Corporation formed to lure industry to lowa City

The board members of the non-profit nd tax exempt Iowa City Development Corporation were approved by all hree factions Wednesday afternoon. former Iowa City Mayor Mary Neuhauser last August, was headed by E. Norman Bailey, owner and manager of North Bay Computerware, 326 Second St., and Martin T. Kelly, plant manager at Thomas & Betts Corp., U.S. Highway 218, South. Bailey and Kelly were named to represent the Iowa City Chamber of Commerce on the development corporation's nine-member board of directors. Bailey will serve as chairman of the board until the board of directors formally elects a chairman. Other board members include chamber appointees Bill Bywater, Lyle Miller and Jim The ad hoc committee, appointed by Shive; city appointees Mayor John

CITY COUNCILOR William Ambrisco said the development corporation's formation means, "The message that will be going out (to industries) rather clearly now will be 'We believe this city really wants us here."

Keith Kafer, executive vice president of the chamber of commerce, said financing for the corporation will come from the city council and the local business community.

"The city council has set aside, at least for this year, $40,000, he said. "The remainder of the cost will come from the business community, whether it is $40,000 or whatever."

Ambrisco said while the UI will not financially support the Iowa City Development Corporation, "The university is talking about in-kind services in lieu of money, such as offering talent, expertise and voluntary help from within the university. It's hard to put a dollar amount on the contacts the university has."

JEFF ROMINE, assistant vice

merce, said, "The ICDC will recruit and attract new businesses and also work for expansion and development of the current businesses.

The corporation will not recruit "smoke-stack industry" said Councilor Ernest Zuber, but will look for "hightech" type businesses.

The board members will hold an organizational meeting at 8 a.m. April 6. "Getting the message out is the first function," Ambrisco said.

Kafer said, "They will be setting out in the direction to try and be competitive, but initially they will probably just try and set up what they will do."

The corporation will contact some businesses directly, but will do most of its work through the Iowa Development Commission, Kafer said.

"Ninety percent of the leads come through the Iowa Development Com-

One effect the new corporation will have is to change the role of the chamber of commerce's 25-member development committee.

Kafer said the chamber committee "will probably not have the same role," but will assist the ICDC through research. He said the size of the chamber committee will probably also be

Probe weighs 'great sacrifices'

WASHINGTON (UPI) - President Reagan praised Edwin Meese for his "great economic sacrifices" in joining the administration, but tax returns show Meese and his wife have reaped their biggest income since moving to Washington, sources said Wednesday.

Ursula Meese, wife of the attorney general-nominee, produced most of the financial boon by landing a $40,000-a-year job as head of the William Moss Institute, a non-profit center founded by a wealthy Republican oilman desiring more research into America's future. Based on their joint federal income tax return, Meese and his wife earned pre-tax income of $115,762 in 1982, sources close to a Senate investigation of Meese's finances said. Meese's salary as presidential counselor that year was $60,653. The Meeses had an average income of $70,731 in the six years before he came to Washington in late 1980 to oversee Reagan's transition to the Oval Office, the sources said. During those years, their highest income was in 1980, when they reported $91,431, including what Meese routinely lopped together on his tax return as law practice, legal services and consulting work.

MEESE LISTED on his 1981 financial disclosure statement at least $15,000 in 1980 income from activities related to Reagan's campaign and transition to office. Ursula Meese, who did not work full-time before moving to Washington, has said in newspaper interviews her husband's salary as a lawyer and University of San Diego instructor was halved when he joined the administration.

Meese's confirmation as attorney general has been stalled by a flurry of questions about his finances, including acceptance of several loans

Mondale and Hart duel in TV debate

NEW YORK (UPI) - Walter Mondale blasted Sen. Gary Hart Wednesday for television ads saying he wanted to "kill American kids," while Hart accused his rival of repeatedly lying about his positions on foreign policy and civil rights.

The two front-runners for the Democratic nomination engaged in their most bitter exchange of the 1984 campaign in a nationally televised debate on CBS just six days before the delegate-rich New York primary.

Hart and Mondale used almost every question opposed during the one hour debate to take off after each other. Civil rights activist Jesse Jackson, often the butter between the two comb tants, finally concluded there wasn't much difference in his two rivals. "This rat-a-tat-tat," he said of the Mondale-Hart crossfire "is the same policy in the same direction, one is just a little bit slower than the other. It jumps from the Middle East to Central America and back again. It never drops to South Africa," he said with disgust in his voice as the crowd at Columbia University gave its strongest applause of the debate.

Time and time again during the session the two front-runners took after each other, usually on matters of foreign policy.

'Vice President Mondale knows better than to say what he's saying." Hart concluded one exchange.

"I KNOW EXACTLY what I'm saying," Mondale fired back. He never called Hart "Senator," often called him "Gary" or referred to him in the third person as "Gary Hart." Mondale unleashed his strongest attack against television ads Hart has run suggesting that the former vice president would send American troops to Central America and to the Persian

"No one has opposed Reagan policy more than I, and you run ads saying support Reagan policy and want to kill American kids down there (in Central America)," Mondale said. "Why do you run those ads and say I want to kill

"All my life, I've fought for peace," Mondale said. "I think you ought to pull those ads (off television) right away.' Hart fought back first by attacking Mondale campaign statements.

"Why do you question my commitment to arms control and civil rights when you know my commitment is just as strong as yours?" Hart asked. "The ads illustrate a point. This country cannot deploy young Americans in every

UI: Alcohol program needs more

The UI administration now wants Health Iowa, a fledgling alcoholawareness program, to receive about $7,500 more in mandatory student fees

The UI Student Senate and Collegiate Associations Council decided March 8 to allocate 17 cents per student per semester to the two-year-old program

UI Vice President for Student Services Philip Hubbard said Wednesday he would like to see Health Iowa receive more than the about $5,100 recommended by the student government. Hubbard has met with student government leaders to remedy the Tom Palmer, CAC president, said the negotiations with Hubbard have not passed the "discussion phase." Palmer said student government considers Health Iowa a low priority compared to other student services because only 850 UI students used the program in its first year - and this use was concentrated in the residence halls.

Working out a compromise may present problems, Palmer said, because a new senate has been elected since the original funding recommendations were made. He said the new senate is capable, but not as experienced as the old senate in terms of budgeting.

Hubbard said he has submitted a proposal to both the Collegiate Associations Council and the UI Student Senate seeking their approval for cutting half of the mandatory student fee contingency (currently 6 cents) and syphoning 22 cents from the Union renovation fund recommendation (of $1.72 per student per semester) for

ACCORDING TO Billie Lindsey, director of Health Iowa, the service originally requested $1.11 per student per semester, in addition to the $4 recommendation for Student Health. The ad hoc committee on mandatory student fees - including representatives from both branches of student government - recommended no

The senate and CAC voted to fund 17 cents per student per semester with an additional amendment assuring support for the continuation of the Health Iowa program.

