Council debates funding for new bridge

By Carlos Trevino

Although major reconstruction work on the Iowa Avenue bridge could begin vlate April, the Iowa City Council and UI officials are still uncertain about who will foot the bill for a $85,000 footbridge, Mayor John McDonald said

McDonald explained that the $1.18 million reconstruction project would close the 67-year-old bridge to vehicle traffic for about 10 months and "we (UI and city officials) talked about a

The Iowa Avenue bridge is one of the main pedestrian thoroughfares adjoining the east and west sides of the UI campus.

But McDonald said the city council, which has only considered the issue briefly, had reservations about building a pedestrian walkway at the

McDonald said UI and city officials had discussed splitting the cost of the pedestrian bridge project. But Dorsey Ellis, UI vice president for finance, said, "Because the city is closing the Iowa Avenue bridge, the city has an obligation to supply (pedestrian) access.'

Although some city officials feel the UI, and UI students, would be the chief benefactors of a footbridge, Ellis said, "These people (students) are citizens of Iowa City as well as affiliated with Ellis said he understood the city "has its financial problems too. But I'd be happy to sit down and discuss it with any councilor who has reservations." Ellis added, however, "I think the UI

Councilor Larry Baker said the city should provide money for the walkway, but added, "I think the university should pick up more than 50 percent of the cost ... the city is already putting in $500,000 for bridge repair.'

Iowa City is receiving $650,000, which covers 55 percent of the bridge project, from the Iowa Department of Transportation under the Federal Aid Bridge Replacement Act. The city council formally approved the contract for the project's funding Tuesday.

When told of the UI-backed plan for a 50-50 split of the footbridge cost, Baker said, "Does (the UI) want to split the cost of repairing the bridge with us, too?" Baker added, "I'll go 50-50 on the footbridge if the university will go 50-50 on bridge reconstruction."

Councilor Kate Dickson said: "It's

Freedman: Cuts scrape bare bone

By Robyn Griggs

UI graduate students and administrators say the Iowa Legislature should know Gov. Terry Branstad's recommended 2.8 percent budget cuts are scraping the "bare bones" of the

UI graduate students and some faculty members realized last week these cutbacks could lead to the layoff of many teaching assistants, presenting complications for some already bulging undergraduate

UI President James O. Freedman said the UI administration is working to increase statewide awareness about the seriousness of the situation.

"One of the things I plan to do is to make sure parent organizations and alumni organizations of the university are made aware of how serious the situation is," he said. "I don't think the legislators, who are very busy people, problem is if students and parents don't talk to them." HE COMMENDED a proposal to be Senate meeting Wednesday night to organize a petition to be sent to the legislature.

Tom Johnson, a T.A. in the UI School of Religion and graduate student senator, said his department requested he slate discussion of the situation at the meeting when it became evident the layoff of many UI T.A.s could result from the cutbacks. The School of Religion is also working on a petition to Howard Laster, dean of the UI College of Liberal Arts, to request a meeting of all faculty members within the college to discuss "The School of Religion faculty thought it was a very serious problem and thought all faculty should meet to discuss it," Johnson said.

Laster has scheduled a meeting for all department heads within the College of Liberal Arts for Friday.

"AT THAT TIME, I don't know if there will be any new news," he said.

"To me, the most important reason for the meeting is to ensure that everyone concerned has as much information as possible. We don't want them to think we're doing anything behind their Laster said he is now working with the department heads on a "department-to-department basis," adding, "Have you ever seen 50 adults

Freedman said he expects some departments and colleges within the UI to be hit harder than others by the cuts.

Each of the colleges has been asked to prepare for a 5 percent cut, according to Freedman, while the administration will plan to cut back by 6 percent within its offices.

"I'm obviously very hopeful that the last place we will have to cut will be the faculties. ... However, we have been faced with cutbacks for the last four years and what's been cut again and again and again is the noninstructional side. We've reached bare

Minorities pressure department

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The Justice Department, under the direction of Attorney General William French Smith, tried to imprint some of President Reagan's conservative ideas on abortion, school prayer and civil rights on the legal system - not often with success.

In the past three years, the department's civil rights division particularly has come under fire from minorities and women's groups for reversing the government's position on

It flip-flopped the govern-ment's long-held position on denving tax breaks to racially discriminatory schools. However, they lost the fight before the Supreme Court, which held the schools should be fenied tax deductions.

Just this month, the Supreme Court dealt the government's lawyers another blow by refusing to hear their arguments against a racial quota system in the Detroit Police Department.

IN OTHER CASES, women's groups have severely criticized the Justice Department for trying to narrow the reach of a key sex discrimination law that denies federally funded colleges from discrinimation against women. That case is still pending before the nation's highest court.

The chief target of most civil rights criticisms is William Bradford Reynolds, the assistant attorney general for civil rights who serves under Smith. He has been criticized not only for his controversial position but also for allegedly lax enforcement of civil rights laws.

The government last year, in carrying out Reagan's staunch opposition to abortion, tried, but failed, to convince the Supreme Court to uphold state and local restricitons on abortions.

KAMPALA, Uganda - Suspected antigovernment guerrillas went on a shooting spree on the outskirts of Kampala Sunday, killing four Europeans and critically wounding another, western diplomatic sources said.

The violence was the worst directed at Uganda's thousands of aid workers and foreign employees since the fall of dictator Idi Amin. Sources said they believed the attack was an attempt to wreck an international conference scheduled this week in Paris to develop a recovery program for Uganda.

Expert: Eaton could have caused tension

By Patricia Reuter

Linda Eaton's personality and behavior may have caused the hostile feelings some of her coworkers felt for her while she worked at the Iowa City Fire Department, according to a civil rights specialist and former city human relations staffer.

"There were tensions in the fire department, but I cannot attribute these tensions to whether there was a woman firefighter or because Linda (Eaton) was there," Sophie Zukrowsi testified under questioning from Eaton's attorney Clara Oleson.

Zukrowski was employed by Iowa City as a civil rights specialist while Eaton worked at the fire department from 1977 to 1980. She is now employed as an affirmative action administrator with Rockwell International.

Under cross-examination by defense attorney John Hayek, Zukrowski said she dealt with Eaton at the beginning of the former firefighter's pregnancy in early 1978, when they met to discuss Eaton's employee benefits.

ZUKROWSKI SAID she could not recall if Eaton mentioned being harassed or discriminated against by male firefighters at that time. She also said she could not remember Eaton ever talking to her in person about any incidents of harassment during Eaton's tenure at the fire department.

Eaton is suing the city and three of its officials - City Manager Neal Berlin, Assistant City Manager Dale Helling and Fire Chief Robert Keating - for $940,000 on charges of sex harassment and discrimination.

Earlier testimony by members of the fire department indicated there were mixed feelings about employing women as firefighters. Several of Eaton's coworkers said they believed a woman lacked the upper body strength to do the job, while others felt that although a woman may initially perform satisfactorily on the job, her performance would "deteriorate" when she bore children and aged.

