Reagan praises Salvador

WASHINGTON (UPI) - President Reagan praised Salvadorans for their strong defense of the polls in the presidential election in Congress, saying that the strong turnout was due to the recent elections.

Reagan praised the Salvadorans for their strong defense of the polls in the presidential election in Congress, saying that the strong turnout was due to the recent elections.

Reagan said members of the Salvadoran government, who had been criticized for their handling of the elections, had indicated that the elections
would be held on time.

Reagan said his administration would continue to support the Salvadoran government's efforts to hold a free and fair election.

Soviet warships will carry out joint maneuvers with Cuban navies, as well as in Pearl Harbor. They are expected to remain in Havana for 10 days, the last of which will be spent at the port of Porto Rico.

RFK: '64 A RACE TO THE DEATH

Robert F. Kennedy, who was assassinated in 1968, spent what he described as a "race to the death" in his race for the presidency in 1964.

RFK was a candidate for the Democratic nomination, but he was assassinated on June 5, 1968. His campaign was marked by controversy and charges of corruption.

The book, "RFK: A Race to the Death," by David Talbot, is scheduled for release in October.

UI WOOS HIGH

UI students will attend the University of Iowa's first ever "UI Woos High" event.

UI Woos High is a social event that will take place on campus to celebrate the university's achievements and promote student pride.

The event will feature music, food, and activities throughout the day, with a special focus on showcasing the university's academic programs and athletic teams.

Vehicle vandalism

The Iowa City Police Department is investigating a series of vandalism incidents that have occurred on campus in recent weeks.

The incidents include graffiti on buildings, defacement of public art, and destruction of property.

Damage to the university's reputation is expected to have a negative impact on the university's finances and student enrollment.

The university is working with local law enforcement and campus security to identify and apprehend the perpetrators of these acts.

UI Campuses report a rise in student involvement in community service programs.

UI students are encouraged to participate in volunteer opportunities and community service projects to make a positive impact in the local community.

The new computer will be used to enhance the university's ability to offer online courses and distance learning programs.

UI wows high school scientists

By Dawn Unruh

Iowa State University Curr.

UI officials will travel this week to Iowa high schools to introduce students to UI science research programs offering college credit and scholarships for research work. Students will be encouraged to seize the opportunity to work with scientists and more in research projects in such fields as physics, medicine and bacteriology. They present their findings at annual symposiums and for scholarships against other peer researchers.

Today's officials will be at Des Moines Roosevelt High School. They also plan visits to Marshalltown and Davenport. George Oliff, coordinator of the secondary science training program at the Division of Continuing Education, said the students at the Westphal Talent Search, "have an opportunity to work with the UI's outstanding scientists." European attitude is hypocritical

By Jeffrey Miller

This is the second in a three-part series on the MEPP attitude toward Europe. The first appeared on July 20.

The MEPP European policy is characterized by a consistent pattern of verbal support for European integration, accompanied by a belated, begrudging, and often half-hearted commitment to action.

On May 15th, the MEPP European Committee for the Reform of the European Parliament (MEPP) held a press conference in Brussels to announce a new policy statement on the future of Europe.

The statement was widely interpreted as a rejection of the concept of a single European currency, but also as an endorsement of greater political and economic integration.

In his opening remarks, MEPP President Jean-Claude Juncker declared: "We believe that the European Union must be based on a solid economic foundation, and that the only way to achieve this is through a single currency.

However, we also recognize the importance of national sovereignty, and therefore we cannot support a single currency without first implementing a common fiscal policy."

The announcement was met with widespread criticism from the European Commission, which described the MEPP's stance as "unrealistic" and "counterproductive.

But Juncker maintained that the MEPP's position was consistent with the principles of federalism, and that it was "necessary to ensure that the European Union is a partnership that respects the diversity of its member states.

In addition, the MEPP's new policy statement also called for the creation of a "European Border Union" to replace the current Schengen Agreement, which has been widely criticized for its lax enforcement of immigration laws.

The MEPP's proposals received little support from other parties, who described them as "unrealistic" and "unachievable.

But Juncker remained optimistic, saying: "We believe that the MEPP's proposals are the only way to achieve real European integration, and we will continue to work towards their implementation."

Despite the controversy, the MEPP's new policy statement was widely seen as a major setback for the European project, and it raised serious questions about the future of the European Union.

The consequences of the MEPP's decision are likely to be far-reaching, as it could lead to a breakdown of the current system of cooperation and a return to a more nationalistic approach.

But Juncker remained defiant, saying: "We believe that the European Union is stronger when it is united, and we will continue to fight for its survival.

But the MEPP's proposals are unlikely to be accepted by other parties, who have already expressed their opposition to the creation of a European Border Union.

In the coming weeks and months, the European Union will face a crucial test of its ability to adapt and evolve, as it deals with new challenges and threats.

But Juncker remained hopeful, saying: "We believe that the European Union is a powerful and resilient organization, and we are confident that it will continue to play a key role in shaping the future of Europe."

So while the MEPP's proposals may not be immediately accepted, they are likely to spark a new debate about the future of the European Union, and the role that member states should play in this new order.

The MEPP European Committee for the Reform of the European Parliament (MEPP) holds the power to shape the future of Europe, and its decisions will have far-reaching consequences for the continent and beyond.

France may send observers to Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Rival Lebanese groups Wednesday agreed to create a tripartite PMF, a multi-national force that would involve the U.S., the United Nations, and France in an effort to bring about peace in Lebanon. The United States, through Secretary of State James Baker, has proposed a similar plan and France pledged to contribute troops. The French announcement comes at a time when the United Nations has asked both sides to disarm. It also follows the French withdrawal from Lebanon.

