Soviets station missiles in Europe

MOSCOW (UPI) - The Soviet Union has begun stationing nuclear missiles manned by Soviet forces in East Ger-many in response to NATO's deploy-ment of new U.S. cruise and Pershing-2 missiles in western Europe, Tass said

The official Tass news agency said the missiles are controlled by the Soviet personnel as part of an agree-ment with the East German government announced by Soviet president Yuri Andropov in November.

Andropov at the time warned that nuclear weapons would also be stationed in Czechoslovakia.

The Soviet Union walked out of the Geneva talks on the limitation of intermediate-range nuclear forces on Nov. 22, to protest the deployment of new U.S. missiles in Europe.

The report, written for Wednesday's edition of the army newspaper Krasnaya Zvezda, mentioned only one missile unit. It did not say if any others are in place or give details of what weapons were deployed.

But Western diplomats said the weapons were likely to be mediumrange SS-20 nuclear missiles.

"Much of what is needed for the life and combat training of the Soviet missile unit has already been prepared." the report said.

"RESIDENTIAL QUARTERS and amenity services have been equipped, the necessary training base has been set up. Much assistance was given in this by German friends," it said.

'We must be prepared to give a due ebuff to the aggressor if it dares encroach on the security of the Soviet people, our allies and friends," the

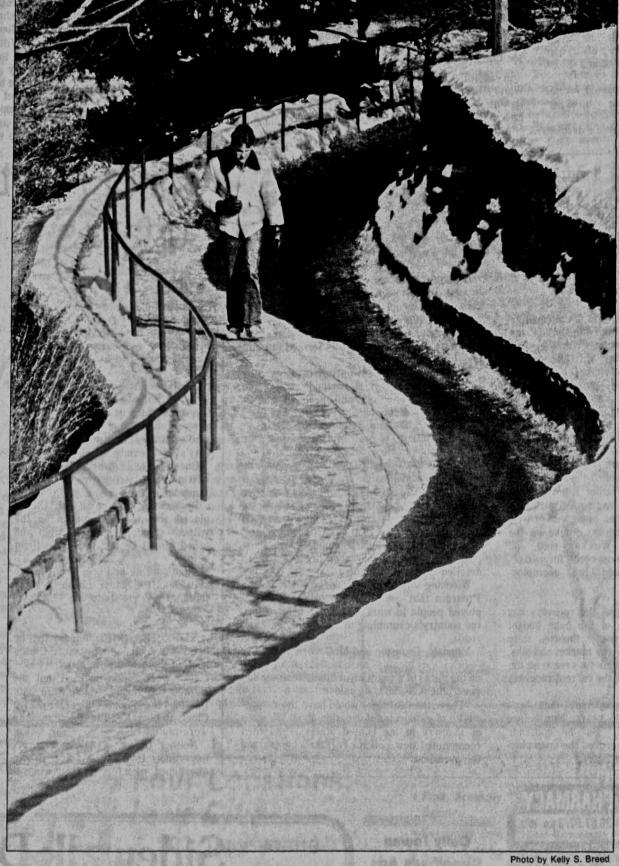

"For this purpose we have been supplied with powerful weapons," he said.

Though Moscow said that nuclear weapons are being deployed for the first time in Warsaw Pact countries, Western analysts believe they have long been in place in the Soviet Union's East bloc satellites.

The announcement came on the eve of a meeting in Stockholm between Secretary of State George Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko that is expected to focus on the stalled arms talks between the two countries.

The European disarmament conference in Stockholm will be the only point of contact between East and West since the breakdown of U.S.-Soviet arms control talks late last year.

In a speech before the conference, Shultz urged the Soviet Union to resume the negotiations, "Let us so conduct ourselves in our deliberations that historians of the future will mark this gathering as a turning point in East-West relations," he said.

Developer to get $850,000 in bonds

Although their decision drew criticism from Iowa City residents, the Iowa City Council voted 5-1 Tuesday night to grant $850,000 in low-interest. tax supported Commercial Develop-ment Revenue Bonds to developer James Clark for an apartment complex at Gilbert and Prentiss streets.

Despite the council's overwhelming approval of assisting Clark in the business venture, four councilors, including Councilor Larry Baker, voiced concerns about "helping a successful developer like Mr. Clark."

Jeffrey Denburg, a member of the Iowa City Fair Rent Coalition, led the argument against granting the bonds, saying the council should not have granted them to Clark because the city has "already given four (CDRB's) worth $4.1 million," to him.

"This man owns real estate with a total assessed value of well over $8 million dollars," Denburg said. "I don't think that in establishing IRB's (Industrial Revenue Bonds) it was the intended purpose of the federal government to have us taxpayers subsidize millionaires like Jim Clark," he said.

DENBURG TOLD the council that by granting a large amount of bonds to Clark they were allowing "one person to control such a large share of the rental market ... enabling (Clark) to set the standards in rent and quality to which other landlords will aspire.'

Denburg added that he knew of "shoddy construction on previous Clark projects" funded with federal Erdahl asked the council to vote the bond request down "for a couple of weeks" so it could discuss the project, including the question of what types of apartments would be used for low- and moderate-income housing.

To receive federal bonds 20 percent of a proposed apartment housing project must be intended for low and moderate income families.

DENBERG WENT ON to say Clark had used non-union labor on past construction and, in some cases, employed construction workers from Illinois. 'How does this help the local employment situation?" he asked.

Denburg, who conducted a study on other "Clark Apartment" projects, said their average rents were higher than those of other Iowa City projects and that building code regulations

Although O'Brien agreed the plaintiffs' constitutional rights may be infringed by the maverick caucuses, he said the rights of the candidates outweighed the plaintiffs' case.

O'Brien said evidence showed the presidential candidates "will suffer a significant harm" if the caucuses were moved because they have put so much into their Iowa campaigns already.

More importantly, he said, the negative impact may not be felt equally by all candidates.

O'Brien noted Iowa and New Hampshire were chosen as the first presidential tests "to afford any candidate two early and isolated tests in different parts of the country and in states where the spending limits were not high."

"This would allow lesser financed candidates to participate in one caucus state and one primary state with the opportunity to receive early exposure and perhaps to do well," he said.

They are doing the bidding of the White House," the California Democrat said.

Besides rejecting the concept of quotas, the commission took action to narrow its role as a watchdog of the nation's discrimination practices.

County attorneys seek budget hike

Special to The Daily Iowan

Johnson County Attorney J. Patrick White asked the Johnson County Board of Supervisors for an 18-percent increase in his office's fiscal 1985 budget Tuesday to cope with the increasing number of criminal cases handled by the county. "Our criminal case load has increased 14 percent over 1982 and we can't keep up with the criminal attorneys that we now have." White said. The county attorney's office handled 383,612 criminal cases in 1982 and 452,616 criminal cases in 1983.

Citizens' group advocates Democratic jobs solutions

By Jeff Eichenbaum

The Reagan administration is not adequately addressing the problems of full employment and long-term economic recovery, Fritz Wiecking, associate director of the Citizens Action Network based in Washington, D.C., said Tuesday during a stop in Iowa City.

Wiecking, an economic researcher, is in the Midwest to discuss the findings of his study -"Our Jobs, Our Future" - which examined and detailed the long-term economic problems the United States faces.

Wiecking said the network is comprised of independent groups from around the country, including the Iowa Citizen/Labor Energy Coalition and the Iowa Citizen Action Network.

Tax breaks for the affluent, along with greatly reduced corporate income tax, make up the thrust of Reaganomics, Wiecking said, and those policies have been given credit for producing economic recovery and lower unemploy-

BUT WIECKING stresses the recovery has really occurred because of the huge budget deficits. Traditional economic theories state that demand is what spurs the market and jobs, he said, but the federal deficits create an unnatural demand rendering the current recovery only temporary.

Wiecking notes unemployment "has been gradually going up for 15 years, long before Reagan was president." But he contends Reagan has not really improved the unemployment situation. (中国 新城 为LC

Before 1982, for the country to be considered in a state of full employment, only 3.5 percent of the workforce could be unemployed. In 1982 the Reagan administration lowered the standard, allowing an unemployment rate of 7 percent to exist and the condition still be termed full employment.

Wiecking expressed optimism regarding Democratic presidential contenders who can improve the current economic problems and offer long-term solutions.

