the project, said the UI is involved in the reconstruction because it has some utilities on the present bridge and the approaches to and from the bridge are on university property.

The UI also has an interest in the construction of the bridge because Iowa Avenue is one of the main thoroughfares for pedestrians between the east and west campuses. Lentfer said pedestrian traffic cannot be allowed on the bridge during much of the estimated 10-month construction period for safety reasons and for the convenience of workers. He added that keeping the bridge open while it was under construction would add to the cost of the project. Lentfer said project engineers anticipated the pedestrian problem during the design phase of the project and proposed building a temporary walkway over the Iowa River, from the spiral walkway on Riverside Drive to the walk west of the English-

Philosophy Building. Gannon said the bridge plans allows approximately $85,000 to pay for construction of the walkway.

One of the topics brought up at Tuesday's meeting was whether the UI or the city should pay for the walkway.

'WE TALKED ABOUT the interests of the city and the university," at the meeting, City Manager Neal Berlin said. "We wanted cooperation from both (the city and the UI) to develop a proposal that would satisfy both sides." Berlin added that sharing the cost of the walkway was discussed, but no concrete proposals were made at 'The university and the city staff will meet again to discuss the walkway funding," Berlin said. "Then, on a specific date we'll go back to the city

Freedman's proposals for future receive high marks from UI faculty

By Robyn Griggs

UI Faculty Senate members presented favorable opinions on UI President James O. Freedman's "Proposal for the Future of the University of Iowa" at their meeting

Freedman, who says his plan is "designed to nourish and strengthen the intellectual quality" at the UI, in September made the proposal to increase endowments for faculty members and outstanding doctoral students, as well as to etablish a UI center for advanced learning.

The proposal is expected to cost more than $100 million, but Freedman said this funding will be provided by "a major gifts campaign planned to take at least five

If the campaign to raise funds for the proposal is successful, Howard Laster, dean of the UI College of Liberal Arts, said the UI would be "shooting for about 50 fully endowed chairs.

"Five or six chairs will make a difference," said Richard Remington, UI vice president for academic affairs. "We seek

"THE PROPOSAL will not work unless we have full cooperation of the university," Freedman told the senate Tuesday, adding that all faculty members must "devote ourselves to major efforts to maintain human resources" through the proposal. "At a difficult time for the university, with fiscal restraints surrounding us, it is uplifting to hear President Freedman go about a proposal for bettering the university," said Joanne McCloskey, associate professor in the UI College of Nursing.

She said the first part of the proposal, seeking endorsements to support a larger number of endowments, would be beneficial because it would "make it evident to junior faculty members that there are rewards for excellence.

James Van Allen, head of the UI Physics and Astronomy Department, said he also "embraces" this part of the proposal because "endowed professorships are a well-known device for attracting quality individuals from other places.

He also said he supports the proposal because "support from other sources (not tuition or state funds) is what makes our university excellent.

"It is clear that without such outside support we would be operating on the level of an advanced high school," he said, urging his colleagues to "generate outside sup-

DARWIN TURNER, director of the UI Afro-American Studies program, said the proposal has "value that extends beyond this campus and this university," bringing "prestige" to the UI.

This administration has in the past year and a half begun to build an identity and a theme," Remington said. "President Freedman has asked us to build a covenant of quality ... to dream of what can be rather than of what we are.'

The UI Liberal Arts College has been collecting the opinions of faculty members, according to Laster, and the majority of responses have been favorable to the proposal. The opinions are currently being

'My personal reactions obviously have been influenced by, if not determined by, those individual responses I have heard,'

'Iowa has a reputation for being a superb training ground for professors who then work elsewhere," he said, adding the proposal could help to "keep such people here and attract our fair share of the hotshots from other institutions.

IN ADDITION, he said the proposed center for advanced study would be "an area of attraction to potential donors (of funds) and would be a significant source of attraction for outstanding students.

"I am particularly pleased that it (the proposal) emphasizes those areas in which state support is not likely to be available," he said, adding there must be "a major, continuing effort" by all faculty members to continue vying for state support while launching the fund-raising campaign.

Darrell Wyrick, president of the UI Foundation, will be in charge of the task of collecting the $100 million. He warned that funds "will not be available immediately and will likely be restrictive.

"Everyone's objective, of course, is to make every gift as general as possible, but you have to be realistic and know that most donors will have some reason for donating, and therefore will earmark the gift," he

Although fund raising will be a slow process, Wyrick said "meticulous planning is well underway. I think much progress

School sex discrimination argued in Supreme Court

WASHINGTON — A Reagan administration lawyer asked the Supreme Court Tuesday to woid an "all-or-nothing approach" and narrow the scope of a key women's rights law that bans sex discrimination in schools and colleges.

Justice Department attorney Paul Bator urged the nine justices during oral arguments to take a "middle line" approach to the question of how broadly the 1972 law can be used to eradicate sex bias in schools receiving federal

"I think we can walk the plank here on a middle line," Bator told the high court during arguments on a case brought to it by Grove City College, a small private school near Pittsburgh. He said the law should be applied only to specific school "programs or activities" that receive federal assistance.

