Riverfest is 'Union-ized' by rain

By Dawn Ummel

Although it was the Union Main Lounge and not Kinnick Stadium, Chip Kelling and Rob Moser fired a football back and forth as spectators waited for the Riverfest concert to begin Saturday.

"We come here every year," said Kelling, a 1983
UI graduate from Waterloo. "We wouldn't miss it

"We're going to go the Art Building and listen to the bands, play some football outside if it doesn't rain and just eat, drink and be merry," said Moser, a UI graduate from Davenport.

The drizzle that fell on Saturday's Riverfest climax canceled some events, postponed some until this week and forced others inside the Union. But Riverfest participants didn't seem to mind.

"It's still fun," said Kathy Stoltz as she spooned up her portion of the "spectacular sundae" made with ice cream and chocolate syrup. "I never knew you could get so many people in one place," said the transfer student from Minnesota who was taking part in her first Riverfest.

With the wet weather outside, activities moved to the Union were sandwiched between the rock 'n' roll concert in the Main Lounge and the bluegrass music playing two flights up in the Triangle Ballroom. El Salvador voter list bill angers panel

- Interim President Alvaro Magana Sunday refused to take sides in a dispute over the elimination of voter registration lists that drew a resigna-

Kirkpatrick: Aid is vital to face 'threat'

bassador Jeane Kirkpatrick warned Sunday the United States could face increased danger of nuclear or chemical attack by the Soviet Union if it fails to stop the spread of communism in Central America.

Kirkpatrick, President Reagan's envoy to the United Nations, also argued it is better to defend the nation's vital interest now - by aiding El Salvador and thwarting leftist Nicaragua - than to wait until "we face a really major threat" that demands combat involving American troops.

But Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., complained the mining of Nicaragua's harbors by CIA-backed rebels is symptomatic of an administration "mind-set" that the only way to meet the threat is military action, effectively ruling out negotiations.

'We've tried to substitute covert activity for a foreign policy," said Leahy, a member of the Senate Intelligence Committee.

Now that Riverfest is over the weather will turn nice, the DI weather satellite said Sunday night. The satellite, which for several months has been able to transmit only metric temperatures, predicted mostly cloudy skies today with a high about 12. But skies will clear tonight, when a low of about 2 is expected, and Tuesday when the high will be about 14.

Senate doubts chances for education bill

By Robyn Griggs

Although Iowa House of Representative Democrats are optimistic about the passage of an "Excellence in Education" bill that would provide an additional $1.7 million for the state Board of Regents, members of the Iowa Senate expressed skepticism Sun-

"We'll lose some bills in the last week (of the legislative session), but I don't think we'll lose this one," Rep. Rich Varn, D-Solon, said Sunday.

The House is expecting to adjourn Thursday, meaning the bill, tentatively earmarking the additional $1.7 million to the regents for new equipment and teaching assistant salaries, should reach the floor sometime this week.

"I think the chances are good because, from things I've heard (House Speaker Donald) Avenson and (Senate Majority Leader Lowell) Junkins say, I think the Senate is committed to doing it," Varn said.

However, Senate Education Chairman Joe Brown, D-Montezuma, said Sunday he has "not heard anything about" the bill.

"IT CAN'T BE very realistic if they're looking at more money (for the regents)," Brown said. "It can't be a sincere proposal because there isn't any more money. ... It sounds like something the House dreamed up."

Senate Appropriations Chairman Art Small, D-Iowa City, said he is familiar with the bill, but its passage will "really depend on the whole linkage of some of these bills and how much money we figure out we have."

"I don't know yet if we've thought out all our funding yet — there's a lot of big bills to come yet this week," Small

Small said the Senate, which is also problems in the future." expected to debate the education appropriations bill this week, is "a mass of unknowns" right now, making it impossible to judge when either bill will reach the floor and how much funding the regents will receive.

"I don't know, you know, some legislators seem to hate the regents and some support it, but I'm not sure what the general package they will come up with will be," he said.

The "Excellence in Education" bill was proposed in March by House Democrats in response to Gov. Terry Branstad's recommended 2.8 percent cut in the regents requests, which was followed closely by House appropria-tions last week. Varn said, "The idea is to give this money as a shot in the arm to help with the most immediate problems, and that will also lay the groundwork for taking care of more

HE SAID CUTS the Democrats are making in other parts of the state budget will provide funding for the Varn, who is drafting the bill with Rep. Thomas Jochum, D-Dubuque, said it is "not a real complicated one. It's no biggie — it will be a very simple

The bill will contain "a general statement of the regents need above and beyond the budget," Varn said.

In February, the regents requested $374.6 million from the state, but the governor's recommendation and House appropriations fell short of this, cutting about $10.5 million from the request. The bill would provide about $2.5 million more in state funds for all levels of education than Branstad's recommendation.

Rep. Cooper Evans talks to a group of about 50 in the basement of the First Christian Church before regularly scheduled services Sunday. Evans answered questions on topics ranging from the Mideast to chemical warfare, and urged the congregation to learn all the facts about controversial issues.

Congregation grills Evans on weapons

By Colleen Kelly

New weapons development and foreign policy were the main concerns of the approximately 50 people who questioned Rep. Cooper Evans, R-3rd District, before services Sunday morning at the First Christian Church.

The congregation grilled Evans on political hotspots ranging from Zimbabwe to Nicaragua, as well as his stands on chemical warfare, the MX missile and the B-1 bomber.

"I think the world faces a serious problem with chemical weapons," Evans said. "We haven't built any for years, and we thought the lid was on that bottle rather securely, but developments in other parts of the world where the Soviets have been active, and particularly in Iraq, raise serious doubts about what one should

"I THINK PROBABLY we are getting to the point where we are going to have to do something," he said. "We cannot unilaterally stand by and do

Evans outlined his theory of deterrence in relation to chemical weapons.

"If one side in an armed conflict has chemical weapons and the other side doesn't have them, that puts the side that doesn't have them at a great disadvantage even if they're never used because the people who have them know that the other side does not, so they don't have to take any precau-long we can sit on the sidelines and allow the Russians to accumulate stockpiles of new chemical weapons and not accumulate new weapons of our own," Evans said.

But Evans did qualify his endorse-ment of these weapons, "I'm not in favor of building them at this time, but I think that if some constructive activity in the way of control, agreement and destruction of existing sticks isn't done, we can't just sit on our hands

The congressman also expressed approval for the B-1 bomber, calling it "not essentially a nuclear device." He said, "I support it very strongly. I think it's absolutely essential.

'OUR LONG-RANGE bombers are older than the pilots who fly them, and they're expensive to maintain. As long as we have worldwide commitments we need a worldwide bomber."

posed the building and deployment of the MX missile."

"I think that could very well be one that is eliminated this year," he said.

This church group seemed uncomfortable with some of Evans' opinions on American defense, but generally seemed to appreciate his clarification of U.S. foreign policy in Third World

Evans agreed the covert mining of Nicaraguan ports was "an illegal and immoral act." He also said, "Probably every president has authorized what some people consider an illegal and immoral act" in the interest of national

"When an operation like that is undertaken, it is done with the knowledge and blessing of the president. ... He authorized it at least to the extent that he did not object," Evans explained.

Evans said the leader of the Philippines, Ferdinand Marcos, was not really supported by the United States, but, "I don't think that you go around in is a real klutz."

Evans also explained that aid to Zimbawbe had not been cut extensively, as one person suggested. "Thirty million dollars is on the wire to them right now," he said. "We're giving them a lot of food aid. That's really what they

"We are putting some strings on this aid," he said. "In earlier aid, we discovered that the central government of Zimbabwe was not allowing any of it to go into the areas in which the rebels

"All of the aid that is going out now is contigent on there being even-handed distribution to all parts of the country," he added.

Man receives probation for check-kiting charges

By Patricia Reuter

Paul E. Roden, 23, also known as Robert Morris, Robert Rodner and Joe Warner, was sentenced in Johnson County District Court Friday after pleading guilty to two counts of second-degree theft.

