Sewer vote ends work at plant site

By Carlos Trevino

The Iowa City Council voted 3-3 Tuesday night on funding a $10 million interceptor sewer - the first part of a proposed four-phased $50 million sewer project — resulting in a "temporary" stoppage of the new plant, according to Councilor John McDonald.

The tie vote will cause next year's council to "be up to their eyeballs in work" trying to decide whether the city needs to renovate the current sewage treatment plant or construct a new plant, according to City Manager

The proposed $10 million interceptor sewer would have connected the current plant with the proposed plant, which is planned for the southeast side of the city, according to plans by city consultants Veenstra & Kimm Inc. Engineers and Planners, and the city

Mayor Mary Neuhauser and Councilors Larry Lynch and John Balmer the two councilors on the Wastewater Treatment Facility Committee voted in favor of acquiring loans for the project while Councilors McDonald, Kate Dickson and David Perret voted against it.

IF THE COUNCIL had approved the sewer, future councils would be committed to following the four-phase plan for the next 30 years without an opportunity to withdraw at any time, according to Councilor Clemens Erdahl, who did not make it to the meeting.

Berlin said "nothing has happened" to reject the Veenstra & Kimm fourphased plan, which provides for renovation of the old plant, the repair of sewer lines and construction of a ing over in January will have to deal with the problem.

"I have no idea when this (sewage plant) will come up again, the new council will have to discuss it after January," Berlin said. The new council will also be preoccupied with arranging the fiscal 1985 city budget, he ad-

Neuhauser said she was disappointed the proposal was rejected. "It will have an effect and I can't even tell how much this will stall the project.

"I didn't think it would pass. ... I knew John McDonald was not in favor of the plan, and the other two councilors (Dickson and Perret) weren't either. I think they really didn't like the amount of money being spent on Neuhauser said she did not know why McDonald voted against the project, but "You don't have to say why you're not in favor ... you just vote no.

MCDONALD SAID he voted against the plans because "I'm just not at a point where I want to commit the people to a $50 million project.

"This (the four-phased plan) might be the best plan to follow," McDonald said, "but I think there might be other solutions to the problems. McDonald said he knew of other local engineers who did not believe the Veenstra & Kimm plan was the best way to solve the city's sewer problems. He added: "Veenstra-Kimm are convinced this is the best plan. If it is, then it still will be three or four months from now.'

Erdahl said he would have voted See Sewer, page 8 boarding planes at Iowa airports fell steadily since deregulation began, the trend may be reversing as about 100,000 more passengers are expected to be served this year than in 1982, according to the Iowa Department of Transportation.

In the first half of 1983, 712,683 passengers boarded planes in Iowa (including some passengers who boarded at Moline, Ill. and Omaha, Neb.) — a 6 percent increase over the same period last year, Iowa DOT Aeronautics Division Director Al Hoover said.

While the total number of U.S. passenger flights per week increased slightly between June 1978 and June 1983, some cities experienced significant increases in the number of departures and other cities lost air service entirely. Since deregulation, "128 cities have totally lost service," said John Mazor, spokesman of the Air Line Pilots Association.

Students warned of thefts

By Patricia Reuter

Thefts of personal property from the Union Bookstore and the UI Main Library are on the increase, according to UI Campus Security. Police are asking students to be especially careful about leaving belongings unattended at either location. Campus security officers also warn that vehicles in UI storage lots are vulnerable to thefts of tires, batteries and stereo equipment.

Campus security reported three thefts of personal belongings from campus buildings Wednesday.

David Igram, 806 Benton Drive, reported his backpack and books, valued at $97, were stolen from the Union Bookstore Tuesday

George Mahowald, 202 Ellis Ave., reported his backpack and books, valued at $100, were stolen from the UI Main Library.

Also stolen from the library was a wallet belonging to Mark Stopher, 1130 Rienow Residence Hall. Stopher reportedly recovered the wallet, but his IDs and credit cards were missing.

Theft: David Cole, 1805 Fifth St., reported to Iowa City police Wednesday that his backpack and books, with a combined value of $120, were stolen from Burger Palace, Shigeo Motoike, New York bureau chief for Yomiuri Shimbun - the world's largest daily newspaper - stressed the perception gap between Japan and America during his visit to Iowa City this week.

Motoike spoke to about 40 people in the English-Philosophy Building Tuesday and described the difficulty of foreign reporting in an interview with The Daily Iowan Wed-

Steven Vlastos, associate professor of history, and Thomas H. Rohlich, assistant professor in Asian languages, were also panelists for Tuesday's discussion sponsored by Council on International and Comparative

Motoike opened the discussion with a short speech outlining some causes of tension and common misperceptions in Japanese-American relations

Motoike stressed, "The language problem is one of the biggest existing between Japan and the United States." He called it "the main cause of trade friction.

He said one problem is that Americans are ethnocentric and think they "don't need to learn other languages" because they expect foreigners to learn English.

MOTOIKE SAID another large perception gap is caused by Americans taking for granted their vast natural resources and failing to appreciate the basic Japanese problems of limited resources and space, combined with becoming more aware that their natural resources won't last forever." He said the United States can learn by studying how Japan has dealt with its problems.

Because of Japan's economic and trade dependence, Motoike said many Japanese see the United States as a friendly "big brother who should overlook Japan's difficulties."

He said Americans should realize "Japan's economic growth is in the interest of self-For example, Motoike said the "barriers on imports of beef and oranges (into Japan) are justified for food security."

He said the major cause of Japan's trade deficit is the devaluation of U.S. dollars, which makes Japanese goods worthless because American products can be bought so This problem is compounded because consumers choose American products for their higher quality.

MOTOIKE HAS WORKED for Yomiuri Shimbun for more than 18 years, reporting in Hong Kong, Tokyo, Washington, D.C., and

He said his difficulties as a foreign correspondent are similiar to those of the American press in Japan.

Japanese government bureaus are covered foreign reporters, he said.

In Washington, D.C. Motoike found "the Reagan administration has very strict limitations at the White House press room ... with chairs only for U.S. reporters. Foreigners have to stand in the back of the room."

He described Washington, D.C. as "an artificial city," and said it is difficult to get an idea of popular American opinion because of the "high quality" newspapers available in

"It is easier to know the real voice of American people in New York City," Motoike said, because "papers like the New York Post reflect American opinion."

"TABLOIDS ARE very interesting to foreigners as an indication of what Americans think," he said.

"Japan's misperceptions about Americans are mostly social," he said, and the shortage of newspaper space available for foreign affairs limits coverage of the everyday life of average Americans.

Motoike said that although the Japanese love popular American culture - baseball. football, rock music, Broadway shows - "it is difficult to introduce the American feel-

Plant to avoid water shut-off despite breaks

The UI Physical Plant will, if possible, avoid turning off the water to UI facilities if breaks in the main water lines continue, Jim Deatsch, plant foreman said Wednesday.

Cold weather has caused two underground water pipe breaks on campus in the past two days. In both instances, however, the water had to be turned off.

Physical plant employees worked on a main line break on Madison Street next to the Union Wednesday morning and also on a main line break in Hillcrest Residence Hall's west parking lot Tuesday night.

Another water pipe break occurred Nov. 29 on Grand Avenue between Rienow and Slater Residence Halls, but the water was left on.

The physical plant tries to leave the water on if it is feasible to do so. "We intend repairing it 'hot' if we can, because otherwise, it puts the outage on the students and faculty, and we don't like to do that," Deatsch said.

The breaks are caused by shifting ground, which usually happens during a temperature change. This shifting may cause the cast iron pipe to crack or separate. Then workmen must locate the break and cover it.