"The question is where the money will come from," Lindsey said. She said if Health Iowa does not receive the $1.11 it requested the program will no longer exist. "I can't just say there will be a program without funding."

However, Hubbard pointed out the health awareness service could receive funding through UI Student Health and

Beer garden permit requests up

By Jeff Eichenbaum

Several Iowa City restaurants and bars have applied for "outdoor service areas" permits, allowing them to serve liquor and food outdoors. If all the new applications are accepted, a record number of food and drink establishments will be competing for outdoor business.

But the Iowa City Council needs to decide several questions before the applications for beer gardens and sidewalk cafes are accepted, according to City Clerk Marian Karr.

Karr said establishments that have previously held outdoor service permits and have already had their permits renewed are Bushnell's Turtle, 127 E. College St., Gabe's, 330 E. Washington St., Magoo's, 206 N. Linn St., Murnm's, 21 W. Benson St., and the Sheep's Head Cafe, 209 N. Linn.

The Time Out Restaurant, 1220 U.S. Highway 6, West, the Speakeasy, 630 Iowa Ave., and Studio 114, 114 Wright St., have requested city permission for outdoor service areas, Karr said. Several other restaurants and bars have expressed an interest in opening outdoor service areas but are waiting for the city council's decisions before putting in offical applications.

Assistant City Manager Dale Helling said there is a difference between a beer garden and a sidewalk cafe. A beer garden is built on private property. Gabe's and Bushnell's Turtle operate that kind of service area.

Regarding the downtown mall area, Helling said the city council is in the process of "putting together provisions to allow stores to lease (a maximum of) 10 feet out in front of their store,' for use as an outdoor service area.

The council must also make "some form of delineation" for the outdoor service areas in order to comply with state liquor regulations, he said. Some options mentioned have been to enclose the areas with fence or "maybe roped off." Helling said. Gabe's Manager Joel Newhard, who

Lt. Ralph Moody said the UI's financial crunch may have been a con-tributing factor in the loss of seven officers and three guards.

Moody added that some of the officers left campus security to apply for positions at city police forces.

Campus security's low pay situation has been aggravated by a freeze in state Board of Regents merit raises. The merit system — which covers the three state universities - has been frozen for the past two years. Account Specialist Josephine Gibbs said no officers have been given merit raises since 1982. This situation is not unique to campus security, no UI merit staff have received raises since 1982. The last cost of living raise UI merit staff received was in 1982, Gibbs said.

KRUI goes FM, begins a new era

"No static at all ... FM." So went the lyrics of the first song played by Iowa City's newest FM station, KRUI, Wednesday

Although student radio KRUI's signal didn't reach the airwaves until 7:03, three minutes later than expected, the short delay didn't seem to bother the crowd of about 50 people who gathered for the long-awaited event in the station's studio in the basement of the South Quadrangle Residence Hall.

"It feels great," said Peter Koenig, KRUI general manager. "It has finally happened."

However, Koenig, who has olayed an instrumental role in KRUI becoming an FM station. will leave the station this morning to pursue a career at another sta-

Halfway through the opening Steely Dan song, the station played a series of pre-recorded messages from UI administrators, student leaders, local officials and state politicians that congratulated the KRUI staff for "going FM."

Gov. Terry Branstad wished KRUI luck in its new era. Branstad reminisced about listening to the station as a UI undergraduate "back in the late '60s" when the station was known as KWAD.

UI PRESIDENT James O. Freedman also expressed best wishes for the station, saying, "As one who will be able to receive the signal, I look forward to joining your other listeners.'

UI Associate Vice President for Finance Casev Mahon also congratulated the station on its FM status. Mahon said she worked at the station as a newscaster in 1969, when the staff used to play Beatles records backwards to see if Paul McCartney was dead.

KRUI, located at 89.7 on the FM dial, will broadcast 24 hours a day using a staff of UI students. Presently the station has 65 announcers, a 30-member news staff and eight sports staffers.

While the format of the station is not expected to change, Bill Bonney, one of the station's announcers, said the transition to FM will mean "all of a sudden we will have to be tasteful."

UI human rights award has no winner this year

By Colleen Kelly Staff Writer

The Philip Hubbard Human Rights Award, with its prize of $1,500 to the selected UI student, will go unclaimed this year.

The UI Human Rights Committee decided Wednesday not to grant the award, which is offered in honor of the UI's current vice president for student services, largely because the committee received only two nominations.

Approximately 60 administrators, faculty members and organizations were invited to nominate UI students actively advocating civil rights. Only two responded with nominations.

"This year the nomination process did not generate as many applications as we had hoped." said Robert Clinton, Human Rights Committee acting chair-

Clinton stressed it was not the calibre of the two nominees that spurred the committee to withhold the award. The committee declined to release the two names.

The invitation to nominate was sent to selected administrators and department heads as well as to student centers, such as the Women's Resource and Action Center, the Afro-American and Chicano/Indian American cultural

"If this means that students have not been very active in human rights this year, then I'm worried," Hubbard said. "But surely there are students doing good work who are just not getting any

Clinton suggested the Human Rights Committee may "rethink" the nomination process for future years. "However, this process has generated a sizable amount of nominations in the past."

One aide to the Senate Judiciary Committee, which has postponed hearings pending the criminal inquiry, predicted turning the matter over to an independent investigator would postpone Meese's confirmation "right up to the election and probably beyond."

Meese has three attorneys assisting him, including longtime friend E. Robert Wallach, Leonard Garment, who represented Richard Nixon during Watergate, and Max Kampelman, a Democrat who headed a U.S. diplomatic delegation.

Deputy presidential press secretary Larry Speakes said Wednesday he does not know who will pay Meese's lawyers. Garment said their compensation "will be done in a way that will be faultless" and raise no questions.

Hearings on Meese's confirmation were interspersed with commendations from Republican committee members about the nominee's financial sacrifice in order to serve the financial difficulties appeared to stem mainly from his decision to buy an expensive home in McLean, Va., before selling his California home - not because he took a pay cut.

James Jenkins, Meese's deputy, said in a phone interview Wednesday Meese's net worth has dropped "from roughly $500,000 in 1980 to something on the order of $300,000" in 1984, mainly because of "a severe drop in the market value of his house" in California before its sale.

At his confirmation hearings, Meese testified he was helped out of his cashflow problems not only by the loans, but by his wife's taking a job. "I wouldn't be surprised that what with Mrs. Meese's working, it would in fact turn (their income) back around and start it back up," Jenkins said.

Based on the center's 1982 income tax filing with the Internal Revenue Service, Moss put up $330,000 to run the institute. The center's most-publicized activity to date was an extravagant Washington dinner in January 1983 honoring six leading Americans, including Walter Cronkite.

