In Washington, President Reagan - Jose Napoleon Duarte, claiming victory in the Salvadoran presidential election, said Monday he would not allow U.S. combat troops to take part in the fight against leftist insurgents.

Duarte proclaimed himself the winner in Sunday's presidential elections against far-rightist Roberto d'Aubuisson, who admitted Duarte was leading in the vote count but refused to concede defeat. Duarte's Christian Democratic Party claimed their candidate won 54.48 percent of the vote to 45.52 percent for d'Aubuisson, with 94 percent of the ballots counted. The count was unofficial. No official results are expec-

However, Duarte said he wanted to keep the U.S. military advisers, whose number has been frozen at 55, "because we consider this a vital decision taking into account the national security of our country."

Duarte apparently first won election to the presidency in 1972 but the army counted the votes and its candidate was declared the winner.

In 1980, he became president of the country's governing junta, but was replaced by Provisional President Alvaro Magana after Constitutional calm was restored across most of El Salvador following guerrilla attacks on election day that killed at least 14 people and wounded 10 others.

A DELEGATION of 23 Americans who observed the elections issued a statement calling the election a success and saying it was an "overwhelming repudiation of the guerrillas."

It also called "upon fellow Americans and all members of the international community to provide increased support for the democratically elected government of El Salvador."

Duarte, 58, would be the first freely elected Salvadoran president in 50 years, during which time the military dominated all political life.

Duarte said his first order of business would be to put an end to El Salvador's notorious right-wing death squads, which investigators say have close ties to the military

"We will confront the most important problems of violence ... the death squads, the abuse of authority, the culture of violence," Duarte said.

Dance degree allows versatility

By Karin Hanson Special to The Daily Iowan

The UI's dance program began in 1932 with a handful of students. Fifty-two years later the program has grown to include 70 majors. A dance department can now be found at most colleges across the country as the art form has gained wide popularity in America. But the college dance degree is still not completely accepted in the professional world of dance.

Many university dance departments place the emphasis of their curricula on training professional performers in the ballet and modern idioms. Colleges such as the University of Utah and New York University claim in departmental brochures to be training grounds for performers. But, in most cases, directors of major dance companies agree it is unrealistic for a student to begin dance training at a university and expect to emerge four years later as a professional. There are, however, professionals in the field from Agnes de Mille, legendary choreographer, to Assistant Professor Susan Dickson of the UI dance program, who see a place for the college graduate with a dance degree - although not necessarily as

"THOSE WHO WANT to be performers usually

"What a college dance degree does do is make them (students) more interesting people," says Broadway veteran Buzz Miller. "And the more interesting a person is, the more he or she as a dancer has to offer the choreographer."

do not go to college," said Dickson, who received her M.A. in dance from the UI. "College is firstclass for dance research, but we often run into problems with the performing aspect."

Dickson said age is a great limitation for college dancers who want to perform in companies, as most dancers are in professional dance troupes before they reach their college years.

"Our modern dance students have a better chance to become performers than our ballet students because age is not such a crucial factor as it is in ballet," Dickson said.

'Ballet dancers often consider themselves 'old' when they are 22. Their performing career usually only lasts until they hit their late 20s," she said. Alicia Brown, associate professor of dance at the UI, sees a need for dance students at universities to explore the non-performing aspects of

"SO FEW OF the people who want to be performers ever make it. And I'm including all dance students, not just those in college," Brown said. "Right now our program's emphasis is on technique classes and performing, but I believe many of our students could be very successful in fields like dance history and research, musical literature and labanotation (a written method of recording

'These are fields which are necessary for the dance world to continue," said Brown, who received her education at the Juilliard School of the Arts in New York City.

Damage suit awards vets $250 million

NEW YORK (UPI) - Seven chemical companies and 20,000 veterans who blame cancer and other severe illnesses on exposure to Agent Orange in Vietnam agreed to a record $250 million out-of-court settlement

"The final battle of the Vietnam War has been won," said Victor Yannacone, the attorney who filed the veterans' damage suit against the chemical com-

Lawyers called it the largest personal injury settlement in U.S. history. The agreement leaves intact the right of veterans' families and the chemical companies to press claims against the government for authorizing use of Agent Orange during the Vietnam War. Dow Chemical Co. and six other firms that made the herbicide agreed to deposit $180 million into a global trust fund that, with interest over six years, will grow to $250 million. It will pay for medical treatment and compensation for the veterans and their

The surprise settlement was reached at 5 a.m. Iowa time Monday, just hours before jury selection was to begin in the climax of a five-year struggle by veterans across the nation to press suit against the chemical companies.

THE AGREEMENT must still get final approval from Chief Judge Jack Weinstein of U.S. District Court following a public hearing. No date was set for the hearing.

And lawyers and veterans groups still must determine how to dole out the funds.

The companies involved said the settlement would have no adverse effect on their financial situation. Reaction from veterans and their families ranged from jubilation to denunciation. The veterans themselves are barred by law from suing the government for injuries suffered in military service. Their families can do so, however.

"The United States is not a party to the settlement agreement. We cannot discuss the specifics of the agreement until we have reviewed its terms," the Justice Department said.

Agent Orange, a plant killer containing the toxic chemical dioxin, was used to destroy Vietnamese jungles, and vets blamed it for illnesses including cancer and birth defects. Maintaining the settlement was in no way an admission of guilt on the part of the chemical companies, Dow spokesman Robert Charlton said his firm "has not altered its belief that Agent Orange is not a plausible cause of the ill-health experience by veterans and families."

THE VETERANS claimed Dow and the other companies knew it was hazardous but concealed the information from the military.

The settlement will benefit veterans who served from 1961 to 1972 and includes servicemen from Australia and New Zealand who have ailments consistent with dioxin poisoning, veterans' lawyers said.

Dow decided to settle the case because "it would have been very difficult for a jury to sort out the complex scientific issues in this highly emotional case," Charlton said.

But attorney Yannacone, whom veterans call "the grandfather of the Agent Orange class-action suit." said the agreement represented a "surrender" by the chemical companies.

Paul Reutershan, a veteran who founded Vietnam Agent Orange Victims Inc., died of liver cancer several months after filing a lawsuit in 1978. Yannacone refiled the case as a class-

"THERE WILL be justice for the veterans and their families," said Yannacone, 42, of Patchogue, N.Y., who for five years herded the case through pre-trial hearings in federal courts.

Lee Covino, 33, a veteran who counsels others who served in Vietnam, said the agreement "doesn't sound fair to me. A lot of people are really sick right now, though, so I can understand why they would want immediate help through the settlement."