Committee selected to seek new dean

By Kirk Brown

Howard Laster, dean of the UI College of Liberal Arts, announced Wednesday at a meeting of the college's faculty "that a hard working committee that is already working hard" has been formed to search for his replacement.

Laster, who has been dean of the college since 1975, announced earlier this fall he plans to step down from his position next fall because of a continuing battle against cancer. The members of the search committee include: Chairman Sam Becker, Carol de Saint Victor, Lawrence Gelfand, John Menniger, Paul Muhly, Yvonne Slatton, Marilyn Somville and Diana Velez. The search for a new dean is expected to begin in earnest within the next few weeks now that a search committee has been officially selected.

LASTER ALSO announced that UI Vice President for Academic Affairs Richard Remington will represent the administration on the committee.

mville, director of the UI School of Music, said there will also be student representation on the search committee. "Right now we are not sure how many students will be on the committee or what part they will play."

Somville, pointing out that the newlyformed committee has only met twice, said, "Most of those details will be ironed out within the next week."

Once the committee's composition is inalized, Somville said its first order of business will be to "send out adverements announcing the position and ontaining a job description

Somville also said the UI faculty members will be receiving "letters in the mail soliciting nominees for the While Somville said she is unsure when the search committee will begin screening candidates for the post,

Laster said, "I would like to be able to pass the gavel to my successor by the start of the next academic year.'

He added, "It is probably unrealistic to expect to be able to do so much

At Wednesday's meeting Sherwood Tuttle, associate dean of the college, also released a report of the college's adjustment committee.

TUTTLE SAID the committee, which handles special problems of students, reviewed more than 70 petitions from students this fall. The report also includes data showing that although the number of students dismissed from the college for poor scholarship has risen in the past year, the percentage of those students has remained nearly constant. "In 1981-82, 308 students were dropped from the college because of poor scholarship, which was 2.1 percent of the college's enrollment at that time, Last year 423 students were dismissed from the college because of poor scholarship. "But because of the recent enrollment (increases) in the college that is only 2.7 percent," Tuttle "While it seems like the mean old deans are really bouncing people, the percentage has not really gone up very much." he said.

The liberal arts faculty also approved name changes for two departments in the the college.

The changes, which now await approval by the state Board of Regents, include retitling the Zoology Department as the Department of Biology and switching the name of the Department of Physical Education-Field House to the Department of Exercise Science and Physical Education.

Laster said the title change of the Zoology Department would not result in major curriculum changes. However, in physical education the name change would also be accompanied by the offering of a bachelor of science degree in exercise science.

The burger war in Iowa City seems to be heating up.

While McDonald's Restaurant area supervisor Kevin O'Brien had "no comment" when questioned whether McDonald's has found a downtown site, he clarified his statement by adding, "I couldn't tell you if I knew.

O'Brien was asked if McDonald's was considering the purchase of the Astro Theatre, owned by the Central States Theater Corp. of Des Moines. "It's kind of away from where we want to be," he said. "But I'm not saying we're not. Nothing's for sure."

O'Brien did say McDonald's is currently "doing feasibility studies on several different buildings" in downtown Iowa City.

He also said businesses in Iowa City should "take better care of the downtown area. If McDonald's is downtown, you won't see all kinds of trash around. ... And the last thing we want (at McDonald's restaurants) is plastic wood and vinyl seats.'

Recruiters to interview physical therapists

About 50 recruiters representing hospitals and other institutions that hire physical therapists from 10 different states will gather in the Union Ballroom for "Recruitment Day" Friday from 1 to 5 p.m.

The program is being sponsored by the UI Physical Therapy School and is an opportunity for physical therapy students who will graduate in May to look at their options for employment, said Byron Bork, faculty member in the Physical Therapy Educational Program.

The recruiters will set up displays of their institutions and will conduct informal interviews. "This is done as a service to the students," Bork said. "It (physical therapy) is a fast growing area."

OPP to conduct survey

The Iowa State Office of Planning and Programming will conduct a free 'personnel management systems' survey of Johnson County.

The Johnson County Board of Supervisors gave permission to Bruce Ray of the OPP's Local Affairs Division to begin work on the survey at its informal meeting Tuesday.

Ray said the survey will cover four areas of county government: personnel policies, written job descriptions, job classification plans and compensation plans.

Ray said questionnaires on job duties and salaries will be distributed to county workers. After the OPP receives the questionnaires, it will tabulate the information and compare the policies and pay scales within the departments. The results will then be sent to county, he said. The presentation was well received by county department heads. Johnson County Clerk of Court Mary Conklin said the survey is "a real good idea."

The survey was originally requested by county auditor Tom Slockett about two years ago. It took the OPP two years to get to Johnson County because there is a long waiting list of counties and municipalities that have requested the survey, Ray said.

Library sponsors magazine exchange

The Iowa City Public Library is beginning a free magazine exchange. Current magazines can be traded at the west end of the first floor.

Carol Spaziani, community services librarian, said the program is an experiment suggested by a library patron. "It is not located in a supervised area, and the philosophy of it is an exchange, but if all anyone does is take them (magazines) there wouldn't be any exchange."

Spaziani stressed that the library cannot accommodate large boxes of back issues. "It's not really a place where you can clean out 10 years of back files, but is intended for when you finish a month or so of a magazine, you can drop them off and pick up

Board hears curriculum proposal

The Iowa City School Board received presentations of proposed 1984-85 secondary school curriculum from City High School, West High School, Northwest Junior High School and Southeast Junior High School Tuesday

At the next board meeting, Dec. 20, the proposals will be voted on. Howard Vernon, principal of City High, said proposed deletions at City High include classes titled Selling Fundamentals, Metal Processing and Plastics.

Honors courses in geometry, trigonometry and algebra are proposed additions for the curriculum. One-third of the curriculum for each school is reviewed each year.

$65,000 in damages sought for 1981 crash

A woman injured in a 1981 car accident is suing the driver of the other vehicle for $65,000, according to a suit filed in Johnson County District Court Wednesday.

Phyllis Rohret allegedly suffered "severe pain and personal injuries" after a collision with a car driven by Elizabeth A. Wood eight miles south of Iowa City on U.S. Highway 1 Dec. 12, 1981. The suit claims the accident was caused by Wood's negligence.

Goettler claims that due to the accident she has suffered physical injury and emotional anguish as a result of scarring and medical expenses.

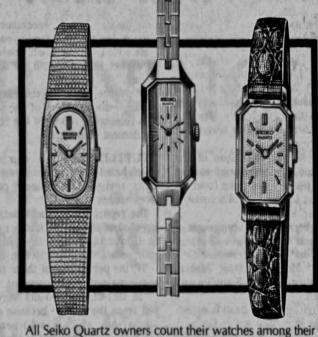

Goettler also filed a motion that the suit be tried by a jury.

Protester dedicates placard to prisoner

If pedestrians had stopped to closely inspect a group of protesters Wednesday at noon on the southeast corner of the Pentacrest, they could have spotted a short, middle-aged woman holding a sign.

Her placard asked a rhetorical question, "Arms Race or Human Race?" Underneath, a footnote read, "This space is dedicated to Steve Marsden, who has walked the extra mile.

Marsden, 36, of Iowa City pleaded guilty to a federal charge of trespassing after participating in an anti-nuclear demonstration Aug. 7 at Offut Air Force Base near Omaha, Neb. Marsden started his 30-day sentence Nov. 28 in the Linn County Jail for reentering the Air Force base after being warned once to stay out.