Of the Democrats running for president, Walter Mondale, George McGovern and Alan Cranston, have "clearly the most thoughtful and clearly the most detailed positions on economic policy," Wiecking said.

"THREE CANDIDATES who seem to have thought least about the economy are Jessie Jackson, Reuben Askew and John Glenn," he said, adding that Jackson has "a good excuse" because he has only been a candidate for a short period of time and may soon present a more detailed economic plan. Wiecking said Mondale favors a Federal Jobs

Program that could not only help put unemployed people to work, but would help restore the country's crumbling bridges, railroads and Mondale, Cranston and McGovern also favor

- in various forms - an industrial policy based on the views of a coalition of labor, business and government leaders, he said.

"They (the coalition) would have the responsibilty of gathering information about the state of industry in the United States ... and then recommend new policies to the Congress and the president."

UI President James O. Freedman said Tuesday the UI is not planning to use money from a massive fundraising campaign he proposed last fall as a substitute for lagging state appropriations.

We expect the state to meet its obligation to the university," he said. "We would like to keep this proposal above the present battle."

In September, Freedman unveiled plans to initiate a five-year private fund-raising effort with an estimated goal of $100 million.

At that time Freedman said the fundraising effort would be used to finance his "Proposal for the Future of the University of Iowa," a far-reaching program designed to enrich the 'human resources" of the UI by establishing a number of endowments for faculty and exceptional graduate students, as well as a center for advanced FREEDMAN REAFFIRMED his commitment to the program Tuesday by ruling out, at least for the time being, using money from the fund-raising drive to replace state appropriations. "The focus of this proposal is on resources at the university in the future," Freedman said.

He said another reason private donations are not being considered as a method of supplemental funding is that the "actual fund-raising effort might not get started for another year or

However, Freedman said, if the trend of eroding state appropriations continues, "I can't rule out anything for the future.'

While admitting that continued spending cuts by lawmakers threaten to harm the quality of education at the UI in the immediate future, several UI officials supported Freedman's view.

"THE EFFECTS of this budget will be shattering," said Howard Laster, dean of the UI College of Liberal Arts. "I think by this spring there will be sharp impacts in the quality of instruction we can provide.

But Laster stressed that using private gifts and donations to fund the general maintainace would be a "very serious mistake." 'The state has a moral respon-

WYRICK SAID using money from the fund-raising drive for the general budget, rather than for Freedman's program, would probably hurt the potential success of the campaign.

"People do not give to make up for deficits," Wyrick said. He added most contributors give to the UI to help establish projects that are "icing on the

HE SAID THERE are a number of details that must be taken care of before the Foundation actually starts its efforts to raise funds for Freedman's proposal.

He said UI Vice President for Academic Affairs Richard Remington is currently collecting recommendations on the proposal from each of the deans of the UI colleges.

Remington said he has not yet received all the reports from the different deans. However, he said the reports that have been returned contain "extremely favorable responses" to Freedman's proposal.

Remington said he hopes to complete reviewing the deans' reports 'sometime in the next couple of

After those reports are studied carefully by the UI administration they will be submitted to Wyrick. He will then give the reports to a professional fund-raising council that will conduct a feasability study for the campaign.

"They will test the market for us," Wyrick said. He said the feasibility study, which will take two or three months to complete, will give the foundation more solid expectations of exactly how much money they can raise and how long it will take to do it.

academic minors

By Kirk Brown

UI officials will ask the state Board of Regents Thursday to approve the establishment of academic minors in Latin American Studies, Women's Studies and Aging Studies.

Kenneth Moll, UI associate vice president for academic affairs, said Tuesday the regents will probably refer the UI's request to the board's Interinstitutional Committee on Educational Coordination.

However, Moll said such a referral is a usual practice and he sees no reason the academic minors won't be approved.

According to Moll, the reason the UI is presenting its request to the board is because "these are the only minors we offer that are not offered as academic majors."

ALL THREE of the minors are in the UI College of Liberal Arts.

Howard Laster, dean of the college, said the requests represent no significant change in

He said academic minors have already been established in Latin American and Women's Studies, while a minor in Aging Studies has not been offered previously.

"These are already thriving programs," Laster said. "I see no reason why they would not be approved by the board."

Laster said students who complete academic minors receive an advantage "because it acts as a form of advertising that they have completed a concentration of studies in this area."

To complete an academic minor at the UI, students must complete 16 hours of course work in the field of study while achieving a minimum grade point average of 2.0. None of the courses in the minor can be taken on a pass/fail Oleson asked several firefighters if they were surprised Eaton resigned from the fire department in May 1980. Allen and Firefighter Dave Miller testified they were not surprised at lawsuit Eaton's resignation because they heard it was "expected".

Miller testified that approximately a week to 10 days before Eaton submitted her resignation to Keating, Captain Wayne Fjelstad told some of the men to "cool it" because Eaton was expected to resign soon.

UI asks 7% rise in fees

By Dan Hauser

Mandatory student fees will increase by 7 percent beginning this summer if the UI recommendation is approved by the state Board of Regents.

According to Tom Palmer, president of the Collegiate Associations Council, each UI student currently pays $50 per student per semester in mandatory student fees. The increase would roughly add up to an extra $3.50 per student per semester.

The mandatory fees fit into three categories: those going for student services, such as Cambus and student health; those going for development, such as the Union renovation project; and those for student activities, such as CAC and senate. Tom Drew, president of the UI Student Senate, said Monday the decision to increase the fees coincides with the 17-percent average increase in tuition decided upon last October by the regents. Drew, Vice President for Student Services Philip

Hubbard, Palmer, former Vice President for Finance Randall Bezanson and Associate Vice President for Finance Casey Mahon met last fall to determine how much the fees would be increased.

HUBBARD SAID the group will now send its recommendation to the regents for approval. He said last year's increase did not receive approval until March, but Hubbard said he hopes this hike will be considered by the regents as early as February

"The regents can either adopt it (the 7-percent fee hike) or change it," Hubbard said.

Palmer said three members from both the senate and CAC will decide how to allocate the extra money if the increase is approved by the regents. Drew said after the committee meets and makes a decision they will take their recommendations to the senate and CAC for consideration this April.

With the committee meetings Palmer said he hopes to avoid a "mad rush" by students' organizations and commissions hoping to recieve additional funding from the senate and CAC.

Funding difficulties causing headaches for Big 10 papers

It is sometimes dubbed preparatory work for the real journalistic world, but college newspaper editors often experience the same financial headaches as "real" editors.

Funding methods used by The Daily Iowan recently came under attack from Jeffrey Renander, editor of the conservative Hawkeye Review. He maintains UI students should be free to choose whether to subscribe to the DI. Currently the DI receives about 15 percent of its revenue through mandatory student fees.

"Regular newspapers can't go off the wall," Renander said, describing what he calls the DI's

He said he is not sure how to pursue the issue, but suggested one step might be to request that the state Board of Regents change the fee from mandatory to optional.

The Minnesota Daily also receives about 15 percent of its revenue from mandatory student fees, but this funding mechanism was recently called into question when the newspaper clashed with the Minnesota state Board of Regents.

An 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals decision was needed to prevent the Minnesota state Board of Regents from discontinuing these mandatory fees.

THE DAILY CAME under fire from the regents after they published a "humor issue" in 1979 that offended many students and state lawmakers. The issue included a mock interview with Jesus, for which the Daily later apologized.

Minnesota Daily Editor Victoria Sloan said she feels it was a clear case of an attempt by the regents to censor the paper

Joe Mielke, editor of Michigan State University's The State News, said about 9.5 percent of his newspaper's budget comes from student refundable fees. The other 90.5 percent comes from advertising.

The refundable fee required at MSU is $1.50 per student per year, but recently the paper has been campaigning to raise the fee to $2 to combat rising publication costs. The last increase was in 1979,

In 1982 The State News lost $45,000 and last year the paper lost $8,000, he said. To combat the funding decline the paper boosted advertising costs on three separate occasions

Michele Mihaljevich, editor of Ohio State University's The Lantern said that newspaper receives about 5 percent of its revenues from student fees

CHUCK MORTELL, editor of the Daily Cardinal at the University of Wisconsin, said the paper does not receive any help in its overall costs unless the paper ends up with a deficit.