Roden entered a plea of guilty Jan. 23 to the charges, which stemmed from a check-kiting scam involving American Federal Savings and Loan Association, 132 E. Washington St., and First National Bank, 204 E. Washington St.

According to the police report filed with the court, Roden opened an account on Nov. 18, 1983, at American Federal under the name of Universal Recording Studio and deposited $150. On the same day, Roden wrote a check for $130.71 to the "secretary" of Universal, Suzanne Kainz. Kainz then opened her own account at First National, Towncrest Branch, with Roden's check. On Nov. 22, Kainz brought a check to First National in the amount of $683.97 on Universal's account, signed by Roden. First National Bank contacted American Federal and found no further deposits in Univer-sal's account and refused to clear the check. Kainz then went to First National's Coralville branch to deposit

Health program helps keep physical plant workers well

Debate stalls beer sale bill

About 100 UI Physical Plant employees decided to get physical last spring and, for many, it has paid

The Iowa Health Awareness Program, a wellness program conducted by the UI Physical Plant in conunction with the Iowa State Department of Health, began last year at the suggestion of Barb Humbert, manager of staff development and training at the Humbert said the program began as a way to assess employees' health risks and to educate people about maintaining good health. "We've had some real positive success," she said.

With the help of the Iowa State Department of Health, the employees first took an attitude survey to get a general idea of their health risks, she said. Next came medical and physical assessments of those who wished to participate in the program. These tests included blood pressure tests and measurement of the percentage of body fat.

TO FOLLOW UP the test results, the physical plant provided a series of educational sessions on everything from diet to home exercise equipment, Humbert said, and the monthly newsletter put out for the employees now contains a wellness tip in

Humbert said a feedback sheet designed to get an idea of the benefits of the program showed one person lost 15 pounds, and another dropped his blood pressure to the point where he no longer needed nedication to control it. "For me, just to have one person (with positive results) shows that the program has been very valuable," she said.

Subtler benefits of the program have simply "made people more aware of things," she said, such as cutting down on the use of salt in food. "They're reading the things that are out there."

She said the physical plant employees had some specific reasons for conducting a wellness program, as there are a number of high-health-risk people in that group, but added there is a "dispute between people in the medical community of the usefulness" of wellness programs in general.

Small said there has been occasional talk of such a program for UI faculty and employees, but she said, "The concern that I've had expressed to me is that people get a false sense of security in that they get a clean bill of health."

Play gets CAN-DO message out

By Colleen Kelly

On a basement stage with props such as aluminum-foil missiles and papiermache bombs, some junior members of Children Acting for Nuclear Disarmament (CAN-DO) sang and spoke about the nuclear arms race in the world-premiere production of "Crickets in a Nuclear Bomb Patch" Saturday.

"I thought it was fun doing the play and we got to tell everybody how we feel about bombs," Naomi Tucker, 9, said. "I don't think they're a very good

CAN-DO was inspired by the antinuclear speeches of Dr. Helen Caldicott in Iowa City last October which suggested organizing children to lobby for a nuclear freeze. The group has grown to approximately 40 members, one-half of whom are children. The average age of the actors in the current production is about nine.

"This play has really been an extended project," said director Julia Heinzelman. "Most teachers think that, at their age, these kids have to start something new every day, but these kids have been very dedicated for almost three months.

"I'm glad we're finally done with the rehearsals and we're finally doing performances," said Timothy Lasocki, 9. He played a radiation detector, a part that was short on dialogue, but often gave him the chance to move around stage as he checked the "missile plants" - which looked like corn growing missiles instead of ears - with his clicking wand.

"I HOPE that the play will make eople not build as many bombs," Lasocki said. "I think the bombs are

Other bills on this week's schedule are several appropriations measures, court reorganization and comparable worth.

Bills being considered by the House include a program to pay the medical bills of Iowa's poor, substance abuse funding, development of a world trade center, and a $1.5 million state education funding package.

non, Iowa, Saturday raised nearly $350 for a shipful of medical supplies and tools headed for the mined Nicaraguan port of Corinto.

Each participant paid a $4 registration fee to run or walk the three-mile course around the college and the rest of the money was pledged by sponsors in what organizers called a "Move Against Hunger."

Bob Cotter of Cornell College World Hunger Organization, which coordinated the event, said Sunday, "This is really the most successful event we have ever held in terms of raising money." Last November the group raised $260 for Oxfam America in an organized fast. Oxfam America promotes development for Third World countries.

The ship will sail from San Francisco in about six weeks as part of Oxfam America's "Tools for Peace in Nicaragua" campaign.

Oxfam America Executive Director Joe Short of Boston did not want details of the voyage publicized because of concern for the safety of the crew in waters allegedly mined with CIA help. "If you ask 'Will the ship get through,' the question remains to be answered," he said. "But we are confident from like they are in Nicaragua." what we see now that it will."

Most of the people who ran or walked in the drizzly weather from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. were from Cornell College, but there were three supporters from the UI, including Student Sen. Sheaghan Cotter-Brown, and six runners from Cedar Rapids who read about the walk-a-thon in a local paper.

One supporter from the UI, John Stonebarger of the New Wave student group, said, "I felt like Cornell would be a difficult place to do political work because it has got a very small enrollment — there are about 900 students — but it went very well." Cotter said there is some validity in the criticism that his organization would not have to look further than Iowa to find hunger, "But it is fair to say that people are not hungry in Iowa

THE FUND-RAISING event was they have heard about it in the news.'

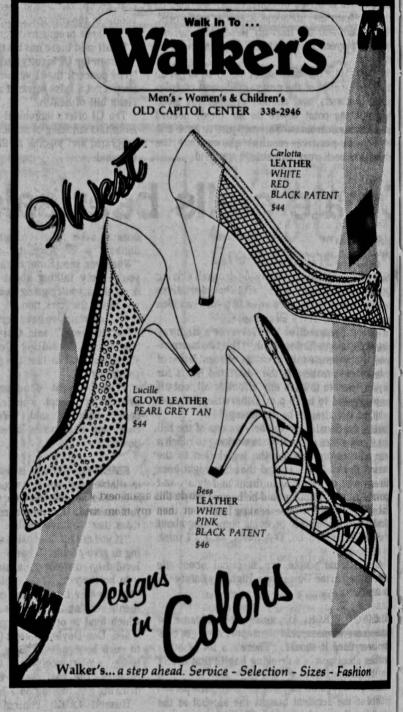

Oxfam America is optimistic it will exceed its target of $250,000 for the tools and equipment. The goods were requested by Oxfam project workers who have been in Nicaragua for four years. "Shopping lists" were drawn up by cooperative organizations, according to Oxfam public relations officer Barbara Hendrie.

Many requests came in for spare parts for vehicles that cannot be bought in Nicaragua, but the consignment of four or five 40-foot square containers will also include expensive medical equipment and a complete tractor sent by a group in California.

Some of the goods will be used by Oxfam's project workers but most of it will go directly to four bodies, the Ecumenical Council for Development Assistance, the National Women's Association, the Rural Worker's Association — for peasants who do not own land - and the National Association of Small Farmers.

Three similar ships have sailed to Nicaragua in the past from Oxfam Canada, which is run independently of its U.S. namesake, though it is not sending one this year.

Maximum Performance, Minimum Cost, the Ultimate in Value. A Product of American Ingenuity.

A goal of the lowest possible distortion is axiomatic. The conventional harmonic & intermodulation distortions of the DH-100 are almost unmeasurable. But further, we determined to make some of the most obsure forms of distortion equally inoffensive. Outside of the conventional audio band it is possible for signals to intermodulate, producing distortion products inside the listening range. This ultrasonic intermodulation is an insidious form of distortion that is not shown in conventional specifications. Some engineers try to reduce it by rolling off the response of the unit so that out-of-band signals are not being reproduced. Our method is to make a very wide-band design which can handle high frequency signals cleanly, so that they will not create intermodulation or transient distortion which might be audible.

Researchers reluctantly release results

By Kirk Brown

Two UI professors fear releasing information on their research could dull its competitive edge, but both have consented to do so.

