Iowa high school grads prefer college, military

By Wendy Rosche
Special to The Daily iowan

A majority of 1982 Iowa high school graduates attended college the following year, but more young people also opted for military careers as a means of finding college money, an Iowa Department of Public Instruction study has found.

Fifty-one percent of the 40,751 students who graduated from Iowa high schools in 1982 went to college the next year, while 6 percent attended a trade school. Only the classes of 1969 and 1970 sent larger percentages of students to higher education during the 14 years the DPI has kept tabs on graduates.

The lowest percentage of students moving on to college came in 1973 and 1974 when the Vietnam War had ended and the state's farm economy was booming.

Of the 1982 graduates, 21 percent enrolled in the state's three universities, more than 18 percent chose community colleges and 10 percent went off to private colleges.

MIKE DONNELLY, a counselor at Regina High School in Iowa City, said a large majority of graduates at that school are choosing to attend either a two- or a four-year college.

Since 1982, the number of Regina High School graduates opting for college in the fall has risen from between approximately 67 to 73 percent to about 80 percent.

Donnelly said the high school's environment was positive toward further education at Regina and that parental influence was a big factor. The fact that Regina students are surrounded by the UI may also play a part in greater interest in college.

Bill Mitchell, a counselor at Iowa City West High School, said the number of Iowa City West graduates attending college is about 11 percent higher than the state average.

Mitchell added that the UI has an influence on the students' decisions. "It makes everyone education-minded," he said.

About 5 percent of Iowa high school graduates joined the military in 1982, the highest number since 1971. The study found that many intended to use service in the armed forces as a route to attend college.

Sgt. Reginald Nelson, an army recruiter in Iowa City, said in the past seven years he has seen a definite increase in the number of high school students deciding to enlist with the military.

HE ATTRIBUTES much of the recent interest in a military career to the Army college fund, which can contribute up to $20,000 to a student's education.

More students may be joining the Army now because high school graduates are not as influenced by the memory of the Vietnam War, Nelson added.

"Personally I feel that the stigma of Vietnam has died down," he said. "There has been a resurgence of patriotism." The number of 1982 high school graduates selecting farming careers slid to barely 4 percent, compared to 5 percent during the middle and late 1970s.

The number of full-time homemakers fell from 6 percent 10 years ago to 3 percent of the 1982 graduates.

Giles Smith, DPI chief of guidance services, does not believe the statistic indicates students were less interested in home and family, but that more who set up households after graduating in 1982 also were employed outside the home.

He credits the desire for high-paying jobs and parental guidance for increased college attendance.

Shuttle cleared after bugs repaired

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — The troubled space shuttle Discovery, the nation's newest billion-dollar space freighter, was scheduled to flash away from its ocean-side launch pad at 7:35 a.m. Iowa time — two months behind schedule — for a revised six-day mission to put the nation's shuttle program back on track.

Countdown clocks at the Kennedy Space Center began ticking right on schedule at 6:15 p.m. Wednesday at the minus 11-hour mark.

Discovery's first two launch attempts in June ended in failure because of a broken computer and engine trouble. A third attempt had been scrubbed because of problems with a computer system that controls critical launch events.

THE ORBITER was cleared for flight Wednesday afternoon after extensive tests to work the bugs out of the crucial software.

"We've said from the very first flight it's a very complicated vehicle, and it's an amazing vehicle," shuttle commander Henry Hartsfield said in an interview Wednesday after a relaxing spin in a T-38 jet trainer.

"When you think about the complexity of it, how all the little pieces have to work together, we're still learning a lot about it," he said. "You've got to expect that. We'll be learning a lot about on flight 100."

Hartsfield said co-pilot Michael Smith, who also flew a T-38 Wednesday, and crew members Judy Resnik, Steven Hawley, Richard Mullane and Charles Walker were disappointed by the postponement but approved the delay decision.

Troubleshooters decided Tuesday night they needed more time to check the tricky computer programs that control two onboard launch timers.

B-1 bomber crashes in test flight

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (UPI) — An Air Force B-1 jet bomber, one of only four ever built, crashed Wednesday in the Mojave Desert, killing the pilot and injuring two crew members, officials said.

The Air Force said the unarmed intercontinental jet was on a low-altitude, low-speed test flight when it crashed at 10:30 a.m. about 10 miles northeast of the sprawling Southern California base.

Killed in the crash was Tommie Douglas Benefield, 55, a test pilot for Rockwell International, the manufacturer of the bomber, the coroner's office said.

Master Sgt. Wally Ross said all three crew members were in the "ejection capsule," which "successfully ejected" from the craft before the crash. He said it was not known how Benefield was killed.

A new prototype of the plane scheduled to be introduced next week, the B-1B, will have individual ejection seats instead of the capsule.

Airman 1st Class Tom Barnes said there were no weapons aboard the jet.

"IF THERE WERE any bombs on it, they were inert," Barnes said. "We don't do that sort of thing here. This is a test flight facility."

The injured airmen were flown to the hospital at Edwards, the Air Force said. Their conditions were not immediately available and their names were not released pending notification of relatives.

Lt. Col. Alan Sabsevitz said it was the first crash of a B-1 bomber.

"The capsule with three crew members ejected upward and parachuted to Earth," he said. "A qualified board of officers will be appointed to investigate. Until then, it (the cause) is pure conjecture."

Sabsevitz said the plane was the second B-1 bomber ever built and was being used to study handling characteristics and avionics for the new B-1B.

He said Wednesday's test was scheduled to last three hours, 40 minutes, but the jet crashed a little over an hour into the flight.

It was the 127th test flight of the B-1 series, which began in 1974. The Air Force has described the development of the planes, which cost up to $40 million each, as "the most successful bomber test program in history."

THE CRASH OCCURRED in a desolate area near the Kern-San Bernardino county line, approximately 80 miles northeast of downtown Los Angeles. The explosion sparked several small brush fires.

Kern County Fire Capt. David Goodell, who arrived on the scene about 45 minutes after the crash, said "wreckage was strewn all over the place."

"The plane looked as though it was destroyed," he said.

The burning jet sent a "large, black column of smoke" into the sky, said San Bernardino fire spokesman Thomas Barnes.

"We are investigating an incident," said Air Force Sgt. Gerry Ditchfield. "We are trying to piece that together. We have had an incident but we don't know what it is."

After the crash, two military jets circled overhead, along with a California Highway Patrol helicopter, Barnes said.

THE PLANE WAS a B-1A version of the bomber that was produced during the Carter administration. It was one of only four built before President Carter scrapped the program in 1977 because it was too expensive.

President Reagan resurrected the program in 1981.

Renewed fall ceremony emphasizes uniqueness

By Denny Pope
Special to The Daily iowan

The purpose of education is to build upon an individual's "uniqueness," James Van Allen, chairman of the UI Physics and Astronomy Department, told UI students and faculty members Wednesday morning at the UI's Fall Opening Ceremony.

"Each of us has a greater or lesser capability for combining what we do now to develop a course of action, herein lies the creativity and uniqueness of the individual. And the central purpose of education is to enrich and heighten that uniqueness," he said.

Van Allen spoke on behalf of the faculty at the ceremony, in which UI administrators and collegiate deans, had in academic attire, assembled on the steps of the Old Capitol to mark the start of the academic year. This year marks the return to this UI tradition, which was begun in the early part of the century but discontinued in 1968.

VAN ALLEN PARALLELED the academic year to the four seasons of the year.

"These are the basic rhythms of nature to which we have become adapted," he said. "The academic year has its own special rhythm geared to the astronomical calendar, but has a different phase. The principal culmination of our year — its harvest season — occurs in May."

He said the result of this "harvest season" is the "formation of fresh aspirations and fresh objectives" in the individual.

Using a remark from the late George Gallup, a UI graduate and famous pollster, Van Allen said, "There are four billion persons in the world and hence there are at least four billion different ways of leading one's life."

"This university provides each of you an increased basis for deciding how to do so," he added. "On any Wednesday morning, there are as many as 300 different courses in progress all within a few hundred yards" of the Pentacrest.

Larry Lassiter, a UI senior from Des Moines and president of the Collegiate Associations Council, represented the student body at the ceremony. He stressed throughout his speech that students should become involved and pursue interests inside and outside of the classroom.

"The University of Iowa was created to give students a way to pursue academic excellence," he said. "And I'm here today to suggest to you that a successful academic career is not one that is confined to the classroom."

"THE UI OFFERS a variety of opportunities to expand your interests and abilities," Lassiter added. "And if you really wish to become truly educated, you owe it to yourself to get involved."

Lassiter also pointed out that students are citizens as well and "can make a difference at state and national levels — all you have to do is register and vote."

To help insure this, Lassiter said part of the "largest national student voter registration drives in the history of our country" will occur on the UI campus this fall.

"If all 20 million students across this country get together and vote, we will be able to erase the shame of being the age group that votes the least," he said.

Lassiter also said he believes that if a large number of UI students vote, strong state and federal support for higher education is likely.

The ceremony also featured Jorie P. Graham, a visiting lecturer in creative writing in the UI Writers' Workshop, who read a small poem by Robert Frost.

GRAHAM SAID another effect of knowledge is that it can "make you feel less lonely," adding that the poem addressed this issue and describes how "elusive knowledge can be."

UI President James O. Freedman briefly concluded the ceremony by calling it a "symbolic beginning such as that of the lighting of an Olympic torch."

"It reminds us that the history of the University of Iowa's 138th year is about to be created," Freedman added.

The ceremony dates from 1907, when a total student body of only 2,000 was welcomed into the academic year in MacBride Hall.

In 1923, after the student population became too large for indoor facilities, the ceremony was moved near the Old Capitol.

James Van Allen addresses students as UI President James Freedman looks on during the Fall Opening Ceremonies on the Pentacrest Wednesday.

U.S. double agent sentenced

KAISERSLAUTERN, West Germany — A U.S. Air Force computer specialist who claimed he sold defense secrets to the East bloc to become a double agent for the West was sentenced to 10 years in prison, a military spokesman said Wednesday.

Sgt. Francisco de Asis Mira, 24, was convicted Tuesday by an Air Force court martial of selling to East bloc agents photographs of code books and maintenance schedules for air defense radar installations in West Germany, Air Force Capt. Ralph McNally said.

Soviets develop new rifle

LONDON — The Soviet Union has developed a new version of its advanced AK-47 Kalashnikov rifle that is possibly better than anything used by Western forces, the authoritative British defense publication Jane's said Thursday.

The latest edition of Jane's Infantry Weapons annual said the new 5.45 mm AK-74 assault rifle was "light, tough, and easy to shoot" — ideal for the Soviet style of infantry fighting, which uses bursts of sustained fire rather than carefully aimed shots.

Sudan rebels ambush troops

KHARTOUM, Sudan — Separatist guerrillas claimed Wednesday they ambushed a Nile riverboat ferrying troops and supplies, killing 274 of the 390 soldiers aboard, but Sudan's government said only four troops were slightly wounded.

It was the second attack in six months on a river steamer in predominantly Christian southern Sudan, where rebels seek to establish an independent state from the Moslem north of the country in the Horn of Africa.

Weather aids firefighters

HELENA, Mont. — Cooler temperatures and lighter winds gave an army of more than 5,000 firefighters a chance Wednesday to contain some of the blazes that have already blackened 150,000 acres of timber and grassland across much of Montana.

While ground crews had two major range fires in the southeast corner of the state nearly encircled, airplanes and helicopters loaded with retardant were being used to hold the line on some of the 16 other major fires burning in virtually every other part of the tinder-dry state since Saturday.

UAW may strike GM, Ford

DETROIT — The United Auto Workers Wednesday selected both General Motors Corp. and Ford Motor Co. as strike targets in 1984 negotiations — only the second time in 14 years the union has picked dual targets.

UAW President Owen Bieber said both firms were chosen because the union was dissatisfied with contract proposals delivered Tuesday that did not address the UAW's twin goals of job security and substantial wage increases.

Klindt trial in jury's hands

KEOKUK — Iowa's chainsaw murder case is "historic" because of complex statistical evidence and the taped testimony of the alleged murder victim, attorneys on both sides of the case said as jurors began deliberations Wednesday.

The seven men, five woman jury began deliberating about noon Wednesday after stirring closing arguments capped the 12-day murder trial of Davenport chiropractor James Klindt for allegedly killing and dismembering his wife.

Coralville woman reports assault; claims attacker broke into trailer

By Greg Miller
Special to The Daily Iowan

A 25-year-old Coralville woman reported to police she was sexually assaulted early Wednesday morning.

