Nicaragua sues U.S. for rebel offensive

Nicaragua filed a suit against the United States at the World Court in The Hague Monday, demanding an end to alleged acts of American aggression including the mining of Nicaraguan ports and the destruction of bridges, ospitals and airports.

And the State Department has filed a request with the court that would head off any complaints made by Central American countries against the United

'These activities include the mining of ports, the destruction of bridges, spitals and airports and all military attacks against my country," Arguello said in an interview in The Hague.

Arguello said Nicaragua also asked the court to issue provisional and immediate orders to ensure that the damages inflicted by the mines do not become "irreparable."

ARGUELLO SAID the suit was the first filed by Nicaragua against the United States and also the Central American nation's first request for a ruling under international law to the International Court of Justice in over

"We are all in agreement that there does not exist the least doubt that the government of the United States is obligated to accept the jurisdiction of the court," Arguello said.

But the suit came a day after the State Department in Washington said the world court was being misused "as a forum for a propaganda campaign' and would ignore any court ruling on the charges of mining Nicaraguan

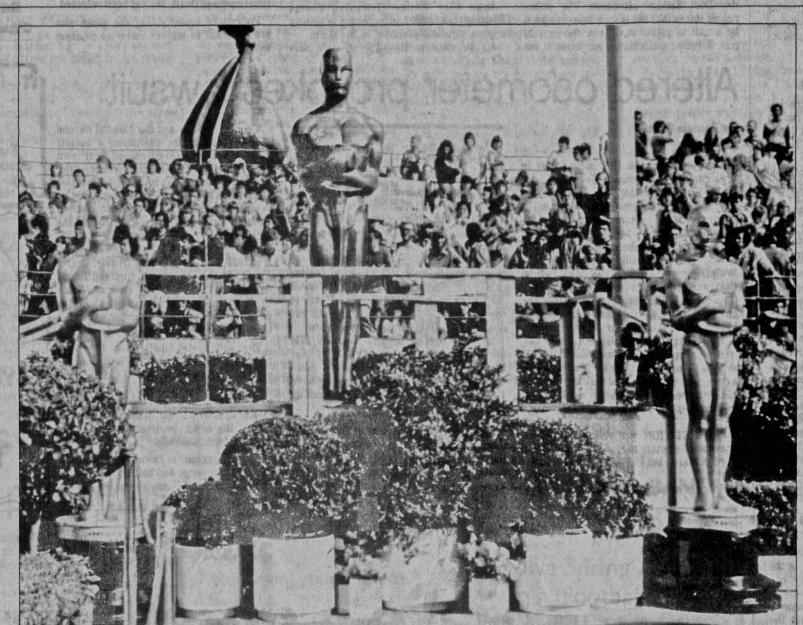

Senior State Department officials said Monday the United States will take additional steps in heading off the Nicaraguan complaint to the World

They expressed confidence that the court will grant the U.S. request, filed Friday, that the court's compulsory jurisdiction will not apply to the United States for two years, in any case regarding disputes with any Central American states.

Nevertheless, the State Department 'likely" will send its lawyers to the court to support its case against responding to the Nicaraguan complaint, they said.

Although the U.S. request included all Central American countries, it was obviously designed to frustrate the Nicaraguan complaint on the mining of Nicaraguan ports - mining allegedly directed by the CIA.

Education bill stalled in House by caucus

By Robyn Griggs Staff Writer

with Till Daily Month in laws Cibb Spike Trunday, Abril 30, 1984

The Iowa House of Representatives again dragged its feet on the state education appropriations bill Monday, curbing optimism that the UI could receive an additional $250,000 in energy

The bill, originally slated for discussion on the floor Monday morning, was introduced but delayed for the day after state Republicans went into caucus, apparently to discuss education appropriations:

House Democrats expect the bill to provide at least $325.3 million to the regents, but fear the delay could hinder chances their version of the bill will

The Republicans went into caucus following the introduction of an amendment by Rep. Charles Poncy, D-Ottumwa, to allow the UI to apply for $250,000 in state emergency energy funds to cover a possible energy budget deficit for fiscal 1984.

This concept was originally approved by an education subcommittee, but the House Appropriations Committee deleted it from the bill last week. Poncy reintroduced the language and also proposed an amendment to allow the regents institutions to divert any leftover energy funds into their operating budgets.

'I don't know if it will fly or not," Poncy said Monday, although he added he is "cautiously" optimistic the amendment will pass in the House.

However, Appropriations Chairman Tom Jochum, D-Dubuque, has protested the amendment and said he has not changed his stance on the issue. Last week his committee struck from the bill language allowing the UI to apply for these funds.

"I HAVEN'T changed my mind at all," Jochum said Monday. "First of all, I don't think a lot of people who are looking at it (the amendment) even understand the process that it's going

"I think a lot of misinformation is going on about this — it has little to do with funds for education," he added. "It's one thing to say we're going to take money from education and another thing to award money for mismanagement," he said.

Yet Poncy charged, "Our problem is that our appropriations chairman (Jochum) is meddling, I feel, into a bill that he shouldn't be.

Rep. Richard Varn, D-Solon, who said Friday he believed the energy amendment would pass the House, was also less optimistic after Monday's postponement.

'We haven't got Jochum convinced on this $250,000 question yet. I think he's going to actively protest - I think this will have to go to the Senate," he

However, Monday afternoon Varn received information from the regents that he believes could help gather support for the energy amendment.

According to Varn, Iowa State University and the University of Northern Iowa were allowed to use their energy savings as part of budget reversions required by the state.

Varn said this is "especially unfair" because these schools will use less money for the reversion from their general funds than will the UI.

ISU HAS an energy savings of about $1.02 million and UNI has a savings of

Englert owner given go-ahead to divide By Greg Philby

Representatives of the Englert Theatre, 221 E. Washington St., need only pick up a piece of paper to begin work on dividing the building into two smaller theaters.