They (the University) will pay for any financial shortfalls. We get money in an indirect way," he said, noting that the paper has been able to keep out of the red in the past through advertising revenue. The other half of the Big Ten university newspapers are financially independent from their

Barry Witt, The Michigan Daily's editor, said the paper funds its overall costs through advertising and optional subscriptions from students and faculty/staff. "We should be independent and not use the university as a vehicle for funding."

Witt said he considers his paper comparable to any city daily. Members on the staff think the paper is a product that should be sold instead of depending on student fees, he said.

Although this philosophy has existed for 94 years at the Daily, Witt said it is liable to change due to the paper's deficit in recent years.

He said the paper has been able to pay these debts through past profits, but if the debts continue the publication might have to consider accepting student

A SECOND PAPER that is totally independent of student fees is Indiana University's The Indiana Daily Student. Editor Wendy Weyen said the paper receives its funding through advertising and

Although both the IDS and the Michigan Daily do not receive student fees, both editors believe the papers should still be called student newspapers.

Lisa Friedman, editor of the University of Illinois' Daily Illini, said her paper is also financially independent from the university. Last year, though, the Daily Illini experienced an internal shakeup that lead to the resignations of many staff members.

Ken Armstrong, editor of the Purdue Exponent, said the University of Purdue daily does not receive any funds from student fees, though the staff covers mainly campus happenings.

At Northwestern University the Daily Northwestern receives no financial help from student fees or the administration. Managing Editor Rona Schnall said the school administration used to allot the paper $27,000 annually, but in the 1982-83 school year the administration decided to make the paper more independent and withdrew its annual South Africa's policy of apartheid is now sparking debate in Iowa.

While Sen. Thomas Mann, D-Des Moines, faces a difficult fight in the lowa Legislature over his bill calling for divestment of state funds from South Africa in protest of a "horrendous set of laws to segregate and control blacks," experts on South Africa made a whistle stop in Iowa City Tuesday night to encourage such divest-

But the UI may be among those pos-ing the opposition to the bill. "Obviously it is in the power of the legislature to adopt this, but we (the UI) would point out that this would have fiscal implications for us," said UI Associate Vice President for Finance Casey Mahon.

If the bill is passed, $1.2 million in the state Board of Regents portfolio will have to be divested within three

The only stock the UI owns is given as gifts, since it is prohibited by law from buying stock in private corporations. The UI is then required to manage the property in a manner of 'sound fiscal judgement," Mahon said.

IN THE PAST, the UI has used its own proxy powers instead of "blind sale of stock," something passage of Mann's bill could impose, Mahon said.

"The university does not have the same investment freedom as individual investors. We are obligated to manage it in a fiscally prudent manner, and we have not predicated stock selling decisions on whether the corporation does business in South Africa," she said.

"Thus, the university has, in the past decade, exercised its proxy voting rights to urge the management of companies in South Africa to behave in a way that we believe is sound fiscal management. ... To withdraw all the university stocks on a given social issue would not be in the best interests of the taxpayers and students who receive benefits from them."

But Mann and the touring experts -Betsy Landis, vice president of the American Committee on Namibia, and Duffy Taylor, associate director of the South African Advocacy of the Lutheran World Ministries - insist Iowa has the moral obligation to stop financial support to the minority-ruled

"I think it's a really serious public policy question as to whether public monies of Iowa should be invested in a nation that has a policy of legal segregation," said Mann, the state's only black lawmaker.

"THE U.S. GOVERNMENT sup-

RICHEY SAID the proposed time period of three years "would be Africa the money to carry on with the apartheid system and also gives South Africa a kind of political legitimacy,"

Mann predicts the bill could have financial and moral implications. "It says something to our nation about President Reagan's policy (in South Africa). I also think it could have another impact beneficial to Iowans this money could be brought home and put people to work and help our

He said the bill will affect the institutions doing business with South Africa, adding, "If it wasn't going to have an effect, they wouldn't be out lobbying

However, he agreed with Richey that the effect on the regents institutions would be nominal.

"This suggests that the regents should be voluntarily divesting. I believe the regents should be in the forefront on this. ... I expect academia and those that represent these institutions to be enlightened and to pursue excellence," he said.

Taylor said six states and at least 30 universities have already withdrawn holdings in companies doing business in South Africa. "I feel that if we, as white people, are serious about eliminating racism, we must do it globally as well as at home," she said.

According to Cheryl Mintle, Iowa City human services coordinator, said the project could receive $500,000 in state-distributed federal funds and more than $250,000 from the Johnson County Board of Supervisors. The facility would be located at Harrison and Linn streets.

"These points that have been raised," Erdahl said, "if entered earlier, we could have taken them in proper sequence to take a look into them," and advised the council to stall the bond request. However, Clark's attorney, Joseph

Holland, said delaying the request could mean a slowdown in paperwork and more work for city administration. He said this could jeopardize the opportunity for receiving the bonds.

Holland also said Clark was unavailable for consultation with city staff because "he's in Texas."

A MAJOR POINT raised by councilors was that apartments Clark uses for low- and moderate-income families, who often are on waiting lists for such housing, were only onebedroom apartments and Clark should include two- and three-bedroom apartments for those families.

"It's misleading to say 20 percent (are for lower income families) when it's really just a few one-bedroom apartments," Erdahl said. "And I'd be disappointed if we had out-of-state workers on these projects."

Councilor George Strait said he wants the city to develop a policy for making two- and three-bedroom apartments available to lower income families but said, "I'll vote in favor of this tonight, though.'

PR replaces proposals

The giveaway that President Reagan's "major address" on relations with the Soviet Union would be more PR than substance came when the White House released excerpts from his speech the day before it was to be delivered. Aides emphasized that Reagan would urge "peaceful competition" and establishing a "constructive and realistic working relationship," and would represent a distinct change in tone from his railing against the Soviet Union's "evil empire." And, as expected, the press ran with the advance stories, giving Reagan the ready-made limelight he wanted for his pronouncements.

So with all the fanfare, what new paths to peace did the Great Communicator impart to us? He offered a "specific" three-part plan, first suggesting it would be "better and safer if we (the United States and the Soviets) could work together to assist people in areas of conflict in finding peaceful solutions to their problems." And: "Our second task should be to find ways to reduce the vast stockpiles of armaments in the world." And finally, "we must find ways to reverse the vicious cycles of threat and response which drives arms races everywhere it occurs."

The president seems to think these are pretty bold and innovative steps toward improving relations with the Soviets and easing tensions in the world. Most Americans have long seen these approaches as merely common sense - the bare minimum needed to stave off military confrontation.

So, after all the hoopla, the speech told us nothing we didn't already know. Reagan gave us no new specifics on how to put the brakes on the arms race. What he did give us is an early taste of his campaign rhetoric. Most observers see the timing of the speech following the Democratic candidates' debate as a shrewd move by Reagan to offer a stand, or non-stand, on the "peace

Monday morning Reagan repeatedly stressed the importance of bargaining for peace from a position of military strength. Tuesday the Russians agreed with that approach - Tass announced the Soviet Union has begun stationing nuclear missiles manned by Soviet forces in East Germany in response to NATO's deployment of new U.S. cruise and Pershing-2 missiles in western Europe. So much for PR.

Panel misses the point

After screwing up the Vietnam War by advocating policies that prolonged and intensified the war but still ended in a U.S. defeat, Henry Kissinger has decided to screw things up closer to home.

The National Bipartisan Commission on Central America, a.k.a. the Kissinger commission, has turned in its report to the president. Although the commission did make aid to El Salvador subject to improvement in human rights - that is, the government and its free-lance agents must stop killing its own and outsiders it doesn't like, including three nuns and a lay-worker - former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger has made it clear that he wants the aid continued even if there is little or no progress in human rights.

He persists in embracing the notion that there is some meaningful distinction between totalitarian regimes (read communists) and authoritarian regimes (read right-wing tyrants). He persists in believing that it makes a meaningful difference if dissidents are tortured and killed by totalitarian murderers or authoritarian murderers. There is some difference in the two systems. Authoritarian killers pretend to be on America's side against the communists and they often let their people keep their mariachi bands; communists usually don't.

However, to the person being tortured, or denied the vote, the distinction has little real importance. But by insisting on the distinction, Kissinger and Reagan can claim that demands for human rights improvements will weaken the ability of right-wing dictators to maintain control against a perceived communist threat.