According to Coralville police, a white male, approximately 30 years old and wearing camouflage clothing, entered the woman's home at Western Hills Trailer Court about 2:40 a.m. Wednesday. He then tied the woman up, threatened her with a knife and sexually assaulted the woman.

The man is described as being 5-foot-9, slender, wearing glasses, a stocking cap and black camouflage paint on his face.

The woman was treated for cuts at UI Hospitals and released.

IN TWO SEPARATE incidents Tuesday night, two other women reported to Iowa

Police

City police that they were assaulted.

At approximately 8:45 p.m. Tuesday a woman said she was assaulted as she was walking on Union Place.

The assailant, who was wearing a T-shirt around his face, stopped the woman and verbally threatened her. The woman screamed and got away.

The man was described as a white male, 5-foot-7 or 5-8, slim build, slouched shoulders, blond medium length hair and wearing blue jeans.

At about 8:30 p.m. Tuesday another woman was verbally assaulted as she was walking near the Summit Street bridge by a man carrying a toy gun and wearing a bandanna over his face.

The man appeared from the east side of the bridge near a white house, pointed the toy gun at her and verbally threatened the woman.

The woman could only see the man from the waist up, but described him as a white male in his teens with ear-length blond hair.

Police are investigating the incidents.

Report: Barry Jackson, co-chairman of the Johnson County Republican Party, reported that both his license plates had been stolen off his 1979 Buick early Wednesday morning.

The stolen plates were replaced by green paper plates that say "MONDALE." Iowa City police believe this was a prank because of Jackson's political position.

Theft: Matt Olson of 4438 Burge Residence Hall reported his stereo, valued at $165, stolen from 34 Lounge Tuesday afternoon.

Iowa City man charged in killing

By Patricia Reuter

Trial information was filed in Johnson County District Court Wednesday on Ronald Lee Kulow, 36, 1024 E. Washington St., who was arrested and charged with first-degree murder Aug. 18.

In lieu of a preliminary hearing, County Attorney J. Patrick White filed the statement that accuses Kulow of murdering his 27-year-old wife, Deborah A. Kulow.

According to the police report filed with the court, Kulow walked into the Iowa City Police Department Saturday and told officers he had just cut his wife's throat. Police searched Kulow's apartment and found Deborah dead.

Kulow was arrested and taken to UI Hospitals for treatment of a cut hand that he told police he received during the incident.

Kulow is being held in the Johnson County Jail under $250,000 bond.

Courts

AN IOWA CITY MAN filed a lawsuit in Johnson County District Court Wednesday against the City of Iowa City and two city department administrators, charging he was unfairly demoted and his wages were frozen.

Steve Ward filed the suit against city Human Relations Director Anne Carroll and Gerald Stockman, superintendent of the city's streets and refuse department, stating they acted "individually and in conspiracy with one another" to demote him in his job in the streets department and freeze his wages on March 7.

The suit states Carroll and Stockman required Ward to operate a street sweeper "when (it) was painful and dangerous to (Ward's) health." Ward also accuses the two administrators of not checking with his doctor to determine if running the sweeper would injure his health.

Other allegations against Carroll and Stockman include threatening Ward that it would be "unwise" to obtain a restricted medical release to work and "coercing" him into obtaining an unrestricted release.

THE SUIT ALSO STATES that Carroll and Stockman falsely led Ward to believe his doctor authorized him to operate the sweeper for up to two weeks at a time.

In the suit Ward maintains the conduct of the two administrators was "grossly negligent," that it was "willfully and maliciously" done with disregard for Ward's rights and safety and that it interfered with his contract with the city.

Ward is asking for an unspecified amount in actual and punitive damages as compensation for physical injury, mental anguish and emotional distress, loss of earnings and loss of job security and advancement.

UI instructors can drop 'no-show' students sooner

The UI College of Liberal Arts has implemented a new rule that will allow instructors to "drop" students who do not attend classes they are registered for during the first eight calendar days of the semester.

UI College of Liberal Arts Acting Dean Gerhard Loewenberg said although the new rule is designed to ease overcrowding in classes, "it is plausible under any circumstances."

The rule "will allow instructors to presume that students will not be in their class if they do not attend or do not contact the instructor within the first eight days," Loewenberg said.

In the past, UI students not attending the classes they were registered for had until the tenth week of the semester to drop the class.

Anti-Reagan rally today

Joe Johnston, Democratic candidate for Iowa's 3rd District, will speak at a rally for anti-Reagan students today at 12:20 p.m. on the Pentacrest.

The rally is being organized by the Students Against Reagan coalition, a UI student group working to register and educate voters opposed to President Ronald Reagan.

The rally will also feature speeches from several individuals, including representatives of the Rainbow Coalition and the National Organization for Women. Tess Catalona, an Iowa City political activist, is expected sing at the rally.

Johnston also plans to speak with senior citizens during a meeting at Lantern Park Care Center in Coralville today, before touring the business districts of Oxford and Solon. Tonight he will attend the Johnson County Chamber of Commerce's annual Farmer-Business Barbeque from 5-8 p.m. at the Johnson County Fairgrounds.

Students let out early due to hot temperatures

Due to hot weather, the Iowa City school system released its students approximately one hour early yesterday on the second day of school.

The district currently has 4,405 children in elementary schools, 1,198 in junior highs and 2,456 in the senior high schools, but administrators anticipate more students will enroll during this week.

These figures show an increase in elementary school children but a decrease in the enrollment of both junior and senior high schools.

Heritage Inc. to buy CableVision

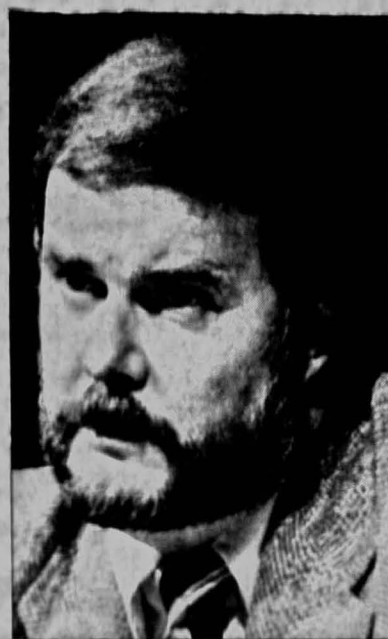

By Dawn Ummel
Chief Reporter

Heritage Cablevision Inc. of Des Moines received the approval of the Iowa City Council Tuesday night to purchase Hawkeye CableVision, but a proposal by Heritage to raise cable rates could depend on what local cable TV subscribers have to say.

"Heritage agreed to back the city in applying to the Federal Communications Commission for a 2 percent franchise fee increase," Mayor John McDonald said.

In exchange for the franchise fee increase from 3 percent to 5 percent, the agreement between Heritage and Iowa City would raise the basic rate of cable TV service by 31 to 40 cents a month. The current monthly cost is $8.90.

"The council members will approve the transfer" of the cable franchise to Heritage, McDonald said, "but we'll wait until a public hearing on the rate increase" before the city gets a larger franchise fee or subscribers pay higher rates for basic service.

John McDonald

city's right to approve a cable rate increase without first hearing from cable subscribers.

"It bothers me to do this without a public hearing," Councilor Larry Baker said at Monday's informal meeting.

City Manager Neal Berlin advised the council its chances of successfully petitioning the FCC for a franchise fee increase were slim if there was no revenue from the rate increase to support the higher franchise fee.

"The likelihood of the FCC approving a franchise fee increase is limited without the rate increase," Berlin said Monday. "This kind of adjustment is necessary to get FCC approval."

Bill Terry, chairman of the city's Broadband Telecommunications Commission, told the council the rate increase is a "compromise to get the things we want," such as more local access through additional revenue from the franchise fee.

McDonald said the Iowa City cable system is "unique because all revenue generated from the franchise fee goes back into the cable system" to pay for local access channels.

"NONE OF IT is transferred into general funds for the day-to-day operation of the city," he said.

The council's approval of the cable franchise sale ends a seven-month attempt by Heritage to buy the local system from American Television and Communications Corp. of Denver for $11.7 million.

Hawkeye CableVision has about 13,000 subscribers in Iowa City, Coralville and University Heights.

In June, the council turned down its option to purchase the cable system under an agreement with ATC that gave the city the first opportunity to buy the franchise. However, the council still was required to approve the sale of Hawkeye CableVision to another party.

One point originally proposed by the Broadband Telecommunications Commission in its negotiations with Heritage was a freeze on basic cable rate increases for 18 months.

However McDonald said Tuesday, "I don't think any of the council members or the commission members were naive enough to think we could get all 11 points" originally negotiated with Heritage.

Hospitals adjust to fixed pay plan

By Jeff Eichenbaum
Staff Writer

UI Hospitals officials say a newly implemented federal repayment program for Medicare patients will force the hospital to operate in "a more business-like manner," but Director John Colloton also expressed reservations about the new plan.

Under a new system known as the Diagnosis Related Groups Prospective Payment system (DRGs), hospitals treating patients covered by federally-sponsored Medicare insurance are being paid a flat rate for treatment.

According to Ken Yerington, director of financial management and control at UI Hospitals, the new plan — intended to reduce federal government costs — categorizes hospital procedures into one of more than 400 different "diagnostic-related groupings," then repays hospitals a flat rate for treatment based on the category.

The new system, which went into effect July 1, replaced the "retrospective reimbursement system." Yerington said with that system, the hospital was paid an estimated amount at the time of treatment and a final settlement at the end of the year.

COLLTON SAID, "I thought it was time to convert to a prospective payment program and get off the cost-based system," because the prospective payment program offers "more incentives" to a hospital to contain costs.

But he added that although he favored the change, he wasn't sure whether the DRG system should have been implemented "across the board."

Instead, he said using the system on an experimental basis might have been the best way to gauge its effectiveness, rather than "trying to experiment while the system is in effect across the nation, which is a pretty adventuresome undertaking."

Colloton is a member of the Prospective Payment Assessment Commission, an active national commission formed by the U.S. House of Representatives to review the Medicare program's DRG Prospective Payment system.

He said he feels there is "not enough evidence in yet" to determine whether the system is working, but several national studies are underway and sufficient information will soon be available.

UNDER THE NEW system, if a patient has an operation costing the hospital $2,500, the repayment might be a flat rate of $3,000, so it appears that the hospital has made a profit.

But Yerington added that another patient incurring the same operation might be in worse shape, or suffer complications, raising the cost to $5,000 or more and the hospital would still be paid the flat rate of $3,000. Under the Medicare policy, patients cannot be charged, so the hospital could lose money.

Yerington said to prevent any shortfalls, "the hospitals will have to adjust their operations to fall within the amount of revenues they are able to collect."

A review of services is necessary, he said, "to make sure they're not inappropriately used," and to assure the most efficient use of all services.

However, Yerington stressed that "most hospitals will provide the amount of care that is absolutely needed, and try and conserve in areas that don't directly affect patient care," such as administration and maintenance.

"YOU'RE GOING to look at those areas first and look at your direct patient care second," he said.

The federal government is saving money on the new payment system by limiting the total amount they will pay for Medicare patients, Yerington said. Medicare is the federal government's insurance plan for patients 65 or older and for persons qualifying for disability under the Social Security law.

"It's conceivable that you could have a Medicare patient who is 10 or 15, but it's because of the type of disease they have... generally, it's people 65 or older," he said.

"In essence, they're (the federal government) saying, 'We have so much money to spend for health care — for the Medicare program — and we're going to adjust our payments... so that we fall within that amount'."

Limiting insurance coverage in this manner is "bringing economic pressures to bear," he said, and "forcing all hospitals to look at their business practices, their modes of operation... to try to achieve the efficiency that's possible."

"This isn't necessarily bad — you just have to be more critical of what you're doing, and ask if it's cost-justified," Yerington said.

Union roofers stop work on law school

By Kirk Brown
Chief Reporter

Construction on the UI's new College of Law building was halted Wednesday morning by union roofers protesting the presence of a non-union roofing contractor on the job site, a UI official said.

Irving Hasler, associate director of UI engineering and architectural services, said the union roofers stopped work on the $21 million project by displaying an "informational picket" protesting the UI's contract with a non-union roofing contractor, the Townsend Roofing and Sheet Metal Co. of Coralville.

Although Hasler said UI officials had heard rumors that the job site may be picketed by the union workers, he explained the UI "does not usually get involved in disputes between union and non-union workers" because "we don't have any authority to do so."

