T.A.s plan walkout in protest of proposed cuts

By Robyn Griggs
Staff Writer

Decisive action in protest of Gov. Terry Branstad's proposed 2.9 percent budget cut is underway by UI graduate and undergraduate students.

About 70 UI graduate students — mostly from the English-Philosophy Building — voted Wednesday to stage a walkout of classes and picket next week. In addition, a task force composed of several undergraduate organizations decided Tuesday to stage a protest rally against the cuts.

The walkout and picket of EPB will be held Wednesday in conjunction with a noon rally on the Pentacrest.

It will be preceded by a "teach-in" Monday or Tuesday in which the T.A.s will spend the day informing their students about the effects of the cutbacks.

The graduate students at Wednesday's meeting are not alone in their concern, said Andy Martin, UI American Studies T.A. "Interest is pretty widespread this time. I have a list of about 20 or 30 names who couldn't be here but support our efforts."

Martin said he believes the 70 T.A.s who initiated the walkout "could probably multiply our numbers here by at least three times."

The T.A.s are appealing to all their colleagues to participate in the walkout and "teach-in."

"NO ONE is going to bar anyone from walking across the picket lines," said UI Literature T.A. Nicholas Humy. "It's an invitation to ask all T.A.s and all faculty, as well as parents and students to join us in this."

Humy expects support for the action. "I've been talking to others in my department and have asked, 'Would you support a strike or a picket?' The majority of the faculty and administrative assistants have agreed not to cross the picket line."

"In talking to faculty it has been indicated to me that a great number of faculty have said they would not show up for work," he added.

UI graduate student Bruce Hagemann said: "This is not a T.A. walkout, this is an everybody walkout. It's an all university walkout and not a little parochial concern about T.A. salaries. It's a goddamn crisis."

The undergraduate task force responsible for the rally, composed of the Collegiate Associations Council, the Liberal Arts Student Association, the UI Student Senate, the United Students of Iowa and the UI Greek organizations, decided to join the graduate students in their protest.

The rally will launch a three-day See Walkout, page 6

Regents deny USI funding proposal

By Dan Hauser
Staff Writer

DES MOINES — The state Board of Regents voted Wednesday to deny a statewide student advocacy organization the funding mechanism it says it needs in order to become a more viable voice for students.

Following lengthy debate between United Students of Iowa executives and regents, the board decided against allowing the student coalition to implement an automatic-refundable fee mechanism at Iowa's three state universities.

Only Regent Percy Harris voted against Executive Secretary R. Wayne Richey's recommendation to allow the student governments at each of the state universities to decide on funding individually.

Harris moved the board allow the automatic-refundable fee be used at the UI and the University of Northern Iowa with the understanding that both schools would repeat the referendum posed to students last semester.

His motion failed to receive support from the board, but USI Executive Director Chris Morton said after the meeting, "I think Harris is right."

THE REGENTS questioned whether the referendum brought before the two student bodies was representative enough. Jim Hessburg, a member of the UI board of directors asked the board to "please listen to those who did vote, not the apathetic ones."

In October, UI students voted 558 to 198 in favor of funding the student lobbying group through an automatic-refundable fee. The University of Northern Iowa voted 539-89 in favor of the fee.

"What worries me is this could be a tax on apathy," UI President James O. Freedman said. He said if another election would be held on the UI campus there would still be a small turnout.

Regent Jane Murphy said, "What bothers me is the polling place (only one polling place was used on the UI and UNI campuses) and the small percentage of turnout."

USI Board of Directors Chairwoman Sharon McMullen said the UI only allowed one voting location and that the percentage of turnout was in line with the national average.

McMULLEN SAID if USI was forced to depend on funding from the individual student governments, it might not get enough money.

Capitolist pigskin

Tim Feeney leaps for a football as Les Welsh waits with open arms on Capitol Street near the Chemistry-Botany Building Wednesday. The two UI freshmen were enjoying the day's unseasonably warm temperature by tossing the pigskin around with several other students. Play today will likely be called on account of rain.

Moslems drive close to U.S. base

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Druze leader Walid Jumblatt warned Wednesday that the Moslem militias controlling west Beirut would not halt their offensive until President Amin Gemayel resigns.

"Gemayel must resign," Jumblatt was quoted as saying by the Druze Voice of the Mountain radio after the Druze dealt another serious defeat to the Lebanese army, dominated by Gemayel's Christian-led government.

Jumblatt's Druze militia linked up with their Shiite allies Tuesday to drive government troops from a strategic junction 200 yards from the U.S. Marine base at Beirut Airport.

"There will be no dialogue, no compromise, and no solution with the (Christian) Phalange party and Gemayel," the radio quoted Jumblatt as saying at a Damascus news conference.

"We are ready to recognize a Christian president through a compromise and political reforms but not a Phalangist president," Jumblatt said. Gemayel's father, Pierre, is the head of the powerful Christian Phalange Party.

In Washington, ATT Communications said telephone and other communications links were disrupted to Beirut, but despite a flood of calls operators were still able to reach some exchanges by routing the calls through Rome.

ATT SPOKESWOMAN Gail Purpura said certain exchanges which cover most of the hotels used by foreign journalists in west Beirut appeared to be down. A spokeswoman for the U.S. State Department said the department's calls also had been affected.

The army admitted losing the key Khalde highway junction, 9 miles southeast of Beirut, on the second day of a Druze push apparently aimed at widening supply routes to the Shiites' west Beirut stronghold.

The army said its troops set up new defense lines in Damour, an isolated coastal town 2 miles south of the junction, where the main highway from Beirut to south Lebanon crosses a road leading to the Shouf mountains.

There were no casualty figures immediately available.

Refugees from the fighting pouring into Israeli-held areas of southern Lebanon claimed "hundreds" of Syrian and Palestinian rebels were among the Druze forces that captured the

French see need for U.N. troops

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — In a major concession to the Kremlin, France proposed Wednesday that U.S. and allied warships withdraw from Lebanese waters as part of a plan to replace the multinational force in Beirut with U.N. troops.

"An international force replacing the multinational force has become a necessary element in the peacekeeping efforts," French Ambassador Luc de la Barre de Nanteuil told an urgent session of the U.N. Security Council.

He proposed the council authorize movement of U.N. peacekeeping forces already in southern Lebanon to the Beirut area.

The United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon (UNIFIL) of about 6,000 lightly armed soldiers has been in southern Lebanon since 1978, but they were swept aside by invading Israeli troops in June 1982.

The force of American, French, Italian and British troops sent to Beirut following the 1982 Israeli invasion of Lebanon had tried "courageously and tenaciously" to carry out its mandate, de la Barre de Nanteuil said.

"But circumstances have now changed," the French envoy said. "The risk of confrontation is now such that the international community must face up to its responsibilities."

"The multinational force now must be replaced. A U.N. force is needed and it would be most efficient for certain detachments of UNIFIL to be sent to the Beirut area."

Weather

Cloudy and cooler today with a 60 percent chance of rain. Highs will be in the mid- to upper 40s with winds from 10 to 15 mph. Tonight will be mostly cloudy with a 20 percent chance of showers early and lows in the mid-30s.

This is the third of four articles designed to compare the positions of the Democratic presidential candidates on a number of specific policy questions. Today's installment covers issues of the economy and environment.

The Rev. Jesse Jackson's views are not included because repeated attempts by The Daily lowan to contact Jackson or anyone on his staff qualified to speak for him were unsuccessful.

Sources for the candidates' answers to these questions are: Former Florida Gov. Reubin Askew and Jim Bacchus of the Iowa Askew campaign; Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., and Paul Del Ponte, deputy press secretary; Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., and Tom Gleason of Hart's Senate office; Mark Epstein, issues director for the campaign of Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C.; Former Sen. George McGovern of South Dakota and George Sweeting of McGovern's Washington campaign headquarters; Fred Martin, issues director and veteran aide to former Vice President Walter Mondale.

How can the U.S. tax code be sim-

This story was written from reports by Jeff Eichenbaum, Robyn Griggs, Emily Nitche and Steve Sands.

The political year

Issues

plified and made more equitable?

Askew: "I favor repealing the most recent 10 percent across-the-board personal income tax cut. Repeal of this tax alone would bring our federal deficit down by $30 billion in fiscal 1984, and by $177 billion over the next five years. I also favor postponing automatic indexing of the personal income tax to inflation. This postponement would save $90 billion over the next five years."

"I support the effect of the Bradley-Gephardt Tax Bill which would set lower tax rates while getting rid of the bulk of current tax exemptions and credits."

"Major corporations should be made to pay their share of taxes, and I am against corporations receiving non-productive tax benefits. However, I think that business should receive incentives when they expand or increase their outputs and am very supportive of investment credits."

Cranston: Has not unveiled a specific program for the tax code but believes a revised tax system should stimulate productive investments instead of promoting tax shelters, corporate takeovers and windfall profits. It should also discourage factories from moving to right-to-work states or cheap-labor countries. Cranston also favors a stiffer progressive tax on individuals earning $100,000 or more.

Glenn: Proposes to overhaul the current tax system to make it simple, fair and able to raise enough revenue to keep the government running.

Hart: Supports enactment of tax reform legislation S-1421, the Fair Tax Proposal, which he co-sponsored. That legislation would restructure the tax code under three progressive rates: 14 percent, 26 percent and 30 percent brackets. Hart believes this legislation would broaden tax brackets and reduce tax rates while helping to alleviate the problem of bracket creep and the marriage penalty.

Hollings: Believes the whole tax system should be restudied. "It's fifty years old and it has never been examined." He supports Sen. Robert Dole's tax reform bill that would close corporate tax loopholes.

McGovern: Favors a complete overhaul of the income tax. He would close the loopholes that favor corporations and the wealthy and institute a more uniform tax, which should increase revenues by $300 billion. Under his plan the top tax rate would be 30 percent and individuals would be limited to three deductions: pension arrangements, charitable deductions of less than $1,000, and mortgage on their primary residence.

Corporate deductions would be limited to the depreciation of value on capital assets.

US involved in Namibia talks

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — Top officials from the United States and South Africa headed to Zambia Wednesday for talks in an effort to secure a Namibian independence settlement. South Africa last month announced a 30-day disengagement of its forces with Angolan-backed guerrillas of the South West Africa People's Organization (SWAPO).

In Washington, U.S. officials would not rule out the possibility of American military observers being sent to the area to police a peace agreement.

American official is killed

ROME — Suspected Red Brigade terrorists firing automatic weapons from a car shot and killed an American official returning home from his job as the director-general of the Sinai multinational peacekeeping force, police said.