OTHER FIREFIGHTERS testified they had no qualms about women being able to perform the job of a firefighter, but they resented the special treatment Eaton received after she won the 1979 civil rights decision to breastfeed the station. That decision was seen by some of Eaton's coworkers as a special "privilege." because male firefighters were not allowed to have regular visits by family members while on duty. Other criticism of Eaton concerned alleged "preferential treatment" she received in taking the civil service test required to be a firefighter and the fact that she was given alternative employment by the city during her pregnancy although she was still a probationary firefighter. Eaton was subsequently reinstated at the department without retaking the civil service test, although male firefighters who took similar leaves-of-absence were required to do so at the time.

HAYEK ASKED Zukrowski if the problems at the fire department stemmed from having a woman on the force or the fact that that woman was Eaton.

"Some of the firefighters would never have received a female firefighter in the group," Zukrowski testified. "That, to me, is different from their possible feelings that the person there was Linda Eaton. If it had been a different person, tension would be there still."

According to earlier testimony, that tension resulted in Eaton allegedly being "isolated" by her fellow firefighters who refused to speak or associate with her during their free time on the 24-hour shifts.

One of the possible solutions Oleson gave to the problems Eaton claims to have experienced at the fire department was "sensitivity" or "human relations" training for members of the fire department.

Hayek asked Zukrowski if, in her professional opinion, this type of training would have helped the firefighters accept Eaton.

In a carefully-worded answer, Zukrowski said; "Looking from this time back, I would seriously evaluate other factors that would impinge on someone doing this (training) successfully. I don't know if it would work, given the circumstances. "There were tensions in the department. It was difficult to isolate the reason for the tensions," Zukrowski continued. "I don't know if this type of training would be (effective) in changing the attitudes that are the goals of sensitivity training."

Former policeman pleads guilty to stealing necklace

Ronald L. Evans pleaded guilty to charges of second-degree theft in Johnson County District Court Friday.

The former Iowa City police sergeant was charged Nov. 2 with the theft of a 14-karat gold necklace from Hands Jewelers, 109 E. Washington St., last August.

Evans came under suspicion for the theft when a Hands' employee spotted Evans' wife, Karen, wearing the missing one-of-a-kind

Evans was working as a patrol officer on the evening of Aug. 13 when he responded to an alarm at Hands, where the necklace, along with 14 other pieces of jewelry, was found missing. Trade center proposal concerns local legislators

Local members of the Iowa Legislature cast a dim view of the feasibility of establishing a world trade center in Des Moines during a forum Saturday.

The trade center has been proposed by Des Moines businessman John Ruan at a total cost of $47 million. The state is slated to pay $30 million of the cost, according to the proposal

Several people expressed concern over where the $30 million would come from during the forum and the four legislators felt the cost was not reasonable at this time.

Jean Lloyd-Jones, D-Iowa City, said: 'The world trade center is the only new thing that came out this year. Ruan's sales pitch sounds like a giant showcase for everything in Iowa. can justify that kind of expense even if it will fulfill some of the best promises, like revitalizing the economy," she

"I'M VERY SUPPORTIVE of a jobs interim committee and a world trade program," said Richard Varn, D-Solon. "Programs like that are important now. We don't export enough from Iowa, although it (Iowa's export rate) is high. What I'm saving is we should have a world trade program, whether or not we have a building."

"I haven't got the same story from any of the sponsors," she said. "If all businesses were run as haphazardly as this project, I'm not surprised that there is bankruptcy all over the place. "Also, Ruan expects to get money from lots of companies in Iowa that he hasn't even contacted yet. We are victims of the economic world right now, and we have no idea if the world trade center will make a difference. All we know is that this year it will raise taxes. We (legislators) will not do it (pay $30 million) until we have a feasibility study."

Several people who attended wondered how the $30 million cost would affect local programs also seeking

"WE JUST DON'T have enough money to do it all, road use ... world trade," Doderer said. "We don't know what they'll cut out. Is there anyone funded by the state who is adequately funded?'

Varn said road use tax funds totaled $50 million this year, due to increased car sales, a sales tax increase and more federal money

'But we could still use every bit of that $50 million, and more, to use on roads and not take any of that out for the world trade center," he said.

Five million dollars earmarked for construction of a state historical building could be reallocated for the world trade center if the legislature decides to fund it, the legislators said.

"This is just a slap in the face for those who have been working hard towards it (the state historical building)," said Joni Ellsworth, one of the people who attended the forum.

Iowa City police were kept busy in 1983 answering more than 34,000 requests for service and issuing more than 36,000 arrest warrants, tickets and cita-

According to police crime statistics released last week, requests for service increased in 1983 by approximately 2,100 calls over 1982, and by nearly 9,100 since 1978. Arrests, tickets and citations, on the other hand, fell by more than 4,600 in 1983, compared to a year ago.

The Iowa City Detective Bureau's investigations dropped from 1,036 in 1982 to 970 last year, and "clearance rates" - crimes solved or discovered to be unfounded — remained nearly constant at 595 in 1982 and 541 in 1983.

COMPLAINTS WERE down in most categories of major crimes in December over November 1983. Assault, burglary, larceny and motor vehicle theft all decreased, while motor vehicle accidents increased to 339 in December from 211 a month earlier. Calls for assistance and service increased by more than 100, from 513 to 625.

One of the most dramatic decreases came in the number of vandalism complaints recorded for the two-month period. In November 1983, 160 reports of vandalism were received, compared to only 61 in

King's dream celebrated by group

By Jeff Eichenbaum

Local residents filled the Iowa City Unitarian Universalist Church Friday night to pay tribute to Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., to show that although King's dream might have been deferred, the hope for equality

"Dr. King envisioned a time when equality would be the rule, but his dream has been deferred. We must not let it - we must all work toward unity," said UI law student Cynthia Johnson

King's famous August 1963 "I have a dream" speech was delivered by Lawrence Williams, member of the Fellowship Baptist Church in Cedar Rapids, in an impassioned style similar to King's. The speech is said to have sparked the civil rights movement in America. Singing, poetry reading and other speeches

"I HAVE A DREAM that someday a man will not be judged by the color of his skin, but by the content of his character," Williams read.

Keynote speaker, UI law professor

Joseph Knight, said of the evening, "When you gather in the name of Martin Luther King Jr., you gather in the name of peace and brotherhood — this gathering reflects Knight said King's qualities of personal fortitude, community spirt and nonviolence helped him throughout his life. "If we refuse to be overcome by the bounds of violence and hatred, we can overcome.

'King made the first step toward civil rights and equality. We are left to carry out

"But the task is still undone. Racism, sexism, hatred and war still exists in the world," Knight said.