Foreign policy politics

During an election year, voters can expect politicans to peddle and fuss over a certain amount of false, irrelevant issues aimed at taking attention away from the real, more perplexing problems of the day. Reagan's school prayer was such an issue, designed to keep the public's attention off the federal deficit, the defense budget and other Reagan mishaps. The Democrats, not to be outdone, have found their own decoy issue, and both Walter Mondale and Gary Hart are jumping on it.

Sen. Daniel Moynihan, D-N.Y., has introduced a bill to move the U.S. embassy in Israel from Tel Aviv to Jerusalem. The senator said the bill should be passed to demonstrate America's support for Israel. He probably hopes the issue will alienate President Reagan from the Jewish vote (the president is against moving the embassy) even though the Jewish lobby was surprised by the bill's

There are lots of reasons not to support the senator's bill. For one thing; it is the president's exclusive right, not that of Congress, to conduct diplomacy and to determine the country's recognition policy. For another, America's embassy has been in Tel Aviv since 1948, and Israel doesn't seem too offended. Only Costa Rica has its embassy in Jerusalem. But more important, with America trying to patch rifts with Arab countries, why begin alienating those countries now?.

America has been Israel's strongest supporter since its founding and probably will continue to be so. Sen. Moynihan's bill has nothing to do with supporting Israel, but everything to do with election-year politics. And though both Walter Mondale and Gary Hart have said they'd move the embassy to Jerusalem, the issue should not become an election-year issue, especially when there are so many other more important things to debate.

Elections breed hope

The first round of elections in El Salvador are over and, despite some sporadic efforts by the guerrillas to sabatage them and confusion at a number of polling places, the results were modestly

It is impossible for a country in the midst of a war, with terrorism from the right and left, with the moderate center decimated by government death squads and with major problems of illiteracy, to run free and fair elections. Nevertheless, it was important to try and begin the process of democratic elections.

But no one should believe that these elections were any solution to the problems there. The elections do not reinstitute the land reforms that were halted by Roberto d'Aubisson; they do not halt death squads that have murdered centrist and leftist elements needed to rebuild the country; they have not found a way to include the guerrillas in negotiations to end the fighting; and they have not guaranteed that the army will respect the power of the next

If d'Aubisson wins, there will be increased terror, because he has been strongly tied to

The United States must be unambiguous. It must be made absolutely clear that no U.S. money will go to El Salvador unless substantial progress is made in economic and political reform and unless the death squads are halted. The United States does not have the right to order another to follow any specific path, but it does have the right, the obligation, to see that American money is not used to support regimes that do not support our values.

Terminal trendiness

"In the trendy zones on Chicago's Near North side, the Yuppie vote did not answer Hart's call ... as they had in the Eastern primaries," said a report in a recent weekly newsmagazine.

A New York Times editorial proclaimed this "The Year of the Yuppies," young urban professionals who supposedly form the core support for Sen. Gary Hart's candidcay.

It seems there are more Yuppies emerging from primary polling places than a young pup can yap at. Almost invariably they're described as "trendy" voters living in "trendy" zones, with a decidedly derisive twist on "trendy."

Some nagging questions lurk behind the use of these labels to describe large groups of individuals. Exactly who are the Yuppies? They are "educated, computer-literate, audiophile children of the baby boom" who "still listen to rock music, still wear wire-rimmed glasses," according to the New York Times editorial. There. Doesn't that give you a clear picture of the

Ask yourself and several friends exactly what "trendy" means. You're not likely to get a consensus on a precise and useful meaning to guide you on the word's use.

So why does the use of these terms persist in campaign reports and commentaries? Playwright Robert Bolt gives a plausible explanation in one of his essays: "We no longer have, as past societies have had, any picture of individual man by which to recognize ourselves and against which to measure ourselves; we are anything. But if anything, then nothing, and it is not everyone who can live with that ... Socially we fly from the idea of an individual to the professional describers, the classifiers, the men with the categories and a quick ear for the latest subdivision, who flourish among us like priests. We do what we can to describe and classify ourselves and so assure ourselves that from the outside at least we do have a definite outline."

Journalists who fall victim to the offhand use of terms like "Yuppie" and "trendy" can justly be accused of trendiness, with ntent to oversimplify.

'80s America shuns its culture

This is the last in a three-part article on American culture in Europe.

By Jeffrey Miller

MPERIALISM of any sort requires a sense of destiny among the imperialists, a shared belief that the day has been seized and with it the world: witness Britain in the 19th century, Germany in the 1930s, Iran today. Culturally speaking, however, Americans not only lack a sense of destiny, they don't have a sense of existence.

Traditionally this attitude is blamed on an economic system that, in its obedience to the Invisible Hand, has always ignored what is new and native in both the elite and popular arts in favor of what has been proven in the marketplace - what is established, old and from "over there."

From the copyright laws that stifled the growth of the American literature throughout the 19th century to the MTV dictum that music by blacks isn't really rock'n'roll and therefore not suitable for playing (unless, of course, those blacks happen to sell over 10 million records and have had nose jobs), the marketplace and the need to appeal to certain groups within that marketplace has so constricted American culture that it could hardly develop more than vegetables planted

One must also consider, though, the fact that those who run the marketplace have been brought up through an educational system that ignores creativity and the value of the present and places favor on glorifying discipline and the past.

Journal-ease

Journal-ease is an occasional feature presenting commentary on a broad range of issues by local writers.

As Frances FitzGerald's America Revised - published three years ago, when education was viewed much less conservatively than it is today - pointed out, high school American history textbooks and teachers largely avoid the social tensions that not only led to terrible setbacks and wonderful gains for groups of Americans but also led to the growth of American arts and culture, in favor of neat little stories about battles and heroes and money and power, presented in a style that confuses, bores and finally leads to complete indifference.