LIKE MARSDEN, the woman holding the sign has been protesting against militarism since the Vietnam War.

Her name is Elsie Vega, 55, of Coralville and braving 20 degree temperatures to express a message of peace is nothing new to

"I've been a war protester all my life," Vega said.

Vega, a secretary in the UI Home Economics Department, said she marched in Vietnam demonstrations almost 13 years ago, and insists she will not stop marching now.

"My children have begged me not to because they fear my staying in jail. They have said, 'Mama, go demonstrate. But Mama don't get dragged to jail," she said.

Vega explains she demonstrates peacefully to help her two sons and two daughters. "I want them to grow up in a country where people live peacefully because there is no security in weapons - none at

SHE HAS MET Marsden before and describes him as a gentle man, who is making a big sacrifice by going to jail. "He'd rather be here than sitting in jail. He'd rather be in a civilian job in a civilian community."

Yet she said she believes his sacrifice will wake people up to the nuclear weapons issue.

Fellow demonstrators believe that Vega helps the anti-nuclear cause as well.

Linda Robinson, 38, a member of Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, said more people like Vega, "rank-andfile" members of society, are protesting nuclear weapons.

"This is the difference." she said. "It isn't just a half-baked rebellion against authority."

As for Vega, she said she does not view authority too highly right now. "I'm highly incensed by a government which wastes money, material and men."

She said, "It angers me to have the government tell me they are protecting us by making weapons that would kill us all."

Vega is convinced, "If you work for peace, you don't have nuclear wastes to bury and you don't have engineers who are designing missiles instead of warm houses."

Candidates reveal expenditures

By Mark Leonard Staff Writer

For every $1.25 Iowa City Councilorelect George Strait spent during his campaign he received one vote.

Papers filed with the Johnson County Auditor's Office Wednesday state that Strait spent $4,918.99. In the Nov. 8 city election, he received 3,906 votes compared to William Ambrisco's 4,593.

Ambrisco, who was the leading votegetter in the election, spent one of the largest amounts ever recorded in a city race, listing expenditures of Jane Jakobsen, who ran for an atlarge seat on the council, and the Greater Iowa City Apartment Association Political Committee have also filed financial disclosure statements.

Jakobsen, who finished third behind Ambrisco and Strait, spent $3,005 on her campaign. She received 3,201 votes in the election.

THE DISCLOSURE statement for the Greater Iowa City Apartment Association Political Committee predictably showed that apartment owners in the area were not in favor of the proposed Fair Rent Ordinance. Committee treasurer Jackie Hess reported that the group spent $2,430 to defeat the proposal. It raised $4,522.72. The ordinance was defeated by Iowa City voters by a 5,007 to 2,145 margin. Contributors to the Greater Iowa City Apartment Association Political Committee included: Hawkeye Investments, $500; Montclair Park Apartments, $250; Lantern Park Apartments, $250; Clin Mar Apartments, $50; Seville Corp., $1,000; Knollridge Garden Apartments, $100; Valley Forge Apartments, $600; Gillett Properties, $80; Mr. and Mrs. Dallis Meier, $170; Emerald Court Apartments, $350; Westgate Villa Apartments, $150, and Governor Properties,

THE GROUP'S expenditures included: a $630 transfer to Citizens for Rational Housing Policy, a group that also worked for the defeat of the Fair Rent Ordinance and $1,800 to the law firm of Meardon, Sueppel, Downer and Although she would not comment on the contents of their findings, Hess said the law firm looked into the legality of the ordinance.

Contributors to Strait's campaign included: Les Batterman, president of the Iowa City Chamber of Commerce; attorney Robert Downer; developer Bruce Glasgow; Emmit George, chairman of the city's Airport Commission; Ernest Lehman, who will assume duties as the new president of the Iowa City Chamber of Commerce Jan. 1; W.W. Summerwill, chairman of the board of Iowa State Bank and Trust Co.; John Krieger, president of Hawkeye State Bank and John Hughes, president of Hills Bank and Trust Co.

STRAIT LISTED the following expenditures: $531.20 at the U.S. Post Office, $300 in "provisions for workers during the campaign," $100 for "secretarial assistance" and $300 at Technigraphics.

Jakobsen listed $1,865 in unitemized contributions. State law requires candidates to list only donations from persons of $25 or less.

Contributors to Jakobsen's campaign included: E. Norman Bailey, chairman of the two political committees formed to defeat the Fair Rent Ordinance, and businessman William G. Nusser.

Jakobsen's expenditures included: $997.29 at the Iowa City Press-Citizen, $192.40 at Economy Advertising, $59.52 at The Daily Iowan, $246 at KCJJ radio and $247.50 at KXIC radio.

Candidates and political action committees active in the city election have until tonight to file financial disclosure statements at the Johnson County Auditor's Office.

Two planes crash; 92 killed in Spain

MADRID, Spain (UPI) - An Iberia Airlines Boeing 727 taking off Wednesday on a fog-shrouded runway slammed into a DC-9 which crossed in front of it, setting the jets ablaze and killing 92 people in Madrid's second jet disaster

Authorities said the smaller Aviaco airlines jet was preparing to take off on a domestic flight when it apparently wandered, blinded by the fog, onto the wrong section of the runway.

Carlos Espinosa, president of the two state-owned Spanish airlines, said all 42 people on the DC-9 were killed and Iberia said in a communique that 50 of the 93 people on Flight 350 to Rome died. One unidentified man was reported in critical condition.

The Iberia jet's pilot, Juan Carlos Lopez Barranco, crawled from the damaged cockpit, helped out two other survivors and shouted repeatedly, "The runway was mine.

The morning crash came just 10 days after a Colombian Boeing 747 crashed into a field less than a mile from Madrid's Barajas airport runway, killing 181 of 192 peo-

Shultz says he's ready to meet with Gromyko

BRUSSELS, Belgium (UPI) responding to European anxiety about the breakdown of arms negotiations, said Wednesday he would be "more than ready" to meet with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko.

Shultz earlier had appeared unenthusiastic about such a meeting. But after discussions in Bonn with West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl, he told reporters he would be willing to see Gromyko at the European conference on disarmament starting in Stockholm Jan. 17.

Shultz, arriving in Brussels for a NATO foreign ministers meeting, said it was expected the Stockholm meeting would start at the level of foreign "I'll be more than ready to meet

No more sugarplums

It's the end of the semester; students are worried about exams and papers and some are worried whether their money is really going to get them to the end of the school year.

And it's almost Christmas: a time for cheer and joy and good

Tony Piech, who oversees Internal Revenue Service auditors in Iowa, has given some an early present. For years wealthy professionals and businessmen have used tax loopholes to finance some of their rest and recreation. Some were all set to do it again

But Peich said they probably will not be able to write their "business trips" off on their income tax.

A Cedar Rapids dentist had set up a computer seminar scheduled in conjunction with the Hawkeye's Gator Bowl appearance in Florida. And the UI College of Law has set up a 20hour, four-day tax and estate-planning seminar in conjunction with another Hawkeye football game in Hawaii.

While not directly touting the seminars as a way to vacation at the expense of other taxpayers, the timing of seminars with games was felicitous for those in a high enough tax bracket. After all, it is difficult to have such seminars in say Des Moines. Really, central Iowa is so far away.

Peich, either an honorable man or a compassionate man, or perhaps both, has given a present to those who worry about paying the rent and putting food on the table.

Now, those folks also don't have worry about gnashing their teeth in fury as the decidedly comfortable take a jaunt to Florida or Hawaii at their expense.

