Ordinance on zoning could be unlawful

By Christine Walsh

A proposed Johnson County zoning nance could be in violation of a recent Iowa Supreme Court decision.

The new Planned Commercial Zoning Ordinance, which provides for county review of development plans, could be in violation of a 1981 court decision that disallowed discretionary review of development plans, according to Iowa City attorney Marion

The ordinance, which has been proposed by Jud TePaske, Johnson ounty senior county planner, and the county attorney's office, is scheduled to be voted on by the county Board of Supervisors Thursday

With the exception of Supervisor Don Sehr, the board is in favor of passing the ordinance.

In the case of Oakes Construction Company vs. City of Iowa City, the Iowa Supreme Court ruled that local governing bodies cannot approve or disapprove zoning requests on whim; only on the facts in the case.

Neely is representing Dean Oakes, a Johnson County land owner whose application for rezoning - from residential to commercial - would be the first to come under the new ordinance. Oakes was involved in the 1981 case against Iowa City.

OAKES REQUESTED in March 1983 that approximately 15 acres of his land, two miles south of Iowa City between Mormon Trek Road and U.S. Highway 318, be rezoned from suburban/residential to highway/commercial under the county's previous zoning

The new ordinance calls for the review of development plans according to what specific uses are planned and what county regulations apply, TePaske said.

TePaske said a purpose of intent was inserted in the ordinance because the supervisors wanted to limit the possibility of discretionary review. The intent states that the zoning standards have been drawn up to provide a uniform set of requirements for developments. It also states that developments must comply with the ordinance to receive county approval. TePaske said the intent statement is "intended to remove the discretionary review; to make it more of an administrative than legislative review.' But the requirements are still subject to supervisors' subjective consideration and developers may feel they are at the mercy of "political powers," TePaske said. If the ordinance is adopted, developers will have to meet ordinance standards to subdivide land; they then must ask for the supervisors' approval to get a building permit, Neely said. By having developers submit to a second review after receiving approval to subdivide, "Theoretically we are rezoning all over again and I question the legality of that," he said.

NEELY ADDED that the ordinance is vague and that more specific standards are needed so the county cannot arbitrarily deny building permits.

Neely said he has nothing against the guidelines, but added that he thinks the county is trying to deter commercial growth in the area by allowing discretionary review.

Walter Mondale and Gary Hart stormed across Georgia, Florida and Alabama Monday on the eve of "Super Tuesday" - the most critical battle of the 1984 race for the Democratic presidential nomination.

A win of all three by Mondale would put him solidly back in the race, even though Hart is favored in the two northern primaries -Massachusetts and Rhode Island.

Residents react to 'no-kids' ordinance

By Carlos Trevino

A standing-room-only crowd of Iowa City residents, including children, senior citizens, tenants, students and landlords, focused on two themes at a public hearing Monday on proposed amendments to the city's human rights

Some residents spoke of the rights of tenants to lead "adult lifestyles, without children," while others countered that housing is a "basic right" that should not be denied to people who have children.

The city council is expected to vote in April on the controversial amendments that would make it illegal for landlords to discriminate against people who have children.

The proposed amendments would also protect homosexuals, lesbians and unmarried couples from being denied housing in the rental market and would "add clarity and consistency" to the ordinance that already protects these groups in the job and credit markets, according to Mayor John McDonald.

"There is a need in Iowa City to provide housing to people who do not want to surround themselves with children," said Steve Kromer, manager of Andover Square Apart-ments. "People with children may act too quickly in blaming the housing problem on ordinances and not on a tight rental market," he said.

Kromer said the proposed amendments would "take away the rights of those who are greater in number and not as vocal," on the issue and that tenants deserve the right to "peace and quiet in their apartments."

IVA HILLEMAN, an apartment complex owner, said, "It grieves me to think you'd (the council) open all housing to children ... how can you legislate a child who screams, (or) a woman at the end of the day who chooses to vocalize for the world to hear" her child-rearing problems.

"This community allows me to associate with young couples in a childrenless environment," Tony Shebler, a tenant, said. "These (amendments) will help the landlords in Coralville with their slump."

Another tenant, Fred Breckner, said, 'As a senior citizen ... this amendment would deny me the right to seek housing where children are not accepted. I am not anti-children, but I have a right to my own lifestyle, an adult en-

But those points were quickly countered by Iowa City attorney Clara Oleson, who told the council that in many cases students who "are three and four in an apartment or having Friday night parties and late-night visitors" are louder than children.

But one student, UI junior Steve Ungs, said if the council approved the amendments, they would "take away the rights of us ... students. We won't know what life is like not having See Tenants, page 6

Florida, Texas lure students during break

Although some students may opt for a week of snow-skiing in Colorado, most students flock to warmer climates, say area travel agents.

