Unlike the Americans, who lost 265 troops in Lebanon, and the French, who lost 77, the Italians suffered only two dead and fewer than 30 wounded, mainly from stray bullets or by getting caught in factional crossfire.

Nagle views Iowa as fair about politics

By Jeff Eichenbaum
Staff Writer

Today more than 1,000 media correspondents wait in Des Moines to bring results of the Iowa caucuses to the world, but state Democratic Party Chairman Dave Nagle says this attention is not the only reason why Iowa should stay "first in the nation."

Explaining his views Sunday at the Old Brick Forum, Nagle said Iowa is a place where people are "fair, open and honest" about politics.

Iowa politics reflect what people strive for in America because "those (candidates) who have worked the hardest have done the best... The Iowa caucuses give every candidate a chance," Nagle said.

NAGLE SAYS THAT is the reason he has fought so hard to keep Iowa in the poll position for the national delegate selection process. The decision to allow Iowa to hold the first major political event of the election year came out of a "long history of negotiation," he said.

In 1980, a compromise between supporters of Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., and former Vice President Walter Mondale allowed New Hampshire to hold the nation's first primary and Iowa the first caucus.

But New Hampshire Republicans decided to move their primary from the original date in early March to Feb. 28. Because Iowa decided it had the right to be the first event, Nagle said the Iowa caucus date was also moved — from early March to Feb. 20.

The national Democratic party was unhappy with the changes, "but they couldn't punish the New Hampshire Republicans," so they tried to convince Iowa Democrats to move their date back. The Iowans couldn't be swayed.

"If we hadn't won, the 1,000 correspondents wouldn't be in Des Moines right now," Nagle said.

HE SAID IT will be tough to keep Iowa first in the future because every state could use the national attention and the approximately $12 million candidates and media have spent in the state.

Nagle also discussed the differences between holding a primary and conducting caucuses. "A primary is not a perfect system, nor is a caucus. But the total combined system works."

In primary states all people have to do is "go into a booth, pull the curtain closed, pull the lever and leave," he said. The candidates' emphasis is on getting media coverage, not on discussing the issues with the people.

"A caucus forces the candidates to meet the voters, not the cameras," he said. That is why Nagle "favors the caucuses." Nagle said Democrats who have been to one of Iowa's 2,495

U.S.-supplied aircraft crash

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador — Two U.S.-supplied UH-1H "Huey" helicopters on a counterinsurgency sweep collided Sunday, killing all 28 Salvadoran soldiers and crewmen on board, officials said.

A Defense Ministry spokesman said the crash was not caused by hostile action, although it occurred near a fiercely-contested village 80 miles northeast of San Salvador. However, the Sunday broadcast of rebel Radio Venceremos made no mention of the crash.

Hijacker shot aboard plane

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia — A hijacker was shot by a passenger moments after pulling the pin on a hand grenade. The grenade then exploded, killing 26 passengers aboard an Ethiopian military flight last week, diplomatic sources said Sunday.

Sources said the hijacker, an unidentified Ethiopian military officer, had demanded to be taken to neighboring Somalia. Pro-western Somalia is a favorite destination for defectors from socialist Ethiopia.

Pravda softens pitch to U.S.

MOSCOW — The Soviet Union indicated Sunday in its official newspaper, Pravda, that it wants improved relations with the United States. The message was devoid of the harsh language of most recent Soviet rhetoric. "The Soviet Union is most definitely in favor of agreeing on large-scale measures for strengthening trust," the editorial said.

A Western diplomat noted the omission of references to President Yuri Andropov's earlier demands the U.S. dismantle its European missiles. "It sounds like they are approaching the question of relations on a broader scale than just missiles in Europe," the diplomat said.

The Daily Iowan will correct unfair or inaccurate stories or headlines. If a report is wrong or misleading, call the DI at 353-6210. A correction or clarification will be published in this column.

In a story called "Heritage takes over Iowa City cable TV" (DI Feb. 10), it was incorrectly reported that Hawkeye CableVision charges $9.80 for basic service. Actually, the company charges $9.90 for basic service. The headline for the story was also inaccurate; Heritage Communications Inc. will take control of Hawkeye CableVision later this spring. The DI regrets the errors.

Reiland enters race for clerk of court

By Christine Walsh
Staff Writer

G.M. Ginger Reiland, a county deputy clerk of court, has announced her candidacy for Johnson County Clerk of Court.

Reiland is running because she "feels obligated" to give county taxpayers more efficient services.

Since the clerk of court is a liaison between local and state agencies and court officials, Reiland believes it is important the clerk be familiar with these agencies and their procedures.

Reiland has been with the clerk's office for 16 years, working mainly in the criminal division.

After graduating from Iowa City High School, Reiland worked at Iowa Pre-Flight School, and was transferred to the U.S. Department of the Navy in Washington D.C. where she was a secretary to two commanders and 11 engineers.

She is a charter member of the Johnson County Legal Secretaries, and served as president of that organization for two terms. She is also a member of the Iowa Association of Legal Secretaries.

Reiland said her experience, dedication and interest make her a "better qualified" candidate.

Reiland is the third candidate to announce her candidacy. Maureen Donnelly Taylor and Ed Steinbrech announced earlier.

CLERK OF COURT Mary Conklin has not yet announced whether she will seek reelection.

Taylor, a long-time Johnson County Democratic activist, announced her candidacy Jan. 16.

She is seeking the position because she believes her insight and organizational background will enable her to more efficiently operate the office.

Taylor co-chaired the Cutler for Congress committee in 1982, managed the county Democratic headquarters in 1980 and has served on the party's county and district central committees.

She has served on the board of directors of the Johnson County League of Women Voters since 1975, was finance specialist for the Iowa City Rehabilitation Program, and administrative supervisor for the U.S. Census in 1980.

Taylor believes it is time for a Democrat to win the county clerk's office and she is the most "active and visible" Democratic candidate. She adds that she is known to county Democrats as a "reliable, organized" worker.

Taylor was the first candidate to announce her bid. Ed Steinbrech was the second.

Mondale favored to lead caucuses; battle for second place heats up

DES MOINES, Iowa (UPI) — Former Vice President Walter Mondale was the heavy favorite Sunday to score a victory in Monday's Iowa caucuses — the first official vote in the 1984 presidential campaign.

Party officials predicted a turnout of 85,000 to 95,000 as eight Democratic candidates battled for the first votes of the year and their share of 50 Iowa delegates to the Democratic National Convention in San Francisco in July.

A new poll released Sunday, however, showed Mondale well ahead and the real battle being for second place with Sens. Alan Cranston, Gary Hart and John Glenn running neck-and-neck.

The candidates put the best light they could on the situation. Glenn said the poll did not mean his campaign was slipping. Cranston said he would finish a solid third in Iowa and Hart said he would come in "a solid third or fourth or even better."

MONDALE, WHO has put together one of the best political organizations the Democrats have seen in modern times, sought a "quick kill" in his drive for the nomination.

He hopes to combine a big win in Iowa with another win Feb. 28 in New Hampshire's first-in-the-nation primary, and then finish off his rivals in five primaries and four caucuses on "Super Tuesday," March 13.

Campaigning in Jacksonville, Fla., Mondale said: "I think we're doing well in Iowa. How well, we will find out tomorrow."

The final Des Moines Register Iowa Poll on the eve of the caucuses indicated Mondale is on the way to his first goal.

The former vice president had 44 percent of the votes in the poll, with a three-way battle emerging between possible second-place finishers.

Cranston of California had 17 percent; Hart of Colorado, 14 percent; Glenn of Ohio, 11 percent; former Sen. George McGovern of South Dakota, 7 percent, and Jesse Jackson, 4 percent.

THERE WAS NO measurable showing by Sen. Ernest Hollings of South Carolina or former Gov. Reubin Askew of Florida.

It was the first time Glenn did not rank a strong second in the poll. But the results were not surprising as there has been talk for weeks that Glenn was slipping while Cranston had a campaign organization second only to Mondale's. Hart too was viewed as moving up as he blitzed the state the last five days before the caucuses — spending more time on the stump than any of his rivals.

Glenn said he was not concerned with the poll because "polls are not that firmly locked into what the electorate is going to do."

"If we can get the sensible center — not just those who follow the powerbrokers and kingmakers — out to vote we will do very well" in the caucuses Glenn said on CBS's "Face the Nation."

As they struggled to catch up during the last 10 days of the Iowa campaign, the front-runner's rivals became increasingly anti-Mondale. Askew accused him of accepting a $43,700 fee for lobbying for a natural gas Alaskan pipeline, Glenn charged him with accepting illegal funds from labor and Hart said he was beholden to the special interests that have backed his campaign.

The charges became so bitter that Democratic National Chairman Charles Manatt sent a letter to all eight candidates asking them to tone down their infighting and not forget that the goal is defeating Reagan in November.

Evans petitioned to pull out forces in Lebanon, agrees to present list

By Steve Sands
Staff Writer

New Wave, a UI activist group, presented a petition of 850 signatures calling for the immediate withdrawal of all U.S. military forces from Lebanon to Rep. Cooper Evans, R-3rd District, Saturday morning at a town meeting in the Iowa City Civic Center.

But New Wave member Tom Wilson was not encouraged about the petition's chances of influencing any national leaders.

Evans promised to present the list of signatures to the White House staff, Iowa Sen. Roger Jepsen and the House Foreign Affairs Committee, but Wilson said after the meeting the petition will probably meet a "dead-end alley."

"If (President) Reagan wasn't president, it might have some effect. But Reagan is, let's face it, very conservative. He is a militarist and Cooper wasn't much better when I talked about the issue (during the meeting)," Wilson said.

WILSON SAID he was encouraged by Evan's willingness to distribute the petition and called the process of putting the petition together a good educational experience for New Wave members.

"We have had new people come forward to New Wave to work on Lebanon. There has been a lot of interest. Even though Reagan says we are getting out, there has been a lot of damage and shelling," he said.

Reagan has received a final plan for withdrawing most of the 1,470 Marines within 30 days, while a contingent of about 500 Marines will stay as advisers and military support units, according to reports from the White House.

Cooper Evans

During the town meeting, Evans said he was very pleased to receive the petition and offered to let New Wave use his Iowa City office to make copies of the petition for distribution.

HOWEVER, EVANS said he thinks Reagan understands the desires of the American public on the Lebanon issue. "I think we are taking steps to get out of Lebanon. I think we are going to do everything that we can to encourage the United Nations to take over responsibility, but I think we're having trouble finding some volunteers," he said.

Evans said he has no interest in introducing legislation in Congress to call for withdrawal of troops. Wilson said after the meeting that if Evans were really concerned about Lebanon, he might co-sponsor such a bill.

Wilson said New Wave will probably keep a low profile on the Lebanon issue for a while. "We are not going to push the petition anymore, but we want to study the developments and keep an eye on it. We'll talk to the experts and see if there is any change in the situation."

The petition drive began Feb. 14 and lasted four days. "I had people refuse to sign it, but nobody said we should be in Lebanon," Wilson said.

Evans, who is up for re-election in November, also commented on another important political issue — the federal deficit — during the town meeting.

"THERE HAS been some progress made (in the deficit), but let me say I don't know of any congressman who doesn't think it is a very serious problem," he said.

He noted the three-year $100 billion "down-payment package" on the federal deficit being worked out by a bipartisan coalition of national lawmakers and also said the growing economy should help reduce the deficit.

"My point to you is that it is not just some minor adjustment that will solve the problem. Given this dimension of the problem, we are not going to do it this year. We are going to make some steps," Evans said.

He said the deficit problem will probably not be solved in a political year, but added, "I do believe in '85 we have to face it squarely."

Planting project renews prairie land

By Dawn Ummel
and Scott Fiene

Project Green, a local community beautification organization, is encouraging landowners to plant native Iowa grasses and flowers in an effort to bring back the state's original prairies.

Planting prairies can return part of the land to its former condition, Seiberling said, and encourages a "low-maintenance form of vegetation."

Lon Drake, a UI geology professor, said the "nice part" about a prairie is "all you really have to do is keep out the brush and weeds."

Drake said there is "no one way" to reconstruct a prairie, but the standard treatment requires plowing the land, planting the prairie grass and flower seeds about one-half inch into the soil and compacting the seed into the soil.