Gus Smith, a UI law student and coordinator of the event, asked the crowd to "think back to that blissful day, Aug. 9, 1963, Martin Luther King Jr. spoke at the Lincoln Memorial in Washington, D.C." delivering the "I have a dream" speech. He added, "This occasion signifies a hope that all people in America can come together in peace ... "

ALTHOUGH KING'S birthday was on Jan. 15, the tribute was delayed to "accommodate the return of the students," Smith said. "We would have loved to have had it on Sunday (King's birthday).'

Donna Brumley, a secretary with the UI Special Support Services, said she came to pay tribute to a great man. If it weren't for the work that Dr. King had done, our office wouldn't exist." The support services "help educationally and economically disadvantaged students," she said.

UI law student Karen Haskins said she attended the event because she thinks "the Iowa City community needs to recognize prestigious and courageous black leaders. Many do not get recognized."

She said the event was "extra special" because "we just got his birthday recognized." Congress recently approved King's birthday as a national holiday, to be celebrated on the third Monday of January.

Haskins expressed concern about the lack of more activities like this commemoration of King's birthday. "Iowa City does have a fairly large black community and so few events for them.'

Knight mentioned that while blacks have made great strides in attaining civil rights, even King, he said, "towards the end of his life, realized equal rights must be a part of economic rights."

'What we believe on the commission is that quotas impermissibly infringe upon the 14th Amendment equal-protection rights of all Americans," he said.

"The Civil Rights Law of 1964 and the Constitution protect everyone," he said. "What we're saying is that we're against discrimination against anybody at any time for any reason. If they are white males, they also belong to that category.

He said massive recruiting and training programs to increase the pool of qualified applicants are the answer to providing equality of opportunity.

But Berry said even the Supreme Court has upheld quotas as a means of correcting inequities resulting from a pattern of discrimination. She decried conservative claims that affirmative action hiring programs cause divisiveness. This country has been divided over the issue of race for over 370 years, from the history of slavery, Jim Crow segregation, ascribing people to positions because they are women, for example," she said.

Shultz: American strength is key in arms negotiations with Soviets

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Secretary of State George Shultz said Sunday there are "some positive things" in U.S.-Soviet relations - such as a renewal of talks on European troop cuts — but American strength is the key to arms

In reviewing the status of arms control negotiations between Moscow and Washington, Shultz laid particular emphasis on lines of communication that are still open and repeated President Reagan's view that new U.S. military might makes the nation better prepared to press the Soviets for meaningful agreements.

"You can't put your ultimate dependence on arms control," Shultz said. "You have to put your ultimate dependence on your ability to take care of

Speaking of his meeting with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko last week in Sweden, Shultz revealed that March 16 has been set for resumption of the talks on reducing NATO and Warsaw Pact forces in Europe.

The Mutual and Balanced Force Reduction negotiations have gone on for more than a decade in Vienna without substantial progress, but Shultz, appearing on ABC's "This Week with David Brinkley," cited their resumption as a positive sign. 'Mr. Gromyko, when I met with him in Stockholm, suggested that we resume the discussion of the MBFR ... March 16. ... We've let them know that we think that date for resumption is agreeable," Shultz said.

THE SECRETARY also noted, "We have pretty good discussions going on arms agreement." He also pointed to chemical weapons talks and the Stockholm meeting itself as being Shultz acknowledged, however, "In the field of nuclear arms, they have declined to set a date for the resumption of the strategic arms talks and have said they have left the intermediate range talks.

"There are some positive things. There are some negative things. It's kind of a mixed picture.'

Asked how he would address fears over the strain in U.S.-Sovet relations, particularly in the election year, Shultz replied he would echo Reagan's comments last week.

"Because we are strong, we are safe. And because we are strong, we are better able to try to work out reasonable agreements with the other side. And because we are strong, we are able to be reasonable." Shultz said.

"And all these things add up to a situation from which I think the American people should take some heart," he said.

Shultz also said he believes the chance of nuclear war has lessened, explaining, "Deterrent strength diminishes the temptation of somebody to use their strength against it."

J.S.-Israeli alliance to be discussed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — U.S. and Israeli officials plan meetings in Washington this week about the implementation of a new U.S.-Israeli military alliance that has been a source of friction between the United States and Arab nations.

The so-called strategic concensus, established last November, was originally announced as marking a much closer partnership for the United States and

Secretary of State George Shultz, however, publicly played down the new alliance after angry protests from moderate Arab countries such as Tunisia and Morocco.

In addition, Saudi Arabia announced last week it will buy a French air defense system to protect its oil fields. Saudi officials were quoted in French reports as saying the U.S.-Israeli alliance was a factor in their decision to buy a French instead of an American defense system.

Shultz has said the strategic consensus with Israel, which includes giving Israel some $2.6 billion in U.S. military aid, follows the recommendations of a presidential commission on U.S. assistance. The right fit?

The UI is strutting about in a new suit of clothes.

The costume - called CADSI - was first donned by the UI last August and marks the institution's entrance into the fashionable world of private industry. And Computer Aided Design Software Inc. is so pretentious it promises to net a $10 million profit by the end of the decade.

UI officials delight in the expectation of starting a whole wardrobe of such ventures into the world of private corporations. In these days of sagging state appropriations, the UI figures that by modeling CADSI a whole new line of revenue may open up.

CADSI's chief tailor, UI Engineering Professor Edward Haug, also stands to make money from the project. His research contribution comes decked out in khaki — the U.S. Army chipped in at least $1.2 million to help Haug design the software package. As a final tailoring of the seams before modeling for the state Board of Regents, UI Vice President for Finance Dorsey Ellis reported Thursday that the UI is establishing an advisory panel to monitor possible conflicts of interest between the UI Center for Computer Aided Design, also headed by Haug, and CADSI.

This is so the regents will ooh and ahh, but ask no questions about the UI's new set of clothes.

But as the CADSI concept parades around campus, student leaders unabashedly point out the UI is, for the most part, naked. CADSI is full of holes. Even Ellis admits, "We are very conscious there are a number of potential problems here." The distinction between UI research and private corporate dealings must be doggedly guarded.

The regents had better initiate more inquiries into this venture before CADSI draws sufficient investors and the deal is sewn up. Will the UI's profit projections pan out? And if they do, what will the regents do about the ethics of research for military purposes and potential conflicts of interest?

Mary Tabor

Eye to the future

With the 1984 Iowa caucuses looming large, presidential candidates are roaming the state's rural cafes and labor ings, each stating his case for a better America, each in search of the nation's consciousness in hopes of receiving Iowans' favor on that all-important caucus night.

This now routine route to party nomination entails the nominee's waiting until the national party convention, when he, in consultation with a group of party elite, selects the party's vice presidential candidate on the basis of such characteristics as ticket balancing and intraparty compromise. The tradition calls for vice presidential hopefuls to hang back, just letting presidential contenders know they're available.