"I strongly suspect work will resume tomorrow morning and this whole thing will blow over," Hasler said.

Gary Wolfe, president of Roofers Local 182 of Cedar Rapids, could not be reached for comment, but a spokesman said he was in Iowa City Wednesday picketing at the construction site.

Attempts to contact Carroll Townsend, owner of the Townsend Roofing and Sheet Metal Company, were also unsuccessful.

Kevin Bistick, a construction manager with Shive-Hattery & Associates of Cedar Rapids, said picketing by union members is common on most construction sites. But, he added, "This is the first time it has happened on this job in the 14 months we have been working."

Bistick estimated that between 85 and 100 construction workers were affected by the work stoppage.

DOT may file photos to find Iowa children

AMES (UPI) — The Iowa Department of Transportation may photograph and fingerprint about 50,000 children annually at drivers' licensing offices to help parents locate children in cases like that of two missing newspaper carriers.

Gordon Sweitzer, director of the DOT's motor vehicle division, said the program would be directed to help parents and law enforcement agencies find missing children like Johnny Gosch and Eugene Martin.

Gosch was 12 years old when he vanished Sept. 5, 1982, as he was about to begin his Des Moines Sunday Register paper route. Martin, 14, disappeared earlier this month under similar circumstances.

An extensive nation-wide search is currently being conducted in collaboration with agencies around the country designed to aid officials in the search for missing children.

The most recent advance in the massive search attempt has been to print caricatures of both Gosch and Martin on paper bags used by grocery stores. Gosch is pictured as he would appear today, two years after his disappearance.

Sweitzer said the DOT is in a "ready-made" position for the statewide project because it has proper equipment and trained staff in all 99 counties. He estimates the program would cost about $200,000 annually.

He made the suggestion Tuesday, when the commission held a preliminary discussion on its budget package for the 1985 legislative session.

H & R Block Income Tax Course Begins Sept. 10th

Thousands of people with spare time are earning money as tax preparers in the growing field of Income Tax Service. H & R Block is offering a Basic Income Tax Course starting Sept. 10th. Classes will be held at the H & R BLOCK offices in Iowa City and Coralville.

For six weeks students will study all areas of tax preparation and receive actual experience in preparing individual returns. Experienced Block personnel will teach current laws, theory and application as practiced in their offices coast to coast. There is a classroom lecture on each subject and practice problems at every level. The course is programmed to teach students increasingly complex tax problems as study progresses. Students find this course interesting and challenging.

Anyone may enroll. There are no restrictions or qualifications of any kind. The course is ideally suited for housewives, retired persons, teachers or anyone wanting to increase his tax knowledge.

While qualified graduates of the course may be offered job interviews they are under no obligation to accept employment with H & R BLOCK. There are franchises available to residents of small cities as well as job opportunities locally.

The modest fee charged for this course includes all textbooks, supplies and tax forms necessary for completion of the school. Certificates are awarded to all graduates.

Registration forms and brochures for the Income Tax Course may be obtained by contacting the H & R Block Office at 308 East Burlington Street, Iowa City, Phone 354-1750.

Broadcasting funds vetoed by Reagan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan, warning Congress is increasing support for public broadcasting "by too much too fast," vetoed $238 million in advance fiscal 1987 funding Wednesday for the Corporation for Public Broadcasting.

In a message to the Senate, Reagan said the 49 percent hike proposed for 1987 "cannot be justified" and insisted the spending levels proposed in the bill "are incompatible with the clear and urgent need to reduce federal spending."

His action will force Congress to challenge his veto after its Labor Day recess or pass a scaled-down authorization bill more suitable to his wishes in order to ensure continued federal support for public broadcasting.

"I must also stress that my firm insistence on scaling back this bill to more fiscally responsible levels in no way jeopardizes the continued operations of public broadcasting stations across the nation," Reagan said.

Deputy Press Secretary Larry Speakes said a figure closer to $200 million for the bill would be acceptable to Reagan.

THE ISSUE at stake, the president said, "is really one of long-range fiscal prudence."

"Federal spending for public broadcasting would be increased by too much too fast" by the bill, Reagan said, stressing that "ample appropriations" have already been enacted for fiscal 1985 and 1986 to guarantee funding for at least the next 25 months.

"Given the magnitude of the deficit cuts that will be needed in the years ahead," Reagan said, "I do not believe we can justify locking in public broadcasting funding levels for 1987-1989 that are so obviously excessive. To do so would be wholly inconsistent with our pledge to slow the growth of spending and reduce the size of the deficit."

The veto statement was issued a short time after Reagan announced he had set aside his fiscal objections to another bill by signing legislation to provide federal money for state mineral research institutes.

The mineral research bill was judged by the White House to be a poor target for a veto because of its relatively low cost — less than $10 million this year — and its strong backing on Capitol Hill.

THE CPB AUTHORIZATION vetoed by Reagan was a compromise proposed by Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz. The measure had wide bipartisan support.

CPB President Edward Pfister called the action by Reagan a "serious setback."

"My reaction is one of sadness personally," Pfister said. "My disappointment will be shared by the Congress, by public broadcasters, but I think most of all, by the American people."

The CPB is a private, non-profit corporation authorized by the Public Broadcasting Act of 1967 to develop non-commercial public radio and television services for the nation.

Rep. Timothy Wirth, D-Colo., chairman of a House Telecommunications subcommittee, called it "an absolute outrage" and a "brutal slap in the face" for the nation's children, who rely on CPB-funded programs such as "Sesame Street."

However, Rep. James Broyhill of North Carolina, the top Republican on Wirth's subcommittee, said, "I think the president made a prudent decision in rejecting the huge increases called for in this legislation." Broyhill said he would support a 15 percent increase in funding.

Competency issue threatens school aid

DES MOINES (UPI) — The Iowa Legislature may vote to freeze funding for schools unless lawmakers mandate teacher competency tests, a state senator warned Wednesday.

Sen. Joe Brown, D-Montezuma, who chairs the Senate Education Committee, criticized a legislative task force report for ducking the issue of competency testing. The education task force has called instead for testing colleges that provide teaching degrees.

Task force members argue that the way to improve the quality of teachers entering the classrooms of Iowa is to make sure the schools turning out teachers are doing an adequate job in preparing their students to educate children.

BUT BROWN, who serves on the task force, accused the panel of sidestepping the issue.

"The whole report says we must have competent teachers, but the report doesn't say how to do it," Brown said. He said Iowans expect teachers to be treated the same as other professionals who are licensed by the state.

"If you're going to treat teaching like other professions, then why not do like we do for doctors, lawyers and real estate agents and require them to pass minimum competency tests," Brown said.

The task force has also called for additional funding for education, which could increase the current $1.3 billion spent on schools each year by more than $400 million.

That additional money would fund higher salaries for teachers, a larger and more powerful state education department, and a variety of research programs to improve the state's education programs.

Brown said he won't support any funding bill unless the state makes sure it is getting good teachers.

"I'd rather freeze school aid until we get serious about teacher testing," Brown said. "I don't think we're getting the cream of the crop."

Black leaders, Anderson vow to support Mondale

NORTH OAKS, Minn. (UPI) — A group of prominent black leaders, including Jesse Jackson, voted unanimously Tuesday to give their unqualified support to Walter Mondale.

The crowd of almost 50 black leaders broke into chants of "We want Fritz, we want Fritz" at a press conference called late in the evening to announce the results of a two-hour closed meeting.

"It is clear that our interests converge in this Democratic party," said Jackson, who sounded somewhat tentative in his support for Mondale at an earlier press conference.

"My support (for Mondale) will be broad-based," Jackson said earlier. "My involvement will be deep and intense. We can be unified without being uniform."

JACKSON WAS repeatedly questioned about what appeared to be a qualified endorsement, but he said that his support is unqualified and that Mondale has made tremendous progress toward correcting problems in his campaign, including adding blacks, Hispanics and others to his staff.

"First of all, I've not been attacking him, but I will always reserve the right to challenge and to express myself," Jackson said. "I've not taken any vow of silence, nor have I taken anything to put an anesthesia on myself."

"And yet strong leadership has the capacity to endure challenges. The issues that I raised throughout the last several weeks have been addressed meaningfully now. It's important that we define our proximity in the campaign, and we have not done that before. It's important that blacks and women be represented, not just in numbers and symbolism, but intellect in this campaign."

Mondale said he found the meeting "very valuable" and said that "I'm very pleased that Reverend Jackson has decided to take that course."

MONDALE ALSO announced the appointments of two black leaders to his campaign, naming Detroit Mayor Coleman Young head of voter registration and former Atlanta Mayor Maynard Jackson senior adviser to the campaign.

Earlier in Urbana, Ill., former Rep. John Anderson said he will actively campaign for the Democratic ticket.

"It was Fritz Mondale who had the courage to take that historic action that led to the nomination of a woman for vice president of the United States," Anderson said. "He is committed to setting a saner course for our nation."

Anderson received almost 6 million votes, or 7 percent, when he ran for president four years ago.

Mondale appeared with Anderson at a rally attended by 10,000 cheering supporters at the University of Illinois. "I once had John Anderson on the other side of me in a campaign. That's one of the reasons I'm in private life," Mondale said.

Police block 'Adolf Kahane' from entering Arab village

UMM EL FAHM, Israel (UPI) — Police blocked U.S.-born Rabbi Meir Kahane and dozens of his followers from entering Israel's largest Arab village Wednesday as some 4,000 Arabs and Jews locked arms to form a human chain and vowed to stop "Adolf Kahane."

Ten police officers and 10 Arab civilians were injured when a small group of Arab youths rolled boulders down hills and hurled rocks and bottles that bounced off the plastic shields of police.

Officers restrained themselves for five minutes, then fired volleys of tear gas to disperse the Arabs, police and Israel Radio said.

Police said no other violence was reported in the Arab village of Umm el Fahm, 40 miles northeast of Tel Aviv, where the mayor had warned of bloodshed if the Brooklyn-born Kahane was permitted to enter.

"Rabbi Adolf Kahane will not come," a crowd of 4,000 Jews and Arabs chanted, locking arms to form a human chain at the village's entrance. Ten members of Israel's Parliament, the Knesset, were counted among the 4,000 forming the chain.

TIRES WERE stacked and set on fire at the entrance of Umm el Fahm, and rocks and boulders were strewn along its main street.

"Fascism will not enter, will not enter," the crowd chanted as demonstrators hoisted a sign that said: "Go Back to America — You Have an American Passport."

Kahane, who won a seat in the Israeli parliament (Knesset) last month on a platform to deport 2 million Arabs living in Israel and its occupied territories, went to Umm el Fahm to tell its residents to leave Israel forever. Umm el Fahm is Israel's largest Arab village, with 25,000 residents.

Acting on orders of police Commissioner Aryeh Ivtzan, officers stopped Kahane and three buses carrying dozens of his followers at a roadblock about 2 miles from the village. Israel Radio said many of the men were armed.

Kahane then set out on foot for Umm el Fahm, which he called "a Jewish village that is temporarily inhabited by Arabs." He was put in a police van and briefly detained at a police station after he refused to turn back.

KAHANE, FOUNDER of the militant Jewish Defense League in the United States and the extremist Kach Party in Israel, has parliamentary immunity and cannot be arrested.

Hundreds of Jews traveled to Umm el Fahm and joined hands with Arabs to protest Kahane's visit in the biggest show of Israeli solidarity with Arabs since a wave of anger swept the nation after the 1982 Beirut massacre of Palestinians by Israeli-backed Lebanese Christian militia.

Border police wearing green berets and helmeted riot police also linked arms to hold the protesters back. Ten members of Parliament from left-wing and centrist parties joined the protest.

"We reject these stupid plans of Kahane," said Umm El Fahm Mayor Hashem Mahmeed. "We are not going to leave our land — not one centimeter. We are planted here for thousands of years, and we are going to be here forever."

Later, a tearful Mahmeed said Kahane had been turned back and announced, "We have won."

Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir issued a statement calling Kahane a "negative, dangerous and harmful phenomenon."

United Students of Iowa to begin student voter registration project

By Marcia Festen
Special to The Daily Iowan

After spending most of last year organizing, the United Students of Iowa, the student group representing students at the three state universities, has begun its first major project for the 1984-85 academic year — a student voter registration drive.

USI, which receives 53 cents per student in mandatory fees, is hoping the drive will make more students aware of the organization, said Jeff Winick, a UI member of USI's Board of Directors.