Last week the UI administration asked UI professors Nelson Gurill, David Lubaroff and Sudhaker Reddy for permission to release records on their reseach to the UI Student Senate Committee on UI Research

Julia Mears, administrative assistant to UI President James O. Freedman, said each of the professors consented to the release of their research records - but with varying degrees of reluctance.

REDDY ALSO AGREED to allow the UI to release information on his

"There was no pressure (from the UI administration)," said Reddy, chairman of the UI College of Engineering's Division of Information Engineering.

Reddy said his research project, which has been completed, was an investigation of procedures to "detect flaws in digital integer subjects," such as microchips. The project was funded by the U.S. Air Force Office of Science Research.

Reddy said the controversy over release of the research records centers around two issues.

'Since this is a public institution, the public wants to know what we are doing," he said. "But, by making our research public, it creates the potential for competing individuals to gain access to our ideas.'

Moynihan protests CIA mining action

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Sen. Daniel Moynihan, D-N.Y., said Sunday he will resign as vice chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee to protest the CIA's failure to brief the panel fully on the mine-laying operation in Moynihan announced his intention in an ABC-TV interview taped Friday and broadcast Sunday on "This Week with David Brinkley.

The New York Democrat's office said the resignation will take effect when Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., chairman of the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence, returns from an overseas trip coinciding with the congressional Easter recess.

Moynihan, as vice chairman, is in charge in Goldwater's absence.

In a statement prepared for release after the ABC program, Moynihan said his resignation "appears to me the most emphatic way I can express my view the Senate committee was not properly briefed on the mining of Nicaraguan harbors with American mines from an American ship under American command.'

He said the House intelligence committee had been briefed on the operation, but the Senate panel had been given "only a one-sentence reference to this in a two-hour briefing."

In no way was that briefing "full and current," he said, adding, "If the action was important enough for the president to have approved it in February, it was important enough for the committee to have been infor-MOYNIHAN CITED a "relationship of trust between the committee and the intelligence community ... I had thought this relationship of trust was securely in place, certainly the career service gave every such indication."

Moynihan said nothing about resigning from the committee itself, and his office said that will be decided later. By tradition, intelligence committee members serve only for eight years, although there is no rule to that effect. and this is Moynihan's eighth year on the panel.

Both Democrats and Republicans have criticized the administration for failing to keep them informed of U.S.

Fake ballots may cause Jackson delegate losses

Jesse Jackson may have lost Democratic convention delegates to Walter Mondale because of fake sample ballots used in the Pennsylvania primary in the campaign's first major charge of political dirty tricks.

Although Jackson generated a massive turnout of black voters in Philadelphia, a rivalry among some politicians in the city may have cost him delegates, reported the Philadelphia Inquirer Sunday.

In order to simplify complicated ocedures, voters often rely upon sample ballots issued by the political camps to show their candidate and the names of his delegates.

According to the newspaper, several local black ward leaders handed out bogus sample ballots that had Jackson's name at the top but instead singled out delegates pledged to Mon-

Reporters for the paper found many ward leaders who endorsed Jackson the week before the primary circulated sample ballots listing only the names and lever numbers of Mondale's

"The decision to 'cut' Jackson delegates was partly motivated by political rivalries," the Inquirer said. Mayor W. Wilson Goode, the first black to hold the post, supported Mondale and pitted his prestige against Jackson's Philadelphia supporters.

What apparently happened ... was that the black leaders used their hearts to put Jackson's name on the top of their sample ballots, while their heads led them to list Mondale delegate candidates on the bottom of the ballot," the Inquirer said.

The outcome will not be known until the official delegate count is completed. Philadelphia elected 25 delegates, but all of those races officially are listed as undecided.

Lean recovery

Now that interest rates again are on the rise, some of the more economically precarious enthusiasts of the Reagan recovery most notably, housing industry leaders - have begun to suspect that recent positive signs are not very well anchored.

Viewpoints

What these leaders are sensing has long been disastrously clear to other Americans. The "recovery" supposedly spawned by Reaganomics is, at best, sporadic. At worst, it has escorted lowincome workers onto more and more tremulous earth.

Consider:

• The Congressional Budget Office reported on April 5 that the overall results of Reagan's tax and budget cuts since 1981 have been advantageous for high-income families and harmful for the poor. Households with annual incomes of less than $10,000 lost an average of $390 each year thanks to the Reagan economic program. Those who pulled in between $40,000 and $80,000 annually gained an average of $2,900.

• In February the Census Bureau reported an unfluctuating rise in U.S. poverty since 1979. Between 1979 and 1982, there was a 10 percent decline in the real value of non-cash benefits to the poor, according to Gordon Green, assistant chief of the bureau's population division.

 In this state the poverty effect is perhaps most dramatically demonstrated by a hunger problem that, according to the Iowa Department of Human Services, affects some 130,000 Iowans - an incongruously hollow cheek on the face of an agricultural state. The problem may not find a source at the federal level. But the administration - which has cut aid to dependent children by 10.8 percent, sliced $1.7 billion from food stamps and $1.5 billion from the school lunch program - certainly cannot be credited with making it any better.

The overall drop in unemployment and the cumulative increases in factory output and auto sales don't seem as cheerful when facts about the state of poverty are examined. And if this "recovery" continues to stack up those facts, more and more people will find themselves on the lean side of the rift between this country's very rich and very poor.

Doug Herold

Evans to the rescue?

In elections years it is always prudent to watch out for ulterior

One timely example follows. Today marks the moment of truth between taxpayers and the Internal Revenue Service. UI teaching and research assistants still aren't certain how IRS regulations apply to their stipends and fear more audits of their returns, despite vigorous efforts on their behalf by Rep. Cooper Evans, R-

The perplexity stems from the assistants' belief that stipends should be tax-exempt because the payments are granted for service required to earn a degree. But the IRS warns the payments aren't tax-exempt unless the assistantships are required of all students within a department. Seems like a stickler, eh?

Enter Evans to the rescue.

When the graduate students appealed to their congressman, he responded admirably, even tremendously. He listened to the complaints, set up an information session between IRS officals, UI administrators and the students and - according to his newsletter - is "continuing to work with the agency and UI administrators, professors and students in an effort to resolve the problem."

Of course Evans is probably genuinely concerned with problems of his constituents. But could the uphill battle he faces in highly Democratic, student-populated Johnson County add extra incentive in the case of the graduate students?

In his 1982 race against Democrat Lynn Cutler, Evans said if he could count on 40 percent of Johnson County he would win the election; he pulled 42 percent of the vote here that year.

Now his challenger, Joe Johnston, is charging that Evans swings to the right in off-years and back to the left when he must face third district voters. A survey conducted by Ralph Nader's Public Citizens Congress Watch shows Evans scoring 17 percent on consumer issues in 1981, but rising to 30 percent when he had to challenge Cutler in 1982. Although UI graduate students are not appreciably better off because of Evans' efforts, his own re-election chances may be. Mary Tabor

Attic lodgers live 'insulated' life

By Tom Naber

ANE'S MOTHER moved into the crawlspace above the ceiling. Not much up there, except for some bare boards, insulation and plaster board, but she seems happy. At least, she won't come down no matter what we do. I offered her a warm spot in the basement; Jane promised her the guest room; but she ignored us. When I threatened to fumigate the crawl space with a roach bomb, she didn't even wince. Instead, she just curled up by a heating duct and went to

She's really not much trouble. She doesn't make much noise. We didn't even know she was up there (we thought we had mice) until she invited company over. I gladly gave Jane's father a ladder when he promised not to stay, but he couldn't get her down, either.

A psychologist friend told us we weren't alone. All over America, mothers, fathers, grandmas and grandpas, even ex-wives and exhusbands have been slipping into attics, crawlspaces and cellars when their loved ones (or ex-loved ones) aren't looking. It's nearly an epidemic, he said. In one case, a Toledo, Ohio, grandmother even took residence in a nearby tree when she couldn't gain entry into her daughter's house. She hoped to monitor her grandson's Christian upbringing from a limb near his window. Only after 52 days, at which time the tree began to drop its leaves, was the woman discovered.