The attacks on the French garrison Tuesday night, no more than five miles from the French government quarter in Beirut, were the first of their kind in Lebanon. The attacks were carried out by the Bekaa-based faction of the Muslim Brotherhood, a group that has been active in Lebanon for several years.

France has been sending observers to Lebanon for some time, but this is the first time the country has agreed to send troops. The French have been asked to provide the bulk of the force, which is expected to number several thousand. The United States and the United Nations will also be involved, but their role is not yet clear.

The agreement was reached after days of negotiations between the French, Americans, and Lebanese leaders. The French insisted on a role in the peacekeeping force, and the Americans were willing to accept that. The Lebanese were willing to accept the presence of foreign troops, but they also wanted to keep their own army in the country.

The agreement was also reached after the French had been refused access to the Beirut airport and the United States had been refused permission to use the airport for flights.

Israel and Egypt to sign peace treaty after five years of cold peace

JERUSALEM (UPI) — The 50th anniversary of the establishment of the State of Israel was marked Monday by a visit to the Western Wall by President Jimmy Carter. The visit was symbolic of the peace talks that have been underway between the two countries for the past five years.

The peace talks began in May 1988, when the two sides agreed to hold talks on the basis of the 1967 peace treaty. The talks have been ongoing ever since, and there have been some breakthroughs, such as the agreement on the status of Jerusalem and the status of the West Bank. But there have also been setbacks, such as the failure to reach an agreement on the status of the Golan Heights.

The peace talks are expected to continue in the coming weeks, and there is optimism that a final agreement can be reached.

U.N. report confirms Iraq used nerve gases on Iran

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — A U.N. committee investigating alleged chemical weapon attacks by Iraq on Iran in 1987 has released a report confirming that Iraq used nerve gases on Iranian troops.

The report, based on evidence collected during a fact-finding mission in Iraq, states that Iraq used nerve gases, which are known to cause respiratory failure and death, during the Iran-Iraq war.

The report also states that the use of nerve gases by Iraq is a violation of international law and that Iraq is responsible for the attacks.

The U.N. committee has called on Iraq to investigate the allegations and to take steps to prevent the use of chemical weapons in the future.

In-depth analysis

The U.N. report confirms that Iraq used nerve gases on Iranian troops during the Iran-Iraq war. This is significant because it is the first time that the U.N. has confirmed that Iraq used chemical weapons in a conflict.

The use of chemical weapons is a violation of international law and is prohibited by the Chemical Weapons Convention. The U.N. report confirms that Iraq violated this convention.

The report also states that the use of chemical weapons by Iraq is a violation of international humanitarian law and that Iraq is responsible for the attacks.

The U.N. report has been welcomed by the international community, which has called for a halt to the use of chemical weapons in conflicts and for a robust international response to such attacks.

However, the report has also been criticized by some, who argue that the U.N. report is based on suspect evidence and that the use of chemical weapons by Iraq is not proven.

WASHINGTON (UPI) -- The Senate Taxation Committee today became bogged down in highly technical and at times heated discussion of proposed federal income tax legislation. The committee was considering a sweeping bill that would, among other things, impose a new federal income tax and provide for a comprehensive overhaul of the current tax system.

The bill, which was introduced by Sen. Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., and Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., would cover an estimated $1.5 trillion in revenue over the next 10 years. It would raise taxes on high-income individuals and corporations while providing tax breaks for low-income families and small businesses.

During the debate, members of the committee argued over various provisions of the bill, including the proposal to increase the top marginal tax rate from 39.6% to 43.4% for individuals earning more than $1 million.

The committee also discussed the issue of capital gains tax rates, with some senators calling for a reduction and others arguing for maintaining the current rates.

The committee is expected to vote on the bill later this week, but it remains unclear whether it will be passed by the full Senate. The House of Representatives has already passed a similar tax bill, and President Obama has expressed support for the legislation.

Fresh troops reach Honduras

The first of 1,000 fresh U.S. troops arrived in Honduras Monday to take part in another set of military exercises, code named "Operation Unified Vision.

The invasion of the third and final phase of the two-week-long maneuvers, which are to be completed by the end of the month, began at midday Monday on the ship docked off the Honduras coast.

It was the first time the United States had been called in to train the Honduran army and it was the first time it had fired any weapons in the region.

A SAVvy ALL ODDS has at least one plot too many, and coast-to-coast cast that's a little too intimate in contemporary drama. "600" is a% of its time last week, and for that it does manage to achieve a certain amount. It's all at once too much, yet about a football player who is trying to make it on his own. The football player, played by Jeff Bridges, is an outcast, but he doesn't let that get in the way of his career. He's a tough, determined player who is willing to do whatever it takes to succeed. Meanwhile, he's trying to find a girlfriend who has skipped town.

Jeff Bridges and Rachel Ward are every caught in a combustible web of romance and adventure against a backdrop of excitement and tension.

Fort will leave cage squad; cites lack of playing time

By Melanie Rappaport

When Iowa freshman basketball player Johnny Fort decided to join the Hawkeyes basketball team a year ago, little did he know he'd be heading to the Siouxi after his first intramural season.

Fort, a 6-foot-8 guard, has decided to leave the Hawkeyes after the fall semester because of lack of playing time, he said.

"I played a lot of intramural ball this year, and that's why I decided to leave," Fort said. "I didn't play much in Iowa, and I just didn't want to sit around and practice for nothing."

Fort, who played in two games and scored a season high of four points this season, left the team in mid-December after Fort had been sitting on the bench for four consecutive games.

"I just decided to leave and try something else," Fort said. "I'm not the best player, but I thought I could do something else."
