The Field Campus

Ul spurred to spice up lease offer

Responding to the struggle between he UI and the Iowa Conservation Comsion over control of the Macbride Rield Campus lease, UI adto form a committee to amend the UI's proposal for future Ffeld Campus use. "I think we pointed out to the administration that the original UI proposal was weak," said Harvey Diehl, liaison between the Field Campus and the UI Sailing Club, a heavy user of the Field Campus

"When it appeared there was no competition for the license, the UI thought they could get by with the status quo. But that doesn't cut it anymore with the ICC proposal" competing with the UI's, Diehl said.

The UI's 25-year lease on the 625acre property comes up for renewal June 30. The conservation commission, which wants control of the Field Campus to alleviate the overcrowded Macbride State Park nearby, has also ministrators, faculty and student submitted a written proposal to the leaders decided Wednesday afternoon U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, owners of the Field Campus lease.

> Among the plans proposed by the conservation commission are widening the roads, remodeling the picnic shelter area, constructing additional restrooms, improving the parking facilities and relocating storage

> DIEHL SAID it appears the conservation commission has the "upper hand" at this time, and the UI needs to get "more aggressive."

Woody Woodward, commodore of the Sailing Club, said the two goals of the committee will be to "talk to the ICC and to amend the proposal to the Corps

"They have to rethink the whole deal," Woodward said. "The university has goals, commitments, time and money invested in the Field Campus and it is committed to trying to achieve

> See Field, page 6 Bounded on three sides by the lowa River, the Macbride Field Campus is situated three miles northeast of North Liberty. The Ul's lease for the Field Campus expires June 30. Both the UI and the Iowa Conservation Commission have submitted proposals for a new lease to the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, which owns the land.

Reagan urges worldwide chemical weapons ban

Reagan called on the Soviet Union Wednesday to join in a global ban on the production, possession and use of all chemical weapons as a step toward ridding the world of "these terrible

Reagan opened his 23rd formal news conference by announcing that he is sending Vice President George Bush to Geneva in two weeks to present a draft treaty to the Soviets at a meeting of the U.N. Committee on Disarmament.

Reagan said the proposal for a "comprehensive ban" - described by U.S. officials as more comprehensive than a chemical weapons moratorium offered earlier by Soviet leader Konstantin Chernenko - will include "bold and sound" procedures to ensure compliance by both sides.

But at the same time he said the United States must maintain and upgrade its chemical arsenal to offset the Soviet's "massive arsenal."

Reagan has asked for $1.1 billion in his fiscal 1985 budget for chemical warfare projects. Reagan also expressed his "deep personal regret" that the Soviets had not resumed talks on limiting mediumrange nuclear missiles and strategic arms. "So far they have ignored the will of the world" in refusing to return to the table, he said.

In his second news conference of the election year, Reagan faced questions about the moral integrity of his appointees, the U.S. withdrawal from Lebanon, use of U.S. military force abroad and the impact of his budgets on the women and the poor.

HE ALSO defended his own killer satellite plans, saying "the Soviet Union is ahead of us" in that area of outer-space weaponry and "we're still in the stage of studying such a thing." "I reject the use of the word sleaze," Reagan said when asked about Democratic charges that his administration is filled with graft.

"I believe the halls of government are as sacred as our temples of worship," he declared.

"But at the same time I also respect very much something that is very typically American and that is, you are innocent until proven guilty," Reagan added. "You're not guilty simply. because you've been accused.

"I am not going to take any action in WASHINGTON (UPI) - President any case for the sake of political expediency," he said.

Reagan seemed to grow angry when he was asked about a Congressional Budget Office study showing that his budget reductions and tax cuts had hurt the poor, but that the rich had gained.

"It's probably the most glaring example of political demagoguery that our friends have engaged in," he said.

"YOU KNOW, as Disraeli once said, there are lies, blankety-blank lies, and statistics," he said.

Reagan said that if someone's tax burden is $20, the administration's tax cut means a saving of $5. A tax burden of $2,000 gets $500, he said, "so there's no way the tax program could have benefited someone at one end of the scale and not the other."

He acknowledged that there were some cuts in Aid to Families with Dependent Children. He said 943,000 families were removed from AFDC. "but they were families that had considerable outside earnings, plus their welfare grants."

Asked if this would present a political problem, he said, "I'm concerned about it. It's a political problem if it's believed."

Reagan was asked if the United States lost credibility in officially withdrawing its Marine peace-keeping forces from Lebanon, where 264 Americans died

'We may have lost some with some people, but situations change," he said. Providing a little history, he added, 'We and three of our allies ... decided that in an effort to straighten out a situation that was so out of control in Lebanon ... to be on hand to help provide stability while the Lebanese create a government.

"THE IDEA was that if a government could be created in Lebanon and then we could help recreate their military and the foreign forces withdraw ... that the multinational forces would be a stabilizing peacekeeping force while they went out to do that job.

"Now this was a test," he said, but there were problems including the refusal of some elements of the Lebanese Army to "pick up arms against some of the same ethnic

Ul wary of administrative By Kirk Brown

A potential battle is brewing in the Iowa Legislature over legislation that could force many state agencies, including the UI, to reduce their administrative staffs.

Tuesday the Iowa House of Representatives overwhelmingly passed a "span of control" bill that would require state agencies to have at least seven employees for each supervisor or administrator.

In February the Iowa Senate passed a "management reduction" bill with similar intent but significantly different language than the House legisla-

The Senate's "management reduction" bill would require each state agency with more than 100 employees to plan a reduction of "at least 10 percent" in its administrative staff regardless of the present administrator to employee ratio.

United Press International

The Senate will reconsider the issue next week, according to UI Director of State Relations Frank Stork.

Officials from the UI and the state Board of Regents prefer the House version of the bill, fearing the impact of the Senate's bill on their institutions.

UI OFFICIALS ARE confident the 'span of control" bill, an attempt to carry out recommendations made by the Governor's Task Force on Cost Efficiency and Effectiveness, would not have an adverse impact on the UI.

Mary Jo Small, UI associate vice president for finance, said the UI's ratio of nine employees for each administrator already fulfills the House bill's staffing requirement.

However, Regents Business Director Doug Gross, in a March 16 memo. stated that "management reduction" Senate legislation would "adversely affect morale at the (regents) institutions, since it would result in the identification of a substantial number of positions which would be targeted for elimination."

Small, noting the UI "tends to have a relatively small administrative force." warned that further reductions in UI administrative posts could force the UI "past the point where we would become less efficient."

"management reduction bill," Stork said he believes "they (the senators) felt pretty strongly about it."

State Government Committee Chairman Sen. Tom Slater, D-Council Bluffs, Wednesday sharply criticized the House's "span of control" bill as a phony political approach to reducing bureaucracy."

"We don't need legislation to make an across-the-board reduction because the governor could accomplish that by an executive order," Slater said.

However, he said he believes the Senate "will look at it (the House bill) and and try to work with it because we do not want this legislation to get tied up in a joint committee."

Slater blasted the regents for not

Despite regents' opposition to the supporting the "management reduc-

"I THINK WHAT bothers me most is the paranoia a number of groups, including the regents, have expressed about this bill," he said.