David Dean, the veterans' chief attorney, said he agreed to the settlement because he feared the complex case could drag on for years and be overturned on appeal.

The class-action suit was filed to consolidate the claims of 20,000 veterans. More than 100,000 other veterans who claim damages are potential members

The Agent Orange defendants were Dow, of Midland, Mich.; Diamond Shamrock Chemicals Co., Dallas; Hercules Inc., Wilmington, Del.; Monsanto Co., St. Louis; T.H. Agriculture and Nutrition Co., Kansas City; Thompson Chemical Corp., Kansas City; and Uniroyal Inc., Middlebury, Conn.

Disorder 'poisons' District 3 convention

By Greg Philby Staff Writer

Johnson County delegates who attended the 3rd District Democratic convention in Waterloo Saturday returned with mixed feelings after enduring almost 20 hours of "unfairness," "chaos" and "trickery.

After the smoke cleared, former Vice President Walter Mondale and Colorado Sen. Gary Hart each emerged with three delegates. Former Sen. George McGovern, who won the delegate.

The meeting, held at Columbus High School, started off on the wrong foot during the 8 a.m. registration when some of the 530 delegates did not put down their presidential preference

"If the preference sheet would've been out, we could've done more negotiating and had more time, and had our own delegate without going under the Hart banner," said Arturo Sierra, a supporter of the Rev. Jesse Jackson. He was selected as a Hart delegate and will attend the July 16-19 national convention in San Francisco, but will back Jackson

The error delayed the first alignment Johnson County Democratic of preference groups by two hours and Convention on April 7, did not receive a set the mood for the day.

"I DON'T THINK it affected how we realigned, except it delayed things and annoyed people and probably shortened some tempers," said Bryant Julstrom, 34, who headed the McGovern delegaupon entering. Party rules require tion. The McGovern group realigned delegates to list their candidate with the Jackson group early on.

preferences at the start of the convenUI student Jeff Winick, 20, a national delegate for the Hart campaign, said "it took two tries to get the first realignment settled ... (The mood) started out as confusion, and the confusion led to aggravation and the aggravation led to anger. By the end of the convention, it finally erupted. I refer to it as poison," he said, because it will cause dissension among Democrats.

Beverly Full, a Mondale national delegate, said, "I've been to just about every (district convention) since 1958, and this was certainly the most frustrating in terms of not getting anything done. In the 1970s, we had some all-nighters, but at least then we were arguing issues." The convention concluded at 3:44 a.m. Sunday.

Full said at this convention, however, "we just sort of stood around and waited while small groups of in-dividuals held things up for their own reasons. I don't know what (the reasons) were and I'm not even sure they knew what they were.

That "small group of individuals" was the Jackson group, which was struggling to become viable. The group reached a peak of 99 people, but remained five short of reaching the viable number of 104.

SIERRA, WHO served on the convention's credentials committee, said the Jackson group would have been viable, but "we weren't treated fairly since we walked in. Never in my wildest dreams did I envision a travesty like that."

Jackson supporter Newman Williams agreed. "The Hart and Mondale people were really acting nasty and it shocked me," he said.

The McGovern delegation was not viable and most of its 38 members decided to switch to the Jackson group. After gaining that support the Jackson group needed only fifteen of the 25 uncommitted delegates to become viable. They got 10.

Jackson delegation chairwoman Stephanie Suttles said, "The 15 uncommitteds refused to change their position, so literally 15 people held us

In addition, a rules committee member tore up the ballots of five Jackson supporters who returned late from a reorganizing recess.

"These are the things that supposedly go on in communist countries and countries with dictators, but we saw it go on in Waterloo," Sierra said.

"A LOT OF people were hurt that See Convention, page 8

Chile asked to expel Nazi

SANTIAGO, Chile — West Germany and France Monday asked Chile to expel a former Nazi colonel so he can be brought to trial on charges he sent 97,000 Jews to their deaths in mobile gas chambers during World War II.

The German and French ambassadors to Chile, acting in the name of the European Parliament, officially requested the expulsion of Walter Rauff, 77, who has lived in Chile since 1958. He has been protected from expulsion by Chile's statute of limitations.

Earthquakes kill 3 in Italy

ROME - A strong earthquake followed by more than 20 lesser shocks rocked central and southern Italy Monday, killing at least three people, interrupting telephone and train service and causing tall buildings to sway. At least 40 people were injured by falling debris, mainly in remote towns in the Abruzzi Mountains south of Rome where the quake was centered. More casualties were expected once contact was made with other mountain

Six charged in Pole's death

Filing of the charges meant the controversial case, featuring allegations of police brutality and mistreatment of Solidarity sympathizers, could come to trial before the

Resister case review asked

WASHINGTON - The Reagan administration said Monday the Supreme Court should decide if the Justice Department can choose to prosecute only vocal resisters of draft registration.

The announcement by government lawyer Rex Lee came in response to a high court appeal filed by a draft resister. Lee said the court should rule whether prosecution of vocal registration opponents amounts to illegal "selective prosecution."

PACs favor incumbents 77%

WASHINGTON - According to a study of Federal Election Commission records by Congress Watch, special interest committees contributed $8.6 million to House and Senate candidates during the first three months of the year - with 77 percent of that money for incumbents

"Under the PAC system, those who are already in Congress are likely to stay in Congress," said Jay Angoff, a lawyer with Congress Watch, a group founded by Ralph Nader. Four House members running for the Senate received more than $100,000 during the campaign. They are Reps. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, Paul Simon, D-Ill., Phil Gramm, R-Texas, and Norman D'Amours, D-N.H.

Mayor files Daily News suit

PHILADELPHIA - Former Mayor Frank Rizzo, saying his reputation was damaged by stories about his appointment to a city job in March, filed suit Monday against the Philadelphia Daily News and four of its employees.

The suit sought more than $20,000 in compensatory damages, plus costs and punitive damages, for articles and an editorial cartoon concerning Rizzo's appointment as a $5,000-a-month consultant to the Philadelphia Gas Works, a job he relinquished after one day. Lawyers for the Daily News could not immediately be reached for comment.

Vegas strike gets mediator

LAS VEGAS, Nev. - Federal mediator Clint Brame, was brought in Monday in an effort to break stalemated negotiations between four unions and two dozen strikebound Las Vegas gambling resorts.

Several hotel-casinos advertised extensively Monday for permanant replacements in all work categories - including operating engineers who began honoring picket lines at 10 resorts last week in sympathy with strikers. Resort officials have expressed doubts that of a federal mediator will help the situation.

School district wins lawsuit over alleged assault on boy

By Patricia Reuter

The Iowa Community School District won a lawsuit Monday filed by a mother and her son who alleged that a former school district employee assaulted the boy, and the district was negligent in not providing him with "adequate protection."