The Iowa City Housing & Inspection Service approved the theater owner's request to divide the building Thursday. The permit to begin actual construction has not yet been issued, but city inspectors said work can begin as soon as a theater representative picks up the permit. Art Stein, general manager of Central States Theater Corp., of Des Moines, owner of the Englert Theatre, has refused to comment on the project.

Central States owns and operates all of capacity would be 280 seats. the theaters in the Iowa City and Coralville area except for the Union Bijou Theatre.

Tom Ramstad, manager of the Englert, has also refused comment. It is not known whether the 71-year-old theater will be given a new name.

Dale Moore, an engineer with Shive-Hattery & Associates of Cedar Rapids who represented Stein in conducting the project, said he did not know when the construction would begin.

ACCORDING TO the building plan submitted March 26, the remodeling would include construction of a onefoot-thick wall directly down the center of the theater. Both theaters would use half of the floor and balcony segments. The theaters' total seating

The existing interior lobby doors and ticket booth would also be removed. The current concession stand would be enlarged and relocated along the west wall of the main lobby. Tickets would be sold at the snack bar.

The plan also calls for remodeled restroom facilities.

The two-theater plan was submitted after a previous plan to divide the Englert into three theaters was aban-

The earlier plan called for dividing the balcony into two separate theaters seating 130 to 140 people each, and leaving the street-level area intact as a third theater seating 500. The plan was dropped after it failed to provide access for the handicapped to the two

Central States opted for the twotheater plan rather than install elevators to the balconies.

"Based on the above-described twin theater concept, it does not appear necessary to provide access for the handicapped to the balcony level or to provide sprinklers in the building," reads a report by Shive-Hattery included with the permit application.

Several area residents who wished to restore the Englert became concerned when the theater owners applied for the remodeling permit.

JACINTA HART, 4041/2 E. Davenport St., a Johnson County employee, coordinated a movement to save the "Iowa City is in danger of losing its only real theater and one of the few original theaters left in the state of Iowa," Hart said in March. "An aura of grandeur and the ambiance of a gilded age is threatened with the proposed gutting of the theater to make two or three small movie halls."

Hart said as a complete theater with stage, orchestra pit and dressing rooms, the Englert once hosted such performers as Ethel Barrymore, anny Brice, Ed Wynn and Sarah

The group wanted to preserve the theater, and Hart said they were hoping "to present the owners with several viable alternative uses." She had no comment on the approval of the permit.

Feds break up heroin ring

NEW YORK - Federal agents have cracked a $1.6 billion heroin trafficking ring run by organized crime families in the United States and Italy, officials announced Monday. Thirtyone people were charged.

The drug ring was headed by the Catalano faction of the New York-based Bonanno crime family, as well as other members of La Cosa Nostra families, Attorney General William French Smith said. The alleged leader of the group was identified as Salvatore Catalano, who operates a bakery and pizza restaurant in New York City.

Woman found dead in car at park

By Marc Rosenberg

An Iowa City police officer found June Ronnfeldt, 47, of Waterville, Iowa, dead in her Chrysler Le Baron at 1 a.m. Monday. Officer Ralph Cox discovered the body in City Park. Police began searching for Ronnfeldt Sunday afternoon. The police report states that the search was prompted by a call to police at approximately 1:30 p.m. Sunday from a doctor employed at the UI Psychiatric Hospital. The doctor reportedly told police he was treating Ronnfeldt for depression. The doctor added that she had a history of suicide attempts and he was concerned for her well-being, the report states.

The police report states that Ronnfeldt died of an apparent overdose.

Iowa City Police Detective Cletus Keating said police had no reason to believe anyone else was involved in the death. UI Psychiatric Hospital officials said Monday that Ronnfeldt had not been admitted to the hospital and was not being treated there.

Johnson County Medical Examiner Dr. T.T. Bozek, was unavailable for comment regarding the death. The exact time of Ronnfeldt's death is unknown and no official cause of death has yet been released.

Police are investigating the death and are expected to release more information

Altered odometer provokes lawsuit

By Patricia Reuter

A Coralville woman filed suit against an area car dealer in Johnson County District Court Thursday asking that the company take back a car she purchased because the odometer had been tampered with.

Carolyn J. Moore, 946 Boston Way, filed the suit against Winebrenner Ford, Inc., 217 Stevens Drive, after she was notified by the Iowa Department of Transportation Feb. 28 that the odometer on the used 1981 Chevrolet Malibu she purchased from the car dealer Sept. 27 had been tampered with by an "out-of-state dealer or wholesaler."

The suit states that Moore bought the car from Winebrenner Ford with the odometer showing 33,096 miles. The IDOT sent Moore a document which showed that as of August 22, 1983 the car's odometer reading was 81.783 miles.

THE PETITION also states that Moore attempted to return the car to Winebrenner Ford in March but the dealer refused to ac-the car. $6,965.20, and interest; $262.77 for "preserving and repairing" the car; attorneys' fees and court costs.

Moore is not accusing the car dealer of being a party to the odometer tampering, which the IDOT determined happened before Winebrenner Ford took possession of the car. The IDOT said the car showed the higher mileage reading when it was in the possession of either a Minnesota car dealer or an Oklahoma car rental firm.

Moore's attorney, Michael Kennedy, said his investigation of the tampering has shown that at the present time the companies responsible for the tampering have "ceased to operate under their existing

'Before we can bring any action against those companies we have to find out where they are," Kennedy said. "If we locate them we have to find out what business name they are operating under."

Kennedy said he and the Federal Bureau of Investigation are examining a similar case for a client who purchased a car from Winebrenner Ford. The car, Kennedy said, was purchased by the Iowa City car dealer from an Oklahoma dealer. Kennedy said investigators could not comment yet on whether there is a connection between the

ALSO IN Johnson County District Court: Marion M. Devine of Texas filed suit Thursday against the Iowa State Bank and Trust Company asking that she be given a higher price for her stock in the company than has been offered by the bank.