'We are trying to solve a specific problem," Slater said. "All our bill did is ask for a plan."

Gross and Slater disagree on what impact the Senate legislation would have on the regents. Gross said the regents "have serious concerns" about the bill because he believes it would mean a reduction in upper level management positions"

ISB answers 6 MORE of the most often asked guestions on IRAs: I have an IRA at another institution but want to take advantage of your higher rate this year. Can I do that? Sure. You may change the place beyou make your contribution each year. You may also ask that your existing IRA funds be directed to Iowa State Bank as they mature. Government restrictions do suggest that maturing IRA funds pass directly from depository institution to depository institution within a certain time frame. That way there are no IRS penalties and it's very easy to do.

Do you charge any fees in connection with this movement of IRA contribution funds at their maturity?

Absolutely not. That, incidentally, ois a very good question to ask before you invest in an IRA because some institutions do charge a fee, even if you move funds after maturity.

Can anyone contribute to an IRA?

Yes. As long as you earn wages. Even if you now participate in a qualified pension, profit-sharing, or government plan (city, county, state & federal government employees) you may also invest in your own IRA.

Can my spouse have an IRA too?

Yes. As long as he/she is earning ewages too. If your spouse isn't earning wages, you may increase the amount of your IRA contribution by $250, contributing a maximum of $2250 to what is then called a "Spousal IRA." This contribution of $2250 may be divided between the two retirement accounts.

Is it too late to buy an IRA for 1983?

No. Contributions to your IRA emust be made no later than the due date, including extensions of time for filing, of your tax return for the tax year for which you're claiming your IRA contribution deduction. Generally, this means you may buy an IRA for 1983 until April 16th, or your filing time.

I'm convinced. Whom should I see?

Clair Powers (356-5854), John Chadima (356-5861) and Bob Libby (356-5857) in our Investment Area at the Main Bank downtown or any of our Officers at our full service Auto Bank facilities will be happy to assist you with your IRA investments.

Although United Students of Iowa a statewide student lobby coalition is expecting a $75,000 budget to begin its second year of financial solvency, UI officials and student leaders say USI must make more students aware of its existence

USI was established in 1982 to act as a liaison between students attending Iowa's three state universities and the Iowa Legislature and state Board of Regents. The group approved its preliminary budget for 1984-85 last week, adding a second full-time staff position, along with rehiring Executive Director Chris Morton.

Morton cited problems in USI's internal structure last year. "We have to decide who does what at what time," he said. "There is a lack of knowledge of roles.'

The new position of legislative director with an annual salary of $12,000 will be a bridge between the state legislature and the three campuses. Morton, who will be earning $13,500 a year as USI's top official, will perform a more administrative role - involving mainly office work.

MORTON SAID USI, which derives its entire budget from mandatory student fees, is "headed in a good direction." He said USI has witnessed a lot of different successes during the past year, obtaining funding in particular. Last year the group worked with a budget of $45,000.

However, critics say now that the group is adequately funded it must work on its name recognition.

Rival, consumer group rap Evans

By Mark Leonard

Iowa City attorney Joe Johnston, who is trying to unseat Rep. Cooper Evans, R-3rd District, claimed Tuesday Evans is more conservative than Iowa Senators Roger Jepsen and Chuck Grassley when voting on consumer

Johnston said that Public Citizens Congress Watch, a consumer advocacy group founded by Ralph Nader, reported that in 1983 Evans received a 10 percent "pro-consumer" voting record, while Jepsen and Grassley each had a 40 percent rating.

"That means out of 10 pieces of convoted for only one," said Martha Oesch, a staff researcher for Congress

The legislation examined in its report included social security and tax reforms, and telephone rate increases.

Johnston, a Democrat and member of the Iowa Legislature from 1968 to 1972, said the study shows Evans moderated his views in 1982, when he was opposed by Democrat Lynn Cutler in a hotly-contested campaign.

In 1981, Evans pro-consumer rating was 17 percent, but that figured rose in

"IT SEEMS (Evans) moderated his views during the election year because of Lynn Cutler and because Johnson County was added to the district during reapportionment," Johnston said. " can only surmise that after the election he went back to his old, conservative instincts and started ignoring consumers again.'

Terry Mikelson, Evans' press secretary, said, "I think Mr. Evans would probably respond to all this by saying that a voting record or scorecard compiled by any special interest group would probably only represent a small proportion of the actual number of votes taken on a particular issue."

Mikelson said hundreds of consumerrelated votes are made every year and Congress Watch has chosen only 10 votes on which to base its results.

Mikelson also said Evans was representing the will of 3rd District residents during his voting, and that the sentiments of Iowans often differed from those of Congress Watch.

"I think these are issues where the majority of Iowans would take exception with Congress Watch," Mikelson

IN PARTICULAR, Mikelson said an "overwhelming majority" of 3rd District residents contacting Evans' office favored repealing a 10 percent withholding tax on dividend interest. Congress Watch, however, favored keeping the tax.

In response to Johnston's charge that Evans moderated his views during 1982, Mikelson pointed out that, with the exception of Tom Tauke, R-2nd District, all members of Iowa's congressional delegation "seemingly moderated their views that year.'

The pro-consumer ratings for Jim Leach, R-1st District, remained unchanged from 1981 to 1982, while the rose from 40 percent to 50 percent. Tom Harkin, D-5th District, saw his pro-consumer rating rise from 67 percent to 85 percent, while the rating for Berkley Bedell, D-6th District, rose from 73 percent to 85 percent.

"I think that study reflects more about the issues chosen by Congress Watch than changing views of congressmen," Mikelson said.

Englert may be divided into two smaller theaters

The Englert Theatre, 221 E. Washington St., will be subdivided into two smaller theaters if a plan currently being reviewed by the Iowa City Housing and Inspection Service is approved.

According to the plan submitted to the city, the existing street-level and balcony seats would be partitioned down the center to create two smaller theaters. The current ticket booth and inner doors would be removed and a new ticket counter and an enlarged snack bar would be located to the west of the entrance.

The plan also calls for remodeled

Central States submitted the remodeling plan after an earlier plan failed to meet handicap access requirements. The previous plan called for the divison of the balcony sections into two separate theaters and would have left the street-level area intact as a third theater.

City inspectors said Wednesday it will be about a week before the building permit is reviewed.

Michael Jackson tour may make stop in lowa

Whether Michael Jackson will be thrilling Iowans this summer is still being decided, a spokeswoman for Don King Productions in New York said Wednesday.

The tour by Jackson and his brothers, which is being promoted by boxing czar Don King, is expected to be the top grossing concert tour in history. Jackson's latest album release, Thriller, is the top selling album of the decade.

"Nothing has been set yet," a spokeswoman for the Jacksons said. "The dates and cities have not been set and they won't be for a couple of weeks."

Although ticket prices have not been determined either, industry analysts have predicted that individual tickets will sell from $20 to $25.

A national press conference will be held after details of the tour have been worked out, the spokeswoman said.