Thank you, Tony Piech. And Merry Christmas to you too. Linda Schuppener

The Reagan administration spends so much time trying to keep the press and public uninformed about White House activities, it has seemed time and again things are being hidden. Are they afraid we won't like what we hear?

The story Dec. 1 about the "White House press hoax" brings this thought to mind again. Presidential Press Secretary Larry Speakes said he planted two false memos on the desks of press aides - where reporters could see them with little effort. One of the memos suggested moving the press corps from the White House next door, to the Old Executive Office Building. The other urged that Reagan announce his candidacy for re-election during the halftime ceremonies of a New Year's football game.

Speakes claims the memos were planted to teach the reporters a lesson: Don't snoop around the desks of the White House press office staffers. While two reporters spotted and read the memos, neither reported the false information. Instead, they spent two days trying to substantiate the stories before Speakes revealed the

Fortunately for the press - and unfortunately for the Reagan administration — the foolishness was not reported and instead of the press looking sneaky and unprofessional, Larry Speakes and the Reagan Administration looked sneakier and more

So far, the president has ordered his staff to have no contact with the media unless they receive his approval first. And of course there was the infuriating refusal to allow the press access to Grenada during the U.S. invasion.

Now his staff is trying to frighten the press from reporting news unless it is the administration version. The president, it seems, would like to make the media an arm of the administration rather than an honest news source.

Reagan forgets, or more likely doesn't know - despite his brief stint working for radio station WHO in Des Moines - that a reporter's job is to report news: the most accurate news possible. His administration has a job, too. And Reagan forgets, and again probably doesn't realize, that he and his staff spend more time dodging the public than running an open, honest goverment.

Input, no output

So the UI would like to encourage students to keep up with the

But with the current computer education situation, setting this wise goal is like telling students to keep up with their Latin without offering Latin.

Only 9 percent of UI students use the Weeg computer facilities. Peggy Rummelhart, information technologist for Weeg, says this low percentage accrued because few students know about student accounts there. Perhaps the students do know about them, but are stymied from learning computer language. The UI offers three computing courses that are open to freshmen; 22C:1, 22C:7 and 22C:16. Of these three, 22C:1 is the most popular and useful to students interested in the basic uses and programing of computers. It offers the information needed for students to make full and effective use of their account. Last semester six sections of 22C:1 were offered. All were filled the third day of registration.

Roughly 150 students will get the computer education they need this year, but what about the others? Couldn't the UI offer more sections, or perhaps a new course dealing with computer basics? Perhaps the Office of Continuing Education could include a night or evening course in computer use.

There are a myriad of paths the UI could travel to improve education in the new technology, but are they willing take them? The UI has provided students with a great educational tool in the computer. But will a lack of the proper instruction make it a toy for a lucky few?

Backseat view is scary, precious

By John Voland

SUALLY, when I get on the interstate bus (after the ritual jostling at the gate), I check out the rear two rows. Pass the elderly matrons off to visit grandchildren and "see a bit of the country," pass the anxious young mothers with crawling, restless kids and on the way to "meet up" with their husbands in the service, and beyond the quiet natty black men who look out the window and disintrestedly smoke Back to the serious bus seats.

The stretch of Interstate 80 between Chicago and Iowa City is perhaps the most boring piece of scenery on the planet (also in the running: Interstate between Los Angeles and Sacramento, Interstate 40 from Amarillo to Albuquerque), so whatever limited means I have to break up the complete monotony I use unsparingly: old New Yorkers, the day's Chicago Tribune, the rambling and (generally) colorful lifenarrations of the people around me.

These last especially "I gotta go back home to Alvin," she says, rifling through her oversize shoulder bag for a Kleenex. "He's been waitin' on me for four months while I been workin' a job in Hammond (Ind.) and makin' enough to get him outta debt." She blows her nose and looks over a seat and up two rows, at a thirty-ish mother and her three squalling children. "Yeah, and he been takin" care of Greg and Clarissa and it drivin' him crazy." She smiles at that - the unemployed man, tumbling around the house with two young children, cooking meals, watching TV. "I think things gonna work out all right now." She nods in self-corroboration BACK HERE, the world is a rich mine for sardonic laughter, for pointed comment, for stopping and looking at things. While those up front pass baby pictures around and talk about nuclear disarmament, we dangerous smoking and laughing types in the last two rows laugh at bombs. And we move around too much for children to lumber us for long. Pipes are distributed (but only used in the claustrophobia-inducing bathroom), beers and pints are handed around, tales exceedingly tall are told.

"I was in San Francisco, about two years ago," a tattooed, grinning man says. He rubs his hands together. "And Journal-ease

Journal-ease features commentary on a broad range of issues by local writers, and will appear occasionally

I was sitting in a bar on Mission, drinking Tokay and shooting some pool. I was doing all right just sitting there but I'm the only white guy in there, see? But after a while - and I was just sitting there, I wasn't looking for any trouble - the bartender, this really big Mexican, he says, 'Look, you gotta get outta here now, man. There're people here that don't like your face.' And I here.' He just pointed to the door and grunted." Tattoo laughs, reaches for the brownbag-covered bottle, pulls,

"Well, this limo - I see it 'cause I'm sitting at the bar facing the door - this limo pulls up and this really spiffed-out Mexican gets out of it. I think, 'Shit, it's the Mexican goddamned Mafia and they're here to kick my ass out of town.' But this dude walks in and sits down at the bar, all friendly, asks me what I'm drinking and gets me one. He's all courteous. I did notice a huge Samoan about 26 feet tall came into the place with him, but I can't see him now, believe it or not. He's gone

"The spiffy guy asks me if I'm having a good time. I say sure - with people I don't know buying me drinks, I can't go wrong, you know what I mean? — and ask him his name. He smiles and says, 'That doesn't matter.' I'm beginning to get some scared he's got to be organized. He just sits there, looking at his nails and checking me out from time to time. I can't

'Meanwhile everybody in the joint has shut up and is looking at us. Nobody's even moving, you know? It's like some kinda picture.

Tattoo looks out the window for a minute - the endless Illinois plains run by like a brown conveyor belt. He seems to enjoy smoking and making us wait for the payoff.

'Well, he finishes his cognac - I think that's what it was - and says to me, 'How's about a little ride?' And I say to myself, 'Oh, shit. He's gonna off me for being a white dude and drinking in a Mexican bar.' So I tell him no thanks. But the huge Samoan is back, and he's at my elbow. 'Sure you wanna come,' the spiffy Mex says, and all of a sudden it seems like a great idea. So "He's got a bigass Caddy limo, with enough room in the back for a football team. We get in. I'm scared outta my mind. Nobody says anything for a while - the spiff just sits and looks out the window; the Samoan drives - until finally the spiff says, 'Look, I dunno how to ask you this ...' and just mumbles for a minute. I say 'What?' and he repeats himself: 'Will you say I'm a good guy? Just say that, willya?'

"I couldn't believe it. I said, like the president on inauguration day, 'You are a nice guy. Thanks for the drink.' He got a huge smile on his face, like a says, and shakes my hand. 'Where you wanna go?' 'I live near 4th Street,' I says, still shaking. But he let me off and gave me a tenspot when he left."

SMALL PERSONAL CRISES like this. Times and places that, seen close, loom like mountains. But seen from the distance given by the back of the bus, they're infinitesmal. Good for laughs, for sympathy and for a toast at the rest stop. This man hasn't lived in San Francisco for years. I haven't lived in a definite place for just as long. And neither has the graying man in the plaid shirt, or the 17-year-old kid who smiles a lot, running away to the tarnished dream of California

What we share are smoke, motion, longings and wishes. The rest - fear of the bombs, television, Republicans, destiny - is for those up front, within the grips of a family, a job, a stake.