"Florida is more popular with kids this year," said Dottie Kozik, owner of Hawkeye World Travel. "They seem to go where it's warmer, probably because we've had such a long winter."

Kozik said her agency offered trips to Orlando and to Fort Lauderdale, Fla. for $380 airfare round-trip, plus $40-a-night hotel accommodations, and also offered $220 roundtrip bus transportation to Winter Park, Colo. However, these travel packages are all sold-out now. Most people start planning trips after Christmas, she said.

Although Hawkeye World Travel caters to everyone, she said there is an influx of student travelers now. "This time of year we do advertising gearing toward students," Kozik said.

Sue Mellcker, a travel counselor with Meacham Travel in Iowa City, said Daytona Beach and Fort Lauderdale are the most popular places to go now. The cheapest trip to Daytona Beach costs $299. Phoenix, Ariz, also Lawsuit filed against Mondale committee

By Patricia Reuter

The Democratic presidential candidates left Iowa after the Feb. 20 caucuses and headed to the Northeast and to the South to drum up support. But one candidate left some unfinished business in Johnson County, at least according to a Coralville motel manager.

The Ambassador Inn, U.S. Highway 218 North and Interstate 80, filed a claim in Johnson County District Court Feb. 21 against the Mondale for President campaign charging that the former vice president's campaign committee owes $708.50 for 25 rooms it "guaranteed" but did not pay for.

Bruce Kinseth, cites the campaign committee and Robin Wright, Mondale's Johnson County coordinator for the caucuses, as defendants in the ac-

KINSETH DECLINED to comment on the particulars of the claim, saying he did not "want to affect (his) chances of getting a settlement."

However, Kinseth won't be able to reach a settlement for his claim unless Mondale's committee is served with the official notice. Lynn Oliphant, deputy general counsel for Mondale's campaign in Washington, D.C., said she hadn't heard anything about the action when contacted by The Daily Iowan last Friday, but promised to look into it during the weekend. Monday, Oliphant said she turned the matter over to Des Moines attorney Gerald Crawford. Crawford said he has not been notified of the action by the Johnson County Clerk of Court's Office yet, but would "take care of it" if and when the papers are served.

"The Mondale campaign pays its bills," Crawford said. "If it's a just debt, it will be taken care of. If it's not, we'll try to work something out."

Crawford added that if the claim is forwarded to him in Des Moines, he will probably try to work through an Iowa City attorney to settle the matter.

Since leaving the UI in 1980 to campaign for presidential candidate Ted Kennedy, she has also worked for Lynn Cutler in her 1982 campaign for Congress. On the student senate she was a member of the Budgeting and Auditing Committee and was the senate's public relations chairwoman.

THE IMPORTANT issues of her day. Vilmain said, were the senate's concerns over funding of the Carver-Hawkeye Arena and suspension of the UI parietal rule.

Another former senator was elected to the Iowa House of Representatives in 1982. Just two years earlier, Rep. Richard Varn, D-Solon, had run with the Action '80 student senate ticket.

Tobin said more than 100 out-of-state companies are under investigation for possible credit card fraud activity.

Even so, she said the amount of fraudulent claims sent to the major credit card companies in 1983 was 'really high," although precise figures have not yet been compiled. In the end, the consumer pays for the fraud through higher-priced merchandise.

Naughton said one of the most common techniques currently used by credit card crooks is to search through garbage cans outside expensive restaurants in the hope of finding a black carbon slip left over from a credit card transaction with a readable number on it.

Then, either through silkscreening or embossing, the crook can produce a card. The person who owns the card often does not know the number is being used - until the bill comes a month or question them they'll hang up."

This occurs most often in California, New York and Florida, Naughton said, places credit card companies have dubbed "hotspots."

SHE SAID in those areas, "Some merchants work as pimps for the crooks," submitting false claims to the credit card company for several hun-dred dollars of merchandise that was never purchased. When the money comes from the company, the merchant and crook split the take.

It is not certain why people fall for these schemes. Naughton said some people do not even check their monthly credit statements to see if all the charges can be accounted for. Others are fooled, she said. "They fall for the pitch, thinking it is legitimate."

Tobin said, "A lot of people don't report this kind of thing because they are embarrassed - we're not getting all the complaints about calls coming into the state."

Lihs said if a person suspects they are being called by a credit card crook, they should inquire about the caller's phone number, name or name of business. "Most of the time when you

Gifts used to lure UI student buyers

By Mark Leonard

I didn't walk out of a Friday "seminar" with a home computer or a portable color television. My friends told me I'd take home an LCD stainless-steel pen watch. I did.

