UI faculty voices opposition to budget

By Robyn Griggs

UI Liberal Arts faculty members know the financial situation at the UI is bleak. They know the consequences of Gov. Terry Branstad's proposed 2.8 percent budget cut could be "irreversible." Now they want to warn the rest of Rising concern over the implications of the cutbacks prompted a meeting of about 200 faculty members from the UI College of Liberal Arts Friday to discuss "the beginning of a process" to voice their opposition.

Faculty members in the UI School of Religion called for the meeting when it became evident the cutbacks could lead to "the erosion of academic quality," including inadequate instructional staffing, overcrowded classes and an insufficient number of course

UI President James O. Freedman told the faculty members, "It is essential that the problems we are facing at this university, in the budgetary sense, be addressed by the faculty. Freedman said, "Iowa students are no longer in the position, in the world we live in today, to expect job competition and opportunities for jobs are going to be in Iowa alone.

"THE QUESTION we face is whether the University of Iowa is going to be able to prepare those students ... in ways that will let them compete effectively across the coun-

However, at least one faculty member, Hugh Kerr, a visiting professor to the UI School of Social Work, does not believe the meeting prompted effective action.

Kerr, who said he has had "considerable experience in dealing with budget cuts" at the Polytechnic in North London, proposed the UI faculty make links with UI trade unions and student associatons, as well as Iowa State University and the University of

Reagan says 'our work is not finished'

WASHINGTON (UPI) - President Reagan, declaring "our work is not finished," Sunday night made his longexpected announcement that he will seek a second term.

In a five-minute speech televised live from the Oval Office, Reagan said: 'We have made a new beginning. Vice President Bush and I would like to have your continued support and coopera-tion in completing what we began three

"I am therefore announcing that I am a candidate and will seek re-election to the office I presently hold." Although Reagan aides said the president told no one of his decision early, the announcement came as no surprise. The campaign organization, which paid $400,000 to have the announcement broadcast on ABC, CBS and NBC, has been in place for months with more than 100 paid staffers.

About 1,000 Reagan supporters began celebrating in a downtown hotel ballroom about three hours before the speech was given and 400 party leaders dropped by the White House for a reception beforehand.

"I SUPPORT him fully," said First Lady Nancy Reagan, who has expressed fears about his safety since an assassination attempt three years ago. "I'm very proud of him and all he has accomplished in a very short space of Sounding the theme that is likely to become the centerpiece of his campaign, Reagan, who celebrates his 73rd birthday next week, outlined improvements since he took the office.

"But our work is not finished. We have more to do in creating jobs, achieving control over government spending, returning more autonomy to the states, keeping peace in a more set-tled world and seeing if we can't find room in our schools for God," Reagan

He also said that, by winning approval for major increases in defense pending, "we have restored credible deterrence and can confidently seek a secure and lasting peace as well as a reduction in arms.

Delay in movies reaching city blamed on film-booking agency

By Richard Panek

The powers that decide when movies play in Iowa City have slightly - but significantly - different answers to the question raised in a recent article in The Daily Iowan: Why do some movies take so long to reach Iowa City?

Arthur Stein, head of Central States Theaters in Des Moines, which runs Iowa City's movie houses, said marketing strategies imposed by Hollywood studios prevent him from booking some films that are playing elsewhere in the country. Such films, he said, especially foreign or U.S. independent features, are never offered to the Iowa market.

"This happens on a number of movies," he said. Movie studio representatives agree, though some say Central States is often solely to blame for a film's relatively late arrival in Iowa City.

"We make our movies available the same day they're in Des Moines, the Quad Cities, Omaha, even Chicago," said one film distributor, who asked not to be identified. "But they don't open because of the setup there (in Iowa City).'

Stein said Central States, which owns all seven commercial theaters in Iowa City, plays the studio's major movies as soon as they are available. Problems arise, he said, when a studio delays the release of a movie in markets the size of Iowa City.

Several studio distributors confirmed this pattern, including Judy Willey of Paramount Pictures' Des

"WE CONSIDER Iowa City a key city," she said. "Usually the lab will make up 20 prints and say cover all your keys."

In other words, she explained, Paramount policy is to open films in Iowa City on the same day they open in other major cities in this area, including Des Moines and Omaha. She cited Terms of Endearment as an exception. That film opened in "eight-week towns" cities with a population that can sustain a movie's run for eight weeks - earlier than in Iowa City, which is a

"four-week town." Paramount branch manager Charles Caligiuri said, "We purposely had a slow release pattern on that movie because we wanted word of mouth." In addition, he said, Terms of Endearment opened in Iowa City even

Democratic organizers gear up for lowa's February caucuses

By Mark Leonard

Although former Vice President Walter Mondale is expected to ride to an easy victory in the Iowa Caucuses Feb. 20, organizations for other Democratic presidential hopefuls are still flocking to Iowa City in the hope of carrying Johnson County, historically a Democratic stronghold.

Victor Lesperance, Johnson County field organizer for Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, came in recently from the east coast to revive Glenn's campaign, which has sputtered in recent weeks. "I've never played for second

Campus accessibility attracts handicapped

By Mary Boone Special to The Daily Iowan

For the disabled person, Iowa City and the UI are more inviting than a lot of other places, according to Paul Egli, a UI junior from Dubuque.

Egli has quadriplegia — paralysis of both arms and legs — and says accessibility and attitudes toward the disabled are "much better" here than in his hometown.

"Maybe it's because people here have more exposure to the disabled. Egli said. "I think part of it probably has to do with the age group here; they just seem a lot more receptive and

BEIRUT, Lebanon - U.S. Middle East envoy Donald Rumsfeld and Saudi mediators worked Sunday to break an impasse on a security plan for Beirut amid renewed skirmishes between Shiite militiamen and government troops, reported by state-run Beirut radio.

The security plan for Beirut and a region south of the capital calls for a disengagement of warring Moslem and Christian militias, and deployment of Lebanese army troops into some power vacuums. It could allow for at least a partial withdrawal of the 1,200 U.S. Marines at Beirut airport.

Council expected to approve additional parking at ramp

By Carlos Trevino

Iowa City Mayor John McDonald said Sunday the city council is expected to approve plans for additional parking levels at the Dubuque Street parking ramp and "give the city direction to resolve our parking problems" during tonight's informal council

"This won't be too controversial; we made a commitment to do this," McDonald said. "Now is the ideal time to do it (add to the ramp) before the (downtown) hotel is finished. I think when the hotel is finished the parking situation will get more critical.'

McDonald said the first phase of a city short-term parking study will also recommend additional parking ramp levels to meet the demand for parking space in the Dubuque Street ramp. The study will also recommend permanent parking stalls for drivers who work in the downtown area.

"Our problem with parking is there isn't enough of it," McDonald said.

"We have a problem right now because we don't have enough long-term parking stalls (in parking ramps) and it's hurf a lot of businesses that have the potential to move to the downtown if they have a place for their employees to park," he said.

CURRENTLY, THE CITY has 185 parking spaces that can be leased on a monthly basis, McDonald said. No stalls are allotted for permit parking in the Capitol Street ramp.

City Manager Neal Berlin said the council would need to approve plans, hire an engineer for construction, determine how many levels would be added and then "what they'd like us (city staff) to do for long term (parking) plans."

Berlin also said that according to the city's 1972 parking study, all off-street parking would be eliminated. No time limit has been set'for attaining

McDonald, however, said those plans "are very

McDonald said the 1972 study "is a nice goal, but we have a number of cars in the downtown area, and because of the university population, it (eliminating off-street parking) would be unrealistic to pursue.