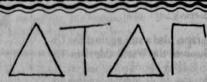

The suit states that when the bank merged with Jo. Co. State Bank Jan. 11, stockholders who wished to sell their holdings in the bank were paid $92.30 for each share. Devine, who holds 1,683 shares of stock, rejected the bank's offer and is asking the court to determine the "fair value" of her holdings.

The "fair value" of Devine's stock will be decided by a judge and both parties will be bound by that decision.

Both Head and Score termed Mears's idea of asking UI faculty members for the research records "inadequate."

Head said the committee does not want to "target" specific UI professors for information because she believes the UI is required by state law to provide the information itself. Rohovit has also charged that the UI is violating state public records laws by not releasing the requested records. Any interim policy, as a precondition, must be no more restrictive than the state public records law," stated the committee in an open letter addressed to Freedman. 'The administration is breaking state public records law because they have not responded formally to our request with either a ves or a no." Head

Mears has said in the past that she is unsure whether the UI is violating state public records laws.

THE COMMITTEE'S letter to Freedman stated, "We have remained hopeful of a conciliatory resolution of our complaints against the university, but we can accept nothing less than a policy of full compliance with state public records law ... at this juncture, we find little room for compromise."

Despite the present impasse, Score said his committee will probably not sue the UI for several more days.

'We are manuevering to make our strategy and position as strong as possible," Score said.

Rohovit plans to meet with the UI administration again to try to reach an agreement. "Nothing has been decided yet, but we still hope to settle this through negotiations or we wouldn't be continuing them." 'The possibility of a lawsuit is still wide open," Score said. "But we want to try and resolve this through all of the channels because we would regret having to sue the university." Citing a lack of knowledge on the subject, Monday night the CAC decided

STUDENT HEALTH Services Director Harley Feldick said since November students have been either getting their shots from Student Health or providing proof of immunization.

Feldick said Student Health two weeks ago sent letters to students who have not yet been vaccinated.

Despite the fact that the UI is giving students all summer to receive an immunization, Feldick said, "We want them all immunized this semester. If they have not been immunized, there may be a potential for a problem in case measles would occur."

The UI's immunization requirements originated as an attempt to prevent an epidemic like that of Indiana University's in March of 1983, which cost more than $250,000 to control

Some call the group a "big bank," and others simply reply quizzically,

These responses follow questions posed by five UI students enrolled in a nications and Public Relations course who call their group CPR 4 CAC. The students are working on a project to eliminate the public relations problem suffered by the UI Collegiate Associations Council.

The CAC is the half of UI student government dealing with the 'academic side'' of student issues. The group includes a total of 17 representatives from the 10 UI colleges.

Candy Welbes, one of the five students, said the CAC has a name recognition problem. "It seems they don't attempt to make themselves

Welbes said several deans from different UI colleges admitted they couldn't identify the councilors from Leaders from this low-profile organization agree CAC could profit from expanded public awareness.

"CAC doesn't have much of a public image," said councilor and CAC President-elect Larry Lassiter. "Our (student) groups tend to think of the CAC as a bank and that is wrong. We're friends ... a voice in student affairs." "I don't know why we would have to be defensive about being a source for funding," said current CAC President Tom Palmer. "It is our purpose" to allocate funds to help student groups.

ANOTHER PROBLEM CPR 4 CAC is addressing is councilors' level of commitment. "In any group there are various levels of commitment. I'm sure some councilors are not as dedicated as others," Palmer said.

Kate Head, another member of CPR 4 CAC, suggested CAC publish a newsletter to provide a better link with the student organizations receiving its CPR 4 CAC is also suggesting a name change for the group, Welbes said. Palmer acknowledged CAC is probably familiar to less than 10 percent of the UI student body.

Head said CPR 4 CAC has had trouble accumulating data for its study. She said her project team handed out surveys to the CAC, but only received Head said she thinks it is "funny" that the academic branch of student government would not help out in an academic project.

"They disappointed me," Welbes said of the limited CAC response. However, the public relations researchers persisted with another

Runoffs imperil black franchise

70s, black Mississippians held 42 percent of the seats in the state legislature (including speaker of the House) and also served as secretary of state, state superintendent of education and lieutenant governor.

That's the 1870s, of course, and by 1890, as a result of trickery, violence, threats of violence and waning federal commitment, black Mississippians had virtually lost the franchise.

To ensure the continued white domination of Mississippi politics, a number of actions were instituted, among them a poll tax, literacy tests and a requirement for a runoff election in the event no candidate in a primary election won a majority of the votes

That last is the "second primary" that Jesse Jackson has been railing against and which a number of black Mississippians have challenged in federal court

The suit (from which the facts in this account are taken) contends that the second-primary rule was promulgated for the express purpose of allowing whites to compete among themselves for office, secure in the knowledge that blacks, even if they coalesced behind a William Raspberry single candidate, could not take advantage of white disarray. As long as blacks constituted less than an absolute majority of the vote, their candidate would have to face the top white candidate in a runoff.

THE AUTHOR of this clever device, one Edmund F. Noel, was not bashful about its intent. "White supremacy," he wrote in a 1904 article explaining his purpose, "could be legally established only by indirection, as anything aimed directly at the Negro, as a race, would be self-destructive, all courts being required to uphold the Constitution of the United States and to nullify everything which came in conflict with it.'

On the other hand, he said, whites could not hold their party together unless they allowed for internal debate, intraparty competition and factional contests. The second-primary requirement allowed whites to have their debate (blacks having been effectively barred from the party) without

Racism obviously is not the only reason that a number of jurisdictions have instituted runoff requirements. The argument can be made that the rule is a safeguard against the nomination of a candidate preferred by a minority of his party. But its history in Mississippi makes the purpose quite Equally clear is Jesse Jackson's reason for wanting the second-primary rule struck down.