Like hundreds of other UI senior and graduate students. I received a postcard in the mail from the Computerized Buying Network Inc. The company claims to provide a direct link to manufacturers across the country who deal in everything from automobiles to engagement rings. For $260 a year, the company guarantees it will find you the lowest price in the United States on 250,000 different brand

To entice college students to attend a one-hour seminar on the merits of CBN, a free gift is offered to each person who attends the session. A number printed on the postcard received in the mail is matched with a sheet brought by the CBN representative listing the prizes. The gifts include: LCD pen watches, 35 mm cameras, vacation vouchers, portable AM-FM stereos with headphones, portable televisions

Six other people attended the seminar. Gail Lundstrom, a UI senior, said it was the lure of winning one of the prizes that made her give up an hour of her afternoon to sit in a small, cold room in the basement of The Ab-

"IT SOUNDED interesting," Lundstrom said. "It definitely had my curiosity up."

Elvis Jordan, a UI senior, added, "I just came to see what type of free gift I

Sitting on a small table in the room were the prizes: a stack of 30 LCD stainless steel pen watches, seven Bentley 35 mm cameras, a pile of vacation vouchers and four Bentley portable AM-FM stereos with headphones. I didn't see any home computers, or portable televisions. But CBN Representative Kurt Miller assured us people do win the larger gifts. Out of the seven people who attended the Friday afternoon seminar, four won LCD pen watches, two won vacation vouchers and one person won a program is designed for your future," he began. "We can save you some on stuff you'll need while in school. The thousands of dollars in savings will come after you're out of school.

MILLER SAID CBN can offer such low prices to its customers because it deals directly with manufacturers. On the average, once a product is ordered from CBN, it takes 19 days to reach the Shipping charges are not included in CBN price estimates. Miller said shipping charges average 3 to 31/2 cents on

Unless the product is manufactured in the customer's state, the consumer does not have to pay state tax on any item purchased through CBN, he said. All products ordered through CBN come with servicing and warranty

In addition to the one-year, $260 program, Miller offered a "special" rate to college students attending the seminar. For approximately $700, a student can become a lifetime CBN member. Members can choose from three payment plans in order to pay off

Miller said the reaction to CBN depends on the area of the country. "A lot depends on where you are," he said. "You go down South and people are just nicer. They're friendlier and more open than people in the North. People up here tend to be more skeptical about

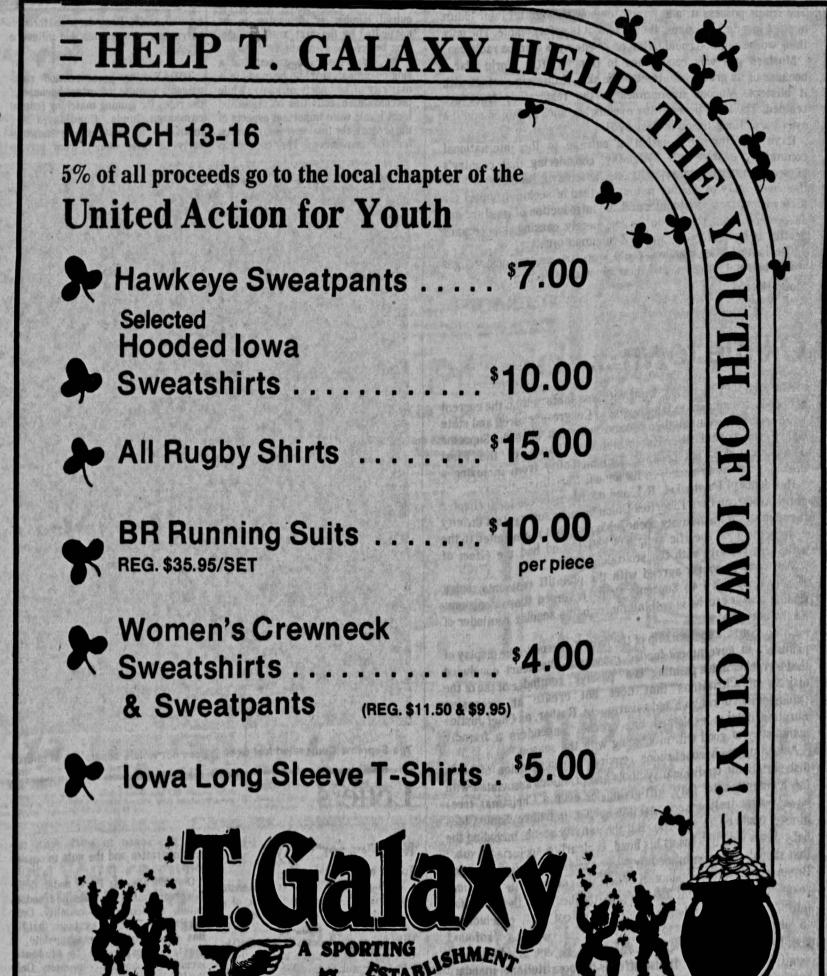

"WE DON'T try to twist any arms. We just present our program and what material we have to offer.'