Defying this tradition is futurist Barbara Marx Hubbard, a former moderate Republican who in June 1983 actively began seeking the Democratic nomination for vice president. This week she brings her campaign to Iowa City.

In a talk scheduled for 7:30 tonight at 10 S. Gilbert, sponsored by UI Students of the New Age, Hubbard will outline her Campaign for a Positive Future. On Wednesday she will speak at the College of Education on the topic of Education for a Positive Future.

The theme of Hubbard's campaign is that the time to organize for the future is now. In a world where social, technological and environmental changes occur daily, it is Hubbard's belief that the office of the vice president should be expanded to include a continuing focus on long-range goals and positive options. Her vision is to create an Office of the Future "to identify, bring together and communicate the leading-edge creativity and innovation in each field in the United States and throughout the

Through a fledgling network of 40 Positive Future Centers throughout the country, Hubbard is spreading the notion that by pulling people together who share a vision and want something more, new alternatives can be reached, and we can concentrate on what works at the local level and spread that information through networks to the state and national levels.

Hubbard's plan for the vice presidency calls for someone who is receptive to creative minds and who could transform the office into a place where non-government environmentalists, scientists, educators and spiritual leaders could pool their ideas.

Some Americans, no doubt, would label Hubbard's plan an example of naive idealism. But with daily reminders that our government and economy are in the thick of world militarization, it is a breath of fresh air to hear a candidate who dares to point out that a country's defense system breaks down when its weapons reach a point of destructiveness where using them for "defense" will destroy the world.

While Hubbard insists that her policies are non-partisan, she has chosen to work with the Democratic Party "because it's the most open to new ideas." Whether or not she manages to convince the Democratic party that it is time to abandon reactive politics and begin concentrating on developing our national potential, her maxim to "think globally and act locally" is good advice.

American citizens are well ahead of their government in understanding the need to plan for future generations. As our problems at home take on new meaning for the world's welfare, it is only common sense that someone in our government ought to be planning how most constructively to use our innovations. At the least, it is time for our parties to define the necessary qualifications for vice president, to openly seek appropriate candidates and then to train the selected candidate for a more involved role in our

Jailers, jailed prompt reflections

By Kirk Brown

NCARCERATION is a uniquely human pratice. Nowhere else in the animal kingdom is there another species that forces certain of its members into unwilling confinement as a method of ounishment. But in fairness it should be considered that humans have the ability to commit acts that fall disgustingly below the level of which any other species is capable.

On a cold April evening last year, James Alloway, Charles Pote and his girlfriend Connie Jean stopped at a bar in Cody, Wyo.

Pote and Alloway had good reason for being in high spirits, as they had just been released from an Oregon penitentiary. The threesome drank heavily for several hours. Eventually Pote and Alloway became involved in a heated argument with one of the bar's patrons. Angry, they decided to leave but not before having the last word. Outside the bar's front door Alloway pulled out a pistol and fired several shots back inside

Steve Jensen, who had moved to Cody only the week before, was inside the bar when the shots were fired. He was carefully lining up a shot on the bar's worn pool table when one of the bullets from Alloway's gun ripped through his abdomen.

Jensen was rushed to a local hospital where a team of doctors and nurses worked several hours to save his life. My mother was one of those nurses. Later she told me, "He never really had a chance." So it goes.

Journal-ease

Journal-ease is an occasional feature presenting commentary on a broad range of issues by local writers.

POTE AND Alloway were captured the next day and were held in the Park County jail to await trial on a variety of criminal charges. In January Alloway was sentenced to 20 years in prison, and Pote, who was found by the court to be a "habitual criminal," was sentenced to life in prison without

Kurt Wagner is the superintendant of the Park County jail. When speaking about Alloway and Pote a noticeable iciness comes into his voice. "They were hardened criminals and they deserved to go to jail," Wagner said

But, according to Wagner, the majority of inmates in the Park County jail are not cold-blooded killers. He said most of the prisoners in the jail are awaiting trial on charges of robbery or larceny, which usually means writing bad checks.

"The average time a prisoner spends here is 15 days," Wagner said. But he added that a prisoner can be sentenced to serve up to a year in the county jail. Adding on pre-trial delays, Wagner said some inmates spend as much as 18 months there.

The Park County Law Enforcement Center, which houses the county jail, is presently in the midst of a $1.2 million expansion. During the Christmas break I spent several days working

There was only one afternoon that I worked in the area where the inmates are held. They are kept into two separate wings of cells. (While I was there there were about six prisoners in each wing, but Wagner said during the summer, when nearly two million tourists deluge the city, the number usually climbs to about 24.)

THE INMATES awaiting trial are kept in one wing. They tend to be the most boisterous to the construction workers - they haven't been tried yet, so they can afford to be confident of their innocence and impending release, because, as they all tell you in no uncertain terms, they are irrefutably innocent. In the other wing of cells are the prisoners who have already been found guilty and are serving sentences. They are, as a rule, quieter and less active. I ound working in this wing more frightening - the prisoners don't constantly harass and bother you; instead, they simply watch every move you make with cold silence. "Those are the ones we have to watch," one of the other jailers told me.

Working in close proximity to the in-mates was disturbing, but the oppresive nature of the jail facility was even more depressing. Everywhere I looked there were steel bars and cement walls. Each day, when work was finished, I would walk outside fully expecting it to be cloudy and raining.

Thinking back to Pote and Alloway's eight-month stay at the jail, during which they attempted at least one carefully planned escape that was foiled by alert guards, I asked Wagner if he ever feared for his safety.

"Well, I wouldn't really say I am ever frightened," he responded. "You just have to be very cautious - that is the most important word there is for every jailer. Because the prisoners don't have anything to do all day long but think of ways to escape or to get at

KEEPING IN mind the barred doors, brick walls and the attitudes of the people it is his job to keep imprisoned, I couldn't see anything good about the job. But Wagner, who has been a jailer for seven years, seemed well-adjusted and content with his pos-I asked him what he enjoys about his occupation. He paused for a moment and answered, "I enjoy having the opportunity to help some of the peo that come in here, especially the juvenile offenders that come in for the first time. Some of these kids have problems and all they need is to talk to

'We've helped several kids just by being willing to listen. I mean, these kids have come back years later and thanked us for helping them go straight. That is what makes it worthwhile.'

Following my conversation with Wagner, I began to wonder about the purpose of incarceration. Is it meant to bunish people like Alloway and Pote for acts committed against society, or is it meant to rehabilitate those same people with the goal of returning them to the society they have wronged?

After spending time in the Park County jail, I find it hard to tell.

Stanford MBA's alive, doing well

LOT OF people these days are down on MBA's, the holders of Master of Business Administration degrees. Ten years ago they were being hailed as the messiahs of the business world. Today they are being blamed for everything that went wrong in American economic life. It's not fair. They hardly got a chance at running the show when the stage collapsed underneath them.