Journal-ease Journal-ease is an occasional feature presenting commentary on a broad range of issues by local writers. In another case, a Boise, Idaho, minister moved under the back porch of a single, female parishioner. When discovered nearly frozen to death five months later, he admitted her attic would have been preferable, but believed it was improper for two un-married adults to live under the same

WHY ATTIC dwellers have taken to the rafters is not known. Our friend said that maybe the poor economy or the threat of nuclear war kindles these people's deep insecurities. By remaining in the attic, these recluses can hold onto some semblance of a family, or at least a part of their past. Most seem quite content just knowing a loved one is under the same roof.

Of course, he said, we are lucky Jane's mother isn't very big. If attic dwellers accidently put a foot through the ceiling, it means they aren't satisfied living quietly upstairs, munching on insulation and reading the backs of DeCon boxes. They begin staring through the punctured ceiling trying to get a glimpse of their loved one below. Some mothers have even been known to shout through the hole things like: "Did you change your underwear?" and "You're not going out looking like that are you?" and "What? You're too busy to say goodbye to your

Sometimes, once a hole is created and my psychologist friend thinks many kick them out on purpose — attic dwellers revert back to their old and often antagonistic behavior. This alienates their loved ones more. For one thing, ceiling plaster is expensive to replace. For another, most left the attic dweller because of their lousy behavior in the first place. We were fortunate. Jane's mother is a quiet type, as are most attic dwellers. No matter how loud and irritating they are in their homes, in someone else's attic they can be very quiet and polite.

Unfortunately, it is harder to coax the quiet types down than the loud types. If ignored, the loud types lose interest, become bored and often leave on their own. The quiet types just won't budge. The psychologist friend said all sorts of methods have been tried, but few have worked. A man in Lake Forest, Ill., tied a blue fox coat to a string, threw the coat into the attic, and pulled the string, hoping his his ex-wife would follow the coat out of his attic. But she jumped the coat, gnawed the string in two, and now wears the coat up in the attic.

A WOMAN IN Davenport, Iowa, tried to evacuate her mother from the attic by dropping a trail of Mah-Jong tiles from the attic to the living room. When the mother didn't find a card table, she rushed back to the attic before her daughter could stop her. Others have been more serious in their approach. A couple in Bismark, N.D., tried smoking their parents out of the cellar with smoke bombs. Except for some coughing and wheezing, neither parent moved.

Jane and I aren't so drastic. Sure, we don't like her mother living up there, but what can we do? She's up there now. I can hear her scratching at the plaster underneath the insulation. Sometimes she burrows through the insulation to build nests. Once she even sent for an interior decorator to rearrange the crawlspace, and when I refused to let him up, she threw a fit. Shekept pounding on the rafters and kicking the air ducts. After a while, she quieted down and started working on her nest like nothing had happened. We tried to discourage the nest building. We don't want her to get too comfortable. Once I climbed into the crawlspace, crushing her tunnels and tearing her nest apart. She gave me a really wicked look, but the next ever ing she was building again.

I respect her for her endurance. Really, we're flattered she chose our crawlspace. Our psychologist friend says she's reaching out to us, but we could think of lots of people we'd rather have living upstairs. We've considered moving, but we don't know how the new owners would like Jane's mother. She really isn't so bad. If we installed a phone upstairs, she might even call the police if we were being robbed. Hey, she's got to earn her keep somehow. Besides, she's cheaper than a guard dog and a lot quieter.

Alignment job helped To the editor:

Nanette Secor's editorial on the Democratic Johnson County convention (DI, April 11) accused delegates of "backroom politics" when in fact they were simply playing by the

Whether a candidate is still officially in the race or not is completely irrelevant to viability. The number of people represented is the important factor. A viable group is any group with at least 15 percent of the delegates at the convention. Supporters of George McGovern sent more than 70 delegates to the Johnson County convention; they had no more need to "swing over to Jackson" than the Mondale delegates did. In some counties that would have been forbidden by the rules; only members of non-viable groups could re-align, and if members of a viable group tried it, they would in effect be spoiling their ballots.

The Jackson forces, with about 10 delegates, were not viable. This was not "pure politics." This was simple numerical reality. They had three choices: to join the Mondale group, the Hart group or the McGovern group. The McGovern group was clearly the closest ideological match. In addition, the McGovern group offered them better than proportional representation — a district delegate for every six delegates, rather than a district delegate for every seven - and a position on one of the district convention committees. (In order to keep this last promise, Bryant Julstrom had to withdraw his own name from nomination to the district platform committee.) The Jackson people will be sending more representation to the district discovery is that they think they can convention than they could have in any other way. To insinuate that they sold out by joining the McGovern group is an insult to the poeple who in fact made a very astute political deal.

Together, the McGovern, Jackson and Cranston supporters gained media attention, which allowed them to keep the policy positions of all three candidates in the public's attention, their major goal. Overlooking this betrays an ignorance of the democratic process almost as complete as the ignorance of the names of the

So why direct this invective at a McGovern group that gave up delegate and committee positions to include the Jackson people? Why not direct it at the Hart people who offered them the standard proportional representation and nothing more? I think this coalition of McGovern, Jackson and Cranston delegates offended her sense of leftist purity because they did something that eftists are never, ever supposed to do.

Genetic scare

To the editor: The advancement of biotechnology has raised considerable fear and excitement concerning the investigation of the nature of the inherited blueprints which make us all what we are. Specialized biologists have discovered a breakthrough in the study of genetics. Through the manipulation of parents' genetic material prior to conception, biologists have the ability to change defective traits into beneficial ones. The newest alter parents' genes so they can pick the desired sex of the child.

The subject of genetic manipulation has raised interesting questions. Could we and should we create an entire race of superhumans with predictable and desirable characteristics? If this happened, who would be qualified to decide what are desirable characteristics in a human being?

I think genetic manipulation is wrong if used on human beings. We are what we are. Our genes make us different and unique. Would we really all want to be the same? According to anthropological research, diversity in a culture gives rise to advancement and developmental changes in society. If someday we do practice genetic manipulation on ourselves, we would be living in a static society without individual variation or expression. America is famous for promoting individual freedom and expression The use of genetic manipulation would strip us of our uniqueness and personal Sissies or supermen?

To the editor: This is in response to Steve Horowitz's Alabama concert review (DI, April 10). I realize The Daily Iowan prides itself on irresponsible journalism, but this takes the cake!

Horowitz's choice of words in describing the group and their performance was unprofessional, iased and unacceptable. He used such phrases as "dull and flaccid," "insipid and homogenized music," and "drippy." Judging by the number of people at the arena on April 7, Alabama is anything but! Also, his implications about the three guitar players is not only disgusting, but unfair. Suggesting that the members of Alabama aren't real men, that they play wimpy music and are the 'nation's leading si sies" just shows that Hore ritz is at nature enough to recognize and ip reciate talent, whether it be to sing or not. As he points out, surpasingly, Alabama has won its fair share of country music awards.

lowa gymnasts swing to eighth place at NCAAs

LOS ANGELES - Going into last weekend's NCAA men's gymnastics championships at Pauley Pavilion, the Iowa Hawkeyes were

And when the 10 teams had completed Friday's team competition, the Hawkeyes lived-up to their seed, finishing eighth with a 275.95. UCLA won its first-ever team title with a 287.3, before a partisan Bruin crowd in Saturday's team finals, which included the top three teams from Friday's competition. Penn State finished second with a 281.25, followed by Ohio State with a 281.1

The Hawkeyes started on the horizontal bar, one of Iowa's strongest events. But problems there kept the Hawkeyes from earning a spot in the top five, according to Coach Tom Dunn.

"I WASN'T COMPLETELY pleased with our defending champion Nebraska was fifth, ted," Leo said, "but I was just glad to be out performance," Dunn said about Iowa's first Oklahoma was sixth and Southern Illinois was NCAA appearance since 1974. "We had a rough start. Highbar is usually a good event for us and we do a lot of risky things.

"We had only two out of our five men hit their highbar routines and that was probably the biggest factor in the meet," Dunn said.