"The only way you get people to be a part in an organization is to make it vibrant and let people know about it," he said.

Winick hopes that membership in the organization will increase when it is exposed to the student body and advertisements have been placed in The Daily Iowan and the UI Schedule of Courses booklet in an effort to gain student recognition.

USI WAS FORMED last year to represent students of the three state universities in expressing and dealing with student concerns about state legislative and administrative bodies.

"We represent the wishes and desires of about 50,000 regents students in the state of Iowa," said Winick. "We disseminate information about dealing with the administration."

Last year the group lobbied to prevent the state from raising the drinking age and attempted to get a student representative on the state Board of Regents, said Winick, but USI did not see much activity last year.

"It was mainly a year to get things working," he said.

Yet Winick said the organization "came closer than any other group ever has" to establish the student seat on the board of regents. "Next time a regent resigns, we will try again."

This will be the first year the group will be working with a full budget, said Mike Skinner, chairman of the USI legislative assembly, and most of what people will see happening on campus will be the work of the UI's campus chapter.

This year, USI also hired a full-time lobbyist to the Iowa State Legislature to represent student views.

"We will be doing things throughout the year," he said, but so far not much has been planned.

Bomber

controversial program on Oct. 2, 1981 and ordered production of 100 more jets. Funds await congressional approval.

The B-1, with a 136-foot wing span and a maximum speed of 1,451 mph, was designed to replace the larger B-52, backbone of the Air Force's strategic bomber fleet since the 1950s.

The new prototype, the B-1B bomber, has not yet flown. It is scheduled to roll out of Rockwell's nearby Palmdale plant next week and President Reagan may be there for the occasion.

At the time he gave the go ahead for the B-1B production, Reagan initiated a program to develop a "stealth" bomber to be practically invisible to radar and other detection methods.

The B-1B is designed to be in the field by 1988 as a survivable force through the early 1990s. After that, the stealth bomber would take over.

Engineers reviewing improved computer software designed especially for Discovery noticed a remote possibility that the commands sent through the two event controllers might be improperly timed. This might cause a major failure.

A computer program "patch" was developed that worked around the problem and it was successfully tested at the Johnson Space Center in Houston.

"It's always a disappointment when you don't go on time," Hartsfield said.

Reporting a loss

The search for missing Des Moines newspaper carriers Johnny Gosch and Gene Martin continues, and with it the fear and confusion that come with the sudden opening of voids in the place of two innocent lives.

Citizens of Des Moines — and the rest of Iowa, for that matter — have responded well, helping in any way they can and acting reasonably in a situation that could evoke hysteria in just about anybody.

Unfortunately, as the search is prolonged, Iowa's news media seem determined to foster that hysteria in their readers and viewers.

No one could argue with the reporting of the disappearances; despite the overzealous rhetoric, no one could even argue with Des Moines Register Editor James Gannon's cry that "The Dark Threat of Terror Now Stalking Des Moines Should Make Us All Mad As Hell!"

But one can argue with the way that increases in the reward for the return of the boys are reported with the kind of fervor usually reserved for state lotteries.

One can argue with the necessity of reports about tensions within the Gosch family — denied by those involved — that do nothing to bring the boys back and merely upset people who have already experienced more pain than anyone ever should.

One can argue with the circus attending the release of differing pictures of how Johnny Gosch might look today — a circus that turns an unexplained disappearance into a cocktail party game of "What Would Johnny Look Like With Dreadlocks?"

Sensational crime stories sell papers and boost ratings. Sensational crime stories involving innocent children sell papers and boost ratings more. But those stories don't get the crimes solved. All they do is cause more agony to those involved and whip up frustration and fury that can't be satisfied among others.

That's not what Johnny Gosch and Gene Martin need right now.

Learning our lessons

A task force, chaired by University of Northern Iowa President Constantine Curris, has presented a number of recommendations designed to improve the quality of teachers and education, including competency testing, scholarships and higher salaries, to the Iowa Board of Public Instruction. Most of the suggestions make sense.

Surely someone who proposes to go out and teach should be able to demonstrate competency in basic skills — writing and reading analytically, for example — and in their subject.

It is much less clear, however, that satisfactory tests on teaching skills can be devised. A good teacher is one who knows and loves the subject, enjoys communicating that knowledge and has a chance to watch and talk with other good teachers. Courses on how to be a good teacher and tests on whether one is a good teacher are therefore of minor use.

Scholarships for people who plan to be teachers would be useful, but those people won't stay in teaching if salaries aren't better. Teachers need to be paid what their profession is worth. As it now stands, even a minor actor or actress with a regular part in a schlocky TV series earns more than a good teacher.

With safeguards to insulate the process from politics and favoritism, instituting a program that allows teachers to advance in salary and responsibility is a good idea. But developing those safeguards and finding useful ways of judging skill will be very difficult.

In the end, education will not improve until people are willing to pay enough for schools to attract the brightest. And it will not improve until parents teach their children to respect learning and the learned.

Looking backward

Last week's Republican convention was a choreographed showcase of the party's favorite line: "America is back."

The America presented in speech after speech at the convention, however, was an America back in a 1950s Eisenhower world. That was a clearly cut place, one with good guys (us) and bad guys (the Russians). There was one God, and He was in the schools. Women were mothers, men were breadwinners, blacks were entertainers and everyone was happy.

Looking at convention delegates this year, very little seems to have changed in the Republican party since those happier days. But the vision displayed at the convention was a backward one. Like most reminiscences, only the good parts remain in the picture. Our mistakes and problems have been erased on the Magic Drawing Board of Republican memory.

The party's nominee, Ronald Reagan, boosts us by calling us "this last best hope on earth" and soothes us by saying that "America was never a sick society." Anyone who acknowledges the problems and failures of history is a "hand-wringer," and the Democratic Party, speaking of future challenges, becomes the "party of fear."

But the appeal of the views Reagan and his party presented at their convention is based far more on fear than anything the Democrats offered. The world is changing. America's once-clear dominance in industry, in standard of living and in technology, is slipping away. Fear of the challenges to our long-held status makes looking backward our only comfort. The reminiscing and rhetoric of last week's convention capitalized on that fear.

There is nothing wrong with old-fashioned values or with a good memory. The world, however, has changed since the days of "Leave It to Beaver." Americans no longer come in matched sets, like delegates to a Republican convention.

We live in a world with problems that those old-fashioned values can no longer solve. Americans need leadership capable of waking us from our sleepy nostalgia and addressing our new challenges. That leadership was sorely lacking at this Republican convention.

Fertilizer hits fan in Iowa race

IDEOLOGICAL aspects of the current political campaigns that supposedly surfaced at the Republican convention in Dallas have been evident for months in Iowa.

The U.S. Senate race between incumbent Republican Roger Jepsen and 5th District Rep. Tom Harkin has had ideological undertones since its start, and the prospect is for more emphasis on philosophical differences between the two men in the weeks ahead, not less.

Jepsen is no stranger to emotional campaigns. He waged a reasonably dirty one in 1978 against former Sen. Dick Clark, the main tenet of which was that Clark was too liberal to represent Iowans. Moreover, Jepsen's presentation of himself in that race centered on his born-again Christian faith and his anti-abortion sentiments, neither of which exactly lends itself to rational debate.

CLARK STARTED out trying to run a traditional campaign based on his record and somehow ended up having to prove he wasn't a godless baby killer who supported Marxist terrorists in southern Africa (Jepsen never did produce the documents he said would prove that last claim).

Substitute Harkin for Clark and you get a good idea what to expect from the Jepsen camp this year — with one important difference: This time around Jepsen has help from something called the Committee to Re-elect a Responsible Senator, headed by the UI's own Jeffrey Renander and funded by Leroy Corey's Mid-America Conservative Political Action Committee.

Renander's committee is a so-called "independent expenditure group" with no formal ties to the Jepsen campaign. It is a self-appointed truth squad dedicated to telling voters "how liberal Tom Harkin really is."

The committee has taken out a number of ads in Renander's ultra-conservative tabloid, The Hawkeye Review. Those ads feature aborted fetuses and the revelation that — guess what — Tom Harkin supports communist dictators. A series of anti-Harkin radio spots is planned.

AND IF THE anti-Harkin campaign is true to the form established by MACPAC in its anti-Lynn Cutler campaign two years ago, inflammatory leaflets will appear at fundamentalist churches and nasty rumors will circulate.

All this will allow Jepsen to take the high road and focus on issues while MACPAC does the dirty work. But there are possible pitfalls.

First, MACPAC's right-wing zealotry knows no shame and could well embarrass even Jepsen if its campaign is too dirty. Second, Jepsen so loves to drape himself in flag and Bible while striking poses of self-righteous indignation that he probably will not be able to resist completely the temptation to level a few emotional charges of his own.

The Harkin campaign, meanwhile, is busy sanitizing Harkin's image and beating back all attempts to label him ideologically. Tom Harkin spells his ideology I-O-W-A, we are told, and he is sensitive enough about the word "liberal" to have developed a spiel about how it does not necessarily apply to him.

He points to his support for a federal budget freeze, his support of federal tax indexing and his concern for small businesses and family farms and asks if these are "liberal" positions. He asks why, if he is so liberal, he has been elected to represent Iowa's most conservative district by ever-greater margins over the last 10 years.

BUT WHILE HE refutes the validity of ideological labels, Harkin nonetheless calls attention to Jepsen's right-wing connections. This is a defensive reaction, according to Harkin's top campaign press aide, Larry Gray: Jepsen and his supporters so distort Harkin's record in their negative campaigning, Gray says, that it is necessary to battle the lies with truth.

Gray asserts that much of the misinformation purveyed by Renander's committee comes straight from the John Birch Society, which is not known for balanced and accurate reporting.

Even more fun, Gray suggests there is possibly collusion between the Jepsen campaign and Renander's committee, which is strictly forbidden under campaign financing laws, and has indicated a formal complaint may be forthcoming. (Renander told WSUI radio last week that there is no contact whatsoever between his committee and the Jepsen campaign.) If that develops into a campaign issue it surely will overshadow Harkin's preferred issues, the rural economy and the farm debt crisis.

THE MACPAC committee is by far the most culpable of the campaign organizations in this drift toward emotional charges and negative campaigning. Its tactics give constitutionally protected free speech a bad name and insult voters who might like to hear reasoned, intelligent debate on the issues — the kind of voters who should be electing our lawmakers.

The candidates share blame as well. Emotionalism and philosophical debate are not out of place in an election campaign, but here they have been reduced to their crudest level.

Jepsen promotes values of family and civic life that, because times inevitably change, are irrelevant to large sectors of the public, and openly attacks the morality of anyone who dares question their universal application. Harkin, meanwhile, looks at the camera, trembles his lower lip and makes his voice choke as he tells the story of an old man forced to sell his farm because of high interest rates.

Not to be forgotten is the press, which jumps all over a dirty campaign but relegates a clean one to the back pages or to that segment between the second commercial and the weather report.

MOST CULPABLE of all, though, are the voters who respond to these tactics. Success is the counsel of both Jepsen and MACPAC as they plot campaigns bedight with charges of immorality and un-patriotism. Harkin, seeing how the game is played, has little choice but to respond in kind.

In a democracy, people get the level of public discussion they demand. The type of debate we see in this Senate election should tell a lot about whether we demand the best or the worst from our candidates for public office. The initial indications are not terribly encouraging.

Lakes, loons and the value of life

WHEN RONALD Reagan made his little joke about bombing Russia, it made me stop and think about some things.

It did not make me think about the ethics of nuclear weapons, or the ideologies that promote them and make them necessary. It did not make me think about the context of Reagan's statement as a means toward justification or condemnation. In fact, it did not make me think about Reagan at all.

When Ronald Reagan made the joke about bombing Russia, it made me think about loons.

We have been vacationing in Minnesota for the last few weeks. We "got away from it all" at the beginning of August — left Iowa City in the early morning, drove all day, arrived at sunset. We exchanged the hot humidity of Iowa for the hot humidity of Minnesota. It has been, so far, a typical midwestern vacation.

We are staying at my parents' cabin on Big Portage Lake. We have spent our time reading, relaxing, lying in the sun and watching the wildlife.

BIG PORTAGE Lake is perfect for wildlife. The land on one side of the lake is owned by Cass County and is part of the 6100-acre Deep Portage Conservation Reserve. This lake shore property will never be developed; the animals of the reserve are protected from hunters.

The lake itself is a shallow rice lake. Now, in August, huge beds of wild rice have grown in clumps all over the lake. These stands of rice offer cover and security to all kinds of water bird and animals.