In recent presidential primary balloting, Jackson won pluralities in at least seven congressional districts in Georgia, Alabama, Arkansas and Mississippi. In seven other districts (five in South Carolina and two in Mississippi) he was the top vote-getter, but was outpolled by those who favored sending uncommitted delegates to the Democratic convention. In only two districts, both in Mississippi, did he win an absolute majority of the votes

JACKSON'S POINT is this: If his success in the presidential primaries is taken as a proxy of how well a black (or black-backed) candidate for Congress would do in these same districts, black voters could elect maybe anothe eight or ten members of Congress many of them from districts presently represented by arch-conservatives but only if the second-primary rule is struck down. Interestingly, the runoff requiremen can sometimes work to the advantage of blacks (or other minorities) William Winter, Mississippi's moderate governor, came in second in the initial gubernational primary but. with support from blacks and moderate whites, won an outright majority in the runoff. But the more relevant example from Jackson's viewpoint, at least - is Chicago, where a requirement for a second primary in last year's mayoral balloting would have pitted Harold Washington head-to-head against Rick Daley, effectively delivering the nomination to Daley. But the presence of incumbent Jane Byrne in that race split the white vote in two and allowed Washington to win the primary and, subsequently, the mayorship.

In short, it happened just the way

Edmund Noel feared it might.

Capitalist and Cuban unions differ

A Freedoms Foundation Feature

HE FREEDOM of American workers to band together into labor unions, collectively bargain with their employers and support their demands with strikes is an accepted part of our economic life. Although labor relations is fertile ground for raising differences of opinion, and management and labor are capable of memorable donnybrooks, few would advocate stripping American workers of their right to collective action.

Few, too, would ever confuse free trade unions with the pale imitations that exist in totalitarian communist states, but it is good to have an occasional reminder of the differences between workers' rights in a capitalist economy and in a "workers' state." Just such a reminder has recently been provided by the Organization of American States' report on human rights in Cuba.

A basic statement of labor rights would have to include three elements: the right to form or join unions of one's choosing; the right to collectively bargain with one's employer; and the right to withhold services, to strike, to press one's demands. How do Cuban workers score against this standard? 0

Guest opinion

Despite stirring rhetoric and the usual communist blather about the workers' paradise, Cubans are unable to exercise any of these basic freedoms enjoyed by their counterparts in capitalist countries. In fact, the Castro government has throughout its entire history denied unions their traditional role as protectors of worker interests, viewing them instead as agents of the

TO BEGIN, there is but a single union in Cuba, established by law and directed and guided by the Communist Party. Formation of any workers' groups outside of this single, vertically structured union is strictly prohibited. Constitutional guarantees of the right of assembly and "full freedom of speech and opinion, based on the unlimited right of initiative and criticism" are rendered functionally meaningless by a later section of the Cuban Constitution, which states that these rights and all other individual trary to the existence and objectives of the socialist state, or contrary to the decision of the Cuban people to build socialism and communism.'

Cuban workers currently have no more right to collective bargaining than they have to free trade unions. Ironically, collective bargaining in Cuba was legally recognized in 1934 and constitutionally protected in 1940. However, under Castro, Cuba has moved from being one of the labor relations leaders among Latin American nations to one of the most oppressive.

The OAS report notes: " ... in December 1959, collective bargaining was temporarily suspended, but in practice was eliminated." Subsequent legal developments have served to further restrict collective bargaining and to reinforce "the power of the Ministry of Labor to directly and unilaterally regulate working conditions." The culmination of this change is that collective bargaining agreements are now viewed as "collective labor commitments" whereby workers agree to meet production goals established by the government.

IT SHOULD come as no surprise that there is no right to strike in Cuba. Work stoppages are viewed as counter-revolutionary activities and are punishable by dismissal or imprisonment. Erstwhile revolutionary Ernesto 'Che'' Guervara summed it up in 1961: "Cuban workers must become accustomed to living in a regime of collectivism and in no case may declare a strike." The Miami Herald on Aug. 23, 1982 quoted Antonio Villaverde, Director of the Cuban Chamber of Commerce, telling potential foreign investors, "there is no danger of strikes in Cuba" — a boast his capitalist counterparts can't make. The OAS report concludes: "It is in the area of collective labor rights that the Commission finds the greatest contradiction between the system's ideological postulates and its operation in practice ... The very function of unions has been distorted, and rather than protecting the concrete interests of workers they have become a channel to transmit government orders; the unions have thus become an instrument of control."

It could have concluded with a simple question: In whose name was the Cuban revolution fought?

Stand up, sit down ...

To the editor:

I was let down at the Billy Joel concert, though the entire performance was fantastic. It was the crowd's performance that left much to be desired. I have never seen such a dead crowd. By the end of the concert most people were on their feet, but for more than half the concert people just sat there!

Billy Joel and his band put a lot of effort into a good show, but what kind of gratitude is it when the crowd is nonreactive? If you're going to go see a concert - you should go with a little enthusiasm and be able to show it.

Finally Iowa City has the facilities to bring in top performers. I doubt if these people will want to come back if Iowa City builds a reputation for having deadbeat crowds.

I know I am not alone in this opinion. Many times in my section of the arena people would stand up to clap only to be told by the people behind them to sit down. If you come to a concert to sit down and not be enthusiastic, stay home and watch it on H.B.O.!

Polls show slight Mondale lead in Pennsylvania

Mondale and Gary Hart dueled Monday for the popular vote in today's Pennsylvania presidential primary, but Mondale is likely to win big in the contest for the state's 172 Democratic

The outcome of the popular contest may hinge on how many votes civil rights activist Jesse Jackson attracts. especially in Philadelphia where more than 40 percent of the registered Democrats are black.