Of the seven people attending the Friday afternoon session, two showed some interest in the program. Two peo-ple left midway through Miller's presentation.

'They've got my interest,''
Lundstrom said after the meeting, while clutching her LCD pen watch. "I'll probably do it, but I'm going to check with my parents on this first."

Use care until VDT verdict is in last week shrugged off con-cerns raised about the 2,500 video display terminals on campus could easily have been more cautious in their defense of the technology. Until hard data establishes the safety or danger of VDTs — and until the Food and Drug Administration issues rules based on that data - it will be up to labor unions and institutions such as the UI to form guidelines protecting workers from suspected risks of the machines.

Mary Jo Small, UI associate vice president for finance, said that "no scientific studies" indicate VDTs are health hazards. This is true. But no scientific studies indicate the machines are perfectly harmless, VDTs produce at least five kinds of radiation: ultraviolet light, infrared light, extra-low frequency, radio frequency and static electric field. While the level of these emissions is less than that coming from your average color Doug Herold television, common sense associates prolonged VDT use with backaches, eye strain and headaches. After all, how often does one sit less than two feet away from a television, staring at small marks on the screen for three or

In addition, VDTs have been implicated in cases of birth defects, miscarriage, face rash and cataracts.

WITHIN one year, four VDT workers at the Toronto Star delivered children with birth defects. Three of their coworkers, who did not sit at screens, gave birth to normal children. Since then, three more "clusters" of birth defects and miscarriages have occurred in the United States, with nothing in common among the cases

ISSUES OF 1984

Two young employees of the New York Times have developed cataracts after extended VDT use. The cataracts were similar to those produced by Xray emissions, said an examining doctor. Norwegian researcher Cato Olsen has implicated the static electric field generated by VDTs as a probable cause in more than 100 cases of face rash in Europe. And late last year, two Canadian researchers advanced a theory that the screens demand control of both hemispeheres of the user's brain - the verbal and the visual - creating mental conflict and all the bodily reactions that implies.

The stories become more frightening when one realizes the extent to which the UI depends on these machines when registering for class, when checking in at the hospitals, even when reading this opinion, one is employing information display technology.

BUT THE hazard theories remain theories, and the probable causes are just that - probable. Epidemiologist Nancy Binkin, who investigated the cases of seven miscarriages at Sears, Dallas, said of the incidents: "We would expect to see, on the basis of chance alone, several clusters similar to the one reported at Sears." And the FDA appears to be satisfied to let no proof equal no hazard. Bureau chief John Villforth says of public suspicions about VDTs: "One of the beautiful things about radiation (is) anyone who's paranoid can blame their problems on it."

UI officials will drop what appears to be a similar attitude if they have any concern for employee health, or any financial foresight. The possible dangers of VDTs can be reduced by the simple precautions of eye examinations, exemptions for pregnant personnel, 15-minute breaks for every hour spent at a VDT and reduction of static electricity in the work site. And the cost of these precautions to the school will be far less than what is accrued if the indiscriminate use of VDTs on campus is followed by the realization the machines can be truly hazardous.

Not a 'paper' party

To the editor:

The outcome of the Student Senate elections will determine the fate of a committee that has questioned the administration for seven months on the UI's policy on access to information that should be available to the public.

This committee is under the Student Senate's jurisdiction and could be dissolved after the election. The Phoenix Party must be elected to preserve this committee. The Phoenix Party is the only slate this year that has the sense to work with the administration and the guts to oppose

Only the Phoenix Party understands the preservation of academic freedom entails academic responsibility. Only the Phoenix Party understands that for this university to remain public, it must be responsive to students, faculty, staff and the community. Only the Phoenix Party realizes the function of student government is to change policy, not pass paper resolutions.

From variety, integrity

To the editor:

As presidential candidate for the Integrity Ticket, I feel it is necessary to draw student attention to the fine group of individuals that the Integrity Ticket offers, which includes representatives from many organizations and interest groups across this campus. Academic specialization is also widely varied. How can such a diverse array of individuals come together to work as a cohesive group? The members of the Integrity Ticket are united in a common goal, that goal being to meet student needs. The Integrity Ticket will bring to Student Senate the diversity to know student needs and the unity to meet those needs.

It has been exciting to work with a group of intelligent, motivated individuals as these. Students, you are making a wise choice when you vote Integrity Ticket March 12th and 13th. Michelle M. Kunkle

Brown proposes amendment to bill on school finance

By Steve Sands Staff Writer

State Sen. Joe Brown, chairman of the Senate Education Committee, introduced legislation Monday based on the School Improvement Plan recently proposed by five local school superintendents, including Iowa City Community School District Superintendent David Cronin.