By not requiring that human rights be observed as a condition of U.S. assistance, the United States makes itself a party to the violations of human rights and it gains the resentment of those op-

The Kissinger commission report, then, is flawed by its unwillingness to staunchly demand that human rights be a condition for aid. And Reagan's foreign policy is flawed by this same

Real gender gap is a wage gap

ANOTHER DAY ANOTHER DOLLAR!

By Diana Rock

AKERS EARN more than cooks, tailors more than seamstresses, stock clerks more than office clerks. Why? The former tend to be men; the latter, women. This is a form of sex discrimination so ingrained in the system that by now, it is the system per se. The real gender gap — the one reflected in current voting patterns - is a wage gap.

Despite the Equal Pay Act, passed 20 years ago, the wage gap between men and women remains wide. Today the average wage for women is only 62 percent of that for men — about the same gap as 30 years ago. The reason for this is that for the most part men and women don't do the same kind of Women tend to be segregated into "women's" jobs, and the pay for those jobs is invariably held down. In September, a federal judge in Tacoma, Wash., ruled the state has been violating the U.S. Civil Rights Act for doing just that. The state could have to pay $130 million in court-ordered salary increases for state workers in female-dominated jobs. And, because the state has resisted any corrective action since it first identified the pay inequity 10 years ago, it may have to award workers back pay as well.

The suit was brought by the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees (AFSCME), which has successfully got the state of Washington to sponsor pay studies. These studies showed, for example, that the state Fisheries License Supervisor, traditionally a woman, was paid less than a Game License Supervisor, traditionally a man. The work was substantially the same.

SIMILAR STUDIES were conducted by the state to set salaries in the first place. According to these studies, laundry operators at state facilities should be paid more than farm equipment operators. But in practice, the salaries for laundry workers (women) were 17 pay grades below those of the farm workers (men).

Similarly, clerk-typists and beginning warehouse workers were rated at the same level. But the typists omen) were paid at a level 10 grades below that of the warehouse workers

Typing, nursing, laundering, casework, teaching - these are all jobs deemed "women's work." At one time, those few women who worked did so to help buy a second car or some other "extra." That's not true any more, and the idea that women deserve less pay is as outdated as hoop skirts. It's also illegal. According to the Supreme Court's interpretation of the Civil Rights Act, people in femaledominated jobs should be paid the same as those in male-dominated jobs, where the jobs are of comparable value to the employer.

There are those who say women should simply quit their female-dominated jobs and take maledominated jobs if they want higher

IN THE REAL WORLD, of course, only a few privileged workers can select any job they choose. Nor is it practical for, say, a trained nurse to give up her career to become a tree trimmer, especially if she is supporting a family, as are two-thirds of working women.

But the real issue is the worth of the female-dominated job. If an employer artificially undervalues a job, it will eventually affect everyone. Look at the teaching profession. U.S. Secretary of Education Terrell H. Bell has long decried the loss of the brightest young women from the teaching profession to jobs once closed to them. Indeed, potential teachers are choosing to become tree trimmers, lawyers or whatever. And our schools are the The same is true for women who might have become nurses; nurses are in critical short supply. Then there is the issue of supply and demand. While employers claim that market forces dictate wage rates, the nursing shortage has not resulted in salary increases. Contrast that with the shortage of engineers, which has indeed resulted in higher salaries.

Part of the problem is that some people have openly decried "women's work." Recently, for example, Phyllis Schlafly told a conference on pay equity that innovations in office equipment - photocopying machines and word processors - were developed because of the incompetence of clerical workers. "Come on," she said to the elite group. "How many of you have ever realy had a good

THE CASE of AFSCME vs. the State of Washington has put states and cities on notice that sex-based wage discrimination is illegal. But it will still take a good deal of education to changes the attitudes that have kept pay equity from becoming a Nearly half of all workers in the country are women. Thus the gender gap in voting: women are voting less like wives, more like workers, and underpaid workers at that.

A pattern of injustice that has taken generations to build cannot be broken overnight. But at the bargaining table and in court, AFSCME and others representing working women will press on until pay equity is a reality in both the public and private sectors. After all, the battleground for womens's rights is now the workplace. And pay equity is the critical first step toward Having spent the autumn months in your city as a member of the International Writing Program, I wanted upon my return home to say a few words in your praise, Iowa City.

You are called, somewhat derisively, "the Boondocks," and being a faithful reader of The Daily Iowan I know that some of you Iowans feel a little inferior because of your location. But after living in Europe and traveling extensively in the United States, I prefer your small size, your relative remoteness, your quiet and calm rhythm, your friendly smile and helpful ways to the many splendors of the big metropoli. I was amazed to discover the extent of your cultural life - museum, theaters, music and dance, and I do not know of many cities your size with so many fine bookstores. But your greatest asset is your people friendly, warm, open and helpful, with no apparent fear or hostility toward the foreigners flooding your streets all year round. I have not been in many places where a newcomer feels secure, welcome and immediately at home the way I felt in your city, and this is a lot

The International Writing Program lectures and readings, your library, is a great opportunity for any writer, and its staff (Paul Engle, Hualing Nieh, Mary and Peter Nazareth, Ed Gentzler, Anne and Rick Knupfer, Anna, Vicky, Minita, Lisa and the rest) is competent, knowledgable and helpful. You should be proud of them.

I hope to return to Iowa City one day and take again a stroll along the river and on the Pentacrest, watch again the Old Capitol flooded with light at night. Until then I will remember you, Iowa City, with a lot of gratitude and a lot of love. And please, do not change. Not too much, anyhow. Shalom and so long.

Raiders will not intimidate Redskins

fear from the opposition.

Cutting through all the pregam ype surrounding Sunday's Super Bow XVIII is the obvious respect each club has for the other. The Raiders fervently want to unseat the NFL champions for their second Super Bowl crown in four years while the Redskins want to convince any remaining skeptics of their greatness after the strikeshortened '82 season inspired some

"Personally, I'm looking forward to playing against the Raiders and Marcus Allen," Washington linebacker Rich Milot said Tuesday as both teams posed for Picture Day.

I THINK THEY feel they can run on us and Allen adds another dimension to their offense. We had a lot of team success last year but not much individual success, so this year has been a little different for us.' Allen, who ran for 154 yards and caught seven passes for another 62 yards to key the Raiders' 30-14 rout of Seattle in the AFC title game, was sidelined for the first Raiders-Redskins game. Washington scored 17 points in the final eight minutes at RFK Stadium Oct. 2 to pull out a 37-35 triumph, and Redskin linebacker Neal Olkewicz remembers that duel with

"That was a fun game to be in," said Olkewicz of a brawl-filled contest that needed almost an hour just to complete the first period. "The Raiders are one of the few teams left that rely on the big-play offense ... that's just another part of their intimidation plan.

"BUT I APPRECIATE that kind of offensive philosophy. Lots of time when a team is trying to trick you all over the field you start thinking they're not as good as you are and they need gimmicks. This isn't that kind of game. These are the two best teams.' Veteran Redskins' tackle George Starke, manhandled by all-pro defensive end Howie Long in the first game, is also looking forward to the rematch, with a winner's share of $36,000 per player as added incentive. 'Our styles are similar in so many ways," he said, "and neither of these teams can be intimidated. The reason we score so much (NFL record 541 points in regular season) is that we're good at what we do. I think we're probably the best-coached team in the

The trip was the first time Davidson had ever taken a team out of the United States, except for a couple of years ago when she took a team to Vancouver. Davidson said teams traveling to Europe to play field hockey is not un-common in the United States.

"MOST OF THE Eastern teams do it (travel to Europe to play)," Davidson said. "It's a tradition for them."

condition was an advantage for them during the games, Marcia Pankratz said. "We won the games by outhustling them," she added.

But winning field hockey games wasn't the most important thing during Iowa's trip to England, the sixth-year Iowa coach said. "We went to enjoy hockey," Davidson said, "and to take the terrible competitive pressure off of "The sport doesn't have to be as cut throat (as it is in the United States)," she said. "We wanted to win, but it didn't matter if we won or lost." Pankratz agreed with Davidson that winning wasn't as important during the games played against the England field hockey clubs.

"IT WAS MORE like a Saturday night softball game," she said.

Besides playing a more relaxed version of hockey, the trip also gave the Hawkeyes more experience against good field hockey teams and a chance to play against teams with a slightly different style, Davidson said.