Dunn said that Iowa lost as much as two points on the event, and that would have moved Iowa into fifth-place. "I'd have been happy with that," Dunn said.

"If we'd had a perfect day, we'd have finished in the top three.' The Hawkeyes turned in solid performances on the floor exercise, still rings and the vault but had breaks on the pommel horse and the parallel bars to settle into the eighth position ahead of Big Ten rivals Illinois and Minnesota.

IOWA STATE TOOK fourth, five-time

Dunn said the team race was as close as he expected. "It was wide open from second to 10th," he said. "Nebraska, Oklahoma, Minnesota and Illinois all had rough days like we

Any one of the nine teams, other than UCLA, could have been in second," Dunn said. "I was pleased we were the second-best Big Ten team here and I'm not really unhappy with an eighth-place finish in the nation."

Only one Hawkeye, senior pommel horse specialist Joe Leo, was able to qualify for Saturday night's individual finals.

Leo had trouble at the end of his routine and had to settle for an eighth-place finish with a 9.2

'On horse, this was a big year as far as specialists go and I feel pretty good about the new trick, though I didn't hit it." Leo said. "In something like this, you don't shoot for second

Several Hawkeyes just missed qualifying for the individual finals, which requires a top-eight finish in Friday's team competition. Dan Bachman was .05 of a point from qualifying on the parallel bars, while Stu Breitenstine missed by the same score on the vault and the high bar.

Saturday night was a evening of excellence for Bruin Tim Daggett. The senior took top honors in three events. Daggett's 9.9 won the pommel horse and he followed that with a 9.8 on the still rings and a 9.7 effort to take the parallel bars. Daggett posted a perfect 10.0 in Saturday's team finals on the parallel bars.

ILLINOIS' CHARLES LAKES won the horizontal bar with a 9.95, followed by Daggett with a 9.9. Nebraska's Chris Riegel had a perfect 10.0 in winning the vault. Kevin Ekberg of Northern Illinois won the floor exercise with a 9.85 in front of 5,258 fans at Pauley.

Daggett took second in the all-around with a 115.5 behind teammate Mitch Gaylord, who tied an NCAA record with a 116.95. The record was held by former UCLA gymnast Peter Vidmar.

"The pressure is always there," Gaylord said. "There is no way to avoid it. The main thing is to be focused on your routine.' Dunn said Iowa's experience at the NCAA meet should help in future seasons. "We've got five of the 10 guys around for at least the next two years," Dunn said. "They've all gotten good experience, and getting into the meet the first time was harder than it will be the second time, I hope, but it's never easy.'

Hawkeyes plow past Big Ten opponents

By Jill Hokinson

And the winning goes on. The Iowa men's tennis team took two more victories from Big Ten opponents over the weekend, increasing it's record-setting dual mark to 19-4 and 5-1 in the conference. The Hawkeyes beat Illinois and Purdue by identical 7-2

Iowa Coach Steve Houghton credited a lot of the Hawkeyes' victories to assistant Coach Jeff Schatzberg. "Jeff has had a lot to do with our success this year," Houghton said. "He's very good in terms of strategy and has had something to do with the doubles teams' success."

Friday the 13th turned out to be a unlucky day for Illinois. Iowa served Illinois, which was undefeated in the Big Ten, a decisive loss.

THE HAWKEYES WON all but two of the singles matches and swept the doubles to win, 7-2, in a match Houghton described as very close.

"I was really pleased with the doubles," Houghton said. "Illinois is always good in doubles. They absolutely destroyed us last year in dou-

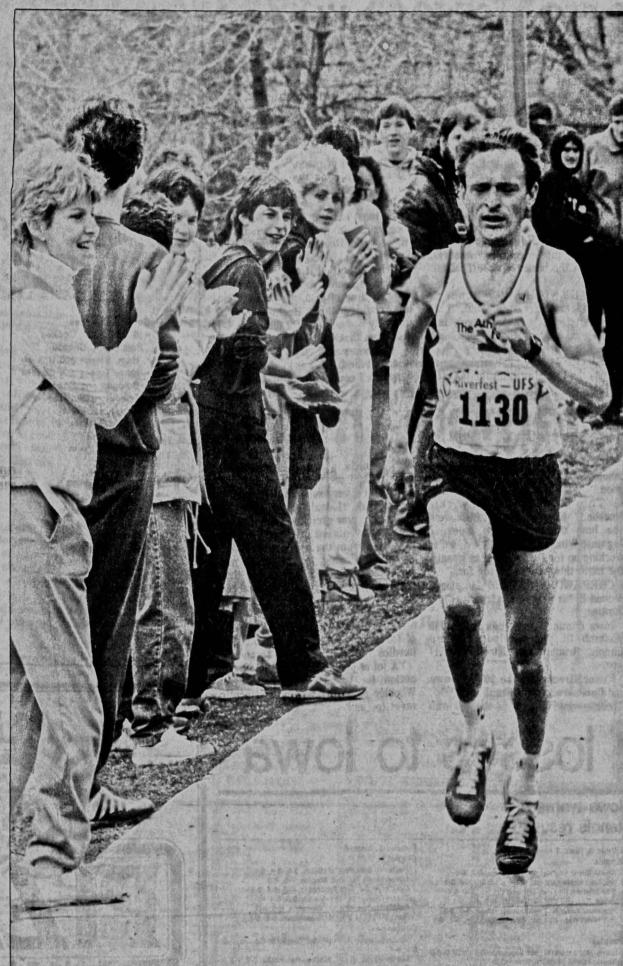

Illinois Coach Brad Louderback said his team started out the match not playing well. "We played tentatively at first," he said. "At times, we had the momentum going but didn't capitalize

According to Louderback, the difference in the very close match against the Hawkeyes was that Iowa seized the chances available to them to win and Illinois didn't. "Iowa played very well," he said. "When they had the op-portunity to put it away, they did it."

IN SINGLES, Iowa's No. 1 player, Mike Inman, came back after losing the first set, 6-2, against David Goodman to win, 2-6, 7-5, 6-3. "It was a really good comeback win for him,' Houghton said.

No. 4 Rudy Foo and No. 5 Rob Moellering both won their matches by playing very well on the key points, ghton said. Dale Garlick, playing at No. 6, won his first set, 7-5, and was up 5-0 in the second set when Illinois' Andre Lambert got back into the set. But Garlick was able to pull out the win, 7-5, 7-5.

Iowa's only singles losses were dealt to No. 2 Sunil Reddy and No. 3 Jim Nelson. Houghton said that despite losing, both Reddy and Nelson played See Tennis, page 4B agonizing years of anticipation, Ben Crenshaw finally carved his own niche in golfing lore Sunday by winning the

Long-awaited Masters win to Crenshaw

Perhaps the most serious student of golf tradition among the touring pros and certainly one of the most successful - Crenshaw finally took a place in the sport's history by capturng his first major championship.

You just have to believe in yourself, and today I did," Crenshaw said following his two-stroke victory over Tom Watson, as he was proudly wearing the traditional green jacket that goes to the Masters champion.

"There's no question I put a lot of pressure on myself to win. Today was my day. I was determined I was not going to let shots slip away. I tried to control myself and my golf game."

FITTINGLY, AFTER SUCH a long wait, Crenshaw had to spend almost 11 hours at Augusta National before rolling in the telling two-foot putt on the final hole to earn the triumph. The third round had to be resumed at 8 a.m. because of Saturday's thunderstorm.

Crenshaw started the final round tied for third place, two shots behind Tom Kite. He tied for the lead with a birdie on the eighth hole and went ahead for good with another birdie on No. 10. The key blow for Crenshaw was a curling 60-foot putt on the 10th hole to complete a string of three consecutive birdies and propel him to a threestroke lead.

"When I saw that ball go in, I said maybe this is my day," Crenshaw said. "The way the pin was set, that was very, very three-puttable."

PLAYING CAUTIOUSLY after that, the 32-year old Texan finished with a four-under-par 68 for a 72-hole total of 277. The victory was worth a record Masters first prize of $108,000.

