Bush to negotiate chemicals in Geneva

WASHINGTON (UPI) -- Vice President George Bush on Monday canceled a planned trip to London to attend a meeting of the Interparliamentary Union in order to head to Geneva to begin negotiations there on the issue of chemical weapons.

"My goal is to eliminate from the earth one of the most horrible and terrifying weapons known to mankind," Bush said in a statement released by his staff. "This is an issue that we cannot ignore."

The Soviet Union responded by calling for the next meeting of the U.N. Conference on Disarmament to be suspended until the Bush administration makes its decision on the issue. Soviet officials also said they would not send a delegation to Geneva.

Bush left late Monday for Geneva, where he faces a tough challenge in convincing the U.S. Senate and the administration to sign the draft convention, which the Soviet Union has already endorsed.

The Bush administration's position is that the draft convention is not acceptable and is not a serious proposal. Instead, the Bush administration is seeking to negotiate a new convention that would be more stringent and be easier to implement.

For inspection of actual or suspected chemical weapons, U.S. scientists would have to be given access to facilities in the Soviet Union. The Soviet Union has previously stated that such inspections would be unacceptable.

"I have no reason to think that the Soviet Union will be any more open and cooperative in this regard today than it was last week," Bush said. "I believe that they are trying to block the negotiations in Geneva on the issue of chemical weapons.

"However, I am convinced that it is in the interest of the United States, in the interest of the people of the world, that we move forward on this issue," Bush said. "I believe that it is in the interest of the United States, in the interest of the people of the world, that we move forward on this issue."

Bush said he would "come back to Washington to talk with my cabinet and other top advisers to get their advice on what to do next."
City Council to consider lifting building ban

By Carrie Tervino

Two major issues involving local developments will be addressed by the Iowa City Council tonight, according to Iowa City Mayor John McDonald.

The council will discuss lifting the building ban that covers the city's east side and the possibility of changing the zoning for the site.

Local developers have publicly denounced the city's ban on east side construction - prepared by city planners and approved by the council - as a "red tape" for development.

McDonald said the council must take action on the problem today. "I don't see any solutions that are going to work," he said. "We have a contract with the developers and they need to sell that contract to the public."

Women's rights to receive HUD grant

The Iowa City Human Rights Commission, along with the Iowa City Housing Authority, have secured a $40,000 grant from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development. The money will be used to create a "living skills" program that will provide training for homeless individuals. The program will be housed at the Iowa City Housing Authority's headquarters.

UI to request renovation funds

The University of Iowa's Board of Regents will decide Wednesday whether to approve a $15.7 million extension of the Field House.

The extension will increase the arena's seating capacity to 9,794. It will be equipped with a climate control system, a new roof, new lighting and a renovated concourse.

The extension will be built on the south end of the Field House and will replace the area currently occupied by the John D. O'Brien Recreation Center.

The project is expected to cost $25 million and is scheduled to be completed in time for the 1992-93 academic year.

A proposal for a center for International and Comparative Studies at UI will be presented at Wednesday's board meeting.

The proposal was brought to the March meeting and was referred to the International Committee on Education. If approved, the board will have additional authority to review the request and add additional funding if necessary. The center would allow the university to develop international programs that would foster cooperation with other institutions.

Group: Lebanon's image suffers

By Susan Yager / The Daily Iowan

Lebanon's history and its contributions to the world have been revived alongside this land, he said.

Since the 11th century, Lebanon has been a part of the Roman Empire and later underwent a period of transformation and reconstruction. The country's history and culture have been shaped by various influences from different regions, including the Middle East, Asia, and Europe.

Lebanon's contributions to the world include its role as a multicultural melting pot and its significant contributions to the field of technology.

Although most people do not realize it, Lebanon was also a microcosm of the Middle East, where people from different backgrounds coexisted and shared knowledge.

C&C votes to stick with 17 cents per student for Health Iowa funds

By Dan Harmon

The C&C Biological Association Council voted last week to stick with its previously recommended percentage of 17 cents per semester for Health Iowa funds. The action was a result of a favorable review of the proposal by the C&C biological science department.

The 17 cents per semester recommendation is the same as that recommended by the C&C biology department last year. The recommendation was based on a review of the C&C biology department's budget and the estimated cost of the Health Iowa program.

The C&C biology department has been working with Health Iowa for several years and has been involved in the planning and implementation of the program. The department has expressed concern about the financial impact of the program on the C&C biology department.

The 17 cents per semester recommendation is expected to provide sufficient funding for the C&C biology department to participate in the Health Iowa program. The department has already made arrangements to participate in the program and is preparing to implement the necessary changes.