"The money does not follow the student around to every activity a student engages in," Bator argued, saying the federal government should not be interfering where its aid does not

Grove City, wanting to stay free of federal intervention, contends it should be not be subject at all to Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 because it receives no federal money.

Arguing for Grove City, lawyer David Lascell of Rochester, N.Y., said the school fears that opening itself even a crack to federal oversight will bind the institution forever and ever to the federal government."

college does benefit from federal aid because some of its 2,200 students receive federal student grants and loans, which they use to pay tuition and room and board.

They have filed papers urging the high court to declare the entire school must abide by the federal sex discrimination law, which they credit with expanding women's opportunities in college sports and better-paying professions

The Reagan administration in August staked out its middle-of-the-road approach to the law that displeases both women's rights groups and the college.

The administration argues student aid is enough to make even a private college subject to the federal sex discrimination law. But it also contends only the specific school "programs or activities" receiving federal aid are covered.

Chief Justice Warren Burger, along with Justices Byron White and William Rehnquist, questioned whether a private school would become subject to the sex discrimination law if it accepts money from students receiving welfare or Social Security, as opposed to federal student loans.

But Bator said welfare and Social Security funds are different. Because they are not aimed at subsidizing education, he said, they do not obligate those who accept the money to abide by the law banning sex discrimination in education.

Panel investigates organized crime million budget to explore the nation's

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Organized crime reaches into every aspect of American life, costing taxpayers billions of dollars, threatening personal safety and fostering "human misery," the nation's top law enforcers testified Tuesday.

"Organized crime is a subject that affects all of us every day but generally is hidden from public view," Attorney General William French Smith declared at the opening session of the President's Commission on Organized Crime.

"It causes our taxes to go up, it adds to the cost of what we buy, and, worst of all, it threatens our personal safety and that of our families - indeed our very freedom." Smith joined FBI Director William Webster and Drug Enforcement Administrator Francis Mullen in decrying the effects of organized crime on society. The crime panel, established last year by President Reagan, has two years and a $5.5 organized crime problem and recommend ways to combat it.

"Our mandate is a broad one," said the commission chairman, Judge Irving Kaufman of New York. "The power of organized crime as an institution continues

WEBSTER SAID the nation is plagued by the traditional La Cosa Nostra families, which had their roots centuries ago in Italy, as well as the newer crime syndicates of prison and motorcycle gangs that have flourished in the last decade

"Although these criminal groups have often been glamorized in books, movies and television, they are associations of career criminals who operate with utter contempt for our laws and the rights of others," Webster said.

"In short, they are purveyors of crime, violence, death and human misery.

There are few businesses and industries that are not affected by organized criminal enterprises, costing Americans billions of dollars each year, Webster said.

"Such organizations are involved in every conceivable type of crime, including extortion, pornography, labor racketeering, bribery and murder," Webster said. "Their main sources of revenue, however, are narcotics and gambling."

Webster said two areas need more attention - organized crime infiltration of labor unions and international drug trafficking. He also said it is important to make sure drug-producing countries know the United States is serious about stopping the flow of illegal drugs.

"On the agenda, this issue has not yet achieved the status where we are willing to push and push hard," Webster said.

CEDAR RAPIDS, Iowa (UPI) - To avoid disappointing children — and adults - who won't be getting a Cabbage Patch doll under the Christmas tree, St. Luke's Hospital is offering birth certificates for any type of doll, officials said Tuesday.

"We know children's babies are very real to them," said Myrt Bowers, vice president of nursing at St. Luke's.

"When our Birthcare Center staff heard some children were being disappointed at not being able to adopt a certain brand of doll, we thought we could help a little and let them adopt any doll.' To obtain a birth certificate before Christmas, prospective parents must submit the doll's vital statistics - name, parent's name, birth weight, birth date and presiding doctor - to St. Luke's before

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) - Druze Moslem militias shelled Christian sectors of Beirut Tuesday in their heaviest artillery bombardment of the capital in two months, forcing the government media to delay two television news broadcasts.

Administration abuses attention gap military draft is legal. No law specifies how the draftee is to serve his country; only slight modifications would need to be made in previous practice so instead of restricting the draft to young males, the government also could draft Jane Byrne, William F. Buckley, Caroline Kennedy, Bill Cosby, Norman Mailer, Helen Gurley Brown, Jesse Helms and Jane Fonda to serve their country for a year or two (hostages naturally would be rotated, just like other draftees).

Americans can sleep easier at night knowing little Yuri Jr. lives in a cottage outside North American Air Defense headquarters on Chevenne Mountain, Colorado; Soviet leaders will have infinitely more nuclear peace of mind when they know Nancy Reagan beds down nights in the Kremlin, not the White House.