In December, Fortune magazine detailed how some big American com-- General Electric, General Foods, Xerox, Seagram's, Kraft have cut back drastically on their hiring of MBA's. That's tough news for all those people who headed for the MBA as a sure ticket to fortune and fame.

Even the graduate business school at Stanford, which has been ranked No. 1 in the field, is beginning to feel the pinch a little. Last year the school received only 4,686 applications for admission. That's not exactly a paltry number, but it was down 6 percent from 1982.

And how many of those applicants were accepted? A grand total of 317. Milton Moskowitz

Nearly 25 percent were women, the same proportion as the previous year. A little more than 15 percent were members of minorities, up more than 50 percent from the 9.7 percent of the 1982-83 class. So, just when blacks and women are moving into the mainstream of graduate business schools, the gates are closing. Companies are getting rid of MBA's. Sorry

WHERE ARE the MBA's who are out there in the business world? You can glean the whereabouts and activities of some of these superstars by checking the chit-chat columns that run in every issue of the Stanford GSB, quarterly magazine for business school alumni. Here are recent en-

This story is a little complicated, as we actually got married three times: in France in December 1980 (the easiest way to comply with French laws); at church in Perth, Western Australia, where Bernadette's family lives; and in Paris, where we gave a big party for our friends. I quit the Morgan Bank last year to work for myself. I've been doing a big financial job for a subsidiary of the Harris Group.'

Even in the current anti-MBA climate, there is still a strong demand for these Stanford business school graduates. Last year's MBA graduates were able to sign on at salaries of $35,000 and up. These companies were among the top recruiters at Stanford: Apple Computer, ROLM, Bain Co. General Foods, General Mills, Hewlett-Packard. Also among the top were investment bankers, manage ment consultants and Silicon Valley high-tech outfits.

Skeptical of Syria

Syrian President Hafez Assad pulled off a brilliant diplomatic move by releasing American pilot Lt. Robert Goodman. Not only did he "stick a finger in the eye of President Reagan," as George Will put it, but he may be considered a "humanitarian." Everyone should be happy about the return of Goodman, but let's not be fooled by the shrewd Assad, whose vicious dictatorial rule should not be shadowed by the Goodman incident. In February 1982, Syrian troops slaughtered an estimated 10,000 to 25,000 of its civilians in Hamme, a massacre recently documented by Amnesty International. At present, Jews in Syria are the only group forbidden to emigrate, and they face various forms of persecution. The most recent anti-semitic act occurred in Aleppo last December, when Syrian special forces were suspected of raping and mutilating a pregnant Jewish woman, killing her, her unborn child and two of her children. There is also little doubt among American and Israeli analysts that Syria was behind

Honduran government approves relocation of 20,000 refugees

The Honduran government has authorized the relocation of nearly 20,000 refugees from two U.N.-run camps near the Salvadoran border, a spokesman for the United Nations High Commission for Refugees said Sunday.

The spokesman said the refugee commission requested the relocation as part of its long-standing policy to move refugees away from dangerous border areas and denied charges it was intended for military purposes.

Three relief workers from the Colomanocagua and Mesa Grande camps across the border from rebelheld areas charged in an interview Sunday the refugee relocation had been requested by the United States to make way for military maneuvers.

There are about 8,500 refugees in the Colomanocagua camp and another 10,000 in the Mesa Grande camp. Both are about 5 miles from the Salvadoran border and about 60 miles west of

The Defense Department had no immediate comment on whether military maneuvers were being planned in the

The Honduran government is currently negotiating with the United States over plans for Big Pine III military exercises expected to begin in June which may include troops from El Salvador and Guatemala.

HONDURAN MILITARY officials have said Big Pine III will be conducted on the "Pacific side" of the country an area that could include Honduras' southwestern border with El Salvador as well as the Gulf of Fonseca which separates Nicaragua and El Salvador.

The United States and Honduras are currently completing Big Pine II, the largest American maneuvers ever in Central America, which included over 6,000 U.S. troops at their peak.

The refugee commission spokesman in Geneva, Leon Davico, said a transfer of refugees will not be for any military purposes, although there could be a political follow-up.

"The policy of the UNHCR has always been to move refugees away from dangerous border areas," Davico said.

"In the case of Honduras the latest call to their government to do this was made one year ago. The government said it mainly depended on the availability of land."

"TWO WEEKS AGO, we heard that the government decided to authorize the move after finding an appropriate area for the refugees. Negotiations will now begin between the Honduran authorities, the HCR and other voluntary agencies over the transfer of the

Walesa's presence sparks spontaneous demonstration

GDANSK, POLAND (UPI) - Truncheon-wielding riot police chased Solidarity supporters through the streets of Gdansk Sunday during a demonstration by 3,000 people that erupted after former union leader

Lech Walesa appeared at a special mass.

The mass at St. Mary's Cathedral was celebrated by Cardinal Jozef Glemp, the Polish primate, who earlier met with Walesa and hailed the bravery of the people of Gdansk where the now-banned union was established in 1980.

Chanting "Down with food price hikes" and "There is no freedom without Solidarity," a crowd of 3,000 surged from the cathedral through the streets of the Baltic seaport toward the Lenin Shipyard, home of Solidarity.

The riot police, brandishing truncheons, turned back the crowd as it neared the shipyard and chased scores more who tried to break through to a monument to workers killed in 1970 riots.

It was not known if any protesters were arrested in the spontaneous demonstration.

A CROWD OF 12,000 mobbed Walesa, winner of the 1983 Nobel Peace Prize, when he appeared outside the church after the mass. They broke out into Solidarity songs and anti-government chants.

Before the mass, the Nobel laureate met with Glemp for 30 minutes to discuss the cardinal's talks with Pope John Paul II at the Vatican last week. "We talked about what every Pole is talking about in his home," Walesa said in an interview after the

The most pressing issue facing Poles is the govern ment decision to raise food prices Jan. 30. Other topics likely to have been discussed include the status of political prisoners, harassment of Walesa's associates and the church's move to establish formal diplomatic relation with the Polish regime.

After the meeting, Glemp celebrated mass before a cathedral packed with 7,000 people. Another 5,000 stood outside in a furious snow-storm to hear the cardinal's sermon.

Druze leader threatens government

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) - Druze Moslem leader Walid Jumblatt demanded Sunday that President Amin Gemayel resign or face a civil war that could mean 'the complete destruction of Lebanon."

It was Jumblatt's harshest threat yet against the Christian-dominated government, already beset by fierce daily battles with Syrian-backed Moslem militiamen that last week killed 40 people and wounded more than 100.

The army exchanged rocket and shellfire with Druze militiamen around Qabr Shamoun in the mountains 8 miles southeast of Beirut, and fought Shiite Moslems in the southern suburbs, radio reports said.

The Christian Phalange Voice of Lebanon radio said one army soldier was killed and three civilians were wounded in the clashes

Allen, Raiders rush to Super Bowl title

TAMPA, Fla. (UPI) - It was billed as the greatest duel in Super Bowl history, but thanks to Marcus Allen, the Los Angeles Raiders turned it into the biggest rout in the 18-year history of the game.