The field hockey clubs in England use more long passes than the Hawkeyes, who do a lot more passing in their games, Davidson said.

The Hawkeyes also picked up some valuable tips from the England clubs. "We learned the importance of poise and controlling the ball and the importance of having perfect passes," Pankratz said.

Davidson said she plans on taking another team to Europe in the future, maybe to Holland. Holland has the top field hockey teams in the world, she

Raiders will not intimidate Redskins

TAMPA, Fla. (UPI) - The Washington Redskins have heard all about the Los Angeles Raiders' "Commitment to Excellence," their policy of intimidation and intent to provoke fear from the opposition.

Cutting through all the pregame hype surrounding Sunday's Super Bowl XVIII is the obvious respect each club has for the other. The Raiders fervently want to unseat the NFL champions for their second Super Bowl crown in four years while the Redskins want to convince any remaining skeptics of their greatness after the strikeshortened '82 season inspired some

'Personally, I'm looking forward to playing against the Raiders and Marcus Allen," Washington linebacker Rich Milot said Tuesday as both teams posed for Picture Day.

THINK THEY feel they can run on us and Allen adds another dimension to their offense. We had a lot of team success last year but not much individual success, so this year has been a little different for us.'

Allen, who ran for 154 yards and caught seven passes for another 62 yards to key the Raiders' 30-14 rout of Seattle in the AFC title game, was sidelined for the first Raiders-Redskins game. Washington scored 17 points in the final eight minutes at RFK Stadium Oct. 2 to pull out a 37-35 triumph, and Redskin linebacker Neal Olkewicz remembers that duel with

"That was a fun game to be in," said Olkewicz of a brawl-filled contest that needed almost an hour just to complete the first period. "The Raiders are one of the few teams left that rely on the big-play offense ... that's just another part of their intimidation plan.

"BUT I APPRECIATE that kind of offensive philosophy. Lots of time when a team is trying to trick you all over the field you start thinking they're not as good as you are and they need gimmicks. This isn't that kind of game. These are the two best teams."

Veteran Redskins' tackle George Starke, manhandled by all-pro defensive end Howie Long in the first game, is also looking forward to the rematch, with a winner's share of $36,000 per player as added incentive.

"Our styles are similar in so many ways," he said, "and neither of these teams can be intimidated. The reason we score so much (NFL record 541 points in regular season) is that we're good at what we do. I think we're probably the best-coached team in the

Raveling still looks to find a 'total team'

By Steve Batterson

How's George Raveling?

Fine, thank you. His shoulder's "feeling the best it has in ages" and the Hawkeye basketball coach is looking for an improved performance out of his team when Iowa meets Minnesota Thursday night in the Carver-Hawkeye

"I love these kids," Raveling said at his weekly press conference Tuesday. "They're the greatest bunch of kids ... I wouldn't trade any one of them. It's just a great joy to go to practice every day.

"The problem is that we haven't evolved yet as a total team," Raveling said. "I guarantee that if you'd have seen (Monday's) practice you couldn't wait to see the Hawks play against Minnesota Thursday. This is one hardworking group.'

OF COURSE, Raveling also remembers all too well a good week of practices last week prior to Iowa's 42-39 win over Northwestern. "You hope the practices carry over to the game and obviously it didn't work that way last week," he said.

"The frustrating part is that we're so close to getting it done," Raveling said. "If we'd shoot better fouls you'd be talking about whether we should be ranked higher. We're playing good enough defense to win. You're not going to shut a guy like (Iowa State's Barry) Stevens down. You just have to stop the other four.'

Raveling said Iowa State should be credited for its cautious shot selection and tough defense that stopped the Hawkeyes, 76-72, in double overtime last weekend.

"THE THING I feared the most about Iowa State was their press, and I think we did a good job against that,"

In Minnesota, Raveling said his team will meet a squad that has a good chance to become a factor in the Big Ten race if they can get on a roll. And after the Gophers' 69-61 win over Michigan State on Saturday, he doesn't want the roll to begin in Iowa City.

"They could pose some problems for us," Raveling said. "They have maybe been a better team than envisioned." Raveling said he will use five of his "starting seven" when the Hawkeyes tip it off against the Gophers, but he isn't quite ready to say who will start the game just yet. The usual starting five of Greg Stokes, Michael Payne, Steve Carfino, Craig Anderson and Andre Banks along with Brad Lohaus and Todd Berkenpas are all being listed as "The frustrating part is that we're so close to getting it done," says lowa basketball Coach George Raveling.

ACCORDING TO Raveling, nobody on the Hawkeye team utilizes the full extent of his abilities as much as Anderson, the 6-foot-7 forward from Madison, Wis. "He will be a factor in this week's games," Raveling said. "How much he plays and his contribution remains to be seen. He really makes a significant contribution out there. He's the kind of player that sticks out, and you question why he's out there, but he gets the job done."

Raveling also defends the play of point guard Andre Banks, saying that "obviously we'd all love to see a guy come in and knock 'em in from that range, but that will come with time."

The Hawkeye coach isn't too certain about who is the favorite in the Big Ten, where only Purdue remains un-defeated after the first two weeks of

"I don't think you can say anybody's the favorite in the Big Ten. If you look at it mathmatically, Purdue's the favorite but they've got a lot of weigh stations to go through before they pick up the trophy.

Freshman Johnny Fort has returned to practice after missing several days of workouts and contemplating transferring to another school.

"I sat down with Johnny (Monday) and he tells me he's here for four years and he will play basketball for four years. He says he has things resolved in his mind," Raveling said.

Spangler turns down $10,000 to remain a Hawkeye

Iowa's Jenny Spangler spent her last weekend before classes resumed this semester in Houston running 26.2

Spangler, after completing her run of 26.2 miles, had an opportunity to walk away from her morning workout with a check for $10,000 from the Houston-Tenneco Marathon.

Spangler completed the race with a time of two hours, 37.01 seconds and placed second among the women while eing the first American to cross the finish line. Spangler turned down the $10,000 to maintain her amateur status, which would enable her to continue competing for the Hawkeyes.

"No, I didn't really consider accepting the money," Spangler said. "I knew before the race there would be prize money for the first 10 places and couldn't accept it. But afterwards, I thought 'gosh, I could of had $10,000.' "

SPANGLER IS qualified to run the Olympic Trials Marathon, which is to be held in Olympia, Wash., this spring. Spangler's time Sunday would have qualified her for the trials race even though she had qualified at an earlier date in a race in Minnesota.

Spangler could have accepted the money from Sunday's race and still the truest sense of the word, turning

Spangler then returned home from Houston on Sunday night and returned to classes Monday morning to start the next semester like any other college girl ... who just gave up the opportunity to pocket $10,000.

CBS telecasts more than football for fans on 'Super Bowl Sunday'

This Sunday is one of those few days in the sports year in which everybody who even likes sports just a little will be in front of the tube. Yes, it is what has become "Super Sunday" in which Super Bowl XVIII will be played in Tampa, Fla. This year, the honor of telecasting the battle between the Washington Redskins and the Los Angeles Raiders goes to CBS and its' fine crew of announcers, Pat Summerall and former Raider Coach John

When a network is fortunate enough to have the rights to "Super Sunday," the fans get more than just a three hour football game. CBS has gone all out to continue the tradition of the past 18 years.

It all starts at 11:30 a.m. on KGAN-2 when the defending national runner-up Houston Cougar basketball team invades 23,000-seat Rupp Arena to tangle with the Kentucky Wildcats.

THIS GAME IS reminiscent of last year's epic struggle between Virginia and Georgetown when centers Ralph Sampson and Patrick Ewing were showcased against Houston's man in the middle, Akeem Olajuwon, will be pitted against Kentucky's twin towers of 7-foot-1 Sam Bowie and 6-11 Melvin Turpin. To make the battle even more intriguing, the polls have both squads rated in the top 10.

Following the cage action will be a special two-hour edition of The Super Bowl Today hosted by Brent Musburger. Many features are in store for the fans, according to CBS spokesman Doug

Patton: Indiana biggest meet of year

By Greg Anderson

Anytime Iowa and Indiana get together in a swimming pool, quite an encounter can be ex-

And Iowa Coach Glenn Patton said that Saturday's home dual against the Hoosiers, who are the defending Big Ten champions, will be no different.