David Perret, who served on the council for eight years until Jan. 1, said the city sanctioned the onoing parking studies to "determine the demand of central business district, where the university and city could better cooperate on where faculty and students could park, and find generators of traffic (like churches and hospitals) and where parking could be provided."

Perret said the success of mass transit - the Iowa City, Coralville and UI bus services - has helped alleviate the downtown traffic problem enough so that the parking situation is not as intense as believed in 1972.

"IN 1972, THE CITY had only owned the bus service for a short time, and statistics weren't available on (mass transit) ridership," Perret said. "The city was thinking of eliminating off-street parking in order to encourage bus service ridership. No one knew the transit service was going to be as successful as it Perret explained that parcels of city property once earmarked for off-street parking were being sold for private use and "if we keep enhancing mass transit, we save money, can sell lots and help keep the en-

When you see it cost $25,000 to $30,000 per parking stall in a ramp, the city is saving money by using mass transit," Perret said, "and land can be better used than for parking lots"

Except for a few minor changes, Iowa City Mayor John McDonald said Sunday he expects the city's proposed $28.4 million budget for fiscal 1985 to meet city council approval.

"It's always possible that a major change might come up," McDonald said, "but I would be very surprised if something did come up. There might be a few minor modifications," he said

City Manager Neal Berlin agreed, saying he does not expect any major new requests from city depart-

The council will review the budget at tonight's informal council meeting and decide whether to informally approve changes requested by city department heads during two full-day meetings Jan. 14 and 27, according to McDonald.

According to the budget proposal, prepared by Berlin and city staff, the highest cost of running the city is its 478 employees, which will cost an estimated $11.3 million.

THE BIGGEST DEPARTMENTAL budget increase is projected in the city's Parks and Recreations Department, which, upon budget approval, will increase by $141,000 from fiscal 1984.

Berlin said money for the increase will come from participants in Iowa City Recreation Center

During a session of the city's capitol improvement program meeting Saturday, the director of the Parks and Recreation Department requested an increase of $55,500 for lighting and a chain-link fence at the Mercer Park baseball diamond at Bradford and Dover streets. The department is expected to receive the increase.

The park improvements were originally slated for fiscal 1985. They were then dropped, until Dennis Showalter, director of Parks and Recreation Department, requested the improvements plan be re-

'Our original plan was to add the lights and the fence for safety reasons by 1985," Showalter said. "The city (planned improvements) for fiscal 1987 and we asked it be placed back under fiscal 1985, and they did approve that," he said.

Another major cost in the proposed city budget is the $500,000 purchase of the federally-owned bus barn, which was replaced late last year by a new bus barn. Berlin said the facility could be used to house city vehicles and equipment.

The council is expected to hold a public hearing on the proposed budget Feb. 14 and make copies of the budget available to the public by Friday.

Course credit sought for students serving on senate

Sawot his

UI Student Senate President Tom Drew received mixed reviews from his fellow senators Thursday night when he announced his intent to investigate the possibility of senators earning two semester hours credit for their student government duties.

Philip Hubbard, vice president for student services, said Friday he believes senators receiving credit for their work will probably not become a

Hubbard cited a UI policy stating that credit can only be given through an academic department. This means an adviser would have to keep tabs on and evaluate the senators' activities.

He said hypothetically that if senators did get credit it would be up to the particular adviser to set guidelines for the senators to follow,

In cases where "someone does something extraordinary and does not get paid for it" then he or she should get academic credit for the work, Hubbard

Drew said Friday he feels senators put in a lot of time and effort in the senate and should be rewarded

TO MEET THE guidelines of the UI's policy on independent study, Drew said each senator would have to keep a journal of his or her work and serve actively on one of the senate's subcommittees.

Drew said he got the idea from a periodical, On Campus Report, and decided to present it to the senate for its reaction. "I think it's a bunch of baloney," responded Sen.

Some senators expressed concern that this idea would draw people to the senate just for the credit

Sen. Joel Mintzer said he thinks people who are really interested in serving on the senate do not need the added incentive of semester hours credit for

Hubbard said he does not think more people would rush to become senators just for the credit, because they would still have to put in time as they would for

The time spent working for the senate might not even be reflected by the semester hours compiled, he said. Senators often spend more time dealing with student government issues than studying for any one

"I THINK IT is a good idea," said Sen. Jeff Winick, adding he thinks the more people that get involved with senate the better. "It can only improve the quality of the senators.'

If senators were to receive college credit, Hubbard said it could easily improve the work done by senators because they would be subject to evaluation and therefore might spend more time "polishing"

Drew said a senator would need to serve an entire year on the governing body to be eligible for the two hours of credit he is proposing.

Although Iowa State University and the University of Northern Iowa do not offer credit to their elected student leaders, both governing bodies have considered the issue of receiving credit for their work. According to Jim Fletcher, vice president for UNI student association, association members have unsuccessfully tried to receive credit for their work through the political science department

Tom Jackson, office manager for the ISU's Governing Student Body, said some senators receive credit for their work through the school's independent study program.

But before senators can receive credit at the UI, Drew said the senate would have to get faculty sponsorship and be approved by the UI Office of Academic Affairs. He said the project is in the

But UI Financial Aid Director John Moore and local high school guidance counselors advise scholarship-seeking students to come to them before investing as much as $45 in such commercial search

The services, which "prey on unsuspecting freshmen," are a phenomenon that "started within the last 10 years as the economy got tighter and as Federally funded student aid peaked in 1981-82 at $18 billion, but dwindled to $16.1 billion by 1982-83, a College Board study found. Meanwhile, tuition at public universities went from an average of $1,026 in 963-64 to $3,403 in 1982-83.

"are not worth the money spent on them."

But these services maintain they can convert financial aid now unused into opportunities for their

Student College Aid, a Houston, Texas, service, keeps a computer file of $500 million in nongovernment scholarships from across the nation, said Ed Rosenwasser, the firm's director.

Moore said the search firms "ask students such specific questions so that the computer can match them to scholarships." Quite often, he said, these awards are connected to "corporations, foundations or service clubs that family members belong to and already know about."

MOST OF THE search services "take catalog: from colleges and compile them" into the computer. The search firms have asked the UI to list their scholarships for a fee, but "we tell them for $3 you can buy our catalog," he said.

Frank Carthey, a counselor at Iowa City High School, said, "The services give them a list of all the things we have right here in the office. "They (the search services) throw in some

Number of bar exams given said to distort failure rate

Of the 77 law school graduates who took the Iowa Bar Exam this January, 31 failed. Eight of those not passing were graduates of the UI College of Law. Some officials say this 40 percent failure rate is overly dramatized because of the low number of people who take the exam in January compared to the number who take the June exam.

"With such a small number of people taking the exam just a few people will make the difference. It looks very dramatic when put into statistics. Three people one way or the other will do it," said William Hines, dean of the UI College of Law.

January and June are the only times the exam is given. The number of exams given in June is consistently higher than those in January. The number of January exams given over the last five years ranges from 72 in 1982 to 108 in 1979. Exam takers in June numbered between a low of 266 in 1982 and a high of 318 in 1979

Hines said 21 UI law school graduates took the re-cent exam, of which eight failed. He said that on the average five to eight UI graduates fail the January

HINES SAID he talked with some of the examiners of this January's bar exam and found they were surprised to have a large portion of the group scoring

"They were as surprised as I was," he said. "The people taking the exam weren't any different than those from any other year, but the results were."