"I just drove my truck back and forth over the soil" to bury the seed, Drake said.

PAUL CHRISTIANSEN, a Cornell

College biology professor, told about 150 people attending a prairie-reconstruction meeting held recently at the Iowa City Public Library that the majority of prairie plants are grassland.

"You have to realize what you're getting into because it's not a lawn," he said.

Christiansen said he took some students to a reconstructed prairie and the students thought "it looked like a hayfield that someone had forgotten to take care of."

After planting comes weeding, Christiansen said. "The more you weed, the faster the prairie will come on."

He said the grass should be burned off, not cut, "to assure a warm surface with dark soil absorbing the sunshine."

Christiansen said planting a prairie requires "patience and time but it's really not much of a challenge."

Drake said, "If you're after grasses and flowers it takes five to ten years. If you want a real native prairie with animals and native soils, it takes longer."

LANDOWNERS with larger plots can use a prairie as a wildlife habitat, or land on which to graze animals, Drake said. City residents' options are more restricted.

"You can either have rose bushes or prairie plants," he said.

Drake recommended that city residents interested in prairie reconstruction develop "a practice plot and see if you like it."

One of the largest restored prairies in this area is maintained by the National Park Service at the Herbert Hoover National Historic Site in West Branch.

Bill Wilcox, a park ranger at the site, said the prairie covers about 76 acres of ground that was once farmland.

The prairie was planted in 1971. Early this spring, alternate sections will be burned to kill weeds. By burning only a section at a time, wildlife will not be forced off the land.

Wilcox said the prairie was reconstructed to return the site to its condition during Hoover's time.

HE ADDED the reason Iowa has "some of the richest farmland in the world," is because prairies once thrived here.

Man found guilty of weapon charge

Timothy Alan Erickson of Roseau, Minn., was sentenced Friday in Johnson County District Court to 90 days in jail after being found guilty of carrying a concealed weapon.

According to court records, Erickson was found in possession of a loaded .22-caliber Ruger revolver in the sleeper compartment of his truck when he was stopped for a routine traffic check by police Aug. 7 on Interstate 80 near Oxford, Iowa.

Associate District Judge John Sladek suspended the 90-day sentence and placed

Courts

Erickson on probation with the Sixth Judicial District Department of Correctional Services.

Richard Scott Rapp of Centerville, Iowa, pleaded not guilty to a charge of second-degree theft Friday in Johnson County District Court.

Rapp is accused of the Feb. 1 theft of a 1981 Oldsmobile belonging to John Frazer. Court records state the car is valued at $7,000.

Rapp's trial is scheduled for May 14. Rapp was released from the Johnson County Jail after posting $5,000 surety bond.

Patrick J. Thiltgen of Guttenberg, Iowa, pleaded not guilty in Johnson County District Court Friday to a charge of false use of a financial instrument.

Thiltgen allegedly forged a check Jan. 19 from the First National Bank on the account of Keith Blair. According to court records, the check was written to Randall's Mini-Priced Foods, U.S. Highway 6 West, in the amount of $75.

Third party dominates funds —

By Mark Leonard
Staff Writer

Although a recent ruling by the Federal Election Commission (FEC) in primary elections are likely to remain dominated by political observers.

"It's not going to end the Rizzo of the Citizens Party the credibility of third parties another barrier that was."

The Federal Election Commission (FEC) said that Sonia Johnson, who is nomination for president, federal funds if she is able to raise them in 20 states.

The FEC specified that or less and money contributed by committees will not be counted.

"I don't think the ruling will have a significant effect," said Rolf C. Republican Party. "There are five third parties here in Iowa that seem to last over time."

RALPH BROWN, legislative director of the Republican Party, said he is receiving matching federal funds.

"This ruling will ensure that we are going to a candidate who is organized," Brown said.

Rizzo said the ruling could change American politics where coalitions to take advantage of the ruling.

"I think you might see a change in the ruling," he said. "Third parties are going to be able to take advantage of the ruling."

But Sharon Snyder, an Iowa City resident, said the ruling applies only to federal funds. She said she would not receive matching federal funds in the same situation.

Other third-party groups are waiting for the FEC advisory opinion on matching funds. Snyder said she is waiting for the ruling.

MARK DUNLEA, Johnson County manager, called the ruling "a disaster."

"It's definitely a first step that exist for the third parties to overcome. Republicans control all the money and make all the decisions. It's not going to get the majority of the money."

"This ruling is not good for the system or the dominance of the ruling party," Dunlea said.

Dunlea said the ruling in presidential election so "financed" third-party candidates. He said, however, the ruling for third-party candidates.

"What is difficult is not in 20 states. Places like Maryland and California is not a good place for us. It's places like Iowa that we need to be in."

Don Davis, treasurer of the National Campaign Committee, said he would not have much of an effect. "It's a step forward, but change are the laws governing the way we're just reinforcing the existing system. We're just reinforcing the existing system."

He says his two-volume relationship between the Judeo-Christian history of the last 19 centuries help us to understand how we can only help.

Third party won't dominate despite funds — analysts

By Mark Leonard
Staff Writer

Although a recent ruling will allow some third-party presidential candidates to receive matching funds in primary elections, the two major parties are likely to remain dominant, according to some political observers.

"It's not going to end their dominance," said Gary Rizzo of the Citizens Party. "What it does is add to the credibility of third parties and takes away another barrier that was separating us from them."

The Federal Election Commission ruled recently that Sonia Johnson, who is seeking the Citizens Party nomination for president, can receive matching federal funds if she is able to raise $5,000 in contributions in 20 states.

The FEC specified that contributions must be $250 or less and money contributed from political action committees will not be counted.

"I don't think the ruling is going to have a significant effect," said Rolf Craft, chairman of the Iowa Republican Party. "There have been some fairly active third parties here in the past, but they don't seem to last over time."

RALPH BROWN, legal counsel for the state Republican Party, said any third-party candidates receiving matching federal funds will have to be "viable."

"This ruling will ensure that the matching funds are going to a candidate who has shown he is organized," Brown said.

Rizzo said the ruling could signal a new period in American politics where third parties will form coalitions to take advantage of the matching funds. "I think you might see some interesting alliances forming," he said. "Third parties are going to take advantage of this ruling."

But Sharon Snyder, an FEC press spokeswoman, said the ruling applies only to the Citizens Party. "I would hesitate to say we are ruling that all third parties can receive matching funds, they would have to be in the same situation as the Citizens Party."

Other third-party groups, however, can file for an FEC advisory opinion to see if they can qualify for matching funds, Snyder said.

MARK DUNLEA, Johnson's assistant campaign manager, called the ruling an "important precedent."

"It's definitely a first step in breaking the barriers that exist for the third party. We have many obstacles to overcome. The Democrats and the Republicans control all the state legislatures across the country and make all the election laws. They also get the majority of the media coverage."

"This ruling is not going to end the two-party system or the dominance it has in this country," he said.

Dunlea said the ruling might affect the 1988 presidential election so that "three or four well-financed" third-party candidates could challenge the Republican and Democratic presidential candidates.

He said, however, the ruling does not make it easy for third-party candidates to obtain matching funds.

"What is difficult is not raising $100,000, but $5,000 in 20 states. Places like Massachusetts and New Jersey and California are not not where the difficulty will be for us. It's places like Iowa where the difficulty will be," Dunlea said.

Don Davis, treasurer for the Socialist Workers National Campaign Committee, said the ruling will not have much of an effect on his party.

"It's a step forward, I guess. What we have to change are the laws governing elections. Right now we're just reinforcing the two-party monopoly and appealing to the interests of the rich. What kind of effect this ruling will have is anyone's guess."

UI religion teacher receives fellowship

UI Religion Professor George Nickelsburg has been awarded a National Endowment for the Arts Fellowship for the 1984-85 academic year, making him one of only 129 such recipients from across the country.

Nickelsburg, 49, will take a year away from his UI teaching duties to continue researching a 1,300-page commentary on ancient Jewish writings called the "Book of Enoch."

He says his two-volume work may help better relationships between Christians and Jews by clarifying the Judeo-Christian tradition. "Given the history of the last 19 centuries, anything that can help us to understand how things became so messed up can only help."

The religion professor, who is composing the commentary on a personal computer, said eventually the results of his research may go beyond the scholarly world.

Challenges don't hinder feminist

By Tom Buckingham
City Editor

Sonia Johnson sees the world differently now than she did five years ago. Then she was a Mormon housewife, today she is seeking the presidential nomination of the Citizens Party.

Along the way she has learned to question such cherished institutions as representative democracy and organized religion.

Johnson was excommunicated from the Mormon Church in December 1979 for opposing its anti-Equal Rights Amendment position. Since that time she has become a nationally-known feminist. She has spoken for the ERA, and, in 1982, fasted for 37 days in an attempt to force the Illinois Legislature to pass that amendment. She decided to run for president to serve as a "pioneer."

Her decision to seek the nomination of the Citizens Party sprang from the perception that the two major parties and the U.S. system of government do not represent women.

Profile

"WHAT I LEARNED was that the system isn't representative when it comes to women. We are outside the system... the system is set up to keep women powerless and to keep us out of it and maintain male power in this country... So I became very disillusioned with electoral politics," she said.

"Clearly, if we'd been a real democracy, half of the candidates for president during the last 200 years would have been women and half the presidents would have been women," she said.

She added, however, that it would be "marvelous" if the Democratic or Republican parties nominate a woman for vice president. If they do, Johnson predicts, "She will not be a feminist. She will be a party woman who knows her place and keeps it, and never gets uppity, and serves as the wife in the White House... she will be the perfect token."

HER STRUGGLE WITH the Mormon Church colored her attitude toward organized religion. "They're (churches) all made by men, for men. They all preach that God is male, therefore men should rule the world. They uphold the system in which men rule the world. I see religions primarily as political institutions."

Those opinions have put Johnson steadfastly outside the mainstream of American political life and she concedes her chances of winning the Oval Office are minute. However, she is confident she can achieve some lesser goals.

Chief among these is "breaking down barriers in people's minds in this country about what's possible for a woman. There is a good chance of helping in raising peoples' consciences about women and listening to women," she said.

Johnson follows a low-key strategy, campaigning when and where she has a speaking engagement. A weak party organization, little money, prejudices about herself and women, and her own weaknesses stand in her way.

THE NOTORIETY SHE gained while working for the ERA now serves as a double-edged sword, sometimes building her credibility with voters, sometimes destroying it. But regardless of whom she talks to, her overriding goal is to teach them "women are serious."

While bearing that message Johnson has also learned to question herself. She has discovered that campaigning doesn't always mesh with carrying an uncompromising message.

"The pressure upon me to change what I have to say is immense... I wonder sometimes if I'm going to be able to hold out until November. You learn how hard it is to be ethical and have integrity."

Provided she can retain that integrity, Johnson wants her campaign to be more than a tilt at windmills. She hopes it will make the Democratic and Republican parties pay attention to issues of disarmament and human rights. "Whatever we pay attention to, that's what reality is," she said.

Walkout

"Difficult times test our sense of responsibility. As educators and as members of the university community, our first obligation is to the students we teach. The responsibility is underscored by the university's statement on professional ethics and academic responsibility, which requires teaching commitments be fulfilled and classes be met. Moreover, state law imposes severe sanctions upon those who engage in a strike against a public institution."

Remington told The Daily Iowan that he is "worried because my office would have no alternative but to investigate any allegations by students that their T.A. didn't hold class. My hands are tied."

"STATE LAW in Iowa is something we're not certain of, but there are very, very serious sanctions against public employees striking. It's out of our control and I feel an obligation to warn the T.A.s," he added.

Andy Martin, UI T.A. in American Studies and an originator of the proposed walkout, said he was "kind of shocked" by the letter. He said it came "out of the blue" and he plans to meet with Remington today.

Martin said it is hard to tell whether T.A.s who plan to walk out are feeling threatened by the administration. He contended the walkout is not a strike and only if the T.A.s had a union and tried to strike would there be reason to worry.

He said the time missed in the classroom Wednesday will be made up in other ways.

Remington said T.A.s participating in the walkout "would at least lose their pay for that day and it is always possible that we would be forced, if there were complaints from students, legislators or parents to take some more severe actions."