2) DEREGULATION: It is surprising that President Reagan, who understands so well that "When guns are outlawed, only outlaws will have guns," doesn't understand that the same principle applies to nuclear

As Ron and I both know, the teenage hoodlum across the street is a whole lot less likely to break into your house if he knows that even your 6-year-old sister sleeps with a loaded Smith and Wesson underneath her pillow. But Ron treats nuclear weapons like only the police - i.e., in this analogy, the federal government - should have

Strange answers halt arms race As the courts have previously ruled, a i.e., the Soviet thugs.

We should make nuclear missiles available to all nations. We've got plenty; we can sell the extras for a few million each, and do wonders toward restoring a balanced budget.

Right now, the Soviets know all they have to do is knock out few a U.S. installations and a couple of our allies, and the world will be defenseless to stop them. The U.S. knows the same about Soviet capabilities. But will U.S. or Soviet leaders dare fire a single nuclear weapon when they know even Bora Bora and Paraguay have thousands of megatons of their own to sling

Furthermore, state and local governments could also share in the responsibility, and have their own arsenals to sling if the situation warrants it? The Dubuque Nuke, the What Cheer Cruise Missile Command? At that point there will be none of this drivel about survivable nuclear wars - one blast sends them all, and ends it all.

3) Strategic placement: The technology is there to do it. CIA technicians attach an irremovable limited micro-nuclear explosive around the right thigh of Mr. Andropov as KGB technicians simultaneously attach a similar irremovable explosive around the right thigh of Mr. Reagan. Both Andropov and Reagan will be given a triggering device — but the activation of either device triggers both nukes. Now that's a real deterrent.

Last year when the University of Rochester's athletic director suggested college athletes be allowed to major in a sportsoriented college curriculum, it seemed merely a tongue-in-cheek attempt to draw attention to the sorry academic status of the modern student athlete.

But now an even more controversial topic - financial compensation for intercollegiate athletes - has been raised, apparently in earnest.

The National Collegiate Athletics Association recently appointed the Financial Aid for Student Athletes committee, which, in January 1985, will make recommendations concerning the advisability of paying college athletes in addition to the money they receive for tuition, room, board and books - expenses currently allowed by the NCAA.

Most Big Ten coaches object to the pay for play concept, recognizing that it would amount to a final bridge over the shrinking gap between collegiate and professional athletics. As lowa field hockey coach Judith Davidson put it, the idea of the 'salaried' student athlete "fundamentally violates the concept of amateur sports."

Although UI wrestling coach Dan Gable agrees athletes at the college level should not receive financial compensation, football coach Hayden Fry disagrees, saying student athletes should receive "laundry money" to help finance school expenses. (Fry apparently has a distaste for laundry: He wants it done by "little dumplings," and now by university financing.)

The last thing college recruiters need is another temptation in the recruiting pool; present regulations already are abused to a disturbing extent. Stipends for the student athlete undoubtedly will grow if the practice is sanctioned, effectively converting the NCAA into a semi-professional league.

The current scholarship system provides adequate reimbursement and recognition for skills displayed in the athletic arena. Additional financial rewards would only go further in making the term "student athlete" a true oxymoron.

public is likely to be inattentive. The most frustrating thing about covering Ronald Reagan for many reporters has been the public's indifference to his factual errors. Both his mangling of facts and his inability to speak either intelligently or extemporaneously are common knowledge among members of the White House press corps. But beyond reporters, that knowledge has much less newsworthiness.

The Reagan administration took advantage of this attention gap long before Grenada. The Libyan hit men the missing hit men - supposedly sent by Khadafy to assassinate Reagan, made front pages and magazine covers

Reports that the Libyan hit squad was a myth never made the front page.

IN ADDITION to its experience at making rumors into news, the Reagan administration believes that the presentation of an idea can be more important than the idea itself. The New Right can trace much of its success in recent years to attractive packaging: massive mail order campaigns, simple messages, glossy magazine layouts and, frequently, a selective, parochial, perhaps willful ignorance of world affairs. They would like to make this ignorance contagious.

This is no longer the era, as Alan Wolfe writes in the Nation, of "liberal empire builders" like Truman and Kennedy, who "sponsored campaigns responsibilities of ... global leadership

During those times there was selfserving manipulation of international news, but the amount of information reaching the public increased, and, according to Wolfe, people "did begin to understand more about the world into which they were thrust after World War II."

The 1980s have seen a continuing decrease in foreign affairs coverage by the media.

This is the era of disinformation, of a propaganda war funded by the administration to combat the real or imagined influence of communist propaganda on the U.S. media. And it is fitting that the highest representative of a political hierarchy that is so afraid of the power of ideas, so aware of the power of packaging, chooses to restrict information flow once in

That's the question people should ask themselves about the Reagan administration as next year's election grows closer, especially when they consider issues such as "yellow rain." ## Television and trial law are 'theater,' says lawyer Riley

By Colleen Kelly Special to the Daily Iowan

Cedar Rapids attorney Tom Riley, noted for his defense of leukemia victim William Head and plaintiffs in the toxic shock syndrome controversy, told a group of UI broadcasting students Monday similarities exist between television news and trial

"Television is theatre, and so is trial law," Riley said. He compared a jury to a television newscast's audience, and suggested that lawyers and news programmers must overcome the same problems of short attention spans, disinterest and distractions of the jurors and viewers, and the difficulty of explaining complex issues in understandable terms.