Allen slithered five yards for one score, dashed 74 yards for another to set a Super Bowl record and accumulated a game-record 191 yards on 20 carries Sunday to help the Raiders destroy the Washington Redskins 38-9. Washington, the defending NFL champion, entered the game as the

But it was the Raiders, the black sheep in the NFL family, who ran up points in record numbers.

The 38 points were the most ever scored in a Super Bowl and the 29-point margin of victory was the greatest in 18 Super Bowls.

"ON THE FIRST touchdown, we were in a goal-line offense at the fiveyard line. They over-pursued me and I cut back and there was just one guy standing there. I put a move on him and I guess he just missed me."

Allen applied the death blow as time ran out in the third. He began sweeping left only to be greeted by several Redskins. He reversed his direction, eluded a tackle by Ken Coffey behind the line of scrimmage and bolted untouched up the middle to complete the 74-yard touchdown run. "On the second one, it was kind of my fault at the start," Allen said. "I should have been inside instead of trying to take it to the outside. They were all waiting for me there so I turned around and tried to make something out of nothing. I saw some daylight and just cruised the rest of the way. I got a great block from Cliff Branch and that made the difference.'

IT WAS THE longest scoring run in a Super Bowl, breaking the record of 58 yards set by Baltimore's Tom Matte in a 16-7 loss to the New York Jets in 1969.

Allen's touchdown came after the Raiders' defense came up with a big play to stifle Washington's final hopes. With his club trailing 28-9, Redskins Stuffs by Greg Stokes and Brad Lohaus slammed the door shut on the Wisconsin basketball team Saturday almost before it opened.

Three jams in the first five minutes, including two by Stokes, set the tone for a "fun" afternoon at Carver-Hawkeye Arena and a 75-62 Hawkeye

"This game was over in the first half for us," Badger Coach Steve Yoder said. "Iowa shot so well (60 percent from the field) and we got down by 10 and when we did come back, we didn't play smart basketball.'

Hawkeye Coach George Raveling seemed just happy with the win. "It's nice to sit here and smile," he said while walking into his postgame media

"I THINK WHAT it signals to all of us is how mental the world of athletics is." Raveling said Sunday. "It was obvious to me that the kids weren't having fun anymore.

Raveling, professing that the atmosphere was the only thing he could think of as being different, decided to take the pressure off his ballclub.

"I was thinking (Friday) night about when we played our best ball this year and the last time we did that was against Memphis State in California," Raveling said. "I tried then to remember what was different about the team and decided it was the atmosphere. It was just much lighter then. I told one of the coaches earlier that its been about three weeks since I saw a guy on our team smile."

RAVELING CANCELED HIS usual pregame talk and as for goals, the chalkboard in the Iowa locker room

5. Play to the best of your ability. It paid off. The Hawkeyes rolled up as much as a 12-point lead in the first half with a Kenny Fullard bucket giving Iowa a 35-25 halftime margin.

"I had to try something," Raveling said. "It was obvious we had to try something ... it well could have been a gamble. I really felt they knew what had to be done in the game so it wasn't a gamble from a performance standpoint. It may have been a bit of a mental gamble.

Iowa's play and the somewhat lackadaisical play of the previous past two weeks left a crowd of 15,450 with something to cheer about. "The big difference is that today we just played on our instincts," Raveling said.

Raveling also juggled his starting line-up again, saying that he planned to do so until he found the right combination. Todd Berkenpas was inserted at point guard and Lohaus was given his second start of the year, replacing Craig Anderson.

The Hawkeye coach said he thinks he has found his starting unit. "There's no doubt that this is our best offensive line-up," Raveling said. "I don't think we lose a lot of defense with Lohaus in and the chemistry between Berkenpas and Carfino seems to be working. I'm not anxious to change this line-up.'

BERKENPAS AND CARFINO combined to run a fast-paced Iowa offense which dictated the tempo of the game, something Raveling said didn't happen in Iowa's loss to Minnesota on Thurs-

"We really made a big mistake against Minnesota by letting them walk the ball up the floor," he said. "We went into this game wanting to push the ball up the floor."

A message was sent out by the Iowa men's swimming team on Saturday. After a one year layoff, the Hawkeyes are back, and they want the ig Ten title that Indiana took away from them last year.

No. 18 Iowa proved to themselves, No. 14 Indiana and the large crowd that filled the Field House pool that they can more than compete with the Hoosiers, as they blasted Indiana 68-45. Not only did the swimmers help lead the packed Field House crowd in cheers, they also issued a "New Zealand hex" on the Hoosiers before the meet began.

When the Hawkeyes finally did hit the water on Saturday, they took advantage of all their mental preparation and energy, as they set three Iowa-Indiana dual meet records and captured eight of the 13 events.

Wigginton won the pole vault com-petition by clearing 17 feet for the first time as he set an Iowa and building record by vaulting 17 feet, one inch. "Geez, the only thing I could think of was that I finally made it," Wigginton said. Wigginton's jump of 17-1 falls just a half inch short of qualifying him for March's NCAA meet. Wigginton failed in each of his three attempts at 17-3.

SMITH, COMPETING IN his first collegiate track meet, blew away the field in the 60 yard dash as he tied a building record with a time of 6.1.

"We'll just see how Robert does week by week," Wheeler said. "In the next two or three days we'll decide what we want to do with him. Smith has a chance to be a very fine quality sprinter and we'll just take our time

McCoy also shined as he won the 60 yard high hurdles and the long jump. In the long jump, McCoy set an Iowa school and building record by jumping 24-feet, 91/4-inches.

Other good performances for Iowa were turned in by Mike Lacy who cleared seven feet in winning the high jump competition and Norm Balke who defeated Iowa record holder Gary Kostrubala in the shot put. 'Kostrubala and Balke had just outstanding performances and I'm pleased that both of them cleared 55 feet this early in the season," Wheeler said. "We're very pleased overall about the whole meet. We're ahead of where we would normally expect to be after only two meets.'

Hawk sprinters qualify to run in national meet

By Melissa Rapoport

After 15 events, eight broken records and two Track Athletic Congress meet qualifiers, it was obvious that the women's track team gave a impressive performance despite the absence of injured runners last Saturday in the Iowa

Junior Elaine Jones and Freshman Davera Taylor qualified for the TAC national meet in the 60-yard dash. Both sprinters broke the qualifying time of 7.01 by running a time of 6.8 in the finals. Although both runners turned in the same times. Jones was declared the winner because she broke the finish

TAYLOR ALSO EXCELLED in the long jump. The Harvey, Ill., freshman not only competed in her first intercollegiate meet, but she also competed in the long jump for the first time in her track career. Taylor broke the Iowa record of 18 feet, six inches, set in 1977 with a jump of 19-11/2, five inches short of the TAC qualifying standard.