Leamon R. Hunt, 56, of Mill Creek, Okla., was a retired foreign service officer. It was the second attack in Italy on a high-ranking American official.

Anti-leak measures delayed

WASHINGTON — President Reagan has suspended anti-leak orders that would have subjected government employees who see classified information to lie detector tests and lifetime censorship, a White House spokesman said Wednesday.

The unpopular secrecy provisions, designed to stop leaks of classified information, issued by Reagan last March 11 were postponed by Congress from taking effect until this April 15. Deputy Press Secretary Larry Speakes said the president will try to develop a solution agreeable to Congress.

Nuclear detonation injures 12

RAINIER MESA, Nev. — The desert floor above a nuclear weapons testing site collapsed into a cavern Wednesday creating by a nuclear detonation more than 1,000 feet underground. At least 12 people were injured, federal officials said.

Stores pull blueberry muffin mix

By Jeff Eichenbaum and Greg Philby Staff Writers

The Procter & Gamble Manufacturing Company has agreed to remove a specific batch of Duncan-Hines blueberry muffin mix from all Iowa stores, after Iowa Department of Agriculture tests showed that the mix contains high levels of ethylene dibromide, a cancer-causing fumigant.

Iowa's Secretary of Agriculture, Robert Lounsbury, said the tests were conducted on muffin mix case-lot 3294W4 last week. But Procter & Gamble disagreed with the state's assessment and asked to run its own tests on the product.

Studies indicate EDB has caused cancer in laboratory animals tested at several levels of exposure. EDB has been used in Iowa primarily as a grain fumigant and is sprayed in grain bins to kill insects, according to Dale Shires, director at the Johnson County Extension Services.

State tests showed the muffin mix contained about 380 parts-per billion of EDB.

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency set standards allowing for 150 parts-per-billion of EDB in "intermediate food products," which includes grain and flour-type foods which must be cooked before consuming. State tests revealed that four of the muffin mixes contained 390, 370, 370, and 360 parts-per-billion.

JOHN RHODES, director of information for the Iowa Hy-Vee Foods Stores Inc., said Tuesday, "I just got the bulletin today notifying us of the code number." Duncan Hines is asking stores to remove the mix from their shelves.

Rhodes said, "All of the product of that code is out of the warehouse, so they (the stores) have had it, but there is no way for us to know which stores got the product." John Comer, assistant director of warehouse purchasing for Hy-Vee, said, "To our knowledge, there wasn't any (of the contaminated mix) in that particular area (Iowa City), and most should have already been flushed through the system."

He said their retail stores probably don't have any of the mix left, "but there may be some sitting in people's cupboards."

People who have purchased the muffin mix can return it to the store for a refund or exchange.

No area merchants found mix with that lot number on their shelves, but some removed all Duncan Hines blueberry muffin mixes before the test results were known.

Gary Theelke, manager of Randall's Mini-Priced Foods, Sycamore Mall, said they cleared the Duncan Hines product from the shelves Sunday.

"WE JUST DID it anyway since it saves problems. It's the thing to do rather than just take a chance," he said. "Muffin mix isn't all that big of a seller anyway, so I don't think it will cause any shortage."

Other store owners have watched for the number since last week when the state began testing it.

J.D. Hook, director of the laboratory division of the department of agriculture, said more testing will be done on food products that need to be cooked before being eaten.

Educational ties aid

By Dawn Ummel Staff Writer

As long as the nation's stays healthy, financial aid college students will also reshape, an assistant secretary of the Department of Education said.

Edward Elmendorf, secretary for postsecondary said low interest rates have more money to go to financial aid programs such as Pell Grants, Work-Study and Guaranteed Loans in the Reagan administration proposed fiscal 1985 budget.

Despite the fact the College Board found that federal student aid has decreased by 21 percent since 1980, Elmendorf said, "If 21-percent interest rate then when President Reagan came to office," students would not be in the proposed program.

Elmendorf is in Iowa City to witness the "switch on" of a system that will process million student financial aid applications at the National Systems Information Service.

The Department of Education ded a three-year, $29 million to NCS, which will be the processor for financial aid from across the nation, said.

ELMENDORF SAID financial aid college students came to the family is the "primary" followed by support from institutions, scholarships and grants. If the student falls short of aid, then loans, work-study can make up the difference.

The major grant program, Grant — has been slated to increase from $1.9 billion for fiscal 1985, a $300 million increase over fiscal 1984. Elmendorf said the maximum Pell Grant will rise from $1,900 to $3,000.

"This will target to the students going to high-cost areas," Elmendorf said. He said 80 percent of the Pell money would go to students coming from families with income below $12,000.

"It's not fair for high-cost areas going to low-cost schools."

Beirut to help

By Dan Hauser Staff Writer

Dr. Faysal Saadeh, who returned to the American University of Beirut this summer because of his oldest son Sami have a fulfill.

When he reunites with Saadeh said the two of the help the victims of the war.

No signs of bitterness face of the middle-aged man down for an interview with the Iowan Monday afternoon. He is still in Beirut, where medical electronics technician AUB medical center.

"I thank God he is not in hostilities," Saadeh said. He has been working for the three years now.

Saadeh, a visiting anatomist from Lebanon, came to Beirut. It is his third visit to Beirut.

Saadeh, his wife and his Mark live in Iowa City, and relatives remain in Beirut.

SAADEH SAID the Lebanese have "been living this nightmare almost ten years. I dare the Lebanese learn to co-exist with problems."

Saadeh did not try to discern. He said he and his "all the time" about their friends they have back in Beirut.

"Citizens do die if the wrong place at the wrong time," Saadeh said, but later on AUB medical center is in Beirut, a part of town that been relatively safer than Beirut.

He said shells have fallen on campus, but the hits were "unintentional." Because near-misses and other shells have been returned to the AUB.

Saadeh said he keeps these students. "They were about the good old days," with a chuckle.

Education secretary ties aid to economy

By Dawn Ummel
Staff Writer

As long as the nation's economy stays healthy, financial aid awards to college students will also remain in top shape, an assistant secretary in the Department of Education said Wednesday. Edward Elmendorf, assistant secretary for postsecondary education, said low interest rates have allowed more money to go to financial aid programs such as Pell Grants, College Work-Study and Guaranteed Student Loans in the Reagan administration's proposed fiscal 1985 budget.

Despite the fact the College Board has found that federal student financial aid has decreased by 21 percent since 1980, Elmendorf said, "If we had the 21-percent interest rate that we had when President Reagan came into office," students would not be hearing of the proposed program increases.

Elmendorf is in Iowa City today to witness the "switch on" of a computer system that will process about 6 million student financial aid applications at the National Computer Systems Information Services Division. The Department of Education awarded a three-year, $29 million contract to NCS, which will be the "central processor" for financial aid forms from across the nation, Elmendorf said.

ELMENDORF SAID financial aid to college students comes at three levels:
the family is the "primary financier," followed by support from individual institutions, scholarships and the student. If the student falls short in these forms of aid, then loans, grants and work-study can make up the difference. The major grant program — the Pell Grant — has been slated to receive $2.8

billion for fiscal 1985, a $300 million increase over fiscal 1984. Elmendorf said the maximum Pell Grant will increase from $1,900 to $3,000.

"This will target to the low-income students going to high-cost colleges," Elmendorf said. He said 80 percent of the Pell money would be awarded to students coming from families whose incomes falls below $12,000.

"It's not fair for high-income students going to low-cost schools to get the cost paid for by the grant," he said.

Although Guaranteed Student Loans
are to increase by almost $600,000, Elmendorf said he is against proposals to raise the loan amounts or increase the length of time allowed for repayment.

"It's not appropriate to raise the loan limit because we have not made a point with those who do borrow," he said. Elmendorf feared increased GSL amounts could lead to "overborrowing and increased default rates on loans."

Elmendorf said College Work-Study, which is proposed to receive an additional $295 million in fiscal 1985, will not burden colleges with increased payments from the colleges' 20 percent of the work-study deal.

COLLEGE OFFICIALS have expressed concern their campuses may not boast enough jobs to accommodate the increase in work-study money. But Elmendorf said a maximum of $100,000 could be pumped into the "job location development center" at each school.
Currently the job location program at each school can receive up to $25,000.

Besides on-campus jobs, the job location development center enables students to work off campus, where the private sector pays the 20 percent of a student's wages not covered by the federal government.

For colleges that are worried about the shift in federal money from the Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grant to Work-Study, Elmendorf said an upcoming budget proposal "would allow an institution to take half of its work-study money and put it in SEOG."

"This gives some flexibility and returns authority back to the campus," he said.

ELMENDORF SAID he regularly
meets with student financial aid lobby groups, but would not speculate on how successful they are before Congress.

But he said, "Beyond the individual institutions, there is some confusion at the state level as to who speaks for the students" because there are different lobbying groups.

"When the students graduate there is a whole new stream of fresh leadership available," Elmendorf said. He said the student lobbyist groups could be improved if one leader would follow up on the plans of the previous leader, instead of "each president coming in with new issues."

Beirut lures teacher to help war victims

By Dan Hauser
Staff Writer

Dr. Faysal Saadeh, who teaches first year medical students at the UI, will return to the American University in Beirut this summer because he and his oldest son Sami have a "mission to fulfill."

When he reunites with his son, Saadeh said the two of them intend to help the victims of the war.

No signs of bitterness crossed the face of the middle-aged man as he sat down for an interview with The Daily Iowan Monday afternoon. His oldest son is still in Beirut, working as a medical electronics technician in the AUB medical center.

"I thank God he is not involved in the hostilities," Saadeh said. He said Sami has been working for the center for three years now.

Saadeh, a visiting anatomy professor from Lebanon, came to the UI last July. It is his third visit to this country.

Saadeh, his wife and his youngest son
Mark live in Iowa City, while friends and relatives remain in war-torn Beirut.

SAADEH SAID the Lebanese people have "been living this nightmare for almost ten years. I daresay many of the Lebanese learn to co-exist with the problems."

Saadeh did not try to hide his concern. He said he and his family worry
"all the time" about their son and the friends they have back in Lebanon.

"Civilians do die if they are in the wrong place at the wrong time," Saadeh said, but later noted that the AUB medical center is located in Ras Beirut, a part of town that he said "has been relatively safer than (the rest of) Beirut."

He said shells have fallen on the campus, but the hits were labeled "unintentional." Because of these near-misses and other shelling that has bombarded the city, Saadeh said the AUB is losing its "melting pot" character.

"It is very difficult to entice students and faculty to AUB," he said. Two or three years ago he said he had American students at AUB, but now they have returned to the States.