Riley does not, however, advocate joining these parallel professions by allowing cameras in the courtroom. "There is a genuine fear that it would interfere with the process of justice. There is a genuine fear for the witnesses," he said.

The attorney also said "it is a valid criticism that television cameras in the courtroom would distort the trial," because a 30 second news report cannot accurately summarize a month-long trial.

RILEY'S EXPERIENCE of 12 years on the Iowa Legislature has taught him that television cameras can change human behavior. "When I was in the legislature, I know that there was always more debate when that little red light on top of the television camera was on.

Although Riley said he believes that "communication by mass merchandising, such as television, has made the American public more informed," he did criticize the media.

'As the result of a reporter not notifying me, I was called 'sleazy' on national radio by Paul Harvey," Riley recalled. The lawyer explained that after he defended a toxic shock syndrome victim in Cedar Rapids, lawyers from around the country defending similar cases wrote to Riley requesting information about the Iowa trial.

After consulting his client, Riley sent letters to these lawyers offering to sell the transcript of the trial and some exhibits. The proceeds were to defray his client's legal fees.

A reporter got a copy of the letter and "it got on the air that I was 'selling evidence,' " Riley said. Later, commentator Paul Harvey picked up the story from one of the wire services and quoted an anonymous lawyer who said, "It may be legal, but it

After Riley explained that the proceeds were going to his client, Harvey apologized.

Salvador to vote on its constitution

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (UPI) - The Constituent Assembly, nearing the end of months of debate, will vote today on the country's new constitution to pave the way for crucial presidential elections next year. The constitution must be approved before a presidential election, scheduled for March 25,

The document, originally scheduled for completion in April, has been delayed by bickering between rightists and moderates over land reform, which remains the last major problem before the body.

But the Popular Democratic Unity, a 500,000-member labor coalition, promised to pack the galleries of the assembly to demand the inclusion of a broad package of land reforms in the constitution.

The document is being drafted under a U.S.backed plan to establish a democratic system in El Salvador to weaken popular support for the leftist rebel movement.

Spokesmen for the coalition, called the UPD, said they were lobbying assemblymen for an article in the constitution that would limit individual holdings of productive farmland to 250 acres.

Volleyball moves from 'rags to riches'

A person looking for one word to describe the 1983 Iowa volleyball season might say "Cinderella." That term would imply that the Hawkeye volleyball program, like the fairy tale, went from rags to riches in a short period of time. That statement is true by virtue of Iowa's improved record over 1982. The Hawkeyes, 10-23 last season, earned a trip to their first Big Ten tournament by compiling a 22-9 overall mark this year.

But when the Iowa squad stops getting compared to last year's team, Hawkeyes had a good volleyball team compared to the rest of the schools in the ever-improving Big Ten.

IOWA, UNDER second-year coach Sandy Stewart, was one of only five teams to finish with a winning record in the Big Ten. The Hawkeyes only conference losses came to Big Ten champion Northestern, runner-up Purdue, and qualifier Ohio State.

Iowa put an end to a previous 15match Minnesota domination by humbling the Gophers twice this season. The Hawkeyes' record 15-match winning streak covered victories over in-

Northern Iowa.

In fact, the only goal Stewart set for her volleyball squad that wasn't realized was a first-place finish in the Western Division. Iowa finished second behind powerhouse Northwestern after leading the division the first half of the

BUT THE GOALS Stewart set and the Hawkeyes met were proof enough to the opposing Big Ten coaches.

Despite the presence of two of the most celebrated coaches in collegiate volleyball, Boilermaker Coach Carol Dewey and Wildcat Coach Jerry Angle, Coach of the Year.

Stewart rarely cited coaching expertise when attributing her team's success, however, and throughout the year, she credited the 1983 seasonal turnaround to her squad's coersion and teamwork. With the absence of a bigname player such as Minnesota's Martie Larsen, Northwestern's Pattijean McCahill or Ohio State's Lisa Bettio, Iowa's cooperative effort was essential for a winning season in the Big Ten.

After he had watched his team fall to Iowa in three quick games, Illinois Coach Mike Hebert said he didn't know how the Hawkeyes were continuing to defeat teams in the Big Ten. At the time, Iowa was 18-3 with a division leading 5-0 conference record.

INDEED THE Hawkeyes were surprising a lot of teams in the Midwest. A ook at the Iowa rooster indicated Iowa's two tallest hitters, freshman Lana Kuiper and sophomore Nancy Wohlford, were only 5-foot-11. The Hawkeye middle hitters, Julie Micheletti, 5-8, and Dee Ann Davidson, 5-9, were not imposing figures on paper

Nebraska maintains stronghold in ratings

narrow escape for Nebraska did much good for No. 2 Texas in this week's UPI Coaches' college football ratings.