Mary Kay Hull filed suit in Johnson County District Court Feb. 21 against the school district and John Stam, charging Stam "willfully assaulted and physically struck and battered" her son Bart Hull on Sept. 26, 1980.

Judge L. Vern Robinson of the 6th Judicial District ruled in favor of the school district and Stam, stating that, according to Iowa law, the statute of limitations had run out on filing such a claim.

Hull had requested an unspecified amount of compensation for physical injuries, pain, suffering and emotional distress she said her son had suffered.

A Burlington, Iowa, man filed a lawsuit in Johnson County District Court Monday against a Veterans Administration Medical Center employee, charging that the employee's negligence resulted in his arrest. Francis A. Pence filed the suit against William H. Lenihan, a VA hospital medical administrative assistant, charging that Lenihan called Coralville police Nov. 10, 1982 and requested that they arrest Pence According to the suit, Pence was at the hospital Nov. 10 for treatment which was not completed on that day. Student group plans drive to register voters

By Dan Hauser

Student apathy about elections will no longer reign on the UI campus if a group calling itself the Voter Registration Task Force '84 proves successful.

About 60 to 70 students from various student organizations on campus have joined efforts to reach a goal of registering half the UI student population by next fall.

Task Force Coordinator Mary Boone said the goal is not "unrealistic. People have been real receptive to it (the registration drive)." UI Voter Registration Director for the United Students of Iowa and UI Student Sen. Tracy Davis said USI has also formed a voter registration program at the University of Northern Iowa and Iowa State University. The UI task force sent out about 350 letters to different student groups asking them to submit two volunteers to work at least two hours during the fall semester setting up registration tables or speaking to student groups, Boone

THE GROUP'S letter asked for responses from volunteers by May 4. Boone said it has been a busy time with finals week, but response has been better than she had planned. She said she would like to see at least 100 to 150 groups get involved. Davis said the task force will also be doing a mass mailing to all of the incoming students this fall at the UI.

"I think it's a real good cause," Boone said. She said it is hard to find something more important than voter registration considering the presidential election coming Nov. 6.

She said in addition to the volunteers, the task force will have a central committee, which will be putting in most of the hours on the project.

This central committee will canvass the residence halls, the greek houses, and offcampus student residences. She predicts that registration will be easy in the residence halls and greek system because they will be able to set up tables in the area.

"OFF CAMPUS will be harder, but just as important," Boone said. To register offcampus students, she said, the task force will be setting up tables in the Union.

The group is also planning to get a "big name speaker" next fall at the UI. Boone said the task force would like to get the Rev. Jesse Jackson. She said the group is looking for a speaker who would appeal both to the politically active and the more politically apathetic students.

Davis said the group might also try for a popular, politically active actor like Ed Asner or Jane Fonda. He said he would like to see the celebrity visit each campus to draw registrants.

One problem with which the group will have to deal is students who wish to remain registered in their home districts. Boone said the task force will have to remind these people that they live in Iowa City nine months out of the year and Iowa City politics affect them more than their hometown politics.

Colleagues honor Laster's dedication

"We are grateful for Howard Laster's evenhandedness, good humor, willingness to listen to our ramblings on a non-stop basis, every day, and especially for his sensitive, humane concern for every member of his diverse constituency."

This tribute was bestowed on the outgoing dean of the UI College of Liberal Arts by James Van Allen, chairman of the UI Physics and Astronomy Department Monday during the last departmental executive officers meeting of the year.

Laster is retiring from his deanship because he has cancer, but will return to teaching in the Physics and Astronomy Department next spring.

Van Allen, speaking for the departmental executive officers, said, "A university professor has been defined as one who speaks otherwise ... For this reason ... being dean of a college of some 40 departments and schools and some 17,000 students must rank as one of the most difficult jobs in the world.'

Laster acknowledged the frustration of such a job during an interview with The Daily Iowan in April. "Sometimes when a dean gets busy, he doesn't get around to touching base with these people ... With all the distractions and fuss and bother that eat up some of the dean's time, it's important to step back and say, 'My God, the thing continues.'

Souhrada appointed '85 yearbook editor

The 1985 Hawkeye Yearbook will be under the leadership of Charles Souhrada, who hopes to improve the yearbook through "more extensive coverage of organizations.' "I would like to see all of the greek organizations in the yearbook, because a lot of them aren't. A lot of other organizations aren't, either," Souhrada said. He is a UI junior majoring in English and jour-

The UI's current 25-year lease on the Field Campus expires June 30, and the UI is battling the Iowa Conservation Commission for control of the 620 acres of woods and primitive grasslands north of Iowa City. The UI has leased the property from the corps for educational and recreational use by the UI In response to the corps's contention that the UI has not promoted the recreational use of the Field Campus, the UI administration asked UI Director of Recreational Services Harry Ostrander to draw up a proposal emphasizing the recreational possibilities at the Field Campus.

"I think they were somewhat overwhelmed in terms of the revised proposal" compared to the UI's initial proposal, which called for a continuation of the existing activities, Ostran-

Among the activities planned for public school students and community groups are summer day camps and sports camps in sailing, windsurfing and canoeing. Registration fees would be charged for the programs to offset the costs of renting equipment and hiring staff to run the camps.

Recreation Services also proposes instruc-tional programs in camping, sailing, windsurfing, canoeing, cross-country skiing and archery. Fees would also be charged for these programs to compensate for rental fees and staff wages.

IN FURTHER attempts to encourage public use of the Field Campus, Ostrander's department proposes keeping the property open for longer hours and making accessible to the public rental boating equipment previously available only to members of the UI Sailing Club.

UI officials predict the 1984-85 expenses to improve facilities at the Field Campus will be about $44,350. Improvements include construction of a new entrance gate and improv-

Candidate for seat in Iowa Senate sees advantages to being a student

While it is not unusual for a college student to have political ambitions, it is unusual when that student is a 52-year-old mother of six. Yet Beverly Hannon has decided to pursue such ambitions.

This fall, Hannon, a Democrat, will be challenging Republican incumbent state Sen. Merlin Hulse for the District 22 seat. She is currently a part-time student at the UI, working toward a bachelor of liberal studies degree.

Hannon, who lives in Anamosa, Iowa, said Monday, "I'm seeking the seat for positive reasons and not negative ones. I'm worried that fewer and fewer people are electing our public officials.