"This is our biggest meet of the year," the ninth-year Hawkeye coach said. "It is certainly the meet we will be the most up for." In fact, Patton said at his Tuesday press conference that Saturday's clash in the Field House pool may be the best ever in the rivalry that has been growing since the Iowa coach's arrival in 1975.

The showdown between these two Big Ten powerhouses really began to brew in 1981, when Iowa ended the Hoosiers' 20-year dominance in the conference championships, and it hasn't slowed down since that time.

Iowa is," Patton said. "This will be a great meet. One of the best ever."

Last year, the Hoosiers soundly blew out Iowa, 80-33, while taking all but three events in their home pool. Later in the season, Indiana ended Iowa's two-year hold on the Big

The Hawkeyes were a dissapointing 3-7 in dual meets last season, and Patton said that because of this "humbling" record, he has put more emphasis on duals for the 1983-84

Iowa is currently off to a 7-0 start after two big wins over the Christmas layoff. Patton does not plan on another Indiana blowout this time around. "I'd be totally surprised if one team or another wins by a large margin. This meet could very well go down to the last event.

"WE'RE READY and are really looking

"I guess you could call it the greatest bargain in Iowa athletics."

Patton calls it a bargain because Saturday's dual at noon will be free to the public because of the renovation going on in the

But if Iowa is to avenge last year's loss and continue its undefeated dual season, the Hawkeyes will do it without the services of three key performers. Patton revealed Tuesday that the academic problems that have recently plagued other Hawkeye teams this year have now spread to a pair of his top recruits. Freshmen Ed Lower and Kurt Benson have been ruled academically ineligible and will not be able to compete for the remainder of

LOWER REGISTERED the fastest conference 200-yard freestyle time of the year with a one minute, 40.6 second showing at

While Benson, a Cedar Rapids native, was a breaststroke specialist who Patton expected to reach the championship finals for Iowa at the Big Ten meet in March.

"This is a tough loss," Patton said. "Both of those guys would have been on our travel squad to Big Ten's ... it cuts down our depth tremendously

Both athletes will be staying in school and Patton said they need to "assume more academic discipline." Patton said that Lower and Benson will do what they need "to improve their academic status," including attending summer school if necessary.

One other swimmer has also reached the Iowa inactive list. Senior All-American backstroker David Ross will be out for at least three weeks with a broken hand.

Ross has been wearing a cast from his knuckles to his forearm since his hand hit a surface lane line during Iowa's recent training trip to Florida.

"The Raiders definitely have two of the most talented cornerbacks in pro football in Mike Haynes and Lester Hayes," he said of two players with a combined 10 years in the Pro Bowl. They have a free safety (all-pro Vann McElroy) who plays in the middle of field protecting everybody deep and their strong safety (Mike Davis) is one of the best hitters in the league. The chance to win consecutive Super Bowls is certainly a challenge and naturally, with our competitive athletes, that's Records include games through Saturday. St. John's dropped seven places - the biggest drop of any team in the ratings after suffering a two-point loss to Boston College, and UCLA, which was upset by Oregon, dropped four spots as did Fresno State, which lost to Fullerton State.

Georgia, previously 18th, fell from the rankings after losing to Alabama. The Bulldogs were replaced by Purdue, which used victories over Ohio State and Indiana to vault to 14th.

Only four teams did not move in the ratings after a week in which 12 ranked teams lost at least once.

Purdue is an early league surprise as Wisconsin quietly badgers foes

Purdue has earned most of the attention in the early part of the Big Ten season by being the surprise team of the conference, and Wisconsin has quietly made some of its own stirrings in the league race.

The Boilermakers are 4-0 heading into Saturday's showdown at Illinois, currently tied with Michigan at 3-1. Both Purdue and the Illini are idle until Saturday.

Wisconsin is suddenly 2-2 in the league after upsetting both Michigan State and Michigan last week. The Boilermakers will seek to go above the .500 mark in the conference when they invade Northwestern Thursday night.

League action gets underway Wednesday night when the Wolverines host winless Ohio State. The other two match-ups Thursday night pit Minnesota at Iowa and Indiana at Michigan State.

WISCONSIN HAS gotten hot, thanks to Rick Olson, the conference player of the week who netted a career-high 39 points last week against Michigan. Olson has eamed with Cory Blackwell to give the Badgers a solid outside-inside combination.

"They are complimenting each other very well," said Wisconsin Coach Steve Yoder, whose club is 6-7 overall. "The entire team is playing with a lot of confidence now after having won those games at home."

Wisconsin could very well be 3-1 if it had not dropped a double overtime loss at home

NORTHWESTERN, 1-2 in the league, is coming off a 64-62 loss to once-beaten George Mason at home. Coach Rich Falk said he hasn't been surprised by Wisconsin's recent success.

"I said at the beginning of the season that no team can be taken lightly in this league," Falk said. "They are playing very well right now and have a lot of confidence. But so are we. If we can start getting more confidence at the line, we'll be okay."

Falk's club missed seven straight oneand-one opportunities against George Mason. The Wildcats, ranked ninth in the league in free throw percentage, are a half dozen free throws away from being 11-2,

"We're not going to panic about the free throws," Falk said. "We're the only team in the league with nine remaining home games so we're in good shape."

Thompson resurfaces with 'Lono' New series views world

By Daniel Baldwin Special to The Daily Iowan

CURSE ON Hunter S. Thompson - alias Dr. Gonzo, alias Raoul Duke, and now alias Lono, the Hawaiian god of plenty reincarnate is redundant. Not only has Lono returned to the islands (last time around, Lono was in the body of one Captain James Cook, killed by the Hawaiians who worshipped him), but Hunter S. Thompson, the undisputed king of gonzo journalism, has returned to savage the literary world after an absence of ten years (not including a compilation of previously published work, The Great Shark Hunt). Oh, that we all could take a decade off.

This particular respite, though, was the subject of much conjecture. Was he mentally burnt out from the rigors of Fear and Loathing on the Campaign Trail '72, in which he admitted being on the verge of a complete emotional collapse, or was it the constant haggling with Jann Wenner, the wunderkind editor of Rolling Stone, who put his high-voltage typewriter in storage?
Or was it worse? Had the Doctor decided to join the same status quo he had once terrorized? It was Thompson himself who recently told me not to get into journalism. There was no money in it, he reasoned. Did he mean it? When was Hunter Thompson ever openly concerned with getting rich? The Curse of Lono, among other things, provides some answers.

The Curse of Lono begins with Thompson getting in touch with his longtime friend and collaborator, artist Ralph Steadman, in an attempt to entice Steadman into covering the Honolulu Marathon for a running magazine. Hawaii. Easy money. How could anyone refuse? In the air we learn how an apparently normal individual can enter an airliner restroom and exit 45 minutes later with a blue arm. Thompson enjoys being privy to this kind of quirky inside information, and in this scene, the book's best, he uses it to point out just what type of trafficking is common place in our friendly skies.

Hunter S. Thompson

As with Thompson's classic, Fear criminal side of Richard Nixon as well and Loathing in Las Vegas, the message - cultural criticism, if you will - works in the form of metaphor. We are to see the characters (especially Thompson), their actions and dialogue as archetypes, in this case representing the future survivors of a "brutal Darwinian crunch" that Thompson says will be the mark of the 80s. Hunter correctly predicted the

as the apathy that followed and he may

too. But The Curse of Lono is not a classic - and Thompson, as both character and writer, is the reason.

IN MARCH of this year I had several conversations with Thompson. One of the things I asked him about was his reputation, one that makes him the literary equivalent to John Wilkes Boothe. Was it for real? Did it bother him? Thompson replied that while at one time it was the source of great amusement and celebrity, it had turned into a "big pain in the ass." He could not go anywhere or seriously cover anything without having to deal with the expectations of others. That is rough, especially when they expect you to act like a major loon. Yet in The Curse of Lono, Thompson writes as if he is the one affected by his reputation. The power of his previous writings derived from the Everyman qualities in the Thompson character, allowing the reader some real, and very often poignant, vicarious thrills. The Curse of Lono is so intent upon being a "Hunter Thompson book" that the narrative becomes idiosyncratic, fraught with allusions to his greatness. In short, it is smug - entirely sure of itself in its capacities to entertain and sell, it becomes virtually devoid of meaning.

