Poor-fund recipients will work for aid

By Chris Western

Johnson County will begin a work program next week to encourage poor fund recipients to become self-sufficient

Molly Boeke, Monday

Executive Director of General Assistance

at the Johnson County Area Community Assistance Program (JCAP), said that in order to make the program successful, it's important that those who have been helped understand the concept of self-sufficiency. "We need to help them understand that they need to help themselves," she said.

The program will involve recipients working 20 hours per week on tasks such as cleaning, painting, and other maintenance duties. Participants are not required to be in low-income housing, and will be able to keep their existing housing if they find employment.

Boeke said that her organization wants to encourage recipients to become self-sufficient and to work towards self-sufficiency. "We want to help them understand that they need to help themselves," she said.

The program will begin next week and will continue for six months. Participants will receive a stipend of $50 per week for each hour worked.

Means to what end?

Iowa lawmakers are working to develop laws to close the legal loopholes that have allowed some of the state's electric co-ops to 27 years ago. Proposed legislation would make it a violation of the state's consumer protection laws for this to happen. The bill is expected to pass in both houses and be signed into law by the governor before the end of the legislative session.

Additionally, the bill would require co-ops to disclose their financial information in a more transparent manner. This would include the details of any state and federal funds they receive and how they are being spent. The goal is to ensure that the co-ops are using taxpayers' money responsibly and that the funds are being used for their intended purpose.

The legislation also includes provisions that would allow consumers to receive refunds if their co-op fails to meet certain standards. The bill would require co-ops to maintain a certain level of service and to ensure that their rates are competitive with other providers.

In summary, the proposed legislation aims to hold co-ops accountable for their actions and ensure that the public is protected from any potential abuse of power.

Cable caution

The question of whether the government should have any say about how television and radio journalists cover public events and issues has been a hot topic in the last few years. The debate has been heating up as lawmakers consider whether to regulate the broadcast industry in order to prevent the spread of false or misleading information.

There are those who believe that the government should intervene to ensure that the media is held accountable for its reporting. They argue that the public has a right to be informed and that the government has a responsibility to protect that right.

On the other hand, there are those who believe that government regulation of the media would be a violation of free speech and would stifle the free exchange of ideas. They argue that the market, not the government, should be the arbiter of what is true and what is false.

The debate is likely to continue for some time, as lawmakers weigh the potential benefits and drawbacks of regulation.
Iran: Iraqi chemical weapons supplied by British

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Police have arrested seven American Jewish workers suspected of helping Iraqis in their urban flight to the country’s chemical weapons program. Police said the Jewish workers, who had been working in Iraq to improve their skills, were arrested at a hotel by Israeli police in the early morning hours.

The arrests come as the United States continues to pressure Iran to end its development of chemical weapons. Iran has repeatedly denied allegations that it possesses or produces such weapons.

The Jewish workers were among a group of about 20 American workers who had been visiting Iraq to help with the country’s military and industrial projects. They have denied any involvement in the chemical weapons program.

The arrests have caused concern among American politicians and the Jewish community.

The United States has repeatedly called on Iran to end its development of chemical weapons and has imposed sanctions on the country in an effort to pressure it to do so.

The arrests have also raised questions about the role of American intelligence agencies in providing information to Iran about its chemical weapons program.

Supreme Court decision allows communities to display creches

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court decision (on December 18) allowing communities to display creches or nativity scenes on public property does not necessarily advance religious liberty, the majority opinion states. The Court, in its 5-4 decision, ruled that the display of religious symbols on public property does not violate the Establishment Clause of the First Amendment of the U.S. Constitution.

The decision, widely anticipated, is a blow to the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU), which had filed suit in 1982 to prevent the display of creches in New York City. The ACLU argued that the display of religious symbols on public property violates the Establishment Clause of the First Amendment, which prohibits the government from establishing an official religion.

The majority opinion, written by Justice David Souter, states that the display of creches on public property is a legitimate expression of community values and traditions. The opinion notes that the display of creches has been a part of American culture for many years and is an important part of the holiday season.

The dissenting opinion, written by Justice Antonin Scalia, argues that the display of creches on public property violates the Establishment Clause of the First Amendment. Scalia argues that the display of creches is a religious display and that it is inappropriate for the government to promote religion in this way.

The decision in the creche case is the latest in a series of decisions by the Supreme Court that have dealt with the issue of religious symbols and the Establishment Clause of the First Amendment. In a series of decisions in the 1980s and 1990s, the Court has struck down the display of religious symbols on public property on the grounds that it violates the Establishment Clause of the First Amendment.

The creche case is a major victory for those who support the display of religious symbols on public property. The decision is likely to be used as a precedent in future cases involving the display of religious symbols on public property.

However, the decision is likely to be viewed with skepticism by those who argue that the display of religious symbols on public property violates the Establishment Clause of the First Amendment. The decision is likely to be challenged in future cases in the Supreme Court.

Gutierrez’s expertise unappreciated by audience

By Linda Norton

DIFFICULTY in communicating with athletes is something even the finest athletes have to deal with. Michigan State head basketball coach Jud Heathcote used to be one of those athletes. He was one of the best. At 23, his collection of idiosyncrasies became so extreme that people started noticing. At first, the extra attention was flattering, but later, when people started taking the idea seriously, he had to learn to deal with it.