Mondale has the edge on national convention delegates, however, because he has full slates of 117 delegates running in separate races in the 23 congressional districts. Hart had only 47 of his own and had to borrow 70 more from candidates who dropped out of the race. Another 55 delegates are apportioned statewide based on the outcome of the delegate races in the congressional districts.

Hart's 70 adopted delegates are not identified with his name on the Pennsylvania ballot, making it difficult for his supporters to tell which ones to

A Philadelphia Daily News poll on the eve of the primary showed the con-test neck and neck. Mondale had 30.7 percent, Hart 26.6 percent and Jackson 9.2 percent, with 32.1 percent saying they had not yet decided how to vote. The poll of 885 registered Democrats was taken Friday through Sunday.

positive of their preference and might change before election day.

The Washington Post-ABC poll, taken Wednesday through Sunday, also showed a close race with Mondale at 41 percent, Hart at 39 percent and Jackson 14 percent, with a 4 percent margin of error.

Hart and Mondale blitzed the state Monday in a last-ditch scramble for votes while Jackson began the day in Pittsburgh and finished it in his Philadelphia stronghold.

On a five-city tour, Mondale pledged to help Pennsylvania if he is elected

Education Department seeks $700,000 PUSH payment

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The Education Department disclosed Monday it is demanding repayment of more than $700,000 in misspent federal grant money from Operation PUSH-Excel, a spin-off of Jesse Jackson's ambitious self-help movement.

Coupled with recent similar decisions by the Labor and Commerce departments, the action means the government is seeking to recover more than $1 million of the $4.83 million in grants it provided to the Chicago-based minority education group since

Jackson and officials of PUSH (People United to Save Humanity) for Excellence Inc., which Jackson founded, questioned the timing of the audit and the Jackson, campaigning in Pittsburgh, said it was more than coincidence the Reagan administration chose the day before the Pennsylvania primary to release the audit.

"The timing of these reports suggests something very nasty and almost conspiratorial," said Jackson, adding that similar audits were released the weekend before primaries in New Hampshire and New York.

THE AUDITORS "spent so much time here, it's abnormal in the sense that all of this comes about at this peculiar time," PUSH attorney John Bustamante said at a Chicago news conference. "I'm not saying the administration singled us out, but it is unusual."

Bustamante emphasized that Jackson, as chairman of the board, had no direct role in administering the funds but was purely a "motivator and volunteer." He said Joyce Dorsey, executive director of PUSH-Excel, was responsible for the funds. And he said the findings actually show the government owes PUSH-Excel $8,019 on one Education Department

The group, which was notified of the Education Department decision 10 days ago, has until April 30 to submit payment or file an appeal.

Jackson, now a Democratic presidential candidate, formed Operation PUSH in 1972, and later conceived the idea for PUSH for Excellence Inc. to combat drug and alcohol use among the nation's PUSH-Excel, as it is now known, was plagued from the start by mismanagement and misdirection, ruling has been made in that case.

evidenced by the fact it has had four national directors and five comptrollers since 1978.

The American Institutes for Research, which studied the use of more than $17 million in federal money poured into Operation PUSH and affiliated entities, concluded PUSH for Excellence "turned out to be mainly paper. ... It continued to grope (for a strategy) through the life of the federal project."

ON MARCH 30 and 31, Education Department officials issued five final "determinations," based on audits completed last summer that found PUSH-Excel made numerous improper expenditures.

Department officials concluded PUSH-Excel failed to justify expenditures of federal grant money totaling $754,564, but that some expenditures in excess of the grant allotments were justified. They demanded total payment of $708,431.

Auditors concluded PUSH for Excellence adequately justified expenditure of most of the rest of the $3.1 million in grants received from the Educatle success and no longer receives federal aid.

"It was just not very tight financial control or bookkeeping. That was the problem," said Charles Hansen, an official of the Education Department's grant-making office. "There were inadequate records to substantiate claims."

PUSH-Excel's last national director, Dr. Elma Mardis, resigned in February, 1982, and it was unclear whether the government could even hope to recover the funds or whether it would seek recourse from Operation PUSH. PUSH-Excel, which lists Gregory Kenner as its acting comptroller, has raised substantial sums from private donors.

SOME OF THE unallowable claims included salaries, such as $18,000 paid to a project director who was receiving a full-time salary elsewhere.

Hansen said about half of the unacceptable education claims involved "overhead" for miscellaneous items such as insurance and utilities.

On March 13, the Labor Department disallowed $434,000 in expenditures for its awards of one grant and one contract. The Commerce Department disallowed $99,910 in expenditures for its grant. An audit of a Health and Human Services contract, performed by the inspector general's office at education, questioned $240,000 in expenditures but no final

Delegates stay true to McGovern

WASHINGTON (UPI) - George McGovern, encouraged by the loyalty of followers in Iowa, is ready to lead a group of 23 delegates to the Democratic National Convention in July, staff members said Monday.

McGovern loyalists in Iowa refused to be absorbed by the delegations of Gary Hart or Walter Mondale during county conventions Saturday. As a result, state party officials project McGovern will win at least two national delegates from

McGovern also won 21 delegates by finishing third in the Massachusetts

Like Chicago Mayor Harold Washington, who won 35 delegate votes in the Illinois primary but seeks no delegates elsewhere, McGovern is interested in taking his delegates to the Port minings in Nicaragua perceived as 'act of war'

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Congressional Democrats branded President Reagan's Central American policy "morally bankrupt" Monday and said the reported U.S. role in mining Nicaraguan ports dooms his request for more aid for Nicaraguan

Concern over the mining - termed "an act of war" by several lawmakers - and the administration's decision to refuse to accept international legal jurisdiction over U.S. actions in Central America prompted swift and negative reaction on Capitol

House Speaker Thomas "Tip" O'Neill said the developments dash any chance of the House granting an additional $21 million in aid Reagan seeks for the CIA-backed rebels who are fighting the Sandinista regime in Nicaragua. O'Neill called the president's decision to reject World Court jurisdiction - announced Sunday by the State Department — a "shocking" action that undermines "38 years of U.S. support for the peaceful and lawful resolution of disputes between nations." He said Reagan's Nicaragua policy is "legally

Rep. Robert Matsui, D-Calif., said the administration's foreign policy "has become so morally bankrupt that it must forewarn the World Court that it cannot accept their judgment.'