HE ALSO SAID the T.A.s' action could hurt the UI's standing with the Iowa Legislature. "I think it's quite clear if the students act in this extreme way the solidarity and unity that are necessary at the university to face this (the budget cut) would be lost."

Remington also said, "Every member of the university community shares the concern that the erosion in the university's budget is jeopardizing the quality of education."

"Yet, the university's budget problems, while difficult, are not insurmountable. Contrary to published reports, the university does not plan to terminate any current graduate assistants because of the present budget problems."

Martin said after reading the letter he is "getting confused" about the faculty and administration's stance. "All departments have told us there will be cuts. I don't believe what anyone is saying anymore," he said.

But UI Vice President for Finance Dorsey Ellis said Remington's statement that the UI does not plan to terminate any current graduate assistants is "nothing new."

"ALL ALONG what we've been saying is this university, because it is decentralized, starts at the department level and asks departments to propose how they would go about doing it (cutting back) ... It has always been explained that these are only proposals," he said.

The colleges will probably cut funds for new T.A.s, non-recurring budgets, visiting professor lines and recruiting funds for new faculty members, Ellis said.

He said failure of communication has been a "serious problem" during consideration of the cutbacks. He added many people have taken proposals published by the press as final decisions.

Remington also said, "What happened is kind of a giant misunderstanding. People seem to be acting as if the preliminary proposals are final."

Howard Laster, dean of the UI College of Liberal Arts, said there has been "a large element of that (lack of communication), but I don't want to duck and say that's all of the problem."

Laster also said although he is "certainly not interested in a confrontation" with the T.A.s, "it is sort of unfortunate that by talking about a walkout they have put both sides in that position."

He added he would like to see the T.A.s "shift that focus to constructive things we can do together to preserve this university."

ONE ALTERNATIVE proposed by a group calling itself Teachers and Students for Iowa is to ask T.A.s and faculty members to open their classes to the public Wednesday.

"We hope that this will demystify the activities of the University of Iowa and bring home to the taxpayers what they'll be losing if our budgets get cut again," said Rhetoric T.A. Cassandra Amesley, one of the group's organizers.

The administrators and some T.A.s are concerned the walkout could have an adverse effect on the state legislature.

Dale Herbeck, president of the Graduate Student Senate, said, "I think the legislature will perceive it (the walkout) as a negative action."

Herbeck said he supports the protest rally to be held Wednesday as long as it has no connection to the walkout. Herbeck said he would like to see action against the proposed cuts remain separate from teaching duties.

Mary Jo Small, UI associate vice president for finance, said: "I think as I understand the purpose, it (the walkout) is to have a positive effect on the legislators in Des Moines. The action, in that kind of political context, can have effects not anticipated. Those who are planning it should anticipate that it could have a negative rather than positive effect."

of effect or influence this (the walkout) could have on the legislature. It could backfire."

Rep. Horace Dagget, R-Leno, said he believes the planned walkout could prove to be "counter-productive" for the UI's chances of gaining additional appropriations.

Dagget, a 12-year veteran of the House and a member of the Legislature's Joint Subcommittee on Educational Appropriations, said, "Most of the time when there has been a demonstration, the reaction by the legislature has been basically opposite what the demonstration was for."

Dagget also said if the legislature is "provoked" the long-sought-after faculty vitality fund could be endangered. He also said legislation to cap enrollments at the regents institutions could gain support from lawmakers irritated by the walkout.

FOLLOWING A VISIT to the UI campus Saturday, Dagget said he would support a T.A. walkout "if the legislative body was not aware of the problems facing the university." But he added, "I don't think a demonstration would point out any new thing that should be called to our attention."

Regent Peg Anderson said the protest "couldn't do the cause of the university any good at all."

"I think it would have a very negative effect on the public, which is reflected in the legislators' eyes," she added. "I'm very hopeful that the T.A.s will decide not to do it."

Regent Ann Jorgenson said although the public should be made aware of the effects of the cutbacks at the UI, "disrupting the system is in poor form."

"There are a lot of financial problems at the university but there are also ways to deal with that, ways of lobbying, and I don't think that kind of protest would be appropriate," Jorgenson said.

Regents Percy Harris and John McDonald also said they are hopeful the walkout will not materialize.

The UI administration has said it would be forced to impose "severe sanctions" against the T.A.s if the walkout takes place, and the regents said they would probably back the administration.

"I SUSPECT the regents will back up anything the administration decides to do about it," said Anderson.

Neu said, however, "It would depend on what kind of action the administration took. As a general rule, the regents support administrative decisions, but they would have to be reasonable."

Although Rep. Rich Varn, D-Solon, said he doesn't think "a walkout will provoke the legislature" he also warned the T.A.s to be aware of the legal repercussions a boycott could raise.

"I don't want to see anybody get in trouble," Varn said. "I think they (the T.A.s) have a right to redress their problems through public demonstration, but if it is illegal I can't really condone it."

Varn, also a member of the educational appropriations subcommittee, said, "I suppose some of the legislators might not think the walkout is appropriate behavior if they (the T.A.s) are doing something illegal."

THE UI'S CHIEF legislative lobbyist, Frank Stork, also expressed concern about how the lawmakers will view the walkout.

"I have some concerns as to how productive any boycott would be at this time," he said.

Stork stressed the UI's budget situation "remains very fluid at this point — nothing has been decided, but we are certainly doing everything we can to get our message out."

Another member of the educational appropriations subcommittee, Rep. Jo Ann Zimmerman, D-West Des Moines, said she doesn't think the T.A. boycott will have much impact on the legislature. "This walkout probably won't make much difference."

"I am really sorry about the university's budget problems," Zimmerman said. But she pointed out that several miscalculations in projected state revenues for fiscal 1985 may force the legislature to trim the UI's funding even more.

Zimmerman said the economic miscalculations could force lawmakers to slice "$17 million from Gov. Branstad's recommended budget."

According to Zimmerman, 51 percent of the state's budget is devoted to funding education. "Thirty-eight percent of the budget is for K-12 and it probably won't be touched," she said. "But there is a possibility of cuts in the 13 percent of the budget set aside for the state Board of Regents."

She said the only impact a T.A.

walkout would probably have is to "heighten public awareness and maybe help the governor accept the lottery."

A BILL ESTABLISHING a state lottery, which would add $25-45 million to the state's coffers, if enacted, passed the House last week and is expected to be approved by the Iowa Senate.

However, Rep. Minnette Doderer, D-Iowa City, said she is quite sure "the governor will veto lottery legislation."

She said she would support a walkout by the T.A.s if "it was done well and allowed them to let off some steam."

But both Doderer and Neville stressed the need for better communication between T.A.s and the UI administration.

"This has to be solved at the negotiating level with the administration making the new budgets," Doderer said.

Neville said the walkout could be a result of poor communication between the T.A.s and the administration. "I don't think the information base is as great as it should be. I think the information being passed along could be a little bit better by the administration."

"I think they're (the T.A.s) being pushed in a corner because they're very frightened of losing their jobs and their income. I would be just as afraid, but I would hope I would take a little bit more intelligent action."

Doderer said: "What has happened to the university's budget is a disaster. I am sure they (the T.A.s) wouldn't be considering a walkout if they weren't desperate."

precinct caucuses know the negotiation, discussion and arguments that occur there. He said these events represent "a microcosm of the country."

NAGLE MENTIONED the "three rules" candidates must adhere to: cash in on the most delegates; "organization, organization and organization," and a candidate running in Iowa lacking a highly developed organization is "at a disadvantage."

"Mondale understands the state and the importance of organization. So does (California Sen. Alan) Cranston," Nagle said, explaining why both candidates have been doing well.

"(Colorado Sen. Gary) Hart, (Ohio

Sen. John) Glenn and (former South Dakota Sen. George) McGovern don't match up" in strength of their organizations, he said. But added, "All can still do well."

When asked about President Reagan's caucus night visit, Nagle said, "I don't approve." He added Reagan is only coming because "most of the attention is focused on the Democrats" and he wants to take some of that away.

To help counter the president's presence, Nagle said several state Democratic leaders will offer a rebuttal to the President's comments at 6:30 tonight.

'F' for solidarity

"Difficult times test our sense of responsibility. As educators and as members of the university community our first obligation is to the students we teach."

These words, issued Friday by UI Vice President for Academic Affairs Richard Remington, fall with heavy irony. For if UI students are learning any lesson from the central administration these days it is one of over-cautiousness and disloyalty.

Just returned from two weeks of what Remington himself calls "jealously guarded" research in New Zealand, it would seem the UI's second-in-command has little leeway to appeal to UI teaching assistants' sense of "obligation" to their students. In reaction to news of T.A. plans to stage a walkout in protest of the state budget cuts and eroding academic quality, the administration has taken a hard line, threatening to adhere to the letter of Iowa law and possibly fire those T.A.s who do not teach their classes Wednesday.

The warning is ludicrous. As literature T.A. Nicholas Humy told those who feared that participation in the walkout could cost them their jobs, "You've lost your job already. If this cut goes through, you've got nothing to lose — you've already lost it."

Still, Remington maintains the UI does not plan to remove any existing T.A. positions. Meanwhile, each academic department has been directed to map out how to scrimp on 5 percent less than its current budget — most are considering eliminating T.A. positions.

The irony continues.

The UI administration talks loftily about nurturing "academic quality." An emotional touchstone of this quality has been the long-sought faculty vitality fund — money to serve as merit pay for top-notch professors who might seek positions at other universities that offer better pay.

Now along with a 2.8 percent permanent budget reversion, Gov. Terry Branstad has recommended faculty vitality be funded with the $8.5 million generated from tuition hikes, with about $4 million of this designated for the UI. Those proposals are now in the hands of the Iowa Legislature, hands UI administrators are trying very hard to pamper.

This effort to gently persuade state lawmakers to restore the nearly $10 million excluded by the Branstad spending plan has pushed the UI administration toward calculated hesitancy and now toward disloyalty to the graduate students who share its commitment to academic quality.

Although a faculty vitality fund is an admirable goal, in the present financial straits, the same $4 million intended to bolster salaries for certain faculty members could pay the stipends of hundreds of T.A.s, who have much more contact with undergraduates and who ultimately provide the future of academia.

If the UI administration stood behind the T.A.s' protest, perhaps the legislature would take note, but if those in charge continue to divide the cause the UI will flunk the test of "difficult times."

Another day

The Democrats have their day today. The Iowa caucuses serve not only as a predictor of the party's likely choice and to boost the also-runs, they also focus media attention on the party aspiring to power — its platform, its philosophical identity and the assortment of its candidates' personalities.

Yet, despite the fact that the real interest in the caucus is the candidates' contest, the Republicans have pulled out their best show-stopper to draw some of the limelight away from the Democrats. Ronald Reagan himself is coming to Iowa.

The president arrives in Waterloo today. And no matter how many unemployed workers file into McElroy Auditorium to ask embarrassing questions on jobs, the great communicator is sure to make a good showing. Incumbents usually do, especially pit-stopping in a city of about 100,000 via Air Force One.

While the Democrats have not engaged in enough smear campaigning to make reconciliation and consolidation impossible after the nominee is chosen — remembering it is still only Iowa — still they necessarily present an image of divisiveness while the incumbent represents stability.

Reagan's scene-stealing is an obvious example of his staff's skill at handling the media. The timing of negative or positive news releases with the deadlines of newspapers is a well-documented technique. Often, presidential statements of questionable importance are issued on Sundays for Monday's morning papers, when there is usually a dearth of news.

Certainly, no Republican politician should be faulted for trying to garner attention during the Democratic overkill of the sort Iowans have endured now for weeks. What gives one pause is the timing of the Waterloo appearance. Where was Reagan or one of his mouthpieces during the pre-caucus scrapping — the debates, the town meetings, the barnyard chats? An earlier showing might have forced Reagan to address the Democratic hopefuls' criticisms of him.

The obvious point of the Waterloo jaunt is to present to Iowans an image of the incumbent, with his big jet and extensive entourage, as opposed to the factionalized, nervous Democrats.

Both the Democrats' campaigning and Reagan's grandstanding in Waterloo serve to point out to what extent the media is used as a soapbox rather than as an educational forum for issues.