Saadeh said he keeps in touch with these students. "They write and talk about the good old days," he remarked with a chuckle.

Faysal Saadeh

He said the international faculty has been reduced with the recent fighting in Lebanon. "The flavor of the staff has changed." Before the international faculty can be restored Saadeh said he believes peace must come to the country.

"I CAN'T SAY I'm looking forward to going back, but I feel obligated to go back," Saadeh said.

He said the sense of obligation stems from a personal conviction to help educate the AUB students in medicine.
A good education is still available, he said, despite the "unpleasantness" in the country.

He said he also feels apprehensive about returning to his country this summer, because he is "so far from what's going on." He said he has to depend on American television and newspapers to get reports.

Saadeh said UI students have shown great concern for the events in Lebanon. He said the amount of personal contact with his 180 students is "tremendous." He is often stopped in the street by students, who are curious about his son's condition.

"I think things will get better," Saadeh said, "but very slowly." He said conditions will improve when the people involved in the fighting learn from their mistakes.

He said he hopes these people will be able to "extract wisdom from the past."

The Daily Iowan/David Zalaznick
Democratic presidential candidate Reubin Askew speaks to a group of people at Vanessa's restaurant Wednesday afternoon while on a campaign stop. Askew discussed the progress of his campaign and answered questions on various issues, including the PIK program.

Askew wants 'frost' on nuclear weapons

By Susan Yager
Staff Writer

Democratic presidential candidate Reubin Askew made his first campaign appearance in Iowa City Wednesday, speaking in front of a crowd of about 30 people at Vanessa's restaurant.

The former Florida governor has not done much campaigning in Iowa, choosing instead to concentrate on the New Hampshire primary contest being held Feb. 28.

Askew was asked whether his limited spending in Iowa would hurt his chances in Monday's caucuses. "I'm not going to go out and borrow this money, because it's a caucus state. I don't think it will have the impact of the primary state."

During his appearance Askew touched on the issues of agriculture, small business and foreign trade, saying America needs to be more open to trade and more competitive. "We need to have faith in our ourselves, faith in our country and faith in our creator," he said.

Askew called small business people the "backbone of America," and added, "That's where all the jobs are going to be created."

FULL EMPLOYMENT. Askew said, is "what you want to define it as." He said it is "a term that is used a lot, and you would like to see all the people who want jobs to find jobs." But he said reducing the $200 billion federal deficit should be the first priority.

Askew also commented on the Reagan administration's farm policies saying of the Payment In Kind program, "The people who really made the money are the ones who needed it least." He added he would not defend any type of subsidy program.

Askew, the only top Democratic contender not supporting a nuclear freeze, said the way to improve relations between the United States and the Soviet Union is to "lower the rhetoric."

He said, "I can't believe the Soviet people want to see a nuclear war, and I know we don't want it."

Askew said he believes the United States should initiate negotiations with the Soviets, but he called the Soviets "hypocritical" for pulling out of arms talks. "We've got to start reaching out — to look them square in the eye — and then we can start making some changes."

Askew said ensuring verification in arms control negotiations is the key to a better policy. "Arms agreements aren't based on trust, they're based on the ability to verify."

Instead of a freeze on production and deployment of nuclear weapons, Askew said he believes this country should "put a cap on" the build-up of weapons. He doesn't support a freeze because he believes the United States must maintain a strong deterrent. "It's something like a frost instead of a freeze," he said describing his arms control policy.

Askew also criticized Soviets saying, "The Soviet policy has not been to negotiate, but to drive a wedge between us and our allies."

Mondale is choice of most area legislators

By Mark Leonard
Staff Writer

The majority of Iowa City area legislators say they will be supporting former Vice President Walter Mondale in the Iowa caucuses Monday.

State Rep. Minnette Doderer, D-Iowa City, a Mondale supporter, said any of the eight Democratic presidential hopefuls could defeat President Reagan.

"I don't think that Ronald Reagan has represented the people of the United States," Doderer said. "He's cut education. He's cut welfare to the poor. He's cut about every worthwhile program he can find."

"But he is a good actor and he's been able to fool a lot of people. I think people, however, are starting to realize that and, at this point, anyone should be able to beat Ronald Reagan."

Doderer said she endorses Mondale because of his record for supporting minority and civil rights and education.

Rep. Richard Varn, D-Solon, said he is also supporting Mondale in his bid for the presidency.

Varn said Mondale has the experience to correct the "waste, fraud and mismanagement that characterizes" the Reagan administration.

"My biggest concern right now is the federal deficit," he said. "I think we need someone who is going to take a reasonable look at military procurement and someone who will be able to defeat Reagan this fall."

State Sen. Art Small, D-Iowa City, is also supporting Mondale.

"I like the basic direction that Mondale has taken in his campaign," Small said. "I've been very pleased with his approach."

RECENT POLLS have shown Mondale is still favored by the majority of Iowa Democrats. While Mondale's campaign has been gaining support, Ohio Sen. John Glenn, has been losing ground here.

Sen. Joe Brown, D-Montezuma, said, however, he will support Glenn in the caucuses.

"One year ago I really felt (Glenn) had the best opportunity to defeat President Reagan," said Brown, who is a member of Glenn's Iowa steering committee. "Although he's been slipping some in the national polls, I still feel he is an attractive candidate."

But Brown said he could probably support any of the other Democratic candidates.

"I'm really not displeased with any of the eight candidates," he said. "What is important is to stop Ronald Reagan from being re-elected. That is the most outstanding, dangerous thing that could happen to any of us."

Brown's second choice among the Democrats is Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo.

"My wife is for Senator Hart. That shows you how much influence I have," he joked.

Rep. Jean Lloyd-Jones, D-Iowa City, said she is still undecided.

"I've leaned toward just about all (the candidates) in the past three months," Lloyd-Jones said. "I'm looking to find someone who can beat Reagan. I think that's part of my problem."

Half of area Democrats back no candidate

By Mary Tabor
University Editor

By anyone's count about half of Johnson County's Democrats are still not committed to any presidential candidate with the Iowa caucuses just four days away.

Campaign staffs and party leaders are skeptical about how many Democrats will even show up at their local precinct gatherings Monday night. Most blame the disinterest on the long and intense lobbying waged by the eight Democratic contenders.

"It's a real lackluster interest out there right now," said Pat Gilroy, Johnson County Democratic chairwoman. "Some people just say the hell with it. ... There's just not that much excitement."

She estimates about 55 percent of the county's Democrats have not chosen any candidate.

Poll results from January and early February consistently place former Vice President Walter Mondale in the lead with Sen. John Glenn tucked comfortably in second place. An ABC-Washington Post poll conducted after a Jan. 15 New Hampshire debate found about 17 percent of Iowa's registered Democrats and Independents partial to the party couldn't decide on any of the candidates.

BUT LOCAL CAMPAIGN operations are working like mad to pull these undecided voters into their camps. And the farther down in the opinion polls their candidates appear — the greater number of uncommitted voters they say they find.

Reid Wilson, regional coordinator for Mondale, said that as of Feb. 1, 25 to 30 percent of the county Democrats are not yet backing any candidate.

Wilson expressed some frustration with trying to jolt apathetic local Democrats into action. "People don't pay attention ...," he said.

Glenn, by most assessments, is still jockeying for a solid second place finish in Iowa. The ABC/Washington Post poll and a national Gallup poll conducted in mid-January both gave him 16 percent of the vote.

J. Patrick White, Glenn's Johnson County coordinator, said, "Probably half of those we are expecting to attend the caucuses responded 'no preference' as of last weekend."

Although more Democrats are making up their minds as the caucuses approach, White predicts a "modest turnout" Monday night. "We have been disappointed, as I suspect all the campaigns have been, with the disinterest. 'The candidates have simply not succeeded in exciting people.'"

Iowans working for Sen. Alan Cranston concede that a third place finish in Monday's contest is likely.

YET LOCAL CRANSTON staffers claim their canvassing as of Feb. 1 found undecideds outnumbering Mondale supporters two to one.

Gertrude MacQueen, co-coordinator for Cranston's Johnson County campaign, pinned this down to about 37 to 40 percent of the Democrats without a favorite contender.

Both MacQueen and Reid drew a contrast between this year and 1980, when Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., challenged President Jimmy Carter for the party nomination.

"Turnout won't be as high (this year) as 1980, there's not the emotional battle there was between Carter and Kennedy," Reid said.

MacQueen recalled that Kennedy supporters like herself were alienated from the party in 1980. "We got testy. There's not as much antagonism today."

She said vigorous campaigning may be counter productive. "We are working so hard to turn them out, we may be turning them off."

After repeated calls from one candidate headquarters after another, "people get a tad testy," she said.

Although he is lagging in the polls, the organization for Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., has been among those actively canvassing local Democrats.

Jonathon Miller, Hart's Johnson County co-coordinator, pegged the number of uncommitteds at nearly 60 percent as of Feb. 9.

NOW-WE'LL PAY YOU TO ATTEND MEDICAL SCHOOL

In fact, we'll even pay you more than $575 a month while you attend. That's in addition to paying for your full tuition and required books and fees. It's all part of the Armed Forces Health Professions Scholarship Program. How does it work?

If you're selected for a Physician Scholarship—from the Army, Navy, or Air Force—you're commissioned as an officer in the Reserve. While you're in school, you'll serve 45 days a year on active duty, gaining valuable medical experience. After graduation, you will serve three or more years, the length depending on the requirements of the Service selected and years of scholarship assistance received.

As an Armed Forces physician you'll receive officer's pay and benefits, and enjoy the advantages of working regular hours. You'll also see a diversity of patients and have opportunities to use sophisticated medical technology. But most important, while you're in medical school we'll help pay the bills. For more information, send in the coupon. There's no obligation whatsoever.

Francisco Campbell, consular officer for political affairs at the Nicaraguan Embassy in Washington, D.C., explains his views on the relations between his nation and the United States during an interview in Van Allen Hall Wednesday afternoon. The Caucus on Central America and the UI Latin American Studies Program sponsored Campbell's visit to the UI.

Official calls public attention to U.S. foreign intervention

By Colleen Kelly
Staff Writer

The Caucus on Central America, a local group condemning all U.S. military intervention in that region, is attempting to rally support for its caucus resolution.

"The goal of the Caucus on Central America is to bring to the attention of the Iowa public the importance of the issue of Central America in this election year," UI History Professor Stephen Vlastos said Wednesday.

The group aims to have a resolution against U.S. military aid and intervention in "hot spots" such as El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras, Costa Rica and Nicaragua considered at local precinct caucuses Monday.