THOUGH FitzGerald was writing about American history, she could make the same point with almost every field of instruction in American schools. When American topics are considered, they're dealt with in such a way that makes enjoyment and learning impossible; past values are given priority over present realities. Those ideas, combined with the added burden of the past established by college courses in the humanities, leave most 21-year-old Americans believing, whatever their political views, that the cultures responsible for those past values are more important and better

This belief, which one could almost say is the traditional goal of American education, is given greater credibility by the current political regime. Given that Ronald Reagan's greatest concern with education is the restoration of prayer and corporal punishment in public schools, one could hardly expect an enlightened view of American cultural life to emerge from education. No recent president has been as callous and careless toward his native culture. Those concerned with establishing some place for American culture in the world can do nothing except hit their heads against a wall when they watch a president who with one hand signs legislation that cuts funds for arts, broadcasting and humanities programs in half while with the other raises his glass in a toast at a $5,000-a-plate dinner to a dead actress who became a princess of, naturally, a European

PRESIDENT Reagan, it seems, would simply like to leave American culture mouldering in some fusty library somewhere, behind and below stacks marked "Great Art." But Europeans confuse this attitude with the very real sense they get of an imperialistic leader who views allied nations as little more than convenient dumps for nuclear missiles and potential markets for American corporations. Indeed, if Reagan can be said to have achieved one major goal in office, it would be that of diminishing any sense of worth from Amerian cultural life and in its place instilling that imperial sense of military and economic

It is this imperialism that Europeans react to when they attack "Dallas" or Norman Mailer or Jackson Pollock. Charges of American "cultural imperialism" are as empty as the traditions Europeans fear will be replaced. Mass communications have in fact brought the world together in a way anticipated by Marshall McLuhan 20 years ago. And if we have become more a global disco than the happy global village McLuhan envisioned, it is as much the fault of the Europeans as of the Americans

What is required, in fact, to avoid "cultural imperialism" is a respect for the way others live and the ideas and forms that way of life produces - a respect that European nations and, unfortunately, America itself grant American culture far less than they grant those of Europe.

Developing that respect will require changes in thought and education that are at best unlikely; training a mind to be open is the hardest thing anyone can do. But a government that cares as much about developing and celebrating its own culture as much as it does building and promoting Pershing missiles and giant oil corporations might help both Europeans and Americans appreciate the works of lasting value America has to offer the world, as well as make that world a bit less fearful and a great deal more understanding.

Salvador elections begin long road

By Thomas R. Pickering

HIS WEEK El Salvador held direct elections for a president and a vice president. Under pressures of a civil war, grave economic difficulties, major efforts to deal with a crisis in human rights and an economy that has suffered a 25 percent decline in four years, this was no easy task. These elections are not only important for the future of El Salvador determining its next president and its course for the next five years. They also set a standard by which other Central American elections will be judged.

Nicaragua has announced elections for November; Guatemala is considering elections in mid-summer.

In El Salvador, all parties were guaranteed free access to the media. All those who wished to participate, including the guerrillas, were invited to join the democratic process. Further, the government planned major steps to open the door to all qualified voters in an internationally observed process with clear and careful steps to prevent

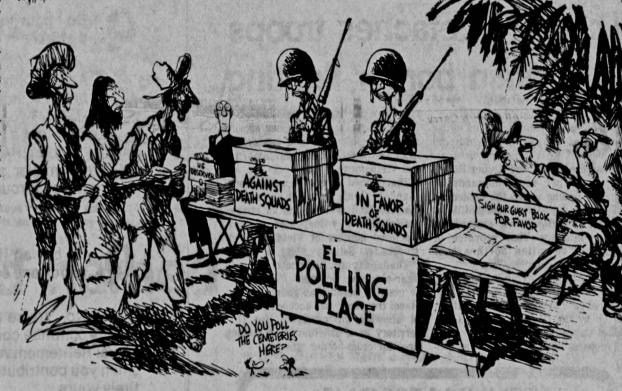

Let us hope, too, that the Nicaraguans will develop a process that will be equally free, fair, open and

The United States has made clear that it supports — indeed, applauds the holding of elections in El Salvador. At the same time, it has declared its full neutrality with regard to the parties and the candidates. Finally, the United States has stated that it will accept the results of a free and fair democratic election in El Salvador.

THE GUERRILLAS were free to participate in Salvadoran elections. The clear fact is that the guerrillas knew they were unlikely to win any significant percentage of a vote. Among the guerrillas and their key leaders are many militants who would prefer to continue to fight and to kill rather than to accept this popular ver-

The basis for guerrilla opposition to the elections is clear. But what are the reasons for believing that elections in El Salvador can make for constructive

The first point is that, while elections of and by themselves will not solve all problems, they are another important step forward on the difficult path toward democracy. Just as the United States strongly supports and advocates elections in Chile, Nicaragua and Guatemala, so too we support the exercise of popular democracy in El Salvador. We know of no better way to achieve that objective than having the people choose their next president and vice president.

This process in El Salvador has been a long and difficult road. For more than 50 years the winner of El Salvador's presidential elections was known in advance. When the reforming group of officers took over the government in 1979, the old process collapsed. In its place the new military leaders, in accord with the Christian Democratic Party, carried out elections in 1982. The purpose of those elections was to choose a body to write a new consitution, appoint a government and enact necessary laws. At the time of those elections, Salvadoran leaders pledged themselves to democratic elections within two years. The new elections carry out that pledge.

THE ELECTIONS marked another step in separating the military from the political process in El Salvador. A new, popularly elected president will become commander-in-chief. The military pledged not to interfere in the electoral process and to accept its

Finally, the new approach to elections mark a distinct change from the present transitional government in which the president was appointed by the Legislative Assembly. The new Constitution of El Salvador requires that the president be selected by clear majority. This requirement means that he can justifiably claim to have a popular mandate for his programs and policies, something that has not been known in El Salvador for quite a few

Some suggested that they should have postponed elections in El Salvador. Others indicated an interest in "power sharing" with the guerrillas. In my experience in El Salvador, I found very few who supported these suggestions. The elections of 1982 were extremely popular, enjoying an 80 percent turnout. Those who wanted to postpone, delay or engage in power sharing take a heavy responsibility on their shoulders in trying to deny to a very large percentage of the Salvadoran people their right to vote and to choose their future.

El Salvador aspires and is entitled to the kind of government to which we also believe we are entitled. It is an ex- Washington, D.C.

pression of intolerance, perhaps worse, to claim that we can ignore the will of the Salvadoran people because we know what is best for El Salvador.

ONE OF THE hallmarks of democracy is knowing that after a time the people will once again have an opportunity to select a new government. El Salvador was ready to take this im-The time is right for El Salvador and its people to demonstrate that they are not prepared to allow a small group of armed guerrillas, supported by less than the 5 percent of the people - according to the guerillas' claim - to veto their democratic development.

No country is ever really "ready" for an election in the minds of all of its citizens. One attribute of fair elections is that they take place despite the idea "readiness" that could be used to distort the process.

El Salvador is bravely entering this process in the midst of a heated civil war. We often forget that democracy requires heros - the silent heros who believe that ballot boxes, not bullets, resolve issues and stand the test of

Priority problems

To the editor:

Something disturbing is discovered when studying details of the UI's budget woes. A few of the examples cited: outdated maps from as far back as the 1920s still used in some classes for modern reference, microscopes so old that spare parts cannot be bought for them and chemistry experiments abolished because of a lack of equipment.

These examples lead one to question just what erratic priorities were set by past and present administrations with all the millions of dollars awarded to them by the state for previous years. What could UI administrators have been thinking when they continually postponed the purchase of necessary items, only to have the issue brought up with such a frenzy lately?