Despite a scary 28-21 victory over Oklahoma, the Cornhuskers received 33 of a possible 36 first-place votes and 537 points. Texas, which also finished its regular season, gained two more first-place votes than last week to give the Longhorns three votes for the top spot and 504 points.

It isn't good enough for Texas Coach Fred Akers.

"Right now, I don't think we're second to anybody," he said.

Nevertheless, the Longhorns find themselves in precisely that situation entering the bowl season. The last regular season ratings will be released next week and the final rankings to determine a national champion will follow the bowl games.

THE TOP 11 teams remained the same after a light weekend. Nebraska and Texas are followed by No. 3 linois, No. 6 Southern Methodist, No. 7 Georgia, No. 8 Michigan, No. 9 Brigham Young, No. 10 Iowa and No.

Boston College moved up three spots to 12th after its 20-13 victory over Alabama, which knocked the Tide from 12th to out of the rankings. Rounding out the Top 20 are No. 13 Ohio State, No. 14 Pittsburgh, No. 15 Maryland, No. 16 Air Force, No. 17 Baylor, No. 18 Virginia Tech, No. 19 West Virginia and No. 20 Oklahoma.

Texas, Southern Methodist and Georgia finished their regular seasons with victories Saturday. The Longhorns crushed Texas A&M, 45-13, to finish 11-0 and win the Southwest Conference title outright. SMU pelted Houston, 34-12, in the Mirage Bowl Sunday morning in Tokyo for a 10-1 finish, and Georgia nipped Georgia Tech, 27-24, to improve to 9-1-1.

OKLAHOMA, 7-4, tumbled four spots after losing to Nebraska. Idle Maryland, Air Force, Baylor and Virginia Tech all moved up two places. ldle West Virginia, 8-3, rejoined the rankings after a one-week absence.

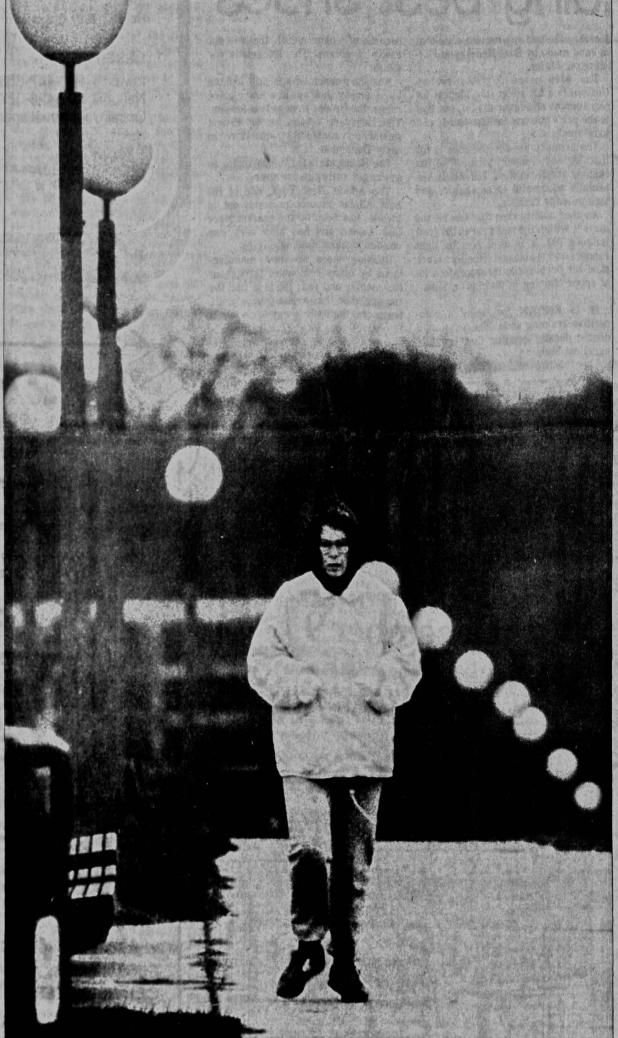

Nebraska was ranked first since the preseason and solidified its rating with 4-6 season-opening victory over Penn State. The Cornhuskers are an Orange Bowl victory against Miami away from a perfect season. "To go 12-0 is a tremendous feat," Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne said. But we still have a tough game left in the Orange Bowl."

Intensity still missing from lowa offense By Greg Anderson

Although Iowa racked up 86 points in its trouncing of Illinois Wesleyan last Saturday, Hawkeye basketball Coach George Raveling said his team's offensive play is what concerns him the most right now.

"We need to maintain defensive intensity, but we also need to be a little more aggressive offensively," Raveling said Tuesday at his weekly press conference. "We passed up a lot of good shots, which is good and bad." The first-year Iowa coach said he has "an unselfish team," and he especially noted the play of senior co-captain Craig Anderson, who Raveling believes passed up many potential points in favor of passing to an open teammate.

