Eaton loses discrimination suit against Iowa City

By Jim Brown

DES MOINES -- The long-sought after faculty vitality fund may be in trouble again, according to Sen. John Varn, D-Deer Creek, and UI President Richard Rusk. However, Sen. John Corzine, D-Ankeny, believes the state Senate will be able to save the fund this year.

The Senate unanimously passed a bill Thursday that would enact a $37 million faculty vitality fund that would be used to help pay for new faculty members and improvements in the UI's curriculum.

"We need more money for education. We need to attract more and better qualified students to the UI," said Corzine, chairman of the Senate Education Committee.

The bill is expected to be signed by the governor. The Iowa Senate enacted the fund in 1980, but it was not included in this year's state budget.

Rusk said he was "extremely pleased" with the Senate's action.

"I am very pleased with the Senate's action," said Rusk. "This is a major step in the right direction for the UI and our state's economy. This fund will bring new talent and opportunity to the UI, which is essential for our future success."

However, Branstad stressed bis support for the fund. "I am very pleased with the Senate's action," said Rusk. "This is a major step in the right direction for the UI and our state's economy. This fund will bring new talent and opportunity to the UI, which is essential for our future success."

"Today's decision by the Senate is a major victory for those who work hard to keep Iowa's colleges and universities strong," said Rusk. "We need to continue to invest in education, and this fund will help us do just that."

Rusk said he is "very pleased with the Senate's action," and he is "extremely pleased" with the Senate's decision to enact the faculty vitality fund.

"It's a long time coming," said Rusk. "But it's finally here, and I'm glad to see it."

Johnston seeks help to research issues

By Dawn Lehrman

Hoping to build on students' Democratic support, Iowa City authorities are authorizing a rare traffic stoppage to encourage students to find work before school begins. The University of Iowa's policy on work before school begins is an issue that concerns local leaders.

The University of Iowa is working on a study to understand the effects of work before school begins. The results of the study will be used to help students find work before school begins. The study will be conducted by a team of researchers at the University of Iowa. The study will take place over a period of six months.

Board allows indigent files open

By Christine Wales

The Johnson County Board of Supervisors Thursday authorized the county's release of confidential information on indigent patients in the UI Hospitals.

The authorization is in accord with the Iowa Legislative Council's Thursday directive to the county to release the information, without regard to the social or economic conditions of people receiving care under the county at the UI Hospitals.

The Johnson County Board of Supervisors voted to release the information, which includes medical data on patients in the county hospitals.

The move was 6-1, although it was noted to reduce the information.

Car thief is fined, put on probation

David M. Schalk, 20, was sentenced to five years probation and $1,320 restitution to Lake County.

Schalk said he used a stolen license plate to a Chicago auto dealer from whom he bought the plate.

The thief was fined $1,320 and $200 in court costs.

Schalk was convicted of theft on Aug. 29, which stated he had stolen a license plate from a car at the Herman Muscatine Road.

The stolen plate was found on Aug. 15, when a car with a missing license plate was stopped.

Schalk is from Lake City, Iowa.

University Program offers victims privacy

By Renee Yang

Victims of rape and sexual assault will be receiving more comprehensive care under a program that began Monday at the UI Hospital, said Pamela Triolo, a clinical nursing supervisor.

The program, called the Victims of Rapegro Medical Action Center, was instituted at the request of the UI Women's Center after a review of national and state practices.

The new program will allow victims of rape and sexual assault to receive care at the UI Campus Health Center and the UI Hospital before, during and after the criminal justice process.

Victims of rape and sexual assault were previously treated primarily in the emergency room, said Charles DeProsse, associate dean of the College of Nursing.

Taxes are better

With the state of Iowa lacking sufficient budgetary strength even to maintain some of its programs at present levels, let alone improve programs to the point of financial stability, it would seem only reasonable, as many have been urging, that the tax structure be examined while there is still some taxpayer interest in the proposed higher taxes.

The question of higher taxes is, of course, one of several and more pressing problems currently facing a state government that is already despondent over its condition. Any tax increase, whatever its form, would have to be proportionate to the state's fiscal needs.