Former Iowa City Mayor Mary Neuhauser, who took the bar exam in 1982, agreed that small numbers can sometimes distort results. "It does look terrifying," Neuhauser said. Richard Moeller, a second-year UI law school student, said he was "shocked, surprised and somewhat alarmed" by the results of the test.

knowledge. If you want to become an expert in one area you're going to know that area well, but the bar covers everything.

Hines expressed similar views: "There will be no changes in the way we (the UI Law College) run our law program. It (the statistics) doesn't tell about their legal education, but about the bar exam."

Hines said he was speaking for his colleagues when he said the UI Law College was reasonably satisfied with its results on the bar exam.

BEFORE TAKING the Iowa Bar Exam graduates take bar review courses conducted by the Iowa State Bar Review School, Inc. The review outlines what will be included in the exam. The review course normally lasts three weeks, however this January it was condensed into two Steve Belay, who took the bar exam last June, said: "You need at least three weeks to prepare for the exam. Because you are taking the exam right after you finish with your last set of finals you need some recovery period. You have to assimilate this information over a long period of time.

"The review courses are really important, especially for Iowa graduates; at Drake there seems to be more of a focus on Iowa law," Belay said. "Really specific Iowa law isn't concentrated on at Iowa.' Hines said, "The review program is completely separate (from the UI College of Law)." But he said he thinks the program was "first rate" and "the most cost-effective in the country. "The only criticism I heard was that it was compacted into two weeks rather than the usual three," he said. "That is a heavy dose, but a minor factor (in

Keith Richardson, clerk of the Supreme Court, said the exams last 2½ days. They begin on Monday at 8 a.m. and end Wednesday at noon.

'Sitters for the exams are notified on Thursday Moeller questioned the need for the bar exam. "I and those who pass are sworn in on Friday."

Lawmakers divided on equal pay

Gov. Terry Branstad included no funding for the problem in his 1985 budget requests, but many lawmakers believe the issue is a time bomb waiting to explode unless they take care of it this year.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan placed the so-called line-item veto high on the wish list he presented to Congress in his State of the Union address, portraying it as a simple way to check runaway government spending.

In fact, the proposal would change the way government works and give the White House virtually absolute control of the

The line-item veto would allow the president to veto specific spending items, or line items, without rejecting the entire appropriations package that contains the obectionable spending item.

practices amount to extortion. But they have been a fact of life. A single appropriations bill might provide funds for a pet program of the president as well as for a program to which the president is opposed. Under the present practice, he must approve the bill in toto, providing money for both programs, or veto the whole package, scrapping both programs unless Congress overrides the veto.

This gives Congress some leverage to win presidential approval of programs the administration does not endorse.

The line-item veto, however, would eliminate that leverage by allowing the president to veto the program he opposes and approve the provision of the package providing funds to his pet program.

However, the chairman of the House Democratic campaign committee said he will seek to give the line-item veto, but only for this election year and only if Reagan agrees to hold the line on defense spending.

LEGAL SCHOLARS HAVE questioned whether Congress could give the president such veto authority. Many believe a constitutional amendment would be required. That would require ratification by threefourths of the states to become law.

Still, Congress could pass a line-item veto and Reagan could approve it and exercise it. Eventually, however, it would be challenged and the Supreme Court called upon to decide its constitutionality. The key constitutional question is whether veto power as deliniated in the constitution precludes vetoing individual portions of a bill. That is subject to interpretation. The provision involved, Article 1, Section 8. states:

Middle East envoy Donald H. Rumsfeld and Richard W. Murphy, assistant secretary of state for Mideast affairs, where he spent the weekend.

Discussion of this proposal was transferred to the UI Faculty Senate, which Kerr said "could be a convenient way of hedging it.' "I think it's essential that we be winning the hearts and minds of the people on campus together," he said.

Kerr also suggested the UI faculty form a mass lobby to the Iowa Legislature, but this proposal was voted down by the faculty members.

"IT SEEMED TO me that if you've got 5,000 to 10,000 people lobbying the legislature, you would give more of an impact than polite letters," Kerr said. "It seems to me that a little political muscle should be used."

Kerr said this strategy was effective in London, where cutting education budget is "very much a live issue as

Freedman opposed this proposal saying it could jeopardize the proposed 6.6 percent salary increase for UI faculty members.

Accordingly, the faculty members dopted a proposal by the UI School of Religion to "generate the data and other specific information that will enable the central administration to interpret precisely and clearly what the consequences to undergraduate and graduate instruction will be if the recommended cuts are enacted." "There is a myth about that for the past number of years the university has been crying, 'Wolf, wolf' when there is no wolf," said George Nickelsburg, UI professor of religion, in presenting the proposal. "All of us know that there are hard facts that belie this myth.

"THERE WOULD BE inevitable consequences of the governor's recommendation that would threaten our viability as an academic and educational institution. We would be forced into courses of action that would constitute academic self-mutilation and educational suicide

The faculty members also unanimously passed a resolution proposed by the UI History Department to "form a committee to prepare, by Feb. 27, a detailed statement for public dissemination of the damage to the educational missions of the College and the University that would be caused by the proposed budget cuts."

Malcolm Rohrbough, chair of the history department, said the proposal was prompted by the realization that the financial situation "has had the effect of reducing us from a national university, unhappily, to something campaign's decision to open an office here, he said. "Where there are young people, Gary Hart is very popular," Miller said. "Hart has appealed very positively to university communities throughout the country. It seemed like a natural area for us to concentrate on," he said.

Miller said Hart's campaign staff in Iowa is also hoping for a third-place

"Nobody is expecting us to win here," he said. "I see Iowa as a stepping-stone to New Hampshire. If we had a third-place finish here it would be phenomenal, but as long as we make some kind of impression, we'll be in good shape.'

Robin Wright, who works in Mon-dale's Iowa City office, said the office is coordinating Mondale's campaign in Johnson, Benton, Tama, Poweshiek and Marshall counties.

"We're just attempting to locate our voters," she said. "Mondale has a broad base of support here." As the Feb. 20 caucus date approaches, the various campaign organizations will be increasing their efforts to champion their candidates. Gary Hart will be in Iowa City Feb. 8 to speak before the Iowa City Foreign Relations Council. John Glenn's son, David, will be coming to Iowa City in early February to speak on academic research and development funding.

Similarly, Warner Bros.' The Right Stuff won't play in Iowa City until Feb. 17, the weekend after the Academy Award nominations are announced, and STAR 80 won't reach Iowa City at least until March

Asked why The Big Chill didn't open in Iowa City the same time it opened in Cedar Rapids, a Columbia Pictures tributor said, "They didn't book it," refused to elaborate.

A DISTRIBUTOR for another major studio said, "There are two reasons why you don't get movies in Iowa City. One is that Central States doesn't have enough theaters there. And the other is that they're cheap. Sometimes there's a slightly lower film rental cost a few weeks into a movie's run, and Central States waits for it," the distributor

Foreign films, or U.S. independent films without major studio backing, face even tougher challenges in cracking the Iowa City market.

Stein said some of these so-called specialized films (industry jargon for movies requiring special handling insofar as how they are sold to audiences) are not offered to Central States until six months after they open in New York - if at all. He cited as examples Fanny and Alexander, Heart and Alexander tomorrow," said the Like a Wheel, Tender Mercies and Betrayal. He hadn't heard of Betrayal, he said, until the DI mentioned it last week as a film that made the Top 10 Films list for 1983 in the New York Times and the Chicago Tribune. The film simply wasn't available, he said.