To promote their cause the Caucus on Central America sponsored several events this week on the UI campus. Francisco Campbell, consular officer for political affairs at the Nicaraguan Embassy, spoke Tuesday at Old Brick.

Campbell said in an interview with The Daily Iowan Wednesday, "We're worried that, as a result of the policies of the current administration of the United States, we might very well see a Vietnam-like situation at the heart of Central America."

CAMPBELL SAID the U.S. government has "virtually declared war on Nicaragua. In the past three and one-half years, the not-so-covert operations of the CIA are trying to overthrow the government of Nicaragua."

"The vehicle for these covert activities are the Somozan National Guards ... who, over more than 45 years, murdered more than 300,000 citizens of Nicaragua," he said. "These are the people that the U.S. administration is supporting."

The Caucus on Central America is trying to bring this opposition to U.S. intervention to a local level.

"We're trying to push the resolution throughout the state, but our resources are extremely limited," said Sheldon Pollock, UI professor of Asian languages and literature.

"We, at least, want to get every precinct in Johnson County (to support the resolution)," he said.

THE CAUCUS ALSO invited William Lucy, national secretary-treasurer of the American Federation of the State, County, and Municipal Employees, to speak at the UI.

Lucy was part of a special fact-finding mission last year to El Salvador by the National Labor Committee in Support of Democracy and Human Rights in El Salvador.

"Essentially, I'm just sharing my experiences of a trip I took to El Salvador and what I learned from the people who live there," Lucy said.

Campbell's speech was co-sponsored by the UI Latin American Studies Program. "We feel the need to educate the public and the university on this issue of considerable importance to our country," said Charles Hale, head of the program.

Arts and Crafts Center to offer mime workshop

A workshop for students interested in the art of mime will be held next Monday at 7 p.m. in the Union Hawkeye Room.

The two-hour session will be taught by Eric Wilcox, a former member of the Royal Lichtenstein Circus who now teaches at the Arts and Craft Center located in the Union.

Wilcox will begin with an explanation and demonstration of some of the exercises and warmup techniques required for mime.

The class will then proceed to master some basic mime gestures such as the wall, the rope, and the pressure walk.

A mime performance will conclude the workshop. If time permits, a Marcel Marceau film will be shown.

The session is free, but advance registration with the Union Arts and Crafts Center is required. Call 353-3119 for more information.

Nominations sought for fellowship program

Nominations are now being accepted for the Ada Louisa Ballard Dissertation-Year Fellowship Program for UI doctoral students in the humanities.

As many as three fellowships of approximately $5,000 plus tuition costs will be awarded to students on the basis of academic achievement and promise.

Candidates must have completed all Ph.D. degree requirements except the dissertation.

Nominations from sponsoring departments and programs should be sent to Dean Charles Mason of the UI Graduate College by March 9.

The late Professor Clarence E. Cousins, a long-time member of the UI French and Italian departments, bequeathed funds to support the fellowships stipulating that they be named in honor of his mother, Ada Louisa Ballard.

Former Crow's Nest to house insurance offices

What used to be the Crow's Nest bar, located in the Knight's of Columbus building at 328 E. Washington St., will soon be occupied by insurance and doctors' offices, according to Dick Burger of Burger Construction Co.

The building will house a Northwestern Mutual Insurance office downstairs and three offices upstairs. Two of those three offices have not been leased yet, according to Dennis Visser of Northwestern Mutual. Psychiatrist Vernon P. Varner, M.D., will have an office in the other space.

Remodeling began in November. The work is scheduled to be completed in July or August, Burger said.

Department of Spanish offers language practicum

Habla espanol con sus amigos! Again this semester the Department of Spanish and Portuguese is offering a Spanish Language Practicum for students who speak Spanish.

Every Tuesday at 5:15 p.m. participants meet in the Hillcrest North Private Dining Room. The practicum consists of dinner, conversation in Spanish and a short presentation of cultural interest.

The practicum is open to all students with Spanish speaking ability equal to at least the intermediate level.

Spanish Assistant Professor Philip Klein said only about half of the approximately 25 students participating in the practicum are presently enrolled in a Spanish class. The rest already know Spanish, but want to keep practicing their language skills.

One hour of academic credit can be given to those people attending 12 of the sessions. There is a $3.80 charge for those not holding a board contract.

Local roundup, compiled by The Daily Iowan staff, is a weekly feature designed to keep track of events of local interest.

Resistance filed to Eaton retrial

By Patricia Reuter
Staff Writer

Attorney John Hayek and Assistant City Attorney Dave Brown filed a resistance Tuesday in Johnson County District Court to former Iowa City firefighter Linda Eaton's motion for a new trial.

Eaton filed a motion Feb. 8 asking the court to rule in her favor despite the jury's verdict, or for a new trial. She lost her sex discrimination and harassment lawsuit against the city and three of its top officials Feb. 2.

Reasons given for the defendants' resistance to Eaton's motion are:

- That a jury verdict was appropriate in deciding Eaton's civil rights claim. In her motion, Eaton stated that her claim concerning the violation of her civil rights under Chapter 601A of the Iowa Civil Rights Act was an "equitable action" and should have been decided by a judge rather than a jury.

Courts

- That the judge's decision to allow the defendants eight challenges in jury selection while allowing four to the plaintiff was proper because "there were multiple defendants represented in (the) case by different counsel."

- That the court's rulings on the exclusion of the Iowa Civil Rights Commission decision, polygraph results and other evidence Eaton's attorney, Clara Oleson, regarded as pertinent to the case were "correct and appropriate."

1. If the odor is strong, leave the building. Avoid producing any fire or sparks. Don't smoke or turn any electric switches on or off.
2. Use a neighbor's phone to call Iowa-Illinois. Your phone could create a spark and ignite the gas.
3. If you know where your main gas service valve is and can turn it off safely, do so.
4. Let only an Iowa-Illinois service person turn your gas back on and relight your pilot lights.
5. If there is a faint odor, follow your nose to the source. It might be a pilot light that is out or maybe you have left a gas burner part way on. If you can't find the source and the odor persists, call Iowa-Illinois. We will check it out.

Natural gas is odorless in its natural state so we add an unpleasant smell for your protection. That way gas is easy to detect if it escapes.

Gas leaks should be taken care of promptly by experts. Natural gas has an excellent safety record but special care must be taken to use it safely.

Walkout

letter-writing campaign on campus, during which tables will be set up to encourage students to write to their state legislators.

THE UNDERGRADUATE task force also told the group of T.A.s "whatever we decided at this meeting (Wednesday), they are going to support, within reason," Martin said.

"It seems the undergraduate groups are pretty keen to do something, but some people on the task force are pretty ambivalent to any sort of action besides letter-writing," he added.

The T.A.s hope the action will encourage the Iowa Legislature to restore some of the funding the governor recommended be reverted to the state. The proposed reversion has yet to be approved by the legislature's joint subcommittee on higher educational appropriations.

"It's not out yet," Martin said. "Another thing, too, is the faculty raise still hasn't been voted on yet. We still have a chance to use the media and make the people understand that this (the UI) is an important institution."

Humy said: "This (walkout) will get enough media attention to alert the parents that they will be bearing the brunt of the cost of the cuts. I really think if the parents are made to understand that, they will react and Branstad will do something about it."

SOME T.A.s expressed concern that the walkout could be viewed by the administration and the people of Iowa as a negative move.

Henry Jenkins, UI rhetoric T.A., said the walkout might "alienate" people in the state.

"We don't want them to watch the 6 o'clock news and have their blood pressure go kapoosy. We don't want to look like a bunch of long-hairs who didn't want to teach that day," he said.

"It would seem a bit counter-productive if we lost ground with them. Then we'll have people writing their legislators saying, 'We don't want these long-hairs teaching our kids.'"

But UI Rhetoric T.A. Patrice Petro disagreed. "This is not the '60s, it's the '80s," she said. "I think we would get undergraduate support, and I don't think we would be perceived as people going out and having some Machiavellian fest."

She added, however, "To be taken seriously, we have to act in a serious manner."

MARTIN SAID: "A lot of people are of different opinions about this. Striking or boycotting doesn't rest easily with them. But if they can hold classes elsewhere that day, they don't have to cross the picket line — that is, if any students even show up."

Some of the T.A.s also questioned whether participation in the walkout could cost them their jobs.

But Humy said, "You've lost your job already. If this cut goes through, you've got nothing to lose — you've already lost it."

Despite some comments that the idea is "cheap" and "frivolous," there were only 10 dissenting votes against the walkout and picket. A committee will draft a letter inviting the other T.A.s to participate.

"The majority of us are not going to teach on Wednesday and another group of graduates students are looking for alternatives such as mass teach-ins somewhere or meeting elsewhere," Martin said.

"It is beholden on every single one of you to spread this," he said.

Regents

Currently, the UI is increasing mandatory student fees by about 49 cents per student per semester, McMulin told the board. She said she believes USI would "maybe get a dime" from the increase because the amount of money to be allocated is already targeted for existing UI organizations.

Philip Hubbard, UI vice president for student services, countered McMulin by saying the significant increase in UI enrollment would increase the overall amount of mandatory fees. He said there would be 17 percent increase in mandatory fees.

"The fees are not as fixed as Sharon (McMulin) would assume they are," Hubbard said. The amounts to be allocated by the student government are "not locked in."

At Iowa State University the Governing Student Body voted Feb. 8 in favor of a 65 cent per-student per-semester mandatory student fee allocation for USI, instead of voting in favor of the referendum approved by the UI and UNI's student governments.

After the regents' decision Morton said he felt the regents depended too heavily on the survey ISU's GSB took of its student body. He said that poll of 9,999 students was not intended to show favor or disfavor for USI receiving funding.

THE POLL, taken during spring registration, showed only 7.3 percent of ISU students favored a negative checkoff — a funding mechanism similar to automatic-refundable fees. Regent John McDonald again asked whether USI had a representative sample of all three regent schools. "Wouldn't it be possible to do the same as at ISU to get more turnout?"

But McMulin said, "I want to know why democracy is good enough for student government elections and a referendum is good enough for a city issues — and neither one applies for USI."

HOW TO CAUCUS YOU CAN MAKE A DIFFERENCE!

At Caucuses we help decide our party's platform and we choose which candidates are viable. The Iowa Caucuses are especially important because this is the nation's first test of the issues and the candidates. This makes our involvement significant and powerful.

What's The Purpose of a Caucus?

1. To discuss resolutions and priorities of the party.
2. To elect delegates to the county convention.
3. To support a presidential candidate.