With all these problems, one must question why any administration would use almost $450,000 for repairs to office space and renovations for personal dwellings - again, strangely neglected over the years? Priorities are proven by deeds, not words. No doubt if the UI were run like a business, it would have its closing out sale at the Union; and if it were a military installation a bugler would be playing taps in front of Old Capitol with the flag flying at half-staff.

Randy Speer

Which is the myth?

Linda Schuppener tells us that the notion that shifting the tax burden from rich to poor will improve the economy is a myth, while she points to West Germany and Japan as two countries that have economically outperformed the United States.

In 1980 George Gilder noted that the U.S. tax system "imposes a larger relative burden on the rich and a smaller one on the poor and middle classes than, for example, the systems of Japan, Germany, France, Sweden, Great Britain or Italy." Furthermore, the U.S. system "taxes capital gains and assets at rates ... about four times higher than Germany or Japan."

Where's the myth?

Envoy slated to probe Salvador

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Presi- outcome of the presidential election dent Reagan, his request for emergency aid to El Salvador bogged down in Congress, Wednesday sent a new envoy on his first mission to Central America with little hope for a quick breakthrough.

ISB answers 7 of the most often asked questions on IRAs:

Do I have to spend $2000 if I want an IRA?

Absolutely not. $2000 is the maximum an individual may contribute yearly. ISB's 3-year IRA Investment Certificate requires a minimum of only $500 and our Golden IRA allows you to contribute even smaller amounts in your own payment plan throughout the year.

If I buy an IRA this year do I have to buy one each year?

No. You're under no obligation to continue contributing to your Individual Retirement Account. The choice of when you contribute and how much is en-

How do I invest my IRA contribu-

Each year's contribution is used to purchase a specific investment certificate. The total of all your certificates makes up what we call your Individual Retirement Account Portfolio.

What are the tax benefits?

Your IRA investment is tax deductsaleible for the year for which the contribution is made. That means you can take the amount you invest in your IRA right off the top of your taxable income. If taxes have been withheld during the year or if you paid tax estimates during the year, you'll be reducing your taxable income with this tax deductible IRA investment and thus reduce the amount you owe in taxes.

Will I ever have to pay taxes on my • IRA contributions?

Eventually, yes. But not until you begin to receive distributions from your IRA. You may begin to do that anywhere between the ages of 591/2 and 701/2. Again, that's up to you. The assumption is that you'll choose to begin receiving these distributions at a point when you are no longer earning wages, so will be in a lower tax bracket and will end up paying less in taxes than you would now.

One last thing...why should I invest at ISB instead of through mutual funds, brokerage houses, insurance companies, or non-locally based financial institutions?

Your first priority should be return on your investment ... our rate. And we are highly competitive and plan to stay that way. All things equal, or better on rate, look at it another way too. We make very good use of those funds you deposit by loaning them out to people in the immediate Iowa City and Coralville area. his former coach, John Wooden. "It was beyond my wildest dreams to sit in the same seat as the Wizard of Westwood did," Hazzard said at a news conference at the UCLA campus. "This is an awesome task, but I'm not afraid

"We're going to practice hard and press all over the court like we did under Coach Wooden.'

Hazzard, who had been negotiating for an assistant coaching position before Larry Farmer unexpectedly resigned Tuesday, was given a threeyear contract to become the school's fifth head coach since Wooden retired

"ANYONE IN THIS business relishes the pressure," Hazzard said. "Maybe I'm a little wacko, but I love it. Our schedule is very tough next year, but we're going to try to succeed

"Anyone in this business relishes the pressure." says new UCLA basketball Coach Walt Hazzard. "Maybe I'm a little wacko, but I love

UCLA failed to make the NCAA Tournament for the first time since 1966, excluding two probation seasons, and Farmer quit four days after agreeing to a two-year contract extension.

Farmer had spent 10 days debating before announcing last Friday that he would remain at UCLA through the 1986-87 season. Farmer did not attend Wednesday's

NCAA title 20 years ago while a star ticipate in the NIT

"LARRY FARMER MADE a great contribution to UCLA basketball over the past 15 years," Hazzard said. "I'm sorry I was elevated to this position un-

"Larry has vacillated for many months," Dalis said. "He was conflicted and confused for a long time. He didn't know in his heart if he could give 100 percent.

Asked why he offered the head coaching position to Hazzard hours after Farmer quit, Dalis said he had no time to waste in the recruiting season. "We were running out of time," he said. "We couldn't interrupt the flow. My discussion with Walt the last few days showed me he has the qualities necessary for success at UCLA.

"IT'S DIFFICULT FOR me to gauge how much harm has come to the program (with all the confusion)." Hazzard, 41, led UCLA to its first playmaking guard. A three-year starter for Wooden, he ranks eighth on UCLA's career scoring list with 1,401 points. Hazzard was a co-captain with Jack Hirsch on the 1964 team.

Hirsch, who was Hazzard's assistant at Chapman College in Orange, Calif., will be Hazzard's top assistant at UCLA. Hazzard had a 44-14 record at Chapman the past two seasons, leading the team to NCAA Division II playoff berths both years.

"Walt is a man who cannot be in-timidated," Hirsch said. "The pressure won't bother him."

Hazzard said the demands that drove Gene Bartow, Gary Cunningham, Larry Brown and Farmer out of town won't get the best of him. "I don't feel the heat," he said. "I don't feel the pressure. Give me a knife, a fork and a napkin and let's go There were reports during the season that indicated that Farmer would be

The Iowa coach is interested in a guard, preferably a point guard, and he has been looking at a group of at least five different backcourters.

Morgan is also interested in Southwest Louisiana, the Centenary and the University of New Orleans, and he apparently is not sure whether he wants to leave Louisiana.

Express' signing of Young a part of USFL's 'fantasy'

When the Los Angeles Express of the United States Football League signed former Brigham Young quarterback Steve Young to a $40 million contract for 36 years earlier this month, regardless of where the money goes, they again showed how the USFL owners are a group of rich businessmen playing out their fantasy at the expense of organized sports.

What they claimed was the "market price," became the richest pact in professional sports history. And it went to an unproven, young, no pun intended, football player.

Can you imagine Young playing when he is 58? The league may not even be going on if this is any indication of how it is going to operate and how it has

What were the around-the-clock negotiations like? Okay, Steve, we'll give you $27.5 milion for eight years. No, how 'bout $35 million for nine years and give Brigham Young $5 million or so.

AS IT STANDS Young will only receive about $2 million for each of the next four years. But still the lineman may have a little more incentive going after a multi-million dollar man. Even the players on his team may feel a little jealousy.

There is definetly going to be pressure on Young. But a $40 million cushion can shield a lot of pressure. New Cinncinati Bengal Coach Sam Wyche, the team that had been negotiating with the Heisman Trophy runner-up, raised some important questions. 'How can one player ever repay that? How can you keep the rest of your team happy when you're paying one guy that kind of money? How do you put a worth on talent now? How are you going to measure

The Express owners owe professional sports some of these answers.