The other three films are scheduled to be shown in Iowa City at the Bijou this semester. Fanny and Alexander, Stein said, is also scheduled to play at a Central States theater here in March, the earliest he could book it, he said. A publicist who represents Fanny and Alexander, however, disagreed "If they decided they wanted Fanny publicist, who asked not to be identified, "they could get it. Believe me, the studio (Embassy Pictures) wants their movie played.

Although some specialized films, such as Educating Rita and Montenegro, have been box office disasters in Iowa City, Stein admitted the problem may be one of recruiting an audience that could rely on Central States to book a consistent string of arthouse hits. To that end, said Stein, 'We have some plans in Iowa City that I'm not at liberty to discuss.

Iowa City is mostly barrier free. "Students with handicaps are mainstreamed' at the University of lowa," said Sharon Van Meter, coordinator of the UI Office of Services for Mandicapped. "There are no special gurses or classes for them. Instead, make adaptations. 'I always say the University of Iowa has been the most successful Iowa college as far as making the campus accessible," Van Meter said. "Of ourse there are no concrete facts or igures to prove that. With the possible ception of some area or technical chools, I'd say it's true.

"There are 376 physically disabled stu-dents "reported" on campus for the spring semester, according to OSH

"I'D HATE to say that was 'the' number." Van Meter said. "I'm pretty sure there are a lot of handicapped stuents here who we just don't know

Five places on the UI campus have been labeled "inaccessible" by OSH. Off-limits to the handicapped are the Chemistry-Botany Building greenhouse, Halsey Gymnasium, parts of Old Armory, the Field House abovecourt level and the fifth floor of the Engineering Building.

Higgins said he recently had to call upon OSH when elevators in Schaeffer Hall were broken, making it impossible for him to attend class.

'In just a short time they arranged to have a class of about 200 people moved so I could get there," Higgins said. "I don't think that would happen at every university."

Although Higgins considers Iowa City very accessible, he has "learned to accept" the fact that there are some businesses he is not able to get into.

Although most facilities on campus meet American National Standard Specifications, Paul Egli questions hether the standards are adequate.

"I hardly fit anywhere," said Egli who is 6 feet 3 inches tall. "The tables in the libraries are too low, the computer stands are too low and I have to sit at the ends of cafeteria tables because my legs don't fit under the

Too little too late

'Twas brillig and the slithy toves.

No matter how desperately the UI College of Liberal Arts faculty "deplore and protest" Gov. Terry Branstad's recommended budget cuts, their words aren't going to rise above the rest of the gibberish slung at the Iowa Legislature in the next Friday, less than a week before the UI gets a chance to make its plea before the legislature's Higher Education Appropriations Subcommittee, the college rallied about 200 faculty members and passed two proposals calling for radical measures, such as 'working together to generate the data" to assess the damage inflicted by four consecutive years of budget cutbacks. Did gyre and gimble in the wabe.

The faculty members were indeed pitiable. UI Religion Professor George Nickelsburg called dealing with eroding state money "academic self-mutilation ... educational suicide." Another professor spoke of "warehousing" students like inmates

But no matter how truly victimized the Liberal Arts College has been by underfunding, this outcry is too timid and too tardy. All mimsy were the borogroves.

The only suggestion with any backbone came from Hugh Kerr, visiting associate professor from the UI School of Social Work. The Englishman proposed a "massive lobby" of the statehouse. Picture it — a march on Des Moines, countless professors carrying placards pronouncing "Teaching Assistants, Not Trade Centers" and "2-4-6-8, c'mon you lawmakers, allocate."

It might have attracted some attention; it might have risen above the gibberish.

But UI President James O. Freedman discouraged the notion in the fear it might appear to be overstating the case.

And the mome raths outgrabe.

The case cannot be overstated. These faculty members know better than anyone how slicing 6 percent from each of their departmental budgets will "undermine the educational and research missions of the university." So if the direness of the situation hasn't moved them to action before this, and if Friday's resolutions are the extent of the action to be taken now — the legislators will probably blindly follow Branstad's budget. Beware the Jabberwock

Mary Tabor

Bolstering his image

The State Department's announcement that it has decided to mount an intensive diplomatic effort to end the conflict between South Africa, Angola and South-West Africa (Namibia) comes as no surprise. President Reagan has not scored a diplomatic victory in the foreign affairs area and needs one to bolster his new "man of peace" image. Africa is just the place to gain such a victory.

South Africa, Angola and South-West Africa have been fighting for some time over control of the area. South-West African insurgents and Angola want South Africa out of South-West Africa. Angola wants South Africa to stop invading its country and supporting insurgents in their country. South Africa says it can't live with the 25,000 Cuban troops in Angola for security reasons.

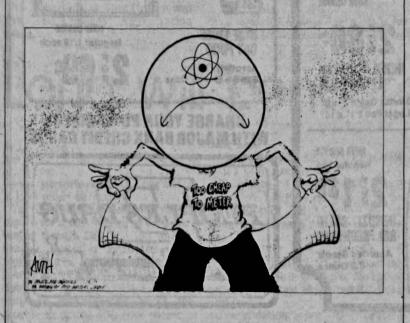

Despite the complicated issues, the southern tip of Africa is now close to accepted peace proposals. South Africans are finding maintaining a military machine costly. Their own military leaders are questioning the wisdom of keeping troops in Angola, and others question the government's policy toward South-West Africa. Angola, on the other hand, finds itself being worn down by defeats from rebel UNITA (Union for the Total Independence of Angola) forces and South African raids into its territory. Both countries need a peaceful solution to the situation.

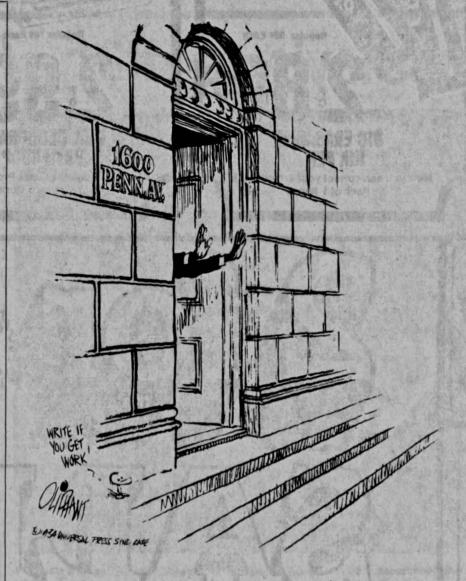

The Reagan administration has everything to gain and nothing to lose by arranging a peace in the area. Africa doesn't carry the emotional or economic ties that the Middle East countries do. There is no South African or Angolan voting bloc in the United States similiar to the one that supports Israel. We are not dependent on the area for our oil supplies. As long as American troops weren't committed to the area as they are in Lebanon, voters wouldn't hold a diplomatic failure in the area against the president.

If the administration can help find a peaceful solution in southern Africa, President Reagan will finally have a diplomatic victory like Jimmy Carter's Camp David accord to show the voters. That's good for the polls.

Anyway he looks at it, joining diplomatic talks in South Africa is good politics. The worst that could happen is a failed effort that is quickly forgotten. But at the best, the president can score diplomatic and political victories. Shallow ones, but victories

'THAT'S NOT HOW LIFE WORKS, MR. JACKSON — YOU CAN'T THROW ME OUT OF MY JOB SIMPLY TO SATISFY SOME RIDICULOUS QUOTA SYSTEM!"