"I don't believe in a government by the minority. I believe in a government by the majority that listens to the minority. I hope my campaign is able to get people involved who usually don't get involved in political

HANNON, WHO will be unopposed in the primary, will concentrate her campaign on economic issues, particularly how the state may help small businesses. "I think the state must begin to take an active role in recruiting businesses to locate here," she

As for issues taken up by the latest session of the Iowa Legislature, Hannon said she is not in favor of spending public funds to build a world trade center in Des Moines.

As an alternative funding source, she said she would favor establishing a lottery in Iowa "only if nothing better comes along."

Hannon said the state should encourage economic development in Iowa in order to keep the students graduating from Iowa's universities in the state.

'When I'm down here at the university and I sit in a lounge and hear people talking about leaving the state for a job, it really troubles me. It makes you sit back and realize that there aren't too many opportunities here because of the economic Beverly Hannon, a part-time UI student in the liberal studies program, explains why she is challenging Republican incumbent Sen. Merlin Hulse for the state's District 22 seat. Hannon, who will be running unopposed in her primary, plans to concentrate on economic issues in her campaign.

Hannon said because of financial constraints she couldn't attend college when she was younger, but the time seemed right to further her education now. "The same day I put my sixth child on his bus for kindergarten, I drove to Cedar Rapids and enrolled at Kirkwood College," she said.

AFTER GRADUATING from Kirkwood, Hannon decided to continue her education at the UI, emphasizing the humanities and social sciences.

"I think being a student gives me many, many things in common with students,' she said. "I understand how important it is to try and find a job and how important it is to find funding in order to go to school. I think being a student will give me a unique perspective in the legislature."

The District 22 seat Hannon will be attempting to win represents Jones County, most of Cedar County and nine townships in Linn County.

Hannon has been active in local politics. She is a member of the Jones County Democratic Central Committee. In 1982, she was named one of the 12 Outstanding Iowa Volunteers by the Iowa Democratic Party. Hannon and her husband, David, are on the Jones County Steering Committee for Tom Harkin, who is running for the U.S. Senate seat currently held by Roger Jep-

College of Engineering to sponsor basketball game benefit for Pham

By Robyn Griggs

In an effort to raise money for Thuy "Tony" Pham, a UI senior electrical engineering major who needs $80,000 for a liver transplant, the UI College of Engineering will hold a benefit basketball game Thursday night at Carver-Hawkeye Former Iowa Gov. Robert Ray has been invited to the game as the guest of honor, and Joey O., a local acrobatic golf comedian, will perform a half time show. In addition, former Iowa basketball Coach Sharm Scheuerman will referee the game.

"WE'VE JUST GOT to do something, and we just felt like we should do it 'in-house' in the Electrical Engineering Department," Willey said.

ROBERT HERING, dean of the UI College of Engineering, will coach the mechanical engineering team, with assistance from C.J. Chen, chairman of the Energy Engineering Department.

Collins said the teams are taking the game very seriously. "Both teams are practicing — we run into each other at the Field House," he said.

Peace groups see growth, but little achievement

Despite Iowa's growing number of peace groups, state activists admit the peace movement has not been effective yet."

Ella Hartmann, a member of Peace Links, told an audience attending "The Management of Global Change" conference in Cedar Rapids last weekend that despite the efforts of organizations like hers, "Not one nuclear warhead has been dismantled."

"We must be honest and realize that we are a growing minority," Hartmann said.

The number of peace organizations, at least in Iowa, has grown significantly in the past two years. Eighteen months ago there were approximately 50 peace organizations in the state, said Dorothy Paul, spokeswoman for the Iowa City chapter of the Iowa Division of the United Nations Association. "The most recent survey we completed showed there are over 100 such groups now."
Paul, whose group helped sponsor the conference, said representatives

"Today's college students are more conservative," says UI junior Karen Rohrbaugh, "and the older, more educated people are kind of waiting for them to take over the cause because they have already given it their shot in the past."

from about 30 of these peace organizations attended last weekend's conference. "We don't have any official attendance records yet, but the amount of people that attended greatly exceeded anything we expected."

More than 30 national and international speakers - many representing peace organizations in the United States, Canada and England added a measure of prestige to the con-

THE MAJORITY of these speakers had a similiar message: an outcry from the American public is desperately needed if the international arms race is going to be brought under

"Unless we get the people involved nothing is ever going to happen," said William Epstein, a Canadian member of the United Nations Institute for

Training and Research. He added that

"thanks to (President) Reagan and (Defense Secretary) Weinberger the public has become more alarmed." Maxwell Stanley, president of the Stanley Foundation in Muscatine, told the conference-goers there is a "need to mobilize public opinion by putting pressure on Congress and the presi-

There is considerable room for mass demonstrations in the nuclear freeze movement," Murray said. Kharas stressed, "Public opinion plays an incredibly important role" in forming government policies.

While the speakers continually promoted the effectiveness a 'grassroots" uprising could have in controlling the arms race, some of the people attending the conference had questions about exactly what action they should take.

MICHAEL LUICH, an Iowa State University student and member of Students for a New Age, summed up the feelings of many of the people at the conference when he asked members of one of the discussion panels, "How can we educate ourselves? The newspapers are biased, the government is biased there is a terrible disease called ignorance that is strangling us all."

Murray urged concerned citizens to "read foreign journals as much as possible" as a method of increasing self-enlightenment in world affairs.

Another member of the panel,

Malcolm Harper, director of the United Nations Association in Great Britain and Northern Ireland. suggested individuals need to educate themselves by "reading, observing and traveling." On a broader level Harper told peace groups to "challenge the factual claims made by governments."

"By challenging these facts we are performing an important public service," Harper said. "It is the role of non-governmental agencies to ask questions, raise issues and discuss these things.

"EDUCATION ISN'T something imposed - it is available for those willing to go and get it."

Harper also stressed the importance of the peace movement remaining unified in its goals. "The different organizations have to try and work together and show their shared con-

In an effort to achieve this unity and to make the groups more effective in their aims, the conference featured a "grassroots networking" panel discus-ded to help group members learn about "writing letters and various other techniques useful to them."

Despite the enthusiasm and educational opportunities the conference provided, its overall effects on arms control and world peace will, probably be limited, one of the people who attended said.

KAREN ROHRBAUGH, a UI junior, attended the conference on Friday. "A lot of people come away from these meetings with a lot of enthusiasm," she said. "But when they start trying to educate people and realize how naive everyone is, it is easy to lose momentum.

Rohrbaugh also blamed a "growing conservatism in college students" as a hindrance to the peace movement in America.

"Historically, it is the young and well-educated who attend most of the demonstrations," she said. "But today's college students are more conservative and the older, more educated people are kind of waiting for them to take over the cause because they have already given it their shot in the past."

lowans to 'shield' Nicaraguan village

DES MOINES — A group of 18 lowans is planning to form a "human shield" around a Nicaraguan border village next week in an effort to prevent attacks by U.S.-backed rebels from Honduras.