Dispute

The university senate and the administration have been working on the issue of Health Iowa funds for several months. The senate has expressed concern about the financial impact of the program on the university and has sought to reduce the amount of funding provided to the program.

The administration, on the other hand, has expressed concern about the necessity of the program and has sought to increase the amount of funding provided to the program. The two sides have been unable to reach an agreement on the issue.

S.W. Africa terrorists blamed for Namibia's forlorn fate

KINGSTON, South West Africa (UPI) - The bomb that killed two U.S. diplomats last week in Namibia was sown by the same hands that killed 10 policemen here in Kingston in January, UPI sources said.

In fact, the Kingston terrorist office is the latest of a series of U.S. run FBI offices along the border of Angola, Mozambique and South West Africa targeted by the S.W.A. terrorist group, UPI sources said.

The bombings, a classic case of a terrorist office, have been announced as a warning that the group will use the U.S. embassy in Namibia as a permanent base for operations in South West Africa.

The U.S. embassy official, Joaquim de Almeida, confirmed the attacks but declined to elaborate.

The attacks have been described by U.S. officials as a response to the killing of eight U.S. embassy officials last week in Namibia.

CIVIL RIGHTS ACTIVISTS in Congress have long and quick work to squeeze into the remainder of this session's calendar. Their task is to reverse a recent Supreme Court ruling and to act as a stimulus in the efficacy of 16 years worth of anti-discrimination law.

In Grove City College v. Bell, a small Pennsylvania school in Pennsylvania, refused to sign an "assurance of compliance" form promising to obey federal civil rights law. Title IX of the 1972 education law prohibits discrimination on the basis of sex at any school receiving federal funds. The government took the college to court; Grove City lost, then appealed.

When the case reached the U.S. Supreme Court in 1981, the Reagan administration pushed for a narrow interpretation that would allow Grove City to remain in compliance with the civil rights law. The conservative majority of the Supreme Court agreed in the majority opinion of Justice White, Grove City lost, then appealed.

The administration proposal was not accepted, but early this year the Supreme Court ruled Grove City was correct because the school's federal grants and loans are not administered by college officials. Under the ruling, only the financial aid offices, the school itself, must comply with Title IX.

Civil rights officials in the administration maintain the decision extends to Title VI, Section 444 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 and the Age Discrimination Act of 1975 — special rights laws affecting blacks, the handicapped and the elderly — to the Supreme Court.

The federal loan program is approximately one-third of the administration's efforts to convert the federal aid program to court; Grove City lost, then appealed.

Bully tactics tarnish U.S. image

The United States, a nation founded on the security of the rule of law, is suffering like an international outlaw. Foreign and domestic critics of the Reagan administration's efforts to work with the states on civil rights legislation are increasingly calling on the president to act. They are urging a return to the principles of the civil rights movement.

The administration has shown little interest in working with the states on civil rights legislation. It has not only ignored the pleas of civil rights groups, but has also worked against their efforts to pass legislation. The administration's efforts to work with the states on civil rights legislation have been met with a lack of response.

Howard film makes big ‘Splash’

By Greg Young

LOOKING OUT across the fresh, fish-shaped block of a "So-called studio production" can make one lose count of the number of fish in the water. Perhaps the first thing one notices is the relative lack of activity. But in this case, the lack of activity is not due to a lack of people, but rather to the lack of momentum. The film, "Splash," is a box-office bomb that seems to have no chance of catching on with audiences.

The film's protagonist, played by Tom Hanks, is a New York City taxi driver who one day finds himself turning into a fish. His wife and kids are horrified, and the storyline is nothing new. However, the film's biggest flaw is its lack of a clear premise. The story is rambling and confusing, with no real sense of direction.

Despite its overall lack of success, "Splash" does have some positive aspects. The special effects are well done, and the acting is decent. However, these positives are overshadowed by the film's many缺点s.

In conclusion, "Splash" is a film that is difficult to recommend. While it may have its moments, overall it falls short of delivering a satisfying experience. If you're in the mood for a light-hearted, feel-good film, there are better options out there.

At Michigan softball Coach Rich Doerr could not have asked for more at the end of the third game. Before his team and the Big Ten officially entered its Big Ten schedule, Doerr's squad had beaten No. 2 Illinois and No. 13 Michigan, two teams expected to be among the conference's top three.

The Hawkeyes came into the game winning four of their last seven games and with seven errors versus 23 for the Illini. However, the Illini had scored more runs than Iowa during the entire series.