Fund woes sideline women pols

ESPITE EARLIER signs to the contrary, fewer women than expected have decided to run for political office this year. The key obstacle appears to be one that could prove to be a problem

That obstacle is cash. Unfortunately, sophisticated direct-mail techniques and favorable media hype have yet to overcome one hard-and-fast tradition:

Money problems are suggested in the have filed for federal and state political offices. In the U.S. House of Representatives, the 22 women incumbents - 13 Democrats and nine Republicans - are expected to seek reelection. So far, there are 21 other women - 10 Democrats and 11 Republicans - either challenging an incumbent or running for an open seat.

The House is filled with potential opportunities for many more women candidates. Of its 435 members, there are 84 who won with only 55 percent of the vote or less - a standard measure of vulnerability - in 1982; only one member of this group (California Democrat Barbara Boxer, with 52 percent) was a woman. Retirement plans and aspirations for higher office have provided additional opportunities for women Glen & Shearer candidates, and in the next few months could provide more.

Meanwhile, seven women - four Democrats and three Republicans are seeking to unseat Senate incumbents of the opposite party in only six states: Colorado, Minnesota, Montana, Nebraska, Oregon and Virginia. That number in itself represents an increase

BUT OF THE 10 Senate candidates who won in 1978 with 55 percent of the vote or less, only one — Virginia Republican John Warner — came from a state in which a woman is running for the Senate this year. That means there are at least nine more races in which women could run with a reasonably good chance of winning Opportunities in the statehouses haven't drawn a crowd of women candidates. Of the 13 governorships being contested, eight were last won with 55 percent or less, but only one woman, Vermont Democrat Madeleine Kunin, has become a gunernatorial candidate didates are expected to be both more contribute them directly. numerous and more successful. Two years ago, 1,666 women ran for state legislative office, and 908 won. With holdovers, that gave women more than 13 percent of the nation's 7,600 state legislative seats, or three times as many as they had 14 years ago.

But the slim field of female candidates at politics' higher echelons has one unnoticed by women's groups. As Kathy Wilson, the Republican chairwoman of the National Women's Political Caucus, recently told the Baltimore Sun, 1984 is "not going to be a banner year for women candidates."

Some sources among the women's groups contend that Wilson's prognosis could merit revision in months to come. "There's still time for more women to announce," one source said.

YET THOSE sources also confess that even Democratic Party leaders are still reluctant to commit themselves to women challengers or openseat contestants in "marginal" races. Neither party, they say, seems to have recognized polls and statistics that indicate that women are both acceptable and, particularly in the more heavilycontested state races, successful as candidates. The result is insufficient financial support from the parties,

In the state legislatures, women can-which can help raise funds as well as

Women's groups cannot fill the void. For example, three major groups - the National Organization for Women, the National Women's Political Caucus and the Women's Campaign Fund have targeted about $2.5 million for campaign assistance this year, with most of the money earmarked for state legislative races. Their money, owever, would amount to about only 0.2 percent of the billion-plus dollars spent at all levels of politics in 1980

But will the traditional and not-sotraditional sources and gatherers of funds - big and small contributors to the parties, dinner organizers and, yes, political action committees - help fill the gap? Probably not in the short term. Those who follow political fundraising know not only that special interests tend to back incumbents, but also that relatively few women are involved in the fraternal process of soliciting money.

As more women find themselves in positions of financial clout, female candidates could benefit. Until then, many qualified aspirants will find them-

Next president will pack high court

EN. JOHN GLENN, D-Ohio issued a warning about the Supreme Court recently that Americans dare not dismiss as merely presidential politicking.

He said if Ronald Reagan gets four more years as president he will alter the membership of the high tribunal in ways that will cause "the erosion of great social and moral advances." "When the next president is inaugurated a year from now," Glenn said. "five of the nine Supreme Court justices will be past the age 75. It is therefore likely that the next president will make appointments that will shape the direction of the court and of America for many decades to come." Glenn is right in suggesting that if

Reagan replaces those five justices, not only will civil rights gains won by minorities over the last four decades at such painful cost be wiped out, but the quality of life will be lessened for millions of non-minority Americans.

Anyone who doubts what Reagan would do need only look at the way he double-crossed Congress and civil rights groups to pack the U.S. Civil Rights Commission and change it from an articulate advocate of justice in America into an incredibly mindless group of apologists for Reagan and other socially backward elements in this society.

But for the resistance of the Supreme Court, no "liberal" body by anyone's definition, Reagan would already have turned back the clock to the meanness of days we thought we'd outgrown and changed dozens of the social, moral and legal rules that govern our lives.

GIVEN A Supreme Court that would serve as a spineless echo of his ideology, as the Civil Rights Commission is now doing, Reagan would quickly take away the right of any woman to have an abortion for almost any reason. Last year, in a 6-3 vote, the Supreme Court rejected Reagan's urgings that the justices permit state and local governments to ban abortions if Given "his" court, Reagan would now be lavishing tax exemptions upon schools and colleges that practice bla-tant racial discrimination. This court slammed the door on his attempts to give tax-exempt status to Jim Crow institutions in the Carolinas when it declared in an 8-1 vote that "racial discrimination in education is contrary to public policy."

With a court packed to his taste, Reagan would have succeeded in denying the states any right to block construction of new nuclear power plants until the federal government develops a plan for the disposal of nuclear waste. This court snubbed Reagan and let the power of states stand.

Give Reagan a court dominated by his people and you can bet that there will be dozens of brazen efforts to chip away the First Amendment guarantee of a free press. Reagan efforts by executive order to impose censorship on the media, muzzle federal workers and make the lie detector as much a part of federal offices as the typewriter are proof enough of what he would do with no Supreme Court to restrain him.

The record is even more ominous regarding Reagan's intentions involving civil rights and race relations. He assumed the presidency of a society whose leaders saw practical and moral reasons to take affirmative actions to make amends for generations of racial discrimination. That national mood of decency has been poisoned by Reaganite demagoguery about "reverse discrimination against

WHEN DETROIT officials moved voluntarily with courage and integrity to alter Jim Crow patterns in the police department brought on by years of deliberate discrimination against blacks, they decided in 1974 to promote promoted until half the lieutenants were black. The presiding federal judge approved. The Court of Appeals approved. Still Reagan asked the Supreme Court to strike down Detroit's plan. The justices let the plan stand, which brought yelps of protest from six members of this new monstrosity that Reagan wants to pass off as a "civil

Federal judges who are more con-cerned about achieving justice than using mob passions to garner votes have repeatedly ordered busing as a lastresort method of ending segregated schooling. Reagan tried to get this Supreme Court to overrule a decision requiring more busing in Nashville Tenn. The high court again rebuffed Reagan and let the lower court decree

It is interesting that the justices appointed by Republican presidents Dwight D. Eisenhower and Richard M. Nixon have frequently stood tall in resisting Reagan's efforts to make the law bend to his benighted notions of what is just or good social policy.

Americans had better heed John

Glenn's warning that a lot more must be considered in this year's elections than the television style of the candidates. Whoever is president a year from now will make four or five appointments to the Supreme Court and hus profoundly change this society for good or ill.