The Iowans will live for 12 days alongside the residents of Jalapa, a village near the Honduran border, said Beverly Reddick, a spokeswoman for the Iowa Inter-Church Forum, which is sponsoring the trip.

The Iowans are scheduled to begin their trip to Managua May 13. The trip is part of a national plan to send

Branstad eyes drunken

DES MOINES - Legislation requiring stiffer penalties for drunken drivers has a chance of becoming law even though it is not as tough as he wanted, Gov. Terry Branstad said Monday

Branstad has threatened to veto the bill because the increased penalties are not as tough as he asked for and because it earmarks funds for a drunken driving victim restitution program.

Branstad supports the restitution program, but he believes designating revenues for particular items is badgovernment policy.

Democratic lawmakers last week promised to make the bill even tougher next year if Branstad signs the measure. Branstad is counting on promises, however, because the Democrats used that ploy last year on an unemployment compensation bill. Branstad signed a bill a year ago making changes Democrats wanted But promises to fix the bill this year to Branstad's liking went unfilled.

A bill designed to equalize pay among state employees with similar jobs is also on Branstad's list of veto possibilities.

The comparable worth bill passed by the legislature this year will require additional spending of an estimated $10 million a year for three years to equalize pay of state employees, mostly women, who are paid less than men holding similar jobs.

Pope safe after forced jet landing

MOUNT HAGEN, Papua New Guinea (UPI) — Pope John Paul II's jetliner made an emergency landing in the highlands of Papua New Guinea Tuesday after an auxiliary power unit failed, causing loss of cabin pressure, an aviation official said.

When the pope reached Mount Hagen, he mounted a thatch-roofed, red-carpeted altar surrounded by barebreasted highland women wearing grass skirts.

They may have traded their kaftans for herring bone and their bohemian digs for four-figure apartments, but not all graduates of the 1960s Student Movement have succumbed to the creeping complacency of this decade. In fact, some still preach resistance.

Carl Davison, a former national secretary of Students for Democratic Action, told a handful of listeners at the Union Friday "to begin as a militant minority."

Despite that word "militant," Davison's current philosophy of action is noticeably tamer than the one that closed down almost every U.S. university more than a decade ago.

"You can't do a rerun of the '60s," he said. While Davison hinted at the infighting responsible in part for the group's failure, he skipped the last chapter of SDS history. The group went out with both a wimper and a bang. By 1970, "the most powerful student-based organization in American history" had descended into what The Nation magazine called a "morose and paranoic" state. Rather than providing direction for the intercollegiate left, the SDS hierarchy lost student support by turning inward, splitting ideological hairs and dividing into factions. One of those factions, the Weather Underground, was linked to hundreds of bombings, including the explosion of a Greenwich Village townhouse in 1970 that killed several group

But Davison's participation in the successes and mistakes of a now lost left vindicate his remarks on campus causes today.

"You can't rely on spontaneity," he said. Student progressives in the 1980s must stress organization.

Indeed. Student opposition to "the system" needs to be as powerful today as it was in the 1960s. But at the same time it must be honed for boundaries - such as phenomenal tuitions and tight job markets - not present 20 years ago. Any large-scale movement expecting to succeed with that compromise will need to be scrupulously organized.

Since the March 20 Illinois primary, Walter Mondale has routed him in state after state. Hart's chances of gaining the Democratic nomination for president are fading and his campaign is losing its

After being trounced almost two-to-one in Texas, Hart trails Mondale 681 to 1,234, at latest count, in national convention delegates. Hart has been playing catch-up ever since the primary season started in Iowa on Feb. 20, but he needs nothing less than a clean sweep of the remaining primaries and caucuses if he is to have a chance to catch Mondale now.

Even if such a miracle occurred the best Hart could hope for would be a deadlocked convention. If he escaped that blood feud with the nomination in hand it would probably be at the cost of

The real reason Hart should drop out, however, has nothing to do with delegate counts. Unlike the Rev. Jesse Jackson's campaign, Hart has lost his spiritual punch.

Jackson never intended to win the nomination. Rather, he has set out to change the Democratic party. Winning delegates is only a vehicle toward achieving that goal. Hart, on the other hand, has had his eyes firmly fixed on the White House. His ideas were always a means of reaching that goal.

During the past two and a half months, Hart has made a number of worthwhile points. Contrary to both Mondale and President Reagan, he has not been afraid to tell Americans that the future will bring as many sacrifices as it does boom times. He has made Democrats aware that they will not win the presidency if they are unwilling to amend their New Deal/Great Society politics.

For better or worse the majority of Democrats have rejected Hart's message. If he bows out now he can return in 1988 as the prophet who was once scorned. For now, he should concede gracefully and work to elect Mondale. His only alternative is to attempt to force-feed his new ideas to a party that has little taste for them.

Or so it seemed. Underneath the cleanly-shaven scalp of the 12-year-old son was the mind of a boy dedicated to punk rock's most startling splinter movement. The movement is called "straight edge." Its advocation is

While most punkers seem to have adopted chemical vices as part of their repertoire, straight-edgers disavow drugs, liquor and smoking and look down on compulsive sexual behavior. Theirs is a form of asceticism rarely seen among working stiffs, let alone high school and college students.

As parents of a straight-edger, the two ex-activists said they supported their son's preference for leather jackets and skateboards over booze and dope. They didn't even mind his frequent visits to punk dance clubs.

But they conceded there were problems. Their son, for example, refused to let them smoke or drink in his presence. With the roles reversed, they found themselves stealing away from their children, wondering what ever happened to the libidinous '60s.

ONE REASON for their unusual predicament is the nationwide popularity of a punk rock band called, not insignificantly, Minor Threat. Though the four-member group disbanded last November, Minor Threat has remained for straight edgers what the Beatles once were for hippiedom: a model for a Straight edge, which MacKaye calls an anti-obsession, pro-positivethinking idea," is personal preference turned cultural phenomenon. It has attracted much of its mystique as a form of rebellion against convention ironically, the same way drugs became popular two decades ago.

"After the initial investigation ... Mackaye contends, "the kids just grew up taking drugs ... It became a nice crutch for everybody. Whereas before, it was kind of a challenge thing."

STRAIGHT EDGE, of course, has not gone without its own challenges. MacKaye admits that many of its initial followers have already given up life as a Boy Scout. And though several other bands have taken up Minor Threat's message, MacKaye says straight edge has spawned "a lot of response movements" (punk, you see, has as many as 40 different edges).