Brown, D-Montezuma, said the school improvement plan was filed as an amendment to a bill that calls for the reorganization of the state's school

He said the amendment will require that each Iowa school district research a school improvement plan before Dec. 1, 1984. A public hearing will be held on that plan and the state Department of Instruction will certify it.

Funding for the improvement plan would come from an "enrichment tax" made up of one-third income tax and two-thirds local property tax. The total tax for each school district would not exceed 2 percent of the school district's budget.

The original superintendents' proposal called for a levy based solely on property taxes. But Brown said, "I told them that wouldn't sail because people don't want tons of property taxes."

THE SUPERINTENDENTS estimated the cost of funding the project would be $28 million statewide. Brown is also trying to free up about $27.7 million from the state's general fund for the school improvement project. That money is currently being used to fund Iowa public schools' extracurricular activities. He said the general fund should be used only to support education, and athletics should be funded through an extracurricular fund. That fund would draw its resources from ticket sales and donations. This proposal is also in the school finance bill.

Brown said 90 percent of the extracurricular activities in the state are funded by the general fund -$17.7 million for coaches' salaries, and $10 million for miscellaneous expenses such as transportation.

To support his shifting of the extracurricular funds from the general fund, Brown cited an Iowa Attorney General's opinion from 1936 that advises that travel expenses for participants and supervisors in interscholastic contests not be paid from public funds. He said he brought the opinion to the education committee but the members were less than enthusiastic. "Who wants to take on coaches? That's like taking on motherhood," he said.

CAC allocations total $6,855.20

The UI Collegiate Associations Council Monday night allocated $5,733.20 to three student groups, and granted $1,122 to UI graduate researcher Edward Ball.

The groups splitting the money are the Afro-American Graduate Student Association, the Instructional Design Education Association and the A. Craig Baird Debate Forum.

The debate forum requested $927.20 to attend a national debate tournament in Knoxville, Tenn. CAC Treasurer Jeff Devitt said the CAC has a policy against paying student organizations' travel expenses, but made an exception because the debaters earned their invitation to the competition.

Ball needed funds for his 10-minute narrative film on the moments immediately before a hypothetical nuclear attack. His film is called "The Day Before."

The CAC also approved the appointments of Jeff Winick and Brad Bartels to the board of directors for the United Students of Iowa - a statewide student lobby group.

Alcohol legislation goes to Senate

By Mark Leonard

UI underclassmen will still be able to frequent local bars, but there may be fewer late-night parties on campus if the Iowa Senate approves legislation passed recently by the Iowa House of Representatives.

On Friday the House rejected an amendment to raise the legal drinking age to 21, but approved legislation that bans carryout beer sales after 10 p.m., Monday through Saturday

Supporters of the legislation said banning late-night carry-out beer sales would reduce the number of accidents caused by drunken drivers.

But State Rep. Minnette Doderer, D-Iowa City, said prohibiting beer sales after 10 p.m. will probably not cut down on the number of drunk drivers.

"We may stop a few people," she said. But I doubt it. People will just buy their

The House also approved expanding the hours of alcoholic beverage sales on Sunday. Currently, stores can sell beer on Sunday from noon until 10 p.m. If the bill is approved by the Senate and signed into law by Gov. Terry Branstad, beer sales will be allowed from 10 a.m. until 12 p.m.

Doderer said owners of bars and restaurants lobbied for expanded Sunday sales hours because they believed it would help convention businesses and restaurants by increasing Sunday brunch business.

IN OTHER business, the House approved a drunken-driving bill that could result in some drivers losing their licenses for life. The bill states that anyone convicted of drunken driving in a fatal accident would have her or his license revoked for life. If an accident results in a serious injury, the person's driver's license would be revoked for one year.

Any person under 19 years of age, convicted of drunken driving, will lose her or his license until he or she reaches age 19.

Fines would also be increased under the bill. A first-offense drunken-driving charge would result in a $500 fine, a second offense would cost $800, and a third offense $1,000

In addition to increased fines, jail terms would also be increased for drunken drivers. For instance, anyone convicted of drunken driving for a third time would face a 30-day mandatory jail term.

State Rep. Jean Lloyd-Jones, D-Iowa
City, said Sunday she did not think the bill has a very good chance to be approved by the Senate as it is now written.

"I think some people went overboard and made this bill way too harsh," Lloyd-Jones said. "I'm all for toughening up drunkdriving laws, but I think that rather than doing something reasonable, they went too

Doderer said too many amendments were added to the legislation while it was being debated to allow for proper discussion of the drunken-driving issue

"It was a political thing," she said. "It's demagoguery. Too many people were try-ing to please their constituents back home by making all those amendments.'

The history of the Passion Play reveals that the tiny village of Oberammergau, in the Bavarian Alps, suffered grave losses in the Thirty Years War between 1618 and 1648. Even greater tragedy struck in 1632 when a terrible illness felled 84 of the 500 inhabitants. Fearing that they had been singled out by God, the village Elders made an oath to "keep the Tragedy of the Passion every tens years" if the were granted relief.