Women celebrate 10th anniversary with big win

Freshmen lead cagers' victory over Indiana

By Thomas W. Jargo stant Sports Editor

In what could be categorized as the biggest victory in Iowa women's basketball history, the Hawkeyes held off a late charge and defeated defending Big Ten co-champion Indiana, 54-50, Sunday at the Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

And in doing so, the youthful Hawkeyes earned instant credibility throughout the Big Ten as a force to be reckoned with in the years to come. Friday night, Iowa lost a close battle to the league's other co-champion,

Ohio State, 64-56, in the Arena. But Sunday, everything went right for a motivated group of Hawkeyes, who were playing before an arena- and Big Ten-record crowd of 6,499 and a television audience to boot. The game was aired across the state by the Iowa Television Network.

FRESHMAN LYNN Kennedy, one of three first-year players to play a integral part in Iowa's victory, hit a bucket with 11 minutes, 34 seconds to go in the first half to put the Hawkeyes

It was a lead the psyched-up Hawkeyes would never relinquish. But it took crucial free throws by Kennedy and fellow freshman Tricia Blair in the waning seconds to secure

For first-year Hawkeye Coach Vivian Stringer, it was a much needed victory for a scrappy, but win-starved, group of Hawkeyes.

"The last thing I said to you was that no matter how close the score was, we were tired of losing," Stringer said at a press conference following the game. Iowa also broke a string of four straight Big Ten losses where the Hawkeyes battled some of the league's

"Be the dream."

That is the theme of Iowa women's basketball Coach Vivian Stringer in her quest to have Carver-Hawkeye Arena filled to capacity to watch her squad.

Well, the dream came a little closer to reality Sunday as 6,499 fans, an alltime record Big Ten crowd not only saw the Hawkeyes upset defending co-champion Indiana, 54-50, but was witness to a building dream - the institution of women's athletics at Iowa.

The crowd witnessed the 10th anniversary celebration of women's athletics at Iowa. Along with the record crowd watching the festivities at the arena, a live statewide television audience, another first for women's athletics, tuned in on the Iowa Television Network.

For the first time ever, three Iowa nners of the Roy J. Carver Award for the team's most valuable player. At the Hawkeye football awards dinner Saturday night, split end Dave Moritz, fullback Norm Granger and quarterback Chuck Long were named tri-winners of the award.

Iowa Coach Hayden Fry reflected on the past year and looked to the future in his after dinner remarks. "We've established a class football program," Fry told the audience of 650 at the Union. "We had a 9-3 record, but we could have been better. That is one of the most important things we learned.

"AT THE END of the season, we had one of the hardest hitting defensive football teams in the nation," Fry said. "We have enough positions open that we can motivate our players. On offense, our coaches will have to do a tremendous job this year.'

Fry also remarked that his staff is still working toward a national championship. "Until we win the national championship, this coaching staff isn't going to be satisfied," Fry said. "I'm not going to make predictions, but we know it's possible sometime in the next five years — it could be this year." Moritz, a senior from Chicago, was the Hawkeyes' leading receiver with 50 catches for 912 yards. He was a first team all-Big Ten selection. Granger finished his Hawkeye career with 1,099 yards rushing. "I didn't have any idea I'd get this," Granger said. "It's a pretty big honor since my teammates voted for this."

Junior quarterback Long broke 11 school records and was named honorable mention All-American. The Wheaton, Ill., native finished second nationally in passing efficiency and was the runner-up for the Big Ten most valuable player honors.

Delay game lets Hoosiers stall Hawks

Assistant Sports Editor

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. - Like a conductor orchestrating the Boston Pops Symphony, Indiana basketball Coach Bobby Knight raised his hand and led the Hoosiers to a 54-47 Big Ten victory over Iowa Saturday afternoon in Assembly Hall.

In a strategical move of sheer genius, Knight ordered his young team to put the basketball on ice with 11 minutes, 52 seconds to go in the game and his team up, 42-37.

It looked as though the Hoosiers were trying to pull Iowa out of its 1-2-2 packed-in zone defense. But the Hawkeyes, at the urging of Coach George Raveling to "be patient," remained steadfast and content to chase the quicker Hoosiers around the

THE END RESULT was that the quick Hoosiers, utilizing stellar ballhandling control, milked the clock for just over 10 minutes - without as much as even faking a shot at the basket - much to the delight of the capacity crowd of 17,284.

With 1:35 left, Iowa finally got the turnover they were chasing after when Hoosier forward Mike Giomi took an inbounds pass and promptly stepped out of bounds.

The Hawkeyes capitalized on that mistake as Steve Carfino hit a bucket to make it 42-39. But by then, the game came down to free throws. After letting 10 minutes milk off the clock, the Hawkeyes were forced to put Indiana on the line.

Paced by Giomi's perfect six of six, the Hoosiers hit 12 consecutive free throws in the final 1:15. Freshman Marty Simmons and senior Chuck Franz added four and two free throws to literally ice the win.

AFTER THE GAME, Knight pulled an even smarter strategical move - he didn't show up for his usual postgame press conference. After Raveling fielded questions, an Indiana official apologetically informed members of the media that Knight had to catch a plane out of town.

So much for why the deep freeze, leaving only those to speculate why Knight would puncture a good, uptempo game with stall tactics.

Their interior people were in foul trouble and they may have been protecting them," Raveling speculated at his Sunday teleconference. "They may have wanted to get us into a halfcourt, man-to-man defense and change our line-up. We did take one of our big guys out of there and use more RAVELING HAD his reasons for sticking with the zone defense and letting the clock slowly run down. His intention was to let the clock run down to the six-minute mark.

Salukis submerge Hawk swimmers By Greg Anderson

It was a different situation for the 18th-ranked Iowa men's swimming team at the Field House Pool Saturday as they lost to No. 11 Southern Illinois, 66-47.

Last weekend's packed house was replaced by an average size crowd and the Hawkeyes didn't appear to have the emotional level they held against Indiana.

All those factors, and a rules technicality, helped to give the Salukis the victory and put an end to Iowa's undefeated dual meet

Southern Illinois Coach Bob Steele said he expected Iowa to have a bit of a letdown after their big win over Indiana last weekend. 'It was obvious they (Iowa) didn't have as much of an edge, Steele said. "They were a hair

"IT'S HARDER to come back when you shave and rest for an emotional meet against Indiana. I coached at Northwestern and every Big Ten meet was an

"Our individuals didn't get up quite high enough. That's just an example of what you can do with mental attitude

While the score might look like the Salukis dominated, for the most part it was a close meet with the lead switching hands after many of the early events.

In fact, Iowa led, 36-34, when a turning point came for Southern Illinois in the 200-yard backstroke. Saluki Giovanni Frigo surprised some people when he beat Hawkeyes' Tom Roemer and Artie Williams, but the big surprise came when the two Iowa tankers learned they had been disqualified.

Steele said it was unfortunate the switch occured. "I didn't want Tom disqualified in his last home meet because he is such a class

"I didn't want to do any anything. But then I would've been criticized by my people," Steele

According to Roemer, there was just a lack of communication among the Iowa swimmers.

"We didn't talk about it. We were both negligent to swim in the wrong lane," Roemer said. "We just assumed what lane we were

PATTON ACCEPTED full blame for the problem. "When someone swims in the wrong lane it is my responsibilty," Patton

The lane change definitely gave Southern Illinois an edge, but they were really boosted by their strength in the distance freestyle events.

After Iowa grabbed a 7-0 lead with a win in the medley relay, Salukis Anders Grillhammer and Gary Brinkman went one-two in the 1,000 freestyle.