Perhaps Gutierrez’s performance was so amazingly easy that the audience failed to collect on the effort involved in its production, and consequently failed to see the need to praise the performer for his talent and gift to us as listeners.

Music

The collection opened with a musical interlude, a short piece by BoHlas which set the tone for the evening.

In his turn-of-the-century cliche.

The Jim Carroll Band, he managed to remain rather unobtrusive throughout the auditorium. After an intermission,
"Hammerklavier" of Beethoven was performed,
and his résumé was here.

The first movement of the piano majesty. Gutierrez ended the piece elegantly. The crowd applause was as enthusiastic as the audience that could be seen throughout the room.

If he comprehended the effort, the audience had seen in the past, how could they not appreciate the effort the performer put into his performance?

Carroll’s lyrics hot, not poetry

Records

It is true that Carroll’s writing is unique. He has managed to create a style that is both haunting and evocative. His words are as much a part of his life as his music.

Today’s music is nothing like Carroll’s. It lacks the depth and emotion that Carroll’s music possesses.

And Carroll is not content with just writing. He is also a composer, and has created some beautiful music.

Iowa gymnasium seeks second title

by Dave Baltimore

"I really didn't think it was possible."

The victory in Saturday's 13-6 final over Oregon was the third straight NCAA title for the Hawkeyes, and they did it in a most unlikely manner. The Hawkeyes scored three runs on a bases-loaded walk by Iowa pitcher Tom Davis in the bottom of the fifth inning to break a 6-6 tie, and the Hawkeyes went on to win 13-6.

"I was just thinking about the last time we played Oregon," said Iowa coach Bob Fox. "We were really close to winning that game, but we lost. I think we've learned from that experience.

"The Hawkeyes scored three runs on a bases-loaded walk by Iowa pitcher Tom Davis in the bottom of the fifth inning to break a 6-6 tie, and the Hawkeyes went on to win 13-6.

"I think we're ready for the challenge."

Leo, who leads the Hawkeyes with 20 career home runs, said, "It's going to be tough, but I think we can do it."

In Des Moines, the only arena, the only place to catch a basketball game was the North Carolina State University's Coliseum. The North Carolina State Wolfpack,ranked #10 in the nation, was welcomed by the Iowa State University's Cyclone fans with a resounding cheer.

The game was a highly anticipated one, with both teams ranked in the top 20. The North Carolina State Wolfpack, led by their star player, Michael Jordan, came into the game with a perfect 12-0 record. The Iowa State University Cyclones, under the leadership of their head coach, Larry Brown, were looking for their third consecutive win.

In the first half, the game was tightly contested, with both teams交换领先多次。The Wolfpack led by Jordan's dominant performance, but the Cyclones fought back with a late surge to take a slim lead into the halftime break.

In the second half, the game was even more exciting. The Wolfpack and Cyclones swapped the lead multiple times, with neither team able to pull away. The game ended in overtime, with the Wolfpack winning a hard-fought victory.

Women cagers have ‘realistic’ chance at NIT bid

By Thomas W. Jarge

The Iowa women’s basketball team is currently in a strong position to qualify for its fourth trip to the NCAA tournament.

“The Hawkeyes are currently in the top eight in both the Big Ten and national polls,” said coach Jody Conradt. “With a few more wins, we could definitely make the tournament.”

The Hawkeyes have recorded home wins against Michigan, Ohio State, and Purdue, and are currently ranked 15th overall and 8th in the Big Ten.

The Big Ten tournament is scheduled for March 8-10, according to Iowa Hawkeye women’s basketball coach Jody Conradt. For more information, visit the Big Ten Conference website or contact the conference office at 412-858-6752.

County to ask return of funds from ADC

By Christa White

The county is planning to ask parents who are recipients of Aid to Dependent Children (ADC) to return funds they have already received. About 300 families have received a notice from the county stating that they must return a certain amount of money.

The county has been required to take this action by the state, which has been audited for the past five years. The state has found that the county has been overpaying ADC benefits.

“We are in the process of auditing our ADC program. We discovered that we have been overpaying benefits,” said County Auditor J. Patrick White. “We have notified 300 families who received benefits that they need to return a certain amount of money.”

Patton lobbying for site change

By Doug Anderson

Two years ago the Big Ten men’s swimming coaches approved the indoor Natatorium at Iowa as a permanent facility for the conference championship.

The $13 million Natatorium was constructed as the permanent site for the Big Ten indoor championship.

It contains seven pools, seating for 4,100 spectators along with four additional 1,100 seat sections and ten luxury suites.

As Illinois men’s swimming Coach Glenn Patton doesn’t agree with the decision. He has been lobbying for a site change.

“I really hope to change the venue,” said Patton. “It has not been competitive in Illinois and I plan to keep at it.”

Although Patton (left) is for the Natatorium, he said that after a couple of years, the Big Ten will move its men’s swimming championship back to a format of a rotating host for the conference meet.

Patton’s reason for lobbying with the Natatorium, and Indianapolis in general, stems from a development that has caused many. Swimming officials have requested that the Indiana Natatorium be moved to another location.

“The Natatorium was built in 1981 and has been the site of many meets,” said Patton. “It is no longer the state of the art.”

While Patton was there, the Natatorium was not as competitive in Illinois and Patton believes it will be better for the Natatorium to move to another location.

“I am finding Illinois is one of the best Illinois,” said Patton, “The Natatorium is the best in the Big Ten.”