Quintet gives tribute to modern classics

HE EMMANUEL WIND Quintet, a chamber group hailing from Boston, showed the two sides of the 20th century coin Thursday night in their Hancher Auditorium recital: the late Romantic and the modern.

It did so with a rather unusual approach, though; their purview is the wind quintet literature, a thin but dense microcosm of the period. And further, their outlook on music of this century as a chamber group is unusual as well - they specialize in the modern, the contemporary, or the just plain brand-new.

The Emmanuels' sympathy for the idioms of the composers on the program - August Klughardt (a rough contemporary of Brahms), Elliott Carter, Anton von Webern and John Harbison (an American composer born in 1938) - was plain to hear. Their attacks don't hesitate; the difficult, meandering melodic lines in the Carter and the Harbison works were brought very clearly into focus; and the often odd voicings and ensemble demands were left odd — but very convincingly. These were composer-minded performances, by which I mean the group's self-perceived goal was to present the music with an absolute minimum of spurious "interpretation.

Klughardt's Quintet in C, dating from 1901 and thus just barely qualifying for 20th-century inclusion, is a genial, mellow affair, very reminiscent of Brahms in the third-rich harmonic development and the sweet melodies. But there are also traces of Wagner and (especially) Liszt in the surge and sweep of the Andante grazioso movement. It's as if Klughardt couldn't choose between the Wagnerian and Brahmsian schools and so synthesized the two. An attractive work, winningly played and felt by the

ELLIOTT CARTER is, of course, one the foremost composers of our age, and his string quartets and orchestral works are probably the most powerful and expressive pieces of these types before today's audiences. Carter has managed to create difficult, angular contemporary music that listeners can identify with, enjoy and mull over. sonal idioms through thick and thin, changing them only when he wants to investigate a new technique, thought or

And his Eight Etudes and a Fantasy for Woodwind Quartet (not Quintet as stated in the program) were nicely characteristic of his rhythmically shifting musical thought. Each etude was a thumbnail expression of a mood or a musical gesture, and most often both. For example, the second etude was based on canonical form and had the hurried, flurrying character of a devilwind. Though all the pieces were the more eloquent of Carter's pre-World War II period (when he was still indebted stylistically to Copland), the fourth and sixth etudes especially were reminders of the things to come from this great composer.

The Emmanuels' performance was a great success. Each contributing factor - humor (a lot of this), huge dynamic contrast, intonation and a sense of where the piece was going (an important thing even in a work three minutes long) — helped make these renditions especially fine. The terrific bassoon work of Philip Long was prominent throughout.

Anton von Webern's Langsamer Satz (German for "slow movement") comes from an early (1905) string quartet by the Viennese master, and its dark, tortured late Romanticism was more reminiscent of the later symphonies of Bruckner than of Schoenberg or Alban Berg. And it was a tribute to the skill and breath control of the Emmanuels that the piece's transcription from strings to winds hurt it not at all. In fact, the added colors of the horn (played by David Hoose, who transcribed the work) and oboe (Peggy Pearson) gave the Satz an added poignancy.

JOHN HARBISON'S Wind Quintet, dating from 1978, is an intriguing work that switches back and forth from severe atonalism and stark, declamatory melodies to an acerbic late Romanticism reminiscent of Shostakovich and Prokoviev. The first three movements (Intrada, Intermezzo and Romanza) fall into the former camp (though the Romanza, despite the thin thematic material, struck an agreeably Brittenish note); the last two, a mercurial Scherzo and a highly dramatic Finale, become more and more accessible bar by bar. Though finally inconsistent, the work is big in scope and gives the quintet members many, many things to do. And the Emmanuels responded very well. Though some tension leaked out What's more, he's maintained his per- of the Intermezzo and the Romanza due to lackluster phrasing and what seemed to be slow tempi, the drama of the last two movements was delivered fully and powerfully; and their performance foresight and planning made the listening difficulties of the quintet's first part seem less forbidding. I can assume that since the Emmanuels gave the work its world premiere, this performance can be considered

They won't take the NCAA team ampionship. In fact, it will be an ac-mplishment if Coach Peter Kennedy's women's swimming team even scores a point.

But that doesn't put a damper on the fact that the Hawkeyes, fresh off a third-place Big Ten finish, have qualified eight swimmers and two divers for the NCAA Swimming and Diving Championships beginning Thursday at the Natatorium in Indianapolis.

According to Kennedy, the favorites for the team title will be defending champion Stanford, Florida, Texas, USC and UCLA. The two top in-dividuals in the meet will be Florida's Tracy Caulkins and UCLA's Cynthia Schmitz "Cippy" Woodhead. Both are con. The I sidered sure-fire bets to be on this summer's United States Olympic team.