Editors for Tuesday's newspaper will have to decide whether to steal some of the space allotted for caucus coverage to cover a talk by the president. Perhaps a statement could be made by downplaying the Waterloo talk, a statement that today is the day for the caucuses, which means — for both Democrats and Republicans interested in a fair and exciting political contest — the contest within the Democratic Party.

Reagan can have another day.

Nuclear mistake is unaffordable

By Monish Chatterjee

IN BIBLICAL HISTORY, God placed Adam in paradise with the admonition that he should not eat the fruit of the tree of knowledge. But Eve colluded with Satan, and Adam succumbed to the temptation by taking a bite of the forbidden fruit. Adam's fall from paradise because of that indiscretion is well documented. In recent history, events have occurred that closely parallel the biblical story.

When the secret entrance to the trails of an atomic nucleus was unlocked by scientists, a cardinal sin had been plucked from the tree of scientific discovery. When the hitherto unknown secret of the denuded atom was put to military and political use, humankind had taken one giant step toward self-annihilation. In some sense, the plight we face today is far more sinister than Adam's: banishment not from paradise but from existence itself. Humanity is perched atop a gigantic time-bomb, and every tick of it moves us closer to an all-encompassing fiery disaster that, in all likelihood, will stamp out the life-breath from this planet forever.

At a time such as this, when those in responsible positions in government and media wax eloquent over balance of power and strategic arsenals, vertical and horizontal build-up, negotiation from a position of strength and every other form of Orwellian doublespeak, the opinions and rights of the entire human race in this crucial matter are being ruthlessly trampled upon. Never before in history has there been a time when all nations, big and small, have faced a common global threat of this magnitude.

In some sense, the plight we face today is far more sinister than Adam's: banishment not from paradise but from existence itself.

Journal-ease

Journal-ease is an occasional feature presenting commentary on a broad range of issues by local writers.

FACED WITH the gruesome prospect of converting this vibrant and colorful earth into a dreary hothed of rubble and smoke, followed by the eternal silence of a frozen graveyard, it is absolutely essential that this problem be addressed with the utmost urgency and given precedence over all other issues. The existing social and political polarizations between allies and adversaries around the world must be treated as insignificant factional squabbles, because nuclear weaponry is an adversary bereft of beliefs, preferences, sight or hearing.

Speaking of adversaries, I am reminded of two of the greatest adversaries in all of fiction, Sherlock Holmes and Professor Moriarty. In "The Adventure of the Final Problem" we find these two remarkable men locked in a fierce duel from which neither can emerge a winner. Deadlocked in that no-win struggle, the two finally roll over a cliff. If we change the title of the chapter to "The Misadventure of the Final Catastrophe" and replace Holmes and Moriarty with the NATO Alliance and the Warsaw Pact (the order does not matter), the present scenario is pretty well set. But there is one important difference. In the end of a nuclear exchange, there will not be any Dr. Watson to chronicle the outcome, or any readers to learn from it.

The biggest stumbling block against nuclear arms reduction is the utterly doctrinaire and inflexible attitude of the two sides. In a crisis like this, the need for diplomacy, tact, dialogue and detente cannot be overemphasized. Nothing constructive will ever be achieved by mutual name-calling or by engaging in antagonistic rhetoric. The American Eagle and the Russian Bear will do the greatest good for the greatest number if, for once at least, they carry an olive branch and a pot of honey to the bargaining table instead of nuclear missiles.

CONCERNED scientists have repeatedly warned us of the disastrous effects of a nuclear war. Yet, characteristically, politicians refuse to heed the wisdom of those who know best. The missiles, they tell us, will never be used because there are adequate safeguards against mistakes or false alarms. No hypothesis, according to me, could be more ridiculous. One of the important lessons of history is that men, as well as machines, frequently make mistakes. In the past, when the world was ravaged by the Attilas and Caligulas, the Neros and Hitlers, mistakes were still affordable. Today, with nuclear weapons breathing down the neck of humanity, we simply cannot afford a mistake. By the simple law of probability, there is only one way to ensure that. The nuclear monsters must be defused while there is still time.

As long as life has not been located elsewhere in the universe, life on Earth must be treated as the greatest miracle ever. It should therefore be our foremost duty to preserve that miracle so that future generations can continue to dream and hope for a brighter and happier tomorrow.

In that quest scientists have a vital role to play. After all, it was they who opened up the nuclear Pandora's box; they must also find the means to shut it. The best solution, as far as fantasies go, would be to invent a way to render the weapons ineffective before they can ever be used. An alternative would be to put them to better uses — mineral prospecting in outer space, or propelling spacecrafts to the center of the galaxy and beyond — in short, anything but pointing them at each other in a mindless suicide mission.

The enormity of the problem sometimes tends to drive one to the brink of hopelessness. But we are still here, and with sufficient resolve and faith in ourselves we can avoid the ultimate war, a war in which the unfortunate survivor, like Alexander Selkirk, will mourn his wretched solitude, and the Earth will be reduced to just another piece of rock in the sky.

Straight talk

To the editor:

In his guest opinion (DI, Feb. 9) from Beirut, Jim Wilson would have us believe that Israel remains in Lebanon because President Reagan "refused to put effective pressure on Israel to leave the country — in effect helping keep the Syrians here as well."

Let's get it straight. Through American mediation the Israelis signed an agreement with President Gemayel promising to leave the country when the Syrians do so. The Syrians have been in Lebanon since 1976 and have been asked repeatedly to leave by the Lebanese government. Secretary of State Shultz has pressed the Syrians to leave, as they have promised to do. They have not left.

Whatever Syrian demands are on Israel and Lebanon, will Mr. Wilson guarantee that the "demands" of the vicious Syrian junta do not ultimately include a takeover of both Lebanon and Israel? Anyhow, what right does Syria have to interfere in the politics of Lebanon?

Martin C. Spechler

He's heard it before

To the editor:

I have one question for an editorial board that claims reverse discrimination is necessary to repair the damage of past discriminatory hiring practices. How many Republicans, conservatives or moderates write for The Daily Iowan editorial page, sit on the DI editorial board or hold any position at the DI? "But we never have any qualified conservative or Republican applicants." Hmmm. Seems I've heard that somewhere before. And your response to the private corporations and government departments that have used that line has always been quotas — "pain for the sake of progress."

The DI is subsidized by the students of the UI, a diverse population that deserves a diverse flow of viewpoints. Until you provide that diversity by diversifying your ideologically pure ranks, I humbly suggest that you keep your platitudes to yourselves.

Indisputable facts

To the editor:

You know, it's funny. Many of the letters recently that have been "anti-choice," have been written by men. One fact is indisputable: men can never get pregnant. They can never be 45 years old, brutally raped and pregnant with a rapist's child. They can never be 14 and abandoned by the one who helped impregnate them. Men have dominated the world for centuries, and slowly women are gaining control of their own lives. But I think it's ironic that some think a fetus should have all the rights in the world, and when born, if she happens to be female, loses them. (This is America!?) I'm really not pro-abortion. As a matter of fact, I personally would not consider having an abortion, but thank God nine wise men gave me a choice.

Jennifer L. Metcalf

Fatal false alarms

To the editor:

The hideous possibility of an accidental nuclear war was most recently addressed by presidential candidate Gary Hart at the Iowa City Foreign Relations luncheon on Feb. 8. Hart participated in a study that found the U.S. warning system produced more than 150 false warnings of attack during one 18-month period. On average, that is more than eight warnings per month and at least one false warning of attack every week! It is evident that the issue of accidental nuclear war deserves our attention.

Hart has issued a policy statement that suggests measures to help prevent an accidental nuclear exchange. The suggestions include establishing a Crisis Control facility jointly staffed by the United States and the Soviet Union, updating the 1963 "Hotline Agreement," and updating and extending the 1971 U.S.-Soviet agreement on measures relating to accidental nuclear war.

Such measures are needed in addition to a nuclear freeze and arms reductions. For further information on arms control and avoiding accidental nuclear war, I suggest contacting the Hart campaign.

New York Times reports indirect U.S.-PLO talks

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States has had indirect contact with the Palestine Liberation Organization but continues to rule out direct dialogue unless the PLO first recognizes Israel, administration officials indicated Sunday.

The officials, commenting on a New York Times report of nine months of third-party talks with PLO leader Yasser Arafat, said there has been no retreat from a 1975 policy linking contact with the PLO to its recognition of Israel.

Spokeswoman Kathleen Lange said the State Department would not "comment on alleged leaked information," but went on to acknowledge that "we have talked with various people who have contact with the PLO."

Another administration official said indirect discussions with Arafat should not be interpreted as "evidence that we have, in any way, changed our attitude toward the PLO or backed away from Israel."

SINCE 1975, the United States has refused to deal directly with the PLO unless the Palestinian group agreed to recognize Israel's right to exist and accepted certain U.N. Security Council resolutions.

"In all of our statements, in private and in public, we have made it clear that we will not recognize or negotiate with the PLO unless it accepts U.N. Security Council resolutions 242 and 338 and Israel's right to exist," Lange said. "If they do these things, we will talk with them."

The Times, quoting participants in the process, said the talks were carried out between Arafat and John Edwin Mroz, a specialist in Middle East affairs who was serving as an intermediary for U.S. government.

Mroz, president of the Institute for East-West Security Studies in New York, could not be reached for comment. National security adviser Robert McFarlane, interviewed on ABC's "This Week with David Brinkley," said neither he nor the president knew about the meetings described in The Times.

The Times said the discussions were consistent with efforts undertaken during the Carter administration to persuade PLO leaders to acknowledge Israel's right to exist in exchange for U.S. recognition of their organization.

YEHUDA BLUM, Israel's ambassador to the United Nations, said Sunday the Israelis "are far from being gratified at learning of these meetings," but said they would not have been the first time such contacts were made.

"The fact that this was a repeat performance doesn't make it any more palpable," Blum said in an interview on Cable News Network.

The Times said Saudi Arabia was the only other nation informed of the behind-the-scenes contacts that took place in more than 50 meetings between Mroz and Arafat from August 1981 until May 1982. The state-run Saudi Press Agency said Sunday that was "completely untrue."

Trip to learn of MIAs launched

BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — A high-level U.S. military and civilian delegation flew to Hanoi, Vietnam, Sunday to try to determine the fate of thousands of American servicemen missing since the Vietnam War.

The delegation was led by Assistant Secretary of Defense Richard Armitage, the highest-ranking U.S. Defense official to visit Vietnam since 1975. Armitage visited Hanoi in February 1982 as a deputy assistant secretary.

The delegation left from Bangkok for Hanoi aboard a small U.S. military plane. The group was expected to remain in Vietnam until Wednesday.

"The level of the delegation reflects the great importance we attach to making progress on this issue," said a U.S. State Department statement issued Sunday.

The group includes Ann Mills Griffiths, the executive secretary of the privately-funded American League of Families, a group representing missing servicemen's relatives.

Her presence, the statement said, "clearly illustrates the humanitarian nature of this mission and the importance we place on the concerns of the families of our missing men."

THE DELEGATION departed amid indications Vietnam may finally be ready to provide a full account of the approximately 2,500 U.S. servicemen still listed as missing, 11 years after the last American combat troops left Indochina.

On Jan. 29, the foreign ministers of Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia said more information on American MIAs would be provided if the U.S. government showed a "cooperative attitude."

In New York, Vietnam's U.N. delegation reportedly contacted the Vietnam Veterans of America organization to say it was ready to turn over the remains of three U.S. servicemen.

"We have heard these reports. We are deeply concerned that any remains turned over by the Vietnamese be given the honor and dignity of a government-to-government process," said the U.S. statement.

In the past two years, Vietnam has turned over the remains of 13 Americans and material evidence, such as identification cards, of six others.

A U.S. official, who asked not to be identified, said while the vast majority of the missing servicemen are presumed dead, refugees from Vietnam and Laos still report sightings of living Americans.

"We continue to get these stories. But so far we have been unable to substantiate them," the official said.

Convention receipts to total millions

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The National Democratic Convention will give San Francisco a $100 million economic boost and put the city in the media spotlight this summer, party officials said Sunday.