So far, we have seen ducks, muskrats, turtles, blue herons, bald eagles and loons.

I love all these animals, but for some reason I have been especially intrigued by the loons.

LOONS ARE beautiful, solitary creatures that carry an aura of loneliness about them. We see them at sunset, black silhouettes of loons gliding through black silhouettes of wild rice over the light blue evening water. We hear them calling at night; they talk to each other across the lake, and it haunts us in the cabin.

Loons. If we do not like company, these loons. If we get too close to them in the canoe, they dive beneath the water and swim away to where they can be by themselves again. If another loon approaches a mating pair, the pair will drive the third loon away; they run across the surface of the water, flapping their wings, crying in a frantic laughing voice.

I think it is the mystery of the loon that appeals to me the most; it is this solitude and intensity with which they lead their lives that fascinates me.

It is hard for me to imagine anyone killing a loon. I cannot conceive of a mentality that would value a dead loon, a bloody mess of lifeless feathers and tissues, over the magnificence of a live loon on the lake at sunset.

Many were killed, however. In fact, in the early part of this century, loons were considered to be a very sporty game bird indeed, and they were killed with such an appetite that even now the population has not fully recovered.

It was not until 1918, with the federal Migratory Bird Treaty Act, that loons were finally protected. It is now illegal to kill loons or to possess a loon, its nest, or its eggs. The State of Minnesota has since passed even more stringent legislation, and the common loon was made the Official State Bird of Minnesota in 1961.

THIS IS THE point I want to make: somewhere along the line, the value of a live loon increased. Before 1918 a dead loon was considered to be of more value than a live loon. After 1918, the value of a live loon had increased sufficiently that it was now considered to be greater than the value of a dead loon.

One day the lifeless body in the basket was worth more; the next day the live loon on the lake was worth more.

I do not mean by this that the intrinsic value of the loon ever changed at all. This kind of value is something over which we have no control, and for which we have no measuring devices. The value here is relative; it is the value according to manmade law, reflecting the consensus of humanity. It is a superficial value, imposed by people on loons. In no way does it reflect the loon's true, intrinsic value. I am, however, glad that the relative value of the loon, established by the laws of man, now agrees with the intrinsic value of the loon that I understand in my heart.

IMAGINE WHAT would have happened if Reagan had said, "I am pleased to announce that I have outlawed loons. Hunting season will open in five minutes."

It would have been a madhouse. Environmentalists and loon lovers all over the country would have risen in solidarity, decrying such legislation.

But in his joke Reagan did not outlaw loons; he outlawed human beings instead.

Even though it was meant as a joke, I think the implications of the statement are clear, just as the relationship between the value of loons and the value of human beings is clear.

We have not yet reached that magical point in the ethical progress of the human race where we will place more value in a live human being than we do in a dead human being.

We have not yet reached that moment of transcendental wisdom when we will be allowed to recognize the intrinsic rather than the relative value of human life.

We have not yet reached the time when the relative value of human life as established by the laws of man at last agrees with the intrinsic value of human life that I understand in my heart.

We have not yet reached the 1918 of our species.

Ursery wants playing time; leaves Iowa

By Melissa Rapoport
Staff Writer

After one year as an Iowa men's basketball player, Robert "Spider" Ursery told Iowa Coach George Raveling Wednesday that he will be transferring to Jefferson College, a junior college in his hometown of St. Louis.

According to Ursery's mother, Chrysantah, Ursery decided to leave because he believed he would have limited playing time this year. "He decided to leave because Coach Raveling was talking that he didn't know if Spider would be able to play because of his injury last year," Mrs. Ursery said. "So, Spider didn't want to take any chances of sitting on the bench."

JEFFERSON COACH Mark Bernsen said Ursery will start classes Sept. 4 and unlike schools under NCAA regulations, Ursery will not have to sit out of competition for a year. "He'll play immediately," Bernsen said. "After one year he will have three years of eligibility left because of his redshirt last year."

As a freshman, the 6-foot-5 swingman appeared in five games for the Hawkeyes, despite his back injury.

At Jefferson, Ursery will primarily play a guard position. "He'll play two-spot — he'll be a second guard," Bernsen said.

Bernsen is optimistic about Ursery's arrival. "We are very, very pleased to have him," Bernsen said. "I'm sure he will do very well here."

Ursery, who received a full-ride scholarship from Jefferson, was a prep star at Northwest High School in St. Louis. As a senior he was named first-team all-state in Missouri and was also a prep all-American.

EVEN THOUGH Ursery was scoreless last season, he was known for his outside shot at Northwest, where he averaged 26.1 points and 11 rebounds per game. From the field, Ursery shot 70 percent in high school, and from the line, he connected on 74 percent of his attempts, leading his team to a 22-6 record.

During his senior year at Northwest, Ursery said he signed early with former Iowa Coach Lute Olson because of all the pressure. Even then he was uneasy about committing to Iowa.

"I had pressures that made me change my mind about not signing early," Ursery told The Daily Iowan shortly after committing to Iowa. "I figured I may as well commit. I'm pretty happy but there are always doubts."

Although Ursery's departure leaves Raveling with a scholarship, the Iowa coach will not be able to use it this season because an NCAA date has passed, leaving Iowa with 14 scholarships for the upcoming season to distribute among 15 players.

Raveling met with Ursery early Wednesday in Iowa City, but he was at a speaking engagement Wednesday night and could not be reached for comment.

New cage assistant Hammel sets goals

By Melissa Rapoport
Staff Writer

"I want to be the best damn coach I can be," Brian Hammel said about his goals as the newly-appointed Iowa assistant basketball coach.

Replacing Mel Hankinson, who took a head coaching position at Samford University in Birmingham, Ala., Hammel first set his goals at Bentley College in Waltham, Mass., where he was head coach for six years.

"About three years ago I had set certain goals," the White Plains, N.Y., native said. "My goal is to be the best coach I can be. If that's head coach at Bentley or an assistant at Iowa, I want to be the best damn coach I can be."

"I want to go out everyday and run a fast race. If I win, that's great, and if I lose, that's okay. I just want to give my best every single day. That's my goal for life and I've been happy with it."

IOWA COACH George Raveling chose Hammel because of his adaptability to the program. "We had some outstanding finalists for this position," Raveling said. "Brian was selected because of the great amount of versatility he offers the program. He is a valuable addition to our staff."

In his six year reign at Bentley, Hammel compiled a 91-70 win-loss record. In 1979 Bentley was ranked No. 1 among Division II schools and reached the semifinal round of the Division II tournament.

Hammel's experience runs well beyond his head coaching position at Bentley. As a player at Bentley, Hammel was a two-time small college all-American in 1974 and 1975. Although he was a third-round draft choice of the Milwaukee Bucks of the NBA and a fourth-round draft choice of the Indiana Pacers of the now defunct ABA, Hammel proceeded to play one year with the Washington Bullets.

LEAVING BENTLEY WAS hard for Hammel, but from a professional standpoint combined with Iowa's "tremendous" coaching staff, he decided to accept the coaching position at Iowa because it "was the most logical decision for me," Hammel said.

"Iowa is a professional advancement and I've always been one to try and reach my potential," Hammel said. "Iowa's assistant position is definitely a step up. You're never completely satisfied unless you try to reach your potential. I am very happy at Bentley, but to reach my potential and take it one step further, Iowa was the best move for me."

"Also, the staff is so tremendous out there," Hammel continued. "No matter where you go in life, people are what make the business. I don't give a damn what kind of business you're in. Whether you're a doctor or a coach, it's people that make a business work."

ALTHOUGH THE NEW Hawkeye assistant coach believes he has made a good decision, Hammel's relationship with his former team leaves him with mixed emotions. "One of the hardest reasons to leave Bentley was because of my relationship with the players," Hammel said.

"It's tough ... You get such a close bond with them and it's hard to sever that bond."

"I have mixed feelings," Hammel continued. "There are new challenges and new changes, but I have to leave good friends. But the positive definitely outweighs the negative."

Although Hammel has lived on the East Coast all of his life, he was pleased with his visits to Iowa City. "I was born and raised in New York, but I was very impressed with Iowa," Hammel said.

Penn State, Illini fighting different foes

Youthful Lions to be challenged by '84 schedule

By Mike Condon
Assistant Sports Editor

At this time last season, there were a lot of sad faces in the place they call "Happy Valley."

Coach Joe Paterno's Penn State team had just come off a national championship season in 1982 and hopes were high, despite a number of inexperienced players in key positions. But the Nittany Lions opened the season in the Kickoff Classic and took the worst beating ever under Paterno, 44-6 at the hands of Nebraska.

Things got worse before they got better for Paterno, as his squad was upset by Cincinnati, 14-3, and lost a 42-34 thriller to Iowa, leaving the Nittany Lions 0-3 and leaving their fans wondering if even a winning season would be possible.

HOWEVER PATERNO proceeded to do one of the best coaching jobs in the country as his squad went 8-1-1 in its last 10 games, including a 13-10 win over the Washington Huskies in the Aloha Bowl.

As young as the Nittany Lions were in 1983, Paterno says he's never had a younger team than the 1984 edition at Penn State. "This is the youngest team I've ever had," the 19th-year head coach said. "And, potentially, this is the strongest schedule we have ever played. Those things don't make us a top 10 team."

Of the 31 lettermen returning, only 13 were starters last year — six on offense and seven on defense.

However the list of returners is impressive, headed by senior quarterback Doug Strang. The Linwood, N.J., native came on after a slow start to complete nearly 52 percent of his passes for 1,944 yards and 19 touchdowns.

"THERE'S NO DOUBT that Doug will be one of our leaders, both on and off the field," Paterno said. "He took charge of our winter workout program and had an impressive spring. He could be one of the top quarterbacks in the country this fall."

But don't think Strang is the only offensive threat in the Penn State arsenal. Sophomore tailback D.J. Dozier rushed for over 1,000 yards last season and appears to be over the fumble problems that plagued him in his freshman season. Dozier will be backed up by senior Tony Mumford.

The fullback position, manned last season by Jon Williams, is currently undecided as a pair of sophomores, Steve Smith and Tim Manoa, are both listed at No. 1. Both weigh around 230 pounds, giving Paterno his first big, bruising fullbacks in a few seasons.

The place where the Nittany Lions suffered their heaviest offensive losses were at the receiving positions. Gone are all-American Kenny Jackson and steady Kevin Baugh. The split end spot is being contested among sophomores Sid Lewis and George Alpert. Senior Kevin Campbell has the upper hand at the flanker position ahead of sophomores Herb Bellamy and Eric Hamilton. Junior Dean DiMidio holds down the tight end slot.

THE OFFENSIVE LINE is anchored by seniors Stan Short and Nick Haden. See Lions, page 5B

Defending titlists must overcome many obstacles

CHICAGO — It is time for the defending Big Ten football champion Fighting Illini to forget about the first half of the Orwellian year (1984) and go on the offensive.

"My responsibility is to maintain the leadership role I have," White said. "So we can tee it up and play football, obviously that's what we're all here for."

It might be a little difficult to sleep, let alone play, after what White and Illinoians have been through the first six months of 1984.

It began with the 45-9 Rose Bowl flop against UCLA, then came a two-year slap on the wrist from the NCAA, meaning no repeat this year of last season's Pasadena performance. A federal drug indictment to Craig Swoope, one of the best returning players on the already depleted defensive team, followed.

ALSO, UNLIKE LAST season, Illinois does not have the schedule on its side. The Illini travel to the traditional Big Ten's powerhouses — Ohio State, Michigan and Iowa at Kinnick Stadium Sept. 29.

White, who has been bickered at by some of the others coaches in the conference, and Illinoians might need a little luck from Chief Illiniwig to get over this barrier.

The defensive unit returns just two starters, as all-American Swoope might miss the campaign and cornerback Keith Taylor will miss it, leaving just two experienced stoppers. Safety Dave Edwards, who tied for second in conference interceptions last year with five and cornerback Mike Heaven are the only ones left, on a defense that has some promise with junior college all-

Student grid tickets available Sept. 4

Iowa student football tickets will be available for pick-up at the Carver-Hawkeye Arena athletic ticket office beginning on Sept. 4. The tickets may be picked up on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday or Friday next week between 9 a.m. and 9 p.m. at the office located on the northwest side of the arena. The Hawkeyes will open their home season on Sept. 8 against Iowa State in a 12:15 p.m. game.