IOWA WILL HAVE five relays - the 200, 400 and 800-yard freestyles along with the 200 and 400 medleys joining individuals Donna Strilich (50 freestyle), Allison Lloyd (100 butterfly), Wenche Olsen (200 breaststroke) and divers Kelly Johnson, who qualified last weekend by winning the one-meter board and taking second in the threemeter event at the NCAA zone qualifing meet at Madison, Wis., and Diane Goldsworthy.

Strilich, Lloyd and Olsen will be a part of the relays along with sophomores Jennifer Petty and Vickie Nauman along with freshmen Kim Stevens, Margie Schaaf and Kris

The Hawkeyes' hopes had a slight damper put on them when Petty was forced to miss a week of practice while recovering from the flu. "That week out of the water really hurt her," Kennedy said. "She's getting better though and she should be able to do well."

THE SAN JOSE, Calif., native said she will be ready. "I just got back in the water (Tuesday) and I was pretty weak," she said. "I can't really tell you how I'll do. I hadn't practiced much before Big Tens and I did well."

Schaaf, who will be a part of the 800 freestyle relay, said she is "psyched" for her first NCAA meet. She also has an interesting theory about her swimming. "The more nervous I am before a meet, the better I swim," the Cuppertino, Calif., native said. "I know we can all go faster at this meet than we did at Big Tens."

"We're really going out there trying to bring down our times," Stevens said. "It would be really nice to finish in the top 12 in the 400 (freestyle relay) and bring home some points."

Iowa's best chances for points will come in the relays according to Kennedy. Another possibility will be Strilich in the 50 freestyle. "The 50 is the kind of race where if a swimmer gets hot she can turn in a good time,' ennedy said. "Donna is capable of do-

roundup

For the first time since 1978, an NCAA basketball tournament will be contested without the Iowa Hawkeyes vying for the national championship and the NIT will not be graced with Iowa's presence

By now it has been well documented about the woes surrounding first-year Coach George Raveling's squad - poor free throw shooting, inability to get rebounds and the lack of a consistent attack from

But the biggest monkey on Iowa's back all season was that not one of its wins, with the exception of the USC game, were close, late come-from-behind ef-

JUST A LOOK at the final scores of all 28 Hawkeye games this season can reflect that fact. If Iowa won, it won big. The closest of the 13 Iowa wins was the one point win over the Trojans in Los Angeles.

But after the Big Ten season began, the Hawkeyes had to have a big lead going down the stretch, or it was bound to be trouble. The final scores reflect that Iowa was in 12 of its 15 losses, the exceptions being the disasters at Louisville, Illinois and Purdue, until the final minutes of the game.

When it comes right down to it, the Hawkeyes did, indeed have enough talent to make a sixth-straight NCAA appearance, but basically two things went against them this season.

Breaks are a big part of any team's success and it was obvious that not many headed in Iowa's direction this season. It seems to go in cycles like that in

BUT GOOD TEAMS are said to make their own breaks and that brings us to Iowa's second problem. Talent is something that the Hawkeyes surely didn't lack on the 1983-84 squad. Unfortunately, all of the talent was in the same positions, leaving big gaps

To be sure we aren't as modern As the New Wave would have us be, But there's charm in ancient houses That charm is what (you) want to

I see the past not faded But with eyes that brightly shine, Because I own the batch of houses Called Black's Gaslight Village and it's mine

I'm not after all your money Just enough to keep me free, To keep these ancient houses in

Just so we can be. Now I rent my rooms and share my ancient past

With whosoever obliges me with a portion of their cash.

lowa not picked for NIT; Stringer unconcerned

By Thomas W. Jargo sistant Sports Editor

The Iowa women's basketball team did not receive an invitation to the National Women's Invitation Tournament, and Coach Vivian Stringer couldn't care less.

Iowa and second-place Wisconsin were the only Big Ten schools considered by the NIT selection committee, according to the tournament's chairman, Porter Crawford. The eight-team NIT field consists of Clemson, Tennessee-Chatanooga, Western Kentucky, California, Utah, Vanderbilt, Illinois State and Oklahoma, Crawford said.

"It doesn't matter to me," the firstyear Hawkeye coach said Monday afternoon after hearing of Iowa's omission from the NIT. "This is the only year that we'll even consider the NIT.'

THE EIGHT-TEAM NIT, which takes place March 22-24 in Amarillo, Texas, is not a very prestigious tourney, and Stringer thinks of it as "one, big, long trip.'

As the season was drawing to a close began to surface about a possible NIT bid for Iowa. The only reason Stringer even listened to that talk was for the sake of seniors Lisa Anderson and "I was not looking forward to it," Stringer said. "I thought we improved to the point where we were satisfied.