But the bus, by its forced uncomfortable intimacy, its cheapness and its ponderous, non-jet-age speeds, takes me away from all that. And in the last two rows - like in the cockpit of some doomed plane - I see it all from far away, and it's a precious, scary feel-

With the current Grevhound mess and step-above-barnstorming airline companies springing up like mushrooms, it's a dying experience. But like moving away and starting new getting a chance to be a new personal edition - back-of-the-bussing-it is something very special.

One more for Sackter To the editor:

I was dismayed and deeply saddened to see Allen Hogg's editorial, (DI, Nov.

Hogg asserts "to name a building that symbolizes academic excellence after a man who couldn't read" would betray the history of the building, ignore the accomplishments of those who worked to create University High School and belittle the students who once attended the school.

Quite the contrary is true. Surely thoughtful people who taught at U-High, some of whom are identified in Hogg's editorial, hoped that in addition to the three R's they were teaching their students to tell the difference between humane values and the manipulation of data, and to understand that both are part of the education of a citizen in a republic. Bill Sackter's name would be on North Hall not because he could not read, but because by his presense he reminded those who could not read that their skills should be used for humane Teaching and social work have much in common, for both are caring and nurturing professions. Bill Sackter's life, and the responses to it of his friends at the School of Social Work and throughout the UI, are reminders to leaven our pursuit of scientific certainty with a concern for human relationships. Surely this is a message worthy to engrave in the stone of a great university.

Architect: Hotel can't widen walk

By Carlos Trevino Staff Writer

Richard Peterson, the attorney representing hotel owner Dr. Harry Johnson, told members of Iowa City's two hotel committees Wednesday night that, "due to circumstances beyond our control," the architect and developer of the proposed $12.6 million downtown Holiday Inn International hotel cannot consider alternate hotel designs.

Peterson told the Iowa City Hotel Steering Committee and Hotel Design Committee Wednesday that the design by recentlyappointed hotel architect Richard Wheeler is "an excellent design that everyone can be proud of."

An alternate design, which called for a wider exterior pedestrian walkway, was submitted by local businessmen to the Iowa City Council Tuesday night. The council Tuesday unanimously approved a $2.1 million Urban Development Action Grant to begin the funding for the downtown reurbanization project.

The alternate design plans proposed by the owners of the downtown Plaza Centre One were the result of their belief that the proposed exterior walkway - 9.6 feet wide between the hotel site and the historic College Block Building, was too narrow.

John H. Lind, one of the Plaza Centre One owners, said a study conducted by businessmen in Plaza Centre One revealed that about 3,000 people use Dubuque Street while traveling south into Lucas Square on an average day.

BUT PETERSON SAID, "We had no control over that location ... it was decided by the council." He also explained that the developer "has complied with the city's request for two walkways," one through the seven-story hotel complex, the other to the west of the building.

Peterson also said time was a factor in meeting grant and industrial revenue bond application deadlines that require a cityapproved design.

Councilor David Perret, who also a member of the steering committee, said he understood that Lind's design would cause functional problems and be more costly to the developer

Lind had suggested that the hotel be moved to the east but City Manager Neal Berlin said the hotel could not be moved because "Armstrong's (department store) or somebody else would come to that site."

Joyce P. Summerwill, a member of the design review committee, said the design plans of both parties were based on "personal taste and immaterial," but the principle ideas - concerning the exterior walkways and exterior building material should be investigated.

"You've reviewed, at least superficially, the cost," Summerwill told hotel representatives, "but I don't like the comment (about) you're trying to meet a deadline" for grants.

The two committees, meeting jointly for the second time this week, were scheduled to vote on the design plans and forward their recommendation to the city council for its Dec. 20 meeting.

against the sewer plant if he had attended the meeting because "it doesn't offer enough flexibility.'

"Besides, we have no federal money to pay for the project," Erdahl said. The Iowa Department of Waste, Air and Water Management decided Oct. 18 that Iowa City would not receive federal funds until 1991 - when the city gets $9.37 million.

IWAWM Commission Chairman Robert

Schultz said that although Des Moines is slated to receive $20 million a year in federal funds until 1991, the plan is not irreversible and could be changed after public hearings in April.

Erdahl said it is possible that Iowa City will get money for its sewer project sooner than 1991, and, "If we're right, we may have saved the city a considerable amount

ANOTHER REASON McDonald voted against the plan was that "I've talked to the hold-over councilors (Dickson and Erdahl), and with the new council members and every one of us wanted to hold it."

McDonald, who cast the deciding vote, said, "This question will not get shelved by the new council if I have any say about it ... it will be priority number one."

Airline

Hoover said. There are fewer seats available because the carriers have, on many routes, replaced large jets with smaller, propeller-driven aircraft.

In Cedar Rapids, the number of airline departures per week increased 122 percent between June 1978 and June 1983, while the number of available seats fell 1 percent, according to Civil Aeronautics Board Carriers offered 60 percent more flights per week from Waterloo in June 1983 than in June 1978, but there were 36 percent fewer seats, according to the CAB.

Ft. Dodge, Mason City and Ottumwa benefited from deregulation more than any cities in the state, Hoover said.

Ft. Dodge air service increased from an average of one flight per day before deregulation to 10 per day this year, he

HOOVER CREDITS service provided by the influx of commuter airlines for improved air transportation in Iowa. "We happen to be fortunate that we have some good commuter (airlines) in this area," he

In Cedar Rapids, about 200,000 people boarded planes in the first six months of 1983 - down 100,000 from 1979, according to Airport Director Roy Jamesen. But the airport served 16 percent more passengers in September 1983 than it did in September 1982. Cedar Rapids is now served by 56 flights per day, more than twice the number serving the city before deregulation, Jamesen said.

Like service changes, air fares have become confusing since deregulation. Generally, passengers are able to fly less expensively on competitive, frequentlytraveled routes but more expensively between small markets than before the Airline Deregulation Act loosened the CAB's control over fares. More discount fares are available to travelers than before deregulation. In 1982, 80 percent of all U.S. passengers flew at discount rates, such as the Super-Saver up from 30 percent in 1976.

Competition is so great on some routes that it is not hard to find a transcontinental fare less expensive than the fare charged between two small, but geographically close cities.

For example, the lowest one-way fare offered between Cedar Rapids and Hays, Kan. — a 520-mile trip — is $222. Passengers aboard the heavily-trafficked New York to San Francisco route, however, can fly the 2,572 miles for only Super-Saver tickets offer passengers discounted round-trip fares on competitive Passengers willing to abide by the restrictions can actually travel round-trip cheaper than one-way.

UNITED AIRLINES' one-way fare from Cedar Rapids to San Francisco is $364, but travelers flying with the Super-Saver restrictions can fly round-trip for $329.

The average cost per mile of air travel increased to 11.7 cents in the first half of 1983 - up from 8.4 cents in 1977, according to the Air Transport Association, an industry trade group. ATA Spokesman Bill Jackman attributed most of the increase to sharply higher fuel prices between 1979 and

The influx of new airlines into a more competitive industry has frequently led to fare wars between competing airlines. Fare wars generally increase passenger traffic while holding down revenues. There are signs some airlines may be avoiding fare wars that, in the past, have financially plagued them.

In an effort to become the nation's largest passenger carrier. Continental Airlines resumed service Sept. 27 - three days after filing for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection - offering cut-rate fares between many of the cities it previously served. Frontier Airlines matched some Continental fares, but United and American did "The fares are probably going to level off." Hoover said. "The fares will probabl be tuned to the distance you travel. Rather than drag all the fares down and go broke, I think (the airlines) will be more sensible."