AS EXPECTED, Nicaragua asked the World Court Monday to intervene on the grounds that the mining of some of its key ports - reportedly by rebels directed and equipped by the CIA - is a violation of internationally accepted norms for peaceful relations

The mines have damaged eight ships from various nations, including the Soviet Union and Japan.

O'Neill said the House might compromise on military aid to El Salvador, which the Senate set at $62 million, but not on funds for the CIA-sponsored rebels in Nicaragua. He said House Intelligence Committee Chairman Edward Boland, D-Mass., would oppose the covert aid "all the way."

John Hughes, a State Department spokesman, repeated the administration's position that it would not accept the World Court's jurisdiction and allow Nicaragua to turn the international tribunal into a "propaganda arena" leading to lengthy litigation.

We think there are other, more appropriate avenues - the Contadora process for settlement of the dispute on a regional basis is where we would like to see this activity take place," he said at a

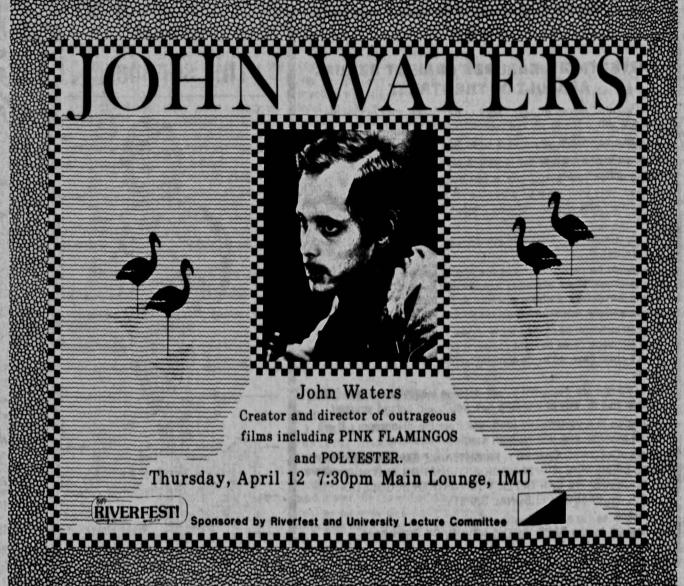

ABRAM CHAYES, a former legal adviser to the State Department now representing Nicaragua in the case, said the United States is required to give six months' notice to withdraw from potential cases before the International Court of Justice, "So we're just going to have to see what the court does about

On Capitol Hill, Rep. George Miller, D-Calif., said the alleged CIA role in the mining amounts to "statesponsored terrorism."

Reps. Ted Weiss, D-N.Y., and Berkley Bedell, D-Iowa, both called the mining "an act of war." Democratic presidential candidates Jesse Jackson and Gary Hart, campaigning in Pennsylvania, described it as "very close to an act of war."

Rep. Jim Leach, R-Iowa, also opposed the administration action, calling it "dismaying to all concerned with the rule of law.'

Jackson said he will go to Managua to meet with the Sandinista government and with rebel leaders within a month.

Hawkeye country music fans started a-clapping and a-hollering before the concert even began. But then again, the taped music played beforehand was more exciting than the live concert.

It wasn't that Alabama performed badly. They sounded the same way they do on record - dull and flaccid Alabama has found a way to merge some of the best elements of country music (especially the story songs that reek of human pathos) with the power chords of rock 'n' roll. Owens' vocals. And the young men nearby also let out whoops of appreciation during the slow love songs - and on the loud, rowdy ones. In fact, one of the best things about the concert was the way in which Alabama mixed their slow and fast numbers together, rather than playing alternate sets. It allowed the crowd to get in the groove and relax at the same time.

MY FAVORITE part of Saturday night's performance was Alabama's physical rendition of the old-time classic "Wildwood Flower." The highlight of the song occurred when the three leading men stood tightly packed in a line as if they were about to hump each other, yet stretched out their arms to play each other's ... guitars. You must remember, these are good ole boys. Perhaps you were expecting lowa Rugby Club weathers field en route to 'impressive' victories

By Melissa Rapoport

The pouring rain and 40-degree temperatures were not enough to hold back the Iowa Women's Rugby Club from winning the ninth annual St. Louis Rugby Tournament last weekend in St. Louis.

In the finals of the eight-team tournament, Iowa outscored host St. Louis, 12-0, to claim the championship title.

"I was very impressed," club captain Tanya Fry said. "We improved with every game. The new people picked things up very quickly."

Sherry Edwards led the scoring with two tries in the second half, followed by team spokesman Jean O'Leary, who scored the only try of the first half.

En route to the tournament title, the squad dumped Missouri, 24-0, and squeezed by Illinois State "by the skin of our teeth," O'Leary said.

"Sherry Edwards scored the lone try in the last five minutes of the game," O'Leary said. "It was one of those games when it could have gone either way. It was a real defensive game. We haven't played a defensive game in a long time. It was good for

In the Missouri match-up, Edwards again led the scoring with three tries, followed by Ellie Crocker and Tanya Fry with one try

On Thursday, in conjunction with the Riverfest activities, the club will hold and intrasquad meet at 4:30 p.m. at the Field

This weekend the squad will be traveling to Champaign, Ill., to defend its title at the eight-team Collegiate Tournament.