"BLAINE IS HITTING around .300, but the other three have been pretty anemic, hitting around .200," Reagan said. "We're just hoping that our bats can get straightened out this weekend. "We know that with these two teams we're going to have to hit the ball," he added. "With the runs these two teams are going to score we'll have to hit. Our pitching is not going to keep either of these teams in check. At Western Michigan, Coach Fred Decker is working on rebuilding his entire infield. So far this season, the Broncos have built a 5-8 record, with all 13 games being played on a spring trip to Lakeland, Fla.

"We're very young this year," Decker said.
"We've got a completely new infield. In the past two years, we have had six infielders drafted by the major leagues so it's a brand new game for us.

"WE MADE QUITE a few errors in Florida," Decker said. "We hit .270 on the trip, but that isn't really as good as we're capable of. We've got some

The Broncos do have a solid pitching staff, led by Greg Brake. The senior built a 3-0 record on the roadtrip, including wins over Jackson State, Missouri and Purdue.

Western Michigan's other top pitcher is Brian Crisswell, who has an 0-2 record. Decker said the record is misleading though. Crisswell has an earned run average of 1.73 and the Bronco coach said his team "didn't pick up the ball well when he was

Auburn, Georgia or Georgia Tech.

The truth, however, is that Reaves, who admitted they were strong, said he could of had a chance to fit in. But he said, "I wanted to get out of Georgia, try living someplace else." Like just about any graduating senior who wants to try it on his own."

Reaves said, "I feel I did not fit in over there (Georgia Tech). It was between Texas and Iowa." As it stands, Reaves will be coming to school this summer where he will begin to "work hard" on his way to possibly becoming the point of conversation for many Hawkeye fans.

NEW YORK (UPI) - The National League begins its 109th season in 1984 with an accent on youth.

The National League showed a few signs of old age last year. It lost the All-Star Game for the first time in 12 years, 13-3, to the American League and it watched its representative in the World Series, the Philadelphia Phillies, humbled by the Baltimore Orioles in five games.

It was the first time in 22 years that the National League lost both the All-Star Game and the World Series in the same year.

But the old league is undergoing a rebirth. Players like Darryl Strawberry, Tony Pena, Willie McGee, Jose DeLeon, Lee Tunnell, David Green, Atlee Hammaker and Craig McMurtry lead a new wave of young blood who will make their presence felt on the diamonds this summer.

THREE MANAGERS will be making their debuts in the National League this season. Dave Johnson, a former All-Star with the Baltimore Orioles and Atlanta Braves, takes over the New York Mets after a year of seasoning at Tidewater of the International League; Jim Frey, former manager of the Kansas City Royals and most recently a coach with the Mets, leads the Chicago Cubs while Vern Rapp, one time manager of the St. Louis Cardinals, becomes the head man of the Cincinnati Reds.

Another manager, Paul Owens of the National League champion Phillies, will be starting his first full season with the club. Owens took over the team last July and guided it to the pennant.

A group of former All-Star players also will be wearing different uniforms this year. They include Pete Rose, who goes from the Phillies to Montreal; Al Oliver and Manny Trillo, from Montreal to San Francisco; Dave Parker, who joins Cincinnati after 10 years in Pittsburgh; Gary Matthews, who moves to Chicago from Philadelphia and Rich "Goose" Gossage, who wears the uniform of the San Diego Padres after six years with the New York Yankees.

BOTH DIVISION RACES appear to be wide open affairs simply because there is not one team that stands out from the pack.

In the National League East, the Phillies, Expos, Pirates and St. Louis Cardinals should wage a tenacious battle for the title.

The Phillies underwent a winter housecleaning and got rid of some of their 40-plus-year-old antiques, namely Rose, Joe Morgan and Tony Perez. The Phillies have joined the youth movement and will add rookie Juan Samuel and second-year player Len Matuszek to the starting line-up.

How much the loss of the experienced veterans will hurt the club will be one of the more interesting questions of the summer.

The Phillies didn't want Rose but the Expos were glad to get him. The Expos think the acquisition of Rose increases considerably their chances of winn-

ROSE'S PURSUIT OF Ty Cobb's lifetime hit total (he needs 202 to set the record) should continue to be one of the joys of the season.

The Pirates have the best front line pitching staff delaria, Rick Rhoden and John Tudor and the Cardinals have more speed and a better defense than any team in the division.

The Chicago Cubs and New York Mets are a cut below the other teams in the division, but they expect to improve on their 1983 performances. The Cubs can score runs with the likes of Matthews, Bill Buckner, Ron Cey, Leon Durham and Keith Moreland in the line-up while the Mets are counting on young pitchers like Walt Terrell, Ron Darling and Tim Leary to move them up in the standings.

IN THE NATIONAL LEAGUE West, the Los Angeles Dodgers, Atlanta Braves, Houston Astros and San Diego Padres should be neck-and-neck to the

The Dodgers have strong front line pitching with Fernando Valenzuela, Jerry Reuss, Bob Welch, Alejandro Pena and Rick Honeycutt but may be weaker in the bullpen without Steve Howe, who is sitting out a year's suspension imposed by commissioner Bowie Kuhn for drug abuse.

Atlanta has a fine bullpen and two-time Most Valuable Player Dale Murphy, but the Braves' starting pitching is not as strong as a year ago with the loss of Phil Niekro (traded to the Yankees) and Pascual Perez (awaiting trial on drug charges in the Dominican Republic). The Astros may be the best team in the division.

They're fundamentally sound and they don't give away many games.

The Giants might contend if their young pitchers some through. Certainly Oliver and Trillo will bolster the offense and the bullpen is one of the best

Cincinnati should show offensive improvement because of the maturing of Gary Redus and Eddie Milner as hitters and the addition of Parker.

Buckner upset by Cubs' trade

vested in the Chicago Cubs, Bill Buckner says the club "put the screws to him" in leaving him out of the Cubs trade with Philadelphia.

"I've spent 14 years in the Big League and seven with the Cubs," Buckner told Chicago's WGN Radio in an interview Tuesday night from his spring training home in Arizona.

In a news conference Tuesday, Cubs General Manager Dallas Green announced the Cubs had traded pitcher Bill Campbell and catcher Mike Diaz to the Philadelphia Phillies for outfielders Gary Matthews and Bob Dernier and relief pitcher Porfi Altimarano.

The trade will leave the Cubs with a surplus of outfielders and gives veteran first baseman Buckner a seat on the bench.

"The Cubs are putting the screws to me and there's not much I can do. I guess I'll just sit on the bench and rot for three years," Buckner said.