Ex-Hawk Wieczorek named track assistant

Former Iowa runner Larry Wieczorek has been named as an assistant track coach at Iowa. An 11-year coach at Proviso West High School in Maywood, Ill., he was a member of Iowa's 1967 Big Ten outdoor championship team.

Before becoming the head coach at Proviso West, Wieczorek served as an assistant coach for three years. During the past season, he served as the meet director for the Illinois state high school indoor meet and he also coached the state champion high jumper and triple jumper.

Wieczorek, who was recruited in 1964 by current Hawkeye Coach Ted Wheeler, still holds the Big Ten four-mile cross country record and holds the Iowa record in the two- and three-mile events.

Wheeler said he expects the addition of Wieczorek to the Hawkeye staff to aid the Iowa recruiting efforts in Illinois.

Women's rugby practice schedule set

The Iowa women's rugby club has started practicing and is looking for more interested players. Newcomers are welcome to participate and no previous experience is necessary.

Practices are held on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 5:30-7:30 p.m. on the Field House Field. An organizational meeting will be held in the Union Wheelroom on Sept. 4 at 8 p.m.

For more information, contact Coach Tanya Fry at 337-2674 or Jean O'Leary at 337-5284.

Fry: Hot weather takes toll on gridders

Students and teachers may have been complaining about the high humidity and temperature, but just think about the football team. "I'm sweating a lot out here," said Hawkeye Coach Hayden Fry, "but not as much as the players in full gear."

"The weather has taken its toll on a few of the players," he said following Wednesday's practice session. "When they get dizzy, we pull them off and give them cold water and ice them down. Luckily we haven't had anything serious."

Fry also said that there will be no changes in the depth charts until after the films from today's scrimmage are reviewed. "We'll be hitting (today) and maybe on Saturday if we have areas to work on."

Fry also said that there are many areas that need to be worked on more. "We need more work on both sides of the ball before the opener," he said.

One area that Fry sees some improvement in is the receivers. "I'm extremely happy with the progress we've made with our wide receivers," Fry said. "If we were playing today, I'd have to go with Bill Happel at split end and Scott Helverson at wingback."

The Hawkeyes are not yet concentrating on their opener against Iowa State, according to Fry. "I want us to be looking at the whole season instead of at only the Iowa State game. We don't want us to put all of our eggs in one basket. That's why we become better and better as the season progresses."

Ranger pitcher Darwin suspended by league

NEW YORK (UPI) — Texas pitcher Danny Darwin has been suspended for two games by American League President Bobby Brown for bumping umpire Ken Kaiser during an argument Aug. 18 in a game against Kansas City.

Darwin was suspended for two games starting with Wednesday night's game against the Royals in Kansas City, Mo. Brown, in a statement, said the penalty stemmed from Darwin "making physical contact with umpire Ken Kaiser and his ejection from the game of Aug. 18."

Darwin has the right to request a hearing and if he chooses that option, the suspension will be lifted, pending results of such a hearing.

Darwin, 8-9, was involved in a close play while trying to cover first base on a bunt by Kansas City's Buddy Biancalana. Kaiser ruled Darwin missed the bag, touching off a dispute that led to the right-hander's ejection.

Get in touch with the Earth through UI Rec Services

By John Gilardi
Special to The Daily Iowan

Game enough for a week of white water rafting down the Natchala, Ocoee and Chattooga rivers in Georgia for class credit? Or how about just an early Saturday morning horseback ride and breakfast before a football game?

These, and many more outdoor adventures are being offered by the UI Division of Recreational Services' Touch the Earth Outdoor Program, under the direction of Wayne Fets, student director.

"We're offering inexpensive outdoor programs to the university and town community," said Fets about the six-year old program. "All of our trips are designed for novices, but even the experts will find something challenging, especially with the rafting and climbing. All of our programs are a nice escape, even if it's just for the day."

THE RAFTING TRIP is scheduled for March 22-26 during spring break and will cost $160. Under the direction of the outdoor staff from Georgia State, the group will be rafting down the same rivers that the movie "Deliverance" was filmed on. According to Fets, the rafting trip will be "a time the participants will never forget."

Another popular trip, a weekend rock climb at Devil's Lake, Wis., is set for two sessions. The first session, from Oct. 5-7, will be for beginners. This trip is designed to provide participants with instruction on basic climbing, belaying and rappelling techniques. There will also be a strong emphasis on safety.

The second trip, from Oct. 26-28, is an extension of the skills learned on the first trip. More difficult routes and advanced climbing techniques will be taught and used.

"OUR CLIMBING TRIP is an example that anyone can go," Fets said. "We're climbing on similar rock variety that you'll find in the Rocky Mountains. It's the best site in the Midwest. Even the experts can find challenging routes to the top."

From Oct. 5-7, a group will enjoy the fall colors while cycling on the Sparta-Eloy bike trail in southern Wisconsin.

"On the bike trip the group will have the choice of either riding 32 or 64 miles a day," Fets said. "Groups in the past have usually opted for 64 miles in a day since it is generally flat. All you have to do is be able to ride a bike."

"Anybody can go on any trip," Fets said. "You don't have to be in the best shape or have experience. We always have a pre-trip meeting to go over what type of clothing to bring and to learn how to use some of the special equipment, such as when we go fishing."

Other trips and programs scheduled for the fall semester include the following. Undergraduate students who participate in weekend trips may earn one-half credit hour and those on week trips may earn one credit hour in either the Physical Education or the Recreational Education department.

• Sailboarding will be taught on Lake MacBride on Sept. 9 and 16. This program will meet on two consecutive Sunday afternoons and teach fundamentals on a simulator and then in the water. Sign-up begins Aug. 31 and the cost is $20.

• Early morning horseback rides and breakfasts will be on Sept. 8 and 15. The group will leave at 7 a.m. and will return before the football games. The cost per ride is $13 and sign-up begins Aug. 31.

• A hunter safety course will be offered free of charge to all who plan to hunt in Iowa. This safety course is required for all hunters born during or after 1967. First-aid and other safety practices will be stressed. The meetings will be on Oct. 9 and 10.

• From Oct. 11-14, a group will be fishing on the Cippewa flowage in Wisconsin trying to catch muskies, crappie and walleye. Sign-up begins Sept. 10 and the cost is $70.

• An overnight hiking trip is planned for Oct. 27-28 in the Yellow River Forest in northeastern Iowa. The group will set up a campsite Friday night and hike or fish for trout on Saturday. The cost is $25 and sign-up begins Oct. 8.

"The trips that we're offering are extremely inexpensive for what we offer," Fets said. "The rafting trip in the spring would cost about $600 at other places, we only charge $160," he said. "Everything is included in the price. There are no hidden costs."

WHAT EVERY STUDENT SHOULD KNOW ABOUT THE DIFFERENCES BETWEEN LEASING A TELEPHONE AND LEASING A CHICKEN.

Yes, there are differences. And we think you should know what they are. Ask yourself these questions.

WHEN YOU LEASE A CHICKEN, DO YOU GET THREE MONTHS FREE DURING THE SUMMER?

Probably not. But when you lease your telephone from AT&T this fall, you won't pay any lease charges next summer. You can use your phone at home and bring it back to school in the fall.

DO LEASED CHICKENS COME IN A SELECTION OF COLORS AND STYLES?
No. Chickens don't come in many colors. But the AT&T telephone you lease this fall comes in a variety of colors and three popular styles.

ARE LEASED CHICKENS REPAIRED FREE?

Don't kid yourself. Repairing a chicken is a delicate process that requires the work of expensive professionals. However, in the off chance your AT&T leased telephone

ARE LEASED CHICKENS SHIPPED DIRECTLY TO YOU?

Ship a chicken? Don't be silly. However, your AT&T leased telephone will be shipped directly to you after one call to 1-800-555-8111, or you can pick up your phone at any of our AT&T Phone Centers.

ONE FINAL QUESTION: DOES IT COST THE SAME TO LEASE A CHICKEN AS TO LEASE A TELEPHONE THIS FALL?

Hardly. While we have no hard data on the exact cost of leasing a chicken, we can tell you with some certainty that the cost of leasing a telephone this fall is far less than you might think.

The decision to lease a chicken or a telephone, of course, rests with you.

But should you opt for the telephone, remember: you get three months free next summer, and you can take the phone home with you. There's a choice of colors and styles, free repair, and we'll ship you the phone or you can pick it up at any of our AT&T Phone Centers.

It doesn't cost much either. And that's something to crow about. AT&T Consumer Sales and Service. To order your telephone, call 1-800-555-8111 for delivery right to your door or for information concerning AT&T Phone Center locations.

Intramurals kickoff fall campaign with flag football, home run derby

By Jeff Stratton
Staff Writer

The intramural season is upon us once again.

A variety of sports and contests await the athletically inclined this fall, including football, tennis, canoe races, trapshooting, a home run derby and a golf tournament.

There will also be an opportunity for students to learn the ins and outs of officiating as the Recreational Services department will be hiring officials this fall.

The fall football program is first up on the schedule. Warren Siebos, director of UI Recreational Services, said that teams must be entered by Sept. 6 if they want to participate. Competition will be held in men's, women's and a coed division. Games are played under flag football rules.

SLEBOS SAID that the home run derby has undergone a change this year. The contest had to be moved from the baseball field to the Hawkeye Softball Complex because the football team is using the baseball field for practice this fall. With the move to the Softball Complex, the home run derby will change from a baseball competition to a softball event. "We hate to lose the baseball contest. It was a fun event for everyone," Siebos said. "We will go back to the baseball field when the indoor football facility opens."

The home run derby will be scored by assigning a point value to the distance the ball is hit. The winner will be the contestant with the highest point total. Another change in the home run derby this year is that the hitters will have to supply their own pitchers.

THERE WILL BE a men's and a women's competition in the home run derby. Entries are due Sept. 20.

The canoe races will be run as a fall event this year, with men's, women's and coed divisions, Siebos said. The races will be run from the canoe house area on the Iowa River.

For those intramural athletes with a talent for water sports there will be two sports. A coed innertube water polo league is scheduled for the fall, along with a swimming meet, with men's, women's and coed divisions. Entries are due by Nov. 5.

Entries are due for the fall golf tournament on Sept. 20. The meet will be held Sept. 21.

Tennis players will be able to show what they've got this fall in the intramural tennis tournament. Entries are due in the men's, women's and coed divisions on Sept. 6.

For the marksmen on campus, there will be a trapshooting contest this fall. Entries for this event are due by Sept. 27.

Ric Maxey, supervisor of the sports officiating program, said that the recreation department is looking for intramural football officials for the fall. Maxey said that he wants to hire 75 to 100 officials this fall. Maxey said training sessions will be held for interested students from Sept. 11-14.

"We will work them on rules and mechanics," Maxey said. "We don't want them to go into the games cold." For more information, contact Maxey at 353-3494.

If Kuhn wants to maintain integrity, Wrigley Field should not have lights

With the Chicago Cubs leading the National League Eastern Division race by six games and only 30 games remaining in the regular season, pennant fever has gripped the Windy City and the long-suffering Cub fans.

For the past 13 years, some weekday playoff games and all weekday World Series games have been played in the evenings, or prime-time as the networks call it. But now the Chicago Cubs, yes the same Cubs that haven't tasted victory in a pennant race since 1945, are on the verge and guess what, Wrigley Field is the one park without the money-makers networks need for postseason play — lights.

Lights in Wrigley Field? That would be like a day without sunshine. Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn is leaving office Oct. 1 and he has always looked out for "the integrity of baseball."

WELL, A VOTE FOR anything but the natural sunshine of Wrigley Field would ruin 16 years of Kuhn's working for integrity.

Major sports on both the college and professional level have been bowing to the wishes of the major networks for years now. At first it started as a simple changing of a time for an event. Now it has escalated to changing of dates and now, the changing of conditions and location, just for the almighty dollar.

The networks are proposing putting temporary lights in Wrigley Field for the playoffs and World Series or moving the Cubs' home games to Comiskey Park, home of the Chicago White Sox.

The reason for wanting the move is simple. Network executives are claiming they will lose $700,000 a game due to lower viewership if daytime contests are played at Wrigley Field.

WHAT THE NETWORKS fail to realize is that Chicago Cub baseball is a national product. Cub games have the potential to reach 15 million homes over cable superstation WGN. The Cubs have a following that will increase ratings whether the games are played at 1:20 p.m. or 7:30 p.m. Advertisers are paying big money for ads they expect to be on in prime time. But a little give and take by both the networks and ad representatives could solve the problem.