Watson sank an 18-foot birdie putt on the final hole to earn sole possession of second place, worth $64,800, with his 69 for 279. "It was one of those days when I never came close enough to put any pressure on Ben," said Watson, who now has three runner-up finishes in the Masters to go with his two victories. "I made a couple of bogeys early in the day and was too far back to catch up. I didn't make many.

Gil Morgan, improving his score each day here, and Masters rookie Dave Edwards, both of whom shot 67, shared third place at 280, and another stroke farther back was U.S. Open champion Larry Nelson with a 70. TOM KITE, the third-round leader, suffered a triple-bogey on the 12th hole on his way to a 75, dropping him into a four-way tie at 282 with second-round leader Mark Lye (74), David Graham (73) and Ronnie Black (68). It marked the sixth-consecutive year that Kite has finished no worse than sixth in the Masters, but he has yet to capture his first major championship.

"I don't know what's going through Ben's mind now, but I know he knows what is going through mine," Kite said. "It's not jubilation."

Midway through the final round, there was a frantic logjam near the top with seven players bunched within four strokes of Crenshaw.

But Crenshaw stretched his advantage to three shots with the crushing 60-foot putt on the 10th hole while runner-up Kite took a bogey there, and he was in control the rest of the way.

Prior to Sunday's victory, Crenshaw had five runner-up finishes in major championships, including a tie for second place in last year's Masters. This was the 10th victory of his career had to have some mistakes, and Ben and boosted his earnings to $1,853,183, 10th on the all-time list.

'Sure-footed' Hawks run away with Drake invite title

By Melissa Rapoport Staff Writer

A sure-footed Iowa women's track team dominated the seven-team Drake Invitational in Des Moines last weekend, finishing first by more than 50 points ahead of runner-up Western Illinois - the very same team who beat the Hawkeyes in the Western Illinois Invititational one week ago.

"Well, our team had very wellbalanced scoring," Iowa Coach Jerry Hassard said. "Jumping, throwing, sprinting, middle distance and three relay teams all contributed to the team win this weekend."

Finishing behind the Hawkeyes (156½) and Western Illinois (105½) were Minnesota (104), Iowa State (103), Drake (70), Northern Iowa (52) and Southwest Missouri (27).

FOUR ATHLETES TIED the strings of the team together with extremely hard-working attitudes and performances. "Anne Dobrowolski's good double in the 1,500 and 3,000 meters, Gail Smith in the shot and discus, Davera Taylor in the 100 and the long jump and Penny O'Brien in the 800 and 1,500 all scored big points for us this weekend," the Hawkeye coach said.

"There was a lot of work done by these four," he continued. "They were the workhorses of the meet."

Because of the weather, the team resembled a see-saw - up in some events, down in others. "Performances for our team were good in some events and down in others, but weather conditions were poor," Hassard said. "Wind and rain made the throwing areas swampy and the running areas slippery. I was happy to just see our people nang in there and compete as well as

EVEN WITH SUCH an impressive win, and although it's hard to be critical. Hassard said there's always room for improvement. "There is room for improvement in some areas, but it's hard to be critical when the team scored six firsts, five seconds and four thirds in a championship meet," the Iowa mentor said. "In addition, our unattached people scored two firsts and one second. Junior Mary Mol, who was one of the six first-place finishers, set a meet record after her event had been moved indoors as a safety precaution.

"Mary Mol set a meet record in the high jump," Hassard said. "She's been inactive for two weekends, came in and jumped five feet, 10 inches."

Competing in her first competition in over a year, junior co-captain Kathy in the hurdles, high jump, long jump, shot put, javelin, the 200 and the 800, Gillespie totaled 4,988 points.

OTHER WINNERS included Smith in the shot put with a throw of 45-734; Taylor in the 100 clocked 11.9 seconds; O'Brien in the 1,500 with 4:35 and the 4 x 100 relay of Vivien McKenzie, Taylor, Jackie Moore and Elaine Jones clocked

Coincedently, the latter three events have remained undefeated thus far this season. "All three are looking good," Hassard said.

Winning, but running unattached for the Hawkeyes were graduate assistant Brenda Calhoun in the 100 hurdles with 14.1 and Terri Soldan, who threw 125 to claim the javelin title.

Gillespie won the multi-event. "Kathy McKenzie took second in the 200 for the Drake Relays the following Gillespie in the heptathlon got off to a behind Iowa State's Nawal El weekend in Des Moines.

good start," Hassasrd said. Competing Moutawaki, a probable Moroccan Olympian. But despite the loss, Hassard was pleased with McKenzie's performance. "She ran her best race of this season," he said. "She looks very impressive."

> OTHER SECOND-PLACE finishers included Smith in the discus, Taylor in the long jump, Janet Adams in the javelin and the 800-medley relay of Stephanie Maks, Janet Wodek, Moore and O'Brien.

> Impressive third-place finishes were turned in by O'Brien in the 800 and Dobrowolski in the 3,000. The Iowa squad will be traveling to Lawrence, Kan., to compete in the the prestigous, five-day Kansas Relays, which begin Tuesday. Hassard will use this meet to get the Hawkeyes ready

Gutsy Hawks split with Michigan

By Mike Condon sistant Sports Editor

The Iowa softball team had a lot of things going against it after the top of the first inning of Sunday's second game against Michigan at the Hawkeye Softball Complex.

First off, they blew a 3-1 lead in the opener, losing 5-4. Secondly, the Wolverines jumped on Iowa pitcher Julie Kratoska for six big runs in the Virst inning and to make matters worse, Hawkeye Coach Ginny Parrish was in UI Hospitals with a painful back

It would have been easy for the Hawkeyes to fold at that point, but a strong relief pitching performance from freshman Tracy Langhurst, combined with the big bats of sophomores Chris Tomek and Lisa Nicola, keyed an lowa comeback that resulted in a 10-7

THE HAWKEYES and Wolverines were also scheduled to meet in a Satur-4day twinbill, but the games were canceled because of bad weather. The games will be made up today at 10 a.m. lowa softball

Except for a few minor mix-ups, the 1984 Riverrun was the most successful event in its' five-year history.

Nearly 900 runners crowded the streets Saturday morning to compete in the three races on an overcast day with the temperature in the mid-40s, which was perfect race weather even though it spoiled many of the other Riverfest activities.

This was the first race scheduled for the Iowa City area in the past few months, and the 900 runners almost doubled last year's total.

"Overall it went very well," race director Evan Oliff said. "It's a complete turnaround from last year's race. When I took the job, I placed a lot of emphasis on the things that the people go home with. We might as well as spend the extra dollar to get some of

Tennis is a game where mental preparation is just as vital as being able to make all the shots, and one thing was pretty clear last Friday the Iowa women's tennis team wasn't mentally into it's meet with Illinois in Champaign, Ill.

It wasn't because the Hawkeyes weren't ready for the match, it was another distraction that went a long way in Illinois' decisive 8-1 victory.
The courts down there were just terrible," Iowa co-coach Ruth Ann Gardner said. "The weather forced us doors and their indoor courts were

Slump takes toll on golf squad at Wichita Invite

By Thomas W. Jargo ssistant Sports Editor

Iowa women's golf Coach Diane Thomason gathered her team together following the Hawkeyes' third-place finish at the Wichita State Invitational Wichita, Kan., Friday, and the Hawkeyes had a nice "long talk." The Hawkeyes discussed, among other things, the recent slump the entire team has been in. Iowa started out the spring season with a lot of promise, finishing fourth in its spring break tourney. But more importantly, the Hawkeyes were carding more consistent rounds in the

10s and their team scores were down around the 315-320 mark.

Lately, however, the Hawkeyes have seen their golf games tumble a bit, resulting in skyrocketing team scores, which have been hovering around the

Part of the reason for Iowa's problem may be bad weather, which forced the scores to be slightly higher than usual in Wichita, where everyone in the six-team tourney had problems.

Nebraska carded a 54-hole team score of 998 over the par-72 Wichita State University golf course to win by 17 strokes over Iowa State. The Hawkeyes were third just two strokes behind the Cyclones, which disappointed Thomason.