Virago victorious

Virago, the women's soccer club, also had a winning weekend after outscoring

Alliance of Des Moines, 9-1. Despite a lack of ball control at the beginning of the game, the squad pulled together to finish strong. "It was a little confusing in the beginning," spokesman Wendy Coyle said. "It was our first game of the season, but near the end of the game we had more control. There were new people who hadn't played with this group and veterans. It went well for our first game."

Bowling team 6th

The women's bowling team traveled to Kansas City last weekend to compete in the national districts, bringing home a sixthplace finish out of a eight-team field.

Rochelle Phelps led the Hawkeyes with a 12-game score of 1932, followed by Laura Kair (1801), Susan Krick (1606), Rose Ketter (1766) and Tina Farrington (1729). Mankato State, which won the tournament with 11,506 total points, will travel to San Jose, Calif., to compete in the national tournament.

Ice Hawks meeting

The Iowa Hockey Club will hold its annual spring meeting Thurs., April 19, in the Northwestern Room of the Union. The agenda will include discussions of a television documentary on cable channel 26, elections of club officers and organization of summer hockey practices. Agendas are available today at the desk in the Recreation Area at the Union.

Anyone interested in attending the meeting or playing next year is invited to attend the meeting. Experience is not necessary. For more information, contact Billy Vigdor at 351-4063.

Badminton tourney set

The Iowa Badminton Club will host a tournament, April 20-21, at Halsey Gym. Divisions include women's and men's singles and doubles, as well as coed doubles. Entry blanks are availible at the office of Recreational Services and are due April 12 at 4 p.m. along with a $1 fee per person, per event.

Hawkeye golfers favored at Big Four

By Greg Anderson Staff Writer

Iowa is definitely the favorite at today's Big Four men's golf meet in Des

At least that's the way Iowa State Coach Dale Anderson looks at the biannual meeting of the state's four Division I schools

"We have to beat those Hawkeyes," Anderson said. "Iowa is always strong and it's going to be a battle. Last (fall),

Iowa won easily.'

Iowa Coach Chuck Zwiener, though, has taken the usual pre-meet approach should be pretty close. I wouldn't say we're a shoo-in by any stretch of the imagination."

"It's hard to say," Zwiener said. "It

THE 27TH-YEAR Iowa coach did say the meet was an important one. "This is for state bragging rights," Zwiener said. "We don't want to finish second. Although it is always possible. "A lot of their guys and our guys will be playing in the same tournaments this summer," Zwiener said. "So it will be nice to know we're on top."

Both coaches do agree that the meet will probably be a two-team battle between Iowa and the Cyclones, with Drake and Northern Iowa chipping for

"Drake is not going to be a factor," Anderson said. "UNI, I don't know

Iowa State is close to the same situation that Iowa is in right now. Both schools are trying new players on the Five of the top six Cyclones are gone from last year's squad, but Iowa State opened its tournament season with a win at the Park College Invitational in ANDERSON SAID that winning the 20-team meet over schools like Kansas. Kansas State and Drake has given his squad new confidence.

"This year we seem to be playing good," Anderson said. "We won't be pushovers ... We went into Kansas City as an unknown.

Iowa State will be led by returning lettermen Dan Stonionis and Scott Hinkly, along with freshman Gary

Stonionis, a junior, tied for third in Kansas City with a 36 hole total of 153

Zwiener said he will bring seven people to the Des Moines Golf and Country Club and he will conduct a playoff to see who will travel to the Kepler Open this weekend in Ohio

Senior captain Eugene Elliott should feel safe about playing at Kepler, after finishing third at the Purdue Invitational last weekend.

Trent Dossett, Guy Boros, Mark Christensen and Mike Eckerman should also make the trip to Columbus, Ohio, while Mike Compiano and Joe Palmer will probably play for the final spot on the Iowa card.

lowa's woes

Hawks' sub-par start has Banks concerned

By Thomas W. Jargo Assistant Sports Edito

As far as Iowa baseball Coach Duane Banks is concerned, it's time to shut up and start producing

This is one of the most talented teams Banks has ever coached at Iowa. He knows it, and he has not shied away from letting everyone else know it as to a 11-15 mark, a record Banks says should be "much better. I'm really disappointed in our won-loss record. I really don't know what the problem Part of the overall problem for Iowa, Banks says, is that there has only been one game where the Hawkeyes put together "supurb" pitching and hitting. "WE DID THAT for one game, and that was an 8-2 win over Western Michigan (on April 1)," Banks said. In the rest of the games, Iowa has not been able to combine good pitching with good hitting. Last weekend was a got neither in a doubleheader loss to Northwest Missouri. don't (hit or pitch)," Banks said. "It's new low for the Hawkeyes, when they just a crazy game." Iowa's pitching has been a problem all season long. Currently, the Hawkeyes have a staff earned run average of 7.23. Two of Iowa's best pitchers are senior Jeff Ott (4-1) and junior Mike Darby (2-3). But both pitchers are supporting very high ERAs, with Ott's being 6.62 and Darby's at 5.12.

THE HAWKEYES greatest asset is speed, where Iowa baserunners have swiped 61 bases in 69 attempts. Outfielder Craig Conti leads the team in stolen bases with 14.

But the Hawkeyes lack the home run punch, producing only 22 homers in 26 games. Without the consistent long ball in the line-up, Iowa is not a comeback oriented team, putting added pressure on a battered pitching staff. As Banks put it, "we can't get down by four runs in the first inning."

Even though Iowa is not playing well right now, Banks says the Hawkeyes "should be a good team" by the time they open Big Ten play against Illinois Saturday in Champaign, Ill.

The key to Iowa's improvement over the next week is two-fold.

First, the weather must allow the Hawkeyes to play their scheduled doubleheaders at Wisconsin-Platteville today and Northern Iowa Wednesday,

Secondly, a talent-laden group of Hawkeyes have to "stop talking and start doing," Banks said. Banks held a team meeting Sunday in hopes of getting that point across to his

No. 4 singles match against Robin Young of Hawaii Monday afternoon in sonal losing streak. The Hawkeyes, however, lossed the meet, 6-3.