Let's put it this way. Neither the networks or the advertisers that sponsor major events are hurting that much for money. For once they could take a little loss for the sake of tradition.

THE REAL LOSERS if a change is made would be the Chicago Cubs. The Cubs sport the best home record in baseball at 45-23. Putting lights at the ballpark would be just like allowing the White Sox to move their centerfield fence back and forth during the season.

Every team that qualifies for the playoffs should have the same conditions that faced them throughout the regular season. Wrigley Field is like an extra fielder for the Cubs. Lights would make the park just another one among 26 instead of the unique little stadium on the North Side of Chicago.

So, please, Commissioner, end your career on a positive note. Allow Chicagoans to enjoy their Cubs under the same conditions that have prevailed at Wrigley Field since 1916.

Wildcat cager returns to Germany

LEXINGTON, Ky. (UPI) — Citing "circumstances at home," the University of Kentucky's highly-touted 7-foot-4 center Gunther Behnke Wednesday left the school for his native West Germany.

"I regret that because of circumstances at home it is necessary for me to return to Germany," Behnke said. "I leave with a good feeling for Kentucky and the people who were friendly toward me."

Behnke, 21, had signed a national letter of intent last spring to play basketball with the Wildcats after an intensive recruiting drive by the university. He arrived in Lexington last week. Classes at Kentucky began Wednesday.

The traditional college basketball power was relying on Behnke to help offset the loss of first-round NBA draft picks Sam Bowie and Melvin Turpin, who last season were known as Kentucky's "Twin Towers."

"AFTER ATTENDING classes, I anticipated no problems in achieving my academic goals," Behnke said. "I wish to thank Coach (Joe B.) Hall and Coach (Jim) Hatfield and hope they understand my decision."

Behnke's mother, Elisabeth Behnke, said she and the player's father tried to persuade their son to stay at Kentucky. Mrs. Behnke said her son told her he didn't feel happy at the university.

"I don't know what has happened to him," Mrs. Behnke said. "We tried to change his mind. He has a girlfriend — I suppose that's his main problem."

Hall, the Wildcats' head coach, said he was sorry to see Behnke leave.

He added he would welcome Behnke back should the center decide to return.

University of Iowa students may pick up their football tickets at Carver-Hawkeye Arena beginning Tuesday, September 4th, at 9:00 a.m. Pick-up will continue from 9:00 a.m. daily through Friday, September 7th.
Each student must present his/her own University I.D. Card. A current registration certificate must appear on the card in order to receive the football ticket(s).
Students who have no priority or one year of priority and have ordered a guest ticket will be receiving a refund for the guest ticket.
Following is the 1984 Student Football Ticket Policy:
1. A student may purchase one season ticket at the student price. An additional ticket may be purchased at the public price. The guest ticket, at the public price, will not be available after May 18, the deadline for student priority.
2. Students will receive a priority based on the number of consecutive years they have purchased or applied for football tickets at the University of Iowa with no loss in priority for student exchange programs off campus or bona fide illness. An individual who misses two or more consecutive seasons for reasons other than the above will lose all priority.
3. Students, to receive their priority for football, must order sometime during the period from April 16 to May 18, 1984. These orders will be filled according to priority and will be available for pickup at fall registration. The student ID card and current registration must be presented at the time of pickup.
4. A University student may order season tickets for a group no larger than 8, provided he or she has the additional student credentials with him or her. Each student must pay for their own tickets and all students must pick up their own tickets and sign for them. All students must be currently registered and "in good standing" (University bill paid) by August 29. All students cancelled on that date will forfeit their tickets and will receive refunds.
5. The lowest priority within a group will determine the location of the entire block of tickets for that group. That is, all students within a group will carry the lowest priority of any member of that group.
6. Student season tickets will continue on sale on a non-priority basis after May 18, and will remain on sale through Wednesday, August 29, 1984, if available.
7. A student ticket, to be valid, must be accompanied by ID card and a current registration certificate. A student ticket may be used by the original purchaser or any other University of Iowa student, but the original purchaser will be held liable for any violations of the student ticket policy. DUPLICATE TICKETS CANNOT BE ISSUED FOR LOST OR STOLEN STUDENT TICKETS.

UCLA favored in rugged Pac-10

United Press International

UCLA lost six of the players most responsible for its Pac-10 championship and Rose Bowl victory last year. Yet, the Bruins are favored to repeat as league champions.

UCLA Coach Terry Donahue is faced with replacing quarterback Rick Neuheisel, defensive backs Don Rodgers and Lupe Sanchez, running back Kevin Nelson, tight end Paul Bergmann and linebacker Doug West.

However, Donahue may have better players as replacements for the departed starters.

Steve Bono, a starter last year until he was injured against Stanford, returns at quarterback. Bono completed 33 of 48 passes for 495 yards and three touchdowns before he was injured.

NELSON WILL BE replaced by senior Danny Andrews, who could become one of the Pac-10's most exciting runners. Freshmen Eric Ball and Mel Farr Jr. are also expected to contribute after they become accustomed to the college game.

The Bruins are strong in the trenches. UCLA lost only one starting offensive lineman and the defensive line is also experienced. The offensive line is anchored by tackle Duval Love, guard Mark Mannion and center Dave Baran.

Donahue said despite the losses, he is optimistic.

"Like every team, we have our strengths," he said. "We also have our concerns. It's tough to replace two defensive backs (Sanchez and Rodgers) who were first round draft choices."

UCLA WILL HAVE to fight off archrival Southern Cal, Arizona State, Washington and Washington State.

USC, eligible for the first time in three years for the Rose Bowl after NCAA sanctions, will be led by senior quarterback Sean Salisbury and linebacker Jack Del Rio. Salisbury has had a roller-coaster career with the Trojans. This year, he'll have to play consistently if USC is to challenge for the league title. Del Rio is one of the West Coast's best football players.

USC Coach Ted Tollner is anxious to make up for the 4-6-1 year he suffered through as a rookie head coach.

"This is an angry team," he said. "One that is out for vengeance."

Arizona State owns one of the Pac-10's most dangerous weapons in kicker Luis Zendejas. Joining Zendejas as an ASU scoring threat is running back Darryl Clack, who led the Pac-10 in rushing last year with 932 yards. The Sun Devils are inexperienced at quarterback, however, where Jeff Raaphorst has taken just three snaps.

THE WASHINGTON HUSKIES should also be in the title chase again although Coach Don James must replace three starters on his offensive line and quarterback Steve Pelluer. James also needs running back Jacques Robinson to perform well for an entire season.

Seven SEC squads have shot at crown

United Press International

The Auburn Tigers are determined not to let the No. 1 college football ranking get away again.

The Tigers lost only to Texas last season and hoped their Sugar Bowl victory over Michigan would vault them to the top if regular-season champ Nebraska lost to Miami of Florida in the Orange Bowl. However, the final ratings showed Miami No. 1 with Nebraska second and Auburn third.

The feeling is that with all-American running back Bo Jackson and 10 other starters among 45 returning lettermen, the Tigers have the potential to go all the way this time. But, as in 1983, the schedule has a lot of roadblocks.

AUBURN, WHICH lost its opener Aug. 27 against defending champion Miami, 20-18, in East Rutherford, N.J., waits 19 days for its second game — at Texas.

"I look back to this time a year ago and we felt, if everything fell into place, we had a chance to win the national championship," Auburn Coach Pat Dye said. "We only stumbled one time and we were right in the hunt at the end of the season."

"This year, we have a different team and a different set of circumstances, but our goals are still the same. I think we have a legitimate chance for the conference and national titles."

The Tigers are definitely favored to repeat as Southeastern Conference champions. But even that road has pitfalls since they play at Florida, which returns 47 lettermen from last year's sixth-ranked team, and they close the regular season against Alabama, which has 16 of its starters back.

"WE PLAY SEVEN teams that went to bowls last year," said Dye, "but I feel good about our football team. I haven't seen anything that would indicate our players aren't ready."

Consensus has Auburn, Florida and Alabama as title contenders in the SEC race with LSU, Georgia and Tennessee figured to finish in the middle and Ole Miss, Vanderbilt, Mississippi State and Kentucky expected to bring up the rear.

Miami, missing coach Howard Schnellenberger, but returning one of the top quarterbacks in the nation in sophomore Bernie Kosar, rates the best of the Deep South independents with up-state rival Florida State not far behind.

Southern Miss, Memphis State and Tulane will be battling to finish over .500.

Jackson is the leading candidate for this year's Heisman Trophy. He rushed for 1,213 yards last season while carrying the ball an average of less than 15 times per game and Dye says he's going to get it to the 225-pound speedster a lot more often in his junior year.

Seven of the 10 SEC teams will have new quarterbacks this fall.

Football tickets are scarce again

By Jill Hokinson
Staff Writer

A number of Iowa football fans expecting to see home games in person this season will not receive tickets because of the large demand for tickets once again.

Approximately 670 guest tickets, which includes students with 0 and 1 priority levels, were eliminated in order to meet ticket demands, said Philip Lainson, Chairman of the Iowa Board in Control of Athletics at their monthly meeting Tuesday night.

The athletic department also had returned 4,731 partial orders for season tickets for the public because of an excessive number of orders asking for more than two tickets, Athletic Director Bump Elliott said.

THIS SEASON, 13,000 students will receive season tickets, along with 5,500 staff members. The public will get the bulk of season tickets, approximately 40,000.

Iowa fans will also be able to watch nine of the Hawkeyes' 12 games on television this season. Sports View and CBS will broadcast four and Sports Time will show one. As of the Aug. 28 meeting, only games against Penn State, Northwestern and Hawaii will not be shown on television. But Elliott said the television schedule could still change.

According to Elliott, scheduling football games so that they can be broadcast has been a hassle this year. "It's a one-year plan," he said, "and I would object to this (plan) next year if we have to change the times of so many games."

"I WANT THE board, the press and the people of the state of Iowa to know this is a one shot deal," Elliott said. "It's not that we don't want exposure, we do want exposure but not overexposure." The athletic director said he also hopes someone will devise a plan next year to eliminate all the problems created by the separate television deals.

Over the summer, the Ad Hoc Committee on Planning met to work on plans for the construction of a new outdoor track. The existing track is being torn down in order to construct the indoor practice facility in its place.

The new track will be located on the Finkbine Lower Nine east of the softball complex. It will be a single radius track 400 meters long with eight lanes and a north-south orientation. The track, which is on a budget of $1.29 million will also be large enough to hold a soccer field.

THE ATHLETIC DEPARTMENT will seek approval to begin advertising for bids for fill work on the track at the September Regents meeting. Work on the site will then begin a week later, Casey Mahon, a member of the committee, said.

If the weather cooperates and contractors stay on schedule, the new track should be completed by the end of July so that Iowa can host the Junior Olympics in August, Dick Gibson, UI director of facility planning, said. "But we couldn't guarantee to the City Chamber of Commerce that the track will be done for the Junior Olympics," he added.

In other business, Women's Athletic Director Christine Grant announced that the price for Gold Card tickets has been raised from $10 to $15. With a Gold Card a person can attend all women's athletic events.

Last year, the women's athletic department sold 1,800 cards which was a 400 percent increase over the year before. This year, Grant said, the department has ordered 6,000 tickets to be sold.

both co-captains along with Strang. Another senior, Jerome Wilson is the leading candidate to take the other tackle spot opposite Short while sophomores Stan Clayton and Rob Smith hold down the guard positions on either side of Haden.

"Our offensive line was adequate, but nothing more than that last year," Paterno said. "We must make tremendous improvement in that area this year."

The defense is also a young unit with only two seniors among the starters. Inside linebacker Carmen Masciantonio and cornerback Chris Sydnor will be called upon by Paterno to anchor the defense which lost linebacker Scott Radeck, heroback Harry Hamilton along with linemen Greg Gattuso, Joe Hines and Steve Seftor.

"We're young on defense but we do have some experience," Paterno said. "We were able to work many of the younger guys into the line-up last year, some by choice and some due to injuries."

JUNIOR TODD MOULES will start at one tackle alongside sophomore Mike Russo. The end positions will be held down by yet another pair of sophomores, Bob White and Dan Morgan.

Joining Masciantonio at linebacker will be sophomores Shane Conlan and Don Graham. Junior Michael Zordich will replace Harry Hamilton at the heroback position.

Sophomore Darrell Giles and junior Lance Hamilton join Sydnor in the secondary for Paterno.

The kicking game will once again be handled by Nick Gancitano. Paterno calls the senior one of the best in the country. Last season he connected on 17-of-21 field goal attempts, many in clutch situations.