Helpful Hints

1. Before attending your caucus decide what you want to accomplish. Do you want to pass certain platform issues, be a delegate to county convention, support your presidential candidate?
2. Be as informed as you can.
3. Encourage friends and supporters to go with you.
4. Make your statements brief and articulate.

More time needed

Ever since some high-powered commissions handed down their indictments of the U.S. education system last year, educational reform has ranked as a major preoccupation among politicians, right up there with reducing nuclear arms and unemployment.

If not preoccupied, the Iowa Legislature is a bit prematurely occupied with an educational reform proposal of its own. The bill, which made it through the House Education Committee last week, focuses on teachers: how they're educated, tested, certified and evaluated. Although the bill was somewhat hastily concocted, it raises the right questions about professional standards for teachers and contains provisions that — with some studied and unhurried tinkering — could give Iowans better-prepared teachers in the years to come.

If the measure becomes law, prospective teachers would have to pass a competency test in writing, reading and math while still in college. New teachers would be given a one-year provisional certificate, a slightly lighter teaching load the first year and help from the school district in professional development. These provisional teachers would then undergo an evaluation by a team made up of an administrator, a teacher chosen by the school board and another teacher chosen by the "intern." Before getting final professional certification, teachers would have to pass a competency examination in their subjects; their certificates would expire every five years, with renewal subject to a continuing education requirement.

The bill would also set up a new state-level panel to oversee teacher education, testing and certification requirements. The panel — to be composed of three teachers, a principal, a superintendent, an education-college faculty member and a member of the general public — would take the teacher certification chores away from the Board of Public Instruction, on which teachers are currently prohibited from serving by law.

Honest and competent educators could argue about the exact structure of these provisions, but for the most part they indicate a change in the right direction.

Peer evaluation would be sensible. Many administrators are less concerned about teaching methods than about maintaining discipline in their buildings. To them, good teachers are those who have few or no discipline problems, poor teachers keep sending unruly students to their offices. Input from teachers in the evaluation process could provide often harried administrators with some front-line educational insight.

The stipulations for more stringent testing and certification, if embraced by teachers, could give them the credibility to be taken seriously as professionals and a right to a voice in determining standards for their profession.

The new education panel called for in the bill would give teachers that voice. But since teaching is essentially a public, not private, profession, the public deserves more than a token voice on the new board. Perhaps the size and composition of the board could be worked out so that all the involved parties have meaningful representation.

Legislation of this sort should probably wait at least until next session. Political parties and factions in the education profession shouldn't employ hasty maneuvers and blitzkrieg legislative strategies just so they don't "lose" the issue of education, the way the Carter administration lost Iran or the Reagan administration is losing Lebanon. The legislature's own citizens' task force is not due to report its recommendations on education reform until late this year. Deliberate study, plenty of cool-headed debate and solid compromises over the next year would strengthen the bill and the quality of education in Iowa.

Nestle loses in effort to reform

NEWAS flashed around the world last month: It's all right now to buy Nestle candy bars, or stay in Stouffer hotels or drink Nescafe and Taster's Choice instant coffees. Or serve Lean Cuisine frozen dinners or buy Libby's canned fruits.

A world boycott of Nestle products, which lasted six and a half years, is being called off. It was an intense battle, the fiercest and most emotional ever waged against a major multinational company. And it was successful, not so much because it resulted in any significant downturn in Nestle sales (there's not much evidence of that) as in the significant change in corporate conduct that it brought about.

In the end the boycotters got what they wanted. And Nestle emerged as a better company, one that recognizes the need to pay attention to critics, even if they are small in number.

At issue here was the marketing of infant formula in Third World countries. Nestle is the leading marketer of this product, although that accounts for only 2.5 percent of its total business. The Swiss company came under attack 10 years ago when questions were raised about the possible harmful effects of substituting bottle milk for breast milk.

Critics charged that infant formula companies were contributing to poor health in underdeveloped areas by promoting their products and thereby persuading mothers to give up the breast-feeding of their babies. They claimed, first of all, that it's healthier for babies to be breast-fed. Beyond that, they pointed out that the use of infant formula in many backward countries could be very dangerous because of contaminated water supplies and lack of knowledge on how to properly prepare the formula (bring it to a boil, for example).

THAT'S putting the charges in mild form. Nestle was rocked in 1974 when a small Swiss activist group, whose membership totaled 17, published a booklet called "Nestle Kills Babies." The company was shocked. And its reaction? File a libel suit.

The case dragged on for two years, and it soon became clear that the company was on trial. The judge ruled finally that the booklet was libelous, but he added, "If the company wishes to avoid the charge of immoral and unethical behavior in the future, it must change its promotional practices."

Church organizations, consumer activists and nutritional groups around the world picked up on the judge's admonition. The fight against Nestle began, and the international boycott was soon in place. The boycotters won a great victory in 1981 when the World Health Organization adopted a code governing the marketing of infant formula products. It called, among other things, for no direct marketing to the consumer, sharp restrictions on free samples and educational literature warning about the possible dangers of using infant formula, including a statement upholding breast milk as the best source of food for babies. When the WHO code was approved by the United Nations General Assembly, the U.S. delegation cast the only negative vote.

While the boycott continued, Nestle began moving to implement the code in many countries across the world. In addition, in 1982 it made a truly unprecedented move in the annals of corporate history by establishing in Washington, D.C., an Infant Formula Audit Commission headed by former Secretary of State Edmund Muskie and composed of leading people from the academic and religious worlds. Two examples: Dr. Lewis A. Barnes, chairman of the pediatrics department at the University of South Florida College of Medicine; and J. Philip Wogaman, dean of the Wesley Theological Seminary in Washington, D.C.

THE COMMISSION was set up to audit Nestle's compliance with the WHO code. It fielded all complaints from people accusing Nestle of violations of the code — and it investigated each one. Members of the commission went to countries around the world to make on-the-spot inspections of Nestle conduct in the marketing of infant formula. The significance of the commission was its complete independence from the company. Nestle put up all the money for the commission, but had no say on how it was to operate. So the commission was free to — and did on occasion — criticize the company for not living up to the code. In other words, this was a commission that could bite the hand that fed it.

It was actions such as these that led the protest groups to recommend the end of the Nestle boycott.

There were some ironic overtones. Nestle, the target of this long boycott, has now emerged as the leader in the implementation of the WHO code. Its competitors are the laggards. And as a result, Nestle has lost market share to companies that have not been so scrupulous in adhering to the internationally adopted code of marketing conduct. There was, for example, this report filed from the Philippines by commission member Robert C. Campbell, general secretary of the American Baptist Churches:

"The Nestle people indicate that they discontinued sampling in December 1982, but all competitors have redoubled their efforts in sampling. One physician indicated that this had resulted in Nestle's moving from first place to a poor third in market share."

All democracies not created equal

IN HIS MANAGUA office last year, one of Nicaragua's strongmen surprised us by what he didn't say.

Carlos Nunez Tellez, a member of the nine-man directorate overseeing Nicaragua's transition to democracy, didn't mention that the United States had applied a higher standard of democracy to his country than to many U.S. allies.

That would have been a logical complaint for someone looking for a way out of a promise to hold elections. While Nunez might have been holding back his editorial opinions, we concluded that the Sandinistas were more serious about democracy than Ronald Reagan would have us believe.

But George Shultz, after playing golf in Brazil, sees ominous indications in Nicaragua's recent decision to postpone consideration of a draft of electoral legislation, originally scheduled for last week. While the Sandinistas justified the delay on evidence of air raids by U.S.-backed rebel forces, Shultz insisted that Managua was "only too ready to back off from elections."

Shultz's denunciation was symptomatic of a consistently belligerent U.S. response to positive steps taken by Nicaragua toward free elections. Within the last year, the Sandinistas have reviewed democratic systems around the world (including that of the United States), drafted procedures for the election of executive and parliamentary officials and devised formulas for aiding opposition parties. They were going to announce an election date on Feb. 21, the 50th anniversary of Augusto Sandino's assassination.

MEANWHILE the United States has continued to back rebel incursions into Nicaragua and to bolster its own military presence across the border in Honduras. As Shultz underscored in Brazil, the U.S. posture has been that "an election just as an election really doesn't mean anything. There are elections in the Soviet Union."

One would guess that some officials within Shultz's State Department were embarrassed to hear such wisdom from their boss, since the same could be said for dozens of U.S. allies.

Democracy's recent success in Argentina, Spain and Venezuela has masked the Soviet-style electoral shams practiced by numerous Western nations.

There are many unambiguous farces: Chile, Paraguay, South Africa and Zaire are just a few of them. When "elections" take place in such countries, the victor always seems to win with 99 percent of the vote. Potential opposition is muzzled, reformism is essentially rhetorical and terms of office are generally measured in coups.

Then there are those authoritarian regimes that are making "progress." In Brazil, for example, a much-heralded "opening" has yet to produce a popular election for president. When current President Joao Figueiredo, a former army general, steps down next year he will turn over Brazil's reins to a successor chosen by a government-controlled electoral college.

SIMILARLY, rumblings in Egypt about possible recognition of the New Wafd party as that country's official parliamentary opposition have only triggered protest from such long-standing political organizations as the Socialist Labor Party, which has been virtually limited to visitor's status in the Egyptian Parliament.

In Turkey political parties are banned. Haiti's President-for-Life Jean-Claude Duvalier has no tolerance for political opposition. Even Mexico is virtually a one-party state in which elections are decided when the dominant party nominates its candidate.

This isn't to suggest the obvious; that one bad apple justifies another. Though Nicaragua has been held to a higher standard than many of its neighbors, it can only benefit from a strict adherence to democratic reforms and practices.

But the Reagan administration seems averse to embracing Nicaragua even as democracy emerges there. Three human rights groups argued in a report issued last month, "It is plain... that promotion of human rights in Nicaragua is not the Reagan administration's principal aim." Progress toward free elections, in fact, would not be in the interest of a policy aimed at toppling the Sandinista government.

In that light, the administration's rhetoric about elections in Nicaragua is not only the worst hypocrisy, but also a degradation of democracy itself.

Facing nuclear reality

Karl Marx said that religion is the opiate of the masses because it helps placate the people and suppress their thinking. One church in Ames, Iowa, however, is proving to be more clear-headed about nuclear war than most of the people in our government.

St. Thomas Aquinas Catholic Church's parish council has decided to remove its fallout shelter signs and inform the Defense Department that it will not participate in the federal nuclear crisis relocation system. Their reasoning is simple: Of what use is a shelter in case of a nuclear war?

Last March the church received a new radiation detection kit — which didn't work — for its bomb shelter. Church members decided the government must have had some plan in mind for the shelter, but after investigating the effects of nuclear war, the members couldn't conceive what that plan might be. They learned from their study that the shelter really could "provide no shelter" at all.