Kent Walker, a financial analyst for the Democratic Host Committee, said economists have been conservative in their estimates of the value of the convention to the area economy.

"The total we had was $58.7 million to $66.7 million. With the multiplier effect, it goes up to $88 million to $100 million," Walker said.

The multiplier (or ripple) effect considers the impact of new money flowing through the local economy for goods and services.

"In rough terms, the multiplier is just the effect of somebody like ABC coming in here and spending so many hundred thousand dollars on construction. Then the construction company spends money on raw materials from suppliers who spend it on something else," Walker said.

The convention is expected to draw at least 30,000 people, half of them from the media.

"WE'VE GOT 3,900 delegates, 1,300 alternates, 6,000 official guests and 4,000 other interested persons. That's about 15,000 in total direct attendance," Walker said. "On top of that, we have 15,000 media, 10,000 credentialed news people and 5,000 technical and support persons."

All those people will not fit into the Moscone Center, which will seat about 16,000 for this event. There will be little or no room for the general public at the July 16-20 convention.

Dale Hess, director of public affairs for the Convention and Visitors Bureau, estimates nearly $40 million in direct revenue from the convention.

Robert Wilhelm, managing director of the St. Francis Hotel said, "The convention means a lot to the city, both immediate and long-term. We've got to reinforce that San Francisco is a city that knows how to do things right."

The Democratic National Committee will spend about $5 million, members of the media will spend another $12 million to $15 million and delegates, their families and others will spend $18 million to $20 million, according to the convention bureau.

But the Democrats expect individual spending to surpass $20 million, perhaps as much as $31 million to $36 million, because many people will be in the city longer than the four-day meeting.

THE BUREAU'S estimate does not include about $700,000 spent by the Democratic Host Committee and about $7 million the city is spending to prepare for the convention.

The city is spending more than $4 million for improvements to the convention center.

National media exposure could be worth another $3 million, according to the bureau.

Walker said network convention coverage would provide up to 15 minutes of exposure to the city each day. "How much would it cost us to buy that kind of advertising?" he said.

Computer data thefts expensive

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Computer data thieves cost the industry billions of dollars and the rapid growth of the home computer industry is expanding opportunities for information theft, an expert says.

Bob Leach, a partner in the Management Information Consulting Division of Arthur Andersen & Co., said the biggest spying problem is not undercover agents of foreign nations.

It is theft from American businesses and the proliferation of home computer "hackers."

Other computer experts agree. Donn Parker of SRI International in Menlo Park, Calif., said computer thieves and vandals cost firms millions of dollars in labor to track down the culprits.

IN WHAT HE termed an "ingenious attack," a 17-year-old hacker inserted obscene words into a company's computerized sales lists. That company went out of business until the system was cleaned up.

If a company is closed down even for a day, it could mean a $150,000 or greater loss, Parker said.

To date, Leach said, lost computer time alone can cost from $5 billion to $10 billion. "The implication is that the rate is increasing rapidly," he said.

"When we installed our first computer in 1953, security of automated information was not a big deal," Leach said.

"There was only one group of people who knew how to diddle with a computer — our group. Now with a number of micro and personal computers and large numbers of people becoming computer-literate, there's a much broader understanding of use and how to get into corporate records."

LEACH HAS BEEN involved primarily in the design and installation of information systems in industry.

As many as 10 million homes have computers, he said, and the number is estimated to rise to 80 million by the end of the century.

Three years ago, Wells Fargo Bank reported that an employee used computers to embezzle $21.3 million.

Welfare workers in Miami stole $300,000 worth of food stamps by putting false data into a computer. Money accounts have been stolen or transferred, customer lists have been filched and industrial information has been illegally transferred.

The Los Angeles Dodgers recently lost thousands of dollars worth of baseball tickets when someone modified their system to create and then distribute unauthorized tickets.

One of the most widely publicized cases recently was that of a UCLA student who penetrated a Pentagon network.

The proliferation of home computers means "there's just a lot of these things out there and lots of potential perpetrators of unauthorized access to automated information sources," he said.

"It's difficult to get a jury to understand the theft of information of an electronic pulse that was not altered or damaged."

"It's a challenge to legislatures to write laws to protect computer data," he said.

New son outshines slalom gold medal for Mahre

SARAJEVO, Yugoslavia (UPI) — In a highly emotional wind-up to the most memorable day of his life, there was nothing left for Phil Mahre to do but break down and cry.

Early in the afternoon he won an Olympic gold medal, and a couple of hours later, he learned that his wife had given birth to their second child. The eight-pound, 13-ounce boy was born to Holly Mahre in Scottsdale (Ariz.) Memorial Hospital at 12:37 a.m., Iowa time, four hours before Phil clinched his gold at 1:40 p.m. local time.

"She was doing all the work and I was out playing," Mahre joked Sunday, before he cried some more. Then he continued, "It's just unfortunate she can't be here on this day. My heart goes out to her."

NOT ONLY DID Phil Mahre win the slalom, becoming the first American man ever to take that event in the Olympics, but his twin brother Steve finished a fraction behind him to capture the silver medal. Still, with the tears in his eyes, Phil said he'd trade the gold to be with his wife.

"I wish I was home right now," he said. "It's not worth missing."

And on such epic proportions, with a soft snow settling once again on Sarajevo and a Hollywood script to provide a suitable ending, did the 14th Winter Olympic Games come to an end.

The Games were officially declared over in a simple half hour ceremony ending at 8:35 p.m. (1:35 p.m., Iowa time) with Juan Antonio Samaranch, president of the International Olympic Committee, calling upon "the youth of all the world to assemble four years from now at Calgary in Canada, there to celebrate with us the XV Olympic Winter Games."

IN ALL THE 48 years that alpine has been a part of the Olympic program, no American man ever won a gold. Then Bill Johnson came through with a downhill victory on Thursday, and three days later Phil Mahre provided his epoch, one he called "a dream come true."

So close are the twins that when one completes his run, he radios advice about conditions to the other at the top of the hill. Steve, the leader at the time, did that for Phil during the first run Sunday, and then Phil returned the favor when he was leading in the second run.

"He had the gold in his hands, but we've always worked together," Steve said, cradling his two-year-old daughter, Ginger. "If I don't win, he'd better."

THE WILD WIND-UP enabled the United States to finish the Games with four gold medals and four silver. The entire output came in skiing and figure skating, with the Americans winning half of the six alpine events.

East Germany was the gold medal leader with nine in the 39 events, three more than the runner-up Soviet Union. The United States tied with Finland

Top-rated gymnasts too much for Iowa

By Steve Batterson

Top-ranked UCLA wore out the Iowa men's gymnastics team's welcome on the West Coast Sunday, defeating the Hawkeyes, 281.5-277.75.

Earlier in the weekend, the Hawkeyes defeated Stanford, Cal St.-Fullerton and Long Beach State. In that meet, Iowa scored a 273.2 using a watered-down line-up to beat Stanford, the second best team on the West Coast, which posted a 268.1. Cal State-Fullerton finished third with a 264.95 and Long Beach State was a distant fourth with a 173.85.

Iowa Coach Tom Dunn said the Hawkeyes, now 6-3 on the year, accomplished pretty much everything they set out to do.

"WE WANTED THREE wins on Friday and we did that although we would have like to have scored higher," Dunn said. "Today, a win was somewhat unrealistic, but our score was the second highest in school history."

"We scored a point higher than Illinois did a week ago out here and we're the best team that UCLA has had out here, so this trip should help us when we come back for nationals."

The Hawkeyes began Sunday's dual at the Wooden Center with a good performance on the floor exercise, outscoring the Bruins, 46.95-46.15.

Problems plagued the Hawkeyes on the pommel horse, where UCLA picked up a 46.7-44.35 advantage and never looked back.

Iowa turned in solid performances on the remaining events, including a team season's best in the vault with a 46.65, but the favorites for the NCAA championship proved to be too tough for the Hawkeyes.

"WE SCORED WELL on the parallel bars but not on our total routines," Dunn said. "Everybody had good routines going but we had minor breaks, especially on our dismounts."

The Hawkeyes turned in another sterling performance on the horizontal bar, with all five gymnasts scoring above 9.55. Dan Bachman led the Hawkeyes, tying the school record with a 9.8.

"We had our strongest line-up in, but we just got bit on pommel horse," Dunn said.

Despite the loss, the Iowa score will help the Hawkeyes in their quest for a bid to the NCAA Championships where one of the main criteria is average team score. Iowa will be able to erase a 274.8 score recorded at Minnesota earlier this season.

IN FRIDAY'S quadrangular at Fullerton, Iowa set a new school record on the still rings, posting a 46.55 in the event. Hawkeye Ron Rechenmacher tied his school record on the horizontal bar with a 9.8 and sophomore Dan Bachman won the all-around with a 56.55, a personal best and just three-tenths shy of an Iowa school record.

The problems on the pommel horse concern Dunn as the Hawkeyes prepare for a Saturday afternoon dual with Iowa State. "We've got to find a pommel horse team this week," he said. "We need to find a team that can hit. If we do that, we'll be able to handle them for the first time since I've been here."

Michael Payne jams the ball to contribute two more points during the last 49 seconds of Iowa's 74-60 victory over Ohio State, putting Payne in double figures with 11 points for the game played Saturday afternoon in Carver-Hawkeye Arena. The victory ended a seven-game losing streak for Coach George Raveling's basketball team.

Wrestlers clip Iowa State; Gable unhappy

By J.B. Glass

It was not a stellar performance by the Iowa wrestling squad, but it was a victory and it was against an intense Iowa State team.

But the 26-16 victory Saturday at Ames was not enough in head Coach Dan Gable's eyes. "If you subtract 16 points from Iowa State and give us the 16 points, I feel good right now."

"But, no, I don't feel good right now, we've got a lot of work to do," Gable added. "But more than that, I got to keep the attitudes of the kids up right now."

In the dual season finale, the Hawkeye matmen reversed a 11-9 mid-way Cyclone lead by getting big wins from heavy hitting Jim Zalesky, Duane Goldman and Pete Bush pushing Iowa, 16-1, over Iowa State, 13-7.

AT 118, ONE OF the two weights Gable and assistant Coach J. Robinson were looking at closely, a slimmer

"I felt I was a little slow in the first part of the match but I was kind of full from eating too much after weigh-ins," Riley said. "After I got a little into it and got the stalling call, I decided to get something going ... and it worked tonight."

Then at 126, the other closely-watched weight class, top-ranked and unbeaten Kevin Darkus beat Hawkeye grappler Mark Trizzino on the mat and on his feet. It ended as a five-point superior decision for the Cyclones as Darkus tallied 13 points to Trizzino's one.

BUT GREG RANDALL came back at 134 to beat Cyclone junior John Thorn, 7-6, by using the riding time advantage, which he accumulated in the first period, to put Iowa ahead 9-5.

Kevin Dresser, filling in for Jeff Kerber at 142 who is nursing a shoulder injury, lost to Joe Gibbons after Gibbons had a three-point final period. This pulled Iowa State to within one at 9-8.

At 150, Marty Kistler, suffering from a bout with a "bad cold" was upset by Jim Farina. The 10-3 victory put the Cyclones up 11-9.

"I don't want him using that (the bad cold) as an excuse for losing," Gable said. "Me and J mainly got on him tonight in a couple situations and he brought that cold up. That's the last thing I wanted to hear. What I wanted to hear is what Lindley (Kistler) said, no excuses."

Lindley Kistler drew at 167 with Mike VanArsdale, 4-4.

BUT BEFORE KISTLER'S match, Jim Zalesky won his 81st consecutive match in perfect fashion, with a pin.

The two-time national champion faced a pumped Bill Tate, but Zalesky wore him down quickly. Using a double-leg take down and a bear hug on the mat, Zalesky made Tate see the lights of Hilton Coliseum in two minutes, 44 seconds.

"They came out fired up more than usual, but right now I think were doing a pretty good job," Zalesky said.

Undefeated 177-pounder Duane Goldman won his 24th match of the season with a four-point major decision. Goldman, who was only up 4-2 after the second period, had a eight-point final three minutes and received a

Iowa vaults back with two wins

By Jill Hokinson
Staff Writer

After a minor setback last weekend, the Iowa women's gymnastics team vaulted back this weekend to capture top honors at the Wisconsin Invitational and to beat intrastate rival Iowa State.