Grillhammer posted a pool record time of nine minutes, 14.17 seconds. The pair then went 1-2 in the 500 freestyle with Brinckman

Record scores boost gymnasts

By Jill Hokinson Staff Writer

Facing their first Big Ten competition of the season, the Iowa women's gymnastics team broke numerous records en route to beating Wisconsin and Indiana.

The Hawkeyes took on Wisconsin Friday night at the Recreation Building and defeated the Badgers, 172.80 to 171.20. Iowa's score of 172.80 was also the highest team total ever turned in by an Iowa women's gymnastics team.

But, the Hawkeyes' new team record didn't last very long. The Iowa gymnasts scored a 172.95 against Indiana, who posted a 170.65, Saturday night to set another new record.

With the two wins over the weekend, the Hawkeyes increased their dual record to 3-0.

HONOLULU (UPI) - Les Steckel was named to succeed Bud Grant as head coach of the Minnesota Vikings Sunday, becoming only the third head coach in the 24-year history of the franchise.

Grant retired Saturday after 17 years at the helm of the Vikings.

At a hastily called news conference prior to the Pro Bowl, Viking owner Max Winter introduced Steckel, who had served under Grant for the past five seasons as receivers' coach.

Steckel, who turned down the head coaching job at the University of Minnesota a few weeks ago, said he was notified of Grant's decision Friday. And although Grant said at his retirement news

"I'm just ecstatic," Grant said at a reception following the game in the Big Ten Room of the arena. "The quality of the crowd, the unexpected upset of the defending champion really made the day quite exciting.

Today, when all of these fine athletes were coming on the floor at halftime, I just had a lump in my throat," she said.

Stringer agreed with her boss. "Our fans here at Iowa are just great," she said. "There's not going to be a better place in the country for women's askethall

"That was one of the reasons I came here was because of the potential for crowds," she said. "They just have to learn to be patient with us because we're so young.

Hawkeye women's tennis Coach Cathy Ballard has been in the program for seven of the 10 years and she put the day in prospective. "If I had to do it again, I'd do the exact same thing," Raveling added.

Despite the defeat, Raveling was leased with the Hawkeyes' effort. "I think sometimes in life you can lose but still win." he said after the game. "Today, I think we won.

"We made some positive steps mature a ballclub. I don't go out of Assembly Hall with my head hung low, and neither are my players."

FOR IOWA, the game got off to a errible start before a rocking house of red and white. Indiana, with the help of technical foul on Raveling, jumped to quick 12-0 lead, sending Hoosier fans nto deafening hysteria.

The technical on Raveling came when Iowa forward Michael Payne was called for a blocking foul just two minutes into the game

"I asked him (the official) how in the world he could interpet the goddamn call that way," Raveling said, "and he was walking away from me and called the technical.

Raveling said the technical foul was "totally unjust" because both coaches were badgering the referees with equal

'Mama' makes audience smile

OSTALGIA isn't really such a bad thing. It informs everything one does in the here and now. My father used to get moist around the eyes when National Public Radio broadcast some of those old serials he grew up with — way before television was even an electron in the eye of its inventor. Remembering when doesn't need to make what's going on presently an abstract proposition.

Time was, plays such as John Van Druten's adaptation of Kathryn Forbes' novel Mama's Bank Account were the main course of Broadway theater. When "entertainment," a muchmaligned word in these cynical post-Theater of Pain days, was the reigning dramatic monarch, and dusky half-children such as Brecht and even Durrenmatt went up in furtive loft performances. Plays like I Remember Mama, seen here Friday night in University Theatres' production in Mabie Theatre, did the job: They brought audiences in and then sent them home smiling.

In these days of "Dynasty," "Falcon Crest" and even "Hill Street Blues" (not to mention Neil Simon and zillion-dollar musicals), though, where one doesn't even have to stay awake, such amusements are vanishing. That's why this production of Mama was doubly nostalgic: both subject and presentation were eloquent of good old days.

And since the Mabie production was professional, clean and inventive in all respects, these were good old days on review.

THE STORY REVOLVES around the matriarch of an immigrant Norwegian family in 1910 San Francisco and her seemingly unquenchable ability to deal with life's little (and not-so-little) problems. The various minor crises the Hanson family deals with/lives through form the scenes. very much like a situation comedy (something like a gender-reversal "Father Knows Best") in format: the youngest daughter Dagmar's cat needs to be chloroformed, the eldest daughter Katrin wants a particular graduation gift, the father of the family is on strike and money's scarce, and so on. The difference, of course, is that there's no laugh-track.

Katrin serves as narrator and participant simultaneously; we go back in time with her to when she was an adolescent, struggling with Big Feelings and flirting with literature and the writer's life. She tells us what we're going to see, when it happened and who was involved; then she steps stage right and becomes the young girl. It's a pretty hoary device, even for the '40s, but it's as good a device as any, I suppose, when dealing with nostalgic material such as Mama is.

Lewin Goff's snappy direction was full of sparkle, with the big laughs built up to in a winning way. Parts of this play get unavoidably hectic, what with a large family, various aunts, loud uncles, cats and giggly adolescent girls bustling around the stage at one time. But Goff directed traffic well and kentual california. traffic well and kept us looking at the things we're supposed to pay attention to. There aren't many 'statements' one can make with material of this kind, but Goff and his actors scored as many

THE ACTORS WERE all a colorful bunch. Julia Gibson as Katrin struck just the right note of girlish breathiness and big smiles, but we also saw the burgeoning adult in there too; when Katrin mostly because of Gibson's trembling solemnity. Wegner's unflappable Mama was ap-

C.R. symphony stirs Paramount audience

By John Voland

CEDAR RAPIDS - The symphony orchestra is alive and well and living in cities and towns like Cedar Rapids. Just at a time when it seemed as if Reaganomics, various recessions and cable television threatened the very existence of civic, not to mention metropolitan, orchestras, it appears that these are doing very well indeed, Nor are these ensembles taking the easy way out by playing nothing but programs of classical hits. There are difficult pieces interspersed between the Tchaikovsky, the Beethoven, the Brahms. And, I'm happy to say, these prehestras seem able and willing to handle all of them.

The Cedar Rapids Symphony Orchestra is not a world-class ensemble: there were some distinctly flat and/or extremely maladjusted sounds issuing forth from the Paramount Theatre stage Saturday night. Their robust but unpolished output will make no one erase their fond memories of, say, the St. Louis Symphony.

But that's not the orchestra's purpose. They're not trying to become one of The Six (formerly The Five: this refers to the nation's top orchestras). They are, instead, serving their community with very satisfactory renditions of music that otherwise might easily go unheard in a live context. And the CRSO's enthusiasm for what they do - obviously shared by their music director, Christian Tiemeyer - can shed light on a piece in a way one of their more sophisticated counterparts might miss.

SUCH WAS THE case Saturday, in a program made up of three 20th century works: Ralph Vaughan Williams' Fantasia on a Theme of Thomas Tallis, Sir Edward Elgar's Cello Concerto and Sergei Prokoviev's Fifth Symphony. Each of these works have their particular joys and difficulties, and the CRSO did a creditable job in bringing the former to the forefront and making little (generally) of the latter.