But the church members later found out the government had plans to house 160 people in the shelter, shipping food in from stocks at nearby Iowa State University. Such plans, the members decided, were preparations for a protracted nuclear war. They sanely considered it morally wrong, and indeed foolish, to think such a war could be won.

During this election year, President Reagan has also said a nuclear war could not be won. He claims now to be a man of peace wanting to negotiate an end to the arms race. But, as usual, his actions over the last three years speak louder than his words. He still has made no serious effort to slow the arms build-up and the Defense Department continues to plan for a war without winners.

In light of the recent actions of the Ames church and the U.S. Catholic Conference of Bishops, if Marx were alive today he may have turned to the churches for some clear thinking about nuclear war and world destruction. It's too bad the president doesn't.

Circulatory disease

To the editor:
Doesn't DI stand for Daily Iowan and not for Delivery... 1) Incompetency 2) Irresponsibility, or 3) on Impulse? Well you could've fooled me! Isn't it true that a small portion of the tuition that we students pay goes to the DI? This semester, and frequently last semester, my roommates and I haven't, and didn't, receive our copy of the DI regularly. When we are missing our DI, we report this to the circulation department. In the past, we've received responses and excuses such as, "We'll take care of it; you'll get a paper tomorrow." "Maybe your carrier had a bad day." "Maybe he ran out of papers." "Someone threw your carrier's papers into the sewer." "You seem to be the only ones in your area having a problem." And, "Are you a student or a subscriber?" What difference does that make? Aside from not getting "today's" DI, we didn't see "tomorrow's" DI on various occasions as promised. Now, after getting one DI in four days and being promised "tomorrow's" paper (which we never saw), we are told that our carrier quit three days ago — on the only day we got a DI.

One rainy day last semester, I pointed out to the circulation department that two stacks of people didn't get their DI's because I saw two stacks of soggy newspapers on a street corner during the late afternoon.

crossroads on the Mediterranean coast.

The rout of the Lebanese army came amid intense speculation that Gemayel would soon abrogate the May 17 Israeli-Lebanese troop withdrawal agreement as demanded by Syria and opposition leaders.

PHALANGE RADIO SAID Tuesday Gemayel would make a "historic announcement" soon but there was no indication when, or if, it would be made.

Lebanon's main right-wing Christian Phalange militia group, the Lebanese Forces, urged Gemayel to uphold the agreement with Jerusalem and said it was pressing for possible Israeli intervention because of recent gains by the

Candidates

Mondale: Favors a simplified, more equitable tax code, similar to several introduced in Congress. He will raise about $60 billion in taxes by 1989 by deferring indexation of taxes with reforms to protect low and moderate income Americans. He would cap the third-year of the tax cut for people with yearly incomes of more than $60,000. He would impose a 10 percent surcharge on people earning $100,000 or more yearly, enact a 15 percent minimum corporate tax and "end wide-range loopholes and abuses in the corporate tax code." He would also adopt a compliance program to reduce $90 billion in annual tax evasion.

Can American competitiveness be restored in world markets without resorting to protectionism? How?

Askew: "Our country must face international competition head on and not flee from them with protectionist measures. The enactment of protectionist legislation such as the automotive domestic content bill, which would require automobiles sold in the United States to be built with up to 90 percent American parts and labor, would be harmful to a state like Iowa, which relies so much on open markets abroad for agricultural exports."

"The nonpartisan Congressional Budget Office has estimated that the domestic content bill could raise new car prices as much as $1,000, cost three jobs for every one saved, and could lead to retaliation against U.S. exports totaling more than $15 billion. And, American agriculture would be the first casualty in an exchange that could lead to the unraveling of the world trading system."

Cranston: Believes that American competitiveness can be restored in world markets without protectionism. One of the points in his nine-point plan to achieve full employment is to expand U.S. export markets to "restore the nearly two million jobs that have been lost due to the decline in American exports over the past two years."

"With lower interest rates we can bring down the exchange rate for the dollar from the disastrous increase of 25 percent in recent years. This unrealistic price for the dollar has been the most destructive single blow to our export industry."

Glenn: "We need a comprehensive and coherent trade policy that draws on our native strengths of foresight, ingenuity and common sense. We must steer a middle course avoiding the slogans of 'free trade' and 'protectionism'."

Glenn wants a reduction in the deficit to bring interest rates down, reduce the over-valuation of the dollar and allow U.S. industries to compete on even terms at home and abroad. He also favors limiting imports temporarily to help American industry, and ensuring that the U.S. Export-Import Bank has the funding it needs to finance and promote U.S. exports.

Hart: "Yes, definitely. This can be done by cooperation between government, industry and labor to reinvest in and modernize our basic industries."

Hollings: Restoring competitiveness depends on reducing the federal deficit and high interest rates. High interest rates cause the dollar to be overvalued, and so the country can't compete abroad. He believes it should be the primary goal of the White House, the State Department, and the Department of Commerce to promote exports. "We need strong leadership to promote competitiveness abroad. Yet, if we discover that there isn't reciprocal access, we may have to protect ourselves."

McGovern: Does not support protectionism. He believes that U.S. competitiveness can be restored by bringing the value of the American dollar more into relation with other foreign currencies. This can be accomplished by reducing the deficit. Interest rates would then fall, discouraging foreign investment in the American economy, and restoring the dollar.

He would also restore American industry through grants and loans, and restrict companies investments in foreign countries.

Mondale: Would insist on a more open and fair system of international trade, combined with strengthening American education and industry, in order to compete with foreign countries. Other areas that need to be improved are job training, research and development, new technologies and implementation of new technology in plants and equipment.

What is full employment? How can full employment best be achieved?

rebels, who won control of west Beirut last week.

Israeli Defense Minister Moshe Arens said abrogation of the agreement would lead to a prolonged Israeli military presence in southern Lebanon.

Secretary of State George Shultz warned Syria the United States will continue to provide arms and ammunition to the hard-pressed Lebanese army and "to respond to those who attack or threaten the safety of our personnel."

In the last week, that response has included the most massive naval bombardments since the Vietnam War, with U.S. ships pounding Syrian-controlled positions around Beirut.

Askew: Full employment is "what you define it as." One problem is that most policies are geared toward retraining employees rather than encouraging the growth of small businesses. "We should be concentrating on encouraging the growth of small businesses, because that's where jobs are generated."

Cranston: Has campaigned on the theme of providing a job for every American who needs one. He unveiled a $23 billion jobs program Wednesday. Its major points include a multifaceted job training and job creation program and subsidies for employers who provide on-the-job training.

Glenn: We must address the problem of the deficit, which is keeping interest rates high and restricting needed job-creating investments. We must devote more resources to proven programs like Title I, compensatory education, and 'magnet' schools, so that no child passes through our school as a functional illiterate. We must increase access to training and education.

Hart: "Conventionally speaking, full employment is approximately a 4 percent unemployment rate, although this administration has allowed unemployment to climb much higher. It is imperative that we institute individual retraining accounts to allow workers to continually update their training and obtain the skills demanded by the marketplace."

Hollings: Believes the deficit must be reduced so American industry can create new jobs. He supports technical education and retraining for workers.

McGovern: Defines full employment as 3.5 to 4 percent unemployment. He supports full employment through public works. Would create jobs cleaning up the environment, rebuilding water and sewer systems, roads and bridges using money saved from military budget cuts. He wants to make American railroads "the best in the world by the year 2000."

Mondale: Believes "everyone who wants to work should have the chance to work." He thinks the "key to full employment lies in undoing Reaganomics," along with reducing the federal deficit, lowering interest rates, investing in science, education and job training. He believes "getting tough" in international trade and becoming more competitive with foreign countries will boost exports and create jobs.

Environment

What is the most crucial threat to the United States' environmental health?

Askew: "To suggest that our country suffers from one single environmental disaster worse than all the rest is indeed a foolish proposition."

"Americans along the coastal regions of California, Oregon and Washington feel that offshore oil drilling poses the most serious threat to their lands. Those Americans along the border between Canada and the United States feel that acid rain is the single worst threat to their environment."

"And those Americans in my home state of Florida feel the most serious environmental threat is that of coastal construction that occurs on Florida's beaches."

Cranston: Believes two of the most important threats to environmental health are toxic wastes and acid rain. He also says the existing environmental laws are not being enforced by President Reagan.

Glenn: The most crucial threat to U.S. environmental health is the continuous unsafe disposal of toxic waste. If alternatives to landfill disposal are not soon implemented, we will find our groundwater and drinking water being increasingly contaminated with these dangerous health-threatening chemicals.

Hart: "Nuclear war. Next I would say disposal of 17,500 toxic waste dumps. Third, I would say long-term safe disposal of nuclear waste. And fourth is probably a lot of things, continued progress in cleaning up the air, including acid rain."

Hollings: Believes not enough people realize that a dollar value cannot be put on the environment. The crucial threat to the environment is disinterest and lack of commitment for conserving resources.

McGovern: Cites the most crucial threat as uncontrolled toxic wastes.

Mondale: Top priority would be given to reducing toxic wastes, toxic substances in the work place, in the water supply and illegal dumping of toxic wastes. He also believes soil erosion and solving the problem of acid reiterated the United States "is not opposed in principle to an expanded U.N. presence in Beirut," but stressed, "We would have to study any proposal carefully."

U.N.

Speakes said a final decision would depend on the wishes of the Lebanese government and partner nations in the peacekeeping force. And while he said the Soviets "are in a position to be a force for good in the area," he took a skeptical view of Moscow's conditional willingness to accept such a force.

French President Francois Mitterrand has said French troops will remain in Beirut until a U.N. force is deployed. President Reagan has ordered Marines in Beirut redeployed to ships offshore. Italy and Britain are also pulling back their forces.

The Soviet Union, a longtime opponent of a U.N. force in Beirut, this week listed conditions under which it would drop its objections. They included the withdrawal of U.S. warships in Lebanese waters to a point where they could not hit targets in Lebanon.

Council president Shah Nawaz of Pakistan scheduled another meeting Thursday, when the United States and possibly the Soviet Union might address the issue.

There is no draft resolution before the Council but de la Barre de Nanteuil indicated he was working on one.

What would be your administration's strategy for gaining energy independence from imported petroleum?

Askew: No response.

Cranston: Supports an energy program that he says will let the United States gain energy independence from the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries by the year 2000. Major points include increased use of alternative forms of energy, such as solar, wind and geothermal energy; and greater efficiency standards for appliances, vehicles and other energy-consuming machines.