"HE (ANDERSON) said after the game that they had a better shot than he had, and I respect him for that," Raveling said.

While his team has to play within an offensive structure, Raveling said he would also like the Hawkeyes to use their natural talent and take opponents one-on-one as well.

"I want some framework," Raveling said. "But within the framework, I would like to see the players utilize their God-given abilities ... I told the team yesterday that I want them to be as aggressive on offense as they are on defense."

Raveling said Saturday's game was a productive opener against Illinois Wesleyan, despite the lack of aggressiveness on offense and a slip in defensive intensity during the second

"We should drop Louisville and Oregon State, because we can beat Illinois Wesleyan and still move up two spots," he said. "If we schedule Pan Handle State and beat them by 60, we'll probably move up three notches."

AGAINST WESLEYAN, sophomore Brad Lohaus had the best game of his young career, scoring 16 points and hauling down 12 rebounds. Raveling has yet to quit praising the 7-foot cen-

"You have to have a sense of humor," Raveling said. "Sometimes you need the ability to laugh at yourself. I want the players to look forward to coming to practice."

Few teams able to achieve dynasty status

In major sports history, only a few teams have been good enough or great enough to be dubbed a dynasty.

Among these super squads are the Boston Celtics and UCLA Bruins in basketball, New York Yankees in baseball and hockey's Montreal Canadiens and the modern day dynasty New York Islanders.

It is understood that argument will persist considering other teams that have been good enough to reach the so called "dynasty" level, including everything from the Pittsburgh Steelers of the 1970s to the Iowa wrestlers. However, these teams are

THE TEAM WAS coached by Red Auerbach who put names such as playmaker superstar Bob Cousy and Bill Russell on the floor.

George Vecsey of the New York Times summed up the Celtic celebrations in his book, Pro Basketball Champions. "Eight years! Just think of it. With plenty of other good teams in the league, the Celtics were champions eight straight times. No professional team ever came close to that record and perhaps no team ever will again." If the Celtics did not convince basketball fans and alike that they were a dynasty, UCLA did.

Under the guidance of John Wooden the Bruins were NCAA champions seven consecutive times (1967-73) and 10 times in 12 years.

Hot winter ahead for cage fans

Hot basketball action will help many Eastern Iowans warm-up during some cold winter nights.

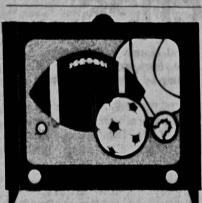

Not only is Iowa's entire basketball schedule on tap for the second consecutive year, but many other games will also be at the viewers' fingertips.

KWWL-7 in Waterloo will telecast the majority of Iowa's games again this season in the final year of its three-year contract with the Iowa Athletic Department. Sealed bids for a new contract will be opened in mid-December.

Three organizations, KGAN-2 in Cedar Rapids, WQAD-8 in Moline, Ill., and Carnaby Square Teleproductions, a Waterloo organization owned by KWWL, are expected to bid for the lucrative contract.

A RECENT ICE storm destroyed KWWL's 2,000-foot tower, but a backup has been put into use and viewers will be able to see the games as scheduled. However, a fuzzy picture could cause problems in Iowa City until the nine-month construction process is completed and Hawkeye fans may find WOC-6 in Davenport, another member of the Iowa Television Network, a good

But as the money battles go on, the Big Ten will begin its second year under a contract with MetroSports, a Virginia-based company that syndicates various sporting events around the country throughout the year.

MetroSports will televise 30 Big Ten contests beginning with the Iowa-Michigan State game on Jan. 4. MetroSports will broadcast games every Wednesday and Saturday even- Video games ing and every Saturday afternoon during the league season.

OTHER IOWA GAMES being broadcast by MetroSports include games at Indiana and Minnesota and home contests against Wisconsin, Purdue, Ohio State and Michigan. The Iowa Television Network has purchased the rights to the MetroSports package and will televise them throughout the year as well as other Big Ten contests.

Network television also remains excited about the Big Ten with seven games scheduled, the first being Saturday's Indiana-Kentucky game on CBS

Other CBS games include Oregon State at Michigan State on Feb. 5, Indiana at Illinois on Mar. 4 and Michigan State at Iowa in a national telecast on the final day of the season, Mar. 11.

NBC (KWWL-7) has three games slated, including the Iowa-Illinois game on Feb. 12 that will be shown on a semi-national basis. NBC will also televise the Feb. 19 Illinois-Michigan State game and the Michigan State-Indiana contest on Feb. 26.

So, looking for something to do this weekend other than beat your way through lines at the malls?

Why not check out Iowa's Gator Bowl opponent Florida as the Gators meet intrastate rival Florida State. The game will be televised nationally on CBS (KGAN-2) beginning at 11:30 a.m. on Saturday.

Al McGuire, the softspoken gent he isn't, will take a look at the college basketball season this Saturday at 4:30 p.m. on NBC (KWWL-7). McGuire holds a dear spot in his heart for Iowa after Hawkeye fans mailed him numerous corn cobs when Iowa advanced to the Final Four several years ago.