Study: Late-pregnancy alcohol ingestion harmful

A new study has shown that women who consume alcohol in the late stages of pregnancy, or while nursing can impair the brain development of their unborn child, and one drinking episode of more than a moderate amount of alcohol is more damaging than smaller doses consumed over a longer period.

Researchers from the UI Hospitals, in coordination with doctors from the Karolinska Hospital, Stockholm, Sweden, released the results of their study Monday at the 68th annual meeting of the Federation of American Societies for Experimental Biology in St. Louis.

Prior to this study, most studies have only looked at the detrimental effects of alcohol consumption during the early stages of pregnancy. Results of those studies have shown that consuming alcohol during the early stages of pregnancy produces physical and mental deficiencies in the unborn child.

Dr. Elizabeth Burns, assistant professor of Family Practice at the UI Hospitals, and the team of researchers, found that during the late stages of pregnancy there is a period of rapid brain development, and the fetal brain is more vulnerable at that time.

The doctors reported that drinking alcohol at that time could slow a child's brain growth and lead to learning

Schlafly, legisla clash on equal

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Phyllis Schlafly and a Democratic congresswoman faced off Wednesday on he issue of whether women should be paid as much as men for work requiring comparable skill.

"We think the comparable worth notion is unfair to the traditional family," said Schlafly, founder of the anti-Equal Rights Amendment Eagle Forum. "The target is the blue-collar man trying to support his family."

Appearing at a hearing of the House

Post Office and Civil Service compensation subcommittee headed by Rep. Mary Rose Oakar, D-Ohio, Schlafly said efforts to raise salaries of secretaries, nurses and teachers grow out of jealously of wages paid to truckdrivers, janitors and firefighters. "Phyllis, please don't try to confuse the issue." Oakar said. "The issue is not taking a nickel away from a firefighter or an electrician. We don't want to lessen any man's salary in any way, shape or form."

Taking the issue a step beyond the idea that women deserve equal pay for equal work, Oakar said she believes certain occupations pay less because they are dominated by women. Females make up 81 percent of clerical workers, 96 percent of nurses and 82 percent of elementary school teachers, all traditionally low-paid occupations.

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Phyllis Schlafly and a Democratic congresswoman faced off Wednesday on he issue of whether women should be paid as much as men for work requiring comparable skill

Taking the issue a step beyond the idea that women deserve equal pay for equal work, Oakar said she believes certain occupations pay less because they are dominated by women. issue, you'll see the poverty of so many women. Surely that's a pro-family

Schlafly said most women prefer to spend time at home with their children, noting they spend only 35 per-cent of their working years in the labor

Lack of seniority accounts for the fact the average full-time woman worker earns 59 cents for every dollar paid to a man with the same education, Schlafly argued.

Last December, a federal judge gave new meaning to the comparable worth controversy when he ordered the state of Washington to remedy pay discrimination because female employees were earning 20 percent less than males doing comparable work.

WASHINGTON STATE, which is appealing the decision, says it would cost $770 million in back pay and fringe benefits and add $130 million a year to the payroll to comply with the order.

The Justice Department is expected to intervene and argue against the Schlafly, a conservative Republican lawyer from Illinois, called the concept of comparable worth a "radical plan to restructure the American economy." She questioned the need to restructure an economy that provides more worker benefits than any other in the world.

"You talk very patriotically," Oakar said. "We're all Americans who care. But isn't it unthinkable that we would be such a wealthy country and the greatest rate of poverty is among elderly women?"

Schlafly said, "Is it fair that lawyers make more than ministers? You are not paid what you are worth - you're paid what someone is willing to pay

Rights chief Pendleton tied to Meese loan

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Clarence Pendleton, who earned an unprecedented $58,385 last year as chief of the U.S. Civil Rights Commission, got the part-time post while director of a bank that let Edwin Meese skip 15 months of house payments, officials said Wednesday. Pendleton, a San Diego businessman, is the third official of Great American Federal Savings and Loan of San Diego to receive a federal appointment.

Meese, who has been nominated as attorney general, owed up to $423,000 to the savings and loan while in the White House. A special prosecutor was appointed this week to investigate Meese's finances, including his financial links with seven others who later received government jobs.

THE CHAIRMAN of the watchdog civil rights commission said he had no knowledge of Meese's debt to the financial institution or its tolerance of up to 15 months of missed mortgage payments on homes in both California and McLean, Va.

Pendleton in fiscal 1983 collected at least four times the salary as that of his predecessor, Arthur Flemming, who received an estimated $13,000 the year before he was fired as chairman of the commission by President Reagan in 1982.

Commissioners, who traditionally work part-time, are paid for each day they claim they conduct official civil rights business. In fiscal 1983, Pendleton billed the commission for 233 days of work.

A commission spokesman attributed the size of Pendleton's salary to the greater number of days he has put in making speaking engagements, traveling from his home in California and handling commission business during its troubled reorganization by Congress.

Sailing Club disenchanted by Ul's inaction on lease

UI Sailing Club members expressed displeasure Tuesday with the UI administration's attitude toward the Macbride Field Campus, 625 acres which have been leased by the UI for the past 25 years.

"The present administration has not been vigorous in developing the use of the Field Campus," said Lane Davis, faculty adviser to the Sailing Club.

Harvey Diehl, liaison between the Sailing Club and the Field Campus, said the club is going public with its complaints now because, "We're in the eleventh hour." Club members are hoping to get backing from various UI constituencies to put pressure on the UI administration.

The UI's lease on the Field Campus from the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers expires June 30 and the Iowa Conservation Commission is competing with the UI for control of the lease.
"The administration doesn't push the Field Campus," said Woody Woodward, Sailing Club commodore. "The Corps thinks we've got some private club here."

Davis said, "People have been habituated into acceptance" because past proposals from within the UI to develop the Field Campus have been turned down by the administration.

Dorothy Anderson, real estate specialist with the Corps of Engineers in Rock Island, Ill., said the UI's recent proposal is "the same as it has been. They don't plan any improvements."

"We already know the administration is vulnerable to pressure," Davis said. "They cannot roll over and play dead for Hayden Fry and expect everybody else to look the other way.

"I am a sports nut, but it (the Field Campus) is more important for the long-term welfare of the students" than the indoor football practice facility, Davis said.

Field

The Corps of Engineers has charged the UI in the past with not promoting public use of the Field Campus, something Lane Davis, Sailing Club faculty adviser, said the UI Recreational Services could remedy.

"Recreational services has a going organization" under director Harry Ostrander, said Davis, adding, "Rec services has a proven record of getting things done."

Davis, along with others, has proposed appointing Ostrander as "concessionaire" operate the boating facilities. Davis said the concessionaire would be responsible for renting the boats and operating storage facilities.

CASEY MAHON, UI associate vice president for finance, said recreational services could "act as manager of the sailing facilities." However, Kenneth Moll, UI associate vice president for academic affairs, said it would be 'premature to discuss' the possibility of involving recreational services.