Glenn: Details a four-point program to gain energy independence. His first step: "Building competitive markets among fuels, suppliers and end-use devices so that energy services would be brought to the American people at their least possible cost. This would stimulate conservation, renewable and the environmentally safe use of coal."

Glenn would also establish a research and development program to bring new energy technologies to the marketplace.

His third step: "Reducing vulnerability to an oil cutoff and resulting high prices by accelerating the filling of the Strategic Petroleum Reserve, establishing regional reserves and giving the president standby authority to allocate supplies and mitigate price rises."

Glenn's fourth step: "Protect low-income households from the financially devastating effects of higher energy prices through a 10-year program of weatherization of all eligible low-income homes and through a supplementary program of low-income energy assistance."

Hart: "Very heavy reliance on energy conservation to reduce unnecessary consumption. A tariff or tax on imported oil — probably $10 a barrel — to encourage that conservation. And a resumption of the overall policy of energy independence of the 1970s that Reagan has abandoned. That is development of renewable, alternative supplies. Modest synthetic fuel industries, operating within acceptable environmental bounds and production of fossil fuels."

Hollings: Believes in funding the development of a wide variety of energy sources. He would fund the development of all energy sources.

McGovern: Would make a major effort toward energy conservation programs to reduce dependence on foreign oil. He supports energy-saving devices in homes, such as the use of awnings, and says individuals could save 25 percent if their houses were built with conservation measures in mind.

He would also favor a massive rebuilding of the railroads and mass transit programs.

Mondale: Would relaunch a national energy program to develop environmentally sound, renewable energy sources. The program would include incentives for conservation, and incentives for developing renewable resources such as bio-mass, wind and solar energy. He would also "promote the environmentally safe use of our abundant coal reserves."

Iowa coal has a high sulfur content; some people favor easing sulfur emission standards to help the Iowa coal industry, while others favor tightening controls to help solve problems such as acid rain. How would you balance economic and environmental costs in setting such pollution standards?

Askew: "We need to have stricter enforcement of the Clean Air and Water Act."

"We need immediate action to reduce the increasing hazards of acid rain, including passage of strong legislation to curb industrial emissions of sulfur dioxides. And efforts to work more closely with Canada toward a treaty that will allow our two countries to deal with acid rain."

Cranston: "As part of my comprehensive acid rain proposal, I advocate leaving to the discretion of the individual states the question of how to deal with each state's coal problems. I believe this is wisest from both the environmental and economic standpoints. My proposal calls for strong environmental standards, but would allow the state to meet those standards as economically as they so desire."

Glenn: Sponsored a bill to curb acid rain. By Jan. 1, 1986, the bill would reduce emissions of sulfur dioxide from electric power plants in the eastern United States by about 50 percent using existing and innovative technologies.

The program would be sponsored through a trust fund created by taxing electricity generated from fossil fuels in the eastern United States.

Hart: "We have to eliminate acid rain — that means a 50 percent reduction in sulfur dioxide emissions — but that doesn't necessarily mean totally relying on low sulfur coal. There are ways to pre-treat coal before it is combusted that reduce its sulfur content, and that would be one of the options utilities and power plants would have in meeting these statutory acid rain standards."

Hollings: Supports the Select Gas Use for Environmental Purposes bill which calls for burning natural gas with coal to reduce sulfuric acid emissions by one-third.

McGovern: "I believe that we can find methods to control the emission of sulfur-dioxide from coal burning plants so as to reduce the problem of acid rain. The cost of scrubbers and research into other methods of controlling sulfur pollution must not be borne only by the utilities and the consumer directly involved. Acid rain is a national problem. Any solution to the problem cannot involve turning one region of this country against another."

Mondale: Rejects the idea that a choice must be made between protecting the environment and protecting jobs. He says, "The records show it is possible to do both. The Clean Air and Clean Water act suggests that environmental standards are not only cost effective but also produce more jobs in the long run than they cost."

Regarding Iowa coal, Mondale believes the industry cannot survive without clean-burning coal. Therefore, he is in favor of investing in technologies that could be used to burn Iowa's and other high sulfur coal cleanly and efficiently. The technology would include scrubbing and washing coal, and a new process involving limestone and other methods that would allow the United States to burn the form of coal (high sulfur) it has in abundance.

Contamination of groundwater is a growing problem across the country. How would you prevent depletion of aquifers in the west and southwest and what can be done to prevent chemical contamination in the agricultural Midwest?

Askew: No response.

Cranston: "I support new legislation to protect underground aquifers from contamination from misuse of pesticides and improper disposal of hazardous wastes. Specifically, we should ban underground injection of hazardous wastes and phase out, wherever possible, landfill disposal of toxics."

Glenn: "There are no simple solutions to the problem of aquifer depletion in the Southwest and West. We must begin by implementing prudent water management and conservation measures. Next, we must protect the existing ground water supply from contamination. Once a ground water aquifer becomes contaminated, relatively little can be done to remove or contain the contamination. Finally, we must commit the necessary resources to research ground water depletion and recharge."

Hart: "I think there has to be a lot more careful irrigation practices in my part of the country to prevent the kind of reduction of the aquifers where they can't be recharged. It is a semi-arid area, there's not a lot of snow. I think (the part of the solution is) careful water conservation practices, and clearly, reducing the amount of chemicals — including fertilizers — that are used."

Hollings: Has no specific plan other than providing adequate funding to the Environmental Protection Agency to monitor point and non-point pollution.

McGovern: McGovern believes it may be necessary to place limits on the increasing use of water-intensive farming methods, so as to take into account the amount of water supplies available. "As president, I would appoint a national water use commission to conduct a comprehensive study aimed at providing data on the actual rate of growth sustainable by the aquifers."

Mondale: Would accelerate inspections and do everything possible (using the U.S. EPA Superfund) to prevent the further contamination of aquifers. He would coordinate an effort between local, state and federal representatives to more wisely conserve and manage water resources.

DCM ImageMaster®

Our Time Window Technology is now extended to the classic bookshelf speaker, in order to answer the need for a highly efficient speaker that wasn't a studio monitor. Speakers of that kind often need to be played loud, because that was their major design parameter.

ImageMasters give the accuracy and control of dispersion that DCM is famous for among Audiophiles. But, they allow you to hear all the inner detail and subtle blending of voices at levels you can live with—which are far below recording levels.

We use a linear phase design deriving from DCM's Time Window in a three way system. The speakers are built in matched pairs, to provide mirror-image left and right. This combination provides for more stable stereo imaging throughout a wide listening area than is normally attainable with bookshelf speakers.

We have also extended low frequency system resonance a full octave below studio monitors, without loss of efficiency. We did this by folding a four foot transmission line design into our enclosure.

This combination of virtues means ImageMasters can fit into any system, from a low-powered receiver to an Audiophile super amplifier. No one said you had to play below recording levels!

Iowa has built a tradition of Olympic swimming. During the past 22 years, Hawkeye swimmers and swimmers from other states and other countries, those tankers have been competing in the Olympics.

The highlight for Iowa came in 1948, when Hawkeye won the gold medal in the freestyle event at London. This summer, sophomore Williams would like to be a participant in the games in Los Angeles.

Gymnasts seek to avenge defeat

By Jill Hokinson
Staff Writer

Coming off of its first dual meet loss, the Iowa women's gymnastics team will try to avenge the loss this weekend in the first of two meets this weekend.

The Hawkeyes will compete in the Wisconsin Invitational Friday night and will host Iowa State Sunday at 1 p.m. in the Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

Iowa Coach Diane Chapela said she expects her young Hawkeyes to do well this weekend in the two meets.

Last year, a different Iowa gymnastics team didn't fare so well in the Wisconsin Invitational or the Iowa State meet. The Hawkeyes finished fifth out of six teams in the invitational meet, scoring a low 133.70, a score the Hawkeyes haven't seen at all this season.

Iowa also lost to the Cyclones last year in Ames, 173.25-140.70.

BUT THIS YEAR with a crop of young gymnasts on the team, the Hawkeyes are scoring in the 170 range and should do well in the two meets. Iowa posted its highest team total in last weekend's meet against Indiana State, scoring a 173.20.

At the Wisconsin Invitational Friday night, four of the five teams are also scoring in the 170 range this season.

Both Western Michigan's and Wisconsin's scores have ranged from 168 to the low 170s this season. Winona State, who Iowa has already competed against twice this season, has been scoring in the low 170s.

Northern Michigan will also be in the invitational meet but "has been a bit down this season in scoring," Wisconsin Coach Jenny Hoffman said.

BECAUSE OF THE comparable scores, who will win the meet is "up in the air," Hoffman said. "No team is seen as being better than the others; it'll come down to whoever has a good night."

With four of the five teams turning in about the same scores, the Wisconsin Invitational meet will be very competitive, but Chapela is confident of her team's abilities. "I expect it to be a close meet, but I expect Iowa to finish on top," she said.

The Hawkeyes have already competed against Winona and Wisconsin this season. The Iowa gymnasts lost to Winona, who finished first at the Iowa Invitational in December. Then they defeated Winona Feb. 4, at the Wisconsin-LaCrosse Invitational, capturing first place.

CHAPELA SAID SHE expects

Winona to once again be tough in the Wisconsin invitational. Winona is currently ranked No. 2 in the nation in the Division II poll. "Winona will probably be out to prove something in the meet like we did last time (at the Wisconsin-LaCrosse Invitational)," Chapela said.

Iowa also defeated the Badgers in a dual meet, Jan. 27 in Iowa City, 172.80 to 171.20.

"Iowa edged us out by a few points at Iowa," Hoffman said. "I thought our girls had a pretty nice meet in Iowa and Iowa looked very good when we met before."

The dual meet against Iowa State is also expected to be close, Chapela said. The Cyclones are also scoring in the low 170 range this season.

Chapela said the in-state rivalry will be a good incentive Sunday for the Hawkeyes to perform well.

This weekend, the Iowa men's track team has a dual role as half of the Iowa team will be competing in a dual meet with Western Illinois and the other half will be competing in the Central Collegiate track meet.

"Besides the NCAA meet," Iowa Coach Ted Wheeler said, "the Central Collegiate meet will be the biggest meet for our people this year."

Iowa's supposed 'B' team will host Western Illinois this Saturday at noon in the Recreation Building. Then Iowa's 'A' team will be competing in one of the oldest meets in the country as it head to Ypsilanti, Mich., for this weekend's competition.

"WELL RIGHT NOW we have Terrence Duckett in the 300 and the (mile) relay, Greer (Victor) in the 300 and relay, Mike Lacy in the triple and high jump up at the Central Collegiate meet," Wheeler said. "We will also have Caesar Smith in the 800 and Robert Smith in the 55-meter dash."