With George Reynolds graduated, the punting chores will be handled by sophomore Greg Montgomery, who has never gotten off a punt in a collegiate game.

OUTSIDE OF PREPARING his team, Paterno's biggest worry is the brutal schedule his team must face. Eight of the 11 opponents appeared in 1983 bowl games and the Nittany Lions must play on the road against Iowa, Alabama, West Virginia and Notre Dame along with a game against Texas at a neutral site at the Meadowlands in East Rutherford, N.J.

"We had a difficult schedule last year and this year we picked up Maryland and Texas," Paterno said. "I know we will have a good team, but can we be good enough, soon enough is the question."

American lineman Guy Teafatiller and another newcomer linebacker, Dwayne Pugh.

"LAST YEAR WE had the break of the home schedule... We had confidence that we need... defense... We were very fortunate and proud of it. This year we start with just the opposite being true," White said. "The emphasis is on offense."

And that is what it will take, offense. And then more offense. And the expected wide-open offense will rely on junior signal-caller Jack Trudeau.

"We have a young man named (Jack) Trudeau, who I feel has the ability to become an all-American quarterback as a junior. He's a leader," the fifth-year Illini coach said.

Last season the "California Kid" completed 62.7 percent of his passes for 2,446 yards and a team leading 18 touchdowns.

Trudeau's targets are David Williams, who averaged 14.7 yards per catch last year, while receiving a team-leading six touchdowns and running back Thomas Rooks, who rushed for 842 yards last year, while scoring 11 touchdowns.

TRUDEAU'S BIGGEST asset will be a monster offensive line led by 6-foot-5, 240-pound Jim Juriga. Just about all Juriga's buddies return up front, too, as part of the seven returning offensive players.

"As we approach the season, Jack Trudeau and his partners on offense will be the key to our success," White said. "What I'm saying is that we have an experienced veteran offense that will be together the next two years."

The all-important kicking game is not a worry to White. His son Chris proved himself as a Big Ten kicker last season and Daren De Pew and Chad Little will compete for the punting position.

With the situation the way it is on the field, White commented that it is very important to get a good start. "I obviously have a lot of question marks on defense. We lost our front seven. We lost Don Thorp, he was the player-of-the-year in the Big Ten and (we lost) an attitude that we have to have in order to be a winning defensive program."

"WITH ALL THOSE ingredients gone it puts tremendous pressure on our early games. We have to get our defense to the point where we can compete against a tough road schedule."

The confident co-captain Edwards said, "As soon as we learn the system our defense will be better than last year. We may be hungrier than last year."

Wallets mix polka, disco music

By Allen Hogg
Arts/entertainment Editor

IF YOU'RE looking for a different way to start the new school year, well, you can't get much more different than the Wallets, a five-man Minneapolis group appearing at the Crow's Nest tonight.

Led by Steve Kramer — vocalist, keyboardist, accordion player, songwriter, painter, former member of the Contortions and weirdo extraordinaire — the Wallets present a totally unique sound, perhaps best described as "polka-disco-punk." They take snatches from high-brow, low-brow, pop and no-brow culture, throw them together in a hilariously disarming manner and come up with a product that is at once danceable, laughable and completely unforgettable.

THIS WILL BE the Wallets' third appearance in Iowa City and their first gig at the Crow's Nest. In their previous Iowa City gigs, in the Wheelroom and at this spring's Riverfest concert, Kramer and company's featured performance numbers included "Wir Haben Doch Ein Tolles Polka, Ganzne Polka" (translation: "We Have a Groovy Polka, All-new Polka"), which mixes "Louie, Louie" with "Beer Barrel Polka," "Deutschland Uber Alles" and "The Monster Mash;" "There Was an Old Lady," a punk-rap version of the nursery rhyme and a xylophone-led rendition of the Temptations' "My Girl."

Since first forming in 1980, the Wallets have been "discovered by" and played with Talking Heads' leader David Byrne, toured the New York City avant-garde clubs and been written up in Andy Warhol's Interview magazine. This spring, they cleaned up at the fourth annual Minnesota Music Awards. The group was named Band of the Year for the second straight time and their five-song mini-album Catch a Falling Star won the EP of the Year award. Kramer was also chosen as Musician of the Year, an award made all the more impressive by the fact that another Minnesota musician and previous winner of the award is currently being seen around the country as the star of Purple Rain.

Of course, the Wallets aren't for everyone — it takes a slightly warped perspective to enjoy them fully. But even if they don't please you, by no means will they bore you. So start off the year a little differently this time and come down to the Crow's Nest and check them out.

Carmen combines opera, flamenco

By Merwyn Grote
Staff Writer

ONE THING that can be said for Carlos Saura's Carmen is that it gives new dimension to the concept of a toe-tapping musical: In this contemporary musical version of Prosper Merimee's 1845 novel, it is the performers who do the toe tapping, not the audience. In this latest interpretation of the reliable old chestnut about the tragic life of a Spanish temptress, director Carlos Saura and choreographer/star Antonio Gades have attempted to incorporate the operatic version of the tale into an exhibition of flamenco dancing.

The story of Merimee's Carmen is told through bits and pieces of rehearsals for Bizet's opera. These fragments of the opera are worked around a story line concerning the stormy romance that is developing between the production's choreographer/star named Antonio (Gades) and the leading lady (Laura del Sol) who happens to be named Carmen and who, it turns out, also happens to be a bit of a flirt. As the story of Carmen unfolds through song and dance, a parallel drama is supposed to develop among the cast of the production. Obviously Saura and Gades think that they are making a comment about the relationship of art and life.

BUT DON'T BE fooled. At heart, this version is basically a backstage musical wherein the passions and pursuits of various cast members are played out before a background of music and dance and an attempt to put on a big show. It is a well-worn format that has supported a myriad variety of song-and-dance Hollywood musicals from 42nd Street to All that Jazz. The difference here is simply that the song is operatic and the dance flamenco, the film Spanish (with subtitles) and the overall presentation more than a little bit pretentious.

The film does have its attributes. Saura has a definite flare for visuals and allows his camera to glide effectively but not obtrusively with the dancers. Many of the shots are striking, sometimes self-consciously so, yet he retains throughout a sense of realism, almost documentary-like in its intimacy.

Similarly, choreographer Gades has staged some exciting dance numbers that bring to life the otherwise splintered pieces of the opera. For instance, a confrontation between the opera's Carmen and another woman, (performed by Cristina Hoyos) is powerful and immensely satisfying.

BUT ULTIMATELY, Saura and Gades are not nearly as clever as they seem to think they are. The parallels that they present between the film's story and the play-within-the-play are, at best, forced. And this lack of cohesiveness between these two layers of drama is further irritated by their insistence on trying to meld the two together. Frequently they engineer the action so that it becomes difficult to tell where the opera's rehearsal ends and the relationship between Antonio and Carmen begins.

This "what is real?" type of game-playing is capped by the type of climax that is supposed to intrigue, but only bewilders. It is one of those finales that leaves the viewer scratching his head and turning to the person in the next seat in hope of an explanation.

Ultimately, what the film lacks is passion, a fatal flaw for a work based on the story of Carmen. Laura del Sol is pretty and a very gifted dancer, but never does she display any charms that would inspire intense jealousy, let alone cause homicidal reactions. Similarly, Gades never musters up any great enthusiasm either. He has several very sensual moments with del Sol during dance sessions, but their off-stage affair is rather restrained. One could see how her dancing might enthrall him, except he seems somewhat dispassionate about that as well. He comes across not so much as an artistic creator but as a foreman overseeing a job.

Carmen is a film one can admire for its aesthetic qualities, but its lack of passion or artistic intensity makes it cold and indifferent.

Entertainment today

At the Bijou

Carmen. Laura de Sol and Antonio Gades play the leads in a dance production of Carmen, then start to act out the roles in real life. This 1983 Carlos Saura film features heightened sensuality, Spanish dancing and the flamenco guitar of Paco de Lucia. At 7 p.m.

• Caught. Barbara Bel Geddes is the young model; Robert Ryan is the neurotic millionaire she marries; and James Mason is the idealistic doctor whom she turns to in order to escape her shallow existence in this compelling 1949 Max Ophuls melodrama. At 9 p.m.

Television

On the networks: Three young lovelies try out for the opportunity to strut their stuff in "Legs" (ABC at 7 p.m.). It has nothing to do with ZZ Top, rather it is about the world of the Radio City Music Hall Rockettes and their high stepping antics.

• On cable: The latest and final (we hope) addition to the Pink Panther film series is Curse of the Pink Panther (HBO at 9 a.m. and 5 p.m.), which, if nothing else, has an appropriate title. Made, in part, to help cheer up Robert Wagner after the death of Natalie Wood, it also marked the last screen appearance of David Niven, who was so sick during production that his lines had to be dubbed by Rich Little. And of course, Peter Sellers is sorely missed, even though his ghost seems to haunt every scene of the film. One can only pity poor Ted Wass, who was put in the unenviable position of carrying on in Sellers' place. Color this panther a very pale shade of pink.

Nightlife

A DI Entertainment Alert: the Wallets, a five-man band of zanies from Minneapolis, bring their polka-disco-punk sounds into the Crow's Nest tonight. You might end up loving them; you might end up hating them. No way, however, will you be able to forget them.

• At Gabe's Oasis, Big Daddy Sun orbits tonight with his outer planet rockabilly sounds.

POP REVIEW by Craig Lee

WALLETS KEEP THE ADJECTIVES COMING

One thing you can say about the Wallets: They're different. After all, it's not every day you hear an epic version of the Temptations' "My Girl" performed on a toy xylophone, sax and accordion. And how about when leader Steven Kramer started singing "Roll Out the Barrel," only to have it transfigured into a rave-up version of "Louie, Louie," sung in German?

This all happened Tuesday at the Plant, where the Minneapolis quintet played the kind of set that sends critics into brain spasms trying to compound the proper adjective. Would you believe "Jazz-polka-Musak-funk"?

But the Wallets are more than a cartoonish novelty group. Several songs displayed intricate rhythmically riveting double-keyboard assaults (there's no guitar in the group, and it isn't missed). Kramer was once a member of James White's New York art-funk group the Contortions, and there's a lot of that group's propulsive, dissonant drive in the Wallet's sound. But while the Contortions were often abrasive, neurotic and negative, the Wallets, while not coy or quirky, are a very affirmative, positive outfit.

Kramer delivers spoken monologues over his sound tracks rather than really singing, but if his vocals are slight, the group's music always compensates with its consistent invention. Mixing James Brown rhythms, cheery Perez Prado-type organ melodies and futuristic pop, the Wallets prove there's something else happening in Minneapolis besides Prince.

THE WALLETS WILL BE APPEARING AT THE CROW'S NEST TONIGHT.

UI Theatres offer ticket package deal

Series subscriptions are now on sale for University Theatres' 1984 season of productions on campus. A series subscription includes tickets to five plays at a savings of 25 percent, compared to the price of individual tickets.

A subscriber receives a ticket to each of four major productions in E.C. Mable Theatre and a choice of a ticket to one of three other productions in Mable Theatre and Old Armory Theatre.

Included in each subscription are: Leonard Bernstein's musical version of Voltaire's Candide in October; the 18th century comedy The Beaux Stratagem in November; Spring's Awakening, the 1891 classic of young people crossing the threshold of adulthood, in March; and British academy award-winner Paul Massie as King Lear, the UI contribution to the 1985 Iowa Shakespeare Festival, in April.

THE THREE OPTIONAL productions are: Thief in a Basket by Charles Smith, the UI entry in the 1984-85 American College Theatre Festival, in October and November; the December production of The Fall of Babylon by D.W. Griffith, a performance recreation featuring Mel Andringa of the Drawing Legion; and Caryl Churchill's Cloud 9, a contemporary farce, in February. Thief in a Basket and Cloud 9 contain material that may offend some audience members.

Series subscribers are also entitled to purchase tickets to the other Iowa Shakespeare Festival productions, ISU's Twelfth Night and UNI's Romeo and Juliet. Tickets for these productions will not be available to non-subscribers until spring.

University Theatres series subscriptions are $23.50. For UI students, senior citizens and persons 18 and under, the price is $16.

For further information and order forms for University Theatres' 1984-85 season, call the Hancher Auditorium box office. Hancher box office is open 11 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Monday through Friday and 1 to 3 p.m. Sunday. Iowans outside Iowa City may call toll-free 1-800-HANCHER.