The following pages contain some of the issues facing the state and the likely methods of dealing with them.

As they prefer

"What do we have in this country... is one problem that we can't seem to solve," wrote Professor William Schuppener of the University of Iowa. Professor Schuppener's recent statement has been widely quoted, especially by those who find it easier to blame others than to do something about it themselves.

Informed opinion supports the viewpoint that the tax structure be examined to determine whether the current system is adequate to meet the state's fiscal needs.

It is also important to note that the proposed higher taxes would have to be proportionate to the state's fiscal needs.

Holography or something. And if you've ever been to a live show, or to a real rock concert, I don't think it gets any better than that. It's all about the music, the energy and the overall experience. It's a fantastic way to enjoy live music and a show. I definitely recommend it for anyone who loves music and wants to experience something new.

I have a few thoughts on this subject. First, I think it's important to consider the potential benefits of holography. It offers a unique and engaging way to enjoy live music, which can be especially appealing to fans who can't attend live concerts due to various reasons. Additionally, holography can provide a more immersive and dynamic experience compared to traditional concert settings. It also has the potential to create new revenue streams for musicians and venues, as well as offer promotional opportunities for music and entertainment industries.

However, there are also some concerns that need to be addressed. One issue is the potential impact on the live music industry. While holography can offer new opportunities, it may also affect the demand for traditional concerts, leading to a decline in attendance and revenue for venues. Furthermore, there are ethical considerations regarding the use of holography technologies, particularly around the issue of authenticity and the potential for misrepresentation.

Overall, I believe that holography has the potential to bring new life to the music industry and offer fans a unique and engaging experience. However, it's essential to carefully consider its potential implications and address any potential ethical concerns to ensure its long-term success.

With Stringer center Lisa Becker out, Iowa is losing a projected top 10 player and by extension, a key member of the Hawkeyes' frontline. But the team is not counting on that for its season.

"I don't think we're going to have an NCAA-level season," said Stringer. "But I think we'll have a very good season." The Hawkeyes have been playing very well with their starting frontcourt of Lisa Becker, Laura Marchant and Lisa Schilling.

First-place Purdue looks to break jinx

By Dave Rothmayer

Sports Editor

Iowa City hasn’t been kind to the Purdue Boilermakers since the mid-1970s.

The Boilermaker basketball team hasn’t won in Iowa City since 1976. With Purdue dropping the Hawkeyes, 67-57, Tuesday evening, this is certainly the closest Purdue has come to winning.

But there is one person here who thought Purdue could win.

“I think Purdue is a very good basketball team,” said Gary Wade, Purdue’s basketball coach before the Boilermakers beat the Hawkeyes.

Wade said Purdue’s offense is very strong. But he said the Hawkeyes are very good defensively.

The Boilermakers had a lot of shots in the first half, but they couldn’t get them down.

“The Boilermakers’ backcourt of Guard Scott Fitt and guard Scott Hall may be the most dangerous duo in the Big Ten. But the Boilermakers were unable to get the shots they wanted in the first half,” Wade said.

The Hawkeyes’ defense was the key to the win. Iowa City has the most successful defense in the Big Ten. The Hawkeyes are at the top of the conference in scoring defense.

The Hawkeyes won the game 67-57.

Tri-captain Thomas enables Iowa to gain respectability

By Mike Czarnecki

Iowa's swimming team can take pride in the fact that they have a three-headed monster leading the way.

Senior tri-captain Michelle Thomas has seen the Iowa swimming and diving program move from non-acceptability to respectability in her four years as a Hawkeye. "I feel like this year we have a chance to show that there's more than just the fringes, " Thomas said.

Michelle Thomas is an excellent all-around swimmer. She holds or has shared eight school records in four years and was named All-Big Ten, an honor that only a select few others have earned.

"I feel like we can beat almost everyone we race," Thomas said. "I feel like we're on the way to being a great team, but we have to prove it this year."

"The last two years we've always had strong years, but we're really looking for a great year this year. We need to show that we can compete with the best."

By the end of the season, Thomas believes that her team will have shown that its time to be taken seriously.