Senior Linda Tremain said the Hawkeyes looked good over the weekend but could have performed better. "We could have hit quite a bit better in the invitational," Tremain said. "We did fairly well over the weekend, but we could have done quite a bit better. We still have the potential to do well."

"We have reached the point in the season where everyone is a bit tired," she said. "Having two meets every weekend makes it even more tiring."

IN A VERY CLOSE race for first place, the Hawkeyes scored a 170.95 to edge out Western Michigan by four-tenths of a point for first place in the Wisconsin Invitational. Western Michigan finished with 170.55, followed by Wisconsin with 169.85 and Winona State with 168.30. Northern Michigan was last with 149.65.

The only Iowa gymnast to place in the top three in the invitational was freshman Kris Meighan. Meighan won the vaulting competition with a 9.20, finished second on the uneven bars and took third on the beam to capture top honors in the all-around competition with a 35.75.

Meighan had a fall on the balance beam and didn't turn in her best performance on the uneven parallel bars, but was pleased with what she did. "I was pleased with what I did," she said. "I think I could have scored higher in the all-around, but it (her performance) had its good points."

THE HAWKEYES ALSO increased their dual meet record to 5-1 with the victory against the Cyclones. Iowa turned in a 169.30 to beat Iowa State, which finished with 166.05.

Iowa Coach Diane Chapela said she

Meighan said she had a couple of bad breaks in the meet against Iowa State and didn't perform as well as in the Wisconsin Invitational. "Coming off the road Saturday made me tired (for the dual meet)."

ONLY TWO OTHER Iowa gymnasts placed in the dual meet. Robin Sekafetz scored an 8.75 on the floor exercise and finished third in the all-around competition with a 34.05. Linda Tremain turned in an 8.85 on the vault to take third place.

Chapela said the Hawkeyes will need to work on staying on the balance beam heading into this weekend's home dual against Ball State.

"It was a little disappointing," she said. "The falls are killing us. We have to fight a little harder to stay on."

The Hawkeyes looked good on the bars and vault in the dual meet but had a few problems on the beam, Tremain said.

Skillful Illinois play destroys Spartans

United Press International

Illinois parlayed what Coach Lou Henson called a near perfect first half against Michigan State into a share of first place in the Big Ten.

"We knew coming in we had to play extremely well because right now Michigan State is playing as well as anybody in the Big Ten," said Henson, whose team was nearly flawless in the first half in rolling up a 32-17 lead enroute to a 70-53 victory that helped it regain a share of first place with Purdue.

Sophomore guard Bruce Douglas scored 18 points and sophomore forward Efreem Winters chipped in 16 in leading Illinois to a 70-53 trouncing of Michigan State. The Spartans got 13 points from freshman guard Darryl Johnson and 11 from sophomore guard Scott Skiles.

THE VICTORY SET up a showdown next Saturday between the Illini and Boilermakers at Purdue for the Big Ten lead. Illinois is now 11-2 in the conference and 20-3 overall.

Michigan State fell to 3-9 and is 10-12 this season. "We played an almost perfect half," Henson said Sunday.

Purdue put itself atop the Big Ten on Saturday with a 67-64 overtime victory at Michigan in which the Boilermakers scored all 12 of their overtime points on free throws and made their last 15 attempts of the game.

"In this league you are never safe," Boilermaker's Coach Gene Keady said. "We're in pretty good shape but you never know what's going to happen."

AN EXAMPLE OF that was in Evanston, Ill., where perennial also-ran Northwestern knocked Indiana out of a share of the top spot, 63-51. The 17th rated Hoosiers had won 23 of their previous 24 games with the Wildcats.

Northwestern, 4-9 in the Big Ten and 11-12 overall, got 13 points from Art Aaron and a career high 14 from John Peterson — who only had 20 points total this season. Indiana had a seven game winning streak snapped and dropped to 10-3 in the league and 17-6 overall.

Minnesota went outside the Big Ten to Cincinnati and came away a 65-61 winner. Wisconsin was idle.

Jim Rowinski scored 22 points and grabbed eight rebounds to lead Purdue to its 11th victory against two Big Ten losses and an 18-5 record. Michigan, 6-6 in the league and 14-8 this season, got 19 points from sophomore Center Roy Tarpley.

Yarborough takes flag over Waltrip at Daytona

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — Cale Yarborough slingshot past Darrell Waltrip on the final lap of Sunday's $1.2 million Daytona 500 to take his second straight victory in the prestigious stock car race.

It was the first time since 1962 the race's pole winner had also won a 125-mile qualifying race and gone on to win the Daytona 500.

The race had a special flavor when President Ronald Reagan, on a phone hook-up from Washington, got the action going when he told the 42 drivers, "Gentlemen, start your engines."

Yarborough, driving a Chevrolet, used the same maneuver this year as he did in 1983 in winning his fourth Daytona 500 at the 2.5-mile Daytona International Speedway.

Second was Dale Earnhardt, third went to Waltrip and fourth to Neil Bonnett, all in Chevrolets. Bill Elliott, in a Ford, took fifth.

A caution flag with 20 laps remaining in the 200-lap race set the stage for the hotly contested finish between seven cars. At that time Waltrip was leading, Yarborough was second and Terry Labonte was third.

Waltrip and Yarborough linked up in a two-car draft and briefly pulled away from the rest of the pack. But a four-car draft in positions three through sixth caught the leaders with 10 laps remaining.

Seaver to join Sox

CHICAGO (UPI) — Tom Seaver says he is happy and excited; Tony LaRussa says he has a pleasant problem and the Chicago White Sox are just relieved the matter is over.

Seaver, the 39-year-old three-time Cy Young award winner, agreed in principle Saturday to terms with the White Sox — the team that selected him in the compensation pick last month.

Seaver had been considering being a holdout, retiring or even signing a broadcast contract before he finally decided to join the White Sox.

"I'm very happy and excited," Seaver said. "We've reached an agreement in principle but I'm doing this with no reservations."

Seaver will join the White Sox in their spring training camp in Sarasota, Fla., either late Monday or early Tuesday.

Big Ten foes roll over cagers

By Thomas W. Jargo

The Iowa women's basketball team, trying to secure a first-division berth in the Big Ten, suffered a momentary setback, dropping two critical league contests over the weekend.

League leader Ohio State, behind a balanced scoring attack and 61 percent shooting from the field, rolled over Iowa, 82-60, Sunday afternoon in Columbus.

On Friday night, Indiana, led by the strong inside game of forward Denise Jackson and the precision outside shooting of guard Linda Cunningham, avenged an earlier loss to the Hawkeyes with a 68-62 victory in Bloomington, Ind.

The losses snapped a three-game Iowa winning streak and dropped the Hawkeyes, 6-7 in the Big Ten and 12-10 overall, out of a fourth-place tie with the Hoosiers.

OHIO STATE REMAINS on the league's frontrunner with a 12-1 record. Indiana is 8-5 in conference play.

Buckeye forward Theresa Busch came off the bench to hit nine of 12 shots from the field in leading four Ohio State players in double figures with 19 points.

Toni Roesch scored 16 points and Yvette Angel and Carla Chapman added 14 and 13 respectively for the defending Big Ten co-champion Buckeyes.

Iowa center Lisa Becker led the Hawkeyes with 18 points, and forward Pam DuBose added 13.

In Bloomington, Jackson, the Hoosiers' 5-foot-11 All-American, took advantage of a foul-prone Iowa frontline to score 20 points and haul down 11 rebounds in leading Indiana to victory.

JACKSON SCORED 12 of her game-high total in the first half as the Hoosiers took a 35-30 lead into the locker room at halftime.

Cunningham, a 5-8 sophomore point guard who hit seven of 10 attempts from the field, scored 15 of her 19 points in the second half, including 11 in the final eight minutes to help the Hoosiers stave off a late Iowa comeback.

Iowa power forward Lynn Kennedy and Becker were hindered by foul trouble for most of the Indiana game before finally fouling out. Both picked up three fouls in the first half — Kennedy at the 11 minute mark and Becker with six minutes remaining.

After sitting out much of the first half and watching Iowa fall behind at halftime, both Becker and Kennedy were quick to pick up their fourth fouls in the second half.

KENNEDY WAS CALLED for her fourth foul with 11 minutes to go in the game and that brought Iowa Coach Vivian Stringer off the bench in protest. For their actions, Stringer was hit by two technical fouls and Kennedy found a comfortable seat on the bench.

Iowa actually outscored the Hoosiers, 28-25, from the field. But a total of 24 Hawkeye fouls put Indiana to the free throw line 26 times, where the Hoosiers hit on 18 of the charity tosses. Iowa made only six free throws for the final margin.

Becker, despite playing only 27 minutes, led the Hawkeyes with 14 points. Kennedy managed to score 10 points in only 19 minutes of playing time.

Kennedy continued to be foul-prone against Ohio State, missing much of the action before eventually fouling out. The 5-10 freshman only had four points in the game.

Hawkeyes take last with depleted line-up

By Mike Condon
Assistant Sports Editor

It looks as if a pattern is developing for Coach Cathy Ballard's Iowa women's tennis team — and the pattern is not a good one.

The Hawkeyes, playing with only five players due to an injury to freshman Michele Conlon, finished dead last in the eight-team Indiana Invitational last weekend in Bloomington, Ind.

This was the Iowa's first team action of the spring season since the loss of five squad members from the fall. The results at Bloomington show that the five that have left the program are going to be missed on the court.

The championship of the Indiana Invitational was won on Sunday by the host Hoosiers.

THE DEFENDING Big Ten champions were an easy 7-2 winner over North Carolina in the championship match.

Coach Lin Loring's Hoosiers had an easy road to defending the title they won last year. After an opening 9-0 win over South Carolina, Indiana won a tough 6-3 decision from Mississippi before downing the Tar Heels for the championship.

As good as the meet came out for the Hoosiers, the opposite could be said for the Hawkeyes. A good Mississippi squad pounded the short-handed Iowa squad, 9-0, in the first round.

The Gamecocks of South Carolina then dished out a 7-2 loss to the Hawkeyes in the consolation round before the Minnesota Gophers routed the hapless Hawkeyes, 8-1, in the match for seventh place.

ABOUT THE ONLY good thing to come from the weekend was the fact that junior transfer Juli Weinstine came back from a terrible debut at the Big Ten Singles meet to post her first win in Iowa's loss to South Carolina.

"I was just so happy to win," Weinstine said. "There was just a tremendous amount of unity among the team members over the weekend."

The only other Iowa wins were turned in by freshman left-hander Jenny Reuter, who won her match against South Carolina and defeated Minnesota's Claudia Brisk.

But starting each match behind 2-0 (because of forfeits at the No. 6 singles and the No. 3 doubles positions) has the Iowa players discouraged.

"I don't think it's realized how difficult it is to play with only five players," senior captain Sara Loetscher said. "It was very disappointing and it was tough mentally."

"I'M WORRIED ABOUT the others on the team. It was just embarrassing. I just don't know how we will be able to keep going."

"I agree completely," freshman Kim Martin said when told of Loetscher's statement. "I was very disappointed and I found it hard to get myself mentally prepared for my matches starting out two-love down as a team."

Weinstine simply said, "It was disgusting." Ballard could not be reached for comment on Sunday to discuss her team's performance at the tournament.

The Hawkeyes will be making one of their rare home appearances this season when they play host to Nebraska on Friday and Northern Illinois on Saturday in the Recreation Building. The Hawkeyes will not be returning to play at home until April 6 when they will play host to the Minnesota Golden Gophers.

Swimmers win with pure ability

By Greg Anderson
Staff Writer

Despite swimming with less emotion than it had been in recent dual meets, the Iowa men's swimming team raced past two Big Eight opponents last weekend.

On Friday, the Hawkeyes crushed defending Big Eight champion Nebraska, 70-43, before they dunked Iowa State on Saturday, 61½-51½.

Iowa men's swimming Coach Glenn Patton said that both meet results were a bit surprising. "It was a little easier than expected at Nebraska and a little harder at Iowa State," Patton said.

"In both meets we were trying to win just on our ability and not waste an emotional high."