'We deserved an NIT bid. We've proven ourselves against our opponents. The only reason (to consider the NIT), is for the seniors to have another opportunity to prove themselves,"

AFTER LEADING A freshmendominated Hawkeye squad to a tie for third place in the Big Ten with an 11-7 record, 17-10 overall, Stringer hopes to put any NIT talk to rest, permanently. In fact, she is hoping that the Hawkeyes will become frequent participants in the more prestigious 32team NCAA tourney - an event that Stringer turned into a yearly custom at Cheyney State before coming to Iowa. "We don't need an NIT bid to prove what we've done," she said. "I really hope that in the future, we don't have round action. to worry about the NIT and we can be assured of going to the NCAAs everytime.

While Iowa's season comes to an end, Drake's is just beginning. The Bulldogs, 22-6 and winners of the Gateway Conference, received an automatic bid to NCAA tournament.

DRAKE, SEEDED seventh in the Midwest Regional, will travel to Austin, Texas, March 15 to play second-seeded Texas, 30-2, in first-

Big Ten champion Ohio State, 22-6, also received an automatic NCAA berth and will entertain 23-5 Mississippi in Columbus, Ohio, in firstround action in the Mideast Regional.

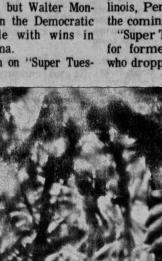

In other basketball news around the Iowa camp, freshman center Lisa Becker became only the second Hawkeye player to eclispe the 400-point mark for a season. With 21 and 19-point efforts against Michigan and Michigan State last weekend, Becker raised her

Journey to Seattle will open tonight

The annual rite of spring known as the NCAA Basketball Championships begins tonight with five games in Philadelphia and Dayton, Ohio, opening a 53-team playoff that climaxes with the championship game April 2.

In preliminary round play at Dayton, North Carolina A&T plays Morehead (Ky.) State, and Houston Baptist plays Alcorn (Miss.) State.

The tripleheader at Philadelphia's famed Palestra pits Northeastern against Long Island University, Richmond (Va.) against Rider (Lawrenceville, N.J.) and Princeton against the University of San Diego.

The first round begins March 15 and 16. The top four seeds in each region, consisting of the best teams from around the country, draw first round byes and begin action March 17 and 18.

NORTH CAROLINA A&T, located in Greensboro, hopes to prove that No. 1 North Carolina is not the only team from that state to be reckoned with in the NCAA tournament.

"We're peaking at the right time, winning our last 10 games," Aggie Coach Don Corbett said, whose team won the Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference and is making its third-straight appearance in the NCAAs.

'It's really nice to be peaking going into the NCAA. Wasn't there another team in North Carolina that peaked about the same time last year?" asked Corbett, referring to North Carolina State, which won the NCAA but failed to be selected for this year's action.

Senior center Joe Binion, MEAC Player of the Year for the past three seasons, leads the Aggies with an average 21 points a game. North Carolina A&T enters the game, which begins at 5:30 p.m., Iowa time, at the University of Dayton Arena, with a 22-6

NEW YORK (UPI) - Michael Jordan and Sam Perkins, running mates on a winning ticket at North Carolina this season, Monday were named to United Press International's All-American team for the 1983-84 college basketball season.

In capturing All-American honors for the second straight year, Jordan and Perkins formed the most lethal combination in the country and helped make the Tar Heels the premier team throughout the season.

In a nationwide balloting of 238 sports writers and broadcasters, Jordan was joined at guard by Chris Mullin of St. John's while Perkins was teamed at forward with Wayman Tisdale of Oklahoma. Patrick Ewing of Georgetown was the center.

VOTERS WERE ASKED to name two guards, two forwards and a center and Jordan was the overwhelming choice, being named on 194 ballots. Tisdale received 136 votes, Perkins 125, Ewing 118 and Mullin 93.

The second team consisted of guards Leon Wood of Fullerton State and Alvin Robertson of Arkansas, center Akeem Olaiuwon of Houston and forwards Keith Lee of Memphis State and Michael Cage of San Diego State.

On the third team were guards Bruce Douglas of Illinois and Mark Price of Georgia Tech, center Melvin Turpin of Kentucky and forwards Devin Durrant of Brigham Young and Michael Young

By Steve Sands

Students are the real losers when teachers are required to teach six of seven periods one trimester a year, teachers told a public hearing of the Iowa City School Board Tuesday night. More than 200 people, many of them teachers, crowded into the Sabin building gym to protest the board's current policy of having high school teachers instruct two trimesters of five classes and one trimester of six classes each year. This policy resulted from a grade reorganization that took place this year. Central Junior High closed down and ninth graders were moved up to the two city high schools. The extra grade meant teachers were required to teach more classes.

Teachers and the school board could not come to an agreement on the issue during salary negotiations in January. The two parties agreed to hold the public hearing Tuesday and the school