The Hawks, who were coming off their first conference win in 13 years, found it difficult to stay with the talented Minnesota team. The Golden Gophers scored three goals in the first five minutes and added three more in the first half.

Iowa was again scored on once in the second half, but Minnesota was in charge. The Gophers outlasted the Hawkeyes with a 7-2 victory.

Iowa had a total of seven goals, with four scored by Welch and one each by Wettschereck and Van Der Werken. Iowa's 12 shots on goal were matched by Minnesota, which also had 12.

BOSTON (AP) - The Boston Marathon was just according to schedule early Monday. The 50th annual Boston Marathon was delayed by rain and wind, but the winner was still planned for 10 a.m. EDT. The Boston Road Runners Club, which oversees the event, has a policy of starting the race on time regardless of weather conditions. The race was delayed last year due to freezing rain and snow.

The first wave of runners was scheduled to take off at 7:30 a.m., but the cross-country runners were delayed as a precautionary measure in case of any weather-related issues.

By the time the second wave of runners started at 8 a.m., the conditions had improved significantly, with temperatures rising and winds dying down. The rain had mostly cleared up, allowing the runners to enjoy the beautiful spring weather.

The main event of the day was the Boston Marathon, which is considered one of the most prestigious and challenging races in the world. The course is 26.2 miles long and takes runners through some of the most iconic neighborhoods of Boston and the surrounding areas.

The race started with a bang as the runners took off, each striving to achieve their personal bests or to qualify for the Olympic team. The competition was fierce, with runners from all over the world competing for the top spots.

The day was marked by a strong sense of community and support, with spectators lining the course to cheer on the runners. The atmosphere was electric, with music blaring and supporters shouting encouragement.

Despite the challenges posed by the weather, the runners remained focused and determined, pushing themselves to their limits. The day was a true test of strength, endurance, and mental toughness.

In the end, the finish line was reached with a bang, as the runners crossed the finish line with a roar of excitement and relief. The day was not just about the race, but also about the experience of being part of something bigger than themselves.

The Boston Marathon is not just a race, but a symbol of resilience and determination, of coming together to face challenges as a community. The runners, volunteers, family, and friends all played a part in making this day a success.

As the runners crossed the finish line, the crowd erupted in cheers and applause, celebrating the spirit of the race and the runners' achievements.

The Boston Marathon is a symbol of hope and resilience, a reminder of what we can accomplish when we work together. It is a day that will be remembered for generations to come.

The nail came down on the intramural sports period last weekend and brought with it a new dimension. And another nature prevented many of the sports teams from being able to complete the start of the first round of intramural play.

A steady rain was the bane of the teams. That tournament had to cancel its first-round games last Saturday due to rain and only two teams were scheduled to play, one team having already canceled. There were 11 teams trying for the title. The Division of Recreation services doesn't expect the first round to be completed until week two at the earliest.

Future of women's basketball could change with smaller ball

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (UPI) - New York Knicks chairman of the NBA's women's basketball committee, Finch believes the chairman of the NCAA women's basketball, said, "The smaller ball option is among a number of rules changes that have been proposed to improve the quality of the game."

"We're trying to get our game to the next level," Finch said. "I think the smaller ball would be a big step forward." Finch believes the smaller ball would be easier to dribble and shoot, leading to a faster pace of play. "The idea is to make the game more exciting and faster-paced," Finch said.

All-Star nominations include 144 players

NEW YORK (UPI) - Basketball fans will have the opportunity to select the players they would like to see play a game on the 1985-86 All-Star ballot, which was announced Monday by Basketball Commission President Bob Hall.

"Voting for the starting All-Star lineup begins May 21 and runs through June 15," Hall said. "The starting lineup will be announced June 16." The 1985-86 All-Star Game is set for March 13, 1986, at New York's Madison Square Garden.

Spikers finish fourth

"It was not a very satisfying ending for our team," said Spikers' head coach, Jack Jackson. "We had our chances, but we didn't take advantage of them." Spikers finished fourth in the 1985-86 United States Volleyball Association regional meet in Cedar Falls, Iowa. The Spikers' highest ranking was second place in the 1985-86 tournament.

The Spikers played very poorly in their opening round game against the Los Angeles Open. They were down 2-0 and never recovered. After trailing 2-0, the Spikers played well in the second round, but lost 3-2. In the decisive third round, the Spikers were up 2-1, but lost 2-3. In the fourth round, the Spikers were down 2-1, but won 2-3. In the final round, the Spikers were down 2-0, but won 2-3. In the championship game, the Spikers were down 2-0, but won 2-3. In the consolation game, the Spikers were down 2-0, but won 2-3.