Against Nebraska, the Hawkeyes took eight out of the 13 dual events to gain an easy win.

"IT WAS THEIR (Nebraska) final meet of the season at their place," Patton said, "so we were really worried." Iowa's strong distance crew and backstroke specialists showed Patton that he didn't have anything to worry about against the Cornhuskers.

Hawkeyes James Lorys and Al Hays had a pair of one-two finishes in the distance events, with Hays taking the 1,000-yard freestyle and Lorys the 500 freestyle.

Iowa senior Dave Ross clocked the second fastest in the Big Ten this season in the 200 backstroke. Ross went one minute, 53.86 seconds and was followed by fellow All-American teammate Tom Roemer.

Patton said that the senior from Waterloo should be ready to defend his conference titles in the 100 and 200 back, at the Big Ten meet next month, after recovering from a broken hand.

"DAVE IS BACK IN shape and is ready to have a great championship meet season," Patton said. "He, Artie Williams and Tom Roemer are going to have a real challenging series."

Iowa's Tom Williams and Mike Curley continued to dominate their specialties. Williams won the 50 freestyle and Curley the 200 individual medley.

Things weren't quite as easy in Ames Saturday.

"You really go into a lion's den when you go to Ames," Patton said. "In the nine years I've been here all five meets at Iowa State have been very tight, close battles with the exception of the first one."

Early in the meet, Iowa State looked like they might pull off an upset of the 19th-ranked Hawkeyes.

AFTER A RARE TIE in the 400 medley relay, the Cyclones built a 23½-19½ lead, until the Iowa diving brigade took over.

Freshman Scott Smith dove to the one-meter title with a score of 292.65 and he was followed by teammate Ira Stein, who won the three-meter board.

Ross said that the Hawkeyes got serious after they fell behind.

"There was that feeling," Ross said. "They (the seniors) got on some guys. It was not positive but more of a negative, like we were scraping to save the meet."

Iowa finishes its dual meet season with a 12-2 record, the most wins ever recorded by a Hawkeye team.

point for riding time to post a 13-5 win over Bob Gassman.

"I'M GLAD TO HAVE won but I wasn't real pleased with my performance tonight," the sophomore said. "I hope I got it all out of my system now, because looking forward to what is coming up I got to really turn it on."

Pete Bush, Iowa's 190-pounder, bettered Goldman's decision by one with a five-point superior decision over Mike Porcelli, 16-3, to put Iowa on top 26-13.

"The last time I wrestled him I didn't wrestle well and only beat him by two," Bush said. "After that match I vowed I would beat him by 12 or 10. I would of liked to pin him but I was happy with my performance."

Heavyweight Steve Wilbur was beaten by revenge minded Darryl Peterson, 5-1, to make the final tally, 26-16.

Iowa has now won 12 of the last 13 matches between the schools and seven in a row.

throws and made their last 15 attempts of the game.

"In this league you are never safe," Boilermaker's Coach Gene Keady said. "We're in pretty good shape but you never know what's going to happen."

AN EXAMPLE OF that was in Evanston, Ill., where perennial also-ran Northwestern knocked Indiana out of a share of the top spot, 63-51. The 17th rated Hoosiers had won 23 of their previous 24 games with the Wildcats.

Northwestern, 4-9 in the Big Ten and 11-12 overall, got 13 points from Art Aaron and a career high 14 from John Peterson — who only had 20 points total this season. Indiana had a seven game winning streak snapped and dropped to 10-3 in the league and 17-6 overall.

Minnesota went outside the Big Ten to Cincinnati and came away a 65-61 winner. Wisconsin was idle. Jim Rowinski scored 22 points and grabbed eight rebounds to lead Purdue to its 11th victory against two Big Ten losses and an 18-5 record. Michigan, 6-6 in the league and 14-8 this season, got 19 points from sophomore Center Roy Tarpley.

Seaver to join Sox

CHICAGO (UPI) — Tom Seaver says he is happy and excited; Tony LaRussa says he has a pleasant problem and the Chicago White Sox are just relieved the matter is over.

Seaver, the 39-year old three-time Cy Young award winner, agreed in principle Saturday to terms with the White Sox — the team that selected him in the compensation pick last month.

Seaver had been considering being a holdout, retiring or even signing a broadcast contract before he finally decided to join the White Sox.

"I'm very happy and excited," Seaver said. "We've reached an agreement in principle but I'm doing this with no reservations."

Seaver will join the White Sox in their spring training camp in Sarasota, Fla., either late Monday or early Tuesday.

final 32 players and trophies for first through fourth place.

All players can pick up a schedule by stopping in the Recreational Services office located in Room 216E of the Field House.

There was also an interesting change noted for this year's tournament. The organizers have adopted the three-point shot which should provide an added element of excitement. The distance will be 21 feet, the same as it was in Big Ten play last season.

HERE IS HOW the game will be scored: The game consists of 20 points until the quarterfinals. The first player to reach that number will be the winner. In both the quarterfinals and the finals a player must win by a four point margin. After a basket is scored, the defensive player gets possession of the ball at the top of the key.

There will also be a 10-second shooting clock and the three-second violation will be in effect. In order to count as a shot, the ball must hit the basket or backboard. Any further questions concerning tournament rules can be answered by consulting the rulebook.

Track team races to good times

By Brad Zimanek
Staff Writer

With a split squad, the Iowa men's track team came up with two outstanding performances last weekend.

One was at the Recreation Building in Iowa City and the other was at the Central Collegiate Championships on the campus of Eastern Michigan in Ypsilanti, Mich.

At the Central Collegiate Championships Iowa finished fourth with 47 points, just behind Notre Dame, which finished with 48. Taking first was Eastern Michigan with 156 points and close behind for second was Michigan with 122½ points.

Iowa placed ahead of Wisconsin who took fifth, followed by Michigan State, Minnesota and Northwestern of the Big Ten.

"WE TOOK FOURTH in the meet overall but we didn't push for a team score," Hawkeye Coach Ted Wheeler said. "We didn't bring a lot of people up there."

Iowa's record-setting 1600-meter relay competed in fine style, winning the event and setting a new school record. The relay just missed qualifying for the NCAA indoor championships with a time of three minutes, 11 and 33 one-hundredths seconds.

Another Iowa school record was set by Norm Balke who took sixth in the shot put with a throw of 56 feet, two inches. Balke broke Gary Kostrubala's year old record of 55-10. Kostrubala was a position behind Balke in seventh Saturday with a toss of 55-2.

Terrence Duckett picked up another victory for Iowa in the 300 with a time of 30.45, which was 23 one-hundredths of a second off a school record set by Jeff Patrick last season. Robert Smith of Iowa also did well Saturday, taking second in the 55 meter dash with a time of 6.29 seconds.

Michael Marsh hands off to Danny Waters during the mile relay in Saturday's indoor track meet held at the Recreation Building. Completing the relay team were Ronnie McCoy and Mark Trammel. The Hawkeyes won the event.

"We had school records by Balke and the mile relay team and Terrence Duckett is running real well," Wheeler said. "So this indicates to me that things are moving in the right direction."

AGAINST WESTERN ILLINOIS and Bradley the Iowa 'B' team captured 11 of the 15 events, although no team scores were kept. Ronnie McCoy of Iowa captured four events in winning the long jump, the 60 yard high hurdles, the 60 yard dash and the 300 yard run.

"We did real well Saturday," Wheeler said. Wheeler attended the meet with Western Illinois and left Assistant Coach Mike Gilbert in charge at the Central Collegiate Championships.

"I think I should be here because of the prior commitment made to Western Illinois," Wheeler said. "We had the meet set up a year ago."

Ricky McCoy, Ronnie's younger brother, kept the family name going taking the 600 in a time of 1:12.83.

"Ronnie just had a super day," Wheeler said. "He decided to stay home this weekend to concentrate on his studies because in the next few weeks we'll be traveling quite a bit."

Iowa will be idle this weekend, but will be busy preparing for the Big Ten Championships on March 3-4 at Ann Arbor, Mich.

McKenzie sprints to TAC mark

By Melissa Rapoport
Staff Writer

After considering redshirting her indoor season due to an injury, Iowa speedster Vivian McKenzie added her name to the list of 1984 TAC qualifiers Saturday, finishing second in the 60-meter dash with a time of seven and 59 one-hundredths seconds at the Track Shoe Invitational in Madison, Wis.

Despite qualifying for TAC, McKenzie wasn't satisfied with her performance. "The meet was all right," McKenzie said. "I didn't compete as well as I wanted, but making the TAC made it a little better."

On the contrary, though, Iowa Coach Jerry Hassard said McKenzie's performance was one of two outstanding performances of the meet. "The two most outstanding performances were Vivian McKenzie's in the 60 meter dash ... She's back running again. She was considering redshirting indoor season but has come back competing again," Hassard said.

THE SECOND MOST outstanding performance came not from a team member, but from Graduate Assistant Brenda Calhoun. "Brenda Calhoun, our graduate assistant, running unattached in the meet, made the TAC national qualifying standard," Hassard said. "She won the 60 meter hurdles in 8.71."

McKenzie said she decided against redshirting because she "didn't want to sit out for a whole season."

Other highlights include two Iowa records. Freshman Dava Taylor set a new record in the 300 meters in 40.19, putting her in second place and tri-captain Penny O'Brien set a record in the 3,000 meters in 9:50.6, earning fourth place honors.

Junior Mary Mol remained undefeated by winning the high jump with a jump of five feet, nine and one-quarter inches, while junior Gail Smith finished one-quarter inch out of first place in the shot put with a throw of 48-13½.

JUNIOR LYNN GNAGE set a personal best time of 4:39.29 in the 1,500 meters, good for third place. Junior Sherri Suppelsa also set a personal best in the same event with a time of 4:49.18, putting her in seventh place.

Overall, despite good performances, Hassard believes there are some weak spots.

"There were some good performances this week, but also there were some performances that lead me to believe that there's some work to be done before the big meets," Hassard said.

"I think we have a good team that is capable of competing better than it's been competing," he added. "Big Tens will give us a chance to show what we can do."

surge to a 44-31 lead with 12:33 remaining. The Buckeyes, largely due to Campbell were able to sneak within eight, but Iowa held on and built its final margin of victory.

The Hawkeye strategy was to contain Buckeye guards Ron Stokes and Troy Taylor and let the Big Ten's third-leading scorer, Tony Campbell, get his points. The senior led the Buckeyes with 19 points.

"We tried to push them (Stokes and Taylor) to the sidelines and not let them penetrate to the middle of the lane," Raveling said. "That's when they're dangerous. With Campbell, the only thing you've got on your side is time."

Iowa's Stokes played one of his best games of the year, leading all scorers with 24 points, 14 in the second half.

HE SAID THAT Raveling has gotten tough on the Hawkeyes during the past week to improve their mental toughness. In addition to two-a-day practices for the remainder of the year, Raveling has turned the sound off on the $6,000 stereo system in the Iowa locker room.

"He put his foot down as far as the extras," Stokes said.

"One of the things we need is a good mental atmosphere and a mental toughness," Raveling said Sunday. "All of the little things that (the Iowa players) have and other programs don't. I just decided to cut 'em all off and get down to the bare necessities."

He added that the Iowa practices recently have been much improved. "Everybody has spent a lot more time on the floor scrapping for the ball. We even had a couple of fist fights in practice last week," Raveling said. "It's not just a question of showing up and going through the script and going back to the dorm anymore."

Raveling rotated Carfino, Todd Berkenpas and Andre Banks at guard in order to keep a "fresh" line-up in and he said he will continue to do that at Wisconsin on Thursday.

In addition, Craig Anderson has regained his starting position. Raveling said he prefers to bring Brad Lohaus in off the bench. "We've won more games with this line-up," Raveling said. "It seems we play better with Anderson starting and Lohaus coming off the bench."

and Sweden for third place. The Soviet Union edged East Germany in total medals, 25-24, followed by Finland with 13, Norway with nine and the United States and Sweden with eight each.

The USSR regained the hockey crown from the United States, beating Czechoslovakia 2-0 in Sunday's final. Sweden defeated Canada by an identical 2-0 score for the bronze medal.

