Committee to check handicapped access

By Christine Wake

A five-member committee was appointed Thursday by the Iowa City Board of Education to examine the accessibility of city buildings.

If the county proceeds to the lawsuit, the city will have to pay for the legal expenses of the plaintiff.

The committee will recommend a plan for improving the city's infrastructure to meet the needs of the handicapped.

IU Hospitals’ hasn’t always enjoyed the privileges they do today. In 1877, it was founded as the hospital of the University of Indiana. As a result of educational and hospital needs, the school expanded to include a medical school. Over the years, the medical school was east of the Iowa River and continued through the years. The hospital was initially located in the West side of campus. The long distance from Currier to Quadzer symbolized the second social spread out between the hospital’s campus and the Medical School campus. The hospital’s campus was far from the hospital and its patients needed to the west continued through the years. The hospital was expanded from 1882 to a facility in 1882 by the hospital of the University of Indiana.

Ul budget problems get worse
By Kirk Browne
With the Ul Senate meeting the typical 183 state budget cuts were a reality, Ul Senate President Ray Brown and other Ul Senate leaders addressed the budget cuts that have been worse. According to The Journal of America, which covered the Senate meeting which took place eight years before the first grant, the Ul has become a major presence in Ul society. Since then, the Ul has been a consistent competitor in the world of higher education. The Ul has been responsible for the Ul’s status.

Toward compromise

Every year, Iowa and American soldiers die in battle to stop what we consider "our" war in Lebanon. As a citizen of America, I feel it is our duty to support our soldiers and show them our appreciation.

But as a member of the 21st century, I also believe in peace and non-violence. I believe that we can find a way to resolve these issues through diplomacy and understanding.

I am opposed to the use of chemical weapons and believe that we should work towards a stronger chemical weapons ban treaty. I also support the removal of the ban on UN inspections.

I call on my representatives, the Iowa congressional delegation, to support these efforts and work towards a peaceful resolution to this conflict.
Nicaraguan leader rejects call for internationally supervised elections

WASHINGTON (UPI) -- Nicaragua's president, Daniel Ortega, rejected Monday a call for internationally supervised elections. This was the kind of supervisory elections which were called for by the Washington administration, but which Nicaragua rejects as a pretext for the U.S. military intervention in the Central American region.

Ortega said in a statement that the elections would not be held until all political prisoners are released. He also condemned the U.S. policy of trying to influence elections through economic and military pressure.

The announcement came after the Washington administration announced its intention to hold elections in Nicaragua under international supervision. Ortega said that Nicaragua would not accept such elections, which would only serve to strengthen the U.S. presence in Central America.

Ortega also accused the U.S. of trying to influence the election results through economic sanctions and military pressure.

The announcement was made in a statement addressed to the people of Nicaragua. Ortega said that the elections would only be held when all political prisoners are released and when the United States respects Nicaragua's sovereignty.

Iowa competes with 'cream of the crop'

By Melissa Rapport

Four Iowa women's track team members will join "cream of the crop" athletes today at the Midwest regional meet at Ohio State, held in Columbus.

Junior Elaine James, sophomore Vi- nielle Mefford and freshman Darvy Taylor all qualified for the NCAA meet with under-the-nationals times. Only Mary Hill qualified for the high jump, and she's one of the nation's highest-rated jumpers.

James, who is the defending Big Ten champion, and Taylor, who won the regional, are the best in the nation. The Iowans have qualified three meets each with a time of 6.08 seconds. The lane was a national record.

KENNER, who is the defending Big Ten champion in the 60, qualified for the NCAA meet last weekend at the Frank Dotter. She did it again this time, qualifying in the 200.

The goal is for all four athletes to perform at their best, regardless of whether they qualify for the NCAA meet. They've taken with the athletes that it's the best time, and the fact that there was room.

"I love the competition with Darvy this year," Coach Jerry Rassard said. "This is how we get the best in our athletes can improve over the course of the year."

The men, two of four members of the 1983 Indoor and Outdoor NCAA national qualifying standard, are the top two of their years. The main goal for all four athletes is to obtain personal best performances this year with a time of 6.08 seconds. The lane was a national record.

Guthrie's 'Earnest' follows the tradition

By Richard P. Young

The Guthrie Theater's season-opener, "Earnest," opened with a production that was reason enough to be pleased. The play, by Oscar Wilde, is a comedy about the nature of human relationships, and it is considered one of his best works. The Guthrie's production, directed by Michael Miller and produced by Michael Laszlo, was a well-crafted and engaging performance that thoroughly entertained the audience.

The story follows the adventures of Algernon Moncrieff and Cecily Cardew, who are both involved in a romantic三角 relationship with opposite-sex counterparts. Algernon is engaged to Gwendolen Fairfax, while Cecily is engaged to Jack Worthing. However, they both have secret lovers - Cecily has a relationship with Jack, and Algernon has one with Gwendolen. When the two lovers meet, they are shocked to discover the other's identity, and the resulting confusion leads to a series of humorous misunderstandings.

Wilde's comedy is known for its clever wordplay and social commentary on the Victorian era. The Guthrie's production captured the wit and flavor of the original, with excellent performances from its cast. The actors convincingly conveyed the characters' social and emotional worlds, and the production was visually striking with its elegant costumes and sets.

The Guthrie's production of "Earnest" is a wonderful introduction to the season and a reminder of why this theater is one of the best in the country. The audience was thoroughly engaged, and the play's themes of love, friendship, and society continue to be relevant today.

Director expounds on the opening of cinema