BUCKNER, WHO reportedly would have been part of the deal if Philadelphia had consented to his requests, wanted the Phillies to give him a contract extension or a signing bonus as part of a

Buckner said time was a factor for making the trade decision and blamed the Cubs for not giving him a chance to work things out with

"They (Cubs) didn't give me a chance to work it out," he said. "I didn't get a chance to talk to my lawyer after they talked to them.

"I guess I would get one full day to make a decision about whether I want to go to Philadelphia, but I guess they (Cubs) don't care," he said.

lowa State names Miami's Wettig to coach women's basketball squad

AMES (UPI) - Miami of Ohio women's basketball Coach Pam Wettig was named women's basketball coach at Iowa State University, Cyclone officials announced

Wettig, who has been women's basketball coach at the Oxford, Ohio, school for nine seasons and guided the Lady Redskins to a 7-18 record last season, replaces four-year coach Debbie Oing, who resigned.

"This is a tremendous challenge," Wettig said after meeting her players and taking over as coach. "Iowa State is a Division I major program. This is a great program and a great school.

"The first thing that comes to mind if you are talking high school girls' basketball is that there is no other place in the country that you think of sooner than Iowa. The tradition and support for girls' athletics in this state is well-established.

ISU Athletic Director Max Urick said the addition of Wettig will strengthen ISU's commitment to the women's basketball team, which placed last in the conference

Wettig, who has a 180-112 coaching record, took the job at Miami after Elaine Heber, who was women's basketball coach at Miami for 10 years, resigned to go to Iowa State, where she is now an assistant athletic director.

"We've had two women's basketball coaches here and Iowa State got them both," said Dave Young, director of sports information at Miami, announcing his school has started a search for Wettig's

During her term at Miami, Wettig won the Mid-American Conference title in 1981-82 and 1982-83, earning conference coach of the year honors in the same years. The new coach won't have much time to get her feet wet in Iowa. One of the first jobs she faces is signing players to the ISU team. The national signing date is April 11.

Ancient tradition for Olympic torch ignites 9,000-mile relay to Coliseum

LOS ANGELES (UPI) - The Olympic torch will be carried on a zig-zag course through 33 states before ending a 9,000-mile relay during opening ceremonies of the Summer Games, Olympic organizers said

The torch will be lit in the Greek village of Olympia and carried by hand to Athens, then shot by laser to a satellite and reflected back to New York City for the beginning of the cross-country run May 8,

The relay will pass through 41 of the nation's biggest cities and about 1,000 smaller communities in a route largely determined by the controversial sale of one-kilometer sponsorships for $3,000.

Although the money will be contributed to youth sports organizations, the sponsorships angered Greek officials who complained that an ancient tradition was being tainted by "honky tonk" commericalism.

THE TORCH IS scheduled to arrive July 28 at the Memorial Coliseum, the chief venue for the Summer Games. It has not yet been announced who will run the final leg into the stadium and light the flame in a large torch first used in the 1932 Olympics.

"The route was designed to go where peoole indicated they had interest in participating in the Olympic Torch relay and where it was logistically feasible," Joel Fishman, director of the relay for the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee,

The torch will be carried through New Mexico, Colorado, Utah, Idaho and Washington to Seattle, then head south through Oregon and Nevada, with former decathlon champion Bruce Jenner carrying the flame across the border into California.

THE RELAY WILL pass through several California cities, including San Francisco, Sacramento, San Jose, Santa Barbara and San Diego, on its way to metropolitan Los Angeles.

The route will criss-cross the Games' host city and its suburbs, passing by several venues and landmarks. The route for the final day of the run has not yet been determined.

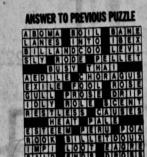

The route was originally planned to pass through all 50 states, but was trimmed because of lagging sales.

Fishman said the LAOOC has so far sold 4,000 kilometers of the total 15,000 kilometers to be run. Organizers earlier said sales would continue through April 10. but noted Wednesday that allotments have been filled in Los Angeles and New York and are nearly booked in several other black and because he doesn't cheat on his wife, LaDonna (Shirley Jones), when he meets the town whore in a bar. And as if all that isn't enough to establish him as a good ole boy, the movie has an otherwise unnecessary scene in which Carey orders a child abuser under his command to get counseling. (Just how good is Carey? He's so good that when the child and mother are glimpsed in the base hospital, the mother is wailing with grief.)

THE HEAD bad ole boys are the town sheriff and his deputy, a couple of unreformed crackers. They're bad ole boys because they imprison Carey's son on bogus drug possession charges. They're also bad ole boys because they routinely order beatings of the black prisoners at the penitentiary and because they like to spank and slap the town whore. (Just how bad are they? They're so bad that they spank her with a belt, and their slaps raise welts.) And as if all that isn't enough to brand them as bad ole boys, they taunt Zack by telling him that his son is being raped in tank and frees his son from the prison farm, then heads for Tennessee, where he's sure Billy can get a fair trial.

The sheriff and deputy, meanwhile, round up a posse to head off Zack and child is graphically bloody and the Billy before they reach the border. When one of the posse makes a mistake, the sheriff calls him a "faggot."

Tank, it should be mentioned, is a comedy. Screenwriter Dan Gordon and director Marvin J. Chomsky play these good ole boy/bad ole boy contrasts for yucks. The serious issue in Tank is not racism, or child abuse, or homophobia, IT'S BILLY'S coming of age. When Zack is injured, Billy has to drive the tank and outwit the rednecks. He also has to come to terms with the usual adolescent distrust of parents.

Billy, of course, does prove himself. "The bottom line," he broadcasts to the world over the tank's radio, "is he's my dad and I love him." And Billy Zack cracks. He takes his Sherman slams that tank into high gear and goes after the rednecks.

He becomes a man. Or, more accurately, a boy. Or, most accurately, a good ole boy.

'The Cold Room' suffers from lukewarm script

By Merwyn Grote

BO'S NEWEST Premiere Film, a supposedly spooky thriller called "The Cold Room," begins with a shot of the word "possession" and its definition. It's hardly necessary because anyone even remotely familiar with post-Exorcist motion pictures should be all too aware of what possession is. Still, it's the only effort made by the filmmakers to even remotely explain what is going on in this screwy film, so we, the viewers, should be grateful.

'The Cold Room," which HBO will be airing during March and April, is the story of Carla Martin (Amanda Pays), a proper teenager from a Catholic girls' school, who journeys to East Berlin with her father (played by George Segal). It's clear that the

Television

The best that can be said about George Segal's performance is that he probably got a nice European vacation out of the deal.

two are not very close because he has a New York accent and she is clearly British. This discrepancy is never explained — but that's the least confusing aspect of the film.

It's never quite clear why they go to East Berlin, but it is clear that Carol isn't too crazy about her dad and blames him for her mother's mental illness. We soon discover, however, that going bonkers is an inherited trait in the Martin women.