"WE WERE HOPING we could get second," Thomason said. "We made up nine strokes on (Iowa State) on the front nine (Friday), and were ahead of them by two strokes at the turn. I'm a little disappointed."

Iowa State's Connie Carlson took medalist honors with a three-round total of 137. Kathy Nelson of Nebraska finished two strokes back of Carlson for second place.

Iowa's top finishers were senior Cookie Rosine and junior Amy Bubon who carded indentical 255 totals. Sophomores Julie Edgar and Mary Baecke were right behind with 256 and 257 rounds, respectively.

"I'm a little disappointed in our scores," Thomason said. "The greens

Ohio State flexed its golfing muscle a little bit this weekend.

Coach Jim Brown's squad played the Kepler men's golf Intercollegiate without their two top players, Clark Burroughs and Chris Perry, who were competing in the Masters tournament in Augusta, Ga.

Still the Buckeyes blew out one of the strongest fields in the country, winning their own 24-team intercollegiate, 1,136 strokes to 1,152 over second-place

Michigan State was third at 1,159, while Miami of Ohio finished fourth with 1,162. Minnesota rounded out the top five with a 1,166 total.

Brown was obviously the happiest person in the clubhouse after Sunday's final round.

"I KNEW IT WOULD be a lot harder without those two," Brown said. "I didn't expect us to do this well. We didn't have a lot of experience out there."

Iowa Coach Chuck Zwiener, on the other hand, had to leave Columbus, Ohio, dissapointed.

The Hawkeyes finished in a tie for 14th place with the Ohio State Gray squad at 1,194 for the 54 holes.

Senior Eugene Elliott was again on top of the Iowa scorecard.

Although the Hawkeye captain didn't enter the top 10, he did shoot consistent rounds of 76, 79 and 75 for a three-day total of 230.

The next closest Iowa golfer was fellow senior Mark Christenson, He was seven strokes behind Elliott after

DESPITE THE LOW Iowa finish. Brown said the Hawkeyes do have similarities with his squad.

"They are a lot like us," Brown said,
"in that they are still fishing for their best line-up. It's still early in the season, really. We have four or five meets left to play."

Brown's search for his top six may be a little bit more pleasing than Zwiener's

The Buckeye coach discovered some talented freshmen this weekend who weren't getting many holes in.

One of those newcomers is freshmen Craigen Papas. In only his second meet of the year, Papas took medalist honors with a 223 total.

Ball State's Brain Tennyson was one stroke behind while Minnesota's Dave Nordeen and Gary Rusnak from Marshall tied for third at 225. Ohio State veteran Greg Ladehoff, a Clinton, Iowa native, filled-out the top finishers with a 226.

Olympic hopefuls' futures rely on Boston Marathon

BOSTON (UPI) - The Olympic futures of several international runners rest on their performance in Monday's 88th annual Boston Marathon.

Geoff Smith, a student at Providence College and the No. 2 finisher in the last New York Marathon, has been "told indirectly" by his government that he must place first among the nearly 6,800 Boston Marathon entrants in order to be named to the British Olympic team.

In a year when the Olympics have diluted the men's and women's fields, it is also the reason some top runners are competing - to qualify for their country's Olympic teams.

Victories by American men runners total 43, but if Smith has his way, that number will remain the same for at least another year.

SMITH WAS ASKED at a weekend press conference if he would be running at Boston if he didn't need the time. "I'd rather not answer that," he said.

And Lorraine Moller, one of three top New Zealand runners taking part in the race, said that winning is secondary to her obtaining a time sufficient to qualify for her country's marathon team.

Smith may try to make his move in the first half of the race. But he said, "I'm going to try to control myself. I was in control of myself in New York until I took the lead. I'm not worried about leading at all. Once you get on a roll, you don't get tired.'

Smith finished the New York Marathon in two

ALSO, BOSTON IS slipping in stature as a marathon because it will not provide any prize money or expenses for runners, foreign or domestic. Paul Ballinger, 31, of New Zealand, will also run with the Olympics in mind, and needs a 2:12:30 to

"That's what I'm running towards and I should be able to do it," Ballinger said. "I'm not going to go out and try to win it.'

The women's favorites are former Boston winner. Allison Roe and Moller, both natives of New Moller, 28, who has never run Boston, said she has not practiced on the course.

"I think the biggest problem will be avoiding going out too fast at the start, where it's downhill," she said. "But the undulating course won't bother me. I like it. New Zealand is undulating and its just more interesting to run than something which is flat."

McCrory wins

DETROIT (UPI) - Unbeaten Milton McCrory successfully defended his World Boxing Council welterweight title Sunday with a sixth-round technical knockout of overmatched European

Elbilia got up but was unable to mount an offense after the blow, and referee Carlos Padilia stopped the fight at 1:08 of the round. The outcome was vigorously protested by Elbilia, who dropped to 23-3 and said he could have continued. His manager, George Cantor, said Elbilia was the victim of biased officiating and intends to lodge a formal protest with WBC officials.

Illinois scalps Hawks in twinbill

F YOU'VE SEEN any of John Waters' movies, you'd probably expect him to be a loud, obnoxious slob constantly trying to impress his fans by insulting any sense of propriety. In Waters' movies, his actors are constantly trying to insult our sensibilities by engaging in activities as diverse as swearing and eating

But in real life, the quietly humorous John Waters prefers a good meal at Iowa River Power Company.

Before Waters' appearance as the Riverfest guest lecturer last Thursday night, I had a chance to talk to him in the Riverfest suite in the Iowa House. Thin, a pencil-line mustache just above his upper lip, wearing a subdued purple tie, pink dress shirt and a suit coat, Waters greeted me with a smile and a firm handshake.

As we entered the room, a Riverfest representative told us,"Don't take anything out of this room," gesturing toward the various junk, including Riverfest prizes, scattered around the room. He was obviously nervous that a man like John Waters might decide to walk away with one of the lamps.

Waters told us that his lecture here was "a chance to spread bad taste across state lines." It was a smug answer, one that Waters thought we expected to hear. It was feeding juicy quotes to a writer that you knew were going to be printed. After all, he had to live up to his reputation. Waters looked tired after his 10-day, all-expenses-paid visit to Paris, and he even told us he couldn't wait to get to his home in Baltimore; Waters is not as abnormal as his films. Here's proof:

"I'M REALLY OBSESSED with murder trials and abnormal psychology; it's the best theater. I think if I wasn't a filmmaker I'd be a criminal lawyer or a journalist covering murder trials," said Waters. He's traveled across the country sitting through trials, from Patty Hearst and Charles Manson to John Hinkley and the Hillside Strangler. "I'm not for any of these things, I'm not pro-violence, I'm

When asked about the amateurism style of his early films, Waters admitted "that's just because I didn't know how to do it. I tried to make those movies look as good as I knew how at the time with that amount of money. A lot of people say we missed that; well, that wasn't on purpose, it was just bad filmmaking."

But Waters later defended the sloppiness of his early films. "I think that sloppiness makes Pink Flamingos scarier because it almost looks like it's a documentary." Pink Flamingos was an astounding success, and Waters attributes that to its uniqueness: "You saw it, and even if you hated the movie, you had to tell somebody about it. WATERS SAID LATER: "We call (my films) celluloid atrocities because they were purposely made to be bad. But they're supposed to go beyond bad; they're satires on bad movies. They're really exploitation films for art theaters. I think I knew what I was doing; I was trying to get a reaction out of the audience. It's a joke on audiences, who think they're so jaded today that nothing can shock them. I hadn't seen the film in a long while and I was shocked by it. I thought, 'God, I made this.' I saw scenes in it that really offended me. I think I must be getting older."

Waters' only film to be busted for pornography was Pink Flamingos in Hicksville, N.Y., and Waters had to pay a $5,000 fine; the next week it played at the Museum of Modern Art. "As soon as you try to stop something, more people go to see it," said Waters. "If you want to censor a film, never mention it and it will die." "THE SEX AND the violence in my films is so exaggerated that it's ridiculous. Nobody's going to want to go out and do that." Waters laughingly recounts the story of the two people who told him that the final scene of Pink Flamingos (where Divine eats doggie do-do) really turned them on. It was the exception to the rule.