Yet the straight-edgers' biggest obstacle may lie in the cynicism of parents, teachers and other adults. "They say they like it," Mackaye says, "but I don't think they believe it's go-

Editorial alienation

To the editor:

Mr. Fajardo's editorial on "intelligent life forms" (DI, May 5) shows a disregard for the facts. The definition he gives for "alien" ("inconsistent, repugnant, adverse") does not appear in most dictionaries, although Webster's Third New International uses "repugnant" to define the adjective form of "alien."

This fault is minor compared to what Fajardo writes about the Supreme Court decision. The case was Immigration and Naturalization Services vs Herman Delgado et al. It was a class action suit filed by the employees of a California garment factory. The plaintiffs were all U.S. citizens or permanent resident aliens. The specific grievance was the legality of the INS agents coming into the plant, even with warrants and the owner's permission, and asking proof of residence of all the plant's

City grants boundary extension

Iowa City developer James Clark was granted a land boundary extension Monday by the Iowa City Council, clearing the way for him to apply for an estimated $900,000 in industrial revenue bonds.

Clark's attorney, Joseph Holland, told the council that Clark intends to build a $1.3 million, 27-unit housing project for the elderly at the intersection of Court and Dubuque streets, but refused to comment on whether the project would be scrapped if the council does not approve the IRB's.

"If you don't receive them (IRB's) will he still build this?" Councilor George Strait asked.

"That's a question we wouldn't want to have to answer," Holland said. "It would be up to Mr. Clark to say."

Although the council granted the boundary extension for the three-story apartments - to be called Jackson Square Apartments - it did not approve the $900,000 in IRB's.

Since 1982, the council has given Clark nearly $5 million in IRB's for five housing developments.

CLEMENS ERDAHL, mayor pro tem, said he was concerned that Clark will apply for IRB's before the city has established a new IRB policy. The new policy will provide councilors with guidelines concerning city requirements and federal laws for the granting of IRB's.

Erdahl said Clark was one of the major reasons the city decided to review its IRB policy. Clark applied for and received $850,000 in IRB's in January for the construction of an apartment complex at the intersection of Gilbert and Prentiss streets.

Erdahl and the majority of the council had asked whether Clark's past construction projects that were funded with IRB's have met federal guidelines in providing "20 percent of all housing to lower-income people." Federal law requires that 20 percent of a housing project funded by IRB's be designated for low-income families.

Clark had fulfilled the requirement by setting aside 20 percent of his projects for low-income families but those apartments were only "onethree-bedrooms," Erdahl said in

However, Erdahl said the elderly housing Clark is seeking to build "is not really covered under the (new) policy ... I see no problem with it." Six of the complex's one-bedroom apartments would have to be set aside for low-income senior citizens.

HOLLAND SAID he did not know what the rent would be for the 15 onebedroom and 12 two-bedroom apartments, but said rents of units for the elderly in Hills and east Iowa City are '$425- to $550-a-month ... but it's hard to compare.'

Despite the controversy over whether or not the complex would qualify for IRB's, Clark's plan received favorable remarks from the council. Councilor William Ambrisco said, "It would be a nice quality improvement ... it fills a need.'

Clark is expected to approach the council with an application for IRB's before the end of this month.

"Most of you are aware of how Jim (Clark) operates," Holland said.

ANCIENT OLYMPIA, Greece (UPI) - The Olympic flame began its trip to Los Angeles Monday after being lit by the light of the sun at the site of the ancient games in a ceremony attended by modern Greek priestesses.

During the 40-minute stadium ceremony, several dozen people protesting plans to use the torch in the United States to raise funds demonstrated outside the town hall in Ancient Olympia, 200 miles southwest of Athens.

Greek actress Katerina Didaskalou, posing as an ancient Greek priestess, carried the flaming Olympic relay torch into the ancient stadium where the first Olympic Games were held in

Royals' Brett inks lucrative lifetime pact

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) - The Kansas City Royals rewarded all-star third baseman George Brett for 10 years of service Monday with a lifetime of security.

The Royals signed Brett to a five-year contract extension with two op-tion years that will bind the left-handed hitting infielder to the American League club through the 1993 season. The contract also guarantees Brett employment by the club after his playing days are over in a front-office

As important as the length of the con-tract was the amount of the pact. When the contract takes effect in 1987, Brett will move into an elite group along with Gary Carter, George Foster, Steve Garvey and Dave Winfield in earning nearly $2 million per year.

THE PACT ALSO gives Brett part wnership of an apartment complex in Memphis with Royals co-owner Avron Fogelman, a real estate baron in that Tennessee city - "a nice little kicker." said Brett's brother Bobby, who serves as the player's agent.

"This lifetime contract will likely be considered one of the best contracts in the history of baseball," Fogelman said. "This contract insures the Royals, George Brett and our fans that ne will complete his career in Kansas City and be a part of our organization beyond his playing days.

The Royals have long been recognized for their ability to retain the nucleus of their key players, This lifetime contract reinforces and reaffirms that commitment."

BRETT, 30, IS A 10-year starter at third base for the Royals and for the last eight seasons has been the American League all-star at his position. He has won two batting championships and has a lifetime .316

Ironically, Brett was rewarded with the extension even though he has not played a single inning for the Royals this season. Brett continues to recuperate from a torn knee cartilage suffered during spring training and

"I'm really surprised," says Kansas City Royal George Brett about his contract extension, "because I haven't played yet. It would have been different if I was playing and having a great year."

doesn't figure to be available to the club until the end of May

The negotiations began at the end of spring training between Royals General Manager John Schuerholz and Bobby Brett after the third baseman had suffered the injury.

"I'm really surprised," George Brett said of the extension, "because I haven't played yet. It would have been different if I was playing and having a BRETT, WHO CURRENTLY is earning $900,000 per year and held out for a brief time during spring training of 1982 seeking just this sort of contract, was surprised on another count - the Royals themselves initiated the talks.

"That really makes me feel good," Brett said. "They initiated everything; we didn't ask for anything. They said we want you to have this money, we want you to stay in the organization after your career is over, we want you to have this and we want you to have that. The money was important but not as important as the commitment. They want me to be happy and stay here.

Brett captured the imagination of the American public when he chased .400 during the 1980 season. He wound up hitting .390 that year to lead the Royals into the World Series and earned American League Most Valuable Player acclaim.

New indoor practice facility deflates overcrowding

Iowa football teams haven't always gone without an indoor practice facility.

"I see no reason why it can't be used for all kinds of activities," Elliott said. "It will be used by many people."

One of the beneficiaries of the new structure will be the Recreation Building, which Elliott says is vastly overcrowded. Currently, the Iowa softball, baseball and football teams use the Rec Building for practice in inclement weather.