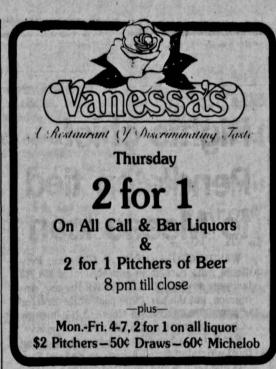

After the Wednesday meeting, Woodward said the administration was "not against getting rec services involved. They have an open mind as far as rec services.'

Davis said the conservation commission verbally proposed appointing a concessionaire if it was granted the Field Campus license. However, he said that idea was absent from the conservation commission's written proposal. He said the switch by the conservation commission makes Sailing Club members "nervous," because it "adds to the confusion" of the lease

Woodward said Moll sent a letter to the conservation commission discussing the possibility of the UI and the conservation commission "working together." Iowa Conservation Commission Director Larry Wilson has said before that he would not agree to a joint lease with the UI, but would "work in agreement with the university."

However, Moll said Wednesday the letter expressed the UI's "interest in having more discussions" with the conservation commission after having seen the commission's written

With the peace effort under way, he said, there was an attack on the U.S. Marine barracks and U.S. forces dug in, but "it was agreed there was no longer any point for us to stay ... and we withdrew."

Reagan also was asked if the United States would withdraw aid from El Salvador if there was a coup, but he declined to discuss such a possibility. "I think again this is not helpful to what we're trying to accomplish," he said. The president repeated charges by Shultz that the War Powers Resolution, under which Congress can restrict a president's deployment of combat troops abroad, harms U.S. policy. "I just don't think a committee of 535 individuals. no matter how well intentioned, can offer what is needed in actions of this kind," he said. ON OTHER matters, Reagan said:

• The overwhelming majority of Americans favor prayer in school. "My regret is that the debate was never on the issue," he said. "We were asking that the Constitution be restored to neutrality with regard to religion. ... The government is to neither (be) an advocate of or controller of religion."

• The best way to control handguns is as was done in California when he was governor. "Anyone who is convicted of a crime ... and has a gun ... whether they used it or not ... add five to 15 years to the sentence. ... You'd be surprised how effective it

Biting the bullet

In his 1981 inaugural address, Ronald Reagan - the same Ronald Reagan who this year proposed a $925 billion budget with a record $180.4 billion deficit — condemned federal budgets that heap "deficit upon deficit, mortgaging our future and our children's future for the temporary convenience of the present." Glaring by its omission from his 1985 budget is a strategy to reduce the deficit.

In this election year, Reagan has left the bulk of the deficit dirty work to Congress, a group not generally known for election-year courage. Still, recent House, Senate and White House deficit reduction plans call for savings from $150 billion to $182 billion over the next three years.

While these reductions are a start, they could be more dramatic were it not for the holy cow of the Reagan budget - defense. Reagan wants 13 percent real growth in defense spending after inflation, but would settle for 8.5 percent; the House leadsership plan allows for 3.5 percent growth.

In a somewhat bolder step, Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, is seeking an across-the-board budget freeze that would hold 1985 spending at 1984 levels and reduce the deficit $23 billion more than the current Senate proposal. Sens. Nancy Kassebaum, R-Kan.; Joseph Biden, D-Del.; and Max Baucus, D-Mont., are cosponsoring the legislation.

The freeze would be a solid short-term move that would make defense outlays no more and no less sacrosanct than welfare and entitlement programs; the budget pie wouldn't grow, but it wouldn't shrink, either. It would send the right message to the banking and investment communities, thus giving stability to a shaky interest rate outlook. If the freeze enjoyed broad bipartisan support, members of Congress facing re-election could all bite the bullet in the name of fiscal responsibility. Finally, as Sen. Baucus noted, it will give Congress "the time to make the long-term budget decisions that are needed."

An across-the-board budget freeze might be the best that can be hoped for in an election year.

Reminder for Reagan

A mysterious stroke of fate may have helped President Roosevelt's lost "day of infamy" speech to reappear after 43 years at a time when the Reagan administration and Congress are heading for a struggle over the War Powers Act.

The speech, given by Roosevelt the day after the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, shows the classic constitutional procedure for our country's entry into war. The president asks Congress for the power to make war, but Congress makes the final declaration. The War Powers Act, adopted after Vietnam, forces the president enever American troops en zone or face imminent hostilities, and it calls for automatic withdrawal in 60 days unless Congress decides otherwise.

But Reagan seems to feel that he, not Congress, should declare and make war. He has suggested that Congress's constitutional powers undermine his ablity to make foreign policy. Lebanon, he says, might have been saved from Syrian influence if the Syrians knew that Reagan had full control of our military there. He suggests that Congress hampers his Central American policy by trying to cut funds to El Salvador and to Nicaraguan contras.

Reagan may think his foreign policies are sound, but many Americans don't. If the administration had its way, American could become entangled in a situation most citizens don't support. Constitutional checks and balances exist precisely to avoid such entanglements. Reagan claims Roosevelt as one of his idols. But Roosevelt's speech, which involved America in its biggest war, should remind Reagan that sending people to war is too big a responsibility for one man and administration, no matter how

An emergency agreement reached last week enabled Argentina to pay $500 million in back interest on loans so overdue that much of the debt would have been declared nonperforming. The agreement protects Argentina's credit rating and American banks from taking losses on the loans.

Although the money to pay the back interest came from American banks and from four Latin American countries, the United States promised to repay the four countries once Argentina has negotiated a longer-term settlement with the International Monetary Fund.

And therein lies the rub. In the past the IMF has imposed stringent conditions on countries in similar positions, conditions that have produced recessions and major economic and political problems for the debtor nation. President Alfonsin has said that Argentina will not accept similar austerity measures.

Moreover, many Third World countries, particularly in Latin America, are heavily in debt. The world recession and oil price increases from the 1970s have left them unable to pay their loans. The solution has been for the banks, the IMF and the United States to work out temporary solutions in hopes that the world economy will recover sufficiently to enable the debtor to repay.

That is probably a vain hope. The debts are growing and the recession is lingering in much of the rest of the world. The U.S. recovery will probably not continue for much longer, either: The budget deficit is high and rising, as are interest rates. If the U.S. recovery aborts in the next 12 to 18 months, then the world economy will worsen.

The agreements now being hailed solve nothing. They simply cover up the cracks with wallpaper so no one has to watch them widen. Since many of the banks which made the foolish loans are American, the U.S. government will undoubtedly be called on to bail them out, further burdening the U.S. budget. The circle is a

Decontrol burdens the consumer

By Tami O'Dell

HE PRICE of natural gas is too high. The wellhead cost of natural gas has increased by 175 percent since 1978. The dramatic increase in gas prices over the last five years has contributed to the increase in unemployment and to the recession. And gas prices continue to rise even though there is a huge surplus. Responsible for the rise in gas prices is the current law, the Natural Gas Policy Act (HGPA), passed by Congress in 1978.

This law does not work. Because it permitted the immediate decontrol of some gas production and provides for the total decontrol 11 months from now of half the nation's gas supplies, the NGPA must be changed More than 170 members of the U.S. House of Representatives have cosponsored legislation that would provide lower prices to consumers by reducing the price ceilings on natural gas to more affordable levels and by extending those ceilings for two years. The Natural Gas Consumer Relief Act, H.R. 2154, is a comprehensive proposal addressing the current problems in the natural gas market. This legislation would require gas pipeline companies to cut back on their expensive supplies and buy cheaper gas during times of surplus.