Still, the appearance of The Curse of Lono can only be seen as a good sign. Apparently Thompson has decided to seriously get back into journalism. (His name has reappeared on the Rolling Stone masthead, instead of the disguised "Raoul Duke (Sports)") He claims to have been able to make more money by talking on the phone twice a week, which is what he spent the last decade doing. And if there is a moral to The Curse of Lono, it is to never trust anyone who gets rich by talking on the phone twice a week. If the Doctor can regain his old form, life will definitely become more interesting. Our only hope is that The Curse of Lono is a warm-up for better things to come.

through museum's eyes

NEW YORK (UPI) - PBS' new series "Smithsonian World," hosted by historian David McCullough, premieres tonight with an illuminating look at time and light through the eyes of the scientists of one of the world's greatest museums.

'Time and Light" will air from 8-9 p.m. EST. (In Iowa City, it will show on the Iowa Public Television Network at 7 p.m. The night has not been set.)

During each of the series' seven episodes, McCullough visits the various institutions and dedicated scientists that make up the Smithsonian, a worldwide complex of 13 museums, the National Zoo and seven research institutes. 'The Smithsonian Institution is the best and longest running show in America," says McCullough, author of such award-winning books as Mornings on Horseback and The Path Between the Seas. Each program attempts to demonstrate a link between science, history, humanities and the arts by telling five or six dif-ferent stories related to a common "Time and Light" opens at the Time Museum in Rockford, Ill.,

which houses one of the world's most comprehensive collections of clocks and watches, "where we who are captives of time hold time captive," McCullough says. Sun dials, candles, incense and even water were the standard timekeepers until the 14th century, when English monks began building mechanical clocks. In the 16th century, coiled springs led to the development of wind-up clocks

THEN IN THE 17th century

dulum and America began massproducing pendulum clocks. "For the first time in history, the average person could have a clock on the wall," McCullough says.

Now we even have atomic clocks, which are accurate to 1 second every 30,000 years, he says.

From there the action moves to a tropical research station in Puerto Rico where Smithsonian botanist Thomas Soderstrom is studying natural clocks. He is trying to determine why virtually all bamboo plants of the same species are signaled to die at the same time, worldwide.

Other stops are made at the Grand Canyon, at the Smithsonian Institution-University of Arizona's Multiple Mirror Telescope on the summit of Mount Hopkins, Ariz., and at Carrie Bow Cay, a coral island in the Carribean off Belize, where a Smithsonian paleobiologist is studying the evolution of sea urchins.

The last stop is at the "Tower of Wind" in the Vatican, where in 1582, Pope Gregory the 13th was convinced by the location of a spot of sunlight on the floor that the Julian calendar must be corrected. Ten days were dropped gone forever - and Leap Year

"It is interesting how light determines time," McCullough says, noting that the movement of light dictates the passing of a year. When the earth revolves on its axis, that's a day, and when the moon goes around the earth, that's a month.

"Light has remained the fundamental measure of our time.

in recent music history as The Year of the Break. Not as in spring break, not as in "break a leg" (though luck never hurts), not even as in break dancing but as in shatter, smash, split.

For the year encompassed some of the widest splits in what can be classified as "popular" in the pop world. There was Michael Jackson, representing the unisex/unirace trend (including also such diverse musical personalities as Prince, Boy George, and Grace Jones); there was the video escapist trend (Duran Duran, Culture Club, Heaven 17, and a galaxy of lesser lights); there were the "new wave" holdovers, mining new territory with the same probing, disquieting intent (Elvis Costello, XTC and Talking Heads, among the elder statesmen; U2, Big Country, and X among the newer kids on the block); there were the reunions (the Animals, Yes, Simon and Garfunkel, among a host of others); and so on and on and on. What only a few years before had been at least polarized among three fairly distinguishable camps (New Wave, Pop and L.A. gloss-rock) had become a bewildering array of factions. Rock 'n' roll may be here to stay, but it comes in as many shapes and sizes as the muses and Madison Avenue can inspire/contrive.

IN FACT, the very fact that we have divided the various realms of pop into conceptual trends rather than musical styles says something about the main driving force (either for action or reaction) in the business today: how to sell it. One of the main reasons for this is, of course, MTV. It's no secret that the 24-hour music channel was created to fill a gap in the industry's marketing strategies (remember how all the record companies were scratching their heads in 1980, wondering where all the glory years had gone?), and as such it has succeeded beyond their fondest dreams. And it has come to serve another purpose: to launch careers. Duran Duran is an example; curiously, so is Def Leppard. Gone are the days end-all of a tune's rise and/or fall — if you make it on MTV, you've made it; radio will play you if MTV does.

The DI's Top 15 LP list was compiled with the help of all the pop music people we could find around the newsroom. Without them none of this would have been possible.

The "diversification revolution" that cable television promised and has, to a large extent, delivered has produced a similar reaction in popdom. Something for everybody, for sure. Look at the big sellers of 1983: The Police, Michael Jackson. Def Leppard. David Bowie. What, besides their certified platinum popularity, do these folks have in com-

AT THE SAME time, established stars from the Older Days were still around and doing as well as ever. The Rolling Stones. Paul McCartney. The Who. Jackson Browne. Genesis. Even those bands considered opposite in their day are enjoying the benefits.

So: the industry was relearning how to sell and the public was relearning how to consume. The year of health, then, right? Right - more or less. True, artists worthy of more notice didn't receive it (the late Richard Thompson and T-Bone Burnett are two prime examples), but then 'twas ever when radio airplay was the be-all and so. The fact remains that a lot of new

The Daily Iowan's crack group of pop ears has come up with a list of 15 best LPs that reflects the year of their release: good and varied. There were personal favorites that went unnoticed (though not for lack of lobbying by their partisans) but, generally, the Top 15 is a pretty smooth consensus of opinion, with the Stones' Undercover and Michael Jackson's Thriller being the major controversies (some voted extremely "yea" while others gagged out strong "nays" on both LPs; the latter knocked out Mick and Keith altogether and brought Jackson down a few pegs).

No doubt there will be disagreements - such is the nature of all 'best" lists. We invite you readers to respond to our choices and let us know what you think. Who knows? If we get enough responses, we could have a Readers' Top Ten ..

15) Close to the Bone, Tom Tom Club (Sire). 11 points. Paul P. Soucek what more can an '80s listener ask

14) Jonathan Sings! Jonathan Richman and the Modern Lovers (Arista). 11 points. Allen Hogg said: 'A lot of groups talk about stripping rock'n'roll down to its bare essentials, Jonathan Richman and his new Modern Lovers really do it ... a glorious album celebrating innocence and romance." 13) State of Confusion. The Kinks (Arista). 14.5 points. Jim (The Doc of Rock) Musser opined: "Evidently rejuvenated by young love and a long layoff, Ray Davies delivers this group's best since Lola Versus Powerman and the Moneygoround in 1970. Strongest rock record by an over-40 type to date." And Hogg added: "Ray Davies once again divides himself between idiosyncratic rock star and genuinely compassionate observer of the human condition ... in the process, he proves he's still the best at both." 12) Speaking in Tongues. The Talking Heads (Sire). 15 points. Kevin Parks said:"(It) isn't a great Heads album, but David Byrne and company have been playing their own brand of white funk for so long now, the audience is finally realizing how far ahead of their time they've been since 1977." And Hogg said: "Byrne's attempt to make been the most pretentious musical move this year, except for the fact that it turned out so magnificently."

10) (tie) Swordfishtrombones. Tom

Waits (Warner Bros.). 16 points. John Voland said: "Tom Waits deserves a spot in the Cooperstown of pop ... his consistently offbeat songs and 10miles-of-bad-road growl define what is probably the most original point of view around. Treat yourself to some

10) (tie) Hearts and Bones. Paul Simon (Warner Bros.). 16 points. Parks: "The pleasant surprise of the year. Normally soupy Simon has come up with his most substantive and listenable record yet." Voland: "He was right to have wiped Art Garfunkel off of this one ... it's a statement as personal and visionary as an old, treasured photograph.

8) (tie) Legendary Hearts. Lou Reed (RCA). 17 points. Hogg: "Manhattan's punk prophet continues in the sparse musical style of The Blue Mask, but lyrically this album gives him back his bite." And Parks: "Reed has no peer when it comes to honest, mature, raw rock 'n' roll."