Oakland's Norris arrested on drug possession charge

OAKLAND, Calif. (UPI) - Oakland A's pitcher Mike Norris, sidelined for the season following shoulder surgery, was arrested Sunday for possession of cocaine, possession of marijuana for sale and possession of drug paraphenalia at an East Oakland motel, police

Police said he was arrested at the motel at 3:20 p.m., Iowa time, Sunday. Norris, the 1980 Cy Young Award runner-up, was released after posting bail of $9,500 Sunday night, officials

A's president Roy Eisenhardt said, "Obviously, the club will not have any comment at this time. We shouldn't comment."

Team members found out about Norris' arrest when they returned to Oakland Sunday night after losing three-straight games in Minnesota.

"I REALLY DIDN'T need to find this out after the weekend we've had," A's Manager Steve Boros said.

Norris, 29, has been sitting out the season while undergoing physical therapy. He underwent surgery Nov. 6 to repair nerve damage in season game since last Aug. 6.

Should Norris recuperate from surgery and is cleared to play next season, his status seems likely to be reviewed by the baseball commissioner's office pending the outcome of the arrest. Outgoing commissioner Bowie Kuhn has suspended seven players so far for involvement

Norris, 4-5 in 1983, has been battling recurring shoulder problems since 1981. His best season was in 1980 when he was 22-9.

Norris made a few appearances in spring training but had not been using training room facilities for therapy or rehabilitation at the Oakland Coliseum, club officials said.

A's left fielder Rickey Henderson, a close friend, said Norris was unhappy at not being invited to spring training.

"There was no way they shouldn't have let him come to spring training," he said. "He was

Islanders' focus concentrated on 'Drive for Five'

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (UPI) - The New York Islanders would like history to repeat itself and propel the team to its fifth-straight Stanley Cup.

However, the Edmonton Oilers are equally determined to bury the past, after last year's weak showing when they lost four-straight games to the Islanders in the Cup finals.

The Islanders meet Edmonton in the opener of their best-of-seven Stanley Cup finals Thursday night at Nassau Coliseum. Although New York is bruised by three tough series leading up to the final, the dream of the "Drive for Five" makes them forget

If the Islanders capture the Cup a fifth-straight year, they will equal the record set by the Montreal Canadiens in 1956-60.

"IT IS A DREAM to have the Stanley Cup right in front of you," said left wing John Tonnelli. "The 'Drive for Five' is very important to me. This is what my life is all about. I want it badly." Player-assistant coach Butch Goring, who joined the Islanders in a trade from Los Angeles in 1980 and helped bring the team the first of its four-straight cups, echoed Tonnelli.

I have been here five years, and if we win, it will be five straight and that has to mean something," Goring said. lucrative contracts. Instead of insuring that a given player will continue his excellent performance, the contracts, in most cases, backfire in their intent and end up hurting the athlete and his team. Because of the security provided by the contracts, most athletes don't feel that pressure to perform and turn lazy. And what was once an excellent athlete is now a mediocre or even poor player.

Craig Morton, a former NFL quarterback and now coach of the USFL's Denver Gold, when asked to explain his team's success, said that the reason his team is winning is because there are no players on his team with fat contracts.

THE PLAYERS ARE still in competition for their jobs and must play their best just to receive a paycheck. Morton, who played during a time when there were big contracts, simply thinks that the security given these players by the large contracts is ruining potentially great athletes.

And there are those fans who say that there is nothing that can be done to keep players salaries at a reasonable level, but that is not true.

It is the fans who pay those outrageous ticket prices which, in turn, help to shower the athletes with their gifts. But if the fans start boycotting some of these athletic events, that would force the owners into lowering prices and keep the athlete's salaries

We, as fans, must do our part to help do away with those large contracts because it would not only help the athletes and teams in their efforts to achieve success, but it would cause people to once again want to attend athletic events. And it would get rid of the present "take my money at the ball game" attitude and enable us to return to the good old-fashioned "Take me out to the hall game!"

Film flops fill 'Hall of Shame'

The Hollywood Hall of Shame: The Most Expensive Flops in Movie History. By Harry and Michael Medved. Putnam Books, 274 pgs., $8.95

ONTRARY TO popular belief, it's not easy to make a motion picture fiasco. Oh, of course, anyone can make a bad movie - all that takes is simple incompetence. But to make a full-scale, totally awful, belly-up-in-the-water, mind-boggling flop requires a lot of talent, a lot of nerve, a virtually inexhaustable supply of money — and it certainly doesn't hurt if you are a hopeless egomaniac. To quote the authors of the new book The Hollywood Hall of Shame, "it takes a certain genius to attempt a grand and glorious masterpiece and to produce instead an overstuffed golden turkey."

Harry and Michael Medved (also producers of two established bad film references, The 50 Worst Films of All Time and The Golden Turkey Awards) have bravely sacrified their dignity, and possibly their sanity, to preserve for all posterity the glittering examples of all that is garish, inane, repulsive, foolhardy and just plain dumb about the world's liveliest art.

For this examination of filmland foolishness, they have turned to a particularly rare breed of turkey. Actually, they aren't so much turkeys as lumbering white elephants conceived through a bizarre marriage of greed and arrogance, and nurtured in an atmosphere of permissive excess. In Hollywood Hall of Shame, they have brought to light some particularly extravagant follies, whose waste in time, effort, talent and, especially, money are so flagrant that they rank as the

Books

Goose, the Titanic and the Edsel.

SOME OF THESE beasts are glowing examples of Murphy's Law: if anything could go wrong, it did. And if something couldn't go wrong, it went wrong anyway. Though films like Darling Lili (Julie Andrew's attempt at a sexy new image), Doctor Dolittle (which featured Rex Harrison talking to animals) and Paint Your Wagon (which featured Clint Eastwood singing to trees) are unqualified flops, they are basically just overblown examples of usual Hollywood miscalculation and waste. They hardly seem worthy of the Brothers Medved's research or ire.

Others, however, are fascinating motion picture legends.

Item: Can't Stop the Music (1980). Producer Allan Carr reportedly spent more money on parties celebrating this glittering ode to those disco die-hards, The Village People, than the film made at the box office. The film featured Bruce Jenner's acting debut and was directed by Nancy (Rhoda's mom) Walker. If disco is dead, this film killed Item: Cleopatra (1963). The grandmama of all motion picture disasters turned out to be little more than a $44 million publicity stunt for star Liz Taylor. Originally budgeted at $2 million with Joan Collins as its star, Taylor joked she would only make the film if she were paid a million bucks. Someone believed her and the costs escalated from there.