IN THE ONLY other event on closing day, Thomas Wassberg and Gunde Svan gave Sweden a one-two finish in the 50-kilometer cross country ski race. Aki Karvonen of Finland took the bronze.

The Mahres almost gained their one-two finish by default when seven of the first nine racers in the first heat missed gates and were eliminated, and only 53 of the 103 starters completed both runs. Steve Mahre led after the first run with his brother third, sevenths of a second behind.

But Phil Mahre, with the information supplied by Steve, came on with a near perfect run in the second heat to win by 21 hundredths of a second. Didier Bouvet of France was third.

"Today I was just lucky," said the 26-year-old winner, who was the slalom silver medalist at Lake Placid. "The way he was skiing I didn't think I had a chance."

Jones offers new song-in-dance

By John Voland
Arts/Entertainment Editor

There's a point in your dancing when your mind stops and evolves into a muscular intelligence — a kind of pure song for your body. — Bill T. Jones, speaking to a Modern Dance class at the UI, 2/13/84

AND THE MAN practices what he preaches — his company's (Bill T. Jones/Arnie Zane and Company) concert Wednesday night at Hancher was full of song. Sometimes it was a difficult, unheard-of song; sometimes a lyrical, quiet song; sometimes a riotous, clashing song. But throughout the evening, the tune of limbs — feet brushing the floor, hands clapping, fingers pointing — kept humming in the mind's ear.

Equally important was the lighting (by William DeMull) and the uses (or not) of sounds, musical or otherwise. Instead of dominating or directing the movements, the music/sounds suggested a course of movement; it gave a cue and then subsided. And the lighting, too, framed the actions tellingly — the stark stick-figures beginning "Freedom of Information," for instance, or the dull red glow at the end of "Shared Distance," signalling the end of the present confrontation and the others to come.

"DANCES WITH BRAHMS," set to several of that composer's Hungarian Dances for piano four-hands, was a solo piece by Jones that played with the conceit of dancing, finally, with no one. Using a plaster bust (not of Brahms; it looked like Montesquieu), Jones played to it, was frustrated with its immobility, leapt circles around it, finally abandoned it. His sleek muscularity swept around the whole stage, implying fragments of meetings, conversations and quarrels; finally, a sense of sheer physical exuberance and a dry humor brought the work to a close — Jones reunited with his bust, acceding to its unmoving stoniness, and, in fact, treasuring it.

Jones was joined by Julie West for "Shared Distance," a duet that plainly told the tale of a love, a less-than-fruitful joining, told from the beginning to the end and then returned to the middle. The title of the work was apt: West and Jones circled each other, mirrored gestures, came in brief, painful contacts, circled again. Their dance relationship was unrelentingly modern Dance master Bill T. Jones, whose company performed a modern dance concert at Hancher Auditorium last Wednesday night, pauses a moment in his work as a guest-instructor to a UI dance class.

with its consciousness of mutual need for "space" (physical as well as psychological in this instance), its halting gestures of tenderness and its occasional wild, intoxicating gymnastics.

IN FACT, the dancing mode of the whole evening was evenly spread between "traditional" modern dance gesture and response and sheer athleticism — tumbling, cartwheels, standing on shoulders and so on. It was a fascinating mix, unique in its proportions and its stark muscularity. And as mentioned above, the only-occasional use of sound made the music of the bodies in motion all that much more pronounced and eloquent.

After intermission, the entire company came back onstage for "Freedom of Information," a difficult, oblique but intriguing mix of spoken word, exploded and disjunctive gesture and ensemble movement of an order unseen up to that point in the evening.

The spoken text "prelude," written by Jones and spoken by him, Zane and Poonie Dodson, concerned a fragmented, hallucinatory telephone conversation/recreation between a man and a woman. Among the topics were sex, coffee, London, dancing and war; the skittish nature of the conversation and its retelling foreshadowed the coming dance in tone and material. And DeMull's projections — of out-of-focus coffee beans, bananas and crosses — let the audience know that it was all right to laugh if they felt like it; this wasn't wholly "serious" stuff.

AND THE DANCE that followed could have been the explication of the conversation; a dream of revenge the man has afterward; a piece that, like "Shared Distance" before it, examines the modern relationship in a general way; or none of the above. Whichever theory of "meaning" you might subscribe to, it was a fascinating, dense web of movement, with the herky-jerky of semaphore and the stylization of call and response making up the lion's share of gesture. One of the main physical "themes" was the impermeability of social and geometric circles; West — perhaps the woman in the conversation? — had become an outsider and her attempts to rejoin her fellow dancers in a circle were frustrated, sometimes kiddingly and sometimes in deadly earnest. And the blocked, stiff horizontality of long sections of the piece reinforced the importance of the circle when it did arrive as a motif.

Marvelous, exciting evening. It is to the credit of the Hancher staff and the rising stock of the UI's dance department that we can continue to book fine dancing in Iowa City and that these performers should be so willing — by example and by explanation — to share their excellence.

Television

On the networks: It is "sweeps month" where ratings set the commercial prices, so the networks roll out their big guns to do battle: Richard Lester's Superman II (ABC at 7 p.m.) makes its network debut, with the man of box-office gold losing his heart to Lois Lane, almost losing his superhero status to three superbaddies and losing the movie to Gene Hackman who steals the show as a funny con man. Part 2 of "Master of the Game" (CBS at 7 p.m.) is another one of those lavish incestuous battles over the family fortune; it's Dyan Cannon's family and the fortune is built on stolen diamonds. "Super Night of Rock 'n' Roll" (NBC at 8 p.m.) has Howard Hesseman introducing the biggest, brightest and loudest stars of the pop form. And in "Shakespeare Plays — The Comedy of Errors" (IPT-12 at 9 p.m.), The Who's Roger Daltrey has forsaken rock in favor of the Bard as he embarks on a career as a serious actor.

• On cable: For film students: Robert Altman's first major film, Countdown (TBS-15 at 11:05 p.m.) is a fictitious account of the first man to land on the moon. James Caan and Robert Duvall are the guys with the right stuff.

The Mahres almost gained their one-two finish by default when seven of the first nine racers in the first heat mis-gates and were eliminated, and only 53 of the 103 starters completed both runs. Steve Mahre led after the first run with his brother third, seven-tenths of a second behind.

But Phil Mahre, with the information supplied by Steve, came on with a near perfect run in the second heat to win by 21 hundredths of a second. Didier Bouvet of France was third.

"Today I was just lucky," said the 26-year-old winner, who was the slalom silver medalist at Lake Placid. "The way he was skiing I didn't think I had a chance."

Arts and entertainment

Simple setup of 'Master Harold' encourages audience involvement

By Alex Wilding-White
Staff Writer

It is indeed a rare opportunity to be able to see a dramatic performance, or any other arts event, in its broader context. Decades, even centuries, of history come to focus on the moment. Seeing the work's importance in relation to its genre and the society from which it came not only puts it into perspective, but helps one to see the work for what it was really meant to express.

The touring production of Athol Fugard's Master Harold... and the boys, performed at Hancher Auditorium Thursday night, provided such an opportunity. In conjunction with the play, the Center for Conferences and Institutes held a conference entitled "Master Harold: Mirror Image of South Africa." Attended by over 150, the various speakers provided several angles, historical, social and personal, on the effects of apartheid. It was the first time that a conference had been specifically arranged around an arts event at the UI. Judging from its overall effect, it is something that should be done more often.

JOSEPH ASCROFT, head of the mass communication sequence in journalism at the UI, and Michael McNulty, UI geography professor, together provided a historical overview of the significant events that led to apartheid. Once a stopover for British traders en route to the East Indies, South Africa was initially populated by widely scattered tribes, the San (often referred to as the "bushmen," a misleading name) and the Khoi tribes, most prominent in the Cape area where Europeans first settled. Today, both tribes are largely extinct.

In the 18th century, assorted groups of Dutch, German and French Calvinists started moving inland and became what are now the "Afrikaners." For them, South Africa was something of a promised land, where the difference between the "saved" and the "damned," unclear in their native countries, seemed all too obvious. This forms the root of the religious oppression that has become an integral part of apartheid today.

Interracial marriage during this time was fairly common and this race of "colored" people is one of the reasons why in South Africa, Ascroft commented, "there is more than one way of being white and more than one way of being black."

Theater

This is important to the understanding of the central relation of Sam and Hally in Master Harold.

THE SECOND PART of the conference centered on the relation of politics and social commentary with literature and the arts. Peter Nazareth, associate professor of English and Afro-American Studies at the UI, addressed the extent to which writers can rise above the circumstances they are portraying. The Calvinist issue of the "saved" vs. the "damned," Nazareth noted, is one African writers, both black and white, have had to confront. Three problems arise from this: How can the writer overcome personal prejudices?; how can the writer make the reader, who may or may not be familiar with the situation, see the truth?; and how to imply hope amid these circumstances. Citing a few examples from African literature, Nazareth pointed out that oppression hurts not only its victim but its perpetrators as well, a belief central to the theme of Master Harold.

The final speaker, Gordon Edelstein, director of the UI production of Fugard's A Lesson From Aloes, focused on the dramatic impact of the play. In viewing it, Edelstein noted, it is important that the audience not passively "see" it, like a school assignment, but to actively "experience" it. Master Harold, Edelstein commented, does not preach a message, but lets its audience think for themselves.

AND THEN THERE was the play itself. From the moment the curtain rose, one could sense being drawn into a world both familiar and distant. Set in St. George's Park Tea Room in Port Elizabeth in 1950, the play revolved around the interactions of the three-man cast, Willie (Arnanha) and Sam (Zakes Mokae), black employees of the cafe, and Hally (Evan Handler), son of the owner.

Willie, first seen washing the floor, is practicing a ballroom step which he hopes, as revealed later, will help him overcome his marital difficulties. Sam enters and with true elan demonstrates the correct manner for Willie. Over the course of the play, Willie and Sam come to represent two halves or sides of one train of thought, Willie being the learner and of simpler manner and Sam the wiser and more polished, seemingly in better control of himself. These qualities, however, reverse abruptly at the climactic moment of the play.

Hally returns from school and, in a constantly droning voice, talks of the day's academic rigors. Sam takes an active interest in Hally's subjects, with Hally switching, in turns, from encouraging approval to scholarly scorn.

THE PRIMARY TENSION of the play comes from Hally's finding out that his father, crippled and alcoholic, may be coming home. Hally pleads with his mother over the phone to keep him in the hospital, seeing his return as too much of a burden. Hally returns to his studies, and Willie and Sam eventually resume practicing their ballroom steps for a contest in New Brighton. Two and two soon make four, however, as Hally, initially disinterested, finds a perfect subject for an essay assignment in this dance contest, calling the piece "A World Without Collisions."

His mother calls back and his world is no longer without collisions, for his father is set on returning home. Hally falls apart, incapable of even expressing his fears. Sam can no longer play non-partisan spectator and tries to pry the truth from Hally. Not knowing any other means of taking control in a moment of crisis, Hally spits into Sam's face. Nothing could have torn Sam apart more than this, and just when he wants to strike back, Willie quickly steps in and restrains him. Now the strategy changes.

If the effectiveness of Master Harold could be summed up in one word, it would be accessibility. Because there are only three characters and a minimum of conventional dramatic structure, the viewer felt more directly involved with the play, as though sitting in the cafe itself. The dramatic tension, as well as the play's impact, came directly from the emotions involved. Zakes Mokae was the picture of control, exuding an intuitive wisdom and fatherly presence essential to Sam's character.

Most important, though, was the universality of the theme. With only minor alterations, the setting could just as easily have been London, Atlanta, Belfast or Chicago. For this is not a given problem in a given place, but a disease that plagues the entire human race.

Planned reading delayed to tonight

Louise Gluck, whose poetry reading was scheduled for Sunday at 8 p.m. in Shambaugh Auditorium, has been rescheduled to read tonight, same time, same place.

Robin Behn, a member of the UI's Writers' Workshop, describes Gluck's poetry as "both the stories of our common lives, and the myths — the stories of our one collective life." She says Gluck "not only crosses the boundary from the present to the past. She continually expands our ideas about what we are capable of knowing."

Gluck is the author of three collections of poetry: Descending Figure, The House on the Marshland and Firstborn. She has taught at the UI and many other universities and currently teaches at William College.