NEW YORK (UPI) — Heisman Trophy winner Mike Rozier is one of three players from top-ranked Nebraska's record-setting offense named Wednesday to the UPI All-American first team.

Two Iowa Hawkeyes were named to UPI's honorable mention team. Quarterback Chuck Long, who broke almost all of Iowa's passing marks this season, and sophomore linebacker Larry Station were named to the UPI Rozier, a senior I-back, is joined by two teammates, wide receiver Irving Fryar and guard Dean Steinkuhler, from the highest scoring offense in college history.

Rozier is also one of five repeaters from the 1982 team along with tight end Gordon Hudson of Brigham Young, Oklahoma defensive tackle Rick Bryan, Arizona linebacker Ricky Hunley and Georgia defensive back Terry Hoage.

GEORGIA AND Brigham Young are the only other schools beside Nebraska to have more than one player on the first unit. Brigham Young, the country's top team in total offense, placed Hudson and quarterback Steve Young while Georgia was represented by Hoage and defensive end Fred Gilbert.

Auburn running back Bo Jackson is the only sophomore on the team. Pittsburgh offensive tackle Bill Fralic, Clemson middle guard William Perry and Texas defensive back Jerry Gray

Rounding out the offense are Missouri tackle Conrad Goode, guard Stefan Humphries of Michigan, Southern California center Tony Slaton and running back Greg Allen of Florida State. Kansas' Bruce Kallmeyer is the Soviets decide to join Games

LOS ANGELES (UPI) - The Soviet Union Wednesday strongly indicated that Russian athletes will compete in the 1984 Summer Olympics, but Soviet sports officials still refused to make a formal announcement.

Marat Gramov, chairman of the Soviet National Olympic Committee, and Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee President Peter Ueberroth said a protocol agreement has been signed by the two parties, clearing some obstacles to Soviet participation in the Games.

Among indications that the Soviets plan to compete in the Olympics, despite the U.S. boycott of the 1980 Moscow Games and recent friction between the two countries, were the Soviets have officially asked the LAOOC to house Soviet athletes at the Olympic Village on the UCLA campus.

GRAMOV AND Ueberroth also said the Soviets have applied for U.S. approval to land 25 Soviet Aeroflot charter flights at International Airport next summer and are seeking permission to berth a Soviet passenger ship in Los Angeles Harbor to be used for social events during the

"We do not see any reasons why we would not participate in the Olympics," Gramov, who led a Soviet delegation of sports officials in a week-long visit to Los Angeles, said through a Russian interpreter.

"There are a number of problems that have to be resolved yet. But we will keep working on the problems.

"Our standpoint of principle on the Olympic Games in Los Angeles is a positive one. We believe the Olympic Games give a good chance to the youth of the world to strengthen friendships and understanding.'

HE SAID A formal announcement of the Soviet's decision would not be made until next May. Under the International Olympic Committee Charter, nations must announce their decision by June 2. Most of the 154 invited countries have not yet replied to the invitations, but that is considered a common procedure. Prior to the news conference, an LAOOC official told reporters that questions concerning politics, "such as the downing of Korean jets or placement of missiles in Europe," would not be tolerated

"These men are sports officials," Executive Vice President Harry Usher said. He refused to say whether that stipulation was a result of a Soviet request or was instituted by the LAOOC.

Gramov replied to a related question by saying, "I want to assure you that we came to Los Angeles to resolve sports issues and not anything related to politics. But if you consider it on a wider scale, the Olympic movement does not exist in a vacuum and it is quite natural that politics is reflected in

Louisville's quick guards dump Hawks By Mike Condon Assistant Sports Editor Louisville 79

Due to a telephone line problem, the entire state of Iowa was unable to see the first eight minutes of the Iowa-Louisville basketball game from Louisville, Ky. By the time the game was over, most Hawkeye fans probably wished the problem was never fixed.

The Hawkeyes appeared to be in as bad a shape as the telephone lines as the lightning-quick Cardinals used a 17-4 spurt at the start of the second half and a number of late free throws to bury No. 5 Iowa, 79-58.

Hawkeye Coach George Raveling should have known things weren't going to go well for his club when forward Michael Payne was injured a shot and was undercut by Louisville center Charles Jones.

THE 6-FOOT-11, Quincy, Ill., native fell hard on his tailbone and was down on the court for several minutes before being escorted to the dressing room by Iowa trainer John Streif. Payne didn't return to the game until midway through the second half, and by that time, Louisville had began to pull

Louisville looked like anything but a 1-2 team as they jumped out to a 10-4 lead - much to the delight of a rabid capacity crowd at Freedom Hall. But just about the time the telephone lines were fixed, the Iowa offense came to

Junior center Greg Stokes hit three quick baskets, the last one giving Iowa a 19-18 lead. Freshman Dave Snedeker, playing in relief of Payne's replace-ment Brad Lohaus, hit Brian Boyle to give the Hawks their biggest lead, 29-

"We might have been a little too ready to play," Raveling said. "At the beginning, I thought we might be a little too fired up.

There was no doubt in Carfino's mind why Iowa lost for the first time after three wins. "I thought we beat ourselves rather than them beating us,"

Power, pitching key big baseball deals

Cubs trade for more pitching, get Sanderson

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) - The Chicago Cubs took the first small step in what they hope will be a giant leap toward becoming a pennant contender Wednesday by acquiring pitcher Scott Sanderson in a five-player, three-team trade that also involved San Diego.

The complex trade, which was engineered by Padres' General Manager Jack McKeon at the winter baseball meetings, began when the Padres sent relief pitcher Gary Lucas to the Expos for Sanderson. Then the Padres turned right around and sent Sanderson to the Cubs for relief pitcher Craig Lefferts, first baseman Carmelo Martinez and third baseman Fritz Connally.

Martinez and Connally were considered two of the top prospects in the Cubs' organization, but General Manager Dallas Green and Manager Jim Frey said the chance to get a quality starting pitcher was too good to 3.11 ERA.

"WE CAME HERE trying to get two starting pitchers and we're halfway there," Frey said. "We had to give up something to get a good pitcher and that's the way we decided to go.

Frey intimated the club wasn't through wheeling and dealing.

"We're going back upstairs to do some more work," Frey said.

THE CUBS WERE believed close to landing pitcher Dennis Rasmussen from San Diego in another complicated three-team deal that would send first baseman Bill Buckner to the Padres.

Sanderson, 27, is coming off a subpar season in which he went only 6-7 with a 4.65 ERA. He spent much of the season on the disabled list but came back to pitch at the end of the season and threw well. The Cubs are hoping he can revert to the form he showed in 1980 when he won 16 games and posted a

Stringer looking to smooth out errors

By Thomas W. Jargo Assistant Sports Editor

There is so much information a basketball player needs to know out on the court, says Iowa women's cage Coach Vivian Stringer.

Players need to know so much information that sometimes they forget bits and pieces of it. These mental lapses, Stringer says, force the players to start thinking too much out on the court, making them become unsure of

When they become unsure of themselves, they begin to hesitate and eventually start making errors. These are normally unforced errors, according to Stringer.

All these unforced errors become turnovers, and all of the above boils down to why the youthful Hawkeyes are making too many turnovers so far this season, Stringer said.

IOWA HAS AVERAGED 19 turnovers a contest through the first three games of the season. "Mental lapses are bound to happen," Stringer said. "There's an awful lot for one player to remember. They are unforced errors, and you can't beat yourself.