The Hawkeyes look to continue their unbeaten basketball season in the second Amana-Hawkeye Classic this weekend at the Carver-Hawkeye Arena. The games aren't a part of the season tickets and the event is sold out. KWWL-7 will have live coverage of both of the Iowa games, other Wednesday.

Runners' feat: Finding best shoes

Running shoes. Do most runners know what to look for in a running shoe and how to find a running shoe that is especially suited for them?

Running shoes have continued to evolve and expand to meet the needs of some 30 million runners in the United States. Running shoes that have been released in the past year have a variety of characteristics that are tailored to help the average runner in the many shapes and sizes that runners come in.

One of these shoes is the Brooks Chariot which is an excellent shoe for both men and women alike. The Chariot is a training shoe that can be used by almost all runners.

The Chariot can provide a quality running shoe for pronators, supinators and high mileage runners. The Chariot accomplishes this by the Diagonal Rollbar TM which is unique to the Brooks Shoe, Inc., manufactured shoe.

The $150 price of the Hershey Custom is a bit steep (the highest for any running shoe ever made), but that is the price you pay for the quality of a hand made shoe

The primary use for the shoe is for that of any runner because of its custom made design, but it is especially successful in supinators and high-mileage runners.

Another quality shoe that has hit the market within the last year is the New Balance 700. It is used best by light runners and is also and excellent track shoe for people who incorporate a lot of speed training in their programs.

IT IS KNOWN for being a comdouble density counter that provides excellent stability

For the runner who is still looking for a quality shoe but in a lower price range, the Brooks Renegade is for you. The Renegade retails for $34.95 and should be available in athletic store in early December.

The Renegade is for the beginning to average mileage runner.

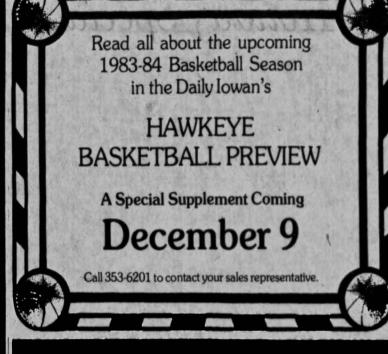

The Adidas New York, one of the best Adidas models to come out in awhile, has been on the market since last August and has been very successful in most running circles.

Running shoes are now manufactured by many companies throughout the country and your job is to find the running shoe that meets your specific needs and the easiest way to do this is petitive training shoe. The 700 uses a to contact your local athletic store.

Successful movies such as the Rocky series constitute only part of HBO's

HBO and Hollywood are 'interdependent'

By Merwyn Grote

This is the second of a three part series on sion: Is it worth this much money to cheap programming. You can and then you get back something that looks like it crawled out from the floor." - Michael Fuchs, president of HBO's Entertainment Division.

HE ONE indisputable networks is a voracious appetite for programming. Despite its practice of repeatedly showing its films and special programs - often to the point where they become extremely tiresome - HBO recognizes the necessity of keeping its programming slate as fresh and varied as possible in order to keep its viewers satisfied.

The immense size of HBO, which along with its sister organization Cinemax controls about 60 percent of the pay cable market, virtually guarantees it the ability to obtain almost all of the major Hollywood feature films. But Hollywood's yearly output - approximately 120 films annually - isn't enough to meet HBO's annual need for 200 features. The need to keep a steady flow of films available, plus the financial and prestigious advantages of becoming film producers as well as a distributor, explains handily the cable company's growing desire to invade Hollywood's

The movie industry and the television industry are still very real rivals, yet they simultaneously share an uncomfortable financial interdependence. Though the last few years have the appearance of being boom years in the film industry, the record-breaking profits registered by the studios are, like much of Hollywood, an illusion. A few enormous hits like the Star Wars trilogy, Raiders of the Lost Ark, E. T., The Extraterrestrial and Tootsie account for much of the box office grosses, leaving a few scraps that must be divided between all remaining films. Indeed, six out of every ten films fail to show a return on their production and advertising costs, and the few that do show a profit are dependent on money from such ancillary markets as foreign distribution, network and syndicated television showings - and, to an ever increasing degree, cable

WITH HBO SERVICING about 11 million homes and having a potential viewership of three to four times this, a single showing on the cable company makes it available to a number of viewers that would rival even the most successful blockbuster. A subscribership of this size also generates revenues of $440 million to $500 million for the cable system. Of course, a large share of this money goes to the Hollywood studios for the cablecasting rights to their films. The share of Hollywood revenues from cable companies like HBO, Cinemax, Showtime and The Movie Channel have grown from only about three percent in 1977

But at the same time HBO and its competitors are dependent on the studios. The chief selling point for the film industry.