Item: The Conqueror (1956). The film that broke the back of Howard Hughes's RKO Pictures came about because John Wayne wanted to play that cowpoke of the Gobi Desert, Ghengis Khan. Possibly the most lethal the extravagant attempts by film of all time, it was filmed in Utah near nuclear test sites and, as a result, nearly half of the cast and crew, including Wayne, were plagued with can-

Item: Heaven's Gate (1980-81). This $44 million, 41/2-hour episode of "Death Valley Days" became a major media event when it was recalled by its studio during its premiere run. Its total failure rocked Hollywood, sank United Artist Studios and nipped in the bud the fledgling career of its overblown director, Michael Cimino.

Item: Inchon (1982). Financed by the Rev. Sun Myung Moon (that is, by his hordes of poppy-peddling Moonies) is probably the only film in history paid for with suitcases stuffed with money.

Item: Intolerance (1916). Often considered a masterpiece, this long, boring and largely incomprehensible epic caused the pioneering genius of film, D.W. Griffith, to be evicted from his own studio by his creditors.

Item: Kolberg (1945). The last dying gasp of the Nazi propaganda machine, Joseph Goebbels diverted $2 million dollars and nearly 200,000 soldiers from the war effort in order to get this German Gone with the Wind completed. Unfortunately, the film's premiere kept getting postponed because the advancing Allies kept bombing out the movie theaters where it was scheduled. The film did, however, get a successful run in Argentina after the

AT BEST, what develops in Hollywood Hall of Shame are portraits of egotism gone mad; would-be movie moguls whose pursuit of the "greatest film of all time" blinds them to the foolishness of their endeavors. Sometimes these efforts are purely personal, such as Cimino's pretentious newspaper mogul William Randolph Hearst to make a superstar of his mildly talented mistress, Marion

Sometimes they take the form of fiendishly calculated political ploys such as Kolberg or Scipio Africanus, the pet project of Benito Mussolini. Others, like The Greatest Story Ever Told or Mohammed: Messenger of God (a pet project of Libya's Colonel Khadafi), find their manic movie makers justifying their excesses by claiming that it is divine will that their epics be completed.

All of this can be ludicrous, even slightly nauseating, in its pretentiousness, but at the same time it has an undeniable allure. These obsessive pursuits of the Holy Grail of film perfection weave tales of behind-thescenes intrigues that are far more fascinating than anything that ended up on the screen. And the Medveds do an admirable job of tracking down the facts and fictions behind the projects.

THEY HAVE retained the smug attitude they established in their first two volumes, but this time they approach their targets with a greater degree of scholarly interest. One can quibble: They seem to waste a lot of needless venom on the likes of Elizabeth Taylor, Liberace and Kate Smith, when the people behind the camera are obviously more to blame for failure, and any first-year film student could find more data on Intolerance than supplied here.

Still, true connoisseurs of bad movies should find this latest volume a worthy addition to their libraries and certainly no serious student of cinema can consider his education complete without demands for perfection at any cost, or of the magic medium

Rain Parade sleepwalks into '60s

By Greg Leanhart Special to The Daily lower

RITICS AND rock journalists have a tendency to want to categorize everything. These tags often become little more than inaccurate first impressions as bands having nearly nothing in common are grouped together by overanxious reviewers. This is the case with the so-called "new psychedelia" movement. Such dissimilar bands as R.E.M., the Bangles, Dream Syndicate, Violent Femmes, The Three O'Clock, Green on Red and The Rain Parade have found themselves under this banner at one time or another.

With Emergency Third Rail Power Trip, The Rain Parade make an honest attempt to capture the feeling of '60s pop and psychedelia. Fact is, of the above mentioned bands, The Rain Parade is probably the only one whose members "try" to fit the psychedelia label. David Roback, singer and guitarist, was the mentor of the Rainy Day LP, which pulled together members of other West Coast bands to record their favorite '60s psychedelic classics. Perhaps it was his obsession with looking backward for inspiration that led the other four members of The Rain Parade to "dismiss" him just after their first American tour.

Emergency Third Rail Power Trip, their first album, features a band smothered by its own good intentions. Nobody can accuse David Roback of not knowing his way around the recording studio, but sometimes his idea of psychedelia borders on sedation. For the most part, though, The Rain Parade's clever melodies are able to sneak through the misty mood.

Records

Roback, also producer of the album, keeps a tight rein on guitar-whiz Matthew Piucci, allowing him to jangle when he should be shearing through the mix. The rhythm corporation of Steven Roback on bass and drummer Eddie Kalwa never strays far from a slow leisurely stroll. Keyboardist Will Glenn sticks with dreamy organ embellishments, rarely venturing forth to solo. The band likes to call it "trance rock" and it does, indeed, border on sleep at times.

SLEEPING AND DREAMING, in fact, are popular themes running through the LP. "Talking in My Sleep," naturally enough leads off side one, and it's followed by "This Can't be

Today," where Roback muses: "This is all a dream/It won't go away/I only want to sleep/This can't be today. Lush backing vocal harmonies, softly whistling guitar chords and an ample supply of spatial echo create an ambiance that dominates the album. Nobody can accuse David Roback of not knowing his way around the recording studio, but sometimes his idea of psychedelia borders on sedation. For the most part, though, The Rain Parade's clever melodies are able to sneak through the misty mood.

It's when the game gets the best of Roback that the band suffers. His "Carolyn's Song" reeks with a strong scent of Roger Waters/Pink Floyd — a band that left their psychedelic days behind with Syd Barrett's crisped mind. Actually, too much imitation and not enough innovation describes the whole album rather well. The best moments occur when Piucci steps and "1 Hr 1/2 Ago," or when the "trance rock" is traded in for the livelier pop sound of "What She's Done to Your Mind," the best tune on the album. When The Rain Parade is preoccupied with being "psychedelic," they merely lack emotion. The flat effect of Roback's vocals grows so tiresome that even a symbol would be a welcome breakthrough toward some HERE LIES THE main problem with this LP. David Roback's obvious love for '60s pop and psychedelia is not used as an inspiration but rather as a blueprint. The Rain Parade seems to be suspended in time on this release, a result of trying too hard to emulate "authentic psychedelia." Another band, Green on Red, uses neopsychedelic keyboards only as trimming to help describe "the Brave Generation," as they call us. Violent Femme Gordon Garo's link to psychedelia is in his intensely personal poetry, which he puts to a more contemporary minimalist rock sound.

It's to be hoped that The Rain Parade, now out from under the control of David Roback, will wake up and utilize what is going on around them right now. As they stand on Emergency Third Rail Power Trip, they are relics of an era in which they were never par-