This legislation would also outlaw provisions in producer/pipeline contracts that would raise the price of gas to the level of heating oil, a price set by an international cartel. H.R. 2154 would prohibit the pro-producer Federal Energy Regulatory Commission from arbitrarily raising the price of old gas production, which accounts for about 50 percent of the supply flowing to gas consuming states. Gas found before 1977 — old gas — is much lower in price than new gas supplies. In order to protect consumers and encourage new exploration, old gas prices should remain under control and not be allowed to increase more than the rate

AT THE SAME time, the sponsors of H.R. 2154 recognize the need to provide reasonable incentives for the exploration and production of new gas supplies. It permits producers to sell their newly-discovered gas for prices that even the Department of Energy believes will be high enough to provide producers with a generous return on their investment.

The congressional sponsors of the H.R. 2154 are deeply concerned about their constituents' gas bills and the health of their local economies. They are keenly aware of the devastation caused by decontrol. They understand what happens to unemployed workers who receive utility bills they cannot afford to pay. They are aware that many state and local governments must raise taxes or cut budgets in order to pay fuel bills for schools and other public buildings. They comprehend the plight of small businesses caught in the grip of rising gas bills. They know that passage of the Natural Gas Consumer Relief Act and solving the problems faced by their constituents are inextricably intertwined.

IN THE NEXT few weeks, the House will consider what to do about natural gas prices. Iowa Rep. Cooper Evans, R-3rd, has backed out of his campaign promise to support H.R. 2154. He has not joined representatives from the nation's gas-consuming areas in support of the only legislation that will guarantee gas prices below those allowed by the current law. The price gas producers can charge for the natural gas we use is determined by Congress.

We need price relief. We need Evans' support of price rollback and extension of controls. We need to let Evans know that the only way he can help consumers is to keep his 1982 campaign promise and oppose decontrol, correct the problems of the Natural Gas Policy Act and to support H.R. 2154.

Serendipity helps the naming game

Her father was furious. "T. S. Garpl" he hollered. "What kind of a name for a baby is that?"

CARUS," I said in the car on the way to the doctor's appointment. It was my latest suggestion for a name for our first child. Allison shook her head. The day before I had been reading a short story by Raymond Carver in which a minor character had named his son "Dodge" because that was the name of his favorite car. Icarus is the name for our car -Allison gave it that name as a poetic gesture. It is an apt name because the car sometimes performs as if it were held together with so much wax and

We were on our way to another regularly scheduled appointment. Allison was still in her first trimester of pregnancy, and the subject of picking suitable names had already begun to fill a lot of our discussion time.

We could not agree on names or even the same types of names. The process generally went like this: One of us would suggest a name, the other would consider it for a while and then root up all the negative associations we had with that name.

"Tom?" I would say. No. Allison had a date with a "Tom" in college "and he was a real creep. "How about Drew?" Allison would say. Absolutely not; I got into a fight with a "Drew" when I was in second grade and I could not see honoring him by giving my firstborn the same name. After the doctor's appointment Allison told me about listening for the baby's heart beat with an Ultra Sound stethoscope. "It's too early to tell," she said. "But it sounds all scratchy like listening to an album on the stereo before the music begins.'

TWO WEEKS later the music had like a herd of wild horses galloping on a beach, that's the heart beat," she said.

'The sound, the one like waves crashing on a beach, that's the placenta," said Dr. Teresa Marganski, who would be delivering the baby. At the doctor's office we shared the Ultra Sound stethoscope while listening for the baby's heart. "The sound, the one "Have you got names picked out?" Marganski asked. That question would dog us for the rest of the pregnancy. We would politely demur: "We're working on it."

Indeed, Allison read entire books about picking out names, along with others on fetal development. Yes, and I read too - novels and short stories, newspapers and magazines, telephone directories, gravestones and the Bible looking for a name that would at once not blend into the background or pull the focus away from more important matters, but would bring fitting identity to a personality we did not yet

The process struck me as one of the single most poetic gestures that we or anybody could ever make. To be done properly it would need to be a practiced effort. But parenthood, I now believe, is a series of largely unplanned events - which brought us to the next development in our search for a name.

At the time of my grandmother's funeral last November, Allison was approaching her final trimester. It was rain turning to snow that day in a small town in northern Iowa. So Allison stayed at the rectory of the church and went with the rest of the immediate family to where Anna Clothilde Heffern would be buried next to her hus-cemetary Allison told me that she had spent the time talking to Anna Clothilde's closest friends. They were "Mabels" and "Esthers" - women with names that had somehow dropped out of fashion while the women who bore them lived on. And yet those names seem to have settled on them as easily as a large veil.

But to leave the impression that their names were out of fashion is not a proper focus; rather, fashion had lost its usefulness for them. They had persevered. How many friends' funerals had they endured?

Anna. Allison agreed to the name with only one reservation, that it be balanced by her paternal grandmother's first name, Corrine.

Anna Corrine. If we ever have a girl, that will surely be her name.

Graham Michael Heffern, on the other hand, was born without precedent. No ancestor from either side of our families is known to have had the name Graham.

Graham has come a long way from that day when he was "all scratchy ... like a song before the music begins." And sometimes in the middle of the night I am reminded of his capacity to sound off "like a herd of wild horses." Our poetic gesture is becoming a bit more prosaic.

WHEN WE returned from the Heffern is a former DI metro editor.

Football facility may pave the way for new track

By Brad Zimanek

-lone City, Iows-I

Football Coach Hayden Fry is about to get his new indoor football and allpurpose facility, and this, in turn, may give the Iowa track programs a new track to enjoy.

The track the Iowa men's and women's track teams currently use is in poor shape. The track is so poor that o home meets have been scheduled for the 1984 outdoor season.

"My understanding is that Coach Fry is very pleased and he will get what he wanted," men's track Coach Ted getting what we wanted. (Iowa Athletic Director Bump) Elliott has always wanted a new track facility for us and this will give us the opportunity to get one."

"I HAVEN'T HEARD that much about it," women's track Coach Jerry Hassard said. "But my hopes are that if and when a new facility is built it could be adjacent to the track that we have now because the way the landscape is set up there is a natural bowl that would protect us from the

Another problem that the poor track has given the Iowa squads is that they we would get what he wanted and how much constantly being on the road are constantly on the road. The Iowa men's squad, after a rare week off, is set to hit the road every weekend from April 6 to the NCAA Championships

The women's squad doesn't have it much better as they are also on the road nearly every weekend.

The indoor practice facility might be built over the exsisting track which is located behind the Recreation Center and near the Iowa football offices.

"TALKING IT OVER, I was told "I like to travel, but you can just squad.

we would get what we want," said Elaine Jones, a sprinter for the women's track team. "The track right now is just horrible. That's how most of our injuries come about. If they do not build a new track, I will be very upset and just very frustrated in general. But if they do build a new track we will both come out ahead.' One of the problems that the track facility causes is that when the track teams are constantly on the road, it doesn't allow the athletes much study effects them," Jones said. "If they don't build a new track, I will not in any way endorse the Iowa track program. I would even discourage people from going here for that reason.