"At the time it was no big deal to us, we just did it," said Waters of that infamous scene. "Now, I certainly would never ask Divine to do that. But you got to start somewhere. Think how much Hollywood would spend to do that scene, with the special effects. It didn't cost us anything. It was a gimmick: it was a publicity stunt; in a way, it was very commercial because I knew people would have to talk about it. And it worked beyond my wildest dreams."

WATERS SAID ALL of the good reviews of Polyester "initially frightened me. I thought, 'What am I doing wrong here?' Naturally you want to get good reviews, but some of the bad reviews have helped me, too, if the critic was outraged.

"You have to get my humor or else you're going to hate it," said Waters. I'm not saying people don't understand it; their taste is just different. They don't find what I find to be amusing. There is really only one reason I ever do these movies: to make you chuckle. People laugh, but they're nervous when they laugh, they're not sure if they should be laughing at this; it makes them feel guilty to laugh. They're very Catholic movies."

He's now working on a sequel to Pink Flamingos, called Flamingos Forever. 'It's a joke on movie sequels, because I think making a sequel is really the worst thing you can do. It's going to be a kind of Big Chill for lunatics.

"I don't want reality; you can walk outside and see reality. My idea of heaven would be to make a movie where everything is fake. Movies are an exaggeration of real life, so I want to go one step beyond that toward ridiculousness. There are so many terrible things today and there's nothing you can do to change them, so been to Pink Flamingos with under-12- all you can do is laugh. And I think

The Man Who Shot Liberty Valance. A U.S. senator's visit back home to the funeral of a lonely cowboy finally brings to light the story of who really shot Liberty Valance. If this isn't the greatest Western of all time, it certainly has the greatest cast in a Western: Jimmy Stewart, John Wayne, Stother Martin, Lee Marvin, John Carradine, Andy Devine and Vera Miles. Only Walter Brennan is missing. At 7 p.m.

• A propos de Nice/Zero de Conduite. Two short films from Jean Vigo, one of the great French directors. The first is a satiric social document filmed when Vigo lived in Nice. The second is inspired by Vigo's miserable years spent in a boys' boarding school, and it savagely exposes the cruelty of that institution in a strikingly lyrical and surrealistic style. Vigo, after one more film (L'Atalante), fell ill and died of leukemia at the age of 29. At 9:15 p.m.

On the networks: That dancing fool Snoopy and the rest of the Peanuts gang trip the light fantastic in "It's Flashbeagle, Charlie Brown" (CBS at 7 p.m.), an animated salute to the footloose generation. Radic does Chopin's works justice without overdoing the sentimentality

REDERIC CHOPIN is without doubt the most grateful and yet most exacting composer the piano literature ever knew: given the technique, any player can make a marvelous noise with just about any Chopin work, but to infuse it with the proper Classical concern with shape without overindulging in the tempestuous and the free emotion is a very fine line to walk

Ida Beam Visiting Professor Stjepan Radic, as evidenced by his all-Chopin recital Wednesday night in Clapp Recital Hall, can for the most part tread this line very effectively. In an extremely wellchosen program that included nocturnes, impromptus, mazurkas, a sonata and a polonaise, Radic made consistently lovely sounds and yet also kept all of his considerable musical wits about him. For him, Chopin was no Romantic siren, luring the pianist onto the rocks of sentimentality; and if Radic occasionally erred in the opposite direction - toward a musical humility that made less of Chopin's dazzling effects than might be - that was mostly refreshing.

Chopin's seeming effeteness has more to do with his reception and the means of his career than with his musical output, yet oftentimes interpreters miss the man for his perfumed legend. Chopin himself was aware of the frippery of his day and the career necessities of "playing the game;" after his initial reception in Paris, in 1832, he wrote to a friend in Warsaw: "You at once have more talent if you have been heard at the English or Austrian embassies; you at once play better if Princess Vaundemont has patronized you. ... You will imagine that I am making a fortune, but my cabriolet (carriage) and white gloves cost more than that, and without them I should not have 'bon ton' (beautiful

RADIC IS NOT fooled. His Chopin was admirably forthright and clearly musical, and yet he paid close attention to all the pianistic niceties of the composer's art: his pedaling was mostly fine and clear (the toofast Fantasie-Impromptu was a notable exception; it was muzzy, blurred and the melody became swamped with piano tone), the variety of tonal color he achieved was remarkable (each genre of work had its own distinctive coloration), and the consistent coincidence of melody and drama was a fine achievement.

Part of Radic's success with the Polish composer's idiom comes largely from the pianist's unwillingness to take Chopin for granted. There was a nice freshness Wednesday that made one re-evaluate Chopin the composer in light of his music only, not his reputation as a Romantic or the handme-down interpretations that have encrusted Chopin's truly forthright music like

The opening Nocturnes set the standard for the recital: limpid tone; strongly projected melodic lines, cantabile as they should be; and a sense of power in reserve that was exploited to great effect in the Dflat major nocturne (Op. 27, no. 2). Radic followed this up with a performance of the complete set of Impromptus, where, in adshown. Radic added a keen rhythmic sense and a sparing yet knowing use of rubato an area where many Chopin interpreters fall down badly. Chopin is not soup; his work is firmly constructed and cannot handle willful tempo shifts and "dramatic" pauses. Radic is aware of this; his use of rubato was confined to giving the "metaphrase" - that is, the long melodic line that transfixes the whole piece places to breathe and to define itself, rather than to extend a particular effect or apostrophize a gush of "sensitivity."

SENSITIVITY IS NOT lacking in Radic's outlook — a point especially well-made in the set of Mazurkas he performed. Choosing three of them from the Op. 17 set and two from later in Chopin's life, Radic gave a clear picture of the composer's development, emphasizing the winningly naive Polishness of the early works and showing the increasing sophistication of the two later pieces. Further, Radic let us know these pieces are really anecdotal; each of them emerged as a narrative, with Radic as the self-effacing storyteller.

The Sonata in B minor, Op. 58, closed out the recital as a summation of all the traits Radic has shown earlier, in a way that the sonata itself does with Chopin's music (he wrote the work in 1844, when life with George Sand was getting sour and his health became increasingly poor; it is one of his very last large-scale works). It was here that Radic the pianist pulled out all the stops; the result was very impressive, with a big sound and outlook and wellcharacterized tonal moods.

Enchanting operas to be presented

The UI Opera Theater and the UI Orchestra, directed by James Dixon, will present two short operas in English - Igor Stravinsky's The Nightingale (Le rossignol) and Maurice Ravel's The Enchanted Child (L'enfant et les sortileges) - April 27 and 28 at 8 p.m. in Hancher Auditorium.

The School of Music's choices are particularly apt, as both are considered masterpieces of 20th century opera and are also based on fantasy and thus appropriate for children and adults alike.

The Nightingale is Stravinsky's first attempt in the genre and is set to a story by fabler Hans Christian Andersen. In ancient

THE UI PRODUCTION follows Stravinsky's instructions by having the nightingale and other characters portrayed on stage by dancers and sung from the orchestra pit, whence will come two diftic style reminiscent of parts of his Firebird ballet, while the latter two scenes were composed after Le sacre du printemps and reflects its increasing atonality and emphasis on rhythmic ele-

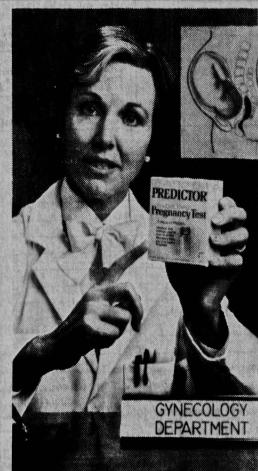

The Enchanted Child tells the story of a spoiled child who learns a valuable lesson when his nursery, and all the objects in it, spring to life after one of his more violent tantrums. Outside, too, the animals he has often mistreated come to reap their revenge, but as they approach a baby squirrel is wounded. By his sudden compassion for the injured animal is the boy taught