"But once it becomes second nature to them and they begin to understand the concepts, things will go a lot smoother." These mental lapses must become alleviated now when the Hawkeyes play a relatively easy nonconference schedule, Stringer said. Once the tough Big Ten season rolls around in January, the young Hawkeyes won't be able to survive if they continue to make unforced errors, according to the first-

The Hawkeyes will have a chance to begin limiting their turnovers when they travel to the three-team Indiana State Invitational in Terre Haute, Ind., this weekend.

IN A TOURNAMENT where no champion will be crowned, Iowa will play two games. On Friday, the Hawkeyes will battle host Indiana State, beginning at 7 p.m. Then on Saturday, they will take on Evansville at 2 p.m. Evansville will then take on Indiana State on Sunday

There won't be an eventual champion, and that confuses and disappoints Stringer. "I don't really know what's going on," she said. "The schedule was made before I came here, so we'll just have to live through it.'

Stringer said she sees a "feeling of confidence" exhibited by her players on the

During their comeback attempt against Drake - which fell two points short, 58-56 and their overtime victory over Iowa State, 86-75, the Hawkeyes "continued to maintain and battle - not thinking they were going to lose," Stringer said.

"They demonstrated confidence in pressure situations and were doing things on the court they are capable of doing," she Stringer was extremely pleased with the play of reserves Maureen McAlpine and Tammy McKay, who helped spark the Hawkeyes to their victory over the Cyclones.

"They were the sparkplugs (at Iowa State)," she said. "I feel more comfortable knowing where our depth is coming from. We have five players start, but we need

Freshman forward Lisa Long, who is averaging 17 points and 11 rebounds a game so far this season, leads the Hawkeyes as they continue a long, early-season road trip.

At an outdoor White House ceremony welcoming the king of Nepal, reporters shouted to Baker, something of a stranger to the sports world, "Will you play ball?"

He replied with a casual sidearm flick something like a shortstop tossing the ball to second baseman on a double play.

In a statement issued earlier, Baker repeated what he called his "standard policy" of not responding to "inquiries about reports of possible job changes."

Speakes, who did nothing to knock down the story, suggested reporters "make inquiries in Nashville," saying, "We won't go into the contacts" that had been made with Baker.

Swimmers low-key in UNI dual meet

Iowa men's swimming Coach Glenn Patton has decided to take a very lowpressure approach to Friday's dual meet at Northern Iowa — for good

Patton, as might be expected, is looking forward to an easy time of it in Friday's battle with Northern Iowa.

"WE LIKE TO schedule this meet ... It is good to have before finals week because it doesn't take much away from finals."

Hall is also ready to concede a Pan-ther defeat, even before anyone hits the women's gym building Pool in

"Lets be realistic, there is no way we can compete with Iowa, timewise, Hall said. "Not many teams in this area could, at least not in the Midwest."

Because there is an obvious talent level difference between the Hawkeyes and Northern Iowa, Patton will not be sending his full contingent on Friday.

Three distance freestylers, Iowa's

The 1,650 freestyle is a Big Ten championship event that the Hawkeye distance group will be competing in for the second time this year - their first chance coming on Nov. 11, at the West Bank Invitational.

HALL SAID HE is just "hoping to build" his 14-man Northern Iowa squad during Friday's 7 p.m. encounter.

He cited Jay Goodlove (200 freestyle), Jeff Engle (500 freestyle) and freshman Scott Reinart (200 butterfly) as the most likely Panthers to pick up a victory.

Although Iowa sophomore Artie Williams may not be swimming Friday, he has already made a definite impression in competition this year.

The latest top times list in the Big Ten finds Williams leading the conference in both the 200 freestyle (1 minute, 40.9 seconds) and the 200 backstroke (1:51.7).

There has, though, been one setback to Iowa's fast start this year. Patton disclosed that world-ranked freshman recruit John Davey will be redshirted this season.

Dallas waiting for heated 'Skins game

DALLAS (UPI) - There is little question that the Dallas Cowboys and Washington Redskins make up the kind of rivalry that gave birth to the legend of the Hatfields and McCoys.

And there is no question whatsoever when the rivalry flamed.

"George Allen brought it to its peak," said Cowboys president and general manager Tex Schramm of the former Redskin head coach. "Allen brought it into the feverish area."

Dallas and Washington meet again Sunday with the game once again taking on significant meaning. And Schramm will be sitting in his press box perch, sweating things out like he does every Sunday.

"Some of the great games in our history have been against Washington," Schramm said.

"THE GAME WE played with them earlier this year drew the highest (television) ratings of any seasonopening game in history. And our game with them in 1978 drew the highest Monday night ratings ever.

"The Thanksgiving Day game we played against them in 1974, where Clint Longley threw the touchdown pass, was a memorable game. We had some great games with them when Don Meredith was our quarterback back in the early days - some very important games.

"And of course we have had those two losses to them in Washington when we were just one step from the Super Bowl (in the 1972 and 1982 seasons)."

Allen, who coached the Redskins for seven years during the 1970's, made the Dallas Cowboys a sort of Holy

"ALLEN JUST MADE it more personal," Schramm said. "No, I don't miss him. But that is not necessarily a knock on him.

"I don't hate teams, except maybe on the day of the game. I've known George Allen all my life. I don't hate him. Just like I don't hate Howard Cosell. As long as you understand them and know what they are doing, it is all "People like George Allen are what make rivalries. You shouldn't be in the business if you don't get excited about games like this one.'

Joe Gibbs, the current Washington coach, meanwhile, suggests that getting too excited can be a problem.

"I think there is always a danger of having too much emotion for a game like this," Gibbs said. "But you don't know as a coach how to control it. We feel our players can handle this from a common sense standpoint.

'We just try to explain what is at stake. It is a big game. They should get ready for it like you would for a big game and whether somebody gets too up for a game is something you can't Keith Jarrett plunges into yesteryear on his new album Standards, Vol. 1.

Jazz artists present new free-form LPs

By Alex Wilding-White Staff Writer

Jack DeJohnette and Special Edition. Inflation Blues. ECM.
Steps Ahead. Steps Ahead.

Elecktra/Musician.

Keith Jarrett, Gary Peacock and Jack DeJohnette. Standards, Vol. 1.

RUMMER JACK
DeJohnette has run the gamut of postwar jazz styles, from the fusion efforts of Miles Davis and early John Abercrombie to the hard bop of New Directions. Special Edition has emphasized a more free-form approach; perhaps it hasn't gone as far down this road as Cecil Taylor or Anthony Braxton, but it's gone far enough to allow some extra room to move in.

Inflation Blues deviates little from this approach, but it does have a couple of surprises. The solos are as free-swinging as before, only this time they are more compositionally structured. "Starburst" starts out in a loose, free-for-all manner, then segues into a tightly-phrased boppish section, with tenor saxophonist Chico Freeman (an accomplished artist in his own right) and trumpeter Baikida Carrol leading the way, throwing chops back and forth.

"EBONY" FOLLOWS pretty much the same pattern but in a cooler, more sentimental mood. A unison opening melody leads into an accented march section, with DeJohnette's perfect metering bringing all the elements into a coherent progression. John Purcell's flute solo, fluttering over the entire range of the instrument, precedes a funky acoustic bass solo by Rufus Reid.

The biggest surprise is the title track, a reggae-flavored number reminiscent of the group War (remember it?). With DeJohnette singing, the lyrics protest the state of the economy and its effect on the poor. While the message is certainly affecting and timely, it is musically the weakest track of the album, never going much beyond being a whimsical ditty that has some insightful words.