Taylor was shocked with her longumping debut and has made a goal of further distances. "I've never long jumped before," Taylor said. "I didn't expect 19 anything, yesterday ... I want to get over 19 feet and I'd like to clear over 20 feet."

The winning outcomes of Taylor's long jump and 60-yard dash proved to be excitng for the freshman, leaving her with a sense of accomplishment. "I was really pleased with my performance, yesterday," Taylor said. "I really felt good. I was really excited."

IOWA COACH Jerry Hassard said the team competed well and was pleased with many of the performances despite having runners on the injured list. "The sprints, especially the 60 yard dash was very good today,' Hassard said. "We already had two people make the TAC national stan-

"I was particularly impressed with the long jump ... I'm very excited about her potential. The shot put was another area that looks promising. Shelley Redies threw 45 feet, nine inches, which is four and a half inches longer than she threw last year. She's really blossoming into a very competitive shot-putter.

"Gail Smith (a shot-putter) throws with 47 feet, three inches consistency, Hassard continued. "In the middle distance areas, credit should be given to Sherri Hull, Penny O'Brien, Anne Dobrowolski and Maribeth See for running as well as they did in so many races. They all ran mentally tough. Anne had a personal record in the mile with a time of 4:55.

"I feel overall, that our team competed well today, and that's satisfying to a coach to see a good effort, Hassard said.

HINGS GOT Kinky in Cedar Rapids Friday night. Ray Davies, the clown prince of rock 'n' roll, brought his band of merry men, the Kinks, to the Five Seasons Center Friday and entertained the moderately full crowd with an evening of hard-rocking high jinks.
About 7,000 people braved the cold to see the show and few left disappointed. Although the Kinks played for only about an hour and a half, it was an intense performance, frequently punctuated with funny moments, as ead singer and guitarist Ray Davies goofed his way into the hearts of the enthusiastic audience.

Unfortunately, the night had less than auspicious beginnings. The Romantics, complete with MTV haircuts and black leather outfits, opened the show promptly at starting time and put on an incredibly bland 50-minute

Night life

Perhaps the least inspired rock group ever to achieve national prominence from Detroit, the Romantics began their career in 1979 with a great dance-rock hit, "What I Like About You." They have since tried only to duplicate its success, which they finally did this winter with "Talking In Your Sleep."

FRIDAY NIGHT, the Romantics played "What I Like," most of its clones and even threw in some pseudorockabilly. The basic formula was to lay down a beat, sing a few verses about a neat girl, then repeat four times some hook line like, "Gosh, I think you're real cool." Overall, it was just a boring display of rock cliche and even their hits could have been performed better by any number of local bar

Kinks came on and simply blew away any bad memories. An early highlight came when Davies joked, "It's great to be here in Grand Rapids." After some boos from the crowd, Davies replied, "Just kidding — it's really great to be here in Cedar Rapids, Idaho. Cedar Rapids, Indiana? What state are we in? Are we in a state of confusion?" He then broke into a hilarious version of "Destroyer," complete with a tonguein-cheek monologue about walking around downtown C.R.

The crowd got restless during the slower songs; they definitely were there to rock. After an indifferent response to the Kinks' latest hit, the mellow "Don't Forget to Dance," Ray Davies brought out an acoustic guitar and began strumming the opening strains of "Lola." The crowd exploded. Hearing the audience reaction, Davies kidded, "You don't want to hear 'Lola' much, do you? We don't have to play 'Lola' if you don't want us to." Then, to everyone's surprise, he didn't, instead singing a country song about "Cedar Rapids, Ioway, U.S.A."

LATER, THE GROUP started to play "Lola" again, but stopped because the crowd wasn't singing along enough. This time, however, after Davies put on a red-and-black striped "Lola jacket," they did indeed play the entire song, bringing the crowd to its feet.

Although Ray Davies was definitely the star of the show, the rest of the Kinks were also in top form. Bassist Jim Rodford especially was bopping around throughout the show. Ray's brother, lead guitarist Dave Davies, was rather subdued at the beginning, but by the time the group ended its first set with "All Day and All of the Night," he, too, had moved to the front of the stage and was rocking out.

The Kinks played two three-song encores of some of their older material, then left the stage. The house lights came on and the crowd began booing, but it turned out to be just another of Kinks lead guitarist Dave Davies gave a healthy performance Friday.

Davies came out and began crooning an a cappella version of "You Really Got Me." He then stopped, the spotlight went on Dave, who began the familiar crush of guitar noise. The the group's jokes. The lights im-mediately went back off, and Ray finished with a rousing version of their first hit single.

> All in all, it was a first-rate night of comedy and an even more magnificent night of rock 'n' roll. Eastern Iowa should get Kinky more often.

'DI' gives Ventadorn awards for classical performances

By John Voland

HERE'S BEEN a whole lot of water under the bridge since last we encountered the shade of Bernart de Ventadorn, "father of secular vocal and instrumental traditions," and The Daily Iowan's performance awards bestowed in his honor (?).

For Ventadorn, a new condo in West Palm Beach, a Datsun 300ZX, and a lifetime supply of NoDoz have appeared since his meteoric re-entry into the public eye. And as for the awards named after him ... well, they've just progressed another year.

In this banner year of 1984 the Ventadorns have a special significance: The desire to keep the vivid flame of classical music alive as a going, public and shared concern. During the preceding year, there were contradictory signs of health and malaise: National Public Radio, disseminator of dozens of recorded orchestral, chamber music and operatic performances to all parts of the country, foundered on the edge of disappearance, only to be bailed out at the last moment. On the other hand, the Metropolitan Opera televised a magnificent spectacle: eight hours' worth of some of the greatest singers of today, celebrating the existence of what is arguably the greatest opera house in the world (sure, seats were upwards of $100, but it's the event

FURTHER, the cross-germination of the "new wave" avant-gardists and the "old wave" traditionalists was, generally, a wonderful thing to behold. New audiences, attracted by Philip Glass, Robert Wilson and David Byrne, went farther afield in the contemporary serious music area — and liked what they heard. In fact, this sector of musical activity had the most attention paid to it that it has enjoyed (or not) in two handfuls of years. And when attention is paid, interested younger people listen more — and, perhaps, they might well be motivated to enrich the field themselves, as practitioners or merely enlightened listeners. It's the participation that makes any activity vital and current, and new music enjoyed new health during the year. Let's

So much for trends. Now, continuing the "spirit of realistic truth-seeking" and the still-vibrant "desire to defrump the monasterial ambience of classical music," I proudly present the second annual Ventadorn Awards.