The Elgar was a special treat, due mostly to the gorgeous and committed playing of 22-year-old cello soloist William DeRosa. Here is a great talent in the making: his handling of the big theme of the first movement was incredibly solid, and the flurry of notes in the finale held no terror at all for him. Throughout his tone was clear and warm, his playing effortless. The beauty of the tone has something to do, he plays (identified in the program as a Dominicus Montagana ex Emperor), but the very fact that he handles the cello in such an accomplished manner obviously demands a superlative instrument.

And his performance fire seemed to inspire the orchestra and Tiemeyer, for their accompaniment was all that could be asked for. Only an occasional imbalance between the brass and the solo cello marred the performance; the conductor proved himself an able and flexible accompanist.

THE OPENING Vaughan Williams' work was also well done. There was no disguising the relatively thin string tone - often the case with metropolitan orchestras - but Tiemeyer turned this to an advantage: the performance brimmed over with an agreeable note-to-note and phraseto-phrase tension sometimes lacking in performances by orchestras with larger string bodies to work with, and Tiemeyer - formerly principal cellist with the Utah Symphony — coaxed the maximum expressiveness from his players. Some unsteadiness of pitch here and there, notably from the solo quartet, was discernable and unfortunate, but this was overall a fine performance of what I have always considered a masterpiece of string

Prokoviev's Fifth Symphony was written in 1944, when it was apparent that Soviet Russia was no longer in danger of absorption by the Nazis; it was a year for evaluating the devastation Hitler had visited on the country. But Prokoviev limited his grief to the tragic, actively despairing third movement (Shostakovich, by contrast, spilled his musical grief over two symphonies and two string quartets) and projected a sardonic optimism into the rest of the work. It is by any definition a masterpiece of the 20th century, and I thought the CRSO did rather well

THERE WERE problems: Tiemeyer let his brass section overplay badly in spots where the audience needs badly to hear what the strings are doing, and his high-volume reading of the coda of the first movement drained the second and fourth of their needed intensity; too much of the piece's impact had been lost by the second movement. And some passages of the work seemed beyond the present capabilities of the orchestra, most notably in the finale; scratchy strings, sour horns and overblown brass was the result.

But the overall impression was exciting: it was terrific fun to survey the vast scope of the piece with this orchestra, whose musicians were obviously as enthusiastic about finding I feel sure, with the superb instrument the wonders in the score as we in the audience were. This contagious excitement was evident, in fact, the whole evening long.

A word about the Paramount: it's a gem of a theater, all 1920s high Deco and red velvet. The sound, while dry and somewhat lacking in bass, was very acceptable. Cedar Rapids thus has two things to be proud of: its orchestra and the hall that orchestra

Jackson and doctor view burn videotapes

LOS ANGELES (UPI) - Singer Michael Jackson and his doctor Saturday viewed a videotape of the pop star's burn accident during a filmed commercial and the physician said he was surprised the injuries were not more severe.

"Everyone was surprised that his whole head and clothes did not catch on fire," Dr. Steve Hoefflin said.

"He is very fortunate not to have been burned more seriously," he said.
The tapes were viewed by Jackson and others at an undisclosed location late Saturday. The tapes were made to set up shooting angles for the highbudget soft drink commercial Jackson was filming Friday when the accident occurred.

Jackson, 25, was taken to Brotman Memorial Hospital but was released Saturday against the advice of Hoef-

"We recommended that Michael stay, but we determined this (treatment) could be done as well out of the hospital as in the hospital," Hoefflin

JACKSON SUFFERED seconddegree burns and a small third-degree burn on the back of his head.

Hoefflin said the singer was in "excellent health" and showing very rapid signs of recovery.

Jackson's attorney John Branca said that five rolls of film taken of the incident will not be developed until Monday, nor would the tapes be released to the media until a later time.

"All Michael wanted to do was let his fans know that he's okay and there are other ways to do that," Branca said. Hoefflin said it was the rapid action of his brothers and stage personnel that prevented the injury from being more

"He was happy that he was not more severely injured," Hoefflin said. "His reaction was one of surprise and

Michael Jackson

The doctor said Jackson would not require any immediate surgery and that future cosmetic surgery would depend on the amount of scarring or loss

"Normally, time is allowed for as much natural hair growth to take place as possible," he said.

Jackson was dancing down a stairway at the Shrine Auditorium Friday night in a scene for the soft-drink commercial when a special effects smoke bomb apparently misfired and set his pomade-slickened hair on fire. The accident was witnesses by about 3,000 people who had won tickets to the taping from a local radio station.

The Cedar Rapids Symphony Orchestra reprises their Saturday concert: music of Vaughan Williams (Fantasia on a Theme of Thomas Tallis), Elgar (the Cello Concerto) and Prokoviev (his Fifth Symphony) are on the program. The soloist in the Elgar is William DeRosa, highly praised elsewhere in this section.

The Verandas — composed mostly of former members of regional rock mavens Akasha - make their local bow at the Crow's Nest tonight and Tuesday, and the price of admission is a measly one buck. You could spend more on popcorn watching ESPN than what it costs to get in the Nest to see these guys - and it's the live experience.

Reasons NOT to Buy Your Stereo Components from Audio Odyssey

Their Price Won't Impress Your Friends

If you're looking to impress your friends with how high-priced your new turntable was, this table isn't for you. But if you're looking for a tremendous buy on a reliable, semi-automatic direct drive turntable, SONY'S PS-LX2 is sure to impress you!

They Don't Come in Factory-fresh Boxes

Nakamichi BX-1

When we sell you a cassette deck, we don't hand you the box and show you the door. Every cassette deck we sell is opened and checked on sophisticated test equipment before it leaves the store to assure you of the performance you paid for.

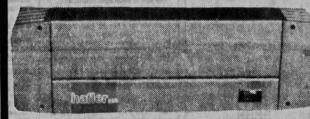

They're Too Simple

BANG & OLUFSEN RX

Stereo components, of course, must look extremely complex to provide superior performance. Wrong! B & O turntables provide excellent performance and ease of operation from an ingeniously simple design.

They're Not Pretty

HAFLER DH-220 POWER AMP

$350/$450

Hafler components aren't ugly, but they won't win any beauty contests either. But on the basis of sound quality and structural integrity, they rate a perfect "10".

They Don't Know Their Place

Boston Acoustics A-150

Regularly $500/pr.

A good loudspeaker will sound good only if positioned properly. For most speakers, that means 3-5 feet away from the wall. The Boston A-150, however, was designed to sound great even when placed flush against the wall.

They Don't Like To Travel

Most stereo components purchased at other stores in Iowa City Iove to travel. In fact, whenever you have a problem they'll travel back to the factory or a regional service center. If you'd bought a DENON component from Audio Odyssey, it would be serviced in lowa City by factory authorized technicians.

They Don't Have Bells, Whistles, or Flashing Lights

NAD 1020 A Pre-amp $198

If you buy your stereo components on the basis of sound quality rather than meaningless cosmetic frills and gimmicky features, you should give NAD components a listen.

Mon. & Thurs.: 10:30-8:30 Tues., Wed. & Fri. 10:30-6:00 Saturday: 10:30-5:00

They Don't Fit Your Image

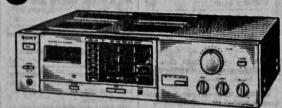

If your image of loudspeakers is a boxy and one-dimensional, you owe it to yourself to listen to the spacious, threedimensionality and precise imaging of Polk Audio loudspeakers.

Discontinued merchandise can represent an excellent value, but only if the components were good buys to begin with. At Audio Odyssey, we don't buy a discontinued model just to show a "great price."