"HOW COULD I endorse the Iowa track program for something like this. We've been ignored for so long."

Robert Smith has vested interests in both sides of the story, being a star sprinter for the men's track team and a spilt end/punt returner for the football great to practice in warm weather. You can get a lot more work done inside. I'm not worried too much about it because I think Coach Wheeler will do what is necessary to motivate his individuals in case a new track isn't forthcoming.

"Football brings in more money, but scholarships are offered in track just as they are in football," Smith said. "A new track would be a big help to the schools program and it would encourage strong fan support. Track is an exciting sport and I believe people

According to Iowa Coach Steve Houghton, the team hasn't played well on the road in conference matches in past years. But with the goals the Hawkeyes have set for themselves this weekend, Houghton said the team will be real fired up to play.

"If we play well this weekend, we ought to do well," he said. Iowa's first opponent will be Michigan State, a team with an 0-9 record this season, that is without the service of its No. 1 singles player.

Michigan State Coach Stan Drobac dismissed his No. 1 player, freshman Eric Saklin, after he walked off the court during a match.

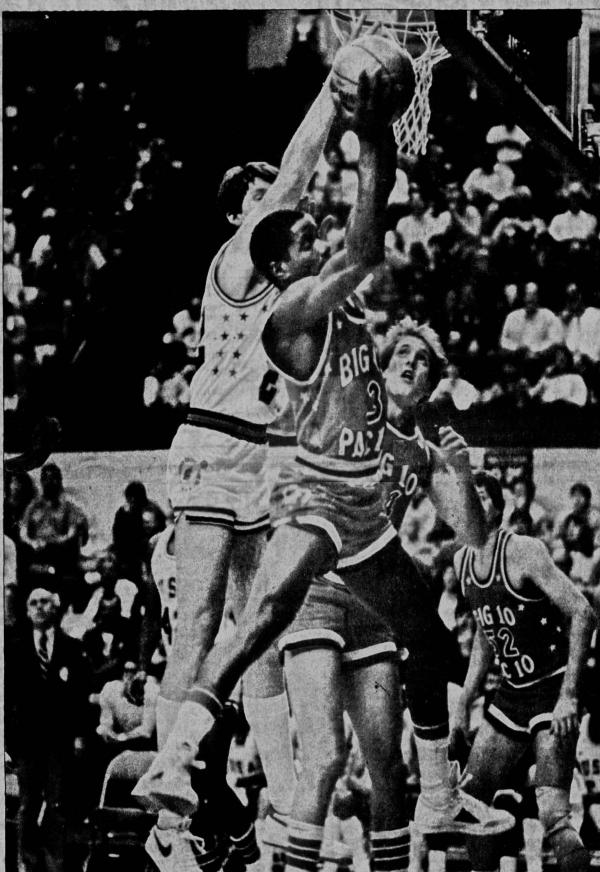

DROBAC SAID it was unfortunate that he had to dismiss his top player. "We might have developed into a better team with him." Iowa beat the Spartans last year in a dual meet, 6-3, on the Hawkeyes' home court. One of the Hawkeyes' goals for the weekend is to have a repeat performance of last year, breaking the Iowa record for dual meet wins with 15 victories, the thirdyear Iowa coach said.

The last time an Iowa tennis team earned 15 dual meet wins in one season was in 1971 and 1973 under former Coach John Winnie. During the 1971 season, Houghton was a member of the Iowa team, winning the No. 5 singles title at the Big Ten Championships.

USA Stars roll to Shoot-Out win

CEDAR RAPIDS - Behind a strong second-half effort by Louisville's Lancaster Gordon, the USA All-Stars pulled away from a seven-point halftime lead to easily defeat the Big Ten-Pac 10 All-Stars, 101-83, in Wednesday night's Super Shoot-Out III at the Five Seasons Center.

The move of the game came from the second half, the USA team ran off the Big Ten's MVP, Aaron. Coming down next 11 points to stretch the lead to 74- on a fast break, Aaron took a pass under the basket and was fouled by the USA Coach Billy Packer had no USA's Roosevelt Chapman. He proceeded to spin the ball in off the

After the play, Aaron did a dance — ala the New York Jets' Mark Gastineau's famous 'sack dance.' Once the dance was finished, McGuire, along with DePaul's Jerry McMillan, came out and gave Aaron a high-five.

"I LEARNED that move on the playgrounds in the Chicago projects,' Aaron said. Then, holding his MVP trophy high, he said, "This is going on my cocktail table at home. If anybody tries to take it, I'm going to electrocute

As was the case last year, when Indiana's Ted Kitchel was injured. McGuire brought Big Ten co-MVP Jim Rowinski in to shoot a foul shot late in the game. Rowinski, of Purdue, was unable to play becasuse of an ankle sprain.

The USA squad had a late edition in Iowa State's Ronnie Harris.

Harris came off the bench to score 11 points, including a 30-foot jumper to

Baseball team bruises Loras in doubleheader victory

Loras Duhawk second baseman Bob Haag leaps for a lowa's 12-1 win over Loras Wednesday afternoon on the throw as lowa center fielder Craig Conti slides in for a lowa diamond. The Hawkeyes went on to win the successful steal in the bottom of the fourth inning of nightcap, 5-1, and raise their record to 11-13.

After close games early in the season, Iowa baseball Coach Duane Banks said it was fun to crunch Loras in the Hawkeye home opener Wednesday afternoon.

"We really needed to beat up on somebody," Banks said after his squad completed a doubleheader sweep of the Duhawks to raise its record to 11-13. Loras, now 0-8, didn't do much brawling with the Hawkeyes.

It took Iowa only five innings to win the first game, 12-1. The nightcap went the full seven innings with Iowa taking a 5-1 victory.

Banks said with a quick blow-out in the first game, it was hard for his team to concentrate during the second con-

"AFTER YOU BEAT someone bad," Banks said, "it's tough to maintain intensity throughout. After we scored four runs, I was surprised we got one more."

Iowa had no problems concentrating in the opener.

All of the Hawkeyes were connecting on Loras pitchers Jim Burroughs and Scott Glap. Iowa first baseman Rob Eddie led the hitting assault.

After Iowa scored once in the second inning. Eddie knocked in two runs with a third-inning double. He then scored on a sacrifice fly by third baseman

For the game, Eddie was a perfect three for three at the plate. The sophomore also had three runs batted in, including one RBI in the fourth inning, when 12 Hawkeyes stepped to the Iowa had six singles in the fourth and the big hit came from catcher Jeff Gurtcheff. The Hawkeye sophomore, who had singled in his first at-bat of the inning, connected for a triple his second time up for three more Iowa EVEN ON THIS cold day the Iowa speed attack was definitely out. The Hawkeyes stole seven bases in the first game and were successful in all 11 attempts for the afternoon.

Banks said the stealing will continue. "One thing we can do is run," Banks and we will continue to do so." Maybe the Iowa highlight in the first game, though, came on the defensive end of the field. The Hawkeyes turned the first triple play Banks has been involved with.