AT ITS BEST, Inflation Blues offers some inspired playing, but there is not much of a statement being made here, no indication as to the direction De-Johnette is taking his music. He certainly is a long way away from being written off, but his followers will have to tap their fingers just a bit longer.

Formerly just Steps, Steps Ahead features an impressive congregation of talent: saxophonist Michael Brecker, former Weather Report drummer Peter Erskine and bassist-for-all-seasons Eddie Gomez. Not a radical departure or a group with outstandingly unique qualities, Steps Ahead presents tasteful, well-crafted jazz with equal measures of bop tradition and contemporary sophistication.

"Pools" opens with Gomez and Brecker stating a twisting, turning melody akin to Weather Report and vibraphonist Mike Manineri providing some crisp harmonic accents. Brecker then goes into full solo, showing great strength in the horn's upper register. Manineri follows on synthvibe, an instument distinguishable from its conventional counterpart only by its overtones.

"SKYWARD BOUND", a rose-tinted ballad, and "Islands" feature some spirited tickling of the ivories from Eliane Elias, a Brazilian pianist making her first major recording. Her phrasing sounds a bit confined compared to the all-out wailing the rest of the group is capable of, but she shows enough good harmonic sense to become, with time and experience, an accomplished instrumentalist.

"Trio" ends the LP on an offbeat note with Brecker, Manineri and Gomez freely improvising, complementing and balancing each other beautifully.

Steps Ahead is a fine group with much potential. If they can expand on the forms and motifs their material encompasses, which their talent could easily accomodate, they could become a dynamic jazz voice in this and following decades.

Jazz artists who know that their ways are far removed from the mainstream have sometimes felt the need to perform or record time-honored classics, as if to show that they're not all that far gone. Anthony Braxton's two In The Tradition albums featured some superb renditions of several classic tunes, and Pat Metheny has occassionally mentioned doing a similar project. When the intention is to sincerely acknowledge one's roots, it can be a refreshing change.

KEITH JARRETT'S plunge into yesteryear, however, presents a central problem with such projects — does the artist have a feel for the material, or not? This means submerging one's ego far enough to allow the tune to present itself and yet still being able to do something inventive with it. A delicate operation, to be sure.

Jarrett's personality informs many of the tracks so heavily that the original melody is barely recognizable. "The Meaning of the Blues" is a particularly heavy-handed treatment with the melody less audible than Jarrett's spirited humming along. "All The Things You Are" develops well but mostly through Gary Peacock's deft bass figures and Jack DeJohnette's rock steady drum patterns, as throughout the album.

"THE MASQUERADE is Over" sees Jarrett come a bit farther down to earth, as the colorfulness of the chord development is a bit closer to Jarrett's sensibilities. And "God Bless The Child" is given a funky, gospelish interpretation that gives a free-swinging feel, with Jarrett finally working within the tune rather than apart from it

Jarrett is a unique musician but his gifts are most apparent when he works within his own territory. It is not a smear on his artistry to say that Jarrett is not a tunesmith in the traditional sense of the term and if reinforcement of his credibility was the reason for Standards, Vol. 1, he need not have bothered, for his integrity is solid enough as it is.

NEW YORK (UPI) - PBS President Lawrence K. Grossman Wednesday was named president of NBC News to replace Reuven Frank, effective May 1984, the network announced.

NBC chairman Grant Tinker and NBC president Robert Mulholland made the announcement in a joint statement.

Frank, 63, who returned to the presidency of NBC News in March 1982, will retain management responsibility for NBC News' political coverage through the 1984 convention. At that time he plans to return to production at NBC News.

"In addition to the extraordinary skills Larry Grossman brings to one of the most important jobs in broadcasting, we believe the orderly transition we and Reuven have planned will assure that the management of NBC News will continue to be in good hands for the future," the joint statement said.

GROSSMAN, 52, who was vice president in charge of advertising at NBC from 1962-66, has been president and chief operating officer at PBS since 1976. A PBS spokesman said Grossman would leave the public television network in late February "to work closely with the NBC News operation" before assuming his new post. The spokesman said PBS had formed an executive search committee and hoped to have a new president in time for the PBS annual meeting, which starts March 21 in Washington.

During his tenure at PBS, Grossman led the organization in installing broadcasting's first nationwide satellite system.

Grossman also played a critical role in development of TV's first hour-long evening news program, "The MacNeil-Lehrer Newshour," and he was an originator of the acclaimed "Vietnam: A Television

Real Charlie Brown dead from cancer

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) - The original Charlie Brown, the man who inspired the hard-luck charms of the character in the "Peanuts" comic strip, has died of cancer. He was 57.

The round-faced Brown died Monday in Metropolitan Medical Center after a seven-year fight against cancer. Brown and Charles Schulz, the creator of "Peanuts" who grew up in St. Paul, met in an art class at the Bureau of Engraving in Minneapolis and they remained friends over the years.

Schulz told him of his plan to market a comic strip with a central character who struggled with life and tried to do well. Brown had a remarkable resemblance to his namesake in the strip.

Schulz at first called the strip "Good Old Charlie Brown." But the syndicate handling it changed the

Rare medical books exhibited at museum

By Suzanne Richerson

VE YEARS AGO, John Marin, a Clarinda physician and collector of rare medical books, helped to organize and present a sampling of his acquisitions at the UI Museum of Art. At that time viewers saw examples of books that combined the scientific and artistic observations of some of the most important figures in medical history.

Once again, in "Ars Librorum Medicorum," the museum is displaying selected works from Martin's collection; this time, although some of the books are making a repeat appearance, design and bindings - the way the books were made - as well as the artistry involved in the illustrations are emphasized in the works.

As in the earlier show, the viewer finds the presence of the human element in the attention to details of body attitude and setting. For instance, a work by William Cowper contains an elaborate illustration of two men conversing together, one leaning on a cane stool and the other standing with arm outstretched to point, while behind them a procession marches toward a distant town. The two men, skin removed, are shown with their muscles exposed.

ANOTHER ILLUSTRATION, an engraved copperplate from a work by Adriaan Van de Speigel, presents a delicately draped woman standing in a graceful pose with the contents of her torso open for examination. Behind her, in the distance, a city rises from a

Most current medical textbooks, if they even show full anatomical figures, do so without emotion or setting. The title page of Vesalius' De humani corporis fabrica is a magnificent scene set in an anatomy theatre. The students lean from their seats to through Jan. 15.

watch as body parts are pointed out, a skeleton (Death?) perches on a wooden barrier, dogs and monkeys look up from the floor and, high above the scene, cherubic angels hold up the title card. Not only does the page introduce the book, it also presents a 16thury view of religion and science.

An illustration from Johann Remmelin's Anathomie du corps humain resembles the pop-up pictures that appear in children's books: the anatomy of the torso from the outer layer of skin to the vital organs is revealed through a series of overlay flaps.

THE EARLIEST BOOK in the show. a 15th-century printing of a work by Pietro d'Abano, features an elaborate illuminated initial and border in pink, blue and gold. Like other books of the period, medical works were made to delight the senses as well as convey in-

Several of the volumes are displayed closed to indicate the methods and materials used in their binding. The covers are often calfskin, sometimes with metal fasteners and gilt decorative designs.

Charles Darwin's Origin of the Species, in a green cloth binding, attests to changes in methods of construction and a title page from a first edition of Freud's An die Traumdeutung (On the Interpretation of Dreams) marks the separation of decorative art from the printing

Martin's complete collection is housed in the rare book room of the Health Sciences Library and is available for viewing under supervision of the rare books librarian. "Ars Librorum Medicorum" will continue