"We need to show that we can compete with the best," Thomas said. "We need to show that we can win meets and perform at the highest level."

Olympic president Ueberroth denies he may replace Kuhn

NEW YORK CITY (UPI) - President William J. Ueberroth, president of the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee, said Monday that he would not replace Earl J. Kuhn as the U.S. Olympic Committee's chief executive officer.

"I do not have any plans to replace Earl Kuhn," Ueberroth said. "I have always been a strong supporter of Earl Kuhn and his ability to lead the U.S. Olympic Committee.

"Earl Kuhn has been a leader in the world of sports for many years and has been a great asset to the U.S. Olympic Committee."

"The U.S. Olympic Committee is a strong organization with a great future and I believe that Earl Kuhn is the right man to lead it."

Ueberroth said that he will continue to work closely with Kuhn and the U.S. Olympic Committee to ensure the success of the Los Angeles Olympic Games.

"We will continue to work hard to make the Los Angeles Games a success," Ueberroth said. "I believe that the U.S. Olympic Committee is capable of hosting a successful Olympic Games and I will do everything I can to help make it happen."

Los Lobos spread culture with TexMex rhythm 'n' roll

By John Valset

Allentown Express-News

Los Lobos members Conrad Lozano, David Hidalgo, Cesar Rosas, and Louis Perez.

We bring to people together and show them something they've never seen or heard about. It's great to look out and see the dance floor and the lighting of all eyes and drummings that have a good time. It's incredible to see the energy we bring to the people, said Louis Perez.

"Los Lobos" has been on the road for a while, said Perez. "We've been playing shows and trying to get our name out there. We've been playing shows all over the country and we've been getting a lot of attention."

Senses' explores obsession with highly-charged passion

By John Waid

T is a strange October day in Iowa, and the air is heavy with the smell of burning leaves. The sun shines bright in the sky, casting long shadows across the land. A man walks down the street, his mind filled with thoughts of a woman he once knew. He is aumn, but his heart is heavy with the weight of memories. He feels a sense of longing, a yearning for something he cannot name.

As he walks, he recalls the days when he and she were young, when their lives were filled with laughter and joy. He remembers the way she used to smile at him, the way her eyes sparkled with life. He is overcome with emotion, and he feels the tears well up in his eyes.

He reaches the end of the street, and there she is, standing in the doorway of her house. She looks beautiful, just as she always has. He takes a deep breath and approaches her, his heart racing with anticipation.

"I love you," he says, his voice barely above a whisper. "I've always loved you, and I always will."

She turns to him, tears shining in her eyes. "I love you, too," she says. "I've been thinking about you so much lately."

They hold each other, their bodies moving in a slow, deliberate dance. They kiss, their lips moving in a rhythm that is both familiar and new.

As they pull away, they both know that their lives will never be the same. They have found the one true love they have been searching for all along, and now they must face the world together.

The sun sets in the west, casting a warm glow over the land. The man and woman stand in the doorway, holding each other close, their hearts beating as one. They know that the road ahead will be long and difficult, but they are ready to face whatever comes their way.

The end.
Where’s LaBeef? He’s at the Oasis

By Steve Hargray

Rockabilly star Sleepy LaBeef, often referred to as the "King of the Blues," is in town this week, performing at the Oasis Inn. LaBeef, a legend in the rockabilly music scene, has been a fixture on the music circuit for over two decades. He is known for his smooth vocal style and his ability to captivate an audience with his music.

LaBeef's music is a blend of blues, country, and early rock and roll. His songs often feature a strong guitar riff and a steady drumbeat, with LaBeef's throaty voice taking center stage. His live performances are always a hit with audiences, who come to see him for his intricate musicianship and his ability to engage the crowd.

LaBeef's appearances in Iowa City are always highly anticipated, and the Oasis Inn is a popular spot for his shows. His music is a great escape from the hustle and bustle of everyday life, and audiences love to lose themselves in his songs.

The Oasis Inn is located at 338-3039 Iowa Avenue, and the show is on February 3. Be sure to check out LaBeef's performance and experience the magic of rockabilly music in person.