In the top of the fourth, with runners on first and second, Duhawk third baseman Jim Keane lined a shot to left Iowa's Vance McKinnon dove and caught the ball. He fired to second baseman Kevin Oliger for a force out, and Oliger then tossed the ball to Eddie to end the inning. Both Loras runners had assumed the ball was trapped.

HAWKEYE SENIOR Mike Darby went all five innings to grab the win and move his mark to 2-3 on the season. Burroughs was the loser and he is now

The second game was more misery for Coach Doug Smith's Duhawks. Senior Jeff Ott went the full seven innings and threw a five hitter, while striking out eight Duhawks. Banks was happy to have good per-formances from Ott and Darby, after poor showings on the mound earlier this season by Iowa pitchers. "We wanted to get them some innings," Banks said. "We need a lot of innings, especially from those guys. "We have such a good defense," Banks said. "It's a shame we haven't had better pitching, because our defense can play."

Cold weather chills lowa golfers; tourney format concerns Thomason

By Thomas W. Jargo Assistant Sports Editor

With temperatures hovering in the low 40s, a "chilled" Iowa women's golf team will attempt to heat up in time for today's start of the Southwest Missouri State Invitational in Springfield, Mo.

The Hawkeyes, playing a few practice rounds on the par-74 Fremont Hills Golf Course Wednesday in cold, windy, 43degree weather, will be battling more than frosty temperatures as the five-team tourney gets under way.

The other four teams in the tournament are host Southwest Missouri State, Missouri, Stephens College and Kansas State.

"We played some practice rounds (Wednesday) and it was cold," Iowa Coach Diane Thomason said. "Our hands were a little chilled. But we practiced a little afterwards, and our chipping and putting looks really good."

features a new format, according to Thomason. Also, the course is new and very "undeveloped," said Thomason, who thinks the scores will be higher than normal for those reasons.

In the new format, each of the fivemember teams will play 27 holes today and Friday. The final nine holes of today's competition will be combined with the first nine holes of Friday's action to total round two of the tournament.

In essence, three rounds of golf are crammed into two days of play, and Thomason is not real thrilled about the new format.

The overnight delay between the two middle rounds can have its disadvantages, Thomason said. "If we're finishing up on a good day, we'd just as soon finish it up,"

THOMASON SAID the lengthy delay can have psychological disadvantages for the golfers. "If you're playing poorly, you go home and have all night to think about it,"

"You might worry about how to make up some strokes, and that can hurt your confidence level."

Another problem facing the Iowa quintet of senior Cookie Rosine, junior Amy Bubon and sophomores Mary Baecke, Lynn Tauke and Julie Edgar is the course itself, Thomason said.

"The course is not in the best of shape." the ninth-year coach said. "I'm not sure our scores will be that low.

The fairways are not filled out yet, according to Thomason, and that can cause problems even with a good tee shot. "The fairways are very uneven and still wet," she said. "You could have a big clump of grass behind your ball.

"We'll be taking a lot of relief from casual water ... and that's a little unusual. The greens are okay, but the whole course is new and undeveloped."

derestimating the meet against the Spartans, despite their poor record this season. "Michigan State, they're not as bad as they say," he said. "They have pretty good balance and their guys down below are pretty good."

The Iowa coach also said several Iowa players remember playing the Spartans a couple of years ago when Michigan State had a similar record. That year, Michigan State beat the Hawkeyes "pretty bad," Houghton said. "They won't have any problems underestimating Michigan State."

The Hawkeyes' will try to achieve their second goal Saturday against Michigan, a team Iowa has never beaten. Iowa's record against the Wolverines

The Wolverines have won the Big Ten title or at least a piece of the title for 17 consecutive years, Houghton said. "When people think of Big Ten tennis, they think of Michigan," he said.

HOUGHTON SAID beating a team Iowa has never beaten before will definitely be an "incentive" for the Hawkeyes. "Realistically, many times (in the past) we have had no chance to beat them,' Houghton said. "This year, we have the chance."

Michigan, with a record of 5-5 this season, is a young team, starting two freshmen in its singles line-up, like Iowa. The Wolverines have already beaten Big Ten opponents Purdue and Illinois.

"Considering everything, we have had a pretty good year so far," Michigan Coach Brian Eisner said. "We hope to keep improving throughout the year. I think we could be very good by the Big Ten Eisner, whose team beat Iowa last year, 7-2, said he expects a very tough match this year against the Hawkeyes. "Iowa's got a deeper team than they have had in the past," he said.

Bench rule approved; shot clock is delayed

Men's Basketball Rules Committee Wednesday approved a 28-foot coaching box to prevent coaches from straying up and down the court sidelines, but left open the question of adopting a 45-second shot clock.

"The committee felt that the adoption of the coaching box would be a significant step in improving bench decorum and the image of an already great game," said Edward S. Steitz, the committee's secretary-rules editor and director of athletics at Springfield Coaching boxes were used experimentally in six Division I conferences this past season. Coaches, players and bench personnel were required to remain in a designated bench area except to request specific infor-mation from the scorers' table during a timeout, address a correctable error or report into the game.

"WE'VE HAD COACHES straying off beyond areas of their benches. We've had coaches going down in front of the other team's bench," Steitz said.

Coaches have been meeting at the court mid-line during games, he said, noting that two assistant coaches converged in an on-court fist fight at one game this year. Part of the sideline wandering was for purposes of intimidation, Steitz said.

"We want (the coaches) back in the SEATTLE (UPI) - The NCAA area to coach the ballgame," he added. The boxes would extend from the baselines to the court hash marks, normally 18 feet on either side of center

> The adoption of a 45-second shot clock, considered by many coaches to be inevitable for the development of the college game, was left in place as a conference option.

HOWEVER, THE committee decided the clock may be used alone the entire game or in conjunction with a three-point shot option from beyond a line 19 feet, nine inches from the center

Some members of the 13-member rules committee are still opposed to the shot clock. Steitz said, even though 53 percent of coaches polled on the rule change voted in favor of it. However, 77 percent of the coaches rejected the three-point shot.

Steitz said some coaches are still saying, "Look, if I'm ahead and I'm about to pull off the biggest upset in the history of the institution, I may want to

"I believe you will see a 45-second clock adopted in Lexington," he said, referring to the next rules committee meeting at the NCAA finals to be held next year at the University of Ken-

Rampal, Lagoya recital reveals genius

By John Voland

HE REAL NEWS about the Jean-Pierre Rampal/Alexandre Lagoya recital Monday night in Hancher Auditorium wasn't that it was exciting (which, for the most part, it was), or that it was masterful (which it definitely was) or even that it was sold out (which it seemed to be).

What was so interesting was the dominance of Lagoya and his heretofore unknown to me excellence on the guitar.

Everyone knows that Rampal, with his Lloyd's-insured golden flute, is perhaps the world's greatest living flutist. Certainly he embodies all the virtues of the French school of woodwind playing (purity of pitch, limpid, bell-like tone, fine breath control) with none of the vices (self-consciousness, a "virtuoso" mentality, detrimental to the composer). And he singlehandedly has rescued the majority of flute literature from the dustbin by his constant recording and concertizing.