• The William Harvey Medal for most blood-raising performance of the year: to Dmitry Sitkovetsky, who brought some fantastic Russian string-playing to the Hancher stage and swept the audience off of its feet. Tartini, Kreisler and Wieniawski never had it so good. Four bravos and a

• The Atlas Jr. Citation for Notable Effort goes to another violinist, Elmar Oliveira, whose threequarters magnificent recital was marred by a program about which Apollo himself would have had qualms: Beethoven, Schoenberg, Richard Strauss and Ernst Bloch. Talk about heavy ... Two bravos

• The Ruth Gordon Golden Shopping Bag for most enchantingly eccentric recital of the year must go to clavichordist Joan Benson, whose poetry, gush and costuming did nothing to detract from her wonderful period sense in works of the 15th through the 17th centuries — and everything to enhance it. Three and a half bravos plus a dream date with Larry "Bud" Melman in Atlantic City, N.J.

• The Figaro Award for neat-and-clean-yet-fun performance in a classical medium goes this year to Solisti Aquilani, whose concert with guest bassist Gary Karr had delicacy, humor and musicianship all in high quantities. Three bravos and a can of Foamy.

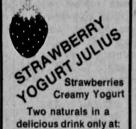

• The Maytag Medal for simultaneously shaking up the musical establishment and cleaning out its overwaxy ears goes to composer/performer Philip Glass, whose Hancher appearance (with his Ensemble) and role in the Brooklyn Academy of Music's The Photographer re-emphasized his primary role in bringing young people back to "serious" music. Time will tell if it lasts, but meanwhile let's enjoy it and Glass anyway. Four bravos and a hall anytime

 The Edward Gibbon Citation for historicallyaccurate and musically-enjoyable performance goes jointly to the UI Opera Workshop - whose intimate Carmen re-established that opera as music drama without all the grand opera baggage — and UI professors Leopold La Fosse and Sven Hansell whose joint Baroque recital sounded and felt uncannily right. Three bravos and a copy of H.G. Wells' The Time Machine. (Interestingly, Peter Brook's much-discussed reworking of Carmen made its New York appearance well after our own Workshop's reinterpretation. Hmm ...)

• The Hans Sachs "Heilige Deutsche Kunst" (Holy German Art) Memorial Beer Stein for absolutely authentic German music-making goes to the Dresden Staatskapelle, whose performances of Richard Strauss and Brahms were terrific and illuminating - national heritage really does count for something, after all. Four bravos and two

• A carry-over from last year: The Rube Goldberg Award for Endless Invention in the Presentation of New Music goes once again to the Center for New Music for its consistent daring and

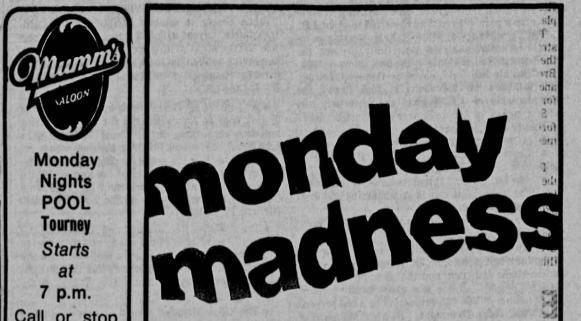

• And finally, the whole UI School of Music, both faculty, for their obvious ability to practice what they teach, and students, who demonstrate time and again that this school is something to be proud of, are hereby commended for their consistently outstanding and heartening work. 'DI' cheers best of '83 TV; Smurfs get the worst of it

NOTHER YEAR has bitten the dust, and now we come to bury TV 1983 not to praise it (well, not praise it too much anyway). The infamous '83 was the year that "MASH" moved out of Korea and a lesbian moved into Pine Valley on "All My Children." Though Shirley did not return to Laverne, Laura did return to Luke on "General Hospital." On "Cheers," Sam and Diane finally bedded; on "One Day at a Time," Ann Ramano finally wedded; and on 'Dynasty," Blake and Krystal finally re-wedded. Ted Turner gained his long-sought monopoly on eable news by buying out the Satellite News Channel. Michael Jackson and Donna Summer notwithstanding, blacks made little headway in integrating MTV, and the Reagan administration all but destroyed any hope of bringing intelligence and responsibility to children's television.

Meanwhile, Nancy Reagan, Tip O'Neill and Gerald Ford, and Henry Kissinger all made their series acting debuts on "Diff'rent Strokes," "Cheers" and "Dynasty." And CBS tore down Archie Bunker's Place, NBC nuked Charleston, S.C., in "Special Bulletin," and ABC polished off Lawrence, Kansas. and the rest of the world in "The Day After." All in all, a busy year - even if no one tried to shoot J.R.

Now, in memory of Philo T. Farnsworth, the inventor of television, we repectfully present the Farnsworth Roll of Honor — the best shows of 1983.

· "Buffalo Bill." As played by Dabney Coleman, Bill Bittinger has the vanity of Jack Benny, the megalomania of J.R. Ewing, the bitterness and liberal outlook of Archie Bunker and the insecurities of Woody Allen. To know him is to love him, or hate him, or tolerate him, or something. · "Cheers." Proof that there is intelligent life on television after "The Mary Tyler Moore Show." . "The Day After." It had its flaws, but after the hype and hysteria, it stands as a haunting and even courageous television event. "Dynasty." High-class trash dressed in high-

. "Late Night with David Letterman." In atonement for a bad monologue, Dave gave out dollar bills to the studio audience; now that is some kooky kind of guy. Besides, anyone who gives steady employment to Larry "Bud" Melman can't be a bad person.

. "NBC News Overnight." Another hallmark of television journalism fades from the screen because the viewers were loyal but few and the profits were even smaller than a network exec's IQ. But take heart: rumor has it that the "Overnight" gang are pushing to have the show reinstated as a weekly show. If not, Linda Ellerbee can always find a home at The Daily Iowan. . "SCTV." Dumped by NBC to make room for some el cheapo rock videos, the show has found new life on Cinemax. After a slump from the defection of some key players, recent shows have found it back in top form and as devilish as ever. • "Special Bulletin." Mean-spirited satire against television newsmongers mixed with an all-toobelievable scenario about the horrors of nuclear terrorism. Scary stuff, boys and girls,

*The Yellow Rose." Good ensemble work from Noah Beery, Edward Albert, Ken Curtis, Chuck Connors and even Cybill Shepherd, plus a nice soft-focus atmosphere make this stand out among the new crop of night time soaps. It's a modern day Western with old-fashioned

70,000 abortion opponents, vowing no to compromise and pledging to defea the Equal Rights Amendment, rallie at the White House Monday, the marched on Capitol Hill and th Supreme Court to mark the 11th an niversary of the court's decision legalizing abortion. Led by a dozen coffins symbolizing the 15 million legal abortions in the na tion since the high court's Jan. 22, 197 decision, the marchers cheered rooting for the re-election of Presiden Reagan, Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., and Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill. They chanted "No ERA, No ERA" as they walked down Constitution Ave.

A large number of the demonstrators were young people bused in from parochial and private schools. Police estimated the crowd a 65,000 to 70,000.