ANYWAY, EAST BERLIN apparently is not such a hospitable place for Anglo tourists, especially if you're foolish enough to stay in a creepy old boarding house once owned by a Nazi official. Indeed, all that's missing as Pays and Segal arrive at the house is the roar of thunder and the crack of lightning. When Pays remarks that she does not like the house, Segal tells her that it beats Howard Johnson's. Pays is doubtful, and after a few minutes we suspect that even a Motel 6 would have been preferable. Faster than you can say "Twilight Zone." spooky and totally predictable things start happening. Strange faces begin appearing in the mirror and the sounds of rats playing in the woodwork become prevalent. Pays begins to have dreams, or nightmares rather, about the Nazis. Before you know it she's inspired to rip open a hole in her bedroom wall where she discovers a secret room. In this room, "the cold room" used previously for the storage of food supplies, she finds a handsome young dissident named Erich (Anthony Higgins) who is hiding from the police. We are first led to believe that the young man is an anti-communist hiding from the civic authorities, but it eventually becomes clear that he is actually a Jew hiding from the Gestapo. Yes, friends, it's time warp city, and somehow, for reasons that the filmmakers have decided not to explain, Pays finds herself in the shoes of a girl named Christa, a teenager from pre-war Germany who loses her heart to the young Jew despite the obvious problems that it might create with her father, a hulking sadistic party official.

WITHOUT MUCH RESPECT for rhyme or reason, the film begins slipping back and forth through time, between Carla's increasingly erratic behavior and Christa's difficulties in keeping her young Jewish lover hidden in the secret room and away from her nasty Nazi father. All of this gets very confusing for the viewer but even more so for poor Pays, who keeps forgetting when she should be speaking with a British accent or a German one. Indeed, things are so confused that at one point Erich picks up a British accent, even though he is supposedly German.

As Carla's father, Segal is given precious little to do, and certainly nothing deserving of his top billing in the credits. He wanders in and out of the story looking understandably concerned about Pays's progressively weirder behavior, but the best that can be said about Segal's performance is that he probably got a nice European vacation out of the

Certainly, the conflicts between the modern day father and daughter are minor compared to those of the pre-war pair. Christa not only must carry on a clandestine love affair, but she must deal with a Gestapo agent that hounds her, and the abuse of her father - who, by the way, assaults her in a fairly graphic rape sequence.

THE GREAT FAILURE of the film is that it fails to make clear the relationship between Carla and Christa. By the end, it is not clear: a) if Carla actually traveled through time; b) if Christa has possessed her in the present; c) if Carla was the reincarnated spirit of Christa; d) if it had all been a psychic illusion; or e) if it had been nothing but a dream from the start - which is the biggest cop-out of them all. James Deardon, who wrote and directed, gives the film a nice foreboding atmosphere, but as he sustains it throughout the movie, it grows tiresome. Because he establishes no hint of normality in the Martins' life, the supernatural turn of events lack strength. But it's his steadfast refusal to supply any logic that sinks the project. I, for example, have not figured out how one exit to the cold room opens into Carla/Christa's second-story bedroom, while the other leads to the a meat locker on the first floor. It's interesting to watch the progress that HBO is making in its line of Premiere Films. It seems more than ready to shell out the bucks for top-flight onscreen talent: Segal joins the ranks of Carol Burnett, Elizabeth Taylor, Robert Duvall, Bette Davis and James Stewart as HBO alumni, Likewise, its production values are also very good: the films look great and it takes advantage of location shooting. The problem is its choice of scripts which, like "The Cold Room," consistently fall short of doing justice to the efforts that are put forth the produce them.

New York City graffiti maverick brings urban milieu to art museum

PICTURE IN the Dec. 5, 1983 issue of People magazine eatures graffiti artist Keith Haring sitting in a painted fiberglass urn in his studio. He's surrounded by walls hung with panels of leather covered over with the same unmistakable figures appearing in subways all over New Haring, who conducted workshops in Iowa City on Tuesday and Wednesday at Ernest Horn Elementary School, has been drawing on advertising panel space in the New York subway system since 1980. Colleen Ernst, art teacher for Horn School, sensed the similarity between Haring's art and that of her young students and began encouraging them to write to the artist. Before coming to Iowa City, he conducted a workshop for students at the Minneapolis Walker Art Center who were preparing sets for a dance program.

The artist, born in Kutztown, Pa., credits his father with teaching him the cartooning techniques that appear in his lighthearted - but often forceful - drawings.

At a lecture delivered on Tuesday afternoon at the UI Art Museum, Haring said he began his career as a subway graffiti artist because he saw a blank space (an unsold advertisement board) while he was riding to work one day and "it seemed perfectly

HE USUALLY DRAWS between 40 and 50 panels in the space of a few hours between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m., riding from one end of the subway and back. A photographer friend has photographed many of the subway panels, but often passersby try to remove his work to take it home.

Asked if the police ever try to stop him while he is drawing, Haring told of a time when he was being filmed for a national television show. "Someone called the police," he said, "and when they arrived they realized that they, too, were being filmed. They told me they had to perform their duty since they were on camera."

Although the artist was given a $10 fine for the offense, he said that the police usually regard him as a celebrity and allow him to draw without interruption.

Haring's subject matter often leans toward topical and sometimes political subjects. In the days following the downing of a Korean commercial jet by the Soviet Union, he covered the subway panels with a scene depicting its destruction. He once drew over 2,000 posters for an anti-nuclear rally, and he regards his trademark, a baby on its hands and knees, as a symbol that 'radiates energy.

What began as an impulse for Haring has brought him fame and, in the minds of some art critics, notoriety. But although some culture-minded viewers accuse him of lacking "high seriousness," Andy Warhol calls his work "transient art," and Time critic Robert Hughes has dubbed him the "Peter Max of the subways."

Haring was invited to paint a large clothing store in Milan, Italy, as a result of his subway graffiti, and a computer graphics billboard in Manhattan recently played a 30-second animation sequence he

HARING'S OUTRAGEOUS and heavilyoutlined figures include human forms, robots, smiling television sets and Mickey Mouse figures. His symbolic drawings often puzzle viewers who think they harbor deeper meaning than the artist intends. When asked about his familiar dog mask,

Haring replied that he tries not to be specific. "I think I know what it means to me," he says, but he feels that each person finds his own interpretation to an image. Haring says that the Europeans and Japanese were aware of his work before the he became well known in America. He collaborated with L. A. 2 in painting a three-story building in Tokyo, and in London painted a set during a live television

Several of Haring's paintings in brilliant orange, green and yellow will be on display in the UI Museum of Art throughout April. Containing his characteristic symbolic outlines, the works are made on vinyl, a surface the artist prefers to canvas. The paintings hang in the members' lounge un-