But Lagoya, much more quiet and absent from the concert stage for 10 years (from 1967 to 1977), emerged Monday as a truly

His newest novel, Two Wings To Veil My Face, derives an epic novel of memory, history and love from a simple structure. In the novel, a 91-year-old woman named

Sweetie Reed recalls to her grandson.

Nathaniel, the landmark incidents of her life.

The substance of this interchange between generations centers around the death of Jericho Witherspoon, Nathaniel's beloved grandfather and Sweetie's estranged husband. Sweetie, to the dismay of all, has refused to attend the funeral of the much-revered and accomplished old man. In this interchange, Sweetie intends to reveal the an-amazing virtuoso and a tonal wizard of the classical guitar.

Lagoya wasn't idle during those 10 years away from recitals: he taught both privately and, after 1969, at the Paris Conservatoire Nationale and the Academie de la Musique in Nice. He also obviously spent time keeping his hands and mind in shape.

ON MONDAY LAGOYA was the perfect partner for the flights of Rampal's fancy: rhythmically steady, subtly contrapuntal, self-effacing. His ability to double for a keyboard instrument was nothing short of wonderful; two, three or even four voices worked in tandem to provide a solid grounding for the solo part in a way expected of a piano or harpsichord - but not from a

The evening's solo selections proved revelatory. Rampal chose one of J.S. Bach's solo flute Partitas (the A minor) and made a showpiece of it — flute playing of this caliber of the Sanz dances and the bravura of the Carproduct of a protected and pampered existence - of his naive worship of men whose deeds are unknown to him. Nathaniel listens but is finally unable to accept the awful implications of Sweetie's life and story. Instead, he hopes to "settle the wretched sourness in Sweetie's soul" and attempts to reveal a "new" world to his grandmother who is consumed by leftover anger of injustices inflicted upon her during her journey out of slavery and into a marriage bargain struck by black men - her own father, I.V. Reed, and is rare indeed. He made light of the fiendishly difficult Courante and yet made the Sarabande poignant. Some traces of hurry poked through the velvety sound from time to time - most notably in the concluding Bouree Anglaise - and forcibly shortened the otherwise delicious phrasing. But in the face of Rampal's immense talent and stature. these are quibbles; there's no question that he puts a premium on communication and sharing his art with the audience.

Lagoya, when his turn came, played some well-known solo guitar works, among them Albeniz's "Asturias," which in Lagoya's hands emerged a startlingly dynamic work seldom the case when other players, less technically gifted than Lagoya, struggle with the work's technical demands (even Julian Bream, an internationally famous guitarist, had his troubles when he played it as an encore in a Chicago recital in 1980). The Albeniz and the other pieces showed off Lagoya's incredible range of tonal effects, the equal of which I have never heard from a guitarist. And his musicality was of the highest order as well; the melancholy of the Mozzani variations, the crisp Spanish flavor cassi variations on "Au claire de la lune" were all projected cleanly and clearly every note could be heard.

IT WAS ONLY after hearing Lagoya play solo that responsibility for the balance problems heard earlier in the evening became clearer. Rampal was merely playing a tad too loudly in the Telemann and Carulli works for all the felicities of Lagoya's accompaniment to be heard. The latter could obviously fill a hall with sound, so the dynamics of the duet had largely to do with Rampal's "top billing" as "first soloist" (even though most of the works the two played were "concertantes," meaning both payers had chances in the spotlight) more than anything else.

As the evening's capper (though there were three encores yet to come), Rampal and Lagoya performed a piece by Indian sitarist Ravi Shankar entitled "The Enchanted Morning." While it evinced Rampal's most passionate playing of the evening, it served as a messy anti-climax to the recital, especially coming right after Lagoya's solos. But those encores - by Beethoven, Ibert and Paganini - more than made up for the momentary

Forrest confronts stereotyping of blacks "Black heroes and heroines - Malcolm X, Adam Clayton Powell, Josephine Baker, Billie Holiday - have traditionally been complex people. Even Michael Jackson seems to be complex." On the other hand, Forrest said, black men aren't complex enough in the stories and novels currently being published by black women, whom he links to Eudora Welty and the Southern female literary tradition.

"The men are portrayed as awful. Let's see the levels of why men are so hard to get along with," he said. "I hope to see more development of character.'

His own unparalleled blend of the fictional elements that some critics have described as "difficult" is in fact difficult, Forrest said. "That isn't necessarily bad," he said. "Few critics are willing to extend themselves into a complex fictional world when the narrative is not immediate. Instead, they assume that the work has fictionally failed. "I always go after, I try to capture and heighten, the grandness and agony of the Afro-American experience," he continued The author added that his vision, influenced by jazz and the Negro spiritual, is an attempt to "re-create literature that is as eloquent as the voice of black protest and celebration, and as elegant as the grandness of other cultural expression."

Meanwhile, Lyons and Gabler predict the winners-to-be of this year's Oscar race on "Sneak Previews" (IPT-12 at 7 p.m.).

On cable: Don't think for a minute that Jeff and Neal have cornered the market on cinematic insight, though, because the DI's own crack team of prognosticaters (John Voland, Craig Wyrick and UI playwright John Bliss) will use their psychic abilities to see all and know all as they predict the winners on "The First Annual Daily Iowan/Hawkeye Cablevision Oscar Show" (Cable Vision Channel 5 at 5 and 9 p.m.) Advice from this highly-esteemed panel of experts might prove invaluable in winning The Daily Iowan's Oscar Contest, which, after the Oscars themselves, is the most exciting movie contest of Molissa Fenley repeats her newest work, "Hemispheres," tonight at 8 in the Hancher Loft. Tickets, at $6 ($4 for UI students), are still available. Go, already.

Nightlife

So sorry, folks. Jadestone sets the Crow's Nest on fire tonight, not last night as we reported. Seems the Information Gremlins were busily at work again, fouling communication channels and giggling hysterically. Tonight's the night, though, so don't miss it.

 Pocketwatch Paul and the Rhythm Rockets do a lot more than just mark off time at Gabe's Oasis tonight - they blow up in your face. Explosive stuff.

The UI's expected energy deficit for fiscal 1984 may be alleviated, provided state lawmakers and the Iowa weather

In January UI officials were predicting that, because of last year's hot summer and bitterly cold winter, the UI could wind up fiscal 1984 with an energy budget deficit of nearly $1

But Thursday UI Vice President for Finance Dorsey Ellis said, "We are now projecting a $250,000." Ellis listed the " that has existed si

Exotic defens

By Dawn Ummel

About 50 area residents gathered in the UI Engineering Building Thursday night to watch on closed circuit television as four prominent military and science figures attacked the Reagan administration's plan to build spacebased defenses against nuclear weapons.

"These exotic defenses won't work," said Admiral Noel Gayler, former director of the National Security Agency. "If we try, we'll shoot our-selves in the foot."

Gayler referred to plans by the Reagan administration to construct such devices as "reflectors" in space that would bounce nuclear weapons