8) (tie) Thriller. Michael Jackson (Epic). 17 points, Musser: "The girl is his, the kid ain't and the record belongs to everybody. Docked a point for the presence of Paulie Mack." And Steve Horowitz added: "What more can be said about the largest selling record by a solo artist in music history? Over 20 million copies have been purchased worldwide and for good reason. The music is infectious, the lyrics cute and Michael Jackson stunningly beautiful and charismatic.'

6) (tie) Trouble in Paradise. Randy Newman (Warner Bros.). 18 points. Hogg: "The true master of sarcasm has constructed a terrific album about places and things which were supposed to be utopias - Los Angeles, love, wealth - but didn't turn out that way. Trouble in Paradise is a masterpiece. I love it!" Parks: "One minute you're laughing and singing along with Newman — and the next minute he's slicing your throat."

6) (tie) Infidels. Bob Dylan (Columwrote: "Stupid, happy love songs; an album using only nonsense lyrics bia). 18 points. Voland: "This may well and claim it has meaning would have be Dylan's finest musical effort in years ... Blood on the Tracks redux. Great stuff," Horowitz: "Believe it or not, Dylan is back in gear ... even when one doesn't agree with him, Dylan makes his views known eloquently and through sheer persistence. This record should end those what ever happened to Dylan questions.'

5) More Fun from the New World. X (Elektra). 19 points. Hogg: "This L.A. punk band is at their most accessible, doing covers of rock classics ("Breathless") and even stealing a riff from the Doobie Brothers for "True Love Pt. 2." The result, however, is great dance music." Voland: "Required rock 'n' roll listening. Our finest American band — support them!"

4) Proof Through the Night. T-Bone Burnett (Warner Bros.). 20 points. Parks: "T-Bone's most consistent and accessible effort. His scenarios have as much content as any other in the pop world today." Voland: "Album of the Year. Great musicians, songs enjoyable from any number of points of view, a message that is palpable and honest, and terrific production values. As real a rock 'n' roller as they come.

3) Mummer. XTC (Virgin, English import). 26 points. Soucek: 'Archetypically striking music that defies trend (as XTC always has) and that is glorious in that defiance. Influences abound in the material, but XTC is its own band." Musser: "The smartest pop band in the world just keeps getting better - as it gets harder to find. Last year's gem (English Settlement) was ravaged before U.S. release; this beauty has yet to be released at all Stateside.'

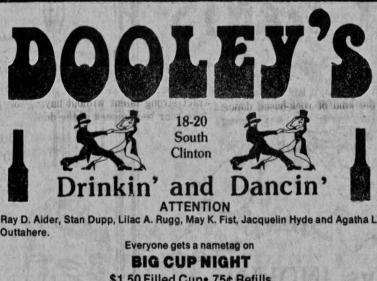

2) Born to Laugh at Tornadoes. Was(Not Was) (Geffen). 28.5 points. Musser: "The devil-may-care "Was Brothers" bring their brain-damaged pop skew to dance music, and woe to dullards that get in their way. Fresh, bouncy, weird and (potentially) hitladen." Soucek: "Luminous pop countering its mass appeal with dirt-underthe-rug philosophies and an eclectic array of vocalists - "What were we supposed to do when Zaz turned blue?" croons Mel Torme." The movie shows Brooks at his best - under restraint. He's only the hasn't overextended his talents.

As the producer, it was his idea to remake the 1942 To Be Or Not To Be, directed by Ernst Lubitsch and starring Jack Benny and Carole Lombard. The comic potential of all those Nazis amid all those actors must have been irresistible to Brooks.

And as the movie's star, Brooks does the broad takes of barely repressed hysteria that have become his trademark.

WHEN BROOKS glides from disguise to disguise, the movie hits its highs, especially in his scenes with Charles Durning, who plays a Nazi colonel. As dueling characters, Bronski and the colonel are an unfair

'Casablanca' is uniquely American to Moroccans

CASABLANCA, Morocco (UPI) -Of all the gin joints in all the world, this one doesn't exist. No one ever heard of Rick's American Cafe or the Hollywood film classic with Humphrey Bogart and Ingrid Bergman.

"Either I was too young or quickly forgot what it was," said an elderly Moroccan journalist at the Islamic summit conference on Middle East issues, the city's current focus of attention.

Residents of "Casa" seemed puzzled at the query.

"Casablanca film? Of course I see film, many film," said Mohamed Ayache, a taxi driver. But he had to be told that movie buffs around the world had been enthralled for more than four decades by a film named after his hometown.

Not surprising. The 1942 movie was shot entirely on a Hollywood lot. It was considered a routine potboiler at the time. No one involved - not Bogart, not Bergman, not director Michael Curtiz - dreamed it would become so Rick's American Cafe - Bogart's film nightclub - never existed in Casablanca, nor is there anything like it now among the city's many bars.

Ayache the cabbie could not recall ever seeing Bogart or Bergman, either. "I must have been very small when I started going to the movies, but I don't remember those," he said.

"What will I watch a 40-year-old film for?" said the reception clerk of the Hotel Meridien. "There is video, there is color, there's Jean-Paul Belmondo.'

Special note: Bijou calendars are not expected to arrive until Friday at the earliest, but they may not be in until next Monday. Fliers for this week's movies are available in the Union, and stay tuned to E.T. for daily Bijou listings. And, in case you didn't read about it last semester, Bijou prices have increased (minutely). • An American In Paris (1951). Made a year before Singing in the Rain, Gene Kelly choreographs his way through the streets of Gay Paree where there's always fair weather. Vincente Minnelli's musical won the Best Picture Oscar, and it's still one of the great movie musicals. Featuring Kelly's exciting 20-minute ballet staged to George Gershwin's "An American in Paris." At 7 p.m.

• An Evening with George Kuchar. Jack Kroll of Newsweek says, "The Kuchar movies must be seen to be believed. With startling grace, wit and inventiveness the Kuchars turn juicy Bronx wenches into exotic maidens, their mother into a domesticated Dietrich and old odds and ends into a monster cockroach, an appallingly funny symbol of the horror of urban life." These bizarre short films are: Hold Me While I'm Naked, The Sunshine Sisters, A Reason to Live, I, An Actress, and Mongreloid. Hold on tight to your sanity. At 9:15 p.m.

Television

On the networks: Television's second season shows definite signs of promise with three new sit-coms. Martin Mull brings his pleasant brand of dopey good humor to "Domestic Life" (CBS at 7 p.m.), about a TV commentator and his slightly out-of-kilter home life.

Magician/comedian Harry Anderson plays a judge whose deck is short a few cards in "Night Court" (NBC at 8:30 p.m.) And "Empire" (CBS at 7:30 p.m.) is a comedy-soap opera which could do for high finance what "Soap" • On cable: More funny stuff:

Steven Spielberg's "1941" (Cinemax-13 at 4:30 p.m.) may have flopped with the critics, but its shortcomings are more those of excessive expectations than a lack of end results. No great belly laughs, but its cast (John Belushi, Ned Beatty, Robert Stack, and Warren Oates among others) and its funny vignettes guarantee many smiles. The laughs are more robust in Burt Reynolds' The End (Cinemax-13 at 7 p.m.) an outrageous comedy about death, dying and suicide. Dom De Luise, Sally Field and Joanne Woodward head a large supporting cast, And Doris Day tries to change her image with James Bondian shenanigans in Caprice (WGN-10 at 9

Workers cite bias in favor of Eaton

By Patricia Reuter

The fifth day of court testimony in Linda Eaton's lawsuit against Iowa City and three of its administrators brought allegations of favoritism and reverse discrimination from three of her former coworkers.

In Johnson County District Court Wednesday Eaton's attor-ney, Clara Oleson, questioned Iowa City firefighter Nate Hopkins about a letter he wrote to Don Crow, who was president of the firefighters' union in June 1978. In the letter Hopkins questioned the legality of Eaton's reassignment to alternate employment in the city during her pregnancy.

"I know the 8 to 5 sugar dad dies sitting on their butts who have never been closer to a fire than a Saturday night barbecue would find it hard to swallow," Hopkins wrote.

"THE SOB SISTERS in the Civic Center were so inflamed to install a woman — any woman at the fire department, they were willing to flout the rules (to do it)."

Under cross-examination, defense attorney John Hayek asked Hopkins if he checked with the city's personnel department to see if Eaton's leave and reassignment violated civil ser-