Television

cable systems is the quality of the movies that they can show and their ability to show them uncensored and uninterrupted by commercials. Furthermore, the allure of cable's theatrical success. It is, for example, more attractive to potential subscribers if they can see Star Wars, An Officer and a Gentleman and Rocky III than if the best the cable company offer is Jinxed, Little Miss Marker and Vice Squad. It is not so important that HBO show recent films, or even good films, as it is that they show pre-sold films with proven popularity - and that means box office hits.

BUT THE NEED to simply fill time has prompted HBO to enter film production in three ways: by supplying partial financing to independently produced films, by going into joint ventures with studios and the broadcast networks and by wholly financing features exclusively for their system. All three methods have their advan-

HBO partially finances independently produced films during or even before actual production begins in exchange for exclusive cable rights. In this fashion HBO has gained exclusive rights to On Golden Pond, Tootsie, First Blood, Gandhi, Fort Apache, the Bronx, Ragtime, Absence of Malice, An American Werewolf in London, and many others for a fraction of what it would have cost had it bargained for them after successful theatrical runs. Even investments in box office flops like Amityville II, Honky Tonk Freeway or Six Weeks are not damaging to the cable company because it still gains viable films that will, if nothing else, fill up time. Either way, HBO has a product that is exclusively its own for the showing.

THE MERGER BETWEEN HBO, Columbia Pictures and CBS television is based on the rationale that there is safety in numbers: all three companies will share in the risks of producing a film, as well as in the potential rewards. This also ensures that a film will have distribution outlets in theaters, on cable and on the network, thus gaining some degree of security for all three entities. CBS is ensured that it will not be frozen out by the rise of cable power while Columbia gains a foothold on the potentially profitable cable market, and HBO gains further leverage in film production.

Finally, there is the move toward made-for-cable films. With productions like "The Terry Fox Story," "Between Friends," and "Right of Way," HBO gains financial independence, cablecast exclusivity and editorial control of their programming. They can tailor their films to what they perceive as their potential audience and avoid the need to haggle with studios over price.

The third story in this series will deal with HBO's planned expansion into the

The other principals include her partner, Kurt Pitzig, and Catherine Yoshimura, Gerard Charles (who dances the Nutcracker Prince) and Paula Weber. Soloist Cynthia Schowalter has won critical acclaim for her interpretation of Clara Stahlbaum, the little girl whose fantasy about the Nutcracker Prince provides the raison d'etre for an evening of dancing.

The Milwaukee Ballet was formed 15 fourth season of presenting years ago and includes in its repertoire a wide variety of modern and classical including choreographed by Balanchine, Agnes de Mille and Hans van Manen. Most of the dancers are not, in fact, from Milwaukee but come to the company from professional engagements with dance troupes both here in the United States and abroad. The most recent addition, Michele Fons (who left the Royal Ballet for Milwaukee last spring), is already a soloist at the age of 21. ## 'Joseph' singer moves well between her musical worlds

By Kathryn Helene

HEY CALLED HER "Supersonic Boom" Boudreau in high school In the few years since then, some things have changed for singer Robin Boudreau, but one thing hasn't: as she noted in a recent telephone interview, "I still have this fluke of a big voice in a tiny body."

Boudreau has an opportunity to show off that voice in her leading role in the musical Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat, which will be performed in Hancher Auditorium December 2 and 3. Boudreau plays the role of the narrator in Joseph a role which requires a sophisticated vocal technique and which allows her to do some "high belting."

Joseph was the first collaboration between Andrew Lloyd Webber and Tim Rice, who are also wellknown for Jesus Christ Superstar and Evita. Boudreau explained the success of this revival of Joseph: "People are touched by the message of the show. When Joseph explains the dreams of the Pharaoh, you realize that everyone has special dreams of their own."

Robin Boudreau's personal dream is to become a rock star - a dream fueled by her work on Broadway in Pirates of Penzance with Linda Ronstadt. "I played Linda's little sister, Kate, in the show. Linda was a wonderful person, and very generous in sharing with me the singing tricks of the

"At heart," Boudreau continued, "as much as I love Broadway, I really feel like a rocker. With rock music, you can use each song to tell a different

WHEN BOUDREAU IS in New York, working onor off-Broadway, she performs an after-hours nightclub act at the Horn of Plenty club in the West Village. On stage at the Horn, Boudreau can "come out as a funky lady," and express her "rocking self."

It's a strenuous schedule, obviously not meant for everyone. But Boudreau relishes the multiple roles and even the physical demands required. "When I was younger, I was a Junior Olympic gymnast. And I grew up on a farm in Pennsylvania, milking goats and shoveling manure, so I like hard work and auditioned during a cattle call for Pirates, Boudreau was one of only seven chosen. In addition to working with Linda Ronstadt, Boudreau worked with the 'gorgeous" Kevin Kline in Pirates. The Pirates cast also performed on "Saturday Night Live," which, in turn, led to a part for Boudreau on the soap opera "One Life to Live."

As a singer, Boudreau has performed with the American Wind Symphony Orchestra. It seems apparent from all this work and success that classical music, Broadway and rock all succumb to the talents