Mike Jones will be competing in the 55-meter hurdles. Gary Kostrubala and Norm Balke will be competing in the shot put. Vince Trammel and Bill Tyson will be competing in the 800 meters and Andy Wiese will be in the 1,000 meters.

Todd Wigginton will round out the Hawkeye competitors at the Central Collegiate meet.

Most of the Big Ten schools will be competing at the Central Collegiate meet along with schools from Michigan and Pennsylvania. The meet is to be held at the campus of Eastern Michigan.

THE DISTANCES AT Saturday's meet in Michigan will be a little different than what Iowa has been used to this season.

"We have a little bit of this and that," Wheeler said. "It's a combination of both meters and yards. We will have 55 meter dash and hurdles, the 300 yard dash, the 800 meters, the 1,000 meters and the relay will also be in meters (1,600)."

Iowa's record-setting mile relay team, after running 3 minutes, 12.40 seconds, last week at the Cornhusker Invitational, will be looking to qualify for the NCAA meet. All the Iowa team has to do to accomplish this is to cut two-tenths of a second off last week's time.

Western Illinois will field a young team against Iowa's 'B' team.

Memory of love, war underscores simple, valiant poetry of Amichai

By John Drury
Special to The Daily Iowan

YEHUDA AMICHAJ, who gives a reading Friday night at 8 in Shambaugh Auditorium, infuses all of his poems with "holy desire." The Israel he fought for (as a commando in the Haganah underground resistance movement) and the Israel he celebrates in every poem is a place of "wars in the desert and ... love among the orchards."

In his work, love poems are shadowed by battles and war poems are tinged with longing. This mingling of opposites is characteristic: history crowds into the present, time opens into the timeless, ghosts converse with the living. It is a rich, intense and very real world.

A new collection, Great Tranquility: Questions and Answers, has appeared within the past few months. Of the 75 poems in the book, the last one, the title poem, sums up Amichai's spiritual outlook and insight:

People in the painfully bright hall
Spoke about religion
In the life of modern man
And about God's place in it.
People spoke in excited voices
Like at airports.
I left them:
I opened the iron door over which was written
"Emergency" and I entered into
A great tranquility: questions and answers.

THE POEM RESEMBLES Walt Whitman's "When I Heard the Learn'd Astronomer," starting with the talk of a lecture hall and ending with the silence of the outdoors, but Amichai's lines are sparer. His conclusion is even more resonant than Whitman's simple gazing at the stars. The real dialectic, the real give and take of ideas, takes place within this tranquility.

Amichai is always attracted by opposites. He doesn't keep them apart; rather, blends them together:

We built ourselves a house of deadening wars

Yehuda Amichai

Readings

Like men of the far north
Who build themselves a safe warm house
Of deadening ice.

The natural idiom of his ideas is metaphorical, and the metaphors are stunning. Feelings and states of mind arise from the desert landscape, or appear in the objects of a room:

The hour
We woke early to part
Has stayed fixed in me, like an alarm clock
That needs to alarm no more, but just clicks.

Images of weight and lightness, in particular, recur throughout the volume:

But we, the living, get lighter from day to day,
Only our thrashing about grows
And makes the scales tremble in vain.

This concern with left shows a man who's burdened by history and a "long tradition" of sadness, which he takes personally, and a man who aspires to peace within his heart.

AMICHAJ SAYS OF HIMSELF, "I'm in the worry business." Nothing seems to escape his notice, or elude his sympathy. He looks so intensely at things, and feels them so acutely, his poems seem like measurements of values and valences:

I myself am like a thermometer:
Quicksilver inside and outside smooth and quiet.

His worrying is an outgrowth of the love and desire that permeates these poems. He senses the "prayers and dreams" that saturate the atmosphere of Jerusalem, "Like the air above industrial towns." His powers of observation are not limited to the visible.

There is much wit in these poems, but it's very dark, never far from tears: "Again love has ended, like a successful citrus season." Wit, of course, is the secret ingredient of metaphor, a quality that can make us laugh in sudden recognition:

If you've seen a barber sitting in a chair
In the evening and shaving himself in a mirror, You've seen how people live.

This passing glimpse may not be funny, but its swiftness and poignancy owe a lot to the wit of Amichai's perceptions.

Finally, it must be said that these poems are lyric and wise and spiritual as psalms, though utterly modern. The poems may be personal, but they go far beyond that, somehow tapping into a voice beyond what we know. Partly it is Amichai's uncanny knack for turning intimate speech into what Ted Hughes calls the "under-song of a people." Partly it is the compression and simple intricacy of the writing. A sense of loss may predominate, but the poet transforms it into joy:

Even
The flag at half-mast flutters joyfully
In the breeze. Even longing is a bunch Of sweet grapes from which they tread wine for feast and festival.

'Harold' dramatizes reality of apartheid

By Alex Wilding-White
Staff Writer

apartheid, n. (Afr. Dutch; lit., separateness): racial segregation; specif.: a policy of segregation and political and economic discrimination against non-European groups in the Republic of South Africa. — Webster's New Collegiate Dictionary

TOO OFTEN, even when feelings of opposition and contempt toward it are genuine, apartheid can be seen as something peculiar to the government of South Africa, a subconscious "it can't happen here." But the truth is that apartheid is just one manifestation of the dark side of human nature, one that cannot be controlled unless all of us confront it and see the full consequences of this deeply rooted social poison. Directly or indirectly, we are all affected by these or similar policies, be they law of the land, the actions of extreme groups, or company hiring practices.

A South African playwright who has personally and painfully felt the effects of segregation, Athol Fugard has channeled his anger into a substantial body of work noted for its bitterly personal approach to human injustices. Master Harold... and the boys, his most widely acclaimed work to date, will be presented at Hancher Auditorium tonight, featuring Zakes Mokae (rhymes with sky) — an accomplished South African actor and long-standing friend of Fugard — in the central role of Sam Semela. Mokae won a Tony award for this role in the play's Broadway run in 1982, a role for which Fugard himself felt, aside from their friendship, that Mokae was the best candidate.

In conjunction with the play's appearance, a conference will be held in the Union at 1 p.m. today to examine apartheid and its many social effects. The conference will feature lectures from Dr. Joseph Ascroft, a UI journalism professor who studied in South Africa, Dr. Peter Nazareth, UI English professor specializing in African literature, Dr. Michael McNulty, UI geography professor and Dr. Gordon Edelstein, director of the University Theatre's production of Fugard's A Lesson From Aloes (to run from Feb. 29 to March 11). A discussion led by Kim Tunnick, Dr. Wilbur Wilcox and Dr. Edelstein will follow.

DRAWN FROM personal experience, Master Harold centers around Hally, a young white boy, and Sam Semela, a black waiter in the hotel Hally's mother owns. Over the course of their friendship, Semela becomes something of a father figure to Hally, whose real father is crippled and an alcoholic. Hally's frustration and resentment toward his father, however, reaches a point where he lashes out at Semela, irrevocably severing their friendship. It is after this action that the true nature, the personal price, of racism hits Hally full force, leaving him a broken person. "I feel a compulsion," Fugard has said, "to be a witness, to tell the truth." The playwright once described Master Harold as "the portrait of the artist as a young fool." Difficult to write because of Fugard's feelings of guilt, the play seeks to make the audience look into themselves in sharing this personally tense and emotionally damaging episode. "You cannot witness destruction without being damaged," Fugard once commented.

While his plays make powerful social and political statements, Fugard's reputation is equally based in the meticulous crafting of his plays — a care that encompasses everything right down to the physical act of writing them. Fugard is said to choose a select pen for each play, retired upon the play's completion, and to write using a mix of inks unique to that particular play. A poet friend of his, upon seeing the handwritten manuscript of Master Harold, commented on its appearance by saying, "It looks like dried blood," an accurate description of the play's content as well.

Nazareth, in commenting on Fugard's literary qualities, said the playwright "avoids overt politics. Rather, he aims at an intense dramatic experience. There are only a few characters in his plays with intense interrelations." He also said Fugard's plays "do not have a direct relation between language and emotion, but lead, through a series of speeches, to a big moment of revelation." While Fugard's approach has drawn criticism from the left for skirting economic conditions (and from the right, for obvious reasons), Nazareth said "Fugard feels that individuals can bring about change. The relations are important." This is why the sparsity of characters and intensity of interactions are central to Fugard's themes.

ULTIMATELY, FUGARD'S integrity and moral stance derive from his attachment to his homeland, for, like many an exiled Russian writer, his creative energies lose direction outside the country that nurtured them. Mel Gussow, in an article for The New Yorker, wrote, "For all (Fugard's) rage about the injustices of South Africa, the country is his life support. He returns home for replenishment and sustenance (being forced often to premiere his works in other countries because of government censorship in South Africa). (At home), he achieves a certain discipline and unity. He can control his life and he refuels his tank of creativity. His country is the source of his art and without it he feels helpless."

As both Master Harold and A Lesson From Aloes are, to one degree or another, autobiographical, and because of Fugard's belief in the power of individuals to bring about change, it is easy to see why closeness to his source is so important. "My life's work," he once wrote, "was possibly just to witness as truthfully as I could the nameless and destitute of this one little corner of the world."

Tickets are still available for Master Harold... and the boys at the Hancher Box Office. Prices for non-students are $17, $14.50, $12, $9 and $6.50; UI students, $2 less on all seats. Those who simultaneously purchase tickets for A Lesson From Aloes will receive a $1 discount on their Master Harold tickets. A post-performance discussion will follow Master Harold in the Opera Studio, located in the Music Building.

Ethel Merman, 75, dies in Manhattan

NEW YORK (UPI) — Singer Ethel Merman, the brassy Broadway star who belted her way to fame with the song "I Got Rhythm," died Wednesday in her Manhattan apartment, 10 months after undergoing brain surgery. She was 75.

Merman underwent brain surgery in April at Roosevelt Hospital, where she worked as a volunteer on Wednesdays cheering up patients. When she was first stricken, the brass band-voiced star was preparing to go to the West Coast to perform a medley of Irving Berlin tunes at the Academy Awards show. She arrived at Roosevelt hospital by private ambulance and walked in on her own power for the brain surgery.

She was born Ethel Zimmerman on Jan. 16, 1909, in Astoria, N.Y. Her mother said Ethel began singing before she was 5. In later years, Merman bragged that she took George Gershwin's advice never to take singing lessons.

Perhaps, she told an interviewer, that was why her voice remained virtually the same through the years and she was still able to fill concert halls 50 years after she began.