Martin impressive in tennis loss

If you ask Iowa co-coach Cathy Claussen, the Hawkeye women's tennis team pulled out a victory Monday afternoon in the Recreation Building.

But Hawaii defeated Iowa 6-3 in the match, so where was the victory for the Hawkeyes? It came at No. 4 singles for Iowa freshman Kim Martin. The Solon, Ohio, native had been without a win since the middle of last month in California.

But after two crushing conference defeats last weekend against Minnesota's Lisa Martin and Wisconsin's Annemarie Floreno, Martin came back strong with an impressive 6-4, 6-2 victory over Hawaii's Robin Young.

"THE WIN WAS very important for Kim," Claussen said following the match. "She needed to regain her confidence and this will help her get ready for our matches this weekend.' To top it off, Martin combined with Jenny

Reuter for a 6-3, 6-4 doubles win over the duo of Michelle Murray and Windy Tadani. But the most impressive performances were turned in by the Rainbow Wahinies' Rosie Vera Cruz and Rose Thomas. Vera Cruz ran down everything Reuter tried to put past her and easily handled the Iowa freshman, 6-3, 6-2, at No. 1

Thomas, a left-hander, used her long reach and quick reflexes to down Hawkeye captain Sara Loetscher, 6-2, 6-4, at No. 2. Vera Cruz and Thomas then combined to defeat Loetscher and freshman Michele Conlon, 6-2, 6-2, at No. 1 dou-

SPEAKING OF Conlon, the Iowa City native kept her perfect singles record in tact, but not without a struggle with Hawaii's Murray at No. 3. Murray took the first set, 6-4, before Conlon easily, 6-1, 6-2.

Iowa's No. 5 player Juli Weinstine encountered problems before her match against Tadani. Upon arrival at the Recreation Building, she discovered that her racquets had been stolen from her locker. Using one of Loetscher's racquets, she battled to a 4-1, third-set lead before dropping a close 6-4, 3-6, 7-5 decision to Tadani.

"Juli's game has undergone a transformation," Claussen said. "Instead of just hitting shots, she's thinking about where she wants to put them. She is playing really well right now.'

HAWAII COACH Jim Schwitters, who is a 1959 graduate of St. Ambrose College in Davenport where he was an All-American, said his squad is just finishing a three-week swing through the mainland. After three matches in California, the Rainbow Wahinies will be returning home.

"Our biggest problem is the fact that we have to be on the road so much," he said. "We have to recruit athletes with much better academic averages that can handle not being in class for three weeks."

The Hawkeyes return to Big Ten action this weekend with a big road trip to Illinois and Purdue that will go a long way in determining where Iowa will be seeded for the Big Ten meet

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The Senate O'Neill said handed President Reagan a sharp agree to p rebuke Tuesday, voting overwhelmingly that the United States million in S proved by should not in any way be involved in the mining of Nicaraguan ports.

The 84-12 vote came as the administration struggled to lessen damage to its policy in the wake of an angry backlash on Capitol Hill. Key Republican senators complained bit-terly about not being informed of the decision to proceed with the mining. The amendment offered by Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., declared no funds should be used "for the purpose of planning, directing, executing, or supporting the mining" of

Nicaraguan ports. In the House, Speaker Thomas

The Masters, first of the Big Four (including the U.S. and British Opens and the PGA Championship), begins Thursday at the famed Augusta National where an intruder broke in last fall in an attempt to talk with visiting President Reagan. If it sticks to form, it will wind up like most Masters - with a former champion being helped into the winner's green jacket in the Trophy Room at the stately clubhouse.

SIX OF THE last 10 winners, including defending champ Seve Ballesteros of Spain, have been repeaters over the azalea-lined course with its gaping fairways and undulating greens. Early line on this year's favorites includes Balesteros, two-time champion Tom Watson, 1982 winner Craig Stadler, and, as usual, five-time champion Jack Nicklaus.

Most notable exception is Tom Kite. Kite, who won the Doral Open last month, has never won the Masters. But only Watson has been as consistent a contender over the past eight years, when Kite finished sixth or better and tied for fifth and fourth, respecseven times - including last year's tie for second with Ben Crenshaw. Kite, who made a run at it in last year's rain-plagued event for his best Masters finish to date, admits he's disappointed that he has failed to win the Masters after being so close so often.

BUT HE INSISTS he approaches the prestigious golf tournament much as he does the other stops on the tour. "I'm trying to win every time I enter a tournament," he said. "I give them all my best shot." Watson has been struggling since winning the Match Play tournament at Tucson and $100,000 the first week of this year's tour. But he showed signs of recovering during last week's Tournament Players Championship when he shot two straight 67s and insists his game is coming around. When he plays up to his potential, Watson, 34, is hard to beat at Augusta National. The five-time Brtish Open champion won the Masters in 1977 and 1981, lost in a playoff to Fuzzy Zoeller in 1979, tied for second behind threetime champion Gary Player in 1978,

"I FEEL LIKE I had a net gain in the TPC even though I took a step backward the last day (when he closed with a 76)," Watson said, "All in all, I tively, the past two years.

had a good week. I've been practicing at home (in Kansas City last week)." It's been nine years since Nicklaus last won the Masters. But he insists he's just as anxious to win now as he was back then, especially since he hasn't won one of the majors since 1900 when he won the U.S. Open and PGA Championship.

Nicklaus always begins his practice at Augusta National a week before the Masters begins. Some of the other for mer winners, including Ballesteros, have been following his lead.

But Ray Floyd, who tied the tournament record of 17-under 271 when he won the Masters in 1976 and tied Walson for fourth last year, disagrees with that approach.

"I've always felt," Floyd said, "it's better to play your way into a major.
